THE NATIONAL WHIRLIGIG

Very few individuals can be found who approve of the language used by the radio priest. On both sides the consensus seems to be that the third party will die down and that the Townsends will concentrate upon efforts to capture members of Congress.

TROUBLE: There is evidence that the Democratic national committee tried to cause a split in the four groups that began to coalesce at Cleveland. The effort may succeed, so far as the national ticket is concerned.

Building: The Home Owners' Loan Corporation ceased making loans on June 12, and is now solely engaged in liquidating its loans and managing its properties.

FORCLOSURES: The Home Loan Corporation must keep at work for a long time. It is completing a large office building in Washington.

By James McMullen: More and more harum-scarum are heard privately in high New York Republican quarters about National Chairman John J. McMillin.

Charge, and MacVeagh has no practical political experience to guide him. A New York party leader grumbles: "We made too much of that lad at Cleveland. We're out of luck unless he forgets what a man he is and gets down to brass tacks soon."

OUT-OF-DATE: Well posted industrialists discount reports in eastern newspapers that the new tax legislation spells the doom of holding companies.

Condensation of complicated corporate structures will undoubtedly be spurred by the incentive of tax economy, but there has been a tendency to exaggerate the effect of the new levies on the simpler holding companies.

THE WORLD WITH A FENCE

A New Novel by Marian Sims

SYNOPSIS: Carol Torrance has broken the news to her charming family that she is going to teach school next term in Ashboro, Ga. She has to get away from Meredith before Meredith gets away with her, but she explains the matter differently to her very sensitive mother, Milly; to mother of fact Jill and to artistic Pat, her easy going brother. Pat says nonchalantly that Carol is after a man—

Chapter Two GOLF TRUTHS

THE trouble was, Carol knew, that there hadn't been anyone in Meredith worth lifting a finger for—not since Bill Faraday. After Bill—nothing but casual attractions. Boys and men who took you to dances and movies, and kissed you when you felt like letting them, which wasn't often. She had liked a few of them—had even played with the idea of marrying one—but she knew the attraction was only physical.

You couldn't marry a man because he had a nice body and played beautiful golf and knew how to make love; not when you had to conceal so carefully the fact that you were blessed, or cursed, with twice his intelligence.

Pat played his second shot carefully, faultlessly.

Tears scorched Carol's lids and her hands were clenched behind her back. God, this is awful she thought; I wonder if it's worth it? She left the hearth-rug and hunted down a cigarette, just to keep her face from the others; lit it and exhaled a cloud of thin blue smoke. With her back to them she said: "I think I'll wait a few months and see how I make out this time. I may not be able to stand the gaff. In that case I'll borrow a leaf from Jill and take a business course..."

PAT said finally, out of the silence that engulfed them all: "Well, let's don't sit and look at the corpse. Who wants to play a few holes of golf?"

The atmosphere lightened at once. Even the room disliked unhappiness. Carol nodded. "Suits me." And Milly said: "I'm not in the class with you children, but I'll take my book and sit on the porch." "Fine," Pat was convincingly hearty. "I'll give you ten minutes to get ready."

Milly and Jill were in the car when Carol came down. Jill had "The Paradisa Case" in her lap, and Milly clutched "The March of Democracy" with a do-or-die expression. Pat trailed out, dragging paraphernalia. "I love the way you all amble blithely out without even pulling the back door together..."

Unpleasantness was behind them. Characteristically the Torrances chose to ignore it until September third, which was over three weeks away. Anything could happen in three weeks, even in Meredith. But when Carol and Pat were held up on the second tee by a foursome he returned abruptly to the subject. "I'm going to miss you like the devil, Carol."

Nostalgia swept her suddenly and treacherously. Homesteadness for the things she still had and next month would have no longer. "Don't, Pat. If I keep on feeling like I do now, I'll never leave." He patted her hand. "Sure you will. It's the only thing to do. Don't be fooled by these blessings-brighten-

DEBT: One other far-reaching consequence of the corporate surplus levy is foreseen by financial leaders. They claim it will foster a larger proportion of debt to equity in capital structures. It will be to a corporation's advantage to keep its debt outstanding instead of retiring it.

LOCALIZED: New York is being used as a laboratory in which to test the plan for a national Labor Party. Organized labor sentiment in this state is so strong for Governor Lehman that it enhances the solidarity of the new party to have him as its candidate as well as President Roosevelt.

WEAPON: Some conservative bankers have expressed concern about the Federal Reserve Board's recent use of its new power to raise reserve requirements — on the basis that it presages a policy of "flexible reserves." They don't like the idea of shifting the required percentage of reserves against deposits at more or less frequent intervals as a recognized instrument of credit control. They claim that banks whose reserves were subject to addition or subtraction on short notice would be wholly unable to shape intelligent investment policies.

LEMKE BIDS CLUBS By Gerald W. Movius THE FARGO FORUM Fargo, North Dakota

This man-Lemke—what is he? Who is this North Dakota Congressman who bounced into the national eye on the strength of a proposal to refinance farm indebtedness and now seeks to be President as the candidate of the newborn Union Party?

That he's radical, he admits. That he's dangerous is a matter of viewpoint. There are some things, of course, which North Dakotans can tell about Lemke.

Call him a demagogue, and you must reckon with the fact that the welfare of the common man is very close to Lemke's heart. Call him a visionary, and you must find some way to reconcile it with a shrewd, practical knowledge of politics, government, economics. Call him a crank, and you will have an argument on your hands with members of the bar who know him as a skillful attorney, a courteous opponent whose word, once given, is completely good.

farmer, the working man, the "common people" against whom he sees them actively plotting, day and night.

No question, Lemke is after something which he thinks would be of material benefit to the common people. The best thought in North Dakota is agreed to that. At the same time, the methods by which Lemke pursues that ambition are open to serious question.

Whatever he has to say of Dr. Townsend's plan for public consumption, the facts of the matter are that Lemke doesn't believe in it. He is quoted by close associates as remarking that it's "fantastic."

Does Lemke, the skilled attorney, the student of finance, actually believe his bill, which would turn the printing presses loose, would work? The answer seems to be: Yes, he does.

It is Lemke's reasoning that it's Frazier-Lemke bill — originally the Frazier bill — but actually the so-called effort of Lemke himself — would not bring about dangerous inflation. The majority of thought among those who know him well is to the effect that he's sincere in that reasoning.

There is, however, a minority thought within the same circle, consistent to some degree with Lemke's known ambitions for a sweeping change in the social order. It is to the effect that Lemke knows full well his refinancing measure would out all sorts of serious monkey shins in the national monetary setup, that it might, indeed, wreck the setup, and that Lemke, with that very thought in mind, would prepare himself to step in on the ruins of an old order.

Lemke, running as a Republican in 1932 for his Congressional seat, still entered as a Republican in the North Dakota contest for Congress this fall, was all for Roosevelt, did a lot toward carrying North Dakota for the President. Today, he's all off Roosevelt. He looks ahead. He sees, in the Coughlin-Townsend-Smith ranks, the opportunity for a new "agin' em" movement. He must have that sort of backing. Lemke doesn't win by pointing with pride. He can win only as he views with alarm.

His bid for the presidency, as those who've known him years on end see it, as men close to him in the current campaign see it, has two angles: 1. There's an off chance he might capture enough electoral votes to throw the election of President into the House of Representatives. 2. He has succeeded in establishing a party of which he expects to remain the titular head.

Some day—some day, that Union Party will, he thinks, be what the doctor ordered. Some day, Lemke can wait. He has waited a long time. Waiting doesn't bother Lemke.

Meanwhile, he will put up something of a campaign. Usher L. Burdick, Congressman from North Dakota, originally announced as chairman of the Union Party national committee, likewise as campaign manager, is campaign manager no more. In his place is John Nystul of North Dakota, former chairman of the executive committee of the Non-Partisan League, former campaign manager for the Non-Partisan League ticket, a personable young insurance man, public-spirited, affable, clever, progressive but no radical, a mixer which Lemke isn't, a "good front" which Burdick couldn't be.

Is there a deal with the Republicans? Is the Lemke move a move to elect Landon, with Lemke's connivance? North Dakota doesn't think so. That doesn't sound like Lemke. Lemke and Landon — they don't mix. (Copyright McClure Newspaper Syndicate)

Shaw, 80, Clings To His Belief He Should Cling To His Bankroll

George Bernard Shaw, shown on the cruise ship Arandora Star as he arrived in Miami last February, holds a playwright should get money out of the theater—not put it in.

London (AP) — Eighty years old Sunday, July 26, George Bernard Shaw hangs on firmly to the belief that a playwright has no business investing money in the theater. That's what he says, anyway, in a letter to Sydney W. Carroll, critic, author and manager, who asked Shaw for a subscription to the Open Air theater in Regent's park. Shaw replied as follows: "My dear Sydney Carroll: "Have you ever asked yourself this momentous question? Why is it that old Shaw, who has been in the theater business for 44 years, is not an inmate of Fulham Workhouse? The instructive answer is the fact that it is the business of a playwright to take money out of the theater, and not under any circumstances to put money into it. "I have carried out this policy strictly in the Open Air theater. You have lost 10,000 L's and I have had some of it. "Where did you get the 10,000 L's? Certainly not by criticism. I have been a critic myself and I know, I cleaned out Miss Horniman in 1894 with my first commercially produced play. That was ten-money. "When the famous Vedrenne-Barter management was dissolved after its adventure in the Shaw business, G. B. (Granville-Barter) pawned everything short of reducing himself to nudity, and I disgorged as much of my royalties as to make a solvent ending. "Adam and Eve and Shakespeare "Even Barry Jackson was finally panicked, although his last production of 'Back to Methuselah' actually made a profit of 25 L. Who is to be the next victim? "If you can pick up 10,000 pound notes and spread them on the newest and biggest change in managerial policy in my time, you are clearly eligible. "How would the Adam and Eve scenes from 'Methuselah' followed by 'The Comedy of Errors' do for Regent's park? I can pocket Shakespeare's royalties all right. Anything that will tempt a shark is good enough for "Yours until the times do alter. (Signed) G. Bernard Shaw."

FRIEND TAKES VIOLIN TO WOLLNER

So that Mark Wollner, internationally known violinist held for questioning in the slaying of Helen Clevenger at Asheville, N. C., could entertain himself, W. H. Rymer, his friend, took the musician's $5,000 instrument to him at jail. Rymer is shown at left delivering it to Jailer Guy Roberts. Rymer, at whose home Wollner was taken into custody, offered to post $25,000 bond for his friend's release. (Associated Press Photo)

"AS RELIGION SEES IT"

By Dr. GEORGE R. GROSE (Church Editor, Pasadena (Cal.) Star-News)

Churches Being Swayed Too Much by Emotion, Editor Charges—Says Recent Conventions Characterized by Deference to Pressure Groups.

The action of several leading Protestant denominations on social questions indicates great sensitiveness to popular waves of emotion.

In 1924 the Congregational-Christian churches at the Oberlin Conference adopted a constructed program of social action which conservatives in the recent Mount Holyoke Conference unsuccessfully challenged. The progressive program of two years ago has been retained and supplemented by an educational policy, stressing church attendance and deepening individual spiritual life.

The Methodist General Conference at Columbus declared "a pact of peace" between the progressive and conservative wings in the church. This is a self-consoling appraisal of this body's action on social questions. Four years ago the Conference called upon the church to "stir the consciences of mankind to create a social way of life in which all men shall have opportunity to develop their capabilities to the fullest possible extent." The report advocated "the fullest possible cooperative control and ownership of industry and the natural resources upon which industry rests." The action of the Columbus conference has been characterized as "neatly neutral." It certainly sounds no progressive note.

Conservatives Gain Control. In the light of this action it is not surprising that the Board of Education was reorganized this month to the conservative tempo. Bishop Edgar Blake, the progressive and efficient president of the Board for eight years, was replaced by Bishop Adna W. Leonard, an extreme conservative.

The Northern Baptists at St. Louis were carried along on the same emotional wave which swept the Methodists into quiet eddy. Their resolution on war had no teeth, and they passed over the social question by recommending that it be studied by local churches.

The Presbyterian General Assembly put into the background relating to the social order and pushed to the fore the spiritual interests of the church in a cultural and evangelistic program.

The position of the Roman Catholic church is more vigorous. This Christian body is holding a steady course in a courageous, constructive program of social action. There is not universal agreement among Catholics concerning all the issues involved in the policy of their social leaders. But there is little evidence in this group of the waves of action and reaction rising from emotional storms which are sweeping over several Protestant bodies.

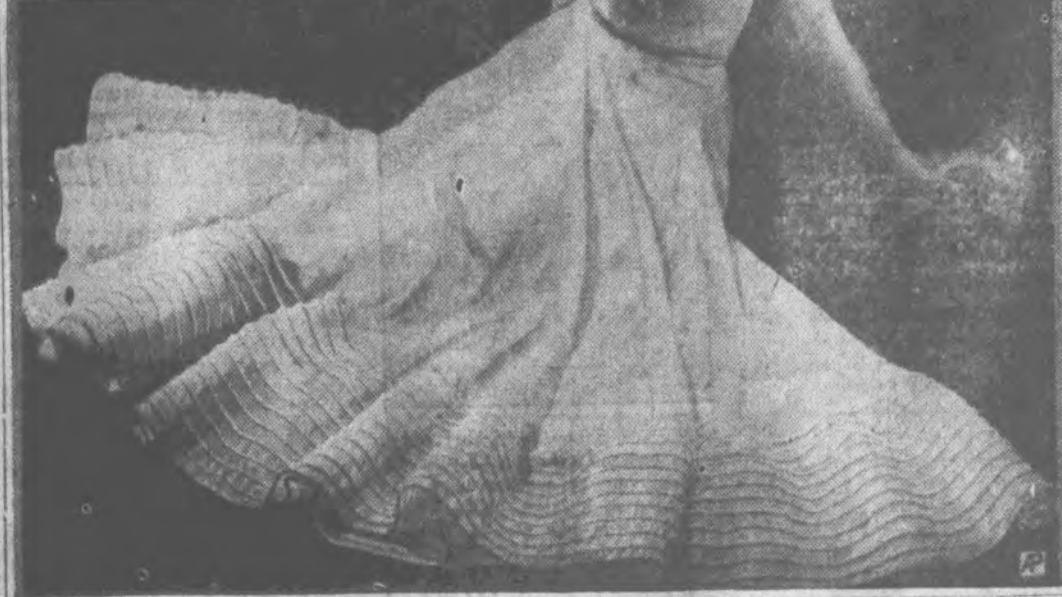

Churches Becoming Emotional. In calling attention to the above facts this writer is advocating neither the progressive nor the conservative church program for social action. He is simply pointing out the dangerous situation which confronts the churches—and not churches alone, but other institutions of society today, namely, they are being swayed too much by emotion.

If the social pronouncements made by the churches in 1927 and 1934 were based upon facts and a sound interpretation of the teachings of Jesus, why the retreat and the reverse action, or the timid caution so conspicuous in some groups in 1936? Or if the action previously taken was found to be mistaken, why not repudiate it instead of soft pedal?

There has been no essential change in the moral and economic conditions in the country in the last four years to warrant the wave of reaction. To be heaven-bent for a new earth wherein dwelleth industrial and social righteousness only when the economic depression is darkest is to stagger to make many converts to the faith. Mob psychology, emotional storms, and deference to pressure groups are nowhere so deplorable and dangerous as in the church of Jesus Christ.

Vogue For White In Hot Weather Modes Matches Midsummer Comfort With Chic

Foamy white silk mousseline makes a glamorous dance frock for hot summer nights. The frilled shoulder line and hem are corded. A cluster of tiny yellow flowers poised at the base of the vee decollete add a colorful accent. The same flowers are worn in the hair. This frock illustrates but one way in which white is solving hot weather wardrobe worries for fashion-wise women. On other models, white accessories glisten in a popular combination of cool comfort and chic.

CALL TROOPS IN FATAL STRIKE RIOT

After a deputy sheriff had been killed and 18 men injured in a riot growing out of a mill strike at Tallapoosa, Ala., national guardsmen were rushed to the scene to preserve order. About fifty shots were fired during the disorder. At top the guardsmen are shown stopping a car in the riot area, and below a crowd of curiously mongers gathers at the scene of the shooting. SHERIFF QUIET AFTER ARREST GIRL'S UNCLE

"Gaddy," he said, "knows something, and when he talks, I'll be able to break this case wide open. I think he's getting ready to talk soon."

His violin under his arm, Wolner left his cell on the 15th floor of the courthouse in the company of W. H. Rymer, a close friend.

Rymer, who had previously offered to put up $20,000 bond for the musician's release, is proprietor of a piano store here.

Wolner's release followed by 24 hours that of 18-year-old Mildred Ward, his "alibi girl," who was detained after she corroborated the story that she spent the night of the crime at home.

Miss Ward, the daughter of Wolner's landlady, was taken into custody Sunday night.

The Sheriff announced soon after her detention that he had obtained eight witnesses who had seen Wolner on the streets at various hours the night of the crime.

A crowd of curious milled about the sheriff's office throughout the afternoon, waiting for the arrest which the Sheriff had announced earlier would "break" the case by 7 p. m.

A flurry of excitement was caused about 5 p. m. when two deputies hustled an unidentified man into the courthouse and whisked him up 15 floors in an elevator to the jail, but it turned out he was not connected with the Cleveland case.

But later the Sheriff announced that Cleveland had been in custody already or two hours at that time. He said Cleveland was taken in custody at 3 p. m. His detention, however, was not disclosed by the Sheriff until after 7 o'clock.

MAKING CHECK ON MOTORING

"He is not a fast driver, but a very careless one who does not observe lights or signs or traffic regulations either in the city or county," the letter states. "He has been indicted four times for reckless driving in the last two years and has been responsible for three accidents in the last six months."

It would be a benefit to the citizenry of the communities in which he lives and drives if his drivers license should be revoked.

The records of hundreds of similar drivers are now being checked and investigated by highway safety officials, and those who are found to be habitually careless or incompetent will have their licenses suspended or revoked. Fulk said.

Confessions of a Stupid Man I read the Bible frequently because my Church urges me to do so and because I like to do so. Yet with all my reading I cannot learn, from the inspired words alone, exactly how God means me to worship and to live in order to save my soul. But maybe that's because I'm just a stupid man. People, called wise, claim that the Scriptures contain all of God's truths which are made clear to the individual by the Holy Ghost. But this is all beyond my understanding, for why then is there so much conflict about texts so vital that salvation itself depends thereon? And, being a stupid man, I want to be very, very sure about such things. Scholars, called great, there are who claim to have studied the Bible so long that they have finally reached the conclusion that the sacred words are not sacred—that there is no God—or that at least it does not matter much one way or the other. I'm rather glad to be dubbed a stupid man, for then you see no one expects me to solve the complexities and seeming contradiction of biblical texts—no one asks me to decide which of the disagreeing religious leaders is right or wrong or nearly right or mostly wrong—no one asks my opinion of the atheistic scientist who, in order to rout out the religious dogma of a creative God, must first rout out the scientific dogma of a first cause. Yes, I am of simple mind, and so it satisfies me to believe that Christ, Who is God, builded a Church, as He, Himself, stated—that He left the Will of His Father with this Church which, under the direction of the Holy Ghost, would safeguard His Truths for all ages, teach them to the world in all their completeness and interpret them so definitely that they might be acted upon with certainty by every man. Simple? Divinely simple! Stupid? Some will claim so! But then God knows how stupid all men are. That's why, I think, He made His Way so simple, clear and logical to men who know that they are stupid. TEACHERS GET SALARY BOOST

Five Per Cent Increase Decided On By Commission

Raleigh, July 25.—The more than 23,000 school teachers in the state public school system will get the 5 per cent increase in salaries as decided by the 1935 general assembly but will not get any additional increase such as would result from a change in the state salary schedule.

STATE TO GET ITS 'CUT' OF LIQUOR STORE PROFITS

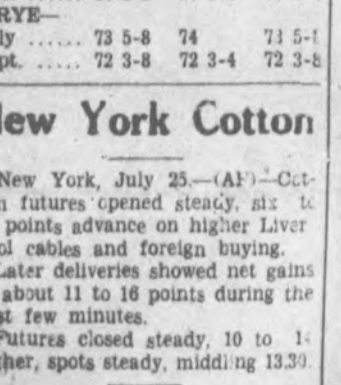

(Continued from page one) the county liquor stores is from the 3 per cent sales tax on gross sales. But the state is going to be in such great need of additional revenue to meet the demands for larger appropriations, that unless the general assembly can enact a state liquor control law, under which the state will share in the profits from liquor stores, it will impose a state tax on liquor sold in county stores.
