200 CITIZENS ATTEND MEET TO BOOST CITY

Spirit of Cooperation in Evidence at Dinner-Session

LINDSAY WARREN CHIEF SPEAKER

City's Leading Professional and Business Men Urge Cooperation with Mart

A spirit of cooperation seldom witnessed in any city was demonstrated here last night when more than 200 of Greenville's leading business and professional men gathered at the Respass Barbecue palace for the expressed and sole purpose of boosting the local tobacco market and the city as a whole.

The dinner-meeting was presided over by Ralph Deal, member of the college faculty, and not a dull moment was experienced from the time the large dining hall was filled until after the place was vacated.

A spirit of good fellowship was in evidence throughout. Every person present appeared to forget himself and think only of Greenville and its tobacco market and ways to better both.

All speeches were brief, local leaders being limited to five minutes each. The two out-of-the-city speakers, Congressman Lindsay Warren and M. R. Beaman, manager of the port terminal at Beaufort-Morehead city, also confined their talks to only a few minutes. The meeting was devoid of all politics and was one of good will throughout.

K. W. Cobb, sales supervisor of the Greenville tobacco market, was the first speaker introduced by Congressman Deal. Mr. Cobb said a number of the other speakers declared it was the finest meeting he had ever attended.

Mr. Cobb declared that it was his job to boost Greenville. He said he was paid to boost the tobacco market and by so doing boosted the city. "And when we boost the city we boost Pitt county, when we boost the county we boost Eastern North Carolina and when we boost the East we boost the entire state," he added.

The sales supervisor explained how the local market would advertise this fall and estimated that some 85 or 90 million pounds of tobacco will be sold here this season, with your help."

James S. Picklen, president of the Tobacco Board of Trade, the next speaker, prefaced his remarks by saying he had lived here all his life. He told of doing quite a bit of traveling over all parts of the world and added he always wanted to come back.

He said the local market had good buyers and 10 fine warehouses, but declared "we must have the support of the citizens if we are to maintain the best market in the world. It must be a mutual, cooperative proposition," he said. Admitting that he was poor prognosticator, Mr. Picklen predicted that prices this fall would "be better than they were last year, but nothing like as good as they were in 1934." He recalled that a football coach always tells his players to "get up and hit 'em again," and said "that is exactly what we are going to do."

J. C. Galloway, president of the Kiwanis club, described by Professor Deal as a typical successful farmer and business man, assured the warehousemen that the farmers appreciated what the warehousemen were doing for them, and pledged the loyalty of the farmers to the local market.

J. H. Waldrop, cashier of the Guaranty Bank and Trust company, spoke in behalf of the Rotary club. He said that meetings such as the one last night was the best medium of advertising for the city. He mentioned a zoning statute and the possibility of having Greenville placed on more highway signs as ideas for the citizens and officials to consider.

Herbert ReBarker, member of the college faculty said he was interested in the tobacco market, not only here, but at other places. He said the college collected $261,000 last year and added that much of it was money derived from the sale of tobacco. He confined most of his remarks to "our greatest commodity—children."

"The first item in boosting is to boost the other fellow," he declared, suggesting the practice of neighborliness be put into effect more.

J. H. Blount, speaking in behalf of the Chamber of Commerce and Merchants association, said that cooperation was one of the best assets any business can have. He appealed to all citizens of the city (Continued on Page Two)

FIVE PERSONS OR MORE DEAD

Crew of Tug Feared Lost in Hurricane Off Florida

Valparaiso, Florida, Aug. 1.—(AP)—Five or more deaths tentatively were charged to a tropical storm that blew itself out over southern Alabama early today.

First reports told of no fatalities when the disturbance brought hurricane winds of 90 to 100 miles as it passed inland near here yesterday morning, but last night the coast guard reported the tug Minnie Lee sank and said its crew of five was missing.

Lack of reports for two other vessels gave rise to fears that the death toll might be even larger. Coast guardsmen searched still for the fishing schooner Sea Gull, unreported since she left Tampa July 15 with five men aboard. Her course would have taken her into the path of the storm.

The auxiliary schooner Ketchum of St. Petersburg, with an undetermined number on board, was off the northwest Florida coast when the hurricane hit yesterday and still unreported today.

On shore a number of Florida communities checked their damages and found them relative light in view of the hurricane's force. Some frame dwellings were leveled, but their occupants had heeded warnings to seek safe places.

To Open Main Street To Traffic Tomorrow

Evans street, with its new two-inch top of asphalt, will be opened to the public tomorrow morning, the weather having cleared up enough for the completion of the work started Wednesday, but halted on account of heavy rains Thursday and Friday.

The contractors resumed work early this morning and the first block was practically completed by noon, with the possibility it would be opened tonight.

H. L. Rivers, city engineer, said the work would be completed tonight and by tomorrow the entire street would be opened to the public.

THREATS: Far-sighted Democratic politicians have charted the red track which the Lemke-Coughlin-Townsend-Smith forces may paint on the battle map next November. They're hoping for the best but preparing for the worst as to repair the damage in other places, if possible.

Inside estimates set aside seven states in which the monetary radicals may poll enough votes to insure Democratic defeat. The states are Massachusetts, Nebraska, Minnesota, Montana, Nevada, North Dakota and South Dakota. These states have forty-nine electoral votes and their loss might mean

Conley Announces Schools in County To Open on Sept. 3

Earlier Opening Decided On In Effort Save Transportation Cost and End Term by Christmas

D. F. Conley, superintendent of the Pitt county school system, announced today schools would open on Thursday, September 3, this fall. The decision was reached after a poll had been taken of the various local boards. The local units were asked if they favored opening schools earlier than usual and a majority voted for the proposal.

By opening on Thursday the schools will be able to get organized and ready to begin classroom work by the following Monday. It also was pointed out that the Thursday opening would make up for the two-day holiday to be given for Thanksgiving.

The Board of Education decided to open early this fall so that a full half term could be completed by Christmas and mid-term examinations be given before the holidays.

It also was pointed out that the move will tend to save transportation costs as roads are usually always passable up to the first of the year. It is anticipated the early opening will save a good deal in transportation costs.

Stokes Negro Is Held Result Of Auto Wreck

Harvey Langley, negro, of near Stokes, is being held in jail here on a charge of reckless and careless driving as a result of a wreck at 7:30 o'clock this morning seven miles from Greenville on the Belhaven highway.

Corporal L. L. Jackson, who investigated the wreck, said Langley drove into the main highway from a side road and ran into a car driven by a Brooklyn, N. Y. negro, Fitzhugh Gray.

Both cars were badly damaged, but no personal injuries were suffered.

RIVER FLOODS OUT OF BANKS

Heavy Rains of Week Cause High Water; Little Damage

Raleigh, Aug. 1.—(AP)—The Neuse river flooded adjoining lands in the Smithfield area today and the Cape Fear started leaving its banks at Elizabethtown due to torrential rains in the state the middle of the week. Little damage was reported.

The Neuse was at 17.1 feet at Smithfield, three feet out of its banks, with a further rise of a few inches indicated.

Goldsboro was warned to watch for a four-foot flood in the Neuse, with the depth to reach about 18 feet, and Kinston was warned the river would overflow there next week.

Rises in the Roanoke and Tar rivers had not sent them out of their banks today.

Several Cases Heard In City Court Today

Seven cases were heard in City court this morning, practically all of them being charges of drunkenness and disorderly.

Hassell Atkinson, Jr., negro, was given 30 days on the roads upon conviction of disorderly conduct.

Tom Sutton was fined $10 and costs on a charge of drunkenness.

Robert Clark, negro, was sent to the roads for 30 days for being drunk and disorderly.

Sam White, negro, was fined $5 and costs on a speeding charge.

Mrs. Kit Richardson paid the costs on a charge of being drunk and disorderly.

Premier Johnson, negro, was bound over to County court under $100 bond following a hearing on reckless and hit-and-run driving.

Lamb Tyson, negro, was taken with the costs on a drunkenness count.

U. S. NO. 1 PILOT OUT TO BETTER EYSTON RECORDS

Washington, (AP)—The contest board of the American Automobile association, upon reviewing the official charts compiled by Capt. George Eyston of Utah's Bonneville salt beds, awarded the British racing driver 20 new records. But the records may not stand for long.

Ab Jenkins, America's No. 1 auto speed record holder, will race over the same gleaming surface in an effort to bring all 20 of the marks to an American driver.

Jenkins will travel over a circular course. The contest board, the national governing body of auto racing and speed competition, has announced Jenkins will start his assault on the records as soon as possible. He will use a 12-cylinder racing car especially built for the strenuous grind.

Eyston and his relief driver bettered all previous records ranging from the 200-kilometer distance superior to the 5-hour mark and including records for 5,000 and 10,000 kilometers.

One of the records beaten by Eyston—that for 500 kilometers—formerly was held by Jenkins. Wealthy visitors to Hawaii in the last year bought more than a million dollars worth of island real estate.

REVEALS PLOT FOR KIDNAPING TINY ACTRESS

Farm Youth Held for Threatening Abduct Shirley Temple

ADMITS SENDING FATHER LETTER

Insists, However, He Never Intended Going Through With Fantastic Scheme

Grant, Neb., Aug. 1.—(AP)—The accurate tracing of a chest of stolen money led Sheriff H. Bechtel, 16-year-old farm boy in jail today charged with threatening the life of the tiny screen star, Shirley Temple, in a $25,000 extortion plot. Operations of federal agents led late yesterday to the arrest of the youth at his farm home here by Sheriff H. Bechtel.

The sheriff said young Powell told him he conceived the fantastic scheme after seeing a movie based on kidnaping, but "never meant to go through with it."

"Bechtel reported the prisoner readily admitted he had sent a letter to George F. Temple, father of the little actress, setting forth in part:

"Unless $25,000 is dropped from an airplane near Grant, Neb., on May 15 the life of Shirley Temple will be endangered."

Budget Commis'n To Decide Monday on Ordering Radio

Governor Ehringhaus Already Approved Setting Up Radio System for Highway Patrol

Raleigh, August 1.—Whether or not North Carolina will have a state-wide radio communications and control system for the state highway patrol, which would be available to all police departments and sheriffs' offices in the state will be decided Monday when the Advisory Budget Commission will meet to pass final decision on the matter.

Governor J. C. B. Ehringhaus has already given his approval to the expenditure for the radio system and it now only needs to have the approval of the advisory budget commission to become final. The 1935 general assembly authorized the expenditure for the radio control system whenever, in the discretion of the Governor and advisory budget commission, sufficient funds were available for it.

While the principal need for the radio control system is to reduce highway accidents by being able to better direct patrolmen in the apprehension of reckless and dangerous drivers and in getting them to scenes of accidents in the shortest possible time, the radio control system would also be of great assistance to city and county law enforcement officers, Captain Chas. D. Farmer of the patrol pointed out today.

"We would be able to arrest 90 per cent of the hit-and-run, drunk and reckless drivers within a few hours after they are reported and would thus be able to prevent numerous accidents, if we had the radio control system," Captain Farmer said. "All any one would have to do in the case of a hit-and-run driver, drunken driver or reckless driver, would be to telephone a report to the nearest patrol or police station, describing the car, the location and the general direction in which it was going, and we would at once be able to relay this information to every patrolman in that vicinity," Capt. Farmer said. "We could also greatly assist police departments in cases of hold-ups and robberies. We could probably have captured the men who pulled the cigar store hold-up in Raleigh yesterday in a few hours. We can save the people of the state hundreds of thousands of dollars a year in recovered property alone with the radio system."

Funeral services will be conducted from the Hull Road church Sunday afternoon at three o'clock.

Survivors include the following sons and daughters: Mrs. David Askew, Mrs. Joe Gray, Mrs. P. L. Barrow, Dan Mitchell, all of Snow Hill; Mrs. E. P. Spence, of Morehead City, and Mrs. Lloyd Pate, of Goldsboro; one brother, Levi Hill of Arba.

Madrid Maps Defense Plans For Assault That May Prove Turning Point In Struggle

Missing in Spain

Friends are anxiously trying to learn the fate of Trini Ramos (above), American interpreter of Spanish dances who went to Spain last June. She was last reported in Seville but no word from her has come since the revolution broke out. Her last appearance on Broadway was in the "Wonder Bar." (Associated Press Photo)

Safe in Revolt

Mrs. Fernando Gairardo (above), daughter of Col. D. B. McKay, editor of The Tampa (Fla.) Daily Times, was said to have been brought safely to Madrid from Guardarrama, Spain. It was previously reported she was wounded in the revolution.

REBEL FORCES ON OFFENSIVE

Military Machine Of Government Troops Groomed and Strict Discipline Decreed For Capital as Crucial Moment in Civil War Draws Near; French Socialist Government Determined to Remain Neutral

(By Associated Press)
Spain's capital city dug in today for the fascist assault that may prove to be the turning point of the nation's prolonged civil war. Defenses were strengthened. The military machine was groomed. Fresh offensive were ordered against rebel strongholds, both north and south of Madrid. Strict discipline inside the capital was decreed.

At Robledo, the fascist military was reinforced to speed up the advance on Madrid.

Long truck caravans rumbled over shell-torn roads bringing fighters to the front line for a final attack on Buitrago, 40 miles north of Madrid.

Yesterday's flurry in French political circles over the possibility of international repercussions, from flight of Italian seaplanes to Spanish Morocco seemed to have simmered down to a French determination to remain neutral.

Informed sources in Paris add the danger of provoking open German and Italian feuds for the Spanish rebel cause.

Political sources in Paris said Great Britain had turned a deaf ear to French suggestions of a British, French and Italian agreement for neutrality.

Several Counties Reduce Tax Rates For Current Year

New Property Placed on Books Allows Units to Make Reductions from Last Year's Levy

Raleigh, Aug. 1.—A good many counties and several cities and towns in the state are either reducing their tax rates for the coming year or have added enough new property to the tax books to make it possible to adopt larger budgets without having to increase the tax rate. State Treasurer Charles M. Johnson, who is also Director of Local Government and chairman of the local Government Commission, pointed out here today.

"The fact that a good many counties, cities and towns are finding it possible either to reduce their tax rates or finding it unnecessary to make any increases in the tax rates, is a very healthy indication," Johnson said. "This means that more property has been listed than in the past and that valuations have gone up, which in turn means that there is more property in these counties and towns than in several years. For tax rates automatically decrease when valuations increase and go up when valuations drop. There is no surer sign that North Carolina has just again recovered from the depression and is back on a sound basis again than the decrease in tax rates being reported from almost every section of the state, or the adoption of larger city and county budgets without any increase in the tax rates."

The reduction of the tax rates in several counties, especially in Vance and Edgecombe counties, was made possible as a result of the revenue from the county liquor stores, Johnson pointed out, while in several other counties having liquor stores, the additional revenue from these made it possible to materially increase the budgets without increasing the tax rate.

Reports have not yet been received and tabulated from all of the counties as to the new valuations and tax rates as compared with last year. But this information will be tabulated and prepared by the Local Government Commission as soon as possible, Johnson said. He is confident that the result will indicate great improvement in city and county fiscal affairs this year as compared with last year.

EXPECT LARGE TRIO HELD IN FARM INCOMES FEDERAL CASE

Forecast Farmers To Receive Highest Prices in Years

Chicago, Aug. 1.—(AP)—With farm prices at the highest general level since 1930 as a result of the protracted drought, market analysts today forecast that 1936 farm income might be the largest in six years, barring further serious crop losses.

Farmers' income of the first half of the year was $335,000,000 greater than a year ago, the government estimated. Since then the rise in prices of important agricultural commodities—in some cases, the sharpest since the war days—was believed by most observers to have more than offset the serious crop losses due to heat and lack of rains.

Traders cited the danger of a world wheat scarcity as grain prices spurred upward in foreign and domestic markets. There was no sign of the deluge needed to halt the steady deterioration in midwestern fields.

Local Negro Arrested For Driving Reckless

Sylvester Tyson, Greenville negro, was arrested last night and charged with reckless driving when, according to Corporal L. L. Jackson of the State Highway patrol, he ran by Respass barbecue palace in a dangerous manner just as a meeting there was breaking up.

Corporal Jackson said the negro ran by the place at a rapid rate of speed, failing to slow up for other cars.

Commission States Aim To Hunt For Real Facts

Reflector Bureau.

Sir Walter Hotel.

By J. C. BASKERVILLE

Raleigh, Aug. 1.—The long-delayed hunt for the real facts about the manufacture, sale and use of intoxicating liquor in North Carolina—probably the first non-partisan fact-finding effort of this sort ever made in the state—is now under way.

The belief of those who are acquainted with the members of the commission recently named to make its study and submit its findings and recommendations to the 1937 general assembly, it will do a thorough and business-like job and that its report, when made, will make both the general public and the members of the next general assembly sit up and take notice.

Although the liquor fact-finding commission held its first meeting here Friday, the first public hearing will not be held until August 27, when it will convene again in Raleigh to hear any persons who desire to appear before it to present facts which have a bearing on any phases of the liquor question in North Carolina. The members of the commission will hold another hearing on August 28, probably in one of the present 17 counties which operate county liquor stores, other than New Hanover county, since the commission is planning to hold a third public hearing in Wilmington on August 29, Chairman Victor S. Bryan of the commission indicated today.

"The first thing we want to do is to get all the facts we can about the manufacture, sale and use of alcoholic liquor in North Carolina, either legal or bootleg," Chairman (Continued on page three)

THE WORLD WITH A FENCE
 A New Novel by Marian Sims

SYNOPSIS: Carol Torrance has decided to teach in the Ashboro high school in order to get away from her home town of Meredith, Ga., and to make a start to some sort of a career. And although she is warned by the spiteful interest of a gossiping old neighbor in the golf game she played Sunday, she is determined to try to treat her schoolers as intelligent boys and girls. She has seen one class and observed therein the handsomest boy she ever has seen. Now she has a French class.

Chapter Eight
MAGNIFICENT YOUTH
CAROL'S next class was second-year French, also made up of seniors. Fourteen girls and seven boys, the beautiful youth among them. She spent the twenty minutes talking about France and the things that had happened during the months she had spent there five years ago, the summer after she had graduated.

She made them see French as a living language, not something that had been elected the previous year because the course was a "crisp." Avignon, and the Palace of the Popes; Cannes and Nice, and the ancient towns of the maritime Alps. Paris and the architectural legacies of Napoleon; Pere LaChaise, the resting-places of the great and the near great; the vicinity of St. Sulpice, of which they would read in "Les Trois Mousquetaires." . . . Then she dismissed them, conscious of one more victory, at least for the time being.

Her third period was vacant, and she began to post names alphabetically in her roll book. Someone entered the room, and she glanced up to find the magnificent youth towering above her.

She smiled at him. "How do you do?"
 "Morning," he hesitated. "Can I talk to you a while?"
 "Of course. Sit down." She motioned to the first desk and he crowded into it, sitting it completely.

He was more than six feet tall, and he must weigh a hundred and eighty, she thought—most of it above the waist. His eyes were a brilliant blue and his features might have been by Praxiteles. He moved and spoke with a drawl, and she guessed that his brain drawled too. She was consumed with curiosity about him.

"My name's Mike Hannigan," he said. "I want to tell you about me and get you to help me."
 "Who wouldn't help him?" she thought, and kept her face serious as she said: "That's quite a compliment. Of course I'll help you."

"I been out of school four years," he went on in the same deliberate voice, as if he tested every word before he said it. "I got expelled when I was sixteen—a week before school closed. I studied this summer and took examinations to get back in."

She wondered why he was expelled, and didn't ask. Instead she said: "What did you do in those four years?"
 "Travelled around on ships." His voice was entirely casual. After four years of it there was nothing romantic about travelling around on ships. "I ran away and got a job on a coastwise freight boat. Since then I been about everywhere in the world." He said it simply, with no hint of boasting.

Carol felt suddenly small and unimportant in the face of his complete simplicity.
 "What made you come back?"
 "I wasn't getting anywhere." Nowhere, she thought, except all over the world. "My father works in a cotton mill, and he's had a terrible time till right now. I didn't want to be like him, and I didn't want to be a tramp seaman all my life. And you have to have education if you want to be somebody, so I came back to finish high school and go to college. I can get to college on football," he explained. "I've already got an offer."

She laughed in relief. "That's the first time I ever thought much of the system. Now where do I come in?"
 "When you been knocking around for four years it's kinda hard to settle down in any high school. I may start off fine, and then get to slipping, and I want you to sort of check up on me. I'll study for you—I'd do anything for you," her own quick pleasure startled her—"but I may get rough with some of the other teachers before I think. If I do get rough, you call me in and remind me about all this. Cuz me out."

Without doubt, she thought wildly, this was the most astonishing conversation she had ever had. She said judicially:

over to the Department of Justice several months ago. So far there has been no sign of prosecution of practices which the telephone company's witnesses conceded to be against the law.

Commissioner Walker and Examiner Becker developed detailed testimony to the effect that A. T. and T. facilities were available to bookmakers and gamblers in various sections of the country. President Gliffed disclaimed any knowledge of the situation and promised to correct it. But the services have continued throughout the present racing season without any protest from federal authorities.

The F. C. C.-ers are particularly anxious because this revelation was the only one which obtained headlines or public notice. Otherwise, the inquiry floundered and the lack of results in view of the $750,000 cost provoked criticism on Capitol Hill.

TRIMMING: New Deal agencies are moving fast to eliminate inefficiency and corruption so as to minimize those issues in the presidential campaign. The cleanup is also motivated by the belief that G. O. P. files are filled with reports for use against the administration.

The AAA recently sent its ace cotton expert into Texas to investigate reports that speculators were buying certificates from farmers at a discount and reaping a fat profit. Several officials were fired on the spot, payments of thousands of dollars worth of certificates in the hands of profiteers were cancelled. Harry Hopkins has discharged employees suspected of engaging in "political" activity.

President Roosevelt's order placing 13,750 postmaster under Civil Service was a belated maneuver to spike the issue of "Parleyism" in the Post Office. In short, the New Dealers are trimming their ship before the enemy opens its cannonades.

RELIEF: Careful study of the recently enacted corporate tax bill by experts in such matters reveals many flaws not immediately apparent. The conviction is growing in New York that the bill simply will have to be repealed.

Even those who figured that the principle of the tax was sound enough if it were applied equitably now concede that the law is a mess and must be completely revamped.

Sources in close touch with Washington get word that the administration has lost some of its enthusiasm for the tax in its present form and would not be averse to drastic modification. So beleaguered corporations are looking forward to a measure of relief next year no matter who wins in November.

MEMORANDUM: The American Bankers Association report that the resources of state-chartered banks increased by three billion dollars in 1935 drew no cheers from New York banking leaders.

Superficially this looks like marvelous progress and the New Dealers might naturally be expected to beat the tom-toms to advertise it. The difficulty is that they cannot gloat without laying themselves open to the charge of fostering dangerous inflation.

The fact is that much of the sensational growth in resources traces directly to the expansion of federal credit. The state banks buy the bonds, open an account to the amount of their purchase for the U. S. Treasury, and presto—up go both resources and deposits. The inflationary implications are disguised, but the menace of inflation through government financing is none the less real because people are accustomed to it.

CO-OPS: While President Roosevelt's commission to study European cooperatives is still abroad, informed New Yorkers suggest that the growth of cooperatives in this country is likely to be a conspicuous feature of FDR's second term if he gets one.

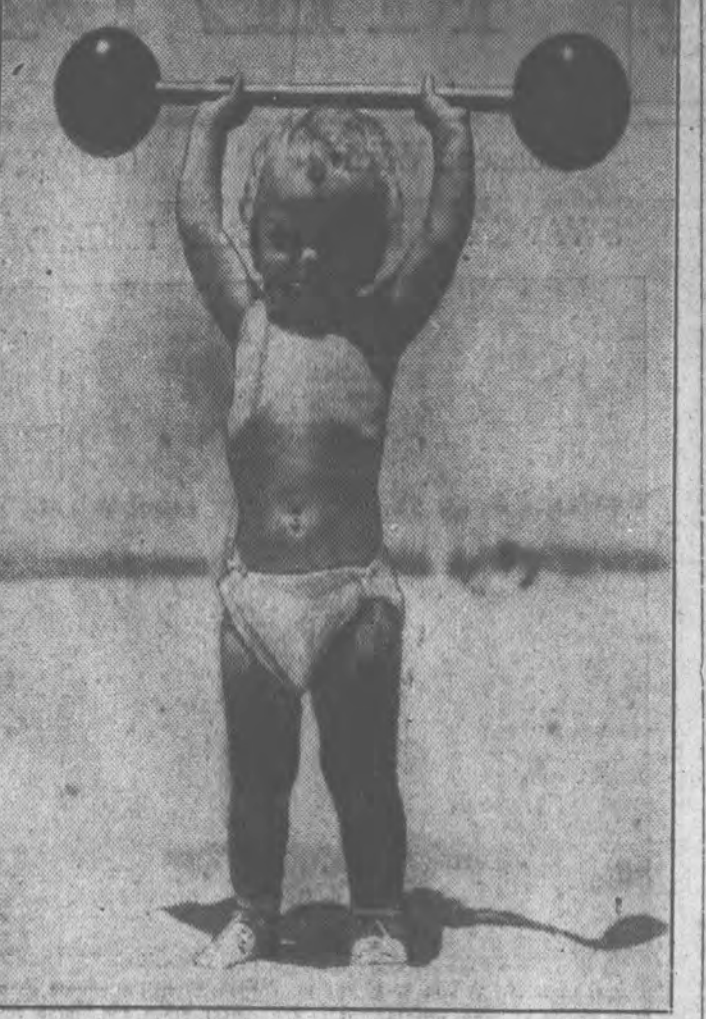

New Deal observers have been much impressed with producers and consumers co-operatives in Sweden. When experiments in this method of combating monopoly have been carried on more extensively and successfully than anywhere else.

It isn't likely that this type of organization will be developed here on anything like the Swedish scale for years—if ever. Chain stores—previously contemptuous of the healthiness of small local stores—have found out that small independents can bite as well as bark. The latter will yell just as lustily about the unfair competition of co-ops as they did about the chains. Furthermore they will have strong backstop support from big business. So establishment of a cooperative system in this country is bound to be cautious and gradual, even though this will probably become a major New Deal policy.

CHILLED: Financial sources in close touch with Europe get word that the about-face so abruptly executed by Premier Leon Blum of France in the matter of helping out the Spanish government with planes and arms was largely due to British influence.

Blum's sympathies with the Spanish leftists blinded him to a risk that was all too apparent to Great Britain. The minute he extended a helping hand, Mussolini and Hitler would have had a beautiful excuse to do the same for the Spanish fascists. The ensuing lineup would have been painfully parallel to 1914, when the holocaust was precipitated because Russia backed Serbia and Germany backed Austria in a local quarrel.

Insiders understand that the British forcefully inferred to M. Blum that he could expect no help from them if his zeal to help the Spanish government got him into that sort of a jam. The thought of confronting Hitler and Mussolini without British aid chilled the French desire to lend a hand pronto.

 to pull together, adding this was the only way to achieve anything. "We not only want the best tobacco market in the state, but we want the biggest," he concluded.

J. C. Lanier, executive secretary of the Warehousemen's association, reviewed the accomplishments of the invalidated AAA and declared one of the best ways to boost Greenville is for its citizens to help put over a new program. He said that flue-cured tobacco was the only crop which sold above parity the last three years and gave the credit to the federal program. He expressed gratification at being connected with the work during the life of AAA. He said that production must be controlled if prosperity is to be realized by tobacco growers. There is enough money in the industry for everyone to get a fair price, he said, "but we must keep production down if we are to receive a fair price for our product," he said.

Mr. Beaman declared the duty of the Morehead City port was to furnish cheap transportation and said this was the chief aim. "The terminals belong to you," he declared, saying they were not constructed to make money. He predicted the use of the port by the various tobacco interests and said they would be able to save money by employing this means of transportation. He said that freight rates affect every person as they are a form of tax.

He declared he believed in Eastern North Carolina and added that the section "was going to town." He described the meeting as the "greatest evidence of inspiration he had ever witnessed." He also took occasion to commend Congressman Warren for his part in securing the terminals, and declared he had "done more in the 12 years he had been in office than all the rest of the congressmen from the district." He also said that the port was indebted to the tobacco industry as it saved the terminals on three occasions.

B. B. Sugg, local tobacco warehouseman, declared the warehousemen appreciated the cooperative spirit shown and especially referred to the Kiwanis and Rotary clubs for setting aside their regular meetings to join the Tobacco Board of Trade, Chamber of Commerce and Merchants association in sponsoring the meeting. He stated emphatically that Greenville had a superior tobacco market.

said that congress gave the farmers the next best thing it could and declared he thought the program would do much good.
 Speaking of the tobacco compact, he said he favored the proposed legislation in hopes it would aid the farmer. "I thought we should have tried it at least and amended it later on," he declared.
 He predicted that North Carolina would draw up a program to control the production of tobacco and submit to the other leaf growing states.
 He said that unless some form of control is enacted he feared the farmers would be thrown into considerable worse condition than they were before the passage of AAA.

WASHINGTON DAYBOOK

By PRESTON GROVER
 Washington — The extent to which the youthful, dynamic John Hamilton and "her spokesmen for Governor Landon have been showing their campaign to woo disaffected Democrats is reflected in Landon's acceptance speech.

The governor's own approach seems to be read in the strength with which he stressed his disapprobation of the New Deal. There were, for example, such statements as:

"The time has come to stop fumbling with recovery."
 "We must be freed from incessant governmental intimidation and hostility . . . from excessive expenditures and crippling taxation."
 Both Landon and his spokesmen doubtless realize that as against openly disaffected Democrats like Al Smith—to whom Hamilton has made gestures—there are both Democrats and Republicans who voted for Mr. Roosevelt in 1932 now swinging in the balance.

For Governor Landon to engage in pyrotechnics against the New Deal, say some observers, may throw this balance against him.

Landon Keeps Door Open
 To point out mistakes in political judgment is one thing. To condemn outright policies being pursued is another.

The Republican nominee admits that he himself has been mistaken. "As a young man," he said, "I was attracted to the idea of centralizing in the federal government full power to correct the abuses growing out of a more complex social order. When the people rejected this alternative, I was as disappointed as any one. But in spite of this rejection I have lived to see many of those abuses substantially corrected by the federal government in its field of interstate commerce."

In answer to that part of Governor Landon's speech, some opposition editorial writers were not slow to dig out excerpts from his speeches as recent as 1933, which they say show he apparently was of a different mind then.

One thing appears certain from a careful reading of the acceptance speech. Governor Landon has kept the door wide open for voters of both parties who were in the Roosevelt camp in '32, but who now are wavering in their support of the President for reelection.

Bid To Borah Seen
 Politicians here, in analyzing Governor Landon's acceptance speech, were struck by his references to anti-trust laws and monopolistic control.
 Could the governor be openly inviting Senator Borah to take the stump for him in the campaign? Anti-trust laws and monopolies are the Idaho senator's pet issues.

"AS RELIGION SEES IT"

By The Rev. W. D. DAVIS, M.A., B.D. (Oxon) (Formerly Professor of Philosophy and History of Religion, The United Theological College, Aberystwyd Wales)

OLD THEOLOGY IS BANKRUPT SAYS ENGLISH CHURCHMAN—HOLDS RELIGION MUST ACCORD WITH SCIENTIFIC PROGRESS

The old theology of traditional dogma and systematic formula seems today to be under a cloud. One of the most unmistakable of the signs of the times is a veering of intellectual interest from that definite doctrine of creed and council to other studies—psychology of religious experience, comparative and genetic studies, the moral and social implications of Christianity. Are we to reckon this as one of the signs of a decline in religious interest, the so-called "wave of secularism" which the pessimist sees flowing over the world like a second deluge? Not with any justice; for press, if not always pulpit, finds debate on the wider and more practical aspects of religion very popular copy.

Attitude Toward Religion The man in the street is really interested in the question of an after-life, even though he may have cast the resurrection of the body to the limbo of things that don't matter; he is really anxious to know how religion can be successfully applied to the concrete problems of today, to solve—or, at least to ease—our urgent social, economic and international difficulties. He is very far from regarding Christianity—essential Christian truth—as obsolete; he looks to the Church for a safe lead out of the chaos of modern civilization to a saner world-order.

The traditional articles of belief, in many cases, fail to interest men today just because they are not a true expression of modern experience. And that means that the supposed truths which they were framed to express are not of the abiding essence of Christianity. That the traditional articles of the creeds satisfied the needs of the ages which framed them is an-

That Jarrett Girl—Always Breaking Something

Religion and Science. Theology cannot stand aside, as it claimed to do until the middle of last century, as a special doctrine which derived its truth from a special, authoritative source, a divine inspiration quite apart from the findings of the other, human sciences. That claim is no longer allowed; the truth of theology may go beyond anything discoverable by the human mind itself, but its special revelation must be in line with all truth elsewhere. For the indivisible oneness of truth is the fundamental axiom of all modern thinking, a oneness which lies beneath all phases or aspects of our human discovery of it.

Indian Godmother Keeps Peru Salon "Tia" Bates, shown at her South American villa, is more interested in sports than in her famous guests.

By JOHN SELBY New York. (AP) — Thirty-two years ago "Tia" Bates was the American wife of a British mining engineer stationed in Bolivia.

Now she is probably the best known American woman in South America, godmother to 3,000 or more Indians, leading citizens of Arequipa, Peru, and a grandmother.

She is one of the most active grandmothers extant. Of middle height and plump, she moves like lightning. She is always moving, usually talking, and her gray-blue eyes snap at times like small flames. She speaks English, Spanish, French, and several Indian dialects, and slips from one to another sometimes disconcertingly.

Became Famous at Home Curiously, she made herself famous without figuratively moving out of her tracks. At the time of her husband's death, three decades ago, she was living in the Quinta Bates at Arequipa. She still lives there, her presence in the United States being only a visit to relatives.

When her husband died and "something had to be done," Mrs. Bates decided to admit a guest or two to the Quinta Bates. The guests kept coming, the quinta (villa) kept growing, and now it is the most famous gathering place for the people who matter on the west coast of South America.

The natives gave Mrs. Bates the name Tia, which is Spanish for aunt but is not used in South America quite as its English equivalent. Her first name is Ana, and most people combine the two words and call her Tiana. She likes that, and she likes the name Tiana.

Tia Bates has entertained a great many hundreds of people—from Lady Montbatten to Noel Coward, from former Premier Venizelos of Greece to the latest Latin American refugee. Famous people come to the quinta and so do plain commercial travelers. It is no meeting place for the intelligentsia.

Mrs. Bates thinks the quality of business men sent by American firms to South America has improved greatly in recent years. Arequipa is in a desert, 7,200 feet up on the shelf of the Andes. It can be reached by plane, and the big Santa ships call at Mollendo, five hours away by railroad. But there are no motor roads.

To Heaven by Bibbo To reach the heart of Tia Bates, one must talk children. She prefers her work with Arequipa's orphans to receiving poems from Noel Coward—although Coward is one of "her boys." She is intensely proud of her extensive service as godmother. This service does not end with christening. Years ago, in Bolivia, she began it. Often she had to buy small coffins for her godchildren. Always the order included a length of white ribbon. "I couldn't understand about the ribbon," she says. "Finally one of the fathers told me. 'We leave the ribbon hanging from the coffin,' he said, 'to wait the godmother to heaven.'"

COMMISSION SEATES AIMS TO HUNT FOR REAL FACTS

(Continued from page one) Bryant said. "But I want to emphasize that we want facts, not opinions or rumors, or hearsay reports. We are according inviting every person in the state who has actual, first hand information concerning the liquor business in North Carolina, to appear before the commission and give its true facts, also their jobs as to what they think the state should do with regard to liquor. We do not care whether these people are so-called 'dry' or 'wet,' bootleggers, officers of the law, or managers of legal liquor stores, since what we want to do is to get at the facts concerning conditions as they now exist, rather than as people think they are or ought to be."

The commission does not intend to hold any of its hearings because open forums for long-harangued speakers "wets" or "drys" and devoted more to the expression of opinions by partisans of these two groups, Chairman Bryant indicated. Accordingly, the commission has already ruled all those who appear before the commission must first submit written briefs setting forth the same facts which they desire to submit orally. These briefs will be kept on file and studied later on. Chairman Bryant also indicated that the commission would probably invite a number of persons to appear before it from time to time, including police officers and detectives, sheriffs and their deputies, prison officials, welfare officers and others who might be able to give them helpful and pertinent information concerning the liquor business in the state.

Coincident with its efforts to find out the real facts with regard to the extent of the liquor industry here in the state, both legal and bootleg, the commission expects to make an intensive study of liquor control laws and efforts in other states and the results of these efforts, Chairman Bryant said. He indicated that he did not believe it would be necessary for any members of the commission to visit any other states but that this study could be made from copies of these laws and reports obtained from these states. After the commission has held its various hearings, and made its study of liquor laws in other states, it will eventually compile a report of its findings and possible make recommendations to the 1937 general assembly, as the act creating the commission directs it to do. This act was introduced in the 1935 session of the legislature by Mr. Bryant after months had been spent in an effort to work out some type of liquor control legislation and during which Mr. Bryant was impressed with the utter lack of definite information concerning either the extent of the illegal liquor business in North Carolina or of control laws adopted in other states.

GREENIES TAKE 4-0 WIN FROM TARBOROITERS

Shuman, New Hurler, Turns in 5-Hit Game For Locals; Other Games Rained Out

Tarboro, August 1.—The locals sent Shuman, a new member of its mound staff, against the Bunnies today and the newcomer pitched five-hit ball as his mates took a 4-0 decision over the Hearemen.

The game here was the only contest of the day in the Coastal Plain League. Rain blocked other scheduled contests. Gasoline was burned on the field here to make play possible.

Alexander, who opposed Shuman in the pitching argument, made two of the Bunnies five hits. Bragan, Strathorn and Huston made the others.

Walter Latham, Greene catcher-outfielder, with two doubles and a single and Booser and Sanford each with two singles, paced the Favorites' attack.

The Greens got half their runs in the second and made the other two in the fourth. Booser singled in the second to score Sanford, who had walked, and Lath, who had doubled. The fourth-inning runs resulted from a walk, a double by Latham and singles by Sanford and Parker.

By virtue of the victory the Greens gained a game on the idle Marlins.

The New Bern Bears have sharpened their claws and are on their way over here this afternoon to try to whip the locals at Third Street stadium. The locals, strengthened by recent new additions to the club, have won their last two starts, and expect to take the third today.

Score by innings: E. H. E. Greenville, 000 000 4 10 1 Tarboro, 000 000 0 0 0

Charlie Keller Leads Coastal Plain Batters

Charlie Keller, Kinston, Kinston, would be satisfied with a batting average under the .300 mark.

Keller, University of Maryland pitcher, is maintaining his hot pace as leading batsman of the Coastal Plain loop and sports a .414 average in latest statistics.

Roger Garner, Kinston outfielder-pitcher, is runner-up to Keller in the figures, released by J. Gaskill McDaniell of New Bern, league statistician. Garner has an average of .377. The figures include games of July 24th.

New Bern, in the league cellar, furnishes the No. 3 and No. 4 men in the Coastal Plain's batting Big Ten. Harrington is third with .364 and Webb is fourth with .351.

Greenville placed five on the list last week, but three dropped off, leaving only Wagner and Latham, each with a .250 average, the local's leading hitters.

The averages: Ab. R. H. Pct. C. Keller, Kinston 162 47 67 417 Garner, Kinston, 51 13 19 373 Harrington, Bears, 33 3 12 364 Webb, New Bern, 71 10 27 351 Wagner, Greenville 143 31 80 350 Latham, Greenville 103 18 36 330 Tipton, Kinston, 171 37 559 345 Basan, Tarboro, 154 24 53 333 Michael, Kinston, 162 20 34 323 Teague, Ayden, 31 4 10 323

VACATIONING PRESIDENT IN A QUIZZICAL MOOD

This striking close-up of President Roosevelt in a quizzical mood was snapped on the beach at Campobello Island, New Brunswick, at the end of his vacation. ## Division Finds Work For Ex-Convicts Of Good Record

Reflector Bureau, Sir Walter Hotel, Raleigh, July 31.—Everything possible is being done by the prison division of the State Highway and Public Works Commission to find jobs for all prisoners with good prison records when they are paroled or discharged upon the completion of their sentences. Oscar T. Pitts, acting executive director of the division said today. A good many of these prisoners are being placed in jobs with the highway department and almost all of them are making good, Pitts said.

Both common sense and experience have showed us that there is much less likelihood of a prisoner coming back to his old haunts and habits if he has a job than if he is released with no job and nothing definite to do," Pitts said. "Accordingly we have been trying for many months to secure jobs for all the prisoners either paroled or discharged. The Commissioner of Paroles and his staff, likewise the various county welfare officers, have been of very great assistance in this work. As nearly as possible we try to get the jobs for the released prisoners in their home counties or wherever their families are located."

Just a day or two ago a young man came into Mr. Pitts' office here and waited for an opportunity to speak to him. The young man was a former prisoner who had just completed a two years sentence and who came by to thank Pitts for what he had done for him while he was in prison and that the two years in prison had made him see things differently.

"This boy told me that the two years in prison had been good for him, that he had needed it and that he was confident he could now go straight" if he could just get a job. I asked him if he had a job, and he said he did not. He told me he had been a painter by trade. I then called the bridge department and in 15 minutes got a job for him in the bridge division as a bridge painter. He is making a fine record already."

WALKER SURPRISES—SO TIGERS FORGIVE

Detroit, (AP)—For one act, the Detroit Tigers forgave all of Gerald Walker's previous transgressions.

Walker, well up to his average this season for unorthodox base running and being the victim of unexpected putouts, pulled a Ty-Cobb-ish base theft against the Philadelphia Athletics.

In a typically surprise maneuver—this one working—Walker dashed home from second base during a double play to score Detroit's winning run in the last of the eighth.

The public is a product of the printing press, believes Gabriel d'Arde, the French sociologist and criminologist.
