EIGHT PERSONS VICTIMS OF AIRPLANE TRAGEDY

Additional Fascist Forces Bolster Insurrectionists For Thrust Against Madrid

REBEL TROOPS SIGHT CAPITAL

Reports From Front Indicate Slow Advance by Revolvers of Spain's Liberal Government; Loyalists Continue Claim Victories, However

(By Associated Press) Fresh fascist troops landed on the Spanish peninsula from Spanish Morocco today to bolster insurrectionist armies, smashing toward the capture of Madrid and overthrow of the nation's liberal government.

Poised only 36 miles from the capital to consolidate positions before continuation of the thrust southward, the fascist forces were described by the government as having been halted and subject to a "final crushing blow" by loyalists.

But reports from the front indicated a slow advance by the rebels. Feverishly the government poured reinforcements into the Guadarrama mountain passes in expectation of a three-way assault to halt the fascist drive.

The fascists were in sight of the capital from their vantage points on the heights of mountain territory they captured in hand-to-hand encounters.

The leftist army was being drastically reorganized. Fascists dickered for more airplanes to implement their drive.

On the diplomatic front, Russia and Italy adhered in principle to the French proposed policy of non-intervention in Spain's civil war. However, both attached conditions to their acceptance.

U. S. CALLS UPON SPAIN FOR ADEQUATE PROTECTION Washington, Aug. 6.—(AP)—The United States today called upon the Spanish government to provide adequate protection for American property in the revolutionary area, warning that it would expect adequate indemnification for any damage suffered.

On instruction from the state department, Eric C. Wendelin, charge d'affaires of the American embassy in Madrid, told Spanish foreign officials the United States could not admit that the property of the nationals in Spain could be interfered with impunity.

Wendelin reported after his call at the foreign office that the American representations were received with "sympathetic consideration."

Thus far, the only interference with American property reported from Spain has been at Barcelona, where elements aligned with the government have seized control of the plants of the Ford Motor Company and the General Motors Corporation.

PRE-REVOLUTION PLANS ARE DISCLOSED IN SPAIN Fall of the rebel city of Cadiz, Spain, before a bitter loyalist attack was reported today in Madrid as astounding disclosures were made of pre-revolution plans for the uprising.

Puzzled by the strength of rebel positions in the Guadarrama mountains, leftist government officials said they had learned of indications that Jose Gil Robles, former minister of war, was planning for an attack on the capital city as early as last fall.

They said that long proved gun implementations had been started during army maneuvers with a view to using them to overthrow the present liberal government.

MASONS HOLD DISTRICT CONCLAVE AT OXFORD Oxford, Aug. 6.—Masons of the 15th district met here yesterday with Grand Master J. Giles Hudson of Salisbury, as the principal speaker.

The afternoon session was devoted to Masonic instructions by Grand Secretary John H. Anderson and later the delegates visited the Oxford Orphanage.

FIGHT IS THREATENED FOR LABOR FACTIONS

Washington, Aug. 6.—(AP)—A tremendous fight to a finish between two huge factions of labor unionists with countless factories, shops and mines as the scene of action threatened today after American Federation of Labor leaders decided to suspend John L. Lewis and 1,000,000 of his followers for "rebellion."

Already there was talk in the Lewis camp of forming a rival federation. Informed labor circles saw the possibility that the two formidable groups would compete fiercely for each other's members and for new recruits.

The decision of the American Federation of Labor executive council announced last night after a three-days "trial," was that the Lewis group, comprising the United Mine Workers and nine more of the strongest and richest unions, should be suspended indefinitely unless they repented within 30 days.

Thus there was still time to restore peace within the divided ranks of labor, but bitter pronouncements from both sides gave no hint that peacemakers would be successful.

"We'll not disband the committee for industrial organizations," Lewis announced. "The decision of the executive council will not change the policy of the committee for industrial organization, nor will it have any effect upon the organizing activities of the committee."

Morehead City, Aug. 6.—(AP)—Headed by H. P. Crowell as president, the directors of the Atlantic and North Carolina Railroad in annual session here this afternoon elected the slate of officers recommended by Governor Ehringhaus and heard glowing reports from Crowell on the state's operation of the road for the past nine months.

Other officers included C. L. Ives of New Bern as secretary-treasurer; Luther Hamilton of Morehead City as attorney; and John D. Warwick of Jacksonville, auditor.

The directors' meeting followed the annual meeting of the stockholders at which direct recommendations by the governor were elected.

Those elected representing private stockholders included Dr. J. Y. Joyner of LaGrange.

Directors named by the governor to represent the state included U. M. Gillikin and Don C. Humphrey of Goldsboro; Selby Anderson of Wilson, and S. H. Hicks of Snow Hill.

SMOKES APLENTY SOLD AS TOBACCO AUCTIONS OPEN

Tobacco, row on row, jammed warehouses in 15 Georgia cities as the first 1936 auctions got underway with generally high prices prevailing. Heavy offerings made it impossible to find room for some of the weed and vacant buildings were pressed into service. Here is the interior of a tobacco-crowded warehouse at Valdosta. PAIR DEMOTED BY SECRETARY

Washington, Aug. 6.—(AP)—Announcing the demotion of two secret service officials, Secretary Morgenthau said today he was "deeply shocked" to learn that secret service agents had "taken it upon themselves to investigate activities of the federal bureau of investigation."

He announced the demotion by one grade of Assistant Secret Service Chief Joseph E. Murphy and the demotion to field service of Grady Boatwright, formerly in charge of the St. Paul bureau.

The treasury head made public a letter to Attorney General Cummings expressing "deep regret to you and to your department for this irresponsible action and to assure you that suitable disciplinary measures will be taken."

An investigation by W. H. Moran, chief of the secret service, and other high treasury officials has been in progress since. Attorney General Cummings told newsmen at a press conference, there had been "ill-advised" investigation of justice department agents by another government agency.

Reports received by Cummings were that secret service men at St. Paul had made inquiries into circumstances surrounding the shooting to death of a Dillinger gangster.

Lawrence, slashed Ervin's throat with a knife, causing his death a few hours later. Judge Thomas J. Shaw of Greensboro, who is presiding at this term of court, has not as yet passed sentence.

Brantley, Nash county farmer. The sheriff said that the boy, whose father is dead and who farms near the Brantleys had not asked for bond and that he will be given a preliminary hearing before the Nash county court on Monday.

Chief of Police George Clark today issued an ultimatum to all residents of the city to clear the weeds from their yards and vacant lots.

The officer declared that unless weeds were cut down by August 15 legal action probably would be resorted to.

The move is in connection with an annual clean up campaign for the city.

SEES SOLUTION IN BABY MIX-UP

Atlanta Hospital Pathologist Advocates Blood Test Atlanta, Aug. 6.—(AP)—Dr. Jack C. Norris, pathologist at the city hospital where a "mixed baby" case aroused two mothers 17 years ago suggested modern blood tests might determine the parentage of pretty Louise Madeline Pittman.

"We can tell to a certain degree," he said, "nowadays we have it down to a pretty fine thing."

The girl, who insists Mr. and Mrs. John Garner of Macon are her parents, returned here late yesterday for a visit with Mr. and Mrs. Daniel L. Pittman, Atlantans who won custody of her in the original dispute.

Both the girl and Pittman expressed no opposition to a blood test, but Garner expressed doubt anything could be obtained by it.

News Behind The News

PLAN CONDUCT HEALTH CLINIC

Plans for conducting maternal and infant welfare clinics in strategic points in the county are underway and it is expected they will begin about September 1.

Dr. G. M. Cooper, director of preventive medicine, and Dr. Roy Norton, consultant on public health administration for the state Board of Health, were in the city this week working with physicians and Pitt health department officials.

The clinics, to be sponsored by the State Board of Health, the Pitt county Medical society and the Pitt health department, will be financed with Social Security funds.

Tentative plans call for operation of five clinics throughout the county each month. Physicians in the county will conduct them.

A committee appointed at the last meeting of the Pitt Medical society, composed of Dr. M. T. Prizzelle of Ayden, Dr. W. I. Wooten of Greenville and Dr. N. Thomas Burnett, health officer, is working on details of the clinic.

The group will announce places and dates of the clinics in the near future, but it is expected they will get underway about the first of next month.

Discussing the clinics today, Dr. Burnett declared he was well pleased to see Pitt county getting this service because "the maternal-infant death rate in the county is regarded as unreasonable high."

Ex-Officer Linked With Abduction of Two St. Paul Men

St. Paul, Minn., Aug. 6.—(AP)—County Attorney Michael F. Finkhead said today his office was investigating charges that Thomas A. Brown, dismissed police detective had been involved in the kidnappings of William Hamm, Jr., brewer, and Edward G. Bremer, banker.

Brown previously under suspension was discharged yesterday by Gus Barfuss, public safety commissioner, who in a formal notice to the detective charged that the latter "wilfully and unlawfully conspired" with Alvin Karpis and others who abducted Hamm on June 15, 1933, and Bremer on January 17, 1934.

George P. Sullivan, United States district attorney, who prosecuted and sent to prison Karpis and other members of the Barker-Karpis gang in the R. I. and Bremer cases, said that the Federal government planned no action against Brown.

Officials Ousted By The Wholesale

Chicago, Aug. 6.—(AP)—A Cook county board of elections commissioner discharged 485 judges and clerks of election who worked in the April primary today after four months of investigation into irregularities at the polls.

Approximately 200 of the group of coal prosecution by the state attorney's office on charges including making erroneous tally sheets, making false entries and permitting illegal voting.

Alexander J. McKay, president of the board, said the number discharged "was probably the greatest number of election officials discharged at one time."

"They will never serve again," he added.

Flight Commander Is Unable to Determine Cause of Fall

St. Louis, Aug. 6.—(AP)—All eight persons on board a Chicago and Southern airlines plane, were killed last night when the ship crashed in to a field from 1,000 feet, three miles from St. Louis-Lambert airport a few minutes after taking off for Chicago.

Company officials withheld news of the crash until early today. R. H. Moore, flight superintendent, said he could not determine the cause immediately.

Moore said the plane did not answer a radio call at 10:52 p. m., a few minutes after taking off.

"We radioed Chicago and they tried to call him, too," Moore said. "Then we called Chicago and asked if he had passed over."

"Both the St. Louis and Chicago dispatches continued to call for the plane. We started a telephone search on the possibility it had crashed."

Moore said the plane's location indicated it was on course and flying at about 1,000 feet.

Barbed-wire planes of another airline were grounded here after arriving from the west, but cleared weather for the northbound flight to Chicago was satisfactory.

OFFICIALS OF BUREAU MEET

Committees Set Up at Session State Farm Federation

Holding the first meeting since a permanent organization was established to replace the temporary set-up, officials of the North Carolina Farm Bureau Federation this afternoon selected a number of committees and attended to other routine business.

A resolution requesting E. P. Arnold, who has been serving as executive secretary, to remain in this capacity was unanimously adopted and the former county agent said he would continue his present duties with the farm organization.

Administrative and legislative committees were set up, as were separate groups to represent the peanut, truck, cotton and tobacco farmers.

The various committees follow: Administrative—J. E. Winslow of Greenville, W. F. Woodruff of Nashville, W. W. Eagles of Macleesfield, G. T. Scott of Selma and J. B. Patrick of Washington.

Peanut—B. D. Stephenson of Jackson, B. B. Everett of Plymouth, J. T. Smithwick of Williamson and R. C. Holland of Eberston.

Truck—J. R. Morris of Wilmington, H. C. Meads of Elizabeth City, L. P. Wells of Mount Olive and Mack Thompson of Aurora.

Cotton—A. J. Whitley of Smithfield, R. E. Eakers of Gastonia, W. H. Stevens of Raleigh and W. W. Eagles of Macleesfield.

Tobacco—J. H. Lane of Brantown, C. T. Hall of Wooddale, L. O. Mosley of Kinston and J. D. McInnis of Carthage.

Legislative—Composed of the chairman of the other committees: J. E. Winslow, W. F. Woodruff, B. D. Stephenson, J. R. Morris, A. J. Whitley and J. H. Lane.

Miss Bondie Pierson was named treasurer and assistant secretary of the organization.

There was little indication headquarters of the Federation would be transferred to Raleigh from this city, a move that has been talked since the permanent set-up was made.

News of Last Night's Tragedy Withheld by Company Officials Until Today

Commission Lacks Funds Make Study of Liquor Situation

Reflector Bureau, Sir Walter Hotel, Raleigh, Aug. 6.—Chairman Victor S. Bryant of the liquor investigating and fact finding commission recently appointed by Governor J. C. B. Ehringhaus, is wondering how he is going to get along without any expense money for clerk hire, stationery or postage in making the investigation and compiling the report it must make to the 1937 general assembly.

For while the resolution creating the commission and setting forth its duties, provides for per diem of the members amounting to $1 a day and not to exceed $4 a day for expenses, the resolution does not provide a single penny for any other purpose. The resolution, incidentally, was written and introduced by Bryant, who was a member of the 1933 house from Durham county.

Now, as chairman of the commission, he is trying to figure out what it will use for money.

It is understood that Chairman Bryant has already conferred once or twice with Frank Dunlap, assistant director of the Budget Bureau, with a view to working out some plan whereby the commission may have some secretarial assistance and get some funds for carrying on the tremendous amount of work which must be done both in making its investigation and then later in compiling its report and recommendations. But as yet there is nothing to indicate that anything very encouraging has been worked out. Most observers believe that the commission really needs the services of a secretary to help it obtain, sift and compile all the data which will come before it both during and after the various hearings that will be held. But present indications are that Bryant may have to act as its secretary as well as its chairman, unless some way is found to dig up some cash for this purpose.

The commission will hold another meeting and hearing here August 27, a hearing on one of the "wet" counties August 28 and still another hearing in Wilmington August 29. Additional hearings and meetings will probably be held in other localities later on.

Legislature To Be Asked Set Up Medical College

Reflector Bureau.
 Raleigh, Aug. 5.—The 1937 general assembly will be asked to set up a four year medical school in North Carolina and the foundation work for an intensive campaign to bring about the establishment of such a medical school either as a unit of the University of North Carolina in Chapel Hill or Raleigh, is now under way.

There is also talk that an effort may be made to consolidate the Wake Forest medical department with this school and to make the new school, if it is set up, a consolidation of the two year medical courses now offered both at Chapel Hill and Wake Forest. Not that either school wants this, for both are expected to oppose any consolidation unless it becomes apparent that they must either consolidate or be abolished. But the prevailing belief in most medical circles over the state is that unless the University of North Carolina or Wake Forest establish a four year medical school that will meet with the approval of the education of the American Medical Association, that both will have to close up their present two year medical courses.

While it is agreed that there is a real need for another four year medical school in North Carolina in addition to the one at Duke University, the two biggest factors in the movement to secure another standard medical school in the state are regarded as being:

1. The fact that unless a four year medical school is set up either as part of the University of North Carolina or of Wake Forest, College that the two year pre-med departments in both institutions will have to be abolished.

2. The whole-hearted dislike which both the University of North Carolina and Wake Forest medical departments have for Duke University, also the dislike which most of the doctors in the state, especially those who did part of their medical work at Chapel Hill or Wake Forest, have for the Duke University medical school and hospital.

There is virtually no disagreement among the physicians of the state with regard to the need for another four year medical school. They also agree that if Wake Forest and Carolina should be forced to abolish their two year pre-medical courses, a great many young men in the state who want to study medicine and become doctors will be unable to, because they will not

APPOINTMENT WORK STARTED YET BE MADE ON CAMP SITE

Group Study Fertilizer Prices Ordered by Assembly

Reflector Bureau.
 Raleigh, Aug. 6.—There is still another commission, authorized by the 1935 general assembly in the spring of 1933 which Governor J. C. B. Ehringhaus has not yet appointed. It was discovered here today.

This is the commission or committee to study and investigate "the high and unreasonable retail prices of fertilizers," authorized in House Resolution 1486 introduced by Dr. R. L. Carr of Duplin county and ratified May 11, 1935. The resolution carries no appropriation, however, not even per diem and expenses for the members, so that those who are appointed on it must pay their own expenses.

When Governor Ehringhaus appointed the various members of the liquor fact-finding commission, the gasoline price investigation commission and the county road debts commission, the general belief was that he has at last named all of the commission he had been directed to appoint by the 1935 general assembly, even though he had waited more than a year after the passage of the resolutions to name them. But today some one came across the resolution authorizing the appointment of the fertilizer price investigating committee and pointed out that it has not yet been appointed.

This resolution directs that the fertilizer cost investigating committee shall be composed of eight members, three to be appointed by the Governor, three by the Speaker of the House from the membership of the 1935 house and two by the President of the Senate (the Lieutenant Governor) from the membership of the 1935 senate. It also requires that the members of this commission or committee shall inquire into and investigate and ascertain the reasons for the alarming increase in retail prices of fertilizers and to recommend the enactment of legislation to remedy this condition which bears so heavily on the farmers of the state of North Carolina.

The commission is authorized to hold fittings and public hearings anywhere necessary to send for persons and papers, administer oaths, to summon and compel the attendance of witnesses and to compel testimony. It must also submit a report of its findings to the 1937 general assembly.

WILD PONIES TAMED IN ANNUAL ROUND-UP

Manas flying in the wind, 300 sturdy little steeds were driven through the quarter-mile of shallow water between Assateague and Chincoteague islands in the annual round-up of wild ponies that roam those tiny dots of land off the Virginia coast. Herded into the fishing village of Chincoteague, they were sold at a gigantic auction sale. One of the captives is shown (below) getting acquainted with a rope at the hands of Islander Clarence Beebe who is getting lots of help from his collier. (Associated Press Photos)

WASHINGTON DAYBOOK

By PRESTON GROVER

Washington — President Roosevelt's declaration that Passamaquoddy will be completed caused some Democrats to predict that the chief executive would wage a strenuous battle before he would acquiesce in either the power project or the Florida ship canal enterprise becoming "ghost towns."

If his will prevails and the "model community" at Passamaquoddy is saved, it will not be the first New Deal effort that has brought life to real or near "ghost towns." Raising the value of gold put new life in many a waning mining town in the Rocky mountains and California.

Towns whose mines had played out before the turn of the century often found themselves alive once more when small and large mining enterprises came into harvest time. Low grade gold prospects abandoned years ago but made valuable when the yellow metal rose nearly two dollars to one of its previous price.

Increased silver prices also played a part. Senator Pittman of Nevada once estimated that upwards of 4,000 mines of all sizes had opened up in the west because of the enhanced price of the two metals. The President seems "so'd" on Passamaquoddy both from a sentimental and an engineering viewpoint, and is reported in some quarters to be eager as well to see the Florida ship canal completed. He tried to revive both in the last session of congress, unsuccessfully.

Washington — Judged by its senate representation, the voice of Iowa in national affairs frequently has been hard to understand. It depended on which Iowa senator you listened to.

That was true even before the late Louis Murphy, Democrat and ardent New Dealer, came to the senate. His election as colleague of Lester J. Dickinson, Republican and among the earlier senatorial New Deal denouncers, served to cancel out the state's senate share in legislation. The two voted as they talked.

BUY BETTER WHISKEY

Seminole, Okla. (AP)—President Roosevelt, responsible for the planting of thousands of young trees through the activities of the CCC, will be asked to spare a stately Oklahoma cottonwood.

The first tree ever planted in Seminole stands on the site of the new federal building, recently authorized for this city. The landmark was ordered cut down to clear the site.

When Mrs. M. M. Turlington, a Seminole pioneer, recalled the tree had been planted here when not another was in sight, city officials decided to send a request to the President and the treasury department to erect the post office without disturbing the tree.

Washington. — In Georgia, where Republicans don't even bother to hold a primary, Democrats are squabbling over the New Deal. It is the only issue of consequence in the Democratic senatorial primary of September 9.

Yet Georgians are wondering if the vote—regardless of how it goes—is to be a real test of the President's strength in the state.

The Democratic governor, respected Eugene Talmadge, is out for the senate against New Dealer Richard B. Russell, Jr., young incumbent and Talmadge's gubernatorial predecessor.

The governor is telling his former friends—and he claims them by the thousands—that the New Deal is ruining them.

Russell, stumping just as vigorously, insists return of the Roosevelt administration is the only thing that can save them.

Traditionally, Georgia is the scion of all the solid south. No-body questions very seriously what its vote will be in November; but the primary, with the same issue involved, presents a different situation.

Some people believe as many as 25 per cent of those who vote for Talmadge in September will vote for Roosevelt and Garner in November. If that is true, the primary is hardly a fair test of the New Deal.

Each of the senate candidates says the other can no longer call himself a Democrat. Talmadge pleads for the chance to straighten out the New Deal, explaining his criticism is not of the President himself but of the program. Russell fights back with a complete defense of his unwavering New Deal support.

In the race for governor, Senate President Charles D. Rsdwine, choice of the "House of Talmadge," carries the banner of his chief, often speaking from the same platform as the red-suspended chief executive.

In Florida, two senators are to be elected—both to fill unexpired terms—but the New Deal isn't an issue. The candidates accept it, apparently, as what the people want. Claude Pepper, 36-year-old Tallahassee lawyer, is unopposed for the Democratic nomination to succeed the late Senator Duncan U. Fletcher. For the senate seat left vacant by the death of Park Trammell, three men—C. O. Andrews, of Cr-lando, Robert J. Boone of Miami, and former Governor Doyle E. Carlton of Tampa—seek the nomination.

And then came Smith Wildman Brookhart, wearing a Republican label but so far to the left of Cummins' "Iowa Idea" position that Cummins seemed a die-hard conservative in comparison.

It will be seen that through all this, that same confusion as to what the voice of Iowa was saying prevailed to some extent. Now Murphy's tragic death in an auto accident has given the state its first opportunity in years to clear up this confusion by electing two senators at once. What is Iowa going to do about it?

If the Iowans hereabouts know their state politics, much depends on just whom the Republicans select to run for the seat vacated by Murphy's death. There have been many Democratic declarations that Dickinson faced a tough re-election fight, pitted against their champion, Gov. Clyde Herring. Paired for the race with a colleague close-identified with the Landon presidential ticket, Dickinson would have his chances improved, say national Republican circles.

The one conclusion inescapable to any political observer is that Iowa has become a pivotal battleground of the campaign. The voice of Iowa

Winner In Amateur Contest Atlantic Beach, Aug. 6.—Marie Smith of Greenville, N. C., won the sixth amateur hour at the Atlantic Beach Casino, defeating twelve amateurs and pleasing 600 in attendance. She won with a perfectly executed tap dance, which won the plaudits of the crowd, and brought her a first prize, for her efforts.

Marie nosed out Sterling Johnson and Hazel Johnson, both of Beaufort, who sang a duet "Home on the Range." The choice was difficult, and it was left to the audience to determine, and Joe Burke and his boys judged the applause of the audience, and voted 6 to 5 in favor of Marie Smith.

Each Monday night the management of the beach offers a first prize of $10, no second, to the winner.

Each amateur participates with the understanding that the audience is the judge. The last Monday night in August the management proposes to bring back the winners of the weekly shows in a "Amateur hours of the winners of Atlantic Beach amateur nights."

By PRESTON GROVER

Washington — The Federal Reserve board feels it has a tight harness on banks to prevent them participating too eagerly in any stock market boom, but who can keep the funds of big corporations from whopping it up on the exchange?

Behind their frosted-glass doors, many government officials are now wondering just how long these interests with idle bank balances can be expected to keep the balances idle, or at least keep them out of the stock market.

Some have concluded that in some respects the situation is about as it was before 1929. They contend that many large corporations began tapering off their expansion programs long before 1929. But the profits continued to roll in, building up big reserves. It is their idea that much of those reserves lay idle in banks for so long that corporation managers grew impatient and went into the market with it.

Some corporations, they contend, bought out competitors, even if this meant buying up stock at inflated values. Others lent money to speculators, using the banks as agents. It all inflated the boom.

Applies Curbs

The Federal Reserve has already curbed the banks so they cannot take the part they did before as agents for corporations or others in lending on the market. As a further brake, margin requirements for speculators have been increased from the approximately 20 to 25 per cent level of 1929 to 55 per cent level of 1929 to 55 per cent at present. Then, too, bank reserve requirements were increased recently by the Federal Reserve. This forestalled funds that banks might have let go as loans to speculators.

But none of these provisions can operate against a corporation. Certain government fiscal officials are nothing to prevent the corporations lending directly to speculators or buying out competitors, just as before, and with the same effect on the market.

Some of the government's fiscal brains think the only curb on such actions is to take such corporate excesses by taxation, or to begin a deflationary program by calling in government bonds. Both methods work slowly. These individuals consider the recent tax bill only a taste of what would be required to curb the corporations if they decided to let themselves go.

Say Boom Possible

The Federal Reserve board, in "locking up" part of the excess bank reserve, commented that it was an "oppor" he time" before the banks had already lent or invested them.

But even though feeling the banks are under control, certain government financial officials fasten their eyes daily upon the stock market. They don't predict a market boom. They just say that if the cards were played so and so, one could be started.

Washington—The Navy Department is prepared with scoops full of reasons why it should build the two new $50,000,000 battleships authorized by the last congress "if and when some other nation starts building."

For 20 years or more the talk among navy or army men when they get together informally has been not about defense on the Atlantic but defense on the Pacific.

Yet the principal public justification for building the new battleships was that England has decided on a couple as part of her preparedness campaign to get under way when the present naval limitations treaty ends next December 31. That is the technical reason.

Naval men talk rather bluntly when they are certain their names won't be published in stories to be poked under the snorting nose of a board of inquiry. They think the Pacific coast defense couldn't meet much of an off-shore attack. They doubt if coast defense guns can shoot as far as the big 16-inch naval guns, though they concede there is an argument about that.

But then again, they contend a battleship is a moving target which coast defense guns must hit, while targets ashore—including coast defense guns—are fixed, often of known location, and thus easier to hit.

Besides that, they argue that there is a vast expanse of American coast line where troops could be landed, since coast artillery is concentrated only about principal harbors.

The navy's job, as they see it, is to keep the battle away from American shores, at least several hundred miles, and that can't be done with guns and ships inferior to the enemy. They doubt whether air-bombers operating from shore could head off a naval attack.

The immediate reason for the two new ships (issuing of the order for their building is left to the President) is that two American battleships, the Arkansas and the Texas, and possibly a third, the New York, are too slow for use.

Naval battles are fought on the run. An antagonist with guns of greater range and faster ships can keep out of range of his enemy's guns and yet pound his enemy with his own guns. England and the United States have 12 first line capital ships each, with 14 to 16-inch guns, and three each over-age. Japan has 9 capital ships with four over-age.

The navy argues that the United States has a coast line on two oceans, besides the Hawaiian islands and, for the time being, the Philippines, to protect.

Believe Easterner Should Be Elected Party's Chairman

Reports Are to The Effect Hoy Would Make Mistake By Not Coming to East for Choice

Reflector Bureau, Sir Walter Hotel.

Raleigh, Aug. 6.—Reports to the effect that Clyde B. Hoy may ask the State Democratic Executive Committee to re-elect J. Wallace Winborne of Marion as chairman for another four years, are causing some uneasiness among many of Mr. Hoy's supporters in the east. For while they all agree that Mr. Winborne has made an excellent chairman for the past four years and that he was unusually successful in managing the last two campaigns, they feel that it would be a mistake for Mr. Hoy to disregard the precedent under which the chairmanship of the committee has alternated between the east and the west and under which a different chairman has always been selected by each incoming Governor.

A good many observers here feel that if Mr. Hoy should re-appoint Chairman Winborne or select another western man as chairman, such action would greatly complicate the present situation in the eastern part of the state, where there is already very strong opposition to Mr. Hoy and where Dr. Ralph W. McDonald got most of the 212,000 votes he received in the first primary. To fail to name an eastern Democrat as chairman of the State Democratic Executive Committee this time would not only further irritate those Democrats who are not friendly to Mr. Hoy now, but might serve to greatly offend the minority of eastern Democrats who did support him, it is being pointed out. And in order to win the election this fall by the margin which both he and his friends hope he will, Mr. Hoy will need the support of as many different factions as possible, it is generally conceded.

The two easterners whose names are being most prominently mentioned for state chairman at the present time are Ben Parham of Oxford, Granville county, and Luther Hamilton of Morehead City, Carteret county. Both have served in the general assembly, both are regarded as well acquainted with the entire state and as being able organizers. Many here believe that Mr. Hoy could not do better than select one of these men for chairman of the executive committee for the next four years.

HOLLYWOOD SIGHTS & SOUNDS

By ROBBIN COONS

Hollywood — Unreel parade: Bing Crosby is a practically kissless romantic actor. Unless Frances Farmer, his latest leading lady, planted a kiss on his lips in his last film—and I don't recall that she did—Carole Lombard is the only cinema lady to carry film romances with Bing that far. This was in "We're Not Dressing."

Directors of Bing's pictures say his film kisslessness is the result of bashfulness, not feeling at ease making love before a camera. "Give him an ardent love scene and he'll blush and stammer," one said. "He can be tender in his lines of a love scene to the point where the kiss comes in, then he becomes an awkward school boy."

Actor Now Stenographer

In the stenographic department of the Goldwyn studio is Andres Claudett, 27, who admits that in European pictures he was Andres Michael, juvenile and player of second leads. In Hollywood after slight film work he became ill, and was up to his ears in hard times when an appeal to a passing executive for coffee coin won recognition and a job. His ambition now is to write, and to establish himself as a juvenile with a foreign accent. There are none now, he believes.

Among the foreign films in which Andres worked was "The Blue Angel" with Marlene Dietrich. Three years ago he tried to see Miss Dietrich but—"It was not possible," he says. "So many people try to see the stars. Now I understand and do not try any more."

THE WORLD WITH A FENCE

A New Novel by Marian Sims

SYNOPSIS: But for two meters, things have run smoothly since Carol Torrance left her home town of Meredith to teach school in Ashboro, another Georgia town. One is Denis Ford, a newspaper man living with his parents between jobs, and a dangerously attractive person. The other is the morose Sam Cates, who precipitated what might have been a free for all by throwing a handful of birdshot at Carol's desk in class. Sam has been expelled by the principal.

Chapter 12 MR. CATES

THAT evening Mrs. O'Connor called up the stairs: "There's somebody to see you, Miss Torrance."

"He's on the porch," Mrs. O'Connor whispered. "He wouldn't come in."

The porch light shone on a shabby, middle-aged little man with sad dark eyes and an enormous drooping moustache. The little man snatched at his hat and said, "Miss Torrance..." and stopped.

"I'm all right," he said uncomfortably, and leaned against the porch railing. She sat in the swing and waited.

He twisted the hat and looked at his feet. "I'm—Sam Cates's father," he said finally.

Carol's heart dropped heavily. The little man's eyes had the voiceless appeal of a dog's, and he bore the scars of a heavy bludgeoning from life. She said:

"Oh, Mr. Cates... I'm desperately sorry..." and let her voice fall of its own weight.

"I... come to ask you to give him another chance. He—he's awfully sorry, Miss Torrance. He says he'll apologize to you and the little girl... before the whole class..."

The tears on her eyelids were scalding and unmanageable.

"It's not—just today, Mr. Cates. It had been I wouldn't have asked to have him expelled. He doesn't study, and he—cheats. I've caught him time after time..."

Mr. Cates didn't seem to doubt or resent that. It only bore out what he had learned to expect. But he made another attempt.

"I—never had no education, Miss Torrance. I'm a carpenter, and the buildin' trade's been awful hard hit these last few years. Sometimes I've went six months without a sign of work. And I made up my mind to see that Sam got a education so he'd have a chance to be something better, but it don't seem like he appreciated it till today. He never has done no good in school, much, but now he wants another chance..."

Loathing for Sam gave her courage. It's the kindest way, she told herself harshly. You despise sentimentalists: don't be one.

"Mr. Cates, if Sam had ever shown the least interest in school—in any one class—I'd say yes. But he hasn't: I checked his record to see. By keeping him there, at his age, you're making a loafer of him. The fairest thing to you and to him, is to take him out and put him to work helping you, even if you can't pay him a cent. He may make a fine carpenter, or a fine brick-mason, but he'll never hold down an office job."

He digested that patiently, punishing the shabby hat. "You mean—you won't take him back?"

"I can't." She burst out suddenly: "Oh, please, please see that I'm not just being mean; that it's the best thing for him."

He nodded. "Yes'm. I see how you feel about it. Well—thank you, ma'am, for bein' so nice about it."

WHEN Mr. Cates had gone she lay on her face in the swing and cried, quietly, luxuriously, as if that might wash out the picture of him.

Denise's voice penetrated her despair. "Why, Carol, sweetheart..."

"She sat up and blinked. "Oh, good gosh! What are you doing here?"

He came over and put his arms around her, produced an adequate handkerchief.

"Liar. You said you had to correct papers tonight. I was just passing the house..." He laughed at the thinness of that, but the laugh was shaken.

She sat for a minute with her face against his shoulder, loving him in spite of herself, grateful to him for ignoring her refusal to see him.

"I was correcting papers when that little man came..."

is being speeded up way ahead of the usual schedule. Party workers not ordinarily mobilized before October are being old to step on the gas.

The point is that the Democratic high command is seriously worried about losing New York's 47 electoral votes and feels that intensive work is the only hope of success—Lehman or no Lehman. It doesn't necessarily follow that Farley and Co. are complacent about the national outcome—but in the broader arena there is a better chance that the Republicans will make mistakes if they have the stage to themselves.

TEACHERS: The American Federation of Teachers—affiliated with the Federation of Labor—is out to put Governor Landon on the spot. There has already been some venomous sniping from this source, but the real barrage is scheduled to begin when the Federation of Teachers convention meets in Philadelphia on August 17th. Over and over again Landon will be forcefully asked whether budgets should be balanced at the expense of education and whether he intends to accept Hears's definition of academic freedom. The low salaries of Kansas teachers will be headlined.

The group will have strong support in this campaign of harassment from both the Green and Lewis wings of the Federation of Labor. It will also have the backing—at least moral—of the two other leading organizations of teachers—the Progressive Education Association and the larger and more conservative American Education Association.

It has never been demonstrated that teachers have any political influence worth mentioning, but the Federation hopes to change that by having teachers pound away at their story to parents. Leading educators are not exactly wild about Roosevelt, but they do feel they have a better chance of retaining freedom of speech and of improving their economic status with him than with Landon.

ROCKET: Some of Wall Street's shrewdest market operators foresee a major boom in stocks—more spectacular and more dangerous than the steady rise of the past 18 months. They base their prophecy on two factors—the casual manner in which the market has shrugged off all kinds of bad news and the tremendous supply of money still available for investment and uninterested in bonds because of low yields.

As to the former, any one of the following developments of recent months would probably have knocked the stock market for a loop if it were at all susceptible to bearish influences.

1. The raising of margin requirements by the Securities Exchange Commission and the Federal Reserve Board. 2. The Reserve Board's move to cut excess reserves drastically. 3. The SEC investigation of investment trusts. 4. The drought. 5. The threat of chaos in Europe. Despite all these combined, stock prices have continued their serene climb.

From the other angle, shrinkage in phony stocks which the SEC was created plus increased incomes from recovery have greatly enhanced the volume of funds available to purchase legitimate stocks. Forces are gathering which might easily lead to another skyrocket performance. STABILITY: The adverse stock market reaction to U. S. Steel's recent earnings statement and declaration of a dollar dividend on the preferred stock spotlights a problem in Big Steel's relations with the public.

Wall Street was disappointed—and showed it—because overoptimistic estimates of the company's earnings and dividend action had been freely circulated in advance. The corporation is not to blame for that. It has always taken—and still takes—every precaution to prevent premature information about its financial status from leaking out. But the point is that you cannot stop people from guessing, and when they have no authentic data on which to base their guesses they are likely to be wide of the mark. Many traders cling to the long established though outworn tradition that U. S. Steel's earnings record is a fair barometer of business in general. So when bullish anticipations about this company are not fulfilled, the psychological reflex hits the whole market.

Some corporations—in order to eliminate such inaccurate guesswork and the ensuing fluctuations—make a practice of tipping off trusted newspaper men unofficially a few days before a directors' meeting as to what the figures are likely to show. In this way advance estimates flow close to facts. Keen observers remark that it would promote market stability if Big Steel were to follow their example instead of guarding its secrets with such extreme care.

'MIX-UP CHILD' TAKES NEW PARENT

in New Jersey, which had opposed the original Roosevelt nomination bitterly voted solidly for the re-nomination.

Many think important states may swing in November on Farley's ability to keep these and similar big-city machines completely in line for the ticket.

Among the Republicans the situation is quite different. It appears that instead of figuring chiefly as a "front" for the campaign, Governor Landon will take a decisive part in the intensive work of party organization; while Chairman Hamilton, instead of devoting all of his attention to organization, probably will make more speeches than the nominee.

For Landon is not regarded even by his warmest friends as the sort of candidate who displays his best qualities on the stump. On the contrary, his political reputation in Kansas was established by his ability at party conclave and united organization, first as the Republican state chairman, later as governor.

Conversely, Hamilton is recognized as a vigorous campaigner, and his inexperience as an organizer led to much private objection from

Democratic Chairman Pulls Strings; Hamilton Out Front

By BYRON PRICE Chief of Bureau, The Associated Press, Washington

Every campaign development emphasizes more clearly the great importance of the roles which are to be played in 1936 politics by Democratic Chairman James A. Farley and Republican Chairman John D. Hamilton.

These two rôles are as different as are the two men to whom they have been assigned. Yet each in its own way carries responsibilities which ordinarily do not attach to party chairmanship, and which may easily be tremendous factors in the result of the election.

Always, a presidential campaign has two parts. One is the public part—the "front," the speech-making and the rally-hoo, and the delineation of party policy. The other is the submerged part—the business of the organization down in the wards and precincts, the collection of campaign funds and their expenditure, the assembling and instruction of party workers.

Very often in the past the presidential nominee has provided the "front," determining policies and taking the cheers and the publicity, while the national chairman has done the real work of practical organization. Sometimes the nominee has taken care of both duties, and the chairman has been a mere figurehead. Neither of these rules seems to apply fully this year.

On the Democratic side, it is quite plain that many party workers will look to President Roosevelt not only to take the lead in actual campaigning, but to indicate in all important matters what the practical tactics of the campaign are to be.

It would be too sweeping a statement, however, to say that Mr. Roosevelt will be looked to as his own campaign manager. Such a statement would overlook the great responsibility he places on Farley for carrying out effect; the detail of party work in specific situations.

In no sense is Farley regarded as a figurehead by those who know him and have seen him in action. He relies on his chief for the selection of objectives; but once the goal is pointed out, he uses his own methods to attain the desired end. And in this the President has given him wide latitude.

Nor is there any doubt that in the realm of political detail, Farley has established a formidable reputation among politicians. The results of his foresight and his intensive private efforts were apparent at the Philadelphia convention when such powerful factors as the Tammany organization in New York and the Hague organization some of the oldline leaders when he first was mentioned for the chairmanship. That he will be an important part of the "front" of the Republican campaign is generally conceded, whatever part he may play otherwise.

By and large, it is difficult to recall a year when such heavy responsibilities rested on the two party chairmen. Or when the two chairmen, each in his own way, went more vigorously to work to discharge those responsibilities.

GREENIES TAKE VICTORY FROM KINSTONIANS

Locals Retain Second Place in Coastal Plain League; Martins, Bunnies and Ace Victorious on Wednesday

The Greenies retained their hold on second place in Coastal Plain League standings when they defeated the Kinston Eagles, 9-5 here yesterday. The locals are a full game ahead of Ayden 1-2 games behind the Williamston Martins, who have been holding down first place for the past two weeks.

Errors caused much of the scoring on both sides. Greenville made 3 errors while the Kinstonians were credited with five. Each club made 11 base hits.

The Greenies opened the first inning by scoring three runs—Boozer, walked, Amherst singled, House walked and Ty Wagner doubled to deep center scoring the three men on base. The locals score one run in the second and another in the fourth. In the eighth the Greenies counted four runs on several hits, including Boozer's inside-the-park homer, mixed with errors and a walk.

Mav was the starting hurler for the Greenies. He was relieved in the latter part of the sixth by Shuman, new addition to the local outfit, who allowed the Eagles only one run in the remainder of the game. Dave Smith, former Greenville pitcher, hurled for the Kinstonians, but was relieved in the eighth by Clark, who gave up several hits and four runs.

Charlie Keller with a single and a triple, and Michael and Cheek, with two singles each paced the visitors. Booser had two singles to go with his homer, and took top honors among the Greenies. Reynolds May with a double and single ranked next.

The Williamston Martins took an 8-5 decision over the Snow Hill nine at Snow Hill to retain their lead in the local loop. Ayden nosed out New Bern 4-3 to send the Bears still further down in the cellar. Tarboro whipped Goldsboro 4-3 to set the Bugs way down in seventh place for a good length of time—probably all season.

The Greenies journey to Ayden this afternoon to start a two-game series with the Aces—and to attempt to keep their second place position. The Aces will return the visit—playing here Friday at 4:00 o'clock at Third Street Stadium.

Score by innings: R. H. E. Kinston..... G11 002 010—5 11 5 Greenville..... 310 100 04x—9 11 3 Smith, Clark and H. Wagner; May, Shuman and Ty Wagner.

Red Lewis To Fight Jake Denning in Beach Arena

Atlantic Beach, Aug. 6.—Add Warren, boxing coach at Duke University and promoter at this beach in his weekly boxing shows, believes that he has a natural lined up for this week-end, Friday night, August 7.

He has matched his nephew, Red Lewis, of Richmond, with Jake Denning, of Durham, the boy who best Add three times himself.

"I believe that my nephew will be able to do something that I was never able to do, and that is to beat Jake. And that will be sweet revenge."

Other contests on the program will be the semi-final appearance of Doc Kennedy of Durham matched with Jimmie Price, former U. N. C. boxer, and the boy who has been going great here at the beach.

Thirty-two rounds of boxing are offered, in Warren's seventh show of the season.

ACQUATIC TEAM TO HOLD MEET

Local Swimmers To Engage Tarboro Here Friday

The local swimming team will meet Tarboro in the municipal pool tomorrow night at eight o'clock. Both the Greenville and Tarboro bands will play, and a large turnout is expected.

Tarboro has one of the best swimming teams in the state, having taken fifth place in the Carolinas A. A. U. meet in High Point, which drew the leading teams from the two Carolinas. In this meet, Tarboro walked off with a first, a second, and a third place.

The Greenville team is newly organized, having swum only once this season. In this meet Tarboro sank Greenville 54-17. During the past week, however, the locals have found their stride, reducing their times in every event. Alva Page and Ray Smith are expected to give the long-winded Tarboro swimmers stiff competition in the 220 yard race, and Bill Tolson should take first place in the 50-yard back, which he lost by a yard in Tarboro last Friday night.

DRIVER PAYS $3000 FOR DEATH OF CHILD

Greensboro, Aug. 6.—J. W. White, Greensboro business man, came into Jonesboro superior court yesterday and entered a plea of nolo contendere in the manslaughter charge preferred against him in the automobile slaying of Thomas L. Wrenn, 12, on Asheville Street here the night of March 22. The court freed White after he had shown he paid the parents of the child he killed $3,000. He was also assessed the costs, and given a suspended sentence of two years.

Hope of Life Rests On Borrowed Blood

While White did not resist the manslaughter charge, he presented evidence to refute police contention that he was intoxicated at the time his car veered against the curb and knocked the Wrenn boy from his bicycle.

Concord, Aug. 6.—The Cabarrus Board of Commissioners at its monthly meeting here authorized issuance of $68,000 in bonds for a school building program and $45,000 in bond anticipation notes for the County Hospital.

PWA officials notified Cabarrus school authorities early in July to proceed with arrangements for a bond issue to provide the county's share of a $123,638 school building project, which will provide for buildings at Jackson Park, Watts Cross Roads, and Mt. Pleasant, and additions to the Odell and Bethel schools.

SPORT SLANTS

That man is in again! Jack Sharkey, the Garrulous Gob, is going to fight Joe Louis. The former world heavyweight champion has been signed to meet the erstwhile Brown Bomber over the 10-round route.

Anyone with the temerity to suggest the possibility of such a match a couple of months ago would have been rushed to a padded cell. But the fast picture has undergone considerable revamping since last spring.

At that, it seems a pretty good match for Joe Louis to make for his initial comeback effort. Sharkey has a fairly well-educated left hand, but little or nothing in the way of a punch. The years, and the life of ease he has led, have robbed him of much of his speed. If the Bomber doesn't make short work of the former champion he might just as well make up his mind that he is never going places.

Sharkey stands as the lone connecting link between the golden era of boxing—the time of Jack Dempsey and Gene Tunney—and the present. He is the only heavyweight of note still operating who fought Dempsey.

The muffing of his big chances is the one thing that stands out in the former sailor's career. Few of his fights had satisfactory endings whether he won or lost. He finally caught up with the heavyweight championship when he outpointed Max Schmeling in 1932. The following year he was counted out when Primo Camera floored him with a right uppercut, a mystery punch which few ringersiders saw.

He went into retirement. Permanent retirement, he promised. But the dull life of a squire and bartender made him restless. And when Joe Louis came thundering down the fistful highway, Sharkey dug up an old pair of gloves and resumed training.

He could always whip those negro fighters, he insisted. He pointed to his victory over Harry Wills—that came when Wills was Jack Dempsey's personal Black Menace. No one wanted any part of Wills then, and to the everlasting credit of Sharkey it must be reported that he walked in where other heavyweights feared to tread and proved the Black Panther to be nothing more than a Black Tabby.

Negro fighters had always been his meat so he embarked on his comeback against the negro Unknown Winston, Sharkey put Winston down and out in short order, so short in fact that the customers howled "fake." So the ever-obliging Sharkey, after a few minutes rest, squared off and knocked out the negro a second time. The customers were still skeptical, to say the least, but the authorities refused to permit him to go on knocking Winston out until the fans were satisfied that it was on the level.

Sharkey has lost the athletic lines of his younger days. He even appears portly. But he insists that he weighs only one pound more than he did when he lost to Carnera. He has tipped the beam at 205 pounds. This evening three years ago and claims he will get under the 200 mark for his party with Joe Louis.

Back in 1927, when the New York Yankees won the American League pennant, if there was a single factor aside from their rained-out batting attack that was responsible for their success it was the amazing relief work done by Wilky Moore.

their relief hurling that has kept them in the fight when stars like Gomez and Ruffing have faltered. This season the credit must go to a couple of old-timers who have been kicked about by the baseball fates—Bump Hadley and Pat Malone.

The pair has accounted for 18 of the Yankees' victories, while being charged with only four defeats. What's more they top the list of American league pitchers in the won and lost averages.

Results Repay Them Well
The result of their efforts in the present campaign more than repays these veterans for the hours of back-breaking exercising they did under the Florida sun to get in shape for the pennant race. It was likely to be their last chance and they well realized that Joe McCarthy was being criticised on all sides for wasting time on a couple of has-beens. They were determined not to fail if success could be had for hard work and training.

The amount of extra labor Hadley and Malone got in at training camp frogging team. One holds the light up the youngsters to shame, while the other eases up behind and grabs Rana cateabiana (Yeah, that's his scientific name).

Watch for Water Moccasin
A good light is necessary—either a carbide with reflector or a strong flashlight that throws a long beam. If frogging in water where the cotton-mouth moccasin lives, wear heavy rubber hip boots such as firemen and laborers use. The thin wading boot of the sporting type may not afford sufficient protection if one of these venomous snakes strikes at your leg.

McCarthy Signs Him
It was at this point that Manager Joe McCarthy stepped up and signed Malone. McCarthy felt that Pat still had some good baseball in his strong right arm and it would be a simple matter to bring him around to be a big help to the Yankees. McCarthy had handled Malone in Chicago and was certain that he would produce.

Malone was no bargain last season so when the players checked in at training camp this spring McCarthy took Pat aside and talked to him like a Dutch uncle. He impressed on Malone that the only way he could help himself and the Yankees was to get in shape and stay in shape. Malone gave McCarthy his word that he would give it a real whirl, and he did.

McCarthy has had his headaches with the pitching staff all season and only because the two veterans have not failed him has he been able to keep smiling. Of course the Yankees have produced an amazing amount of power at the plate—enough to warrant their being compared with the Murderers' Row of Ruth, Meusel, Gehrig and Company days—but pennants are not won by batting strength alone. There is still a little matter of pitching to be considered.

Just as Wilky Moore came through in the pinches with his famous linker ball, so are Hadley and Malone coming to the rescue of faltering hurlers and saving games for the Yankees.

THE SPORTSMAN

By LARRY BAUER
Frog hunting, while not strictly a sporting proposition produces some mighty gratifying results—if you like "frog legs" and don't mind exercising at night.
To most of us frog legs mean $1 cash on the water's tray. Not all of them come from frog farms, either. The amphibians grow wild and big around marsh, stream and pond, where great numbers are caught and sold by market hunters.

However, in recent years, some states have adopted legislation to protect the bullfrog largest of the North American species. Like the cottontail rabbit the frog probably is the most persistently hunted creature in regions where it thrives. The frog is easy to catch, and the fine, white meat brings a good price.

Grab Them by Hand
There are three better-known methods of taking frogs—shooting with a 22 rifle, spearing or giggering, and shining them with a strong light and grabbing them with the hand. We favor the light-and-hand trick because it is the most humane way. Many frogs injured by pig and bullet escape to die a lingering death.

A dark night is best for frogging. Listen for the bellowing of the male. Unless disturbed he'll stay in one place for some time. Move cautiously, sweeping the shore line with the light until the frog is spotted. As long as the light beam is centered on the frog, he won't move. But if the shadow of the hand or any other shadow passes momentarily between the light and the frog's eyes, he's gone. That's why two persons make an ideal frogging team. One holds the light up the youngsters to shame, while the other eases up behind and grabs Rana cateabiana (Yeah, that's his scientific name).

Look carefully before reaching for the frog. A big moccasin may be ready to nab it, too. As one old-timer said: "They're a mean serpent, and get right mad when you try to snatch a mess of vittles roim in front of their nose."

Just one more word of caution. Look carefully before reaching for the frog. A big moccasin may be ready to nab it, too. As one old-timer said: "They're a mean serpent, and get right mad when you try to snatch a mess of vittles roim in front of their nose."

NATIVE TALKS OF ETHIOPIANS

Speaker Frankly Admits He is Without a Country

M. Monplaisir Christophe, an Ethiopian born and reared in Djibouti, French Somaliland, spoke to College audiences twice yesterday, first on the Ethiopian side of the Italo-Ethiopian war, and second in customs of his country.

"Ladies and gentlemen," said M. Christophe. "I stand before you as a man without a country. But even with seven-eighths of our empire in the hands of the Italians, our spiritual manhood remains with us, and Ethiopians will never be satisfied until every Italian has left their shores."

The visitor, accompanied at East Carolina Teachers College by L. E. Rasberry, formerly president of Kingston College, was introduced by Dr. L. R. Meadows.

He began by referring to Ethiopia's long history as a Christian nation and her 7,000 years as an unconquered, self-governing people. Ethiopia, he reminded his audience is "landlocked" with other nations crowd her on every side.

M. Christophe went on to review the events of the past year in his country: the clash on the Italo-Ethiopian border, Italy's demands for punishment of Ethiopian officers involved, surrender of certain territory, and payment of a large indemnity; Emperor Haile Selassie's appeal to the league for a commission to be appointed to settle the dispute; Italy's rejection of the findings, and her invasion and final conquering of the greater part of the empire.

"It has been called a war," said the speaker, "but in a war, people have weapons. My people entered this with bare hands." The embargo, he pointed out, did not prevent Italy from sending troops by the thousands against his country, nor did it cut Mussolini off from petroleum; it merely served to leave the invaded country defenseless, because under it supplies intended for Ethiopia were impounded at Djibouti until the Italians had penetrated the country.

Fifty-two nations sat in judgment and pronounced Italy the aggressor, yet the league denied every plea for help in spite of the fact that Ethiopia was a member in good standing, with every cent paid of the $150,000 it cost Ethiopia to belong to the league.

The speaker endeavored to make his audience see and feel with him the savagery of the Italian advance against his defenseless people. He closed with the statement that his people would continue guerrilla warfare until an army could be re-assembled to carry on the struggle for liberty.

The second talk, on customs and life in Ethiopia, was given before a sociology class. After this talk, he answered questions asked by the class.

M. Christophe obtained part of his education in the schools of England and France. Two or three years ago he was for one year teacher of French and Latin in Lincoln Academy, King's Mountain, N. C. He has studied at the Johnson C. Smith University at Charlotte, and will complete there his preparation for work as a medical missionary in Africa.

OREGON PRISON RIOT QUELLED WITH BLOODSHED

Thomas Baughan (inset), veteran life term, was killed and two other convicts were wounded when 700 inmates of the Oregon state prison at Salem rioted and made a dash for freedom. They were subdued and denied food pending the restoration of order. This picture, showing construction material, tools and clothing strewn over the prison yard, bears evidence of the riot's fury. DROP SIGHTED FOR GASOLINE the Governor's plea for fair treatment the summer before. So when the Revenue Bill came along, Representative Barker of Durham proposed a section which would tax chain filling stations on the same basis they are taxed in West Virginia and thus increase the taxes paid by the gasoline companies very greatly. He also proposed that the state set up its own gasoline terminals and buy its own gasoline, amounting to more than 5,000,000 gallons a year, from the refiners in order to escape being held up by the big gasoline companies. There was talk that the state might open filling stations to sell to the public in an effort to lower prices.

Reduction in Offing As Probers Begin Investigation

It was then that the gasoline companies began to get a little worried and that their lobbyists went into action. Oil lobbyists and attorneys were to be seen on every hand. They worked night and day. And when the revenue bill finally passed, it still contained a heavy tax on chain filling stations, though not at as high a rate as Rep. Barker had proposed. The legislature also passed Rep. Barker's resolution for the creation of a commission to study oil prices, alleged discrimination and the possibility of establishing a state gasoline terminal. Gas prices have not been so high since.

UNUSUAL CAMEL FOSSIL MOUNTED IN OKLAHOMA

Norman, Okla. (AP)—The fossil of a prehistoric camel, a rare find in Oklahoma, soon will join other remains in the museum of paleontology at the University of Oklahoma.

First discovered in Roger Mills county near Cheyenne, Okla., three years ago, the bones of the huge camel were carefully transplanted to the state university's department of paleontology here. J. Willis Stovall, director of the museum, has nearly restored it.

"Camels were rare in Oklahoma," said Ralph B. Sheard, of the paleontology project, "and this specimen is the most complete of any yet found."
