REBELS REJECT ARMISTICE IN CIVIL STRIFE

Proposal Would Have Provided For 15-Day Truce

HIGH DIPLOMAT SUGGESTS PLAN

Madrid Acceptance of Suggestion Had Been Counted Upon In Official Circles

(By Associated Press) Spanish rebels, a Pamplona newspaper disclosed today, have turned down a proposal for a 15-day general armistice in the civil war.

The proposal, credited to a "diplomat of great influence", envisaged a change in the radical Spanish constitution during the 15 day period to make it more acceptable to rightist elements revolting against the socialist dominated government.

Madrid's acceptance was said to have been counted upon. But the fascist rebels "totally rejected" any such plan, preferring to fight on for complete control of the nation.

With an unofficial armistice apparently prevailing before the beleaguered city of San Sebastian, the rebels were reported turning their entire attention to a new march on Madrid.

Their Junta at Burgos formerly announced a rebel plane was not responsible for the attempted bombing of the United States Destroyer Kene last August 30.

The Junta said insurgent air men were especially careful to avoid attacking ships of such a "friendly and loyal" power.

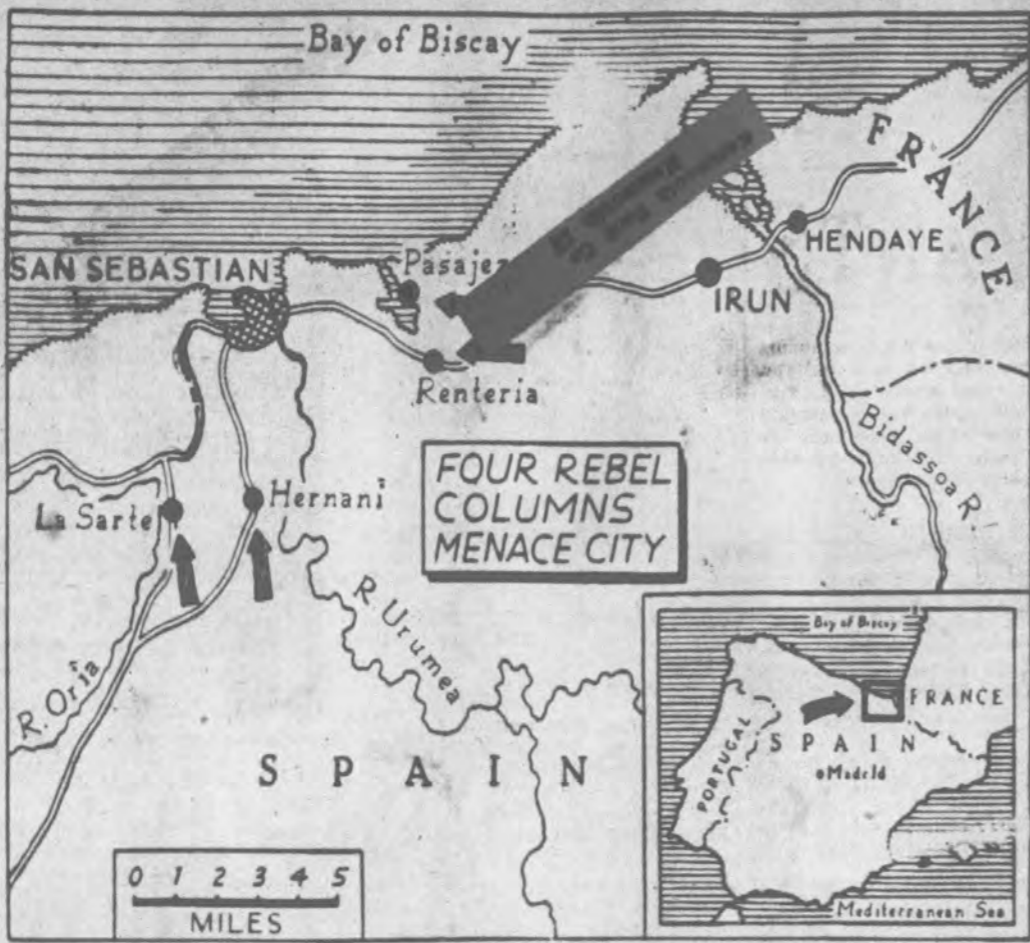

In London Great Britain again pressed Portugal for complete adherence to the work of an international neutrality committee.

The San Sebastian truce, not acknowledged by leaders of either side, was reported to have been broken by the rebels.

REBELS SCORN SURRENDER OF SAN SEBASTIAN

Refusing to grant amnesty to Loyalists in return for surrender of the city, Rebels moved on San Sebastian in four columns, as indicated by arrows on this map. Old men, women, and children fled the beleaguered city in which factions of the defenders were fighting each other. The anarchists, who left nearby Irun in flames before fleeing that city, vowed to burn and sack San Sebastian before they would let it fall into rebel hands. (Associated Press Map)

LEAF AVERAGE OF $22.50 SET

Large Quantity of Black Tips Being Offered Here

The official average on the Greenville tobacco market was lower yesterday than on other days this week, but fair grades of leaf sold no cheaper.

Offerings yesterday totaled 424,750 pounds and brought farmers $95,542.20, an average of $22.50 per hundredweight.

It was estimated that 600,000 pounds of the golden weed was on the floors today and an average about in line with that of yesterday was indicated from early sales.

So far this season 3,719,692 pounds have been sold, bringing farmers a total of $84,487.08, an average of $22.84. The average for the first week's sales was $22.54.

Rocky Mount, Sept. 10.—(AP)—Tobacco sales on the Rocky Mount market yesterday amounted to 459,604 pounds at $107,558.67, an average of $23.40 a hundred. Approximately 650,000 pounds were offered today.

Wilson, Sept. 10.—(AP)—Some grades brought prices today on the Wilson tobacco market estimated to be the highest of the season.

Approximately 800,000 pounds were offered for sale with prices believed averaging around $25 a hundred.

Sales yesterday amounted to 595,704 pounds at an average of $24.29 a hundred.

Raleigh, Sept. 10.—(AP)—Tobacco officially graded by the government on the Goldsboro and Farmville markets sold lower in practically every grade yesterday than on Tuesday, the tobacco market news service reported today.

Note was made that one lot of second quality orange wrappers sold for an average of $70 per hundred pounds, but the market was designated. Sales were fairly heavy with offerings of leaf grades in increased volume.

Captured Fugitive Given Prison Term Totalling 20 Years

Roy Cobb Sentenced To Penitentiary for Robbery and Possession Burglary Tools

Wilson, Sept. 10.—(AP)—Roy Cobb, 30-year-old escaped convict, was given sentences totalling 20 years in superior court here today on charges of robbery with firearms and possession of burglary tools.

Cobb pleaded guilty to two counts of robbery and the possession of the unlawful implements.

Judge M. V. Barnhill gave him five years on each of the robbery charges and 10 years for possession of burglary tools. He specified that the sentences should run consecutively and begin at the expiration of the 10-year term the defendant was serving when he escaped the Caledonia prison farm with Coley Cain last May.

U. S. VESSELS TO WITHDRAW

Warships Ordered To Leave Waters Of War-torn Spain

Washington, Sept. 10.—(AP)—Secretary Hull announced today that the four American war vessels now in Spanish waters had been ordered withdrawn.

The ships, which were sent to Spanish waters late in July to aid in the evacuation of American nationals from the revolutionary zone, have been instructed to proceed to nearby ports to await possible emergency calls from Spain.

In announcing the action, Hull reviewed repeated and insistent appeals made by the state department to Americans in Spain to leave the country and noted that since the outbreak of the revolution some 1,000 nationals have been removed from the danger zone with the aid of both commercial and naval vessels.

Hull said that since September 1, when the final warning to Americans was issued, there had been no information to indicate that any of the approximately 500 still there desired to leave, with the exception of a few in destitute circumstances and some reported marooned in isolated cities.

In view of these circumstances, he indicated the American government could no longer consider itself responsible for their safety.

EXPRESS FEAR OF FOUL PLAY

Clue Leads to Murder Theory in Death of Watchman

Goldsboro, Sept. 10.—(AP)—Discovery of a heavy piece of iron to which clung a single gray hair led to a theory today that Richard B. Britt, 54-year-old night watchman of the Wayne agricultural works, had been murdered.

Detective E. O. Rhodes requested an autopsy after the discovery and one was ordered forthwith.

Officers expressed the belief last night Britt was killed when an elevator fell upon him, but some held to the theory today he had been killed and the body placed beneath the elevator in a manner to give the impression it had fallen upon him.

Death apparently was caused by two wounds on each side of the head, the officers said.

TALMADGE FOE VICTORIOUS IN GEORGIA VOTE

Senator Russell Provides Triumph For New Deal

WINS BY MARGIN OF TWO TO ONE

Controversy Over Campaign Funds in Maine Claims Attention of Both Parties

Washington, Sept. 10.—(AP)—Jubilant shouts of victory from the anti-Talmadge camp in Georgia and a Democratic victory in Maine campaign funds sent into Maine added to the political din today as the campaign swept on.

The 36-year-old Senator Richard B. Russell, Jr., saw a triumph for the new deal in the commanding lead he built up over Governor Eugene Talmadge in yesterday's contest for the Georgia Democratic senatorial nomination.

Practical complete returns show Russell, upholder of the Roosevelt administration, had garnered 161,822 votes against 84,331 for Talmadge, nationally known as a foe of the Roosevelt policies.

Under Georgia law candidates are elected by county unit votes. Returns, though incomplete, indicated 340 such votes for Russell, as against 68 for Talmadge. Russell needed 208 unit votes to win.

The argument involving Maine campaign funds began yesterday as the national high commands of both major parties bent every effort to make an impressive showing in next Monday's state election in the New England commonwealth.

The Democratic national committee announced that a report of the senate committee on campaign expenditures showed that more than $50,000 had been contributed to the Republican campaign fund in Maine by the Du Ponts, Rockefeller, Morgans and other wealthy families.

J. O. Duval Tells Fish Yarn On Bill Pollard

City Clerk J. O. Duval tells this fish story on Bill Pollard—and Mr. Duval is a reliable man.

The two were fishing in a creek near the city some time ago and as they were passing over a sand bar, Mr. Pollard used his boat paddle to push the boat across.

Sanford W. Brown, retained by Moore's family to defend him, filed the motion asking that the clerk of Buncombe superior court be directed to forthwith send the supreme court "a true record" of the case on appeal.

Yesterday the state, through Attorney General A. F. Seawell, asked the court to "docket and dismiss" the appeal of Moore on the grounds the appeal had not been filed here as required by the rules of the court, 14 days before the appeals from the district including Buncombe county were called yesterday.

Brown pointed out in his motion that Solicitor Zeb V. Nettles interpreted no objection in superior court on August 22, the day Moore was convicted, when the presiding judge granted the defendant 45 days in which to make up and serve his appeal, but now contends the judge was in error and should have allowed 15 days.

FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT

WISHES COURT DEATH CLAIMS REVIEW TRIAL MRS. HUMBER

Writ of Certiorari Filed in Behalf of Martin Moore

Raleigh, Sept. 10.—(AP)—Martin Moore, Asheville negro, sentenced to die for the murder of Helen Clevenger of New York, lodged a motion, through counsel, in the North Carolina supreme court today for a writ of certiorari to set aside a review of his trial in Buncombe county superior court.

Sanford W. Brown, retained by Moore's family to defend him, filed the motion asking that the clerk of Buncombe superior court be directed to forthwith send the supreme court "a true record" of the case on appeal.

Yesterday the state, through Attorney General A. F. Seawell, asked the court to "docket and dismiss" the appeal of Moore on the grounds the appeal had not been filed here as required by the rules of the court, 14 days before the appeals from the district including Buncombe county were called yesterday.

Brown pointed out in his motion that Solicitor Zeb V. Nettles interpreted no objection in superior court on August 22, the day Moore was convicted, when the presiding judge granted the defendant 45 days in which to make up and serve his appeal, but now contends the judge was in error and should have allowed 15 days.

Brown's motion also contended there is "reversible error in the record committed in the trial of the case" in asking for the order to bring the case before the supreme court.

Diphtheria On Incline Over North Carolina

Raleigh, Sept. 10.—True to form diphtheria is showing a marked increase in September. The number of cases reported to the State Board of Health for the week beginning September first was 36, twice the number for the preceding month.

There is a likelihood that a still further increase will be reported during the remaining weeks of September and in October, since the disease reaches its peak the latter part of September.

PLEASED OVER WESTERN TOUR

Chief Executive In State To Address Seven-State Rally at Charlotte, Declares He Is 'Tremendously Impressed' with The Great Smokies

Asheville, Sept. 10.—(AP)—President Roosevelt left here by motor before noon today for Charlotte, where before nightfall he was to deliver an address before a seven-state rally in the municipal stadium.

The President finished preparing his speech early this morning, having remained up late dictating it.

He was due in Charlotte shortly before the time he was scheduled to speak, around 5:30 o'clock.

Riding with Governor J. C. B. Ehringhaus and Mayor R. M. Wells of Asheville, the President motored through crowd-lined streets and paused at McCormick Field on the way out of the city to say a few words to several thousand persons packed in the grandstand.

Introduced by Governor Ehringhaus, Mr. Roosevelt said in visiting here he was carrying out a promise made to himself more than 30 years ago.

He said he was "tremendously impressed" with his tour of the Great Smokies. He added 30 years ago he doubted if anyone could have traveled that area, "even in a horse and buggy."

He said he hoped to come back here even though "in the role of a private citizen, it makes little difference which."

Rail Line Hearing Will Be Heard By State Commission

Any Opposition to Discontinuing Norfolk Southern Line Be Considered by Body

Reflector Bureau, Sir Walter Hotel, Raleigh, Sept. 10.—If any hearing is requested of the Interstate Commerce Commission on the petition of the Norfolk and Southern to discontinue service on the line from Moseley's Ferry to Bishop's Cross in Washington county, a distance of 23.2 miles, also to abandon and dismantle this strip of line, the hearing will be held before the State Utilities Commission here instead of in Washington, it was announced today by W. G. Womble of the railroad division of the commission.

So far no request for a hearing in opposition to the petition of the railroad has been received, but if it is the hearing will be held here Womble said. Any requests for a hearing should be sent direct to the ICC in Washington, however, instead of to the Utilities Commission here, since any requests sent here would have to be sent on to Washington anyway, it was pointed out.

The Norfolk Southern Railroad through its receivers maintain that they are losing heavily on the operation of this strip of railroad, which was originally built as a logging railroad for the Roper Lumber Co. of Norfolk, that no more lumbering is going on in this section now and that the lack of business now warrants not only the discontinuance of service but the complete abandonment of this strip of line. It is further maintained that the building of modern highways through this section has deprived the railroad of what little business it formerly had.

THE NATIONAL WHIRLIGIG

News Behind The News

WASHINGTON By Ray Tucker

PURPOSE: The American Liberty League's apparent withdrawal from the political field has not abated one jot the Rooseveltians' prejudice against the Rasbok-duPont-Smith organization. In fact, the White House is giving out an entirely new version of the League's origin and "perversion" into an anti-Roosevelt institution.

According to this new theory, the League was first conceived by such men as the late William H. Woodin, Mr. Roosevelt's first Secretary of the Treasury; James Moffett, Jr., Mr. Roosevelt's first FHA Administrator; and Walter Chrysler, then sympathetic toward the President's program.

There was no suggestion of political activity at the original meetings of the League's backers, according to Mr. Roosevelt's slouching. The new organization simply proposed to devote itself to cultural, financial and personal improvement of white-collar conditions. Mr. Roosevelt was kept informed of the League's purpose and up to this point fully approved of it. In fact he was ready to endorse it.

NET: At some stage during these discussions such topflight industrialists and politicians as the duPonts, Al Smith, John Raskob and J. P. Morgan were called into the councils. It is this group, and especially Messrs. Smith and Shouse, which the White House blames for transforming the League from a welfare agency into a political organization.

The White House do not profess to know the details of the conferences which resulted in a different purpose and direction for the League's activities. But one day Mr. Shouse saw FDR and apparently convinced the President that the League meant to uphold him and his policies within the scope of the Constitution. Mr. Roosevelt apparently told Mr. Shouse to frame a statement of principles. Then the President left Washington on one of his numerous trips.

Mr. Shouse submitted his statement of aims and purposes to Secretary Early, explaining that the (Continued on page four)

PARKER LOOKS GOOD AT WORK

Duke Grid Star Running Better Than Ever Before

Durham, Sept. 10.—The good and bad of Duke football as seen by a sideline observer as the Blue Devils reach the half-way point between the opening fall practice and the opening game:

1. Coach Wallace Wade is having trouble with his line, just as was expected before the season opened. While it may be a strong defensive forward, the offensive play is not ready for an opening game and much work is being done in the hope of improving it. The line will hardly be as fast. Unless it develops, there will be no outstanding lineman.

2. While Dick Tallafiero and Frank Liana will make a pair of good first team ends, no reserve strength is seen just now. Bill Bailey and Bill Ewing, second team flanks, are working hard but neither played end before—Ewing having earned a letter last season as a guard while Bailey was a back on the freshman team.

3. Elmore Hackney, a sensation in several games last season, has not shown up as well as expected. However, it may be that observers were expecting too much from him. And the good:

1. The squad morale is excellent. The boys are pulling together and there are no cliques.

2. Ace Parker is running better in practices than at any time in his career. Eric Tilton and Robert O'Mara, sophomores, Harwood Smith and Herold Hudkins, soph last year, and Johnny Johnston, reserve back for the past two seasons, are showing form. Sam Gardner, club last year, looks like he will be a fine blocking back.

3. Fred Edwards, non-letterman reserve last season, is striving to become a good center and will probably become one. Dan Hill, Jr., is also working hard at the second team center job.

"Raffles" Chivalrous As Well As Burglar

London, Sept. 10.—(AP)—"Raffles," a real-life counterpart of the famous character in fiction, is back in prison once more—and his chivalrous confession has saved a maid in distress.

The maid, a domestic servant in a country house, had her good name restored when "Raffles" cheerfully admitted burgling her house along with a whole series of other robberies.

Previously she had been dismissed, under suspicion of theft. Now she is back at her old job.

"Raffles," otherwise Anthony St. George, alias Arthur James Wilkinson, was up to his old tricks when police caught him—burgling the country homes of aristocrats. The victim in this case was Lord Glendyne.

St. George is getting a little grey now. He's been at it a long time, running around from one fashionable country estate to another—one of the most sought-after men in England—since 1924.

But he's just as dapper, just as polished and pleasant-voiced as ever. He stood in the dock with his smart-cut long suit faultlessly pressed, his hair brushed sleek and glossy, and an old-school tie—the badge of a gentleman in England—perfectly knotted.

And when the judge sentenced him to twelve months, "Raffles" dipped him a bow with the punctilious grace of an Elizabethan courtier.

St. George won his sobriquet of "Raffles of the River" years ago when he rented a luxurious houseboat and played host at gay parties attended by actresses, celebrities and smart society.

HEAT HAMPERS GRID TRAINING

Hot Weather Slows Up Practice At State College

College Station, Raleigh, Sept. 10.—Hot weather has put a crimp in the football training game at N. C. State College at a time when Coach Hunk Anderson should be pushing the Wolves for their opening game with Elon College, Saturday afternoon, September 19.

A regulation scrimmage was scheduled for Wednesday afternoon, but was called off because of the extreme heat. However, Anderson did send the players through a short scrimmage Wednesday morning, changing teams every 10 minutes.

The weather this week has been the hottest since drills began Tuesday of last week. The players, however, led by Captain Mac Cara, have gone about their work with as much enthusiasm as possible. Cara is doing much to keep the spirit high.

The scrimmage yesterday morning was the first for State this fall and revealed for the first time the men Coach Anderson is considering for his starting team against Elon. The team was composed of Captain Cara, left end; E. V. Helms, left tackle; Herb Kirschner, left guard; Louie Mark, center; Dan Pilceno, right guard; Mason Bugg, right tackle; Jess Tatam, right end; Joe Schwerdt, quarterback; Ed Berliniski, left halfback; Howard Bards, right halfback; and Joe Ryneska, fullback.

Anderson continues to drill the squad on blocking and charging. The backs, ends and centers take a look each day at Elon pass plays as Anderson believes the Christians will be dangerous when they take to the air and he plans to have a defense for them.

The State mentor took time out yesterday to tell the players about Elon's fullback—James Abbutt. The Wolves know r. w. that he is the man they must stop. Abbutt is said to be the ace of the Elon back field. He kicks, passes and runs with the best. This summer he took special punting instructions from Leroy Mills, former Princeton University star and regarded as one of the country's best punting teachers.

SCHOOL'S IT'S SIDELINE WITH BRITISH TEACHERS

Oxford (AP)—British rural school teachers are expected to do everything from cutting old people's hair to acting as adviser to the local council in addition to teaching children, according to Mrs. M. Winteringham, a prominent speaker at the liberal summer school here.

The "duties" of one country teacher included seeing all the new babies, visiting the sick and aged and cutting, shining and bobbing their hair, coaching a cop for an examination, making wills, filling in income tax forms, attending parish council meetings to advise the councillors, acting as secretary of the garden show, organizing outdoor sports, serving on the women's institute committee, helping a woman farmer, helping choose wallpaper and curtains, darning coats from the beams of an old woman's shop and playing the organ in church and at concerts when the organist fails to turn up.

SPORT SLANTS

Frank Strafaci, the 20-year-old Brooklyn youngster who held the national public links championship last year, may not win the national amateur crown at Garden City, September 14-19, or even come close to winning. But in leading the qualifiers of the New York district over the Winged Foot course at Mamaroneck, with a pair of 69's, he left the gallery something to remember him by. He equaled the West course record which Bobby Jones set up on his way to victory in the 1929 open championship. A couple of sparkling recoveries made this feat possible.

On the 15th hole Strafaci sliced badly. High trees blocked his path to the narrow green. He had to get the ball up fast out of a down-hill lie. His No. 4 iron shot was a masterpiece and the ball came to a stop not more than 10 feet from the pin. The very next hole found him in trouble again. He pulled his drive to the left and the ball came to rest in the woods, 200 yards from the pin. Low-hanging branches called for a low-starting shot. With his spoon Frank hit down on the ball. It started low and after clearing the branches climbed steadily and dropped on the green, coming to a stop about 20 feet beyond the hole. He laughed hysterically when he saw the results.

At this point someone pointed out to Strafaci that a couple of birdies on the remaining holes would give him a tie for the record 69 set by Jones. He sunk an 8-foot putt for his 3 on the 17th and on the home green rolled in a 25-footer for his other birdie and the record.

Strafaci played amazing golf under the circumstances, but it was all the more amazing because Strafaci scored his brilliant card while in the midst of altering his swing. After being shorn of his public links title Frank set about altering his game. He decided his closed stance, good enough to win the title, would no longer do and the very day he was put out of the running he set to work on an open stance.

The qualifying round for the national amateur found him in the middle of changing his entire method of play. The results were far more encouraging than he had hoped for. He got the urge to change his style after watching George T. Dunlap, Jr., former national amateur title holder, fade his shots to the pin. Dunlap's amazing control fascinated him so much that he decided to try to copy Dunlap's style.

It was discouraging work at first but Frank stuck to his guns. His great showing in the qualifying round was ample reward and indicated that Frank was on the right track.

Strafaci and Tommy Teller playing together presented an interesting picture as they vied for a place on the qualifying list. Strafaci, the product of the public links, and T. Sufferer Teller, scion of an extremely wealthy family and a member of the exclusive Piping Rock club shooting for the same goal. Strafaci, the 135-pounder, and Teller, a young giant weighing 230. In the afternoon round they both turned in 69's to equal Bobby Jones' record.

It was interesting to watch Strafaci match Teller's booming drives down the fairway. Teller is an extremely long hitter off the tee. But Frank, with his well-nigh perfect timing, matched the bigger man's efforts over and over without seemingly trying.

Jack Munger made up the threesome. Munger finished the afternoon round with a 75. "They had me played out," said Munger. "At the end I was only rooting like the gallery."

'COCK-EYED' HATS SEEN AS TRAFFIC MENACE

Sacramento, Calif.—(AP)—Add women's hats as another major traffic hazard.

Ray Briggs, state director of motor vehicles, came to this conclusion after studying the latest styles in women's millinery and latest scientific methods of driving tests. He declared the bonnets which hang by a miraculous balance over the women's left eyebrow may well be the cause of many accidents.

One of the requirements of safe driving, he explained, is the ability of the driver to see out of the corner of the eye, and modernistic hats interfere with this vision.

California spends more than $2,000 a year for paper on which to print state warrants.

Checks Being Mailed To Members of Co-op

Raleigh, Sept. 10.—Checks totaling a quarter of a million dollars will be distributed to State farmers during the next 30 days by the North Carolina Cotton Growers Cooperative Association, M. G. Mann, general manager, announced here today.

These checks represent settlement on cotton handled by the association for its members and the payment in full of accumulated membership reserves since 1926. All membership reserves that accumulated prior to that time under the first five-year membership agreement were ordered paid by the board of directors in January, 1927.

"The directors, in ordering all membership reserves paid in full, established a record that has never been equaled and seldom, if ever, equaled by any cooperative marketing association," commented Mr. Mann.

Necessary forms that will facilitate payment are now being mailed to a list of more than 12,000 members who have reserves to their credit. "These forms are being sent out just as rapidly as possible and mailing should be completed by the end of September," Mr. Mann said.

He urged farmers to sign and return the forms immediately for prompt payment.

The payment of all reserves accumulated under the present membership agreement which went into effect in 1927 was unanimously authorized by the directors at their August meeting because "ample credit facilities have now been provided by North Carolina banks to finance the operations of the Association."

As this outline shows, most of this money will be spent on improving the county roads, although a part of it will be spent on improving short strips of state highways.

the "haves" against the "have-nots." That White House wisecrack, together with Charley Michelson's "Smear Al" campaign, smooch League so severely that its power for good or evil amounts to nothing.

CLARIFIER: Despite almost unanimous support for the principle of Social Security laws for the aged, the unemployed, the blind, etc., the details of the program promise to become a chief issue in the presidential campaign.

Governor Landon has indicated he will challenge and combat the "workability" of the Social Security Act. In this move he will have the hearty support of numerous manufacturers and states which regard the present laws too complicated. The states of New Hampshire and California, for instance, have declined to pay unemployment taxes but the federal till until the constitutionality of the act has been passed on by the Supreme Court. They have gone on a "tax strike."

President Roosevelt is known to be dissatisfied with the Social Security Board's public relations. It has left employers and employees in the dark as to what the act means to them. That attitude may explain the large sale of a recent book by Henry Stricker, vice a Washington newspaperman and author, entitled "The Social Security Act Explained." It fills a vacuum in the public mind as to what the act means to employers and employees their respective responsibilities under the New Deal major social experiment.

FIRE: President Roosevelt is expected to announce the resignation of his office-seeking career upon his recent return to Washington.

His political lookouts reported Governor Landon gaining strength in the East, especially in Pennsylvania, New York and Pennsylvania, where there are 100-odd electoral votes. But their most disturbing news was that, despite the depression and business recovery, the people have not yet made up their November minds. How they will vote apparently depends on the speeches and actions of the presidential candidates between now and election day.

FDR has not changed his campaign plans, however. He is depending on his own political instincts to guide him. He thinks he has a tremendous lead over Governor Landon at the moment, and will withhold his political fire until October. It's a case of "Don't shoot till you see the whites of their eyes!"

debt reduction as a fact and thus impress conservative voters.

Instead the administration openly jacks up its debt in order to take advantage of unusually favorable market conditions for financing—and dures the G. O. P. to make the most of it. Keen financial men call this a smart move.

The new issue will be oversubscribed with the greatest of ease to the probable accomplishment of the peak price for government obligations thus enabling the Dealer to say with fresh emphasis: "What do you mean? It's a federal credit!" It looks to be another case where a bold lead from apparent weakness is the best play.

PROBATION: Several New York papers have reported that this year's straw polls will show a wide deviation from November facts then will they base this on the expectation that the 1936 vote will be several million for Landon than it was in 1932 and that the bulk of the "conservative" vote will come from counties that straw votes will never reach.

The Democratic county organizations are geared up to put out this year as never before. They will comment that they can get will reach much further down in the barrel than the Republican possibly do.

There is a good reason for this. It is to show that the more completely the Republican is defeated in a moment, the further down the barrel the more right-wing principles there are indicated that the November will be the broadest representation of the will of the people in American history. It should result in a New Deal water, less conservative forces that the election of the breadth of the Constitution will give conservatives now seeking to make an issue of upholding the Constitution pent to think about.

FRICTION: All is not harmonious and good will in the Republican nest. Backstagers who insisted before the convention that it was foolish to sit back and wait for Landon's nomination before starting intensive organization work are now saying "I told you so" in bitter tones.

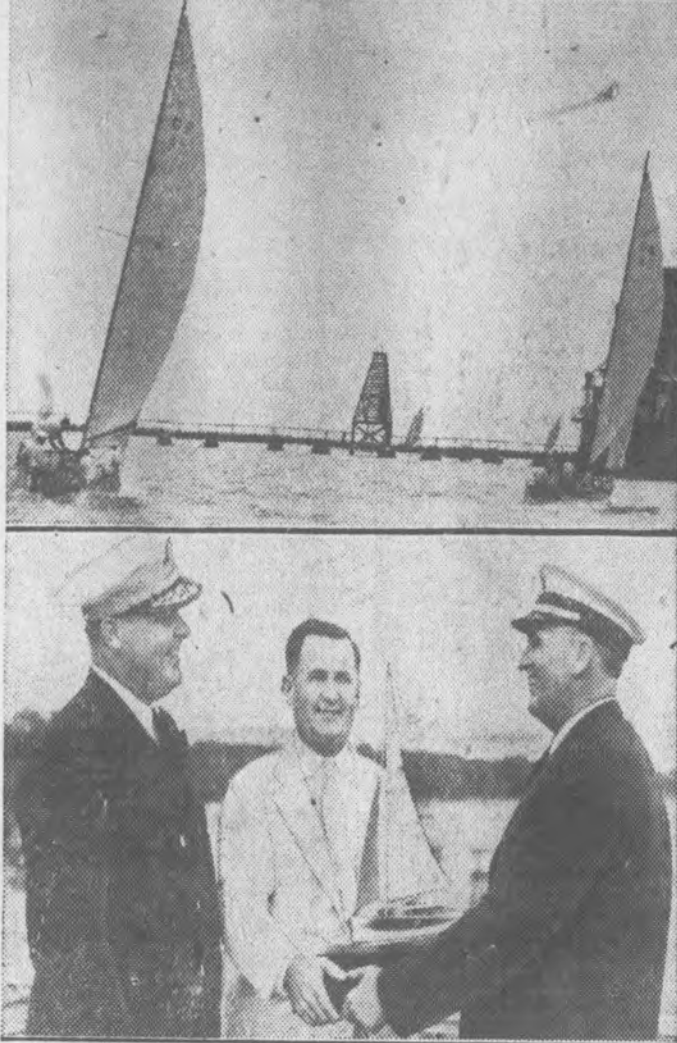

A source who was closely connected with the last successful G. O. P. presidential campaign for Hoover in 1928—remarks: "What time we began serious organization and publicity work a year and a half before the election. Even so we wished we had started a year sooner than that. This time they have tried to cram a two-year job into the five months between nomination and election. You might as well expect a college freshman to learn enough about mathematics before his first Christmas vacation, to take on a debate with Einstein."

There is friction in the publicity division also—an internal conflict both of authority and of ideas.

PLANES: Nearly all the leading aircraft manufacturers are swamped with orders. One of the largest had $6,000,000 in unfilled orders at the beginning of 1936, has delivered $9,000,000 worth of planes and parts since, and has $15,000,000 in unfilled orders now. Of course the U. S. Army and Navy are a big factor in the industry's current prosperity. European orders in this country are also mounting rapidly.

Boeing is staging a snappy comeback after being virtually frozen out of its transport plane business. This company has the contract for eight new Pan American Clippers for transoceanic service—bigger than those now in use on the Pacific. It is also doing some extra special work for the army. Douglas is zooming right along, delivering 20 new DC-3's to American Airlines with United and T. W. A. on the waiting list—also lots of army and navy business.

Reflector Bureau, Sir Walter Hotel, Raleigh, Sept. 10.—A total of $461,977 has just been allocated to the cities and towns in the state from state highway funds for the maintenance of streets traversed by state or Federal highway and letters are in the mail today notifying the cities which will do their own maintenance work as to the allocations made to each. Chief Highway Engineer W. Vance Baise of the State Highway and Public Works Commission said today.

In the cities and towns where the maintenance work is to be done by the highway department, only the district highway engineers are being notified.

This allocation was made from the $500,000 which the general assembly ordered set aside for street maintenance and leaves a balance of $31,923 held in reserve for emergency needs that may develop later on, Baise said. The allocations to the various cities and towns have been made on the basis of a formula agreed upon by the North Carolina League of Municipalities and the highway department, except where it was evident that a particular city or town needed more than the formula provided or did not need as much, since accurate estimates of the maintenance needs of each of the more than 400 cities and towns were made and submitted by the district engineers before the allocations were made, Baise said.

The allocations as just made to some of the leading cities and towns are as follows: Asheville, $18,100; Durham, $22,150; Charlotte, $22,400; Winston-Salem, $22,800; Greensboro, $15,500; High Point, $10,710; Burlington, $6,000; Elizabeth City, $785; Gastonia, $6,750; Goldsboro, $7,300; Fayetteville, $4,100; Hickory, $4,200; Kinston, $1,625; Lexington, $3,500; Lincoln, $1,500; Shelby, $4,550; Thomasville, $4,950; Wilmington, $11,700; Wilson, $4,200. All of these, with the exception of Hickory, do their own maintenance work and hence will receive

WASHINGTON DAYBOOK

By PRESTON GROVER

Washington—It can scarcely be questioned that the resettlement administration has set a new style in government photography, of which the controversial picture of the steer skull and dried water hole was a sample.

Dakota editors criticized the resettlement administration for "taking" photographs to make the drought seem more horrible and thus perhaps to further sentiment for resettlement operations.

The editors protested that a photographer had used but one steer skull, moving it about for different pictures. The resettlement administration explained that one picture was taken of the bleached skull in a dried mud hole. Then the skull was moved "about ten feet" and photographed in the foreground of a parched grass plain.

Government photographs on sociological questions in years past have been rare. Rather they have tended largely to demonstrate conditions such as need of forest fire protection, or merely to record progress on government projects, such as dams and fire lookout towers.

The forest service, for example will supply on request photographs illustrating the effects of good and bad range management, good and bad game management, and good and bad forest management. Rarely is the next step taken of showing a hungry farm family impoverished by burning of surrounding timber and grazing upon which they had depended.

It was the resettlement administration that took that step. The photograph of the bleached skull was only one of a host of pictures taken. A casual glance through administration files open to newspaper writers seeking illustrative matter will bring out photographs of "fruit tramp" families, those wandering groups who follow the fruit harvest up and down the country, often in dilapidated cars children barefoot and rarely in school.

BRANDING DANGEROUS CARS

In a European country, the cars of motorists convicted of flagrant violation of traffic laws are painted with an emblem, as a warning to other drivers. It is said that this practice, newly started, has caused an appreciable decline in dangerous driving, as motorists naturally want to avoid the embarrassment, and publicity the emblem gives them.

A great many thousand American motorists should have their cars so branded. The worst class of offenders consists of those who push the throttle to the board as soon as they get out of sight of a traffic officer. Excessive speed—and there are times when 15 miles per hour is excessive—is responsible for more deaths than any other driving violation.

Passing on hills and curves and "mooching" through traffic are also potent causes of death, injury and destruction. On a myriad tragic occasions, a driver has tried to save a needless minute—at the cost of a life.

Driving on the wrong side of the road, jumping traffic lights, passing at intersections—are practices dear to the heart of the Dark Angel. They help keep our morgues and hospitals full to capacity.

Yes, it might be a good idea to adopt the branding practice in this country. A suitable emblem would be a skull and cross-bones.

PROTEST OVER SOUND BRIDGE

Albemarle Structure Hearing to be Held Sept. 11th

Reflector Bureau, Sir Walter Hotel.

Raleigh, Sept. 9.—The hearing for those opposed to the location of the Albemarle Sound bridge as already decided upon by the State Highway and Public Works Commission will be held at 11 a. m. on Friday, September 11, in spite of the fact that many letters have been received from persons in the Albemarle section asking that the hearing be postponed from one to two weeks. Chairman Cepus M. Waynick of the State Highway and Public Works Commission, said today.

"Since it will require at least 60 days to get a permit from the War Department to build this bridge at the place now proposed, and since the contract cannot be let for at least 30 days after that, we do not feel it is advisable to hold up the construction of the bridge any longer than necessary," Waynick said. "As things now are, it will be the middle or latter part of December before actual construction of the bridge can be started, while if we should delay the hearing now let for September 11 another week or two, construction probably could not start until January."

It was strongly intimated today that the hearing Friday will not accomplish anything more than let those persons in Tyrrell, Dare and Hyde counties who are opposed to the location selected for the bridge blow off steam. It is maintained that the highway commission is already familiar with every argument that will be advanced and that none of these will influence the commission to change the location of the bridge from the one already selected, regarded by outstanding hydrographic engineers as being the only practical site for the bridge from an engineering standpoint on the entire sound. It is pointed out that the bridge is a state-wide proposition, being built with tax money collected from the state as a whole for the benefit of as many counties as possible and not for the benefit of any one county or group of counties.

Accordingly, the conviction in most circles here is that the bridge will be built on the location already decided upon, from a point in Washington county east of Mackey's to a point in Chowan county east of Edenton.

JAPAN PLANS NEW SCHOOLS FOR MUNITIONS WORKERS

Tokyo, (AP)—The need for trained workers and foremen in Japan's expanding munitions industries is the explanation given by the Tokyo education bureau for its decision to establish five new technical schools next year.

With the army planning to spend about $900,000,000 on expansion and especially replenishment of arms and munitions during the next six years, thousands of skilled factory men will be required.

Colorado Town Keeps Dog To Lead Its Drunks Home

Reflector Bureau, Sir Walter Hotel.

Raleigh, Sept. 9.—At least one town in the country has solved the problem of how to get the drunks home at night without greatly increasing the police force and hence increasing taxes, according to W. H. Trentman, vice president of the Occidental Life Insurance Company here. This town is Cripple Creek, Colorado, where all the old mines are now being operated full blast again for the first time in 50 years or more and which is again the old rip-roaring whoopee, wide-open mining town of the old West. Trentman spent several days in Cripple Creek this summer.

"The most interesting thing I saw in Cripple Creek, was 'Old Red' a huge Newfoundland dog, which is maintained by a group of merchants there for the sole purpose of helping to get the drunks home at night," Trentman said. "Old Red" wears a harness with a strong handle on top. He is known to everyone in Cripple Creek and he knows all the drunks and where they live—and all the drunks know him. His job is to find the various drunks and lead them to their homes. When he finds a drunk, he stops until the drunk takes hold of the handle on his harness and then he slowly guides the drunk along until he reaches the shack where he lives. I know it sounds incredible, but this big dog has been doing this for years.

"His tax is paid, likewise the cost of his food and other care by a group of merchants in Cripple Creek who regard 'Old Red' as being more valuable than police—if there are any police there—since he never argues with or beats up any of the drunks, merely guides them home."

The population of Cripple Creek has increased 300 per cent in the past two years, miners are making high wages and business is booming with the price of gold fixed at $35 an ounce by the government, Trentman said. During the month of August four agents for this company sold over $250,000 worth of life insurance in Cripple Creek, Trentman revealed.

HOLLYWOOD SIGHTS & SOUNDS

By ROBBIN COONS

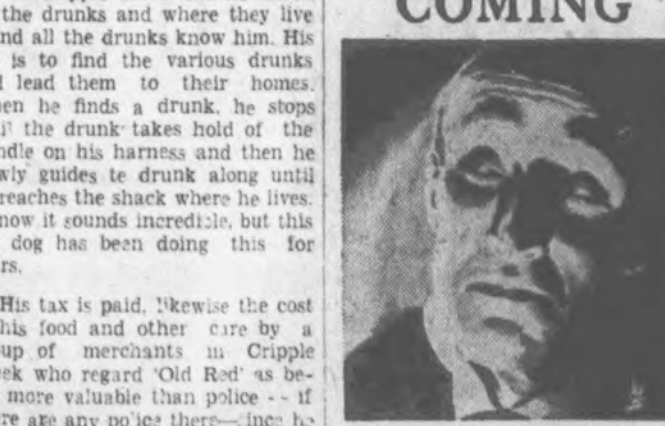

Hollywood — Death — in the movies — has practically lost its sting. The big ones and the little ones among actors no longer shy away from a cinematic demise. Nor does death (the usual movie synonym for an unhappy ending) necessarily spell box-office poison. Some actors, in fact, revel in dying.

Garbo must be one of them. She is at it again in "Camille." She has died more violent deaths in other films, "A Woman of Affairs," or "The Green Hat," saw her Irish March deliberately crashing a car into a tree. In "Mata Hari" she faced a firing squad. In "Anna

COMING

The Wrong Murderer

by HUGH CLEVELY

Karenina" she leaped under a train.

"Romeo in Class By Itself

"Romeo and Juliet," of course, is a mortician's delight. Leslie Howard fresh from death in "The Petrified Forest," goes again by poison. Basil Rathbone and John Barrymore are killed in duels. Barrymore has died in "Tribly," in "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde," in "Dinner at Eight" and "Grand Hotel." In "Rasputin and the Empress" John killed his brother Lionel, who himself is no novice at movie passings — witness "Peter Grimm" and "Free Soul" among other pictures.

Ronald Coleman has given his life for "Beau Geste" and "A Tale of Two Cities," while Gary Cooper died heroically in "Lives of a Bengal Lancer" to win new fans. Joseph Calleia practically lives to die in pictures—his character usually meeting the gangster's fate.

Wallace Beery has "died" at least five times, and been resurrected once. Death was permanent in "The Big House," in "The Champ," in "Viva Villa," and in "China Seas"—but in "Hell Divers," he was given half a life: the picture had two endings, one of them "happy."

Death where it affects stars is definitely of two types, according to the character. If it's a hero, death must be heroic. If it's a villain, death can be heroic but usually isn't.

Taylor Rises After 'Death'

"The Gorgeous Hussy" in this connection offers an interesting study. When they started making it, early in the year, Robert Taylor was still just a rising young player. He was cast for the role of Joan Crawford's first lover and husband, one of several important "names" in the cast. This lover dies about the fourth reel, and Taylor is seen no more. But this does not prevent equal billing of his name with Joan Crawford's now — for since he did the part the Taylor name has grown and grown. His fans may resent his early passing, but nothing can be done about it, short of re-making the picture.

But Julie Haydon's case illustrates the new "popularity" of death. She was among those considered for the role in "A Tale of Two Cities" which was to bring new fame to Isabel Jewell. But Julie said nay because she didn't want to be "typed as a corpse." Not long ago she was offered her chance to be killed in "The Longest Night"—and she took it. More, she won a term contract on it.

Martha Raye, comedienne, won a cup for horseback jumping while playing in vaudeville in Toronto, Canada. She entered the contest "between shows."

Eleanor Powell's pleasure program consists of taking singing lessons, learning fluent French, playing the piano, learning better tennis and cutting her golf score 15 strokes.

WOMEN AIDING IN CANDIDATES

Feminine Orators to Stump Land for Candidates

Washington, Sept. 10. (AP)—Women who howled a few years ago at the feminine invasion of barber shops will have an excellent opportunity this fall to view with serene and political headquarters.

Women's clattering high heels and perfumed frills will be just as prominent in political sanctuaries as the tradition campaign cigar. Political chieftains are making such a determined bid for the women's vote that both Democrats and Republicans have set up special women's divisions.

Young John Hamilton, Republican national chairman, says he takes women in politics as a matter of course. "I grew up thinking of women as voters," he said.

Genial Jim Farley in the Democratic camp convinced the feminine rank-and-file in his party early this year of his regard when he ordered Democratic organizations from the precinct up to make sure of 50-50 representations for women on governing boards.

Women civic leaders are reciprocating by placing themselves at the beck-and-call of their parties. The Republicans will put a troupe of stars in the field that will include Mrs. E. E. "Dolly" Gann, sister of the late Vice President Curtis; Mrs. Julia Cantacuzene-Grant; Mrs. Bertha Bauer, Chicago civic leader; Margaret Culkin Banning; the Minnesota novelist; and Mrs. Edith Rogers, representative from Massachusetts.

On Farley's list are Mary W. "Molly" Dawson, the New York social worker who turned political organizer; Edith Bryan Owen, former minister to Denmark; Harriett Elliott, dean of women at the University of North Carolina; Nellie Taylor Ross, director of the mint; and Mrs. Blair Banister, assistant treasurer of the United States.

None of them is on the flipper side of thirty. All have taken a baptism of fire in some profession or as civic leaders. For thirty years "Dolly" Gann stood by the side of her brother in his political work, blossoming into a national speaker who attracted thousands to hear her in the 1932 campaign.

Mrs. Cantacuzene-Grant was in Russia when the revolution broke. She will oppose any change of the constitution before patriotic societies among which she is well known. Mrs. Bertha Bauer is a spinster and little Chloesson who is running for congress. She started as a girl secretary and is now a rich widow.

Margaret Culkin Banning has a dozen novels behind her, and a political philosophy which revolves around the advice to join some party and reform from within. Representative Rogers has been returning to congress since 1924. She will tell political rallies about her work over higher taxes.

Molly Dawson is a veteran woman's organizer. She was drafted for the Alfred E. Smith campaign in 1928 by Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt, and since then has built a nationwide organization of Democratic women.

Mrs. Owen, who was recently married to Capt. Boetge Rohde of Denmark, will spend her leave of absence from the diplomatic post campaigning. She inherited much of the speaking magic of her father, William Jennings Bryan, and she adds to her knowledge of government, experience gained during her service in the House.

Harriett Elliott is doubly armed for political jousting by the 27 years she has spent as a professor in political science. She is devoting her summer vacation to campaign speeches. Mrs. Ross downed her first dose of public speaking when she was made Wyoming's first woman's governor. She became vice-chairman of the Democratic national committee in 1920, and in 1932 made a wide swing through the West for Roosevelt.

Mrs. Banister is noted for the same dry wit possessed by her famous husband, George Carter Glass of Virginia. She has been educating women to politics and government since the war days when she was a member of the writing staff to the government's information service.

Its a Dog's Life STRAY CURS FIND PRIMROSE PATH LEADS ONLY TO S. P. C. A.

Freedom is a fiction, stray dogs soon learn in New York, where the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals is only as far away as the nearest telephone. Life on the loose, however attractive, is not for dogs.

Some of 15,000 derelicts—homeless, lost or strayed—are picked up annually from the city's streets and alleys. About 60,000 more are collected in response to calls or are brought to the S. P. C. A. unwanted by their owners.

Despite those heavy gloves (the dog catcher's net survives only in cartoonists' imaginations), S.P.C.A. men frequently are bitten. Rabies, however, seldom result; for most dogs thought mad really have a stomachache.

Twenty-seven ambulances, manned by 70 to 90 experts in animal handling, operate throughout the city. Dog license fees help pay for the work, but the society also is dependent upon subscriptions and its endowment.

Big dogs and little dogs, woolly puds and vicious brutes, valuable thoroughbreds and mongrel curs—all, when they follow the primrose path, win up in the S.P.C.A.'s main shelter in Manhattan or in one of its five borough branches.

First Year Group Shows Up At Duke To Get Acquainted

this morning to mark the first stir of activity of the new year. The first year students on two campuses will have a week's "get acquainted" program before the university's eighty-fifth year as a degree-conferring institution gets under way on September 16.

Tonight there will be assemblies both at 8 p. m., at which the newcomers will be given their first instructions and the week's program explained. Dr. A. K. Manchester, dean of Trinity college freshman, and Miss Elizabeth Anderson, assistant dean of the Woman's college in charge of freshmen, will preside at these assemblies. There will be class meetings each night, at which university officials and student leaders will speak to the freshmen.

Throughout the week there will be a series of texts, examinations, instructions, campus tours, socials, matriculation and registration photographing, glee club try-outs, assignments and other engagements. Formal opening of the university will be at 11 a. m., next Thursday in Page auditorium. Instruction of freshmen will begin on Tuesday and sophomores, juniors and seniors will meet their first classes on Thursday. Graduate students will register on Thursday and Friday.

THE WORLD WITH A FENCE

A New Novel by Marian Sims

Chapter 42
DECISION

CAROL took his hands and pulled them down into her lap. "Listen, Blake, and look at me. It won't make any difference unless we let it. I told you I was willing to fight it out beside you; that even a triangle didn't have to be too disgraceful. I've been expecting this from the beginning."

The muscles of his face relaxed slowly, until he smiled, wonderingly. "Lord, what a baby you make me feel! You're a man that I'll ever be, and why on earth you should love me like this is beyond me. All I can do is marvel—and worship you!"

"Idiot! You're pretty well worth loving, since you ask me." Be casual, she was commanding herself; make him think it isn't important enough even to talk about. . . . She stood up and held out her hand to him. "Let's get a drink and see if that won't change the color of the world."

He extracted ice cubes with unsteady fingers, half drunk with the knowledge that she was willing to stand by him. He saw the situation now as she had tried to paint it; painful and bitter, perhaps, but sweetened by a belief in ultimate success.

He put down his glass and smiled at her. "I haven't even asked about your trip home. How was it?"

"Almost perfect, considering the circumstances."

"How was Pat?"

"Fine." She flushed. "I finally broke down and told him about you; I had to talk to somebody!"

His face glowed. "Did he approve?"

"Heartily. He says I'm to bring you to see them as soon as possible, and that you sound like a grand guy."

"Then maybe I'd better not go."

"Nuts to you!"

Their lightness was false and perilous, with a throbbing undercurrent that might come to the surface in a breath. Because he realized that, Blake glanced at his watch.

"Dinner time, precious. Get your hat." Before I devour you, he added in his heart.

But when dinner was over and they were back again in her living-room the lightness failed them. For all his discipline Blake felt the old hunger—more insatiable than ever, and because the waiting seemed endless now he had no hope to restrain him. He kissed her hotly, and knew that she understood his hunger. His hands were caressing her and she made no move to withdraw.

She made her choice then, clearly and honestly. This is no way for us to live, she realized, feeling him tremble against her. A few months of this can destroy us. And I can't go away and leave him alone.

"She sat up. "Blake. . . ."

LONG afterwards, when he had gone, she sat at her dressing table with her chin in her hands, staring at her own reflection.

She probed her mind for a feeling of guilt or regret, and failed to find it. Irma was incapable now of dealing them a mortal wound.

She rose and went to open the windows, and stood looking at the black star-dusted sky. Blake would be at home by now, and perhaps looking at the same sky—unless he had gone straight to sleep! She tried not to think of the time when he would not have to leave her, and to cling instead to all that she had of him now.

A quick, icy wind struck her, like a breath from the world of darkness, and she shivered and turned from the window. And then she stopped short. Someone was knocking softly upon her door.

She snapped on a light and hurried to the door, and Blake stumbled into the room and stood, swaying. She thought incredulously: he's gone home and gotten drunk. What a queer thing to do. . . .

He spoke finally, shaping each word with great care, like a mute who has learned to talk.

"Irma—has—killed—herself. . . ."

The icy wind swept her again, straight from the world of darkness. She put up her hand as if to shield her face, while an unfamiliar voice whispered:

"No, Blake, no. . . ."

"She must have done it this afternoon. Long distance has been trying to find me since five o'clock. . . . He rubbed a hand across his eyes as if to blot out a visual horror, and shuddered once.

Five o'clock. Then all the time they were together Irma had been dead—because of her. . . . She laughed, and the sound was queer and mad.

"She chose the only possible way to keep us apart, didn't she? Really, it was terribly clever of her. . . ."

The sound faded and she heard her own teeth chattering.

She sat down, staring at the floor. He leaned his weight against the table and looked at nothing.

"I have to go down there," he said to the floor. "There's a train in three hours."

"How—what did she do?"

"Does it matter?"

He wanted to spare her whatever horror he could. He didn't want her to see Irma as he would always see her, slashing her wrists with a razor blade, and perhaps smiling a small, secret, triumphant smile.

Their thoughts were stumbling along the same black path. Because the suit was filed this morning, they knew. Because she must have wired or phoned his lawyer to know if he had been in earnest, and found that he was. Because she had to defeat them, even with her life; she had to have the center of the stage—the last word. . . .

Blake moved restlessly, like a man struggling to escape the coils of nightmare, and looked at her.

"She left a note," he muttered. "But thank God she put all the blame on me. I made them read it to me. . . ."

Irma had been content, then, to take half her revenge in secret. Her vanity had lived as long as she; had forbidden her to tell an avowed world that another woman had beaten her.

Blake made a heroic effort to pull himself together. "I'll have to go now. Have you—any sort of sedative here?"

She lifted her head as if it carried a great weight. "No. It doesn't matter. . . ."

"Will you phone a drug store and have them send you something?"

"Yes. . . ."

She stood up and held out his coat, as if she passed it across a chasm, and he took it without a word. He made no move to touch her, but his eyes were sick with pity and love. He said brokenly:

"Carol—you won't go away? You'll be here when I get back?"

She realized that fight would surely damn her if she was not already damned. Only the guilty fled before they were accused. "Yes, I'll be here. But you can't come and see me."

"I'll arrange it—somehow."

His eyes compelled her, and she met them finally, and read in them all the things he could not tell her. The measure of his own suffering pierced her so that she went to him and gave him her hands.

"I'll be there, Blake, every minute. If that helps any."

He lifted the hands and kissed them slowly. "It's the one thing that will help. It's what I've been praying to hear and couldn't ask you to say."

He went out, closing the door softly behind him.

SHE made herself read the morning paper, and realized that it had been kind. The story was relegated to the inside pages. Mrs. Thornton, the account said generously, had been in bad health; she was in Florida for that reason. . . .

She dropped the paper and went to make coffee. Her mind was mercifully numb, so that she felt nothing—not even misery. The only sensations of which she was conscious were a dull headache and a strained feeling about her eyes that came from sleeplessness.

The telephone clattered and she looked slowly towards it, wondering if she could bear to answer it. And then she knew she had to.

The voice over the wire was Cornelia's; crisp and matter-of-fact.

"Carol!"

"Yes."

"I wondered if you'd have dinner with me tonight? Either at home or uptown?"

She knew then that Cornelia had read the paper, and that Cornelia's swift mind had grasped a great deal that had been unsaid. And she knew that Cornelia's interest was far more than morbid curiosity; Cornelia's contempt for gossip and personalities amounted almost to loathing.

She said: "I'd love it—but please come here instead." Where I won't have to see people, and wonder if they know. . . .

Determine the number of dwellers who would voluntarily leave the city in case of war and go to hill towns and other places away from striking centers.

Mobilization Duties

The moment mobilization is decreed the "capo-fabbricato" must: Paint out the too-loud colors of terraces and roofs. Render skylights and other reflecting surfaces opaque.

Buy a special alarm which will notify all the tenants of the imminence of an air raid.

Buy apparatus to purify and regenerate the air in the building's refuge.

See that the tenants have strips of cloth soaked in grease ready to close windows and doors hermetically.

Have excessive weights on top floors removed. Big chandeliers must be taken down. Statues on the front of buildings must be taken away.

When Raid Comes

When the air raid starts, the capo-fabbricato must:

See that the refuge is ready. Make sure the alarm has been heard by all.

Be certain the tenants, before leaving their apartments, have turned off gas and electricity.

See that the central gas and electric valve are turned off.

Guide the tenants to the refuge, recommending calm, serenity and perfect discipline.

When the signal of peril-over is sounded see that the building is not permeated with gas before letting the tenants return to their apartments.

Weather Man Handles Farm Politics Again

By BYRON PRICE
(Chief of Bureau, The Associated Press, Washington)

Although experts may disagree as to the long-term economic effects of the drought, its immediate political consequences are plain. It has altered materially the basic strategy of the presidential campaign.

After the national conventions the Republicans were talking in terms of a safely Republican west, and were looking forward to a bat-whether he is not being put, unnecessarily, into an inferior class of pensioners.

Around convention time many Republicans thought they saw evidence that a large section of the farming community was tiring of the Roosevelt farm policies. Agriculture in the main, was getting on its feet again. It was listening to Republican charges that the Democratic farm program was all wrong, economically.

But under the blow administered by the drought, the situation in many places reverted to one of dire questions about economics and the distant future paled into insignificance. Their sole worry was whether the money would be sent quickly from Washington.

Mr. Hamilton contends that Washington's response to the call for help was only a matter of course—that the administration only did its plain duty, and that its action entitles it to no unusual political credit. Be that as it may, the practical effect is what counts. And the practical effect is that the Democrats now are going out in a big way to try to capture a large part

In another sense also, the drought had had its influence on campaign strategy. It has shifted the emphasis of the Republican attack.

At the Cleveland convention, the chief complaint against the Roosevelt farm policies was that they "regimented" the farmer, and made a serf of him. The charge that the program was based on a desire for "scarcity" also was mentioned, but in a minor key. Now the "scarcity" charge dominates the Republican chorus.

Instead of defending the administration for having taken the farmer so firmly in hand, the Democratic orators now are answering questions about the little pigs which were slaughtered, and the corn and wheat which wasn't produced. The drought has multiplied these questions.

Who will benefit in the end must await events—the reaction to Mr. Roosevelt's program of drought relief and to his own personal appearance in the drought area, and the fuller development of Mr. Landon's farm views in general.

But it is not too much to say that, at this stage, the drought has become the hinge on which the farm issue—possibly the campaign itself—will turn. Once more the weather man has taken charge of farm politics.

KISSING CHARGE DELAYS SCHOOL

A kiss—and it more or less problematical—gave some 500 children an extra week's vacation as school authorities quarreled in the Union Ridge community of Chicago. Larinda Cleary (left) described as "absolutely false" a "poison pen" letter charge that Principal Charles O'Hearn kissed her, Clarabelle Lindsey (right), or Mary Hammond, all teachers. Business and industrial developments on the whole was of a cheering nature, although foreign news was not calculated to generate optimism.

With early profit taking being absorbed without much difficulty, buyers got behind the steels, rails, amusements, and a wide assortment of specialties.

Transfers approximated 1,500,000 shares.

Suggests Thrift For "Sick Man of Asia"

Nanking, China, Sept. 10.—(AP)—Frugality and thrift are the key-words of generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek's latest uplift organization, the People's Economic Reconstruction Movement, which becomes, with the two-year-old New Life movement, the General's pet scheme for rejuvenating the "sick man of Asia".

Save Time, Save Money, Save Material—these are the chief slogans of the newly launched movement, which is expected to achieve in the material and economic spheres what the New Life movement is doing for the moral and social life of the Chinese.

On hundred per cent followers of the new Chinese movement will arrive at work and for appointments on time. They will eliminate all unnecessary expenses at weddings and funerals, will save their own pennies and dimes, and encourage others to do likewise and save the nation's resources by "buying Chinese."

First sums accumulated during the thrift campaign, believes Founder and Sponsor Chiang Kai-shek, should be used for the purchase of machinery and equipment which will enable China to manufacture at home what she now buys from abroad. Thus, it is hoped, China can eventually reduce an unfavorable trade balance which now runs to $125,000,000 a year.

Ross Alexander is an expert finger cracked. (It's making his knuckles larger, but he doesn't mind. Anything for a "rep.")

Mary Phillips, George M. Cohan's favorite leading lady, is one of the latest stage actresses to succumb to the Hollywood fever.
