Fascists Withstand Blast Wrecking Toledo Alcazar

Fascists Refuse To Surrender After Alcazar Blast

Enraged by the defiance of 1,700 fascist men, women and children besieged in the Alcazar at Toledo, government troops blasted the ancient fortress after having delayed the explosive to give the insurgents another chance to surrender.

REPEL ATTACK OF LOYALISTS

Machine Guns Manned From Cellars of Ruined Castles As Government Troops Storm Ruins to Plant Republic Flag and Hurl Hand Grenades At Defenders

Madrid, Sept. 18.—A tremendous blast from two huge mines ripped Toledo's crumbling Alcazar to pieces today and government authorities estimated killed or maimed more than a half of the building's 1,700 fascist defenders.

(Copyright by Associated Press) Madrid, Sept. 18.—(AP)—The fascists of Toledo's Alcazar withstood the tremendous explosion of a ton of T. N. T. today and from the cellars of the ruined castles manned machine guns to hold off charging government militiamen.

Even as the government carried out the first part of its "terrible decision" to blow up the Alcazar, powerful syndicalists in Madrid in an eight-point program, which they declared was the only effective means of crushing fascism, demanded conscription of all able-bodied men and sweeping administration reforms.

The first of three great mines laid under the Toledo castle where 1,700 men, women and children have withstood shell fire for two months exploded with a terrific roar at 6:15 a. m. today.

Government troops stormed the ruins to plant the flag of the republic and rained hand grenades at the passages leading to the cellars. From the underground vaults vicious machine gun fire answered the charge.

The initial blast apparently did not shake the fascists from their determination to die rather than give up.

Explosions of the first mine at Toledo and the socialist ultimatum in Madrid coincided with new and strict regulations limiting the stay of foreigners in Spain.

These restrictions decreed officials said, after it was learned that foreigners had engaged in fascist espionage.

Hunters In State Urged Be Careful While In Fields

With One Fatality Already Listed, Game Commissioner Asks Gunners To Exert Precautions

Reflector Bureau.

Sir Walter Hotel. Raleigh, Sept. 18.—With at least one fatality already reported and an increasing number of gunners taking the field, State Game and Inland Fisheries Commissioner J. D. Chalk yesterday urged that every precaution be taken to preserve human life and to prevent injury.

Even the slightest act of carelessness, according to the commissioner, in the handling of firearms may result in serious injury to a hunter or his companion.

The commissioner suggested a list of "don'ts" for hunters which, if observed rigidly, will virtually eliminate all hunting accidents. These are as follows:

- 1. Don't keep your gun loaded except when you are actually hunting, but handle it at all times as if it were loaded.
2. Don't point your gun at anyone even if you are sure it is empty.
3. Don't carry your gun when climbing fences or brush piles.
4. Don't handle a gun by the muzzle or pull it toward you.
5. Don't shoot at any game unless you can see it clearly enough to identify it positively. There is surety in our North Carolina deer law in that the deer you can shoot must be a buck and all bucks have horns.
6. Don't violate the farmer's hospitality by leaving gates open, cutting fences, or destroying his property.
7. Don't throw your smoke out of the car or into the brush without putting it out.

POWERS MEET AMID FEARS OF NEW OUTBREAK

Formula Found To Bar Ethiopia From Assembly

ITALY EXPECTED TO COLLABORATE

Council Gathers To Debate League Resolutions, Armament Races and Spanish Conflict

Geneva, Sept. 18.—(AP)—Big European powers convening in Geneva amid new war fears over Europe's "instability" have found a formula to bar vanquished Ethiopia from Monday's assembly meeting and to obtain renewed collaboration of Italy's Duce, league officials disclosed today.

The officials said they expected Haile Selassie's delegation of three, due in Geneva Sunday, to be refused seats at the assembly table on the grounds they do not represent an effective government.

They added, however, that the league is not prepared to recognize the Italian conquest of Ethiopia, which it tried so hard to stop, or to declare an independent Ethiopian non-existent, or even out of the league.

The officials expected Italian delegates would remain absent until Premier Benito Mussolini is satisfied that minor powers will raise no objection when the Italians come to present their credentials on behalf of their king and emperor.

Shortly before the international diplomats convened in the 93rd session of the league council, the Swiss government launched a gigantic financial campaign to repair its domestic defenses.

The council gathered in the fear-laden atmosphere to debate league reform proposals, national armament races, possible treaty revision and international developments of the Spanish civil war.

GOOD TOBACCO SELLING HIGH

Nearly Two Million Dollars Already Paid Out

Nearly two million dollars have been paid farmers selling their tobacco on the Greenville market this season, the regular weekly report issued by K. W. Cobb, sales supervisor, revealed today.

Through yesterday growers visiting the local market had received a total of $1,937,162.69 for their offerings.

Offerings of 4,488,418 pounds during the week ending yesterday brought to 8,851,424 pounds sold on the auction floors here this season. Although the market has been in operation since September 1, offerings for the five sales days ending yesterday totaled more than those during the entire time preceding that period.

The 4,488,418 pounds sold during the week compared with 4,363,006 pounds offered here through Thursday of last week, when the market lacked only one day of having been in operation two full weeks.

It was pointed out that this bears out early statements that the tobacco in this section was late and caused light sales in the early selling, with heavy sales due to come later.

Farmers from the some 30 counties who sold their tobacco here during the past week received $937,635.83 for their offerings, an average of $20.89 per hundred pounds. The season average was set at $20.—(Continued on page six)

Local Attorney Attacks School Commission Act

Holds Age Limit For Students Is Unconstitutional

A case which is attracting statewide attention has been started here by Eli Bloom, local attorney, who is contesting the constitutionality of the State School commission's regulation providing that a child who will not be six years old by October 1 can not enter the public school this term.

A court order signed yesterday by Judge N. A. Sinclair of Fayetteville, presiding over a term of Pitt civil court here this week, restrains city school authorities from removing the plaintiff's child from the class rooms. The child will be six years old on October 26.

In section 10 of the petition and complaint, Mr. Bloom directs attention to the constitution which declares it is the duty of the school authorities to provide school facilities for all persons between six and 21 years of age.

It further alleges that if Supt. J. H. Rose, defendant in the action, is permitted to carry out his stated purpose of denying the child the right to enter school before the beginning of the 1937-38 term, "the plaintiff and his child will be denied their constitutional rights and the educational privileges guaranteed to the child under and by virtue of the law of the land."

The order is returnable before Judge Sinclair at the courthouse here on Thursday, October 1. In the meantime the child will be permitted to remain in school.

Attorney Bloom stated today he would appeal to the State Supreme court, should the injunction be set aside.

The case is expected to attract widespread attention in that it challenges the right of the State school commission in denying the educational facilities to a child six years of age, even though that age was reached after the regular term had started, and after October 1.

The present regulations declares a child must be six years of age by October 1 in order to enter school during the term beginning in September. A year ago the specified date was January 15, but was moved up to November 15 during the session, with children already in school being allowed to continue. The date for this year was set at October 1 by the commission.

In attacking the constitutionality of the rule, the plaintiff alleges that his child should be allowed to enter school on October 26, under the constitution, and that through a private arrangement with school authorities she should be allowed to start in at the beginning of the term.

Democrats Launch Party's Campaign

High Point, Sept. 12.—(AP)—Democrats from throughout North Carolina assembled here this afternoon at High Point City Lake as guests of the Democrats of the Sixth Congressional district to launch officially their state campaign.

The majority of North Carolina's officials, departmental heads, Democratic nominees and statesmen, were present for the rally barbecue which J. Wallace Winborne has designated as the formal opening of the statewide campaign. The principal address is to be delivered tonight by Clyde R. Hoey of Shelby, Democratic nominee for Governor.

PITT FARMERS HEAR WINSLOW

Farm Bureau President Speaks On Tobacco Compact

A number of Pitt county farmers gathered at the court house last night to hear J. E. Winslow, president of the North Carolina Farm Bureau Federation, report on the conference in Washington this week of Bureau officials from other tobacco producing states and Department of Agriculture officials called to discuss proposed tobacco compact legislation.

The Bureau president declared that the delegates agreed on compact laws which would include both poundage and acreage control and also agreed on a method of setting up control machinery to the measure.

He said that a great deal of the discussion was given to additional national legislation to make compacts effective. The legal division of the National farm organization at Washington, he said, was "working out" details in regard to additional federal legislation needed.

He said the legal division also was drawing up the model bill including the agreement entered into by the various Farm Bureau represented and copies of the proposed legislation will be sent out within the next few days.

Last night's meeting was presided over by R. R. Bennett, Pitt county farm agent. A representative of the forestry service of N.C. State college spoke briefly on the tobacco compact.

FINANCIERS: G.O.P. sideswipes at the integrity of the public credit, bank deposits and life insurance policies have precipitated a quiet checkup of the identity of purchasers of government bonds under the New Deal.

Although the current survey has not been finished, an earlier canvass discloses that the banks are bearing the bulk of the load. They hold about 60 per cent of all treasury obligations issued by the Roosevelt administration. Life insurance companies have a comparatively small supply in their portfolios—about 5 per cent at the most.

Corporations other than insurance firms have invested to the extent of 14 per cent, ranking next to the banks. Private individuals have taken 7.5 per cent, while trustees and similar buyers account for 8.5 per cent. Since the same percentages hold for the twenty-seven billion dollars worth of securities put out in the last thirty months (these include refundings of many earlier issues) the figures furnish some idea of who is financing Uncle Sam by direct purchases.

Disrupted Communication Conceal Fate Of Hundreds

STORM CAUSES MUCH CONCERN

Red Cross and Coast Guard Ready To Render Aid

(Copyright by Associated Press) Norfolk, Sept. 18.—(AP)—Four hundred persons trapped on Ocracoke Island, N. C., emerged safely today from a night of hurricane terror, while the great wind storm swept along the east coast, scattering the Carolinas and the coast of Virginia.

Coast guardsmen said they understood the inhabitants had taken shelter in the Ocracoke light house. From elsewhere along the coast where communications were wrecked and seaside communities flooded the same encouraging reports came in.

"No loss of life." Nevertheless, the fast moving hurricane center, with its attendant winds of from 60 to 90 miles an hour, was causing national and local officials the utmost concern.

The Red Cross was standing ready to hurry relief into stricken communities, while national guardsmen were reported acting as rescue workers at some points.

A United States lightship was admitted while one coast guard cutter stood by in a battle with the storm and asked for aid from another government ship.

New York had high winds early in the day. Although the center of the storm at that time was near here, 300 miles away.

The weather bureau ordered the display of new storm warnings all the way to Eastport, Me.

The bureau located the center of the hurricane as a "short distance south, southeast of Cape Henry, Va. at 8 a. m. (EST)."

Important Stretch In Street Program Already Complete

Filling Station Moved To Allow Traffic To Enter Tenth Street From Dickinson Avenue

Work of moving a filling station to provide for the opening of Dickinson avenue into Tenth street has been practically completed and traffic is being allowed to traverse the new route.

The street will be opened completely tomorrow, relieving the avenue of much traffic. There yet remains much work to be done, however, before the link will be approved formally.

Albemarle avenue will be widened in front of Swift and company and other work will be done at the crossing, at which several streets connect. A beautification program is being planned by the Woman's club, with one or two places at the crossing to be worked on and Tenth street will be beautified at several spots.

The link is an important step in the street widening and underpass commission at the insistence of City officials.

Other links have been completed and more work is going on at present on that edge of the city. The plan includes an underpass at the railroad crossing at the cotton mill and traffic is being routed over a detour at present while work is going on for the underpass.

Freak Corn Grown By Cox's Mill Planter

John Hardee, farmer of near Cox's Mill, brought to this city today seven ears of corn, all growing from one base and all enclosed in the same husk.

W.J. Spain Appointed To Succeed Dr. Noble

Raleigh, Sept. 18.—(AP)—Gov. Ehringhaus today appointed W. J. Spain, head of the accounting division of the department of revenue, to the post of assistant commissioner of revenue.

Spain succeeds Dr. M. C. S. Noble, Jr., who resigned Tuesday as assistant commissioner.

Hurricane Lashes At Seven States

(By the Associated Press) One thousand miles of the Atlantic coast was slashed savagely today by the winds of a hurricane whirling along the shores of seven states.

Communications were wrecked on the coast of North Carolina and there was no way to determine immediately how great the loss of life and property might be. Two men were listed dead in early reports, neither in North Carolina however.

The area hit by the storm disturbance included not only the Carolinas, but Virginia, Maryland, Delaware, New Jersey and New York.

Full gale warnings were posted all the way from Norfolk to Maine.

The first place hard hit in Maryland was Ocean City, which was cut off from the mainland by repeated walls of water.

The center of the great storm, whose whirling arms of 70, 80, 90 and 100-mile-an-hour winds, passed Norfolk during the morning.

FDR SPEAKS TO HARVARD MEN

Urges Alumni Stand Up for Freedom of The Mind

Cambridge, Mass., Sept. 18.—(AP)—President Roosevelt declared today that "in the day of modern witch-burning, when freedom of thought has been exiled from many lands," it is up to Harvard University and America "to stand for the freedom of the human mind."

Speaking in the vast Harvard Tercentenary Theatre before assembled sons of Harvard and visiting scholars, Mr. Roosevelt, asked his fellow alumni gathered to honor their university at its 300th birthday celebration to dedicate themselves to citizenship of the "high Athenian sense."

He urged them: "To pay ardent reverence to the past, but to recognize no less the direction of the future; to understand philosophies we do not accept and hopes we find it difficult to share; to account the services of mankind the highest ambition a man can follow and to know that there is no calling so humble that it can not be instinct with that ambition; never to be indifferent to what may affect our neighbors; always as Coleridge said, 'to put truth in the first place and not in the second place x x x'."

Early in his speech Mr. Roosevelt reminded his hearers that in the past many Harvard alumni were

Discounts Report of Heavy Damages At Atlantic Beach

M. S. McCracken Declares Statements Made In Regard To Tides And Wind Were Exaggerated

Reports of heavy damage, high tides and strong winds at Atlantic Beach last night were greatly exaggerated, M. S. McCracken, who came here from this morning declared.

Mr. McCracken said that the only damage suffered was to a deck of an eating place a short distance from the hotel. He added the water washed over the boardwalk in front of the hotel, but caused no damage.

A South-West wind brought in high tides, but nothing like as high as had been reported were previously by the radio and morning papers. He said the height reached was, in his opinion, not more than the ceiling of an average room.

He also discounted reports that the wind was 50 to 60 miles an hour, declaring the velocity was nothing like as great as this.

Reports had reached this city that the tide was as high as the beach hotel and the wind had done considerable damage. Mr. McCracken declared that so far as he was able to determine the only damage at the beach settlement was that to a pavilion projecting out from an eating place.

HEAVY DAMAGE ON N. C. COAST

Telephone Lines Are Down Throughout Large Area and Inability of Boats To Reach Sections of Coast Prevent Contact With Scores of Mainland Communities

(Washington, N. C., Sept. 18.—(AP)—High seas and disrupted communications throughout the state of hundreds of residents of the North Carolina sound country today after a tropical hurricane, which was reported to have attained a force of 90 miles an hour at some points.

Telephone lines were down throughout a vast area and wind still whipped the waters of the sounds to prevent communication by boat. All points with which contact could be established reported no loss of lives.

Fear for the lives of approximately 400 inhabitants of Ocracoke Island on the Atlantic banks north-east of Beaufort was dispelled this morning when the coast guard wireless there, after being silent for hours, reported some was spotted by a nine-foot tide which completely inundated the island during the night. However, damage was reported heavy.

The Beaufort City coast guard station also had a report of heavy damage, but no loss of life at Hatteras.

Hatteras and the rest of Ocracoke Island remained isolated. The coast guard radio there was out of commission.

The fate of a score of mainland communities, which usually feel the full force of such storms, was likewise in doubt. All except the farthest inland sections of 10 counties were cut off from outside communication. There was no word from Swan Quarter and other towns in the area and Elizabeth City was isolated.

Currituck, Camden, Pasquotank, Perquimans, Washington, Tyrrell, Dare, Hyde and parts of Chowan and Beaufort counties were completely isolated.

Work Is Resumed On Local Armory Following Delay

No Definite Indications When It Will Be Completed, But Hope To Be By First Of Year

Work has been resumed on the City-County armory and officials of the two governing units expressed hope today that the construction could be carried on without any further interruptions.

Mayor M. K. Blount said it was impossible to say when the building would be completed as the weather conditions would play a big part in determining when it would be ready for occupancy. He expressed hope, however, that it would be completed by the first of the year.

Work was halted several weeks ago when it was discovered that door and window frames placed in the building were of the wrong kind of wood. The error was on the part of WPA officials and the delay added to extra cost to either the city or county.

O. O. Guley is acting as local superintendent of construction with his salary being paid by the WPA. The $26,000 structure is being erected with Federal money, augmented by sums put up by the city and county. The title will remain in the hands of the two units, which will have complete charge of the building although the National Guard will be located in it and pay a monthly rent fee for its use.

When completed the armory will be used as a general community building, with dances, meetings, dinners, etc. to be held in it at the discretion of the city and county.

The Wrong Murderer

By HUGH CLEVELY

SYNOPSIS: Terence Mahony was sent back from China to find his best friend, Billy Rose, a member of a gang of dope peddlers and snappers. Rose is very dangerous. He is the ruler of a small, but powerful, territory. A woman, Lawson, is the head of the gang. Terence knows Lawson's gang plans to kidnap Billy Little, the movie star and he has called at the Little house to see what he can pick up Lawson, whom some suspect, just has arrived at the Little's.

Chapter Four
QUESTIONS BY LAWSON
IT SEEMED that Little could not remember Mahony's name. A flash of wild amusement came into Mahony's eyes and vanished. But he did not remind Little of his name.

Lawson, it appeared, had a better memory.
"Yes, I've met Mahony with poor Rose," he said. "You had rather a lucky escape, I understand."

"Yes," agreed Mahony.
"What I can't understand is the extraordinary behavior of the people in the car behind you," went on Lawson. "They must have seen the crash. What a rotten thing to do, to go on without stopping."

His eyes, dark and intelligent, were watching Mahony's expression with some curiosity. What he was really wondering, as Mahony guessed, was whether Mahony was aware that the people in that car behind had caused the crash. With two engines racing all out, the crack of a pistol-shot might have passed unnoticed.

Terence noted every man with whom Elsa danced.

"Perhaps they were in a hurry," suggested Mahony.
"It was a dirty trick, anyway," Lawson said.

During this short exchange of conversation, though nothing had been obvious to any spectator, the two men had been quietly engaged in weighing one another up. Of the two, Lawson had the harder task, for he had not only to estimate the manner of man that Mahony was, but also to try to guess how much, if anything, he knew of the real causes of that motor crash.

"Til ring for tea," said Elsa. Conversation became general again; tea was brought in. Soon after tea Mahony thanked the Littles for their hospitality and left.

"A MOST extraordinary young man," observed Mr. Little in a tone of disparagement, when Mahony had gone. "He practically forced his way in here without any invitation, and stayed to tea. And asked the most impertinent questions."
"He came to see me," said Elsa. "I didn't think he was so bad; I rather liked him. I found him quite a pleasant change after all the regimental hearties and terribly pukka little snobs who seem to come here so much."

Lawson laughed.
"And which an I—a regimental snob or a terribly pukka little heartie?" he asked in an amused tone.
"Neither," said Elsa.

"She looked at him consideringly. 'I haven't placed you—not quite,' she went on. 'But you're amusing, anyway.'"
"Thank you," said Lawson. "And now, if I'm not being impertinent, what were all the impertinent questions he was asking?"

"He wasn't really asking impertinent questions," answered Elsa. "He only wanted to know whom I was going to the dance with tonight."
"Did he want you to go with him?" asked Lawson.

She smiled.
"I hope so," she said. "I should hate to think my girlish charms had left him quite unmoved. But he's not going to the dance, he said so."

"Where does he come from?" asked Mr. Little. "If he's a friend of Rose's, why haven't I met him before?"

"He's a journalist of sorts, I believe," answered Lawson. "He's been in China for the last four years as correspondent of an American news paper."

"Oh! That's what he does, is it," commented Mr. Little.
"He struck me as being harmless enough," said Lawson.

That was the conclusion which he had actually come to it struck him that it was unlikely that Mahony had learned anything from Rose, and that, even if he had, there was little he could do except to warn the Littles, and his warning would only provoke derision.

MAHONY had no intention of warning the Littles of Elsa's danger. He could only too easily imagine the effect of telling Vincent Little that Lawson was planning to kidnap his niece.

The old man would gobble with indignation like a turkey. Elsa would laugh, and they would at once pass on information of the warning to Lawson, who would also laugh heartily, and postpone his attempt on Elsa till a more favorable occasion. He had a simple dinner at his lodgings, and after dinner he changed into Billy's fancy dress. From a suitcase he took the Luger automatic pistol which he had been accustomed to carry in China, and carefully oiled and cleaned it. He drove away from his lodgings in his new car at a quarter past nine, and arrived at the Albert Hall just before half past.

Though the ball had not long started, the huge floor was already fairly crowded with dancers in fancy dress and masks. Harlequins, cardinals, knights, South Sea Islanders, Pompadours, mingled in a colorful, richly dressed, good-humored throng. More and more people were arriving every minute, and the bars were doing a roaring trade.

Mahony's luck was in. As the crowd was coming off the floor after a dance, the sound of a man's laugh attracted his attention. Mahony knew that laugh. He turned, and saw a tall, swaggering buccaner leading a slim Queen of Hearts in the direction of a box. In spite of her mask, the Queen of Hearts was obviously Elsa Little.

For a couple of hours he loitered about, noting every man with whom Elsa danced. He also noted carefully every man who passed him dressed as an Arab's henchman. Among all those people in fancy dress it was a fairly common costume, but he noticed two others which looked as if they had been made by the same hand as his.

Unmasking was to be at midnight, and all the film stars present were to appear one by one on a platform and be presented to the audience.

At about half past eleven, hanging about near the entrance to Lawson's box, Mahony saw Elsa come out to dance with the Charles the Second. A couple of seconds later the Arab henchman came out alone. Seeing Mahony standing near the box, he stopped and looked at him sharply.

"Better be getting along to entrance number three, hadn't you?" he said curtly. "There's only about five minutes to go."

Mahony felt a thrill of anticipation.

1680, did the privileges of nobility constitute any danger to the independence of the peasant class.

Today Swedish economists largely credit the great number of small holdings and the high percentage of owner-farmer properties for Sweden's rapid recovery from the depression.

Emigration of hundreds of thousands of young agricultural workers to the United States and the tendency of industrial undertakings to absorb large areas of land were among the causes leading to twentieth century land legislation in Sweden.

In 1906 a law was passed to curb accumulation of old peasant homesteads by industry, particularly by sawmills. This law was replaced in 1925 by another covering the whole country, with the object of "preserving peasant properties in peasant hands."

Vigorous tenancy laws also have been applied since 1909 to land rented to farmers by a company, economic association or so-called forest speculator. These laws make the owner responsible for providing necessary buildings and any extensive repairs and for compensation to the tenant for his definite improvements to the land.

By making the law rigorous against the landowner, Swedish agricultural experts point out, it was assumed that the voluntary sale of land to tenants would be promoted and facilitated. This, they say, has been the case. Under pressure of legislation, the companies have sold many farms to their tenants.

Special agricultural commissions now check on whether land-owning companies are permitting the land to go out of cultivation and whether buildings are maintained. Heavy fines are imposed for failure to observe the tenancy laws.

HOLLYWOOD SIGHTS & SOUNDS

By ROBBIN COONS
Hollywood—"Screen kisses," opines Director Robert Z. Leonard, "are changing. Yep, ever since 'The Thin Man' they've been changing. When William Powell kissed Myrna Loy, his wife in that one, the bottom dropped out of the Hollywood kiss business."
Tawny-haired Bob Leonard has been watching movie kisses these 26 years. As a former actor he once was on the give-and-take ends of movie kisses.
"And kisses," he philosophizes, "are like people. There are long ones and short ones, fat ones and thin ones, strong ones and weak ones. Every kissing scene demands its own kind of kiss."
But this change in kissing, Mr. Leonard, since "the bottom dropped out?"
"I mean by that," he says, "that kisses are getting more friendly. People can kiss with impunity on the screen nowadays; they don't have to wait until six reels of romance have been unwound. People seem to be able to take their kisses in stride, if you see what I mean."

lent days when Garbo and the late John Gilbert demonstrated the niceties of diaphanous osculation. The censors don't like over-long kisses, for one thing, or another, audiences are prone to laugh.
Leonard considers the "boy meets girl" type of kiss the longest to day, about 85 feet as a rule, although it varies. Shortest, he says, is the "mother-in-law type" lasting about five feet.
Between these extremes are many varieties, like the "good night—I'll see you in the morning" kiss which runs about 16 feet if the kissers are supposed to be engaged, 26 feet if they're not; and the "it's been so long, hasn't it?" kiss like the one William Powell and Jean Chatterbox exchanged after all those years in "The Great Ziegfeld."
"This is usually a 30-footer," says Leonard, "but actors have been known to stretch it much longer than that."

SWEDEN'S FARMERS

(Second in a series)
By ELMER W. PETERSON
Stockholm (AP)—A new royal commission, appointed by the agrarian government now in power, is studying Swedish agricultural conditions to seek new ways and means of aiding both the owner-farmer and the tenant farmer.

The commission seeks to improve legislation by which the tenant farmer already has admitted benefits and safeguards.

This legislation is the modern note in a national agriculture in which bondage never has existed and hardly any feudalism. Farmers in Sweden, history shows, long have enjoyed political and economic freedom great in comparison with their class in most other countries of Europe.

Share-cropping has been relatively unimportant in Sweden. Payment in kind to agricultural workers, at one time a fairly important practice, has been almost eliminated. Only for a short period, before

Methodist Church Annual Institute Set For Kinston

Training Day Of Women's Missionary Society To Be Held On Thursday, September 24th

The annual study institute or training day for the New Bern Methodist district of the Woman's Missionary Society, M. E. Church, South, will be held at Queen Street Methodist church, Kinston, on Thursday, September 24, from 10 a. m. to 1 p. m.

The president, Study superintendent, Christian social relations superintendent, Secretary of children's work and all other members who can attend from each missionary society in the district are being urged to attend.

Mrs. B. F. Boone, of Cary, conference study superintendent, and Mrs. J. B. Temple, of Kinston, district study superintendent, will be in charge of the program.

Purposes, aims, materials, values, methods and plans will be discussed.

A demonstration study class will be conducted by Mrs. A. S. Parker, of Kinston. The topic for the fall study this year will be, "The American Negro and His Contributions to Civilization."

Mrs. E. L. Hillman, of Durham, will be on the program to discuss the work of the Christian Social Relations committees. Other programs and features are also being arranged. This is to be a very important day in making preparations for the work of the Woman's Missionary societies of the churches in the district. Mrs. Matthews points out, so a large attendance of women from all parts of the section is expected.

Death Rate Rises Slightly In State As Births Decline

Typhoid Fever Stood Still With 15 Deaths Each Month; Influenza Cases Showed Increase

Reflector Bureau, Sir Walter Hotel.

Raleigh, Sept. 18.—August 1936 showed 2,591 deaths in North Carolina against 2,364 for the same months in 1934 and births dropped from 6,849 in 1935 to 6,771 in 1936.

The death rate went up nearly one per cent, from 8.5 to 9.3 and the birth rate dropped from 24.6 to 24.2.

Infant deaths rose from 372 to 408 in the twelve-month end and the mortality rate increased from 54.3 to 60.2.

There was satisfaction in the drop in maternal deaths. August 1935 produced 53, but the same month this year 39. The maternal mortality rate dropped nearly two per cent, from 7.7 to 5.8.

Typhoid fever stood still with 15 deaths each month, endemic typhus undulant fever and smallpox had victims either month. Whooping cough fell from 21 to 6 and diphtheria stood still with four year.

Influenza moved up from 7 to 18. Pulmonary tuberculosis slew 148 each month. Cancer moved up from 122 to 134. Pellagra dropped from 41 to 34, pneumonia fell from 92 to 78, and infant diarrhea went from 85 to 135. Suicides increased from 19 to 25, but homicides fell from 44 to 33. The state was in more murderous mood toward itself and less so toward society.

Primary automobile accidents came down from 76 to 72, but railroad fatalities increased from 7 to 10 and combined auto and railroad deaths went from 9 to 2. Drownings increased from 18 to 24 and fire accidents fatalities as the result of accidents dropped from seven to four.

The health guardians found in August 1936 an uncommonly hard month in several aspects. There is no arm felt as to the vanishing birth rate which still tops the world.

Raleigh, Sept. 17.—State Democrats treasure the bonehead of Vice Presidential Candidate Frank Knox whose crack about insurance policies and the safety of savings deposits gives the Democrats a chance to pedal loudly on the Roosevelt record in banks and insurance.

Colonel Knox, the Democrats think promises to rival Rev. Mr. Burohard of the 1894 Cleveland campaign. To make Col. Knox's crack stand up, it must be explained that the Chicago newspaper man had reference to the valueless dollar sure to come as the result of Roosevelt. Col. Knox has denied saying no insurance policy and no savings account would be safe; and emphasis was upon the reduced value of such investments.

Which brings on inflation and then impenetrable mystery. The Democrats coveted that break. No body understands inflation, they say; but when an ordinary farmer sells tobacco for 25 cents after giving it away many years, rubber dollars do not displease him; for he buys an automobile for $750 that is better than the one for which he paid $1,200 ten years ago, and the $15 suit of clothes which he must have is better than the $25 outfit that he bought a few years ago.

And the little wage earner gets for 30 cents a pound of butter which cost 50 cents years ago and a dozen eggs for 35 cents that went double that in 1925. The Democrats think the Colonel overspoke himself and that President Roosevelt executed a neat one when he summoned the insurance heads to a meeting where they betrayed their $3,000,000,000 business improvement this year over 1935.

Despite the contradictory character of Maine and Michigan elections the Democrats are getting all the kick they can assimilate. They believe Mr. Landon has said too little and Mr. Knox too much.

Hearings On Road Debts Will Produce Arguments

Series Of Meetings To Start In Asheville Next Week

Reflector Bureau, Sir Walter Hotel.

Raleigh, Sept. 18.—Briefs are in mimeograph and counsel is in readiness for the Western North Carolina hearings in Asheville beginning Wednesday of next week, when two dozen odd counties go before the highway debt adjustment commission with claims for their portion of the $61,000,000 thus far asked.

Buncombe, Henderson, Ashe, McDowell and Avery counties will have a special interest. Buncombe and Henderson because they were peculiarly victimized by the boom; Ashe because it is Tam Bowles' empire, or has been 25 years; McDowell, because its Ambassador Bill Neal has been legislator and highway commissioner, and Avery because it is incurably Republican. It will take two full days to finish that work with an hour allotted to each of the counties.

Since these semi-cases at law, equity actions without the forms of the statute, will in the end be tried before the whole people of the state as a jury, what will be done in Asheville will be of immense significance and again the sections will figure sharply. It is the contention of the Westerners that the East has taken the big highway spoils and western papers have hammered at the State Highway and Public Works Commission therefore. It so happens that eastern toll bridges have become outmoded, the state has stopped these tariffs and is now contemplating the construction of one of the biggest and costliest of them all in the East.

But General Counsel Charles Ross is going to startle the West by showing it to be the petted child of an indulgent parent, commonwealth. Mr. Ross won't say it that way and he will find himself in a terrific argument when he advances this novel idea. But he is going to contend strongly that the facts support him. He has the pen of a ready writer and when he sets it to a legal issue the English cracks like Gus Price's new saddle. Mr. Ross is going to argue to this commission, headed by Senator Carl Bailey of Washington County that the proposals before this body are in effect requests of the state to rectify the tragic blunders of the smaller units of government when they were doing their own building.

There are briefs for each of these two dozen counties. All the arguments and the citations of fact are in actuality "briefs." They make breezy reading. The lawyer doesn't argue long, he just tells the commission. In none of the briefs thus far sent out does the attorney for the commission seem to yield his main contention—that the counties are not entitled to refund at "the expense of the balance of the state."

Henderson county, for instance claims that it gave $260,000 in cash, $239,674 in the Haywood Road donation, $90,993 in the Kanuga Road, $50,000 in the Dana Road $23,000 in the Horseshow Road and $17,000 in the Edneyville Road, a total of $680,000. Mr. Ross quotes as the statement of the Henderson claimants to the effect that "the state prevailed upon the commissioner to

Ross continues, "that Mr. Pless was successful in his negotiations and as a result of this litigation the expenditure of this fund was taken out of the hands of the county authorities and turned over to the State Highway Commission." And that, Mr. Ross thinks, is how some of the "prevailing" prevailed.

FOLGER FINDS LITTLE GLOOM

National Committee-man Confident Over Election

Reflector Bureau, Sir Walter Hotel.

Raleigh, Sept. 18.—National Committee-man A. D. Folger back from a visit to Washington finds no gloom amongst fellow committee-men who tell him that if he will carry North Carolina they will take Rhode Island, Massachusetts and Pennsylvania.

Mr. Folger says the Democrats in those states do not believe this as Republicans in North Carolina think they believe that they will carry this commonwealth. They believe it, he says. "Senator Guffey says there is no sort of doubt that President Roosevelt is more popular in Pennsylvania than the senator is and he carried Pennsylvania two years ago. Among the party leaders there appears to be not one doubt of Roosevelt's re-election and they honestly talk about carrying their states exactly as we talk about carrying ours.

"This isn't the usual political bunk of men who always claim victory as a part of political technique. These men ordinarily would gather or split them, don't work. Mr. Folger has found, nor do the usual political shiftoleths. The Mt. Airy lawyer coming back from a conclave of the head men brings no bad news from any source and he is convinced now that there isn't anything in the world which can stop Roosevelt's re-election. The President, Mr. Folger thinks, will get the West and the East.

Raleigh, Sept. 18.—National Committee-man A. D. Folger back from a visit to Washington finds no gloom amongst fellow committee-men who tell him that if he will carry North Carolina they will take Rhode Island, Massachusetts and Pennsylvania.

Mr. Folger says the Democrats in those states do not believe this as Republicans in North Carolina think they believe that they will carry this commonwealth. They believe it, he says. "Senator Guffey says there is no sort of doubt that President Roosevelt is more popular in Pennsylvania than the senator is and he carried Pennsylvania two years ago. Mr. Folger has found, nor do the usual political shiftoleths. The Mt. come tax accounting as "bad debts." The administration controlled Senate Campaign Expenditure Committee may deter prominent Republicans from kicking in as generously as they would like to. They don't want to be pilloried as the du Ponts, Morgans and Rockefeller were for their gifts to the Maine G.O.P.

PERSONA: President Roosevelt has ordered his aides to prune their budget requests, but there is one activity which will receive a generous helping in the 1938 expense account now in the making—national defense.

That item account for almost $1,000,000,000 outlay this year, but it provoked almost no complaint even from professional objectors. It is privately understood that Mr. Roosevelt will ask money for the construction of two more battleships for new submarines and for modernization of several cruisers. The War Department has tentatively requested sufficient sums to rush mechanization and motorization of the army, which now has only a few skeleton units equipped with the latest mechanical weapons.

It's no accident that the President is serving as his own Secretary of War and Secretary of Navy during the budget-making period. He knows what he wants in the way of military and naval reinforcements and the virtual vacancies in both posts (Secretary Swanson's illness doesn't permit him to handle such tedious problems as budgetary matters) come at a happy moment for such a "Big American" as Mr. Roosevelt.

FIRST ROUND-TRIP OCEAN FLIERS

Completing the first round-trip trans-Atlantic flight ever made by man, Dick Merrill (left) and Harry Richman made a forced landing near Musgrave Harbor, Newfoundland, on their projected hop from England to New York. The veteran aviator and crooning sportsman, who recently flew from America to England, are seen discussing the weather report at London before taking off on their return flight. (Associated Press Photo)

DUETTO: Franklin D. Roosevelt and Alf Landon are extremely reticent about human details of their get-together at Des Moines but their meeting has apparently had a definite though indiscernible effect upon the presidential campaign.

Contrary to published rumors, the President had no thought of trapping his distinguished rival by staging a scene in which the contrast of their personalities would be accentuated. Marvin H. MacIntyre telephoned Governor Landon's secretary, explained the purpose of the conference and asked if it would embarrass the Kansas Governor to attend. Mr. Landon reciprocated in the same friendly spirit. Even more than newspaper reports suggest each candidate conceived a high regard for the other. It was Mr. MacIntyre who described Mr. Landon as a "very fine gentleman."

Mr. Landon, pleasant, thoughtful, likable, has rebuffed advice that he get personal in his attacks upon the New Dealers. It is probable that his contact with the President confirmed him in his decision to eschew political personalities. And whatever plan FDR had to "crucify the Kansas" vanished after their handshake and chat. Others may make it a "dirty campaign," as frequently predicted, but the White House duellists won't.

New York
By JAMES McMULLIN
STATIC: The recent World Power Conference was promoted primarily by the Roosevelt administration although—due to the insistence of Floyd Carlisle of Consolidated Edison of New York and Niagara Hudson—the Edison Electric Institute reluctantly chipped in with $75,000 to match the government's contribution for expenses. Most utility leaders were convinced in advance that the Conference would be used chiefly as a sounding board for New Deal power policies—and felt in retrospect that events justified their suspicions, even if spokesmen for public ownership were generally more polite to their opponents than had been anticipated. But one discordant note the New Dealers had not foreseen marred the sounding board effect. The great majority of the roughly 500 foreign delegates present objected to serving as New Deal stooges. Vehement protests against the introduction of "politics" by several foreign representatives produced static that was music to the ears of American power companies.

HOSTILITY: The large British delegation was especially outspoken in its criticism of political attacks on the private power industry. In private conversations, as well as in public utterances, the Britishers did all they could to dispel any idea that there is sympathy in England for such "socialistic" New Deal experiments as the Tennessee Valley Authority. In common with most British financial, industrial and political leaders, the British utility interests whose representatives attended the Conference would like off the record to see Mr. Roosevelt defeated for reelection. Astute New Yorkers comment that the hostility they expressed so forcefully at the Conference was a useful contribution to the cause.

BLAME: Published accounts of utility industry. This characterization is far from accurate.

Even though they share his views about public ownership, a number of other utility chiefs are still privately sore at Carlisle for involving the Edison Institute in the World Power Conference at all.

Moreover, they insist that if they were to "select an accredited spokesman" he would be about their last choice. His companies are too vulnerable in the matter of high rates and in other ways and were also the original objective of FDR's drive to "purify" the industry when the President was governor of New York. For these reasons some power men are inclined to blame Carlisle for making them target number one of the New Deal reform batteries.

ABSENT: Most of the real blitimers of the industry were careful to avoid any sort of official contact with the Power Conference. In fact about the only ones who allowed their names to be identified with it were representatives of Niagara Hudson and Consolidated Edison (Carlisle's own companies) and of North American.

Among those conspicuously absent were Tom McCarter of Public Service of N. J., John Zimmerman and Philip Gadsden of United Gas Improvement, Wendell Wilkie of Commonwealth and Southern, Philip Gossier of Columbia Gas and Electric and Ed Grossback of Electric Bond and Share.

DIVVY: RFC chairman Jesse Jones will make his regular annual appearance at the convention of the American Bankers Association next week. At the two previous conventions he rode his banking listeners hard for their alleged shortcomings. Inside reports have it that this year he will be the bearer of a more agreeable message.

Mr. Jones is expected to announce a reduction in the RFC interest rate on its advances to banks in the form of preferred stock or debentures from 3 1/2 per cent to 3 per cent. This would reflect the reduction in the average rate on the government's own borrowings and the consequent saving to the RFC in the cost of the money it gets from the Treasury.

In effect the RFC chief would be offering to divvy the benefit his agency derives from cheap money with his bank "customers." The big New York institutions would not be affected one way or another, but plenty of smaller banks would have reason to be grateful.

ACCEPTED: The penal provisions of the Securities Act of 1933 were upheld for the first time by Federal Judge John D. Martin of Memphis last week. This was worthwhile court triumph for the New Deal, but not nearly as significant as it looks on the surface.

The criminal provisions of the Securities Act, were based on accepted common law. High grade security dealers never thought of challenging the constitutionality of Congressional power to punish fraudulent use of the mails. Their quarrel was with the civil liability innovations. So there's really no occasion for the New Dealers to celebrate unduly.

Witness the sales on the Greenville tobacco market and compare the prices grade for grade and the type of service rendered on this market and you will be convinced that there is no better place to sell your tobacco. There are always some who seem to enjoy knocking the market, but when the year's figures are in at the end of each year the Greenville market ranks right up at the top and the average price is always above the average paid by the belt as a whole. Our suggestion to the tobacco farmers is to visit the Greenville market and see for themselves.

After a day and night of preparation and fear Eastern North Carolina today emerged from the hurricane with far less property damage than had been anticipated and with no loss of life, based upon reports received up until noon today. The warnings were that the hurricane would be one of the worst ever to visit the North Carolina coast section and every precaution in the way of preparation to take relief to the stricken areas was taken prior to the scheduled time for the storm to strike. It was a great relief when the storm had passed and the section had escaped as lightly as it did and the people of the entire Eastern section of the state have much for which to be thankful.

Black-Draught High
In Quality Without Being High in Price

Black-Draught is "easy to pay for" because it is so economically packaged and so reliable.

But as to quality, there's nothing "cheap" about it. For instance, its principal active ingredient is the leaves of a certain species of plant that are brought 10,000 miles from where they grow to the factory where the medicine is made. These leaves from far, far away, help to give Black-Draught its well-known "laxative reliability." They could not be left out or substituted, without real loss of good medicinal quality.

For a good, purely vegetable laxative, insist on Black-Draught. About 25 doses in each 25-cent package.—(Adv.)

time some years ago, but the subject was soon forgotten. It was supposed that she had quit the field. On the contrary, she will buy about 2,000,000 tons of waste metal this year, as against 1,700,000 tons last year. In 1934, when the situation first came to public attention (our military and naval fleets had been watching it since the Shanghai incident in 1931) Japan bought only 800,000 tons.

Most of the purchases are made through American representatives who work quietly but effectively. The metal is cut up into small sections at Akron, Cleveland or Minneapolis, and shipped out through southern or western ports. This stripping of these resources may result in the same sort of ban that was placed on the export of fabricated tin at the last session of Congress.

BRAKES: Although political expenditures in the Roosevelt-Landon campaign will probably set an all-time record, between-the-line reading of the major party's financial reports reveals that the plutocrats are pinching their pennies.

The G.O.P. got its funds from a fairly limited circle of friends. Individual contributions are smaller than they have been since 1924, $5,000 donations supplanting the $25,000 offerings of the Coolidge-Hoover boom days. With only a few exceptions, the Democrats obtained their money from wealthy officeholders, state committees and promotional ventures such as the convention book. The du Ponts again subsidized the Liberty League, but they said it with loans which may some day be written off their in-

DUKE IS READY FOR DAVIDSON

Ace Parker To Call Signals In Opening Contest

Durham, N. C., Sept. 18.—The lid, which is often referred to as the thing being lifted when sports can't get under way, will probably be blown off tomorrow night when Duke's Blue Devils and Davidson's Wildcats clash under the lights of Greenboro's World War Memorial stadium in the opening 1936 clash of the Southern conference and the North Carolina Big Five.

The Wildcats will enter the contest to make their debut as a full-fledged member of the conference not as the "little" Wildcats such as they have been called before but as a heavy, well-built, well-drilled organization capable of meeting its opponents on an equal basis in every respect.

1936 Duke line which is the huskiest Coach Wallace Wade has had since he has been here. The four starting backs for Davidson will average one pound under 170, about the same heft at which the four Duke backs will tip the beam.

The Wildcats are reported to be in mid-season form. They have drilled long and hard this fall preparing for just one game—the clash with the Blue Devils. On the other hand, Duke has had to lock a bit to the big clash with Oglethorpe the following week although they have spent plenty of time preparing the defense and offense for tomorrow night's engagement.

Duke is looking to Parker, spearhead of the attack for the past two seasons, to open his campaign in his usual brilliant style. He will do the signal-calling, punting, passing and running. He is also captain of the 1936 team.

FISTIC IDOL

JACK DEMPSEY TO OFFICIATE

Fistic Idol To Referee Rocky Mount Fight Card

Rocky Mount, Sept. 18.—The sensational swash Jack Dempsey cut across the boxing world has never been equalled before or since the game reached prominence and the man who brought boxing into "big business," comes here on October 2.

Through the efforts of Bill Lewis, home town boy who is nationally known as a promoter, Dempsey is coming here as the featured attraction on the greatest show of its kind this city has known.

The wrestling card which Lewis is going to present will be the same he usually books for Richmond, his headquarters. He has called off his show there for the night and is moving it here instead.

But it is Dempsey who is expected to draw the record breaking crowd expected for the event. He rarely fails to set records wherever he appears, and though it has been some five years since he lost his heavyweight title.

Action is always assured on any athletic program with which he is connected and because it will be the first time that really big time grapplers have been booked here, with Dempsey to handle the men, there will be plenty of action on October 2.

OIL CONCERNS JOINS DEFENSE

Conspiracy Suit Being Aired in District Court

Reflector Bureau, Sir Walter Hotel. Raleigh, Sept. 17.—Federal courts today find all the major oil companies with their hands up in defense against the $100,000 suit of the Brockwell Oil company of Durham and Wilmington for alleged conspiracy to put the Brockwell corporation out of business.

Representative Oscar Barker's appointment to membership on the port terminal commission to study the feasibility of a state-owned port to handle this oil business, has interfered somewhat with the prosecution of this case, but Mr. Barker's political opponent and neighbor lawyer, R. O. Everett, is in there fighting. The Brockwell company contends that the effect of the oil companies' attitude toward him as a conspiracy to put him away from the field of competition and he is fighting for his old place.

Federal Judge Isaac M. Meekins is trying the case which was called this morning. It is probable that whatever comes of the lawsuit before a federal court jury, this result will have considerable to do with the inquiry into the oil situation in the state.

Voice Instructor Drops From "Met" To Instruct Again

Kirkville, Mo., Sept. 17.—(AP)—From a schoolteacher's desk to the Metropolitan opera and back to the school room again, Phyllis Wells has completed a cycle in her career and turned toward her new job filled with plans and enthusiasm for American music for Americans.

This former Missouri farm girl, who spent 12 years with the "Met," told of her ambitions before leaving her home here for Waco, Texas to be an instructor in voice at Baylor university.

She was pleased immensely at the prospect of teaching again. She is convinced by her experience in opera, she said, that one of the greatest services to American music is open in the teaching field—being the foundation for a great national tradition.

Believe Valentine Has Destroyed His Political Bridges

Pretty Certain Announcement Comes That McDonald Campaigner Covets District Judgeship

Reflector Bureau, Sir Walter Hotel. Raleigh, Sept. 17.—Burned bridges are believed to be somewhere between Raleigh and Nashville in Nash county where resides Timotheus Valentine, late assistant manager of the McDonald campaign, and from which political center comes a pretty certain announcement that Mr. Valentine covets the second district judgeship now held by his Rocky Mount friends, Judge M. V. Barnhill.

The talk has been plentiful enough, but a member of Mr. Valentine's family did the conversing in this instance. There was a certain euphony in the publication, Mr. Valentine was going to run for the judgeship, not against the judge, the Nash people say. It will be the first big ambition of a McDonaldman and it is said that the organization of liberal Democrats has decided that personifying some of its principles is perhaps the best technique.

In using Judge Barnhill for clinical purposes, selecting the best on the bench for points of illustration, the Liberals are admittedly brave, if indeed not rash. Nobody on the superior court bench overmatches Barnhill, against whom the Liberals may have some little score. The Judge from the bench has staid prospective jurors program this year, continuing a singing career which began when she was a $40-a-month teacher in an Adair county country school.

THIMBLE THEATRE (Starring Popeye)

and court audiences to beware of public men who promise them benefits which can come only from hard work and dearly paid taxes. The Judge never warned to this neighbor Dick Fountain and had even less heat for McDonald.

Mr. Valentine comes from the district of McDonald men. All five counties in it gave heavy majorities for McDonald and four of them went against Governor Ethinghaus. It would seem that in the proposal to retire Judge Barnhill the McDonald people have assumed the maximum job. But this seems to be the first big thing open in strictly McDonald territory.

GOOD TOBACCO SELLS HIGH

(Continued from page one) 89. These figures compared with a weekly average last year of $18.44 and a season average of $18.28. Despite the average of $23.01 yesterday, better grades sold higher than on any previous day. A total of 733,866 pounds was sold, bringing $147,831.62. The better grades brought from $50 to $59, but the large quantity of poorer grades offered tended to bring the average down.

Wilson, Sept. 18.—(AP)—Tobacco sales yesterday amounted to 901,278 pounds for an average price of $19.60 a hundred. Sales for the season through Sept. 17, 1936, amounted to $2,410,716.57, an average of $22.76 a hundred, compared with $15,918,994 pounds for $3,111,566.20, or an average of $19.54, during the corresponding period in 1935.

PITT FARMERS HEAR WINSLOW ON COMPACTS

Following the report, short talks were made by B. B. Sugg, president of Eastern Carolina Warehouse association; W. H. Dail, Jr., and E. F. Arnold, executive secretary of the North Carolina Farm Bureau. County Agent Bennett discussed rural electrification and other county farm projects.

At the conclusion of the meeting practically every man present who was not a member joined the Bureau, which is making an intensive campaign to enlist every farmer, tenant and interested business man in the county in the Bureau.

I wish the poet who wrote, "The melancholy days are come, the saddest of the year," could sit down and concentrate on the exquisite designs woven into the Hand-Hooked rug that I saw at the HIGGS STUDIO OF INTERIOR DECORATING this morning. It is so simply and beautifully done. . . . Your favorite designs can be woven into hard-hooked rugs for Mahogany furnished rooms of the late eighteenth century. . . . Colonial designs for rooms furnished in maple. Machine hooked rugs are in Broadloom widths and scatter sizes. I reveled in the range of colors and designs of rugs in "TEXTURE" now so popular, in and well adapted to rooms demanding unusually hard wear. . . . Sturdy Scotch weaves for the family living room and sun porch. . . . Flax Weaves for children's play rooms and hall ways. Textures are shown in many lovely cut and uncut designs portraying floral motifs and stripes for your more sophisticated rooms, also strikingly original designs for Tea Rooms and "The Bar." Broadlooms, in a wide range of new colors is still our loveliest floor covering in one color—"Havana Brown" and "Heavenly Blues" help to create rooms so gorgeously alive and pleasant to live in that no home is complete without one room, at least, in Broadloom. I cannot do justice to the service rendered Greenville at the Lella Higgs Studio, but if you will leave your rug problems here I'll guarantee your finding the rug that will be right in color, texture and price.

There is nothing that pleases me more than to find something new to write about. . . . I am, indeed happy to write about EFIRDS' new store this week. It is not only a new store in Greenville but is chock-full of brand new merchandise displaying the kind of price tags that delight the pocket book of the thrifty shopper. . . . My thoughts are naturally with mothers who are busy shopping for school children between the ages of six and sixteen years. . . . I decided to look around and was delighted to find so many charming dresses in washable prints. . . . no shrinking or fading and just 97c. Shirley Temple dresses and coats are prettier than ever. . . . Little girls will look adorable in styles created for this popular little star. Coats in a wide range of colors and materials for the cooler days just ahead of us and the ever-popular sweater that no school girl can afford to go without. . . . In fact, she will need several and can find them in her favorite colors at EFIRDS. Mr. Norris has been transferred from the EFIRD store in Durham, N. C. to manage the local store but you will find many local girls and boys to greet you when you go shopping at EFIRDS, Greenville's newest store.

There is one phrase that should never be used in reference to a woman. It is: "A woman of her age." What woman wants to be her age? Haven't you heard people say, "I don't know how old she is but she looks over thirty." Time marches on for all of us, but there is no need to give up and look your age. I have found some jars of sheer magic at the Rosebud Beauty Salon. . . . smooth a little of the delightful creams on your face and smooth away the tell-tale signs of years. Mrs. Johnson will arrange for you to have a complimentary "make-up" facial for these beauty creations. . . . they are the famous Bonne Belle beauty aids. They may be used at night to soothe away the lines, shadows, discolorations and blemishes, serving as a mild bleach. . . . there is a foundation cream to give your skin a delicate, transparent loveliness all day long. No skin, however dull, sallow and old is beyond the ministrations of the BONNE BELLE beauty creations.

Without immaculate cleanliness, there is no real smartness of appearance. Without HOT water, complete cleanliness is impossible. Smartness, glamour and beauty. . . . a fresh clear skin. . . . glossy, lustrous hair. . . . glistening teeth. . . . well-kept hands. . . . flawless dress. . . . find them all in a machine of copper, brass and iron—the new, RUUD Improved Automatic Storage Water Heater. That's only one chapter. Find these things too—quick hot water in case of sickness, better baths and better shaves, greater ease in dish-washing, laundering and cleaning, comfort for your guests and all the family. Ruud Hot Water flows instantly as you open the faucet; its abundant supply is in day and night readiness; operation is so completely automatic that you need never go near it or even think of it; reliable controls keep fuel costs low. City School Sets State Precedent

By JAMES WHITFIELD
A notch is being carved in the log of North Carolina history this year by the Greenville high school. According to Miss Willie Ruby Blackburn, business education instructor of the local high school, it will be the first time in the history of North Carolina schools that practice teachers have received part of their practice training in a business education class. The East Carolina Teachers College has formed a four-year course in commercial work, during which those aspiring to teach this work will be trained at the college, but practice teaching will take place in the business education classes of the Greenville high school, with Miss Blackburn serving as critic.

WEATHER MAY DECIDE GAME

Hot Sun Will Aid Duke In Game With Colgate

Reflector Bureau, Sir Walter Hotel, Raleigh, Sept. 18.—Equinoctial weather is expected to decide an even game in Duke Stadium Saturday of next week, September 26, when Duke and Colgate meet in their first.

If the first fall visitation is warm by playing date Duke will have an advantage. Hot sun would be a help to the Wallace Wade team. Colgate has had an advantage in pre-game work. If the day should be cool the Northerners would get the break. That's the way the athletic observers call it. Coach Wade would like to have all the good weather possible, but if left to a choice between bracing days all the week and a hot one for Saturday, he would take the warm one despite its discomfort to the boys. If there should be instead warm weather all the week and cool on Saturday And/ Kerr's crew would be advantaged. That's how close the fans expect the playing to be, though the regular Duke devotees think the Methodists can beat these soap town boys two touchdowns any day in the year.

Advertising of the homecoming day indicates a crowd that will exceed any packed into the Duke stadium on any other occasions save the two Carolinas games of 1933 and 1935 and the opener in October 1929. Duke was just coming up then and Pittsburg, the opponent, was getting the call for the Rose Bowl. Colgate probably is as good today as Pitt was then and Duke is about 200 per cent better than the Duke of 1929.

The game is to be the biggest that Tar Heels have ever seen between sections and played on a North Carolina field. The coaching of Mr. Wade is being put to as high a test as he ever had. The North Carolina season never has been so impressively opened, according to all the rooters who have followed football half a century.

In striking out 15 St. Louis Browns in his major league debut, Bob Feller, Cleveland 17-year-old hurler, lost only three pounds.

Vanceboro Negro Falls For "Game" Although Warned

Chief Clark Reveals Story of How Farmer Was "Taken In" After Being Warned By Officer

The story of how a colored farmer was flim-flammed out of money received from the sale of his tobacco after he had been warned a few minutes before by a police officer and how he lied rather than admit he had been "taken in" was told here today by Chief George Clark.

The police officers having received a tip last week that several Negroes were "working" Tobacco town, instructed his men to don plain clothes and circulate around the warehouses.

Officer Brewer, observing a well-dressed negro, about 60 years old and carrying a cane, talking to another negro who had just sold some tobacco, warned the farmer that he had better watch his step. The officer then told the strange negro that he had better leave town. The out-of-town negro thanked the officer and went on his way.

That afternoon about 4 o'clock the negro farmer, Bill Chapman of Vanceboro, went to police headquarters and related how he had been held up and robbed of his tobacco money, nearly $100.

Chief Clark learned the whereabouts of the strange negro and yesterday had him returned here. The negro, George Battle readily admitted having worked the game on the Vanceboro farmer, who finally admitted that he was "flim-flammed" and not held up and robbed as he had told officers.

N. Y. Stock Market

New York, Sept. 13—Business and industrial optimism fanned buying flames into today's stock market and many issues steamed up fractions to two or more points. Although uneasiness was still evident over the foreign situation, there was a renewed demand for shares of selected rails, motors, oil, coppers, steels and specialties.

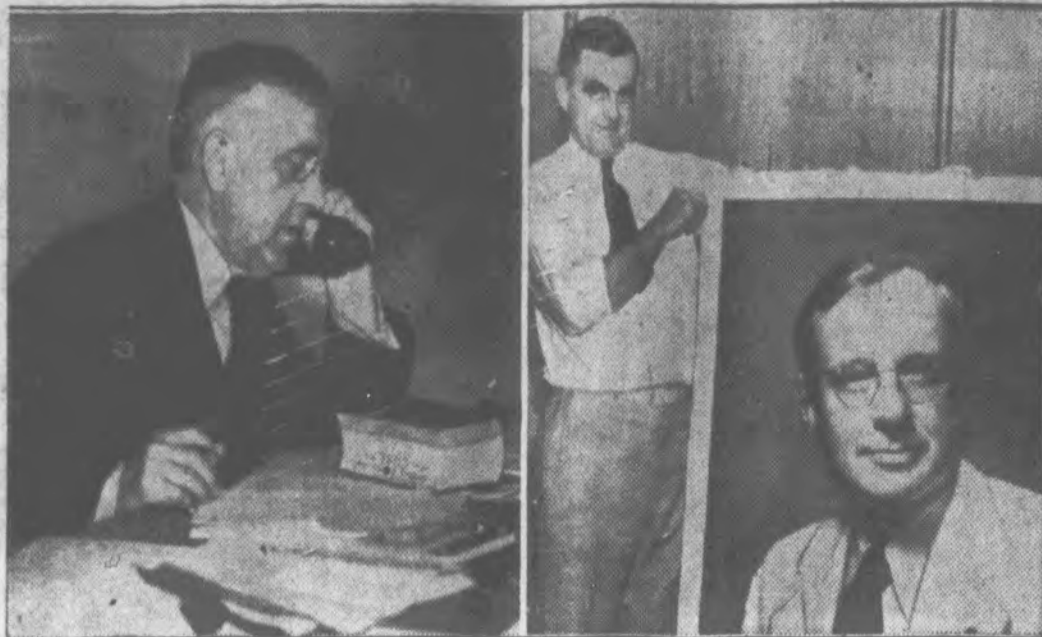

Late profit taking failed to stem the advance in the majority of cases. Transfers were around 1,200,000 shares.

How to Determine Weight of Ships

By LLOYD LEHRBAS

Washington, (AP)—Do you ever try to weigh a battleship?

The one known fact concerning the two battleships to be built by the United States navy, beginning soon after January 1, is that they will be of precisely 35,000 tons displacement.

That tonnage figure means, navy officers explain, that when the battleship is launched and placed in commission, loaded down with all the mechanical gadgets a modern fighting ship must have, it will displace the equivalent of 35,000 tons of water, and also weigh that number of tons of 2,240 pounds each.

The steel framework and plates, engines, boilers, armor, guns, wires, electric lights, kitchen equipment—everything that goes into the manufacture of a battleship—is weighed, or its weight known, while the warship of the future is still nothing more than a sketch or a blueprint.

The standard displacement of 35,000 tons—permitted by the London naval pact—includes everything except extra water for the boilers and fuel.

Battleship weight is now such a fine science, officers and crew to be carried is set in advance and 1,000 pounds each estimated for every man's weight, clothes, baggage and his proportion of food and water carried.

So precise is that weighing-in, the navy's experts declared, that if it were possible to hoist the completed battleship on a gigantic scale it would balance the pointer at 35,000 tons.

Large by Necessity: Why 35,000 tons? The United States has no big naval bases scattered around the world—as Great Britain and other nations have—and it would therefore be impossible for an American battleship to put into port for fuel, water, food or other supplies in an emergency.

To overcome that handicap the American navy adopted the rule long ago to build its battleships so that they would be, as far as possible, self-sustaining.

Battleships are also "the backbone of the fleet" and must be capable of standing up against the warships of any other nation in an emergency. Other nations have battleships with 16-inch guns that hurl gigantic shells 20 miles or more, and an American battleship must, therefore, carry armor of a thickness to protect it against enemy shells of that calibre.

To carry the enormous weight of such armor the ships must be big and sturdy. Vessels of 35,000 tons, officers say, are of the size—and therefore of the weight—to meet the American idea of an efficient battleship.

The biggest American battleships at the present time are the New Mexico and Idaho (33,400 tons).

Japanese Plans: The British navy's Hood—a battlecruiser—boasts 42,100 tons, while nine of the British battleships proper are 31,000 tons and over.

The British have announced that immediately after expiration of existing treaties on January 1, they will begin construction of two new 35,000 ton battleships.

The Japanese navy's prizes—Mutsu and Nagato—are of 32,720 tons, while their 7 other battleships are in the 25,000-ton category. Japan's plans to build four new ships—rumored to range from 40,000 to 50,000 tons—are expected to be announced officially after January 1.

Horatio Alger Touch Not Found This Story

New Orleans, (AP)—There's no Horatio Alger touch to the success story of New Orleans' new mayor.

Although Robert Sidney Maestri became a wealthy property owner before he was 30, it was no effortless, overnight result but a product of years of hard work, thrift and an uncommon judgment of land values.

Twenty-eight years ago Maestri, 19, was earning $750 a week keeping books. He sold furniture on the side and put his earnings into real estate. Today he is considered the city's largest property owner.

Entered Politics As Favor

He entered politics 12 years ago as a favor to a friend—Martin Behrman, who had been mayor from 1904 to 1920 and in 1924 was attempting a comeback. With Maestri directing his campaign, Behrman was elected.

Four years later a fiery young lawyer named Huey P. Long had just been elected governor. Between Long and Maestri developed a friendship probably closer than between Long and any of his other associates.

When a decision was to be made, "Colonel Bob" sat in the background at the conference of Long's lieutenants, appraised the situation from every angle and quietly passed his advice to "the Kingfish." Long respected Maestri's political judgment.

Succeeded Long

Long's death elevated Maestri to leadership of the powerful Louisiana machine. He is credited with making young Dick Leche governor and with ironing out differences that threatened the organization.
