

TALK COOLEY FOR GOVERNOR

Other Names Also Brought to Front for 1940 Race

Reflector Bureau, Sir Walter Hotel, Raleigh, Sept. 30.—Speculation as to whether or not Congressman Harold L. Cooley of the Fourth District will be a candidate for the Democratic nomination for Governor in 1940 and attempt to carry on the banner of liberalism with which Dr. Ralph W. McDonald attempted to march to victory in the Democratic primaries this past summer, is arousing considerable interest here despite the fact that the new Governor will not be elected for some 30 days yet.

It is also arousing speculation as to a number of other contests among those who are always trying to look into the political future of a state long famous for its long distance politics, since there are many who are more interested in trying to figure out who is going to run for this and that office four years hence than in the present election.

EUROPE FEELS SCARE OF WAR

Carolina Professors Discuss Foreign Situation

Chapel Hill, Sept. 30.—Europe is laboring under a pall of gloom, and people over there feel they are sitting on a keg of dynamite that may explode at any moment without warning, according to the views of two University of North Carolina professors who have recently returned from tours abroad.

Dr. Hugh Lefler, professor of history, who gave his impressions in a talk to the Chapel Hill Rotary Club last night, said that Belgium and Germany appear to be the most prosperous countries in Europe now and the most attractive for tourists.

Dr. J. Coriden Lyons of the Department of Romance Languages, who conducts groups of students to Europe every summer, favors Germany and England for travel.

They both left the same way about the French capital—that the traditionally gay Paris is "practically dead."

"Prices in Paris were sky high," said Dr. Lyons. "It costs about $5 a day for tourists to live decently. And instead of being as courteous as possible the Parisians seem to be disposed to gouge travellers."

"But they may not be so much to blame. An atmosphere of despondency pervades the French capital. The present Socialist French government, headed by Blum, is very unpopular. The Fascists and the Communists are striving with all their might to gain control. I don't believe the present government will last long and wouldn't be surprised to see the Fascists eventually in the saddle."

"At present the French don't seem to have a leader in whom they have confidence. They don't want war—at least they stoutly maintain they don't, but they have a feeling that it is imminent, that the embargo in Spain is bound to involve them sooner or later; and that if they escape that Hitler will be on their heels. Can you blame them for being so gloomy?"

"It seems a pity though that they can't keep a stiff upper lip and cater to tourists for their present attitude is hurting their foreign business badly."

Dr. Lefler sensed a better feeling between England and Germany than between England and Germany than between England and France.

"There is the strictest sort of censorship in Germany, and no one dare openly criticize the government," Dr. Lefler said.

As for those in Germany who criticize—well, there is a concentration camp not far from Berlin, and those who don't play ball with Hitler land there in a hurry, Dr. Lefler said. "And as for what becomes of them after they are imprisoned there—well, that's another state secret," Dr. Lefler said.

As an illustration of what may happen, Dr. Lefler told of an incident he learned about. A woman employed in a government controlled kodak plant took a vacation and on her return was questioned by her employers as to what she had seen or heard during the journey. She reported that she overheard two travellers criticize the government on the ground that the Germans were not getting enough butter. She was reprimanded severely because she did not attempt to secure the names of the two travellers and was fired from her job, Dr. Lefler said.

PUP SURVIVES 165-FOOT PLUNGE

Hurled from the Huey P. Long bridge at New Orleans into the Mississippi river 165 feet below, the spunky little dog fought the swift currents for 20 minutes until a tugboat rescued him. Hearing of the cruelty, Gov. Leche of Louisiana personally ordered the arrest of two men who threw the pup overboard. The little outcast was given a home by Mrs. Albert Gele, wife of the bridge foreman, who is holding Baby Gale. (Associated Press Photo)

Suggests Jail Sentence For All Drunken Drivers

Reflector Bureau, Sir Walter Hotel, Raleigh, Sept. 30.—Mandatory jail or road sentences for drunken drivers, for hit-and-run and for more aggravated types of reckless driving were recommended here today as the next step in curbing highway accidents and deaths by Ben Stroup, southernfield representative of the National Safety Council.

While state drivers' license laws and state highway patrols are helping greatly to reduce the number of accidents, the effectiveness of the patrols and license laws are being weakened by the failure of many of the courts to impose sentences heavy enough to act as deterrents, Stroup said. This statement was concurred in by Director Arthur Falk of the highway safety division of the Department of Revenue.

"Both highway patrolmen and city policemen know it is futile to arrest drivers for traffic violations if the judges in the courts are not in favor of the strict enforcement of the laws and continue to let them off with very light fines or suspended sentences," Stroup said. "I know of a case right here in your own state of North Carolina in which two pedestrians were killed under circumstances which would have justified the indictment of the driver for manslaughter, if my information is correct. Yet the driver was let off and not even indicted or tried for reckless driving. There are probably hundreds of other cases similar to this one."

"Accordingly, it would not surprise me to see a number of states enact laws this coming year making jail or road sentences mandatory in certain offenses, especially for drunken driving, hit-and-run driving and cases of reckless driving in which persons are seriously injured or killed. Such laws are the only way to insure adequate punishment of violators where judges become too easy or courts are dominated by politics."

The city of Louisville, Ky., now has a "nine and nineteen" law or ordinance which makes mandatory a sentence of nine days in jail and $19 costs in all cases of drunken driving, Stroup said. A rather prominent and wealthy woman was recently convicted under this ordinance, fought it through the U. S. Supreme court, where the ordinance was upheld and she had to serve her nine days in jail, Stroup said. Since then there has been very little drunken driving in Louisville, he said.

SCHOOL HEADS HOLD MEETING

Fifty Western Counties Represented at Session

By Staff Correspondent, Shelby, Sept. 27.—School superintendents from 50 western counties, accompanied by most of the chairmen of the county boards of education and by many of their school bus mechanics, are meeting here today with Lloyd Griffin, executive secretary of the State School Commission and his aides, to discuss school transportation costs and to exchange ideas on transportation and school bus maintenance problems.

The all day meeting opened at 11 o'clock this morning in the new Cleveland county school bus garage, recently constructed here with the assistance of the Works Progress Administration. This meeting was primarily for the county school bus mechanics and talks were made dealing with the best ways to save money in maintaining school buses, also on better housing of buses when they are not in use. It is expected that a number of other counties will soon build county garages for their buses, similar to the one here.

The entire delegation of superintendents, school board chairmen and mechanics were entertained at a luncheon at noon at which Governor-nominate Clyde R. Hoey, who lives here in Shelby, was the principal speaker. Other talks were made by Griffin and others of his staff, dealing with ways and means for securing more economical operation of the school buses.

"This is the second meeting of this sort we have held in the state this fall and we are confident that the cost of maintaining our school transportation system is going to be reduced thousands of dollars as a result of these conference meetings," Griffin said. "It also brings the superintendents together so they can exchange ideas and become better acquainted and better neighbors. These meetings are doing a lot of good."

SEVERAL UNITS SAVING MONEY

Reflector Bureau, Sir Walter Hotel, Raleigh, Sept. 30.—Twenty-one counties and 32 cities have either completed refunding operations or have carried them to the point where there is no longer any doubt as to whether they will be completed, State Treasurer Charles M. Johnson announced here today.

These refunding operations will save these 21 counties and 32 cities a total of $44,422,086 during the life of the bonds, which means they will have to pay the bondholders $44,422,086 less than they would if they had attempted to pay the original bond issues in full.

Of this amount, the counties will save $24,729,045 and the cities will save $19,693,041, Johnson pointed out.

These large savings have been made possible largely by the local government laws which have made it possible for counties, cities and towns to refund their indebtedness with the help of the Local Government Commission, of which Johnson is the executive head in addition to his office as State Treasurer, although he receives no salary or additional compensation as Director of Local Government.

"We are now working on refunding plans for a number of additional counties, cities and towns which will be completed and ready for submission to the bondholders in the near future," Johnson said. "These plans when approved will of course further increase the total savings which will accrue as the result of the refunding operations."

Before 1925 the state exercised no supervision over local governments and it was 1927 before the Legislature enacted the local government laws, requiring county and city governments to operate on the budget system, Johnson pointed out. It was not until 1931 that the Local Government Act was passed limiting the issuance of city and county bonds and providing that they must be sold through the Local Government Commission here.

The result has been that much lower interest rates have been obtained in the sale of local unit bond issues than ever before, Johnson said. The thing that has made so much refunding necessary was that so many units had sold bond issues before any of these laws were enacted and already had huge bonded debts, Johnson said.

First Church of Christ, Scientist "Reality" was the subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all Churches and Societies of Christ, Scientist, on Sunday, September 27.

The Golden Text was from I Corinthians 2:9. "Eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither have entered into the heart of man, the things which God hath prepared for them that love him."

Among the citations which comprised the Lesson-Sermon was the following from the Bible: "And he arose out of the synagogue, and entered into Simon's house. And Simon's wife's mother was taken with a great fever; and they besought him for her. And he stood over her, and rebuked the fever; and it left her: and immediately she arose, and ministered unto them." Luke 4:38, 39.

The Lesson-Sermon also included the following passage from the Christian Science textbook: "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy: "It is not well to imagine that Jesus demonstrated the divine power to heal only for a select number of people, since to all mankind and in every hour divine Love supplies all good. Jesus demonstrated the inability of corporeality, as well as the infinite ability of Spirit, thus helping erring human sense to flee from its own convictions and seek safety in divine Science. Reason, rightly directed, serves to correct the errors of corporeal sense; but sin, sickness and death will seem real (even as the experiences of the sleeping dream seem real) until the Science of man's eternal harmony breaks through illusion with the unbroken reality of scientific being." Talks To Parents

CHILDREN'S GIFTS

(By Brooke Peters Church)

Mrs. Jones chose presents for her friends with the utmost thought and care. To her mother she gave practical things because her mother preferred them; for her husband she chose books which he wanted; for her best friend she shopped about for hours, even days, in the search for the perfect gift.

Nothing would do but the right thing.

When, however, she bought presents for her children and her friends' children, she took the first thing that came to hand. It never occurred to her that children had definite wants and preferences, nor would she ever have thought such wants and preferences important had she known about them.

For example, to her a doll was a doll. That Molly got a boy doll when her heart was set on a girl, or a little doll when she wanted a big one, was to her beside the point. She simply did not use her imagination in choosing for the children, since it did not seem to her worth while. They took what they got and were expected to be thankful.

Such an attitude is both cruel and unfair to the children. They have no money with which to buy the things they want, but depend almost entirely on gifts. Mrs. Jones' mother and husband and friend can probably go out and satisfy their needs and desires; but Molly can have the doll of her dreams only if mother is thoughtful enough to remember to buy it for her.

To control so absolutely the fulfillment of a child's wishes is a great responsibility and one not to be lightly treated. Children's presents should certainly be a matter of thought and vital concern. In a

How's Your Health?

NOVEL TREATMENT OF MENTAL DISEASES

Two novel forms of treatment for certain types of mental diseases have recently aroused much interest and discussion. These are prolonged narcosis used in the treatment of what is termed manic-depressive psychosis, and insulin-shock in schizophrenia, or dementia praecox.

Both forms of treatment are still in the experimental stage. Time and further experience will establish whether they are of any value.

In neither manic-depressive psychosis, a condition in which the sufferer is at one time extremely agitated, and at another profoundly depressed, nor in schizophrenia, in which there is a dissolution of personality, is there any evident or demonstrable pathologic change in the nervous system adequate to account for the symptoms. The conditions are thought to be essentially functional disturbances. Whatever clinical findings distinguished these groups of patients from normal individuals are considered resultant rather than causes of their condition. How then are these patients treated in a manner essentially medicinal, the one by prolonged narcosis, the other by insulin shock?

The rationale advanced is as follows: In prolonged narcosis the patient, by means of drugs, is kept asleep, or at least quiet and at rest for long periods. During the narcosis there occurs a lessening of his emotional tension, and in consequence a correction of his faulty modes of thought and action. In a sense, the patient withdraws from his offending environment (from conscious or wakeful life) and gathers in his resources. This therapy is not unlike the common counsel "to sleep on it, and it will look less dark on the morrow."

Unfortunately, this treatment is not without its dangers, and in consequence has as yet only limited possibilities for application.

The insulin shock treatment for schizophrenia is indeed of heroic nature. Day after day the patient is put in danger of his life, by being given huge doses of insulin. This causes him to suffer profound physiologic disturbances.

The treatment follows an old principle employed in dealing with the mentally sick—namely to expose them to shock. The idea behind this seemingly brutal concept is to bring the patient back into contact with reality by provoking his self-defense responses by proffered insult or injury. In common language, it is an attempt to "bring them out of themselves."

The proponents of this form of treatment claim great results.

Another Med Course Scheduled Tomorrow

The second in the series of six postgraduate extension lectures in medicine will be delivered at Goldsboro on October 1 by Dr. Warren T. Vaughn, of Richmond, Va.

Dr. Vaughn's subject is "Allergy." He is editor-in-chief of The Journal of Laboratory and Clinical Medicine, Associate editor of The Journal of Allergy, and Executive Secretary of The Association for the Study of Allergy.

Eighty-six practicing physicians located in twelve eastern North Carolina counties have enrolled for the course. Dr. Charles A. Woodward, of Wilson, representing the committee on organization of Johnson and Wilson counties, will preside at the session this week. The University of North Carolina Medical School and Extension Division are conducting the course.

The meeting Thursday will start with a dinner at the Hotel Goldsboro at 7 o'clock.

HAS PLAN FOR BETTER ROADS

Proposal Includes No Increase in Debt Service

Reflector Bureau, Sir Walter Hoop.

By J. C. BASKERVILLE

Raleigh, Sept. 29—If the state wants more and better roads, it can have them without increasing taxes by issuing some new highway bonds to provide for the rebuilding and modernization of worn out and obsolete roads. State Treasurer Charles M. Johnston told the members of the Winston-Salem Junior Chamber of Commerce last night.

But if the state wants its gasoline and automobile taxes reduced more than it wants additional highways and would rather have older and worse roads and less taxes, it can easily get the latter by insisting upon a reduction in automobile taxes, Johnston pointed out.

State Treasurer Johnston did not express an opinion in favor of either plan and did not advocate either a bond issue for more highways or any reduction in present highway taxes. He merely presented the facts dealing with both proposals and let his listeners reach their own conclusions. But he did make the following points clear:

1. That the present and future highway revenue from motorvehicle and gasoline taxes is not sufficient to make possible any material amount of new highway construction, with the result that patching of old highways by maintenance forces is all that can be expected.

2. That the debt service requirements for the highway bonds are decreasing rapidly and will decrease from about $9,000,000 this year to $6,500,000 by 1949.

3. That a new highway bond issue sufficient to rebuild and modernize the more important stretches of worn out or inadequate state highways could be issued and these roads rebuilt at once, without increasing taxes.

4. That such a step would reduce the maintenance cost on state highways, and make more of the maintenance money available for more work and betterments on secondary and county highways.

Mr. Johnston also listed a number of objections voiced by those who opposed an additional bond issue, who maintain:

1. That the state should not issue any more bonds until the present ones have been paid.

2. That it would be better for the state to get along without any new roads and fewer roads, if necessary, rather than increase the state debt any more.

3. That instead of building new roads, the difference should be given back to the road users in the form of reduced taxes.

"Those who favor the bond issue to modernize and rebuild present worn out roads, maintain that it would be real economy in the long run, however," Johnston said. "They maintain that the present highway situation is similar to the man who owned a house that needed a new roof, fresh paint and additional plumbing, but who did not have it all paid for and hence could only spend a little at a time to make the most essential repairs, since the highway commission is now not able to do more than patch and maintain the roads where they have actually gone to pieces. Those advocates of the bond issue maintain the man with the house would be better off if he would borrow enough money to put his house in first class condition, and then pay this loan off gradually, along with the balance due on his house, and this have a house suitable to his needs. Likewise they maintain it would be good business sense and sound economy for the state to issue a small bond issue, say of $25,000, to modernize the state highway system and pay off this amount along with the other bonds not yet retired, especially since it can be done without increasing taxes or debt service requirements."

The state's total highway indebtedness has now been reduced to only $88,316,881, Johnston said, taking into consideration the $14,288,220 in the sinking fund at the present time. He pointed out that a new bond issue could be issued for only 15 years instead of 30 and thus sold at a very low rate of interest, probably for less than 3 per cent, also that the state's financial condition was so favorable now that it could sell a bloc of bonds at a lower rate than in many years. In view of the urgent demand for more roads and increased highway expenditures from every section of the state, Johnston said he thought the proposal was "worthy of thoughtful and careful consideration."

Another Question About CARDUI

MOTHERS RECOMMEND IT "Why do so many MOTHERS recommend Cardui to their daughters?"

Isn't it but natural that any good mother should tell her daughters about Cardui if the mother herself felt that she had been benefited by this medicine?

It is impressive that so many special North Carolina or Southern women report having taken Cardui on the advice of their mothers.

Cardui has been found to benefit women when weakened by malnutrition (poor nourishment); and it helps to relieve much discomfort at monthly periods.

Thousands of women testify Cardui helped them. Of course, if it does not help you, consult a physician.—(Adv.)

PITT COUNTY MUST TAKE THE LEAD

A drive has been started in this county by the Farm Bureau Federation to gain support of the business houses in order that the organization might more effectively wage its fight for state and national legislation in behalf of the tobacco farmers of this section. With Pitt County being the largest tobacco producing county in the world and dependent to a great extent upon tobacco production, it is right that this county should take the lead in procuring compact legislation or other legislation that would control the production of tobacco and offer protection to the industry. If the movement is to succeed in this state and nationally it must have the full support of citizens and business houses of this county. Other counties and states are waiting to see what Pitt County is going to do. If Pitt County gets solidly behind the movement other counties and the counties of the other states will follow but if the movement falls down here there will be no crop control which means low prices and financial disaster for the farmers and the section in the future. Pitt County business men should give their support to this organization that is endeavoring to get the crop control program across.

THE NATIONAL WHIRLIGIG

(Continued from Page One) story. Both camps were willing to keep it dark. Fact is that President Roosevelt was not invited to address or review the boys of '61. It may have been an oversight but talking among ourselves, the ex-soldiers expressed bitterness—at least regret—over the pension-pruning economy act of 1933. The 300-odd remnants of Grant's command who showed up were mostly Republican. Sunflowers were almost as numerous as war medals. FDR's friends not in the know privately mourned his non-appearance. They figured it as a serious political mistake not to be on hand. Note: 1861-1865 scars still show. The Grand Army downed a proposal to erect a statue to Robert E. Lee in Arlington cemetery. Some wanted to know if Secretary Early was any relation to Jubal Early, the famed Confederate cavalryman. He is.

DOUBTFUL: Unemployment has become such a ticklish topic that only the boldest economists and politicians will touch it with a ten-foot pencil. FDR himself banned publication of government estimates. Secretary Perkins publicizes reemployment gains, but her department bows out politely when asked for negative numbers. The National Industrial Conference Board censured its estimators after the March report. Their figures always fell several million below anti-New Dealers' claims that 12,000,000 were walking the streets, despite Rooseveltian recovery. Inez duPont of the Liberty League and E. Kent Hubbard of the National Association of Manufacturers happen to be Board directors.

The American Federation of Labor still makes computations, but their totals run too high to suit the government's private calculators. As another example of diplomatic handling in this issue, Mr. Roosevelt listens blandly to suggestions for a census of idle hands. CUTS: The inside reason for official secrecy is that relief rolls have mounted in the face of industrial improvement. Private agencies shush-shush the subject for fear the reemployment record may offset their attack on the New Deal. It's a dual dilemma. The best conservative and confidential estimate lists the total of jobs—at slightly more than 9,000,000 for September. It was 9,400,000 during August. These same charts reached an all-time unemployment high in March of 1933, when they placed the out-of-work at 15,000,000. Though prediction is perilous the prophets hazard a guess that the figure will slide to 6,000,000 by next Spring if the present pick-up persists. On that basis it is believed the number living off WPA will sag to about 1,500,000 as against 3,000,000 now. The smaller total would represent an army of 3,000,000 receiving federal funds for the reason that a family goes off relief as soon as a single member obtains work

The Wrong Murderer

By HUGH CLEVELY

SYNOPSIS: Terence Mahony has rescued Elsa Little and Ruth Fraser from Ambrose Lawson's gang of kidnapers. The difficulty about capturing Lawson is that Terence cannot prove anything; more to his annoyance, he knows Lawson murdered Elsa Little, and yet he finds himself suspected. It is being questioned by Inspector Kennedy, and to add to his discomfort, he finds that Elsa herself believes him guilty. Lawson is snuggled up to the proceedings.

Chapter 15 RUTH AGAIN

THERE was another brief pause. Elsa had been growing restless during this process of questions and answers. It seemed to her to be a flagrant injustice that Mahony should be standing there so very much alive, and with such an unworried air, when he had just killed her uncle.

He was guilty; he ought to be made to suffer for it, and the sooner the better. "What are you wasting time for?" she demanded wildly. "You know he did it. Why don't you take him to prison?"

Her vindictiveness stung Mahony again. "Miss Little," he said very earnestly, "I swear on my honor that I did not kill your uncle. Won't you try to believe me?"

It was unlike Mahony to speak in that fashion. He was not the kind of man who went about swearing things on his honor. But he wished desperately to convince Elsa that he was innocent.

He did not convince her. His outburst only seemed to her to be evidence of his consummate hypocrisy. "Honor!" she exclaimed scornfully. "What does a creature like you know of honor? Do you think I don't realize that all the things you told the inspector about your movements last night were lies? I know it was your voice I heard in the study last night when my uncle was killed. I know you were there and that you killed him."

"I tell you I didn't kill him," said Mahony vehemently. "There was nothing he could do. He shrugged his shoulders slightly. What was the good of going on arguing?"

Lawson turned aside and bustled himself lighting a cigaret. He had savored this last bit of by-play with all the enjoyment of a connoisseur of the theater enjoying a well-acted scene from an amusing play. The inspector was frowning slightly. As yet he had not quite made up his mind what he was going to do. He rather thought that he was going to detain Mahony on suspicion. He was just about to put these intentions into effect when the door of the room opened, and the maid's voice announced: "Miss Fraser to see you, Miss."

Ruth Fraser entered the room. "RUTH'S sudden appearance is quite easily accounted for. She awakened late that morning after a good sleep, and her breakfast was brought to her in bed. While she was breakfasting, her guardian entered her room to see her.

"Good morning, my dear," he said. "I just looked in to remind you that you'd better fix up your story about staying with an old school friend pretty quickly. As soon as you've done it I must inform the police that you have returned."

"I'll do it now," said Ruth. There was a telephone by her bedside, and she lifted the receiver and called a number in Sussex. The number she rang belonged to a girl named Anne Dowson, with whom she had been at school. Anne was a wild, eccentric, good-natured girl, who lived in a tiny cottage on the edge of nowhere and painted landscapes for a living.

"Hello, Anne," said Ruth. "Look here, old hag, if anybody asks, can you tell them that I've been staying with you for the last three or four days? Do you mind?"

"De-lighted, I'm shore," replied Anne. "But if anybody does want to ask, they'll have to do it pretty quickly, because I'm off to Berlin for a show of pictures today. I don't suppose you'll mind that, though."

"That's grand," said Ruth. "Thanks ever so much. Anne. How are the landscapes going these days?"

"They've gone," answered Anne, who had rather a literal mind. "They went a fortnight ago. The show starts tomorrow."

"Oh, you're going to a show of your own pictures, are you?" said Ruth. "That's good. But what I really meant was, how is art going? Are you selling lots of stuff, and making a heap of money?"

"I'm hanged if I know," answered Anne. "Incidentally, I can hear my hired car stopping outside. So I must fly. Good-bye, my pet. Be careful."

Temporarily, tomorrow, the situation eases for Mahony.

Ruth hung up the receiver, laughing. Anne was quite mad, but a terribly good sort. She was glad she had fixed that up all right. She told her guardian what she had arranged, and went on with her breakfast. The previous night she had been much too tired to bother much about the whys and wherefores of things; her only curiosity had been about the identity of her rescuer.

This morning, after a good sleep, that curiosity was intensified, and added to it was a curiosity about the rest of the story. Mysterious things had been happening to her. Not many girls of her age had had such adventures.

The one fly in the ointment of her bliss was the fact that she did not know her rescuer's name. That did not suit her at all. One thing she had to work on—that he had been friendly with Billy Ross. In that case, other friends of Billy would probably know him. Elsa Little, for instance, would probably know him; there was no much about Billy that she didn't know. Ruth decided to go to see Elsa, describe Mahony to her, and try to find out who he was.

After breakfast she drove round to Elsa's house in her big cream-colored sports car. The maid who admitted her knew her as a frequent visitor, and showed her at once into the drawing-room, where Elsa, Mahony, Lawson, and the two detectives were assembled.

For a moment she was astonished; she had not expected to find all these people present. But her astonishment was swallowed by her delight in meeting Mahony there.

"HALLO, Elsa," she said. She turned to Mahony and smiled; her eyes sparkled with mischief. "Hallo," she said casually, "fancy meeting you."

Inwardly she was purring with glee. Mahony had said that they would not meet; she had been quite determined to prove him wrong; and by the most incredible good luck she had succeeded first shot. She could not resist the temptation to rub it in a little.

She looked at him, smiling. He had no answering smile for her. Nor had Elsa. Then, for the first time, she perceived that something was definitely wrong. Her glance travelled round the solemn circle of the people in the room.

Lawson was staring at her with an expression of the utmost bewilderment on his face, as if he could hardly believe that she was real. Nobody had yet told him of her rescue from the house near Watford; her presence in the room was his first intimation of it.

"What's the matter with all of you?" she asked. "Why are you all looking at me as if I'd come out without any clothes on? What's wrong?"

For a moment nobody answered. Then Inspector Kennedy replied to her. "I'm sorry to have to tell you that Mr. Little, Miss Little's uncle, was murdered last night."

"Murdered!" Ruth was horrified. "How... how dreadful. Elsa... I'm terribly sorry to hear it. Is there anything I can do? Have they... have they caught the man who did it?"

Elsa made a little gesture with her hand indicating Mahony. "That man did it," she answered stonily. "He came in here late last night and stabbed my uncle in the back."

"I... I don't believe it," said Ruth instantly. "He couldn't have done it. He was with me nearly all last night."

Everyone except Mahony stared at her in a shocked fashion. Mahony scowled ferociously at her. Was this fool girl, he wondered, going to spill all the blasted beans, when he had particularly asked her to keep her mouth shut?

Ruth guessed what he was thinking; she went on hastily: "He came down into the country, in his car, to fetch me from my friend's cottage. I've been staying with a friend named Anne Dowson in a cottage near Harfield, in Sussex. I asked him if he'd come down and give me a lift back to town, and he came."

"I am Inspector Kennedy, of the Criminal Investigation Department, and I am investigating the murder of Mr. Little," said Inspector Kennedy. "May I ask your name?"

"My name is Ruth Fraser," answered Ruth. "Aren't you the girl who has been missing from home for several days?" he went on.

"Yes," she admitted. "But that was all a false alarm."

Temporarily, tomorrow, the situation eases for Mahony.

The other 3,000,000 jobless would consist of the inefficient who will be the last to be rehired. In that event the problem becomes more manageable, appropriations can be cut and the next President can sleep nights.

COMMUNISM: Several conferees at the recent Hyde Park powwow volunteered a warning that the "red menace" raised by a "notorious publisher" and advertised by the White House disclaimer might sweep all other issues into the political dustbin. They likened it to the League in 1920, LaPollette, in 1924, religion in 1928, depression in 1932.

They noted that it had already made pals of three ancient enemies—Al Smith, Bishop Cannon, Publisher Hearst—thus revealing its inflammable possibilities. They argued that it may alienate three vast groups—Catholics, American Legionnaires, the white-collar class. The world alignment of Fascism versus Communism was high-lighted as an ideal backdrop for G. O. P. alarm-viewers.

Though proposals for combatting the cry of "communism in America" were suggested, no definite decision sprouted. But FDR's plan to swing through New England and other seaboard states on an intensive speaking tour indicates that the pessimists proved their point. The President will seek to allay both fears and prejudices in several speeches.

NEW YORK ORGANIZERS: G. O. P. National chairman John D. M. Hamilton is credited by keen New York observers with introducing one of the smartest innovations in political organization work that has been tried in years.

Mr. Hamilton has violated political tradition by hiring several professional organizers. These men are not politicians at all. They make a regular business of organizing charity drives for funds, etc., and they know far more about setting up efficient clubs and committees than patronage appointees could possibly know. Their specific assignment is to organize active Landon-Knox clubs in various sections of the country and they are doing very well at it—especially in the Middle West. The East is lagging.

The organizers have particular instructions to rope in all the "Jefferson Democrats" they can for prominent participation. To make it easier, the groups are kept entirely separate from existing G. O. P. organizations and are referred to always as Landon or Landon-Knox clubs. The word "Republican" is taboo in this branch of party work.

STRIDES: Some politicians are annoyed at Mr. Hamilton because he has hired experienced outsiders for such jobs instead of rewarding the faithful with them as per custom. But astute New Yorkers who are more concerned with a Landon victory than with purely partisan considerations agree that the chairman's unorthodox methods are getting results. Organizers trained to approach the ranking citizens in a community are enlisting the active cooperation of business and social leaders who could never in the world be reached by the usual type of political lieutenant or non-com.

Financial and industrial chiefs who were sharply critical of Hamilton's organizing abilities a month ago have changed their tune. Recent contacts convince them that national headquarters has made enormous strides in the direction of greater efficiency, even though many loose ends still remain.

TRADITION: Outward indications are that the G. O. P. has captured the American Legion bag and baggage. Harry W. Colmery—elected the Legion's new National Commander by acclamation—is a Topeka Republican. The setup looks like a natural for Landon's benefit. But, as so often happens, appearances are wide of the mark.

The choice of Colmery should not be construed as a Legion endorsement of Landon in any sense. The new National Commander—like his predecessor Ray Murphy—angled for the job several years before it came his way. In fact he was so eager for it that he turned down a good chance to become the Republican candidate for Governor of Kansas this year. He was a cinch to get the command months before Landon was even nominated.

Nor will Colmery seek to exploit his new office to help his fellow Topenkan. It would probably do Mr. Landon more harm than good if he did. Many Legionnaires would be quick to resent any official departure from non-partisan tradition.

CONTROL: Leading New York bankers are delighted that this year's convention of the American Bankers Association was kept free of hot-headed political recriminations. The toughest issues of federal credit and federal regulation were handled with diplomatic delicacy—in marked contrast to the session at New Orleans a year ago.

Because of the sudden (and authentic) illness of Jesse Jones, the administration had no spokesman at the convention. But Mr. Jones himself—noted for his frankness at the convention. B. A. gatherings—could hardly have urged adaptation to changing conditions upon the bankers more forcefully than did their own former president—Rudolph Hecht of New Orleans.

Most financial leaders had hoped for an atmosphere of calm and dignified discussion at San Francisco, but feared that some of the more feverish anti-New Dealers could not be restrained. The outgoing and incoming presidents of the organization—Robert V. Fleming of Washington and Tom K. Smith of St. Louis—are given major credit for keeping everything so beautiful

DIFFICULT: Astute New Yorkers are convinced that improved employment conditions in Maryland—as shown in figures compiled by the Commissioner of Labor and Statistics in Baltimore—have more than a casual bearing on the pro-Roosevelt indications of the Maryland poll conducted by the Baltimore Sunpapers.

Comparing August 1936 with the same month in 1935, employment gains are recorded for the state of 6 per cent in retail department stores, 11.7 per cent in retail limited-price stores, 9 per cent in wholesale trade, 51.1 per cent in building construction (not including public works), 19.5 per cent in hotels and 10.6 per cent in manufacturing industries. Total payrolls in the same categories rose respectively 9.1 per cent, 10.2 per cent, 10 per cent, 33.8 per cent, 16.4 per cent and 19.6 per cent. Gains in the Baltimore industrial area closely paralleled those for the whole state.

Comment runs that it is very difficult to offset the political appeal of more jobs and more money. (Copyright McClure Newspaper Syndicate)

LOCAL ELEVEN PLAYS FRIDAY

High School Football Team To Meet New Bern Team

By JAMES WHITFIELD
The football eleven of the Greenville high school is in perfect readiness for their first game of the season—a tilt with the New Bern Bears, which takes place at Third street stadium here Friday afternoon at 3 o'clock.

Herman Dilly, head coach at the local high school, assisted by Leroy Bloomingsdale, have been putting the gridsters through a series of daily workouts, and the boys have moulded themselves into excellent football material.

The team is in unusually good condition with the exception of Edward Conway and Thomas (Parson) Parrish. Conway is slated as a regular tackle, but due to his illness this week, will not participate in the New Bern game. Parrish sprained a finger during practice last week that may result in his staying out of the game Friday.

When the locals come in contact with the visitors, they will be facing some stiff competition. Last week the Bears defeated the strong Buford eleven by a 33-0 score.

Both the Greenville and New Bern teams can be considered veterans and New Bern with a one-game advantage over the Greensies, will more than likely give the locals a good battle. The winner, however, will be determined on Friday when the teams clash.

The probable lineup for the opener includes George Lautares, left end; Robert Earle Clark, left tackle; Wayland Tucker, left guard; J. A. Joyner, center; Jamie Wells right guard; Earl Kittrell, right tackle; Howard Hodges, right end; Bernice Ellers, quarterback; Car Pierce, right half; Thomas (Parson) Parrish, left half; and Harold Forbes, full back.

When the Greenville high school band, which will furnish the music, starts to play, Norman (Peg) Fleming, Melton Wilson, Jack Moyr, Du-Bose Simpson, Jack Forbes, and Kenneth Henderson will be pulling at the splinters on the bench. However, Coach Dilly has expressed the opinion that these boys probably will be given a chance to do their stuff some time during the game.

LINK POLITICS WITH GRIDIRON

Contests May Have Bearing on Graham Plan Future

Raleigh, Sept. 30.—The outcome of the football games last week end and again this coming Saturday involving the University of North Carolina and State College, may have considerable political significance as well as sports significance, observers here are pointing out, in that they mean the beginning of the end of "Graham Plan."

The defeat of State College by Davidson last Saturday night and the poor showing made by the Carolina team against Wake Forest in Charlotte, in which Wake Forest led Carolina 7 to 0 until the last quarter when Carolina finally managed to push over two touchdowns, has not generated any great enthusiasm in the breasts of Carolina and State Alumni or engendered any new love for President Frank P. Graham's idealistic plan, to "purify" football and eliminate the subsidization of players, many observers here are convinced.

When the quarter-by-quarter results of the Wake Forest-Carolina game were announced at the Duke-Durham game in Durham, there was a roar of both approval and derision in the stands, while many shouted "How's that for the Graham plan?" One fan pointed out that before the Graham Plan ever went into effect in the state, three of the outstanding players on the Duke team this year had planned to go to State College, and two had rooms reserved there, but were offered better inducements to go to Duke, so went there instead, because of the principle of the "Graham Plan" and opposition to helping football men at Carolina and State.

Unless Carolina and State show much better form from now on and can win more games, there is every reason to believe that displeased alumni will make an effort in the coming general assembly to so reshuffle the University Trustees as to bring about a majority against President Graham and his "purity in football" plan, many here readily agree. There is already widespread dissatisfaction with Coach "Hunk" Anderson here at State and the new coach at Chapel Hill, Ray Wolf, among the alumni of both institutions, as well as with the Graham Plan, as usually the case when teams do not make a good showing.

North Worth, Tex. (AP)—Little Bobby Wilson, Southern Methodist 1935 all-American back, has what it takes in a trunk uniform, too. In a trunk and field meet here the best legs was almost 23 feet. Bobby took out his handkerchief and placed it at 23 feet from the landmark spot. "That's where I scoot hit," he murmured. And he did, to win first!

LUCKY YANKEES

By PAP

SPORT SLANTS

For weeks—ever since the Yankees have had the American League pennant won—Pat Malone dreamed of starting a game in the World Series between the Giants and his teammates. "Old Blub" has been saying over and over again that he can lick the Giants.

Malone is 34 years old and his chances are gone for getting into the series as a starting pitcher. He wants to score at least one Series victory before he hangs up his glove. His record up to this year shows only a pair of defeats. He had a fling at the Athletics in 1928 as a member of the Cub pitching staff, and tried again in 1932 when Chicago hooked up with the Yankees, but lady luck refused each time to smile on him.

Pat believes that the success which eluded him as a National leaguer is due to come to him now that he is pitching for the American league entry. He feels that his knowledge of the Giants gained while working against them in National league championship tilts, gives him a decided edge over his fellow moundmen of the Yanks.

Many Left Stranded.
At that, Malone has showed plenty of stuff and courage in winning a dozen games for the '36 Yankees. His recent triumph over the Philadelphia Athletics indicated that he can be counted on to give a pretty good account of himself. His main assets are experience and control. He makes no effort to strike out the batters. His plan is to let them hit the ball—but to make them hit it where he wants them to. Plenty of men get on base when Pat is twirling, but few score.

Malone is grateful to Manager Joe McCarthy for giving him a chance with the Yankees after the Cubs had traded him to St. Louis for Jim O'Dea. There is just one more favor that Pat asks of McCarthy—he wants to start a Series game. It might not be such a bad idea. Malone has done pretty well by McCarthy as a relief hurler, as well as in the '36 games he was elected to start.

Manager Joe McCarthy, like Malone, has had experience in both major leagues. And, strangely enough, like Malone, McCarthy was with the Cubs in the National before coming to the Yankees in the junior circuit.

The Cubs signed McCarthy as manager after his Louisville team had won the American association pennant in 1925. He led the Chicago team to a pennant in 1929 but went down to defeat before the Athletics. His failure to win that Series had much to do with his departure from Chicago in September of the following year. A month after he resigned from his post with the Cubs, McCarthy signed a 9-year contract with the New York Yankees. He had the satisfaction of leading his Yankees against the Cubs in the 1932 World Series. To make his revenge complete, McCarthy saw Ruth, Gehrig, Lazzeri and company polish off his former charges in four straight games.

Mark Koenig, the Giants' utility infielder, is another who has seen World Series duty in both major leagues. Mark was a member of the Yankees pennant-winning teams of 1926, '27 and '28. He drifted about an eternally wound up with the Mission club of the Pacific coast league. In July of 1932 the Chicago Cubs purchased him to plug a hole in their infield and Mark materially helped the Cubs win the pennant that year. He faced his old team-
