Talks To Parents

BREACH OF FAITH
(By Brooke Peters Church)
One of the fundamental rules of polite society is that letters and diaries are private property, never to be read by outsiders, whether friend or family, without the permission of the owner.

Parents who would be scrupulously honest about such prying into the affairs of their friends or even of each other, are very apt to make an exception in the case of their children. They will read anything the child has, no matter how private the child considers it. Diaries market private, or Please Keep out letters carefully stowed out of sight or locked away, are not safe from mother's inquisitive eyes. The mother excuses herself on the grounds that she must know what the child is thinking and doing. If she could she would probably take out the child's brain and go over its contents.

She gains nothing for her pains. In fact, she loses. For if the child ever learns of her inroads on his privacy, he will take to hiding his belongings more carefully than ever before, or see to it that there are no secrets to hide. His most treasured thoughts and confidences which he would have given to his mother he keeps to himself.

That a child is at the mercy of his parents does not make him their property. He is a separate individual with a right to his own thoughts and points of view. Necessarily these will diverge from his parents, and the more if his parents try to force his confidence.

His correspondence and his diaries are just as exclusively his as if he were an adult, and to pry into them is an unpardonable breach of faith. No child can be expected to confide in or trust a father or mother who would be guilty of such dishonorable conduct.

Swing Music and Street Music
The battle that is being waged between "swing" music, as featured by Benny Goodman, and "sweet" music, as expressed by Jack Denny will be brought to North Carolina October 19 when Denny and his broadcasting orchestra play for a concert at East Carolina Teachers College in the Wright Auditorium.

Denny was among the first orchestra directors to feature soft music and he has carried his campaign for the smoother, more hitting melodies into the strong-holds of the elect in the United States and Canada.

After having played at the Astor Roof, Denny's first real triumph came when he was engaged by the Mount Royal Hotel in Montreal, where he remained for more than five years, making his orchestra famous with radio listeners everywhere.

Since playing at the Mount Royal Hotel, Denny has played at the Waldorf-Astoria, the Pennsylvania, and the Biltmore Hotels in New York, and at the Stater in Boston, where he broke all attendance records.

Cotton Fabric Tried on Road Construction

Raleigh, Oct. 15.—Approximately 6,500 bales of cotton were used in experimental highway construction during the past summer, according to a report from the U. S. Department of Agriculture received by Dean I. O. Schaub, of State College.

The use of cotton fabric as a binder in bituminous-surfaced roads and as a mat for curing concrete is being developed and encouraged by the Department of Agriculture and N. C. State College to find new markets for the South's cotton crop.

As a binder, the fabric is designed to reinforce secondary, or farm-to-market roads, where heavy trucking and seasonal climatic conditions cause immense seasonal repair bills the dean said.

In the experimental work, sections of road have been laid with three types of fabric binders and without fabric to determine the comparative cost and practicability of this method of road construction, he stated, and early reports on this reason's work justify the findings in preliminary tests.

AMENDMENTS FACING FIGHT

Proposed Constitutional Changes to Have Opposition

Reflector Bureau, Sir Walter Hotel.

By J. C. BASKERVILL
Raleigh, Oct. 15.—The campaign for the adoption of the five proposed new amendments to the Constitution is running into some heavy seas and meeting with considerably more opposition than had been anticipated.

The result is that there is much more doubt as to the outcome of the vote on these amendments in the general election November 3 than had been anticipated, especially since the motto of the voters in past elections in which constitutional amendments have been submitted has been "When in doubt, vote 'No.'"

The North Carolina Association of County Commissioners is definitely opposed to all five amendments in general and especially to the one which would allow a homestead exemption of $1,000 while the North Carolina League of Municipalities also is definitely opposed to this amendment and only lukewarm towards the others.

Indications now are that most of the members of the North Carolina Education Association, regarded by many as the most powerful political organization in the state, will "go down the line" against both the homestead amendment and the debt limitation amendment because of the signed article in the October number of "North Carolina Education," monthly publication of the N. C. Education Association, by Julie B. Warren its secretary, in which he brands both of these amendments as dangerous and declares that in his opinion these amendments should not pass.

Another thing which is regarded as endangering all the amendments and one in particular, is the fact that out of the five amendments the State Bar Association singled out only one—the one which proposes to increase the membership of the State Supreme Court from five to seven justices. The fact that the lawyers of the state are whooping it up only for the amendment which would provide two more jobs for two more lawyers at $8,000 a year is not causing the rank and file of voters to view this amendment with much favor, according to reports being heard in political circles here.

Some of those who have been over the state talking with the voters and who know the antipathy which exists towards them in many sections maintain that the lawyers would have been wiser to plug for all the amendments instead of merely this one. A good many think the mere fact that the Bar Association has singled it out of the five as the only one in which they are interested, means that it will be defeated if none of the others are, despite the fact that those who really know about the situation agree there is real and urgent need for two more Supreme Court justices.

Nor is the outlook bright for the amendment providing for the $1,000 homestead exemption, despite the fact that it is regarded as having a wider appeal to home and property owners than any other. For while the Association of County Commissioners is not conducting a blatant campaign against this amendment it is conducting a very persistent and insistent war upon it with the assistance of the N. C. League of Municipalities. They have been quietly passing out the ward for weeks that if this amendment carries it will increase taxes from 25 to 50 per cent above what they now are because of the heavy reduction of valuations which would result.

They maintain that the $1,000 exemption would not help either the small or large property owners since the increase in the tax rates, which would result would amount to as much, if not more, than the decrease in the valuation. They further maintain that it might make it impossible for the counties, cities and towns to raise enough revenue to maintain their necessary activities, under the limit imposed for taxes by the constitution, also that it might seriously hamper the public schools, by limiting the taxes that could be imposed for school purposes.

It is this angle of the opposition to the homestead amendment which particularly disturbs Secretary Warren of the N. C. Education Association and the 20,000 or more school teachers which are members of it. Warren maintains that if the homestead amendment should pass, it would probably mean the end of supplementary taxes for school and hence the end of any further increases in teachers salaries from local taxation.

So while Dr. Clarence Poe and his committee for the constitutional amendments beat their drums in favor of their adoption, seasoned political observers think the outlook is not so bright for their adoption.

ness with the United States, exports and imports. Russian credit is high just now. By filling its gentleman's agreement to purchase at least $30,000,000 in goods last year Russia has no difficulty in obtaining "most favored nation" treatment in all trade agreements made by this country. Under the Belgian agreement Russia sends in linen goods at reduced duty, and manganese ore at reduced tariffs under the Brazilian pact.

SECURITY: As the time approaches for taxation of workers as well as employers to build up the social security fund, many signs of determined protests are visible. Agents of the Social Security Board visiting employers are meeting with rebuffs.

Flaws in the social security act call for amendment by Congress. This is admitted on all sides. The nature of the amendments will depend upon the outcome of the election. Neither Candidate Roosevelt nor Candidate Landon has defined his program.

Unless amended, the social security act will be tested in the courts on several constitutional grounds. The hope that the act will be drastically reworked down as to taxes is expressed throughout the industry.

DOUBTFUL: Secretary Wallace is calling in farm leaders—whatever that may mean—and real dirt farmers to talk over crop insurance. Statistical sharps in the Department of Agriculture have bites and bushes of figures applying to cotton and wheat. Mr. Wallace suggests that perhaps it would be best to start with these crops in testing out insurance.

With nature pouring out big surpluses one year and drying up the crops the next, Mr. Wallace says it will be impracticable to apply crop insurance without controlling production. Nature looks after underproduction by drought, regardless of laws. So the plan of federal control is reduced to the problem of overproduction.

Some of the farmers already in town have reached the conclusion that "control" by man is just out of the question. Nature interferes in both directions, they say, so that farmers, with the best will in the world for cooperation, don't know whether they will overproduce or not.

DELAY: Behind the scenes there is much skepticism as to crop insurance. To put it into operation would call for abandonment of other methods of farm relief. Congress may block any scrapping of laws that are sending out real cash already, with more in sight.

With Roosevelt re-elected, one kind of overhauling of farm relief would be proposed, and with Landon in the saddle, another kind of relief. Some strong men in Congress think they know a thing or two themselves. Much will depend upon the complexion of the 75th Congress. A heavy increase of G. O. P. House members would raise hot with a Roosevelt program, and a Democratic House would try to block Landon's farm program, or amend it out of shape.

Men experienced in the ways of Congress look for long delay in framing any farm program, whoever the occupant of the White House may be.

New York
 By JAMES McMULLIN

TRY: Despite continued talk of peace between the American Federation of Labor and the Committee for Industrial Organization, there is in fact only one possibility of peace. That would be for the Federation executive council to rescind its suspension order against ten of the twelve unions affiliated with the Committee as proposed by the Hat, Cap and Millinery Workers Union.

It is true that the key leaders on both sides, even including John Lewis himself, have declared themselves in favor of reconciliation. But unless the council can bring itself to make this concession there will be nothing doing. In return, the C. I. O. chiefs might cooperate to save the council's face by withdrawing their allegation that it exceeded its authority in ordering the suspension. But in essence that would be swapping shadow for substance.

The point is that, with the suspension order withdrawn, there can be no question about the right of the C. I. O. unions to be represented at the regular Federation convention next month. In that case they will show up in force and try to take command of the Federation by majority vote. They privately hope to pick up enough supporters among hitherto neutral unions to do this.

DOMINATE: If that happened the Federation would again be a unified organization, but with an entirely new leadership. Bill Green and the craft union boys would be relegated to back seats. The latter must really decide whether they prefer to play second fiddle in a full orchestra or direct a minor piece of one.

There is no doubt that responsible chiefs on both sides sincerely want to heal the split. It has already become painfully apparent that organized labor's civil war is a sweet break for open shop employers. But no agreement is possible at this stage without John Lewis's consent and it is a safe bet that he will not compromise the principle of industrial unionization in mass production industries.

If a solution is reached and if the Federation officially takes over the job of organizing the steel industry, it's diamonds to dried apples that C. I. O. men will dominate the committee in charge of the work.

WISER: The market position of wealthy investors is an important factor in keeping the price of certain stocks at high levels in the teeth of earnings reports which apparently fail to justify current quotations.

The capital gains tax is the villain (or hero) of the piece. People in the higher income brackets simply cannot afford to take profits, especially when there seems to be reasonable hope that the hated levy will be repealed before very long. Consequently a normal source of stock offerings is choked off and demand overbalances supply. The effect of this is accentuated when there is a relatively small floating supply of a given issue. Douglas Aircraft is a good sample. This stock was a favorite of wealthy purchasers when the price ranged from 18 to 40. These stockholders find it wiser to retain their holdings rather than sell now and have to hand over a large slice of their profits to Uncle Sam. Consequently a disappointing earnings report didn't bring much of a reaction.

POWER: The outlook for utilities is steadily improving. In almost all the major systems, electric power consumption is running from 20 to 30 per cent higher than the peaks attained in 1923 and 1930. Earnings are correspondingly strong despite added taxes and threats of government competition.

Regardless of how the election turns out, New York analysts agree that the utilities will have to come into the market for new financing before long. They are obliged to expand their physical facilities in order to take care of the rising demand for electricity.

Quite a few groups are expected to follow the example of Commonwealth and Southern and reduce rates early next year. This experiment has worked out well for Commonwealth and Southern. The increase in kilowatt hours has more than made up for the lower rate per k. w. h.

REDS: Communist leaders are privately delighted with all the free advertising they are getting from Hearst, Coughlin, Knox and various other anti-New Deal speakers.

Their entire propaganda technique is founded on the idea of attracting as much attention as possible. Before this campaign began, they privately doubted that the vote they could roll up for Browder this year would even equal the 102,000 polled for Foster in 1932. Now they are hopeful that it will far exceed this figure, thanks to all the publicity — which they realize perfectly they could never have commanded through their own efforts. Members of the Communist Party are specially trained to provoke suppression and ill-treatment. They want to be martyrs to "capitalist brutality." Consequently such incidents as the Terre Haute jailing of Browder to keep him off the air are right up their alley.

Talks To Parents
 —By Brooke Peters Church—

Equality

Liberty, fraternity, equality—they are the much misused and misunderstood bywords of the past 150 years. America first tried to put them into practice. More and more the world is following her lead.

Liberty and fraternity can be easily achieved. To some extent they can be granted by law. Equality before the law, and in some degree equality of opportunity are also attainable. But real equality would make all men and women equally rich, strong, beautiful and clever, and such a state of affairs is humanly impossible.

Real equality depends on the individual. He can enjoy it only if he has the equipment for it, and this depends upon what the furies gave him at birth—native intelligence, health and temperament; and upon what his environment and he himself have done to develop these inborn characteristics.

Parents and teachers are largely responsible for a child's chances of equality. The parents can see to it first, that the physical and mental heritage which they have to give to a child is sound and healthy. When the child is born there is the question of environment to consider. Money and material things are not nearly so important as love and peace and stability in the home. Then there is the matter of his health. He must have the best medical care available. His teeth, eyes, posture, must all be watched and tended. He should also be given as good an education as is attainable, a wide grasp of culture, and the broadest possible contacts.

Last, but not least, the child must learn that only his use of opportunities and his personal worth can make it possible for him to reach real equality with others. Nothing, not even the most communistic state, can give it to him. It must be earned.

EVERY ELIGIBLE VOTER SHOULD VOTE

In North Carolina nomination in the Democratic primaries is considered equivalent to election and as a result of this the vote is usually heavier in the primaries than in the general election. With the November election less than three weeks off it is time for our people to be giving serious consideration to the matter of voting for it is just as necessary to vote now as it was in the primaries. While Pitt County is and has always been Democratic our voters must not forget that this year we are electing state officers as well as a president, and the votes cast in this county must be sufficient to overcome the Republican votes cast in the Republican counties of the state if our state is to remain in the Democratic column both from a state and national standpoint.

It is needless to preach the state Democratic ticket to our people, for they realize that North Carolina does not ever again want Republican rule in this state and it likewise should be needless to talk the cause of President Roosevelt to the people of this farming section of the state, for certainly they have gained much at the hands of the New Deal administration, but we believe that it is necessary to urge every Democrat in this county and section to let nothing keep him or her from going to the polls on November 3. You may not feel that your vote will be needed, but again we remind you that a few years ago North Carolina went over to the Republican column in its vote for president and the Republicans are leaving no stone unturned to try again for a victory in North Carolina. This is no time to stay away from the polls with a feeling that

NYU TO OFFER STIFF BATTLE

University of North Carolina To Meet Line Test

Chapel Hill, N. C., Oct. 15.—The University of North Carolina's big, experienced line is going to get all sorts of tests Saturday when it goes into battle against the bulky, powerful forward wall of New York University in Yankee Stadium.

Exactly 21 members of the Violet squad of 49 are lettermen, and no less than 116 of these are linemen. Coach M. L. Stevens can trot two lines on the field weighing 195 average per man or better.

Richard Hall and Stanley Sharp, regular ends, are the lightest of the group, weighing 178 and 180, respectively. Howard Dunne, Vincent Reis, and Maurice Hauser are the monogram reserves. Each tips the beams at 180 pounds or better. All are speedy, heady, seasoned performers.

The major portion of the weight is concentrated in the tackle and guard positions. George Blomquist, 210; Phil Swadlow, 215; and Perry Giffin, 205, all lettermen head a fine array of tackles, which also includes Alex Bolash, 205 pound reserve, and Harry Shabotsky, sophomore 205-pounder.

Andrew Barber, 195; George Brown, 190; Edward Morschauer, 195; Leonard Greenberg, 190; and David Moskowitz, 190, are the dependable monogram guard holdovers from the 1935 outfit. Robert Fregori, 180, and Herman Reich, 185 are the reserve standouts.

Rub'n Gordon, 190; Robert Herch, 190; and Oscar Scarola, 165, are the first lettermen. Herch is the best of the lot with the others not far behind. All are seniors.

That's what the Tar Heels will be up against Saturday.

North Carolina cannot match N. Y. U. in the number of available lettermen. The Tar Heels have nine lettermen for line duty. They are Captain Dick Brock, Artie Burshak and Bill McGinnis, ends; John Thompson and Homer Barnes, tackles; Van Webb, Ed Palmer and Charlie McVey, guards, and Pete Avery.

SPORT SLANTS

Each time Granville, William Woodward's great 3-year-old, scores in a stake race, his trainer, Sunny Jim Fitzsimmons, is subjected to a barrage of questions about how the colt compares with his sire, Gallant Fox, and with Omaha. The answer is always the same.

"Granville is a mighty good horse," says the veteran trainer. "But then, so was Gallant Fox, and Omaha, as well. I'm sure I couldn't say which was the best, and I don't think anyone else is in a better position to judge than I am. I trained all three.

"They could all run fast and far. About the only way the question of which is the best might be decided would be to have them race against each other, and that is impossible. It's one of those things that can't be proved. It would only be a matter of guessing."

Fitzsimmons still has a warm spot in his heart for Gallant Fox. Just a little bit warmer, perhaps, than the spots he reserves for Omaha and Granville. That's natural enough. After all, Gallant Fox is the daddy of both.

On the other hand, William Woodward, chairman of the Jockey club and owner of all three thoroughbreds, remains true to his first great horse, Gallant Fox, and will not even listen to any arguments that aim to place Omaha and Granville on a par with their sire.

After a series of bad breaks early in the season Granville got going and captured four of the country's most important features for 3-year-olds—the Belmont, of a mile and a half; the Arlington Classic and the Trkavers, of a mile and a quarter each, and the Lawrence Realization, of a mile and five-eighths.

At Saratoga Granville took the Kenner Stakes and then went out and ran Discovery into the ground in the Saratoga cup stake, over the mile and three-quarters route.

Granville's earnings top the $110,000 mark and make him the leading money winner of the present season. There has been some report that the horse was to be pointed for the $100,000 Santa Anita handicap in California or the $50,000 handicap at Hialeah park in Miami. Chances are that Granville will be turned loose for a nice long vacation on the Belair farm in Maryland.

The strenuous campaign Granville has waged has not been any apparent strain on the colt. If anything, he has improved. He is bigger and stronger than when he began to race early in May. He has gained poise and is more settled. He even appears to have become more confident.

Rome (AP)—Evacuation of coast cities in case of war is being worked out by military authorities on the basis of a special census just completed.

Military circles say that practically the whole population of major coast cities can be evacuated overnight.

The census was begun when the British Home fleet steamed into the Mediterranean before the outbreak of the Italo-Ethiopian war.

COMPACT BILL BEING DRAFTED

Statute to Be in Line with Views of Governor

Reflector Bureau, Sir Walter Hotel. By J. C. BASKEZVILL

Raleigh, Oct. 14.—Governor J. C. B. Ehringhaus is again being vindicated in his position of last spring when he refused to call a special session of the general assembly to enact tobacco control and compact legislation because he maintained that such legislation would not only be useless but dangerous without accompanying Federal legislation to make it effective, it is being pointed out here today.

For 186 news reports from Washington are to the effect that the Agricultural Adjustment Administration in Washington will soon complete the preparation of a uniform state compact tobacco crop control bill which will contain the features which Governor Ehringhaus maintained were essential five months ago and which the bill then before Congress did not contain.

Under the terms of this new bill, which will be sent to all the tobacco growing states for their consideration as soon as it is completed, the sale of excess tobacco will be controlled by a provision prohibiting the marketing of non-compact or extra quota tobacco in any other state except in that in which it was grown and also provide that all of the tobacco growing states must adopt a compact and production control law before the compact and crop control plan shall become effective in any of these states. Officials of the AAA point out, according to the story from Washington, that unless the Federal government prohibits the sale of extra-quota tobacco across state lines, it would be a simple matter for a tobacco farmer who grew more tobacco than his contract called for, to escape the heavy state taxes which are proposed by merely loading it into a truck and taking it into another state to sell it.

For by transporting the tobacco across a state line, the farmer would escape the state tax both in the state where it was grown and in the state where it would be sold, since the transaction would be one in interstate commerce and hence subject to Federal laws only, the AAA officials pointed out.

But under the new AAA statute, the Federal government will prohibit the sale of non-compact tobacco or extra-quota tobacco across state lines and impose a heavy penalty upon those who might try to violate it, thus compelling those farmers who might grow more tobacco than their contracts called for to either pay the state tax on the excess or not sell it at all.

Thus the new proposed AAA bills are exactly in line with the contentions of Governor Ehringhaus five months ago, when tobacco farmers by the thousands as well as politicians were virtually demanding that he call the general assembly into session and pass a state compact and control law, regardless of whether South Carolina and Georgia passed a similar law and regardless of whether Congress enacted the necessary legislation to make the state compact effective.

agreed to limit tobacco production for 1936 as well as for ensuing years. The Governor reiterated these reasons time and again, pointed out that Virginia was the only state which had enacted a compact law and that it would not become effective until both North and South Carolina passed similar laws and unless Georgia made some move towards crop control. He also pointed out that the Georgia crop was already planted, that the South Carolina crop was being planted and that it would not be possible to exercise any control over the tobacco crop except in North Carolina, if this state should enact such a law. He also pointed out that even then there would be nothing to prevent non-compact farmers in North Carolina from marketing their excess tobacco in Virginia, South Carolina and Georgia. But most of the tobacco farmers remained unmoved by these arguments and continued to criticize the Governor bitterly for his refusal to call a special session.

Now, however, most of the farmers realize that the Governor was correct in his position and that they were wrong. And now after five months have passed, the AAA comes out with a bill containing the things which the Governor said would have to be contained to make it effective.

By LARRY BAUER

Autumn again. The hunter's season. And the hunter's moon. The great golden disc emerges above the timber across the quiet lake and

SEES NEW DODGE

LARCHMONT, N. Y.—"I've just had a preview of the car that's built to order for my family and pocketbook," says C. DeWitt Rogers, Jr. "It's the new 1937 Dodge. It's bigger and roomier, with a lot of new safety features that mean real security for my wife and children. I'll venture to say that there'll be thousands who'll want to shift from their present makes to Dodge."

floods the unspotted wilderness with a silvery light. A fish rises near the shore. A large bird, probably an owl, goes overhead. Then a long silence, broken by a slight rattle in the brush. The creatures of the night are stirring. Curiosity will bring some of them creeping towards the fire, soon. We put a bit of wood on the embers and snuggle into the blankets with a prayer of thanks that civilization is far beyond the moonlit horizon.

Tomorrow? Why worry about that. The shadows cast by the tiny flames bring sleepy memories of other campfires, other days. . . . Stalking deer in sock feet with a ten-gauge gun. . . . When the pounding of our boyish heart seemingly made more noise than our boots could have made. . . . Springtime, and the return of the prairie chickens to their booming grounds. . . . We'll never forget the sound. Now they're breeding the birds in captivity. . . . Wonder if the cocks dance as of old?

A lonely cabin in Canada almost buried in snow. . . . Then came the gaunt, starved wolves and game was scarce. . . . Need sharp eyes to see ptarmigan in winter dress. . . . War weary and half sick, we took a lesson from the wild things and crawled away to seclusion. . . . Found peace and rest and health in the wait-north. And tomorrow? Tramping thru the woods and over the hills, ablaze with October's colors. It's great to be able to enjoy the outdoors when frost has tinted the hardwoods and the maple leaves drift down in the mellow sunshine. What matters if the hunter gets no game? The magic haze of Indian summer is in the air.

A poaching problem is worrying Colorado wardens this fall. All because the extended 1936 bear season opened October 1 and closes November 30. During this period many licensed hunters with big game rifles will be in the field. In the past, wardens have stopped most of the deer and elk poaching by picking up hunters so armed whom they found before or after the deer and elk open season, October 12 to 18. Such tactics cannot be employed this year as the hunters may be after bear.

Game Commissioner R. G. Parvill will recommend to the legislature in January that the bear season be shortened to coincide with open dates on deer and elk.

TOWERS BUILT TO FIND FIRES

Twenty-Seven Additional "Eyes" in the State System

Reflector Bureau, Sir Walter Hotel. Raleigh, Oct. 15.—Twenty-seven new "eyes" for the State forest fire detection system in the form of lookout towers were provided in counties organized for the control of the "Red Demon" during the biennium ending June 30, 1936. W. C. McCormick, assistant State forester, reveals in his report for the two-year period.

All of the towers, with one exception, were provided through the federal emergency Conservation Work program, and all were erected by crews from OCO camps.

In addition to the 27 towers erected during the two-year period, several others had been bought and were ready for erection. The new towers, according to Mr. McCormick, brought the total number in the state to 73. Under the plan of the Department of Conservation and Development, the complete system of towers for forest fire detection calls for 123 units.

The 27 new towers erected during the 1934-36 period represent an investment of $38,073, all of which was borne by the ECW program. Tower houses built in this period represent an addition outlay of $18,250.

The new towers range in height from 45 feet to 120 feet, the taller structures being in the east where the elevation is lower. All of the shafts are of steel construction with enclosed cabins at the top for a lookout.

With the completion of the state tower system, Mr. McCormick says all forest areas in North Carolina needing protection will be within range of vision of towermen on the structures. The State system will tie into that of the U. S. Forest Service and the National Park Service.

Rupture

The common term rupture, for which the technical equivalent is hernia, gives an erroneous idea of the condition named. Rupture implies a sudden break, and hernia seldom develops suddenly, or by way of a "break."

Hernias may arise because of a developmental defect in some portion of the body. Then it is known as congenital. Or, a hernia may be produced by the yielding of a weakened retaining structure.

Anatomically, there are many types of hernias — diaphragmatic, umbilical femoral and inguinal. But we will restrict our consideration to the most common one — the inguinal hernia. This is the rupture located in the groin. Of this type, two forms are distinguished, the direct and indirect.

To appreciate the mechanism of the development of an inguinal rupture we must bear in mind the structure of the so-called inguinal canal. This is a channel through which passes the spermatic cord and its accompanying blood vessels. At one end it opens into the abdominal cavity, at the other it communicates with the scrotum. This it offers a potential avenue for the extension of the contents of the abdomen — the intestines.

In rupture, this takes place. In varying degrees, gut and the lining membrane of the abdominal cavity invade the inguinal canal. This, be it noted, is true only of the so-called indirect hernia. The direct hernia differs in mechanism, and is the less menacing form.

In the normal individual, the inguinal canal is so formed that it will not allow invasion by any of the abdominal cavity contents. In some individuals, however, the barriers are weak, and under pressure they yield. Hence, it is not uncommon to find a history of heavy physical labor, or of sudden strain preceding the development of a hernia.

Inguinal hernias are also found in very young children. Here the condition represents the delayed closing of an opening normal to the body structure of the infant.

The direct inguinal hernia does not press into the inguinal canal, but bulges forward at the region of the pubic bones. The condition usually affects both sides.

The direct hernia occurs most frequently in individuals in the fourth and fifth decade of life, and is common among those of a flabby constitution. The indirect hernia is more common among younger individuals of robust and muscular constitution.

Tomorrow—The Treatment of Rupture

Man About Manhattan

By George Tucker

New York—There is this situation whereby Harry Salter's apartment has become a "gambling hell!"

Nevertheless it seems important to point out that the young maestro never takes anybody's coin. It's the hobby urge, followed for years, and now he has a collection of gambling equipment that makes Monte Carlo look like a cheap shell game.

One of his most exciting possessions is an old roulette wheel that was used in a Tombstone, Arizona, gambling den. Then there's a cage containing three large dice. This "chuck-a-luck" or "bird cage" game comes from Tia Juana, and is reputed to be over 100 years old. From carnival and circus friends, Salter has gathered several "monte" games, of both the "shell" and card variety, and occasionally amuses friends by demonstrating their workings.

He owns several pairs of dice used by western sharpers years ago. Some of which are "miss-outs" or dice with which it is possible to make a point others which contain all sevens or eights. Coins with two "heads" or two "tails," playing cards from various parts of the world, and "cold" decks with which the old-time river sharks used to mule the innocent, comprise the remainder of Salter's interesting selection.

Morton Bowe now has a collection of miniature ships that numbers 58 boats of varying shapes and sizes. Mort's hobby has always run to things marine and in addition to the boat collection he possesses 30 decks and bronze pieces depicting scenes of the sea.

Then, too, his apartment is decorated with sketches, water colors and black and whites, all studies of ships or the ocean. Mr. Bowe has been gathering his collection since he was a child in New Jersey, and he continues to add to it

The ring of stern-looking Secret Service men who guard President Roosevelt in public meant little to Mrs. M. C. Wiles, 87, of Boulder, Colo. by attending auctions and picking up pieces of merit. Phillips Lord has a collection of dime novels that might well be the envy of minors everywhere. Lord has over 400 of these "blood and thunder" stories and picks up the paper backed "literature" at book stores that feature second-hand departments.

He has almost the entire "Frank Merriwell" output, and the adventures of Frank's brother, Dick Merriwell. These comprise some 120 individual books. The "Nick Carter" series is almost 100, and the adventures of "Jesse James" and "Diamond Dick" come in about 150 books.

Frank Black's hobby is one that the musical executive has been interested in for 20 years. He has collected hundreds of phonograph records, which range in type from classical music to "swing."

Among them are many of the old style Edison records, garnered when Black was with a recording

GOP SPEAKERS HELPING FOES

Winborne Says Democrats Aided By Addresses

Raleigh, Oct. 1.—The speeches being made in the state by Thomas Dixon, former Baptist preacher and novelist, in behalf of Gov. Alf Landon and against President Roosevelt, also the speeches made in the state Tuesday by Col. Frank Knox, the Republican candidate for Vice President, have actually helped the Democrats more than the Republicans, in the opinion of J. Wallace Winborne, chairman of the State Democratic Executive Committee.

The visit of Colonel Knox was so brief and covered so much territory that it produced virtually no effect. Chairman Winborne feels, while the speeches by Dr. Dixon, who is scheduled to make some 17 speeches in the state for the rest of the month, are going to help the Democrats and result in getting more votes for Roosevelt, he is convinced.

Governor J. C. B. Ehringhaus also believes that the speeches by Dr. Dixon, a former Tar Heel and former Democrat, now making Republican speeches for the National Republican Committee, is going to make far more votes for Roosevelt than for Gov. Landon.

"Dr. Dixon is remembered in North Carolina chiefly as the author of 'The Clansman' which depicts vividly the manner in which the southern states were oppressed and exploited by the Republican party following the civil war, and as the promoter and developer of 'Wild Acres', probably the most fantastic real estate development ever envisioned," Governor Ehringhaus said today. "The 'Wild Acres' development started during the glad, wild days of Coolidge prosperity, and was located in McDowell county. Bus loads of people were brought there free from all parts of the state and scores of people bought lots there, which now are overgrown with wild weeds and trees. The 'Wild Acres' bubble burst during the days of Hoover prosperity, the development went wild and apparently Dr. Dixon went wild along with it, since he is now advocating a return to power of the same party which put Coolidge and Hoover in the White House and of the same policies which brought on the depression and caused his bubble to burst."

The Democrats of North Carolina are not going to be misled by the able oratory of Dr. Dixon or be persuaded to become Mugwumps, the Governor believes.

COURT VICTORY BY HIGHWAY DIVISION PLEASES OFFICIALS

(Continued from Page One) been revoked because he had forfeited his bail on a drunken driving charge, is going to help traffic law enforcement and further discourage drunken driving, since it means that those charged with drunken driving and other offenses for which the revocation of driving permits is mandatory, will lose their permits if they fail to appear for trial and forfeit their bail," Director Fulk of the highway safety division said today. "We feel this is a real victory and further demonstrates that the 1935 drivers' license law has plenty of teeth in it."

Attorneys for Knighten maintained that he had not forfeited his bail, but that the case against him had been nolle prossed, so that the Revente Department was without authority to revoke his license. The highway safety division, however, showed that the case against Knighten had been called and continued nine different times, that the ninth time it was called on April 15, 1936 the police court collection sheet in Asheville showed that the defendant was not present and the case recorded as having "failed," indicating that his bond was forfeited. It was on the basis of this record that Knighten's driver's license was revoked.

Belhaven Man Appreciates Help Given Him to Get Start by Resettlement Agency

Belhaven, N. C., Oct. 15.—Declaring that he and his family were "actually cold and hungry" when he applied for rehabilitation aid, E. L. Swindell, a client of the Resettlement Administration living near here, is now "getting on top again."

His appreciation of the help he received is expressed in a letter to Miss Margaret E. Jones, home supervisor for the RA, at Washington, N. C.

"I was without work and could not get anything to do," Swindell stated. "Although I always before had had a good job, I was forced to apply for relief as we were actually cold and hungry. I was put under rural rehabilitation and with their help I am getting on top again."

The rehabilitation loan he received went for seed, fertilizer and feed and enabled him to put in a crop. "I buy implements and improve my livestock."

"We now have a cow, chickens, pigs and a nice supply of canned fruit and vegetables. I have been able to ditch my farm and build a small barn to hold this year's harvest and to repair my old buildings. I have also bought material to cover my house. I have repaid my loan in full both last year and this year.

"Resettlement help me in several ways. It financed me when I could not finance myself. It gave me confidence in myself. It came to my rescue when the future looked very dark. It helped me become self-supporting. It has been a great help in my community."

The phrase "hue and cry" is derived from the old method of pursuit with horn and voice used in English law in pursuing criminals.
