President Rests Briefly Between Campaign Tours

Roosevelt to Leave on Another Journey Tuesday

(By Associated Press) President Roosevelt returned to the White House today for a 40-hour stay between campaign travels, while Governor Landon heading westward for a speech Tuesday night in Los Angeles challenged the President to say whether he intends to perpetuate the NRA 'willy-nilly.'

The President will leave Tuesday night for a campaign tour through Rhode Island, Massachusetts and Connecticut. The major speech of the tour will be delivered in Worcester, Mass., Wednesday night.

Landon in his statement referred to a speech which James Roosevelt, a son of the President, made at Gardner, Mass., last week. Landon declared that the younger Roosevelt remarks showed he 'understands the President still intends to make NRA principles live and operate in our government by one device or another.'

A radio 'debate' Saturday night between Senator Vandenberg (R. Mich.) and the recorded voice of President Roosevelt continued to produce repercussions.

The broadcast was halted over part of the networks after Columbus-broadcasting officials learned Vandenberg's program consisted of recorded portions of Roosevelt utterances, followed by 'replies' from the senator. The officials said the use of phonograph records on the air was against Columbia policy.

Last night the Republican national committee, declaring that 'free speech' had been jeopardized, demanded that the program be broadcasted. Denying any free speech issues was involved, Columbia refused the demand.

Reporter Completes Trip Around Globe

New York, Oct. 19.—H. R. Elkins, world circling reporter, officially ended his trip in the lobby of the New York World Telegram at 11:14 A. M. today, completing his dash around the globe in slightly more than 18 and one-half days.

Elkins, reporter for the World Telegram and other Scripps-Howard papers, thus became the winner of the unofficial race he started with Dorothy Kilgallen, of the New York Journal and International news service, and Leo Kieran, of the New York Times.

Both of Elkins' rivals still are in Manila, awaiting departure for California on the first passenger flight of the China Clipper, giving Elkins a winning margin of some 10,000 miles. Elkins' official time for the trip was announced as 18 days, 14 hours and 36 minutes.

GOVERNMENT WINS VICTORIES IN HIGH COURT

Supreme Tribunal Refuses Review Litigation Today

NEW DEAL LAWS ALLOWED STAND

Matters Involved Included Provisions of Number of Administration Measures; Duke Case Nov. 3.

Washington, Oct. 19.—(AP)—The government won tactical victories in the Supreme court today when the nine justices refused to review litigation challenging the constitutionality of three new deal laws.

The court declined to pass on an appeal filed by J. Edward Jones, New York security dealer, questioning the constitutionality of the 1933 'truth in securities' act requiring registration of stocks before public sale.

It also refused to review an attack on provisions of the national industrial recovery act and of the 1935 emergency relief appropriation measure authorizing government loans and grants for construction of public-owned electric plants.

The action taken was purely on procedural grounds and had no direct relation to the merits of the legislation.

Government loans for electric plants were assailed by the Texas Utilities Company and the Alabama Power Company in an effort to stop construction of plants in eight Texas and Alabama cities.

A review of a similar controversy, appealed by the Duke Power Company, already had been promised by the court and arguments are to be heard the week of November 3.

Before starting another week of arguments the justices also agreed to pass on disputes involving a Washington state sales tax imposed on articles imported for use in building Grand Coulee dam and a seven year prison term imposed on Dirk de Jonge, a communist, by Oregon courts for violation of the (Continued on page six)

SEVEN SURVIVE LAKE TRAGEDY

Captain of Ship, One of Those to Reach Safety, Describes Episode As 'Most Terrifying Night That You Could Possibly Imagine'

Cleveland, Oct. 19.—(AP)—The cold, treacherous waters of Lake Erie held today bodies of 18 men and one woman, victims of a 30-mile gale which overturned and sank the 252-foot Canadian sand sucker, Sand Merchant, in the second major disaster of the 1936 great lakes season.

Of 26 aboard, only seven remained today to tell how their benumbed companions dropped off one by one from the two capsized life boats to which they clung through a terrifying night of waiting. For 10 hours they watched unseeing ships pass them. Then daylight brought their rescue, five miles off Cleveland.

One of the seven rescued was Graham MacLellan, 29-year-old captain of the ship. Another was Herman Dault, crane operator who lost two brothers; the second just 30 minutes before the rescue.

'It was the most terrible night I have ever—could possibly imagine,' said Captain MacLellan.

'I owe my life to Dault' and (John) L. Iden, the three of us left of the seven clinging to our life boat. Just after I gave the signal to man the boats we overturned like a flash.

It was the second sand-sucker tragedy on the great lakes this season. The Material Service sank off Chicago on July 27 with 18 lost. Coast guards from Cleveland, Lorain and Toledo searched for bodies without success. Only bits of the broken Sand Merchant were visible on the agitated waters.

Begin Probe Into Fire Aboard Ship In Which 4 Died

Deaths Revealed When Luxurious Motor Ship Vulcania Resches Port at Palermo, Italy

Palermo, Sicily, Oct. 19.—(AP)—The death of four persons in a fire aboard the luxurious motorship Vulcania was disclosed today when the vessel reached port, her third class quarters, charred by a menacing two-hour fire.

All of the victims were members of the crew. An orchestra player leaped overboard during the heat of the blaze which caused an SOS and sent 1,100 anxious passengers to the decks. He was drowned.

Two stewards were burned to death; helping to fight the fire and another was asphyxiated in his cabin. Immediately after the ship's arrival here the captain presided at an inquiry which sought to determine the cause of the fire.

Second Earth Quake Felt In North Italy

Victoria, Italy, Oct. 19.—(AP) Light earth shocks in this section of northern Italy, where an earthquake brought death and destruction yesterday, created fresh apprehension today.

The death toll today, a hospital check-up indicated, was between 20 and 25.

The new tremors sent residents rushing into the streets of the mountain-side town. The shock began at 9 A. M. today and continued for several minutes.

Yesterday's earthquake damaged virtually every house in the town. Some must be razed. Several streets were closed to traffic as cracked walls and shattered beams threatened collapse on pedestrians.

Damage in this town alone was estimated at 5,000,000 lire.

THE NATIONAL WHIRLIGIG

News Behind The News

Washington By IRA BENNETT SOLID: It's interesting to watch the efforts to play politics with the Treasury's management of its share of international finance.

Financial interests opposed to President Roosevelt are trying to find skulduggery somewhere but they can't locate it. Impartial opinion is that President Roosevelt is the lucky recipient of a political boost through international events that have no connection whatever with American politics.

Three big nations are in shape now to buy or sell gold to stabilize their currencies, knowing that speculation on any dangerous scale is out of the window. Germany, Italy and Soviet Russia, are unstable, but they are not in a position to shake the agreement that gives equipoise to the leading world currencies—the dollar, the pound and the franc.

Against the suggestion that one of the big three might try to doublecross the others and drain them of gold, the answer is made that the United States doesn't sell gold unless it gets its price—$35 an ounce. Take it or leave it.

TOUGH—How much this strong move toward world stability and commercial trade expansion will help Roosevelt can not be estimated in figures, but even the most rabid G. O. P. fans admit that 'Roosevelt doesn't lose by it.'

Campaign surface froth indicates that average voters are not concerning themselves with such complex subjects as world finance. They reduce issues to personalities. Big (Continued on page four)

The Junior Woman's Club met on October 16th in the club building with Mrs. Dink James, Mrs. Cleveland Hardee, Miss Agnes Fullilove and Miss Sue Barrett as hostesses. Mrs. J. H. Waldrop, accompanied by Mrs. G. V. Smith, sang two numbers. Miss Fullilove presented Miss Jane Hadley who gave a vivid description of the interesting places she visited on her western tour the past summer.

Following this most enjoyable program Mrs. Thomas Clifton, vice president, read the following tribute to Mrs. C. C. Hilton, who is transferring her membership to the senior club:
Someone has said, "Those who go are always happier than those who leave behind." We feel today this is true of one of our Junior club members. She leaves us happily knowing that by leaving us she can devote her time and ability to both Juniors and Seniors, to whom she has always been devoted. She will carry the highlights of our work and achievements into our Senior club. We feel it is our good fortune for her to represent us.

So, after considerable thought on her part, and by invitation from the Senior Woman's club, Mrs. C. C. Hilton, better known to us as Thelma, has consented to become our sponsor.
In reviewing the history of our club, we find Mrs. Hilton was a charter member in 1930. She was our president in 1933-34. In 1934 she represented us at our National convention in Hot Springs, Arkansas. In 1935 she was the assistant chairman of the State Juniors. She has been editor of our Junior Page in the Club Woman. In view of these honors, together with her keen interest in the club, our Junior club feels it most fitting to select her from our membership as our sponsor.
We wish to thank Mrs. Hilton for her faithfulness and loyalty to our club. Her altruistic attitude toward the members has been keenly felt and appreciated. Today, we pledge our cooperation, and wish her continued success in her new work.
After the business meeting, the hostesses served delicious refreshments.

Speaks at Vesper Services
All promises of God are "Yea" and "Amen," was the theme of the inspiring message brought to the College students by Rev. A. W. Fleischmann, pastor of the Memorial Baptist church, at the Y. W. C. A. Vesper services last night.
There is no yea and nay in Christ, he said, but yea and amen; the message from Christ never varies and never alters. Christ, he reminded, is God's yes and amen.
Christ, he said, does not speak of the way, the truth and the life, but he says, "I am the Way, the Truth and the Life." The words of Christ come to us, he continued, with definiteness and complete finality. He quoted Christ as saying, "As many as I love, I will rebuke and chasten." It comes to the one who overcomes, he concluded; to him God promises these things.
Miss Gorrell played a selection from Beethoven.

Heavy Fines Paid By Violators Of State Game Laws
More Than $42,000 Fined by Offenders of State Game and Fisheries Laws During Biennium

Raleigh, Oct. 18.—Violations of game and inland fisheries laws during the biennium ending June 30, 1936, was costly to transgressors, resulting in an output amounting to more than $42,000 by offenders, according to figures contained in a report of J. D. Chalk, State game and inland fisheries commissioner, made public today.
During the two year period, a total of 5,228 prosecutions on charges of game and inland fisheries violations were conducted by the protectors. Violations of the game laws, totaling 2,996 were more numerous with fisheries prosecutions numbering 2,232.
Court costs on game law violations amounted to $20,432 during the two years while fines totaling $6,404 were levied. Fisheries prosecution costs paid by defendants amounted to $13,552 and fines in these cases were $2,676.

There was more than a one hundred percent increase in game law prosecutions in the fiscal year 1935-36 over the previous year. The total of prosecutions during the most recent year was 1,994 compared with 962 during the immediately preceding year.
Fishing law prosecutions increased from 998 in 1934-35 to 1,735 in 1935-36. Fines on these fisheries cases increased from $935 in 1934-35 to $1,740 during the latter year of the biennium.
The substantial increase in prosecutions, according to Commissioner Chalk, indicates more efficiency in the game and fish protector service. Mr. Chalk believes that there is a greater spirit of cooperation with conservation laws on the part of the public than ever before, and that the activities of the enforcement organization have increased greatly during the last two years. One noticeable fact, he continued, is that more hunters and fishermen are in the field than has been the case in several years.

All German workers earning $120 or less per month and their family dependents are required by law to be insured against sickness, the bulk of the population paying dues to the sickness insurance board.

Talks To Parents
By Brooke Peters Church

Mrs. Jones was a talented amateur actress. At one time she had contemplated the stage as a career, but had married and produced a family instead. She did not, however, give up her acting. She organized an amateur acting group, and even got her husband interested in it. Later on, as the children grew up, they too followed in their mother's footsteps, and one by one drifted into playing small parts, until eventually the whole family was in one way or another involved in amateur dramatics.
There could not have been a better way found for drawing the family into contact with one another. Tommy was interested in the way mother developed her readings of the lead; mother was determined that Mary should do well in the ingenu part she had just achieved; father might be seen studying his lines as he stoked the furnace; even four-year-old Mike had a line in the play, and the whole family united on teaching it to him.
Acting is in itself the best possible training for children. It teaches poise, self-control, voice control, how to walk, how to enter and leave a room. It is an excellent cure for shyness and self-consciousness. It is in many ways more beneficial than dancing class, though dancing is a valuable accomplishment for even an amateur actor to possess.
If the whole family can take part in theatricals together, it will find itself possessed of a common interest, and one in which the youngest as well as the oldest can take part. And the stage has a very levelling tendency. There one finds real equality between old and young.
Sometimes families, unable to find a group to join, form their own little acting company and give both themselves and their friends a great deal of fun and pleasure.

THE CONSTITUTIONAL AMENDMENTS

With the date for the general election drawing near we call attention of our voters to the fact that in this state in addition to voting for the national and state officials our voters will vote on five constitutional amendments submitted by the last session of the General Assembly.

One of these amendments deals with increasing the number of the State Supreme Court justices from five to seven. There is no objection to an increase in the number of justices for we believe they are needed, but the amendment as submitted has a feature that makes it objectionable and on account of this feature our people should vote against the amendment. The amendment in addition to providing for the increase in the court might sit in divisions with as few as three of the justices hearing and passing on matters coming before the court. Every person who has an appeal before the Supreme Court is entitled to have the matter heard by the whole court and under the proposed amendment a minority of the court could hear and pass on the cases. We repeat our people would do well to vote against this amendment because of this objectionable feature.

Another of the amendments would remove the present six per cent limit on income tax rates and permit the legislature to increase the rate as high as ten per cent on incomes of the higher brackets. The basis of the income tax based upon net incomes is one of the fairest of all taxes and those persons with large net incomes should be compelled to pay their share of the tax burdens. Our people should vote for this amendment permitting the limit to be increased.

Another of the proposed amendments would give the legislature the power to classify property for taxation and fix different rates of taxation for the different classifications. This amendment already has been voted down by the people of this state on two or more previous occasions and our people would do well to again cast their votes against it. There should be no change that would permit one form of property to be taxed at a lower rate ad valorem than another of equal value and that is just what the passage of this amendment would permit.

Another of the amendments would give exemptions up to $1,000 on any residence or dwelling in which the owner actually resides. This amendment on first thought sounds most promising to the little home owner but has its disadvantages for all his value above $1,000 must carry a higher rate of taxation and in the end there will be little or no saving. Rental property will likewise take a higher rate of taxation which will mean higher rents and greater burdens upon those who are not now even able to own a home. The exemption law also makes it possible for a lot of evasions that would remove millions of dollars of property from the tax books with resulting higher rates for that which is left. We believe our people should vote against this amendment.

The other amendment being submitted places added restrictions upon the state, counties and municipalities on borrowing money without a vote of the citizens. Public debt should be held to a minimum and it would be well for our people to pass this amendment.

At every election when there are amendments to be voted upon there are many voters who have given little or no thought to them and the result is that they do not vote one way or the other on the amendments. Such an attitude on the part of the voters is dangerous for if too many voters do not vote on the amendments then the few remaining voters will be able to adopt the amendments regardless of their danger to the people of our state as a whole. Rather than take this chance it would be better for the voters who do not understand the proposed amendments to vote against all of them. It would be better for the good amendments to be defeated than to let the bad ones become a part of our constitution.

Throughout the country increased business activity is acknowledged by G. O. P. managers to be a hard nut to crack. It works in Roosevelt's favor in a thousand directions.

FACTS: Here and there you find signs of defeatism in Republican ranks. This shows up in Maryland, where the Baltimore Sun's poll gives Roosevelt an overwhelming lead over Landon. The story gets out that no more G. O. P. money is to be "wasted" in Maryland. This is promptly denied.

News and business scouts coming back from the field give Roosevelt the better of it. They also make reservations like this: "If there is a strong element that is lying back to strike down Roosevelt, without revealing its purpose, then our estimate must be revised. But we can't find a silent vote of formidable proportions."

In the deep South there is both hatred and fear of Roosevelt among old-line Democrats. Yet all estimates give the Solid South to Roosevelt—since Huey Long's death there's no effective opposition. The border states—Maryland, West Virginia, Kentucky, Tennessee, Missouri, Oklahoma—are given to Roosevelt by scouts who honestly try to get at the facts.

TESTIMONY: Jesse H. Jones, chairman of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, delivered a powerful stroke for the New Deal in his first partisan speech. Republicans are attacking him for it. They point out that Jones was first appointed by Hoover, and that the RFC was striking hard at the depression before Roosevelt came in. They think Jones is hitting a little below the belt when he gives Roosevelt all the credit and denies any to Hoover.

Nevertheless it worries the G. O. P. when Jones says that "the price of recovery has been very cheap, and our government credit has not been strained." Behind this remark stand immense accomplishment and first hand experience. Jones admission that the corporation surplus tax needs amendment, furnishes a peg upon which to hang G. O. P. criticism—but his speech hurts.

COMFORT: Many business leaders who "fear the worst"—that is, reelection of Roosevelt—are trying to work out plans on the assumption that they are facing another year of the New Deal. First, they pin some hope on a narrow vote which might serve as a warning to Mr. Roosevelt not to undertake radical experiments. Next, they rely upon increased independence of Congress.

One of these leaders said: "The country is on the up and up. That takes the starch out of experimenters who have counted on the 'emergency' to put through their theories. People who are making money become mighty independent and don't want government experiments. This feeling will be reflected in the worst laws will be overturned by the Supreme Court."

Another said: "We can count on amendment of the social security act or its total invalidation. In the last four years we have been saved by the Supreme Court from greater dangers than any I can now foresee. The worst is over."

LABOR: John L. Lewis, David Dubinsky and other boosters of industrial unionism declare that they are going to the bitter end. They expect to gain a big advantage by the reelection of Roosevelt—not that he will take sides in the craft-industrial squabble, but that he will press labor legislation upon Congress and "put it over."

Anticipated invalidation of the Wagner labor relations act causes labor leaders of both factions to try to work out something to take the place of that law. They haven't found a plan yet. At every turn they run up against the rulings that "manufacture is not commerce." No nationwide regulation of labor relations, except in indisputed interstate commerce, seems to be possible.

Some observers of labor tendencies look for a movement to bring about amendment of the constitution. They believe that Roosevelt, if reelected, would be pressed hard by all organized labor and would support the demand for national regulation of labor.

New York

By JAMES McMULLIN

REASON: High financial sources get word that the newest phase of the gentleman's agreement between the United States, Great Britain and France involves a tacit understanding that British authorities will cooperate fully to keep the pound at its old parity of $4.86 or better.

This seems oddly generous of a nation never known for altruism in such matters, especially as the British have done a lot of talking about the "proper" level for sterling and have flatly refused to commit themselves to any permanent pound-dollar ratio. How come?

The answer is that the natural tendency of economic forces now at work is to force the pound up rather than down. Unrest on the continent of Europe has created a strong demand for sterling that shows no signs of abating. Consequently—for the present—it is London's interest to enlist our aid in keeping the pound sterling isn't so easy since France quit the gold standard—and the pound must be braked down in order to keep British foreign trade prosperous. So why not agree with us on a temporary low for the pound in terms of the dollar, since it would be virtually impossible to push it below that point in the near future anyway?

PREPARED: Of course this situation might change overnight if the external pressure to force the pound up were eased. The British do want their currency cheaper in terms of ours in order to clinch a competitive advantage over us in international trade. There is no reason to believe they will refrain from going after this objective when it becomes feasible. And, as Secretary

INGENIOUS: President Green of the American Federation of Labor charges that industry is seeking to evade the Walsh-Healey Act. This law—a source of deep concern to conservative business leaders—imposes certain standards of wages, hours and labor conditions on all manufacturers selling their products to the government. Mr. Green is right. Some of the

tary Morgenthau has pointed out, the agreement is on a 24 hour basis. Some of New York's shrewdest financial observers prophesy a slow but steady competitive depreciation of currencies. They figure that one or more of the three nations involved will inevitably try to get an edge on the others by co-opting its money and that the others will have to respond in kind. When Secretary Morgenthau announced that it would not mean further dollar devaluation if the Treasury were to pay more than the currently prescribed price of $35.00 an ounce for gold, he was subtly preparing for warfare along these lines. He needs to be free to use this gold weapon without rousing a tremendous howl about the administration wrecking the dollar again.

SAD: William B. Bell and his helpers of the Republican National Finance Committee have made heroic efforts to raise an adequate war chest for the party. Some of Mr. Bell's most valuable lieutenants have been men of no political experience but of high standing in the financial community. Through their efforts, backstage canvassers for Republican funds were recruited from among outstanding financial and industrial leaders—men who never before in their lives have gone begging for political contributions.

Of course this extra heavy artillery was reserved for use on the biggest check book fortresses—close personal friends in the top income brackets. Yet even so the results have been sadly disappointing. The very wealthy simply have refused to pony up as expected.

REASON: This means that the big October push planned by John Hamilton and his aides will be severely—perhaps fatally—handcapped. The blow hurts all the more because it was not anticipated.

The official G. O. P. explanation of the gift shortage—that wealthy donors are afraid of New Deal reprisals—is partly correct. This has been a discouraging hurdle for canvassers to surmount.

But in the last analysis there is one overwhelming reason why rich New York anti-New Dealers are not coming across. Recent political developments have convinced them that Roosevelt is a sure winner—so why waste their money? Of course they could be wrong—but defeatist sentiment is predominant.

shrewdest legal talent in New York has been busy doping out by-passes whereby large purveyors to Uncle Sam can escape this type of regulation and yet remain within the law.

The most popular approach to this problem is via the creation of an intermediate sales company which technically buys the manufacturer's goods and resells them to federal purchasing agents. The law applies only to concerns which deal directly with the government—hence by the above arrangement manufacturers exempt themselves from its provisions. This ingenious device is sure to be strenuously attacked by the government if President Roosevelt is reelected.

The Wrong Murderer

By HUGH CLEVELY

SYNOPSIS: Terence Mahony is well along toward catching Ambrose Lawson, murderer of Vincent Little and leader of a vicious gang. But Lawson, through his friend Leo Ramsden, has tangled the skein, and now Terence is unknowingly waiting in a house for almost certain death, and his gang is about to be ambushed in their hide-out. Ruth Fraser, who loves Terence but won't admit it, has managed to get to Terence's friends, and has warned Fatty Bassett, however.

Chapter 31

AMBUSH

WITH that Bassett turned away and made for the stairs that led down to the basement, Ruth hesitated for a moment. If anything was going to happen, she wanted to see it, so that she could tell Mahony all about it before he rang Bassett up. She slipped quietly into the room in which Bassett had given directions to his men, and hid behind a curtain.

Bassett descended the stairs which led to the basement and crossed the kitchen to the back door of the house. As he was crossing the kitchen the three knocks, pause, and another knock, sounded again.

"Orright, orrright, don't be impatient," he called out, and he opened the back door.

Immediately the barrel of an automatic pistol was thrust into his stomach, and a stern voice said: "Stand back from this door and stick your hands up."

ed in a chair placed against the wall opposite to the cupboard was Lake. His hands and ankles were tied securely to the chair, and he was gagged.

The leader of the invading party gave an exclamation of satisfaction and hurried forward. His two men followed him. For one moment they were off their guard; their backs were towards the cupboard as they clustered round the chair, untying Lake. Fatty Bassett coughed.

Then everything happened with incredible swiftness. The door of the cupboard suddenly flew open, and Fatty's three men sprang out, their pistols in their hands. They did not shoot, since their pistols were not fitted with silencers, but in the same movement with which they left the cupboard they hurried themselves at the three invaders.

THE invading party, taken utterly by surprise, had hardly time to offer any real resistance. Before they could even aim their guns, Flynn's huge fist, with a big Colt clamped in it, had smashed one of them to the floor; Chippy had knocked another senseless. But the third man of Fatty Bassett's party was unlucky.

Just as he hit at the other man of the invading party, the man moved; the blow which had been meant for his

The punch knocked Flynn across the room.

"Wot the . . ." exclaimed Bassett in a tone of utter astonishment; but he stepped back from the door, and his hands went up above his head.

Three men quietly entered the kitchen, closing the door after them. They were tough, hard-bitten, evil-looking ruffians and in their hands they carried small automatic pistols fitted with silencers. Their leader, the man who had already spoken, prodded Bassett roughly with his automatic.

"We've come for Lake," he stated harshly. "You know who sent us." Bassett's hands, held up above his head, were trembling visibly; his expression was one of silvering terror.

"Lake," he stammered. "I ain't seen Mr. Lake. You can search the place, mister; you won't find 'im 'ere."

"I know damned well I can search the place and I shan't find him," returned the other man curtly. "If I thought I could find him by simply searching the house I'd have plugged you straight off."

Things were going exactly as Bassett had planned.

"Lead on," went on the other man. "And if you so much as squawk you'll get shot where it will hurt like hell, but won't kill you."

THERE was apparently no fight left in Fatty Bassett.

"If . . . if I take you to Mr. Lake, you won't shoot me afterwards," he whimpered.

"If you don't take us to him I'll shoot you right away, through the knee to start with," replied the leader of the invaders contemptuously. "Get on with it."

Shivering, Bassett led the way up the stairs. The three men followed close on his heels, their guns ready for instant action.

None of Fatty's friends appeared; the house seemed quite silent and empty. Fatty led the way through the hall and up a flight of stairs. There he paused for a moment on a small landing, and then flung open the door of a room.

It was a long, narrow room, with a large, built-in cupboard stretching the entire length of one wall. Seated head glanced off his shoulder. The man staggered, and in the act of staggering he fired. There was a short muffled rap as the silenced automatic went off, and Fatty's man clasped both hands suddenly to his chest and, with an agonized gasp, sank to the floor.

With a roar like that of an angry lion, big Barney Flynn turned and sprang; before the man had time to fire again his huge fist landed with terrific impact under the man's chin. It was a punch that lifted the man off his feet and knocked him senseless clean across the room. With a tremendous crash of glass his limp falling body struck the window, and went slap through the window, falling ten feet into the street.

There was a pause of utter consternation inside the room.

"Gawdelpus!" exclaimed Bassett.

"That's done it. We'll have the cops 'ers in a minute now."

He bent swiftly over the man who had been shot.

"Slim's got 'is, orrrright," he went on. "There ain't nothing we can do for 'im. It's up to us to get out of 'ere as quickly as we can. Catch 'old of that bloke, Jarney, and foller me, both of you."

Barney lifted the bound figure of Lake and lifted it easily, chair and everything, in his powerful arms.

They mounted another flight of stairs, and there, in a small attic, Bassett bent down and pressed strongly on a portion of the wall. Silently it swung back, disclosing a hidden doorway into the house next door. They went through the doorway, and Bassett swung the wall to behind them.

"Wait 'ere a moment," said Bassett.

He swiftly descended the stairs to the pawnshop on the ground floor. Nominally that pawnshop was owned by one Ell Solomon; actually "Look 'ere, Ell, I've been in your

THRONG SWARMS TO HEAR ROOSEVELT IN DETROIT

One of the greatest crowds ever assembled in Detroit filled streets around the City Hall to hear President Roosevelt make one of his campaign addresses. Senator James C. 'ON THE SPOT' IN EUROPE'S ALARM OVER WAR

In the midst of Europe's war and rumors of wars, these three men suddenly have been cast into the center of the maelstrom. King Leopold of Belgium (left) shocked the continent by his unexpected declaration for strict neutrality, presaging the scrapping of Belgium's mutual assistance treaties with France and other nations. Meanwhile Ivan M. Maisky (right), Soviet ambassador to London, was unrelenting in his demand that Lord Plymouth (center), secretary of Europe's committee on non-intervention in the Spanish civil war, call a meeting of the powers to act on the Russian plan for blocking all shipments of arms to the Spanish Fascists. Delving into the occult and coming up with great gobs of information concerning the budding season on Broadway, I predict that the two most exciting first nights this fall will be when Laurence Rivers opens the $300,000 spectacle, "White Horse Inn," and when the curtain goes up on the new George Kaufman-Edna Ferber play with Margaret Sullivan in the starring role, Cain's warehouse, which is the

And it was really funny to see her listed as 29. Because that data was five years old.

Another Question About CARDUI

MOTHERS RECOMMEND IT
"Why do so many MOTHERS recommend Cardui to their daughters?"
Isn't it but natural that any good mother should tell her daughters about Cardui if the mother herself felt that she had been benefited by this medicine?
It is impressive that so many women report having taken Cardui on the advice of their mothers. Cardui has been found to benefit women when weakened by malnutrition (poor nourishment); and it helps to relieve much discomfort at monthly periods.
Thousands of women testify Cardui helped them. Of course, if it does not help you, consult a physician.—(Adv.)

Vernon Ward Granted Interview By Jack Denny

Jack Denny has arrived in the city with his famous orchestra for the concert in the Robert H. Wright auditorium of the college at 8:30 o'clock tonight.

Vernon Ward of the college was granted an exclusive interview with the orchestra leader. The interview follows:

Jack Denny was not born with a silver spoon in his mouth; but he was born with a trumpet in his mouth, which, in his case was just as good.

At the age of six Jack was already surprising his elders in Greensville, Indiana, by his mastery of the trumpet. Even down in the grades, Jack was an orchestra leader, conducting a brass band. He was band-conductor in high school; and as a college student, led the DePaul University band and the Greensville municipal band.

Yours truly found Denny in the telegraph office at 1 o'clock this afternoon. With him was Judy Lane vocalist, starchy-eyed and brunet. Judy was knitting a gray sweater. Jack stopped writing a telegram to chat good-naturedly with your interviewer.

Jack said he liked Greenville so far. "Well, so far," were his words. He hadn't seen the college yet; but was planning to pay a visit this afternoon.

Saturday night he played for a dance at Washington and Lee University. From Greenville he will go to Scranton, Pennsylvania. After two weeks on the road he will fill an engagement at the Hotel Sir Francis Drake in Chicago, after which he will go to Los Angeles to play at the Cocoanut Grove and to make a picture for Warner Brothers. He has made several short subjects for Warner and Paramount already.

Denny has fifteen men in his band. Beside the vocalist, Judy Lane, Sam Amador, harpist, is featured with the orchestra.

Denny says his favorite number is still "Night and Day," but he likes such swing-time melodies as "The Way You Look Tonight." Though his is noted for his soft, sophisticated music, he will include several swing-time numbers in his program tonight.

When asked if he would go high-tow in his program at the college tonight, Denny laughed in his friendly way and said, "I couldn't if I tried. I'm going to stick to a straight dance program. There's no need to expect anything stiff or formal."

More than 1,300 tickets had been sold late this morning, and a large attendance is expected.

Most Of Counties Have Students At Teachers College

Pitt Leads All Others With 199, Four Times As Many as Johnston County, Which Ranks Second

Pitt County has 199 of the 1,074 students enrolled at East Carolina Teachers College this fall, more than four times as many as the next county, Johnston, which has 46. The all-time record for the fall quarter was reached before the end of the second week when registration ended and classrooms were closed to students.

President L. R. Meadows said he considered the record enrollment remarkable in view of the fact that the 2-year normal course is being discontinued this year and that no new students were admitted to that course this fall.

With 112 men enrolled, a number which shattered all previous marks, the Teachers College deftly established itself as the co-educational institution which its founders intended it to be.

Seventy-five North Carolina counties and ten other states are represented among the students. Among the states sending students: Virginia and South Carolina tie for first place with five each; Florida sends three; Tennessee two; and Kentucky, New Jersey, New York, Illinois, Georgia, and Texas are represented by one each. Among the counties represented Wayne comes third with 43, Nash and Sampson tie for next place with 36 each, Duplin has 31 and Wake 30. Remote counties represented are Yadkin, Stokes, Stanley, Rowan, Polk, and Davie.

There are 858 students in the dormitories, 825 women and 33 men. In several instances three women have been crowded into rooms intended for two and every available bed is taken. In the case of the men, 33 students are living in eight rooms in the basement of Ragsdale Hall, which is the teachers' dormitory. Many students have been turned away from the dormitories.

There are 278 primary majors, 300 grammar grade school majors, and 490 are working for the high school certificate. A large number have returned this fall to complete the 4-year course.

Registrations by classes follow: freshman, 299; sophomore, 180, junior 237; senior, 154; junior-normal taking the third quarter of first-year work to graduate, the last

PLAYFUL BABE TURNING TO 'STONE'

State Secretary Would Want Job Go To Abernethy

If Wade Appointed Director of Social Security He Would Ask Governor to Name His Successor

Reflector Bureau, Sir Walter Hotel, Raleigh, Oct. 19.—If Secretary of State Stacey W. Wade succeeds in getting the appointment as one of the two Social Security Directors in North Carolina, which it is known he is vigorously seeking, he will of course have to resign as Secretary of State in order to accept the other office. It is generally agreed. Such action would cause a vacancy and make it necessary for the Governor to appoint a Secretary of State until the new elected Secretary should take office when the new state officials are inaugurated in January.

Additional Teachers Employed At College

Two new teachers have been secured by the College to relieve the congestion in two departments, Home Economics and Geography, and they will arrive soon to begin work.

Miss Mary Berry Clark, well known in Greenville as she was formerly an instructor in Greenville High School, is the Home Economics teacher. She is a graduate of Peabody College and since leaving here has spent two years in graduate study at Columbia University and has been teaching in New York State. Mr. Lamar Stephens, of Bowling Green, Kentucky, has been employed as an instructor in Geography. He received his M. A. degree from the University of Wisconsin and taught geography in the West Kentucky State Teachers College. He was called to Greenville from Clark University, Worcester, Mass., where he has been working on his dissertation for the doctor's degree.

The congestion in the Education Department was relieved by a readjustment. Dr. M. K. Fort in order to give full time to classroom teaching in that department turned over to Miss Wahl his work as principal of the Training School, and supervisor of the grammar grades, Miss Kathleen Plumb, a new teacher, took charge of the seventh grade, Miss Wahl's place. Dr. Fort completed his work for his doctor's degree during the past summer, receiving the degree from Peabody College in August.

N. Y. Stock Market

New York, Oct. 19.—(AP)—Further encouraging trade prospects spurred the stock market on another upward jaunt today and many issues reached new high recovery territory with gains of fraction to two or more points. While some of the recent leaders were content to hang around their Saturday's closing levels, a number of the oils, coppers, rails and specialties were well off in front of the procession near the fourth hour. The activity was pronounced at the opening with the ticker tape for a while falling behind. The volume dwindled later as a little selling cropped out here and there.
