SAYS M'CREA WAS MEMBER BLACK LEGION

Assistant Attorney General Files Six Affidavits

CHARGES DENIED BY PROSECUTOR

O'Hara, Republican Candidate Opposing McCrea, Files Affidavits Before Court

Detroit, Oct. 20.—(AP)—Chester P. O'Hara, assistant attorney-general of Michigan, presented six affidavits in court today charging that Duncan C. McCrea, Wayne county prosecutor, who has been active in several cases against Black Legion members, was himself a member of the hooded night riders.

McCrea has denied such charges many times. O'Hara, the republican candidate opposing McCrea for re-election, introduced the affidavits before Common Pleas Judge Ned H. Smith at the opening of the examination of 20 alleged Black Legion members on charges of criminal syndicalism.

Explaining he presented charges against McCrea as the formal reason for intervention by the attorney-general's office in the case, O'Hara said: "Our reason for asking the right to intervene is that we have affidavits showing McCrea was initiated into the Black Legion on July 21, 1934."

"He attended numerous meetings, including closed meetings no one was allowed to enter who did not have the password of the organization."

After the affidavits were presented Judge Smith granted O'Hara the right to intervene and the examination proceeded. The affidavits were made by Deputy Attorney General Charles A. Poole; Elvia Clark, who swore he was present at McCrea's initiation; John Bannerman, Ervin Lee, Harvey Davis and John S. Vincent, who were convicted of murder in the Poole case.

Salvation Army Campaign Drive Officially Started

Organization Seeking $1,500 to Erect Community Building For Use in Work in This City

Personnel of the Salvation Army, aided by the organization's advisory board, officially launched a campaign at a dinner meeting last night to raise a budget of $2,000 and an additional $1,500 to erect a community building to be located on Dickinson avenue.

The proposed building would be used to carry on the organization's work among the under-privileged boys and girls of this community. It was pointed out that the Army is using a building loaned to them at the present, but a building of its own is desired.

Rev. Worth Wicker, rector of the local Episcopal church, is chairman of the campaign. He is being aided by the advisory board composed of J. C. Galloway, Guy V. Smith, A. A. Ellwanger, J. Hicks Corey, R. M. Garrett, S. M. Woolfolk, J. H. Waldrop, T. Y. Walker, Dr. A. M. Schultz, Dr. K. E. Pace, J. C. Gaskins, Mayor M. K. Blount and R. V. Keel.

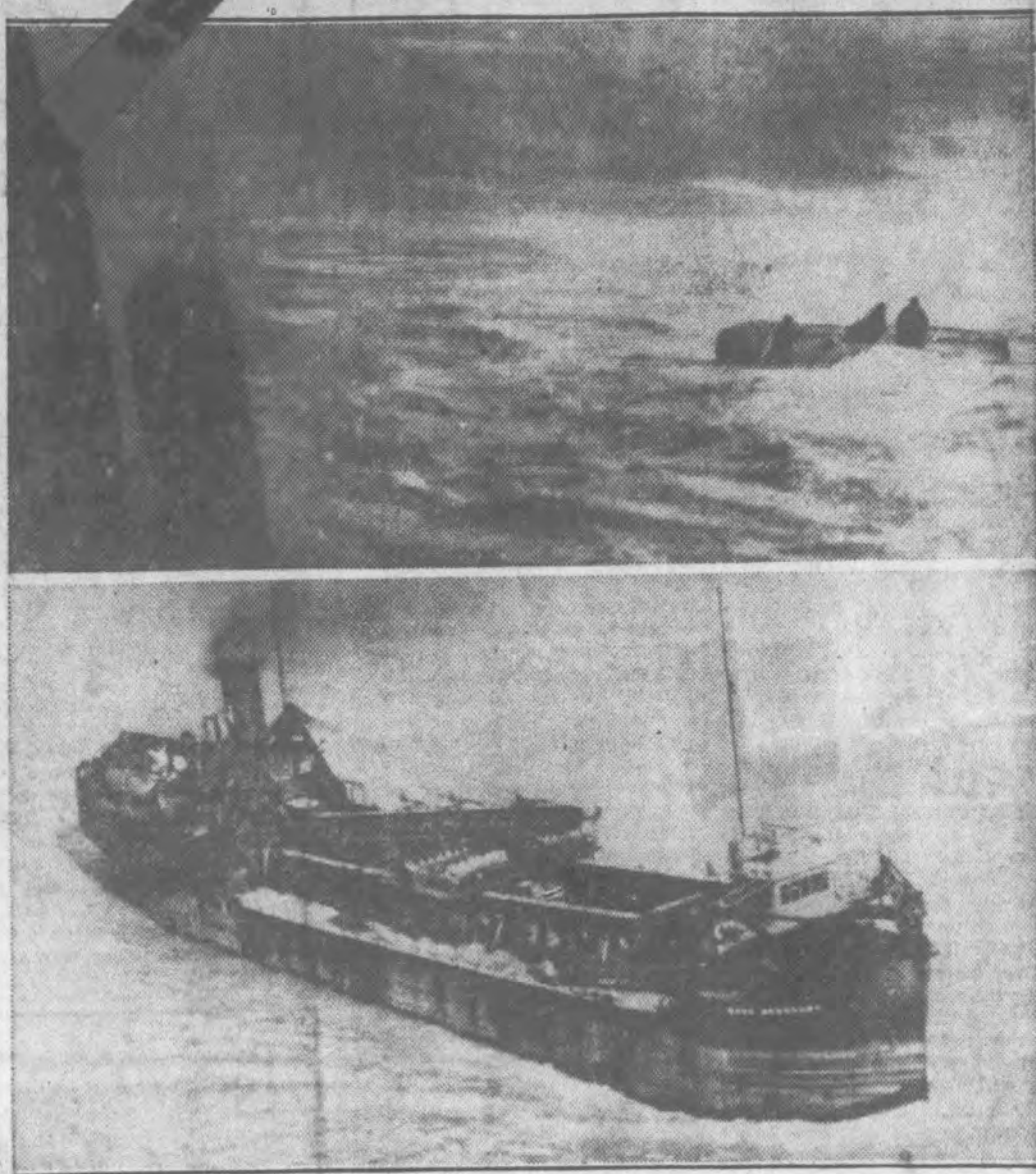

Mr. Galloway, chairman of the board, issued the following statement today in an appeal for help for funds to carry on the Salvation Army's work in this community: "The Salvation Army's comprehensive program has its relation to all phases of life. It seeks the unchurched, the underprivileged, the disconsolate, and the friendless. Men, women and children need the help that you can give, and which will make possible the opening of a 'Door of Hope' in their desperate need and confusion."

"The Army officers are performing an effective and worthwhile service. I am confident that the citizens of Greenville will respond generously to the Army's appeal, for funds to carry on its work of mercy and upbuilding. We must keep intact and in vigorous condition an agency of such known and tried efficiency as the Salvation Army. May we urge your generous response?"

"Your unfortunate neighbors will thank you, the Salvation Army will thank you, the Campaign committee will thank you, and the undersigned will certainly appreciate your cooperation and help very much."

COUNTY COURT OPENS SESSION

Various Charges Disposed of During Morning

County court was resumed here today after having been in recess last week. The court also will be in recess for the next two weeks, when Superior court terms will be in session.

Bill Allen was convicted of driving drunk and fined $50 and costs and had his license revoked for 12 months. In addition he was given a suspended road sentence.

F. M. Buck and Ernest Riddick, each charged with driving drunk, were acquitted of the charges.

Lizzie Cox, alias Lizzie Atkinson, was sentenced to work at the county home for 90 days upon conviction of carrying concealed weapons.

Bryant Dixon was given a 90-day road sentence upon conviction of drunkenness.

James Moore and James Carmack, charged jointly with larceny, were given four-months sentences, suspended upon provision they pay the costs and remain of good behavior and pay $1.34 to the prosecuting witness.

Sam Harrington and Berry May entered a plea to assault with a deadly weapon and judgment was suspended upon provision they pay the costs.

A nol pros with leave was taken in the cases charging Vilma Harty with assault with a deadly weapon and driving careless and reckless.

Norfolk Southern Opposes Granting Trucks Franchise

Counsel Says Hurdle Trucks Hauling Freight Tear Up Highways For Which They Pay Nothing

Raleigh, Oct. 20.—(AP)—R. H. Simms of Raleigh, counsel for the Norfolk Southern, asked the Utilities Commission today to deny Thurston Motor Lines of Wilsey franchise to operate four trucking services in Eastern North Carolina and predicted a day would come when trucks had to operate on special highways devoted only to their use.

I. M. Railey, counsel for the petitioning company had contended the proposed service between Wilson and Snow Hill, Tarboro and Kinston, Rocky Mount and New Bern and Bethel and Kinston was needed for the convenience and development of the areas involved.

Sen. J. W. Bailey Address Thursday

Senator J. W. Bailey is scheduled for an address at the court house at 8 o'clock Thursday night, and not Wednesday night, as reported yesterday.

Senator Bailey will speak here under the auspices of the Pitt County Democratic committee. The public is invited to hear the senior senator from this state. Senator Robert E. Reynolds spoke here last week.

The women's rally will be held at the court house at 3:00 o'clock tomorrow, at which time F. C. Harding will speak on the proposed constitutional amendments.

Senator Bailey will speak in Robersonville tomorrow night.

WOMEN CHASE TRAIN'S CREW

Engineer Beaten and Clothing Torn From Official

Minden, La., Oct. 20.—(AP)—Women strike sympathizers stopped a train here, beat the engineer, tore the clothing from an official, chased the crew into nearby woods and left the frightened passengers stranded.

The women, several hundred strong, surrounded the northbound "Shreveporter" of the Louisiana & Arkansas Railway when it stopped here for water last night, climbed aboard and collared Mark Willis, engineer of the line, and a negro brakeman. Other crew members leaped from the train and fled into the woods.

W. F. Salisbury, chief engineer of the road, protested vigorously when Willis was hauled into the station and forced to telegraph his resignation to the president of the railroad.

The women turned on Salisbury, witnesses said, ripped his clothing from his body, slapped him soundly and let him go.

The disturbance marked the second time women took a vigorous part in the strike. Last week a group of about 25 women halted a freight train for three hours, imprisoned the conductor in a train car and sought to force the train crew to quit.

The strike has been in progress for more than a month.

The stalled train resumed its trip to Shreveport today with a new crew and no untoward incident occurred.

MONDAY SALES AVERAGE 29.20

New High Mark Hit On Market For 1936 Season

A new high average mark for the 1936 tobacco market was set here yesterday when 1,208,110 pounds were sold for $352,733.29, an average of $29.20.

The previous high average for the season was set at $29.05 last Monday.

With the market off to a good start this week, indications were that the average would continue high throughout the week, despite the fact that much tobacco of inferior grades is being offered. Warehousemen said yesterday that the quality was off, but in spite of this the season's high average mark was set.

The season's average continues to climb, having reached a mark of $23.82 at the close of the auctions yesterday. So far this year 30,322,292 pounds have been sold for $716,431.34.

Although it was officially estimated yesterday that approximately 75 per cent of the 1936 crop had been sold, the prices continue strong.

All grades continued to show strength yesterday, with fair to good quality selling especially good.

News Behind The News

Washington By IRA BENNETT DIFFICULT: Maybe it's the radio, maybe political hoax-smiths have lost their ancient art, but it's noted that in recent years the campaign "roor-back" doesn't rear its horrid head as it did of yore. Along with the "whispering campaign" it has gone to one rendezvous with oblivion.

Instantaneous communication throughout the country works both ways. It starts sensations with amazing quickness—but it kills them off just as quickly.

It would be very difficult now for a mad wag to draw a comprising letter from a foreign diplomat, such as sent Sackville West, British Minister, out of the country, ably assisted by Grover Cleveland's boot. Whispering campaigns, such as the yarn that Harding was of negro descent, are scotched by dragging them into the open.

TWO NOMINEES RESUME TASKS FOR CAMPAIGN

Candidates Seeking Votes at Opposite Ends of Nation

ROOSEVELT GOES TO NEW ENGLAND

Landon to Speak Tonight in Los Angeles in Effort to Win Support of California

(By Associated Press) At opposite ends of a country fairly ringing with the speech-making of countless campaigners the two major party presidential nominees went about their tasks today.

Before arriving at Los Angeles to speak in the gigantic coliseum tonight, Governor Landon praised the CCC, said it could be made "far more effective" and declared he would remove "politicians" who, he said, "have taken over the administrative jobs."

President Roosevelt wound up some work at the White House to depart tonight for a tour of New England with the main speech scheduled for Worcester, Mass., tomorrow evening. Much of his schedule for next week remained undecided, but there was a possibility that he might go into Pennsylvania.

Last night saw more speeches by leaders in both camps than any night of the campaign to date. Addressing a Lincoln, Neb., gathering, Col. Frank Knox charged that the Roosevelt administration "has secret and undisclosed plans we know not what" while Secretary of Agriculture Wallace told a De Kalb, Ill., audience that Republican leaders "spend untold millions" to set "class against class."

Republican Chairman John Hammon said in a sworn statement that the corrupt practices act was violated by solicitation of more than $300,000 from corporations for the Democratic convention book.

From Secretary of the Interior Ickes came a description of Alfred E. Smith as an "insanely jealous man" whose "bosses hate Roosevelt because they can not control him." Ickes called Landon a man of "reversible political opinions."

Worried Britain Requests Nations To Answer Charge

Germany, Italy and Portugal Pressed For Reply to Accusations of Meddling in Spanish War

London, Oct. 20.—(AP)—Worried lest Russia bolt the "hands-off-Spain" agreement, and harried by a laborite demand for immediate convocation of parliament to debate Spanish neutrality, Great Britain today pressed Germany, Italy, and Portugal to reply to charges they have meddled in Spain.

Informed sources said merely that the government was "concerned at the delay" on the part of the authoritarian state, but it was learned that Lord Plymouth, chairman of the non-intervention committee, had taken occasion to confer with representatives of the three countries.

So far no date has been set for the next meeting of the committee, despite growing Soviet Russian irritation.

ITALY REVIVES EFFORT TO SECURE PEACE PACT

Rome, Oct. 20.—(AP)—Italian diplomats, headed by foreign minister Count Galeazzo Ciano, rode to Berlin today for conferences, which informed sources predicted, might bring new life to Premier Mussolini's long-advocated four power pact.

Italian-German policy at present—under the diplomatic "dictator's duet" of Mussolini and Adolf Hitler—was reported to center around possible collaboration of Great Britain, France, Italy and Germany as guarantors of European peace. Authoritative sources acknowledged French ties with Russia—through the mutual military assistance agreement—constitute a stumbling block for Italian aspirations.

Italy hopes, however, to swing Great Britain away from tacit approval of the Franco-Soviet combine by strong intimations of an Italo-German rapprochement. In well informed circles it was not thought conversations in the German capital would produce immediate military or political accords.

The discussion might easily provide a common front against communism it was forecast, and a common attitude on neutrality in the Spanish civil war.

PARKERS HELD IN CONSPIRACY

Father and Son Taken in Connection Wendel Case

Mount Holly, N. J., Oct. 20.—(AP)—Ellis Parker, renowned chief of Burlington county detectives, and his son Ellis, Jr., were arrested today on bench warrants issued by federal judge Guy L. Fiske, before whom a sealed indictment was returned yesterday in Newark in connection with the kidnaping of Paul H. Wendel.

They were taken into custody at the office of United States Commissioner Ralph W. Haines by United States Marshal William P. McDermitt and Chief Deputy Marshal W. B. Snowden.

Bail for the Senior Parker was set at $10,000 and that for his son at $25,000. Personal friends and local merchants supplied the bail and the men were released pending their appearance before a federal judge in Trenton, October 27.

No specific charges were cited in the warrants. United States attorneys John J. Quinn said at his Red Bank office the Parkers were indicted for conspiracy under the Lindbergh act, a law passed by Congress after the Lindbergh kidnaping. The penalty on conviction he said was life imprisonment if the jury recommended the maximum; otherwise it would be left to the discretion of the court.

Women In County To Hold Meeting 3 P. M. Wednesday

F. C. Harding to Be Principal Speaker at Rally at Court House; All Women Urged to Attend

Women from all over the county are urged to attend the rally to be held in the court house from 3 to 4 o'clock tomorrow afternoon under the auspices of the Democratic Women's organization of the county.

Mrs. Vance Perkins, vice chairman of the County Executive committee, said today it was important that as many women as could attend the meeting and become informed on the political situation.

F. C. Harding, dean of the Pitt county bar, will be the principal speaker and in addition to expounding the Democratic nominees, will discuss the proposed constitutional amendment to be voted on at the November 3 election.

Mrs. Perkins said the women would be reminded that Saturday would be their last chance to register to vote in the election and said efforts were being made to have every Democratic woman in the county place her name on the registration books.

It was pointed out that a person must have been a resident of the state for one year, the county six months and the precinct four months to be eligible to vote in the election.

The local Democratic women have been unusual yactive during the present campaign. They held a meeting of precinct officials at the home of Mrs. Perkins recently, at which time Mrs. J. B. Spillman of this city, but at present living in Raleigh where she is serving as vice chairman of the State Democratic executive committee, spoke.

DEATH CLAIMS LOCAL WOMAN

Mrs. Carrie D. Laughinghouse, widow of the late Dr. Chas. O'H. Laughinghouse, died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. R. C. Stokes, Jr., at 414 Elizabeth street, at 11:40 o'clock last night following an illness of several months.

Funeral services will be conducted tomorrow morning at 11 o'clock from the home of her daughter, with whom she had lived for several years.

The services will be conducted by Dr. G. R. Comb, pastor of Jarvis Memorial church, of which Mrs. Laughinghouse was a member. Assisting the pastor will be Rev. Worth Wicker, rector of St. Paul's Episcopal church. Burial will follow in Cherry Hill cemetery by the side of her late husband.

Mrs. Laughinghouse was born December 7, 1869, the daughter of the late W. H. and Mary Virginia Dail Sugg of Snow Hill. She was married to Dr. Laughinghouse on June 10, 1894, and has made her home in Greenville since that date, except during the several years that Dr. Laughinghouse served as State Health officer, which time she made her home in Raleigh.

Mrs. Laughinghouse took an active part in the social, religious and civic affairs during her life time, and was recognized for her benevolence.

She was a charter member and one of the organizers of the local American Legion Auxiliary and for many years served as president of the organization. She also was active in the United Daughters of the Confederacy and was a charter member of The End of The Century Book Club, as well as active in numerous other women's organizations.

Surviving her are her one daughter, Mrs. Stokes; two sons, Charles O'H. Laughinghouse, Jr., and H. Dail Laughinghouse, all of Greenville; seven grandchildren; three brothers, W. H. Dail, Jr., George Dail and Fred Dail, all of Greenville; and five sisters, Mrs. G. A. Rouse and Mrs. G. M. Holden of Farmville, Mrs. J. W. Dixon of Raleigh, Mrs. Paschal Boyd of Mooreville, and Miss Minnie Best Dail of Snow Hill.

SHOUTING WOMEN CALL OUT OFFICE WORKERS

Madrid, Oct. 20.—(AP)—A vast new army called out by shouting bands of women poured out of Madrid's factories, shops and office buildings as the wind carried the boom of besieging Fascist artillery into the capital's very streets.

A thousand housewives and servants shrieking their frenzied demands for a militant defense of Madrid ran through the business section and dashed back and forth in the side streets waving shipping baskets and calling upon anti-fascists to abandon their benches and desks and take up arms.

In grim and resolute reply the workers poured from office buildings and plants big and small. Arms were passed out hastily and the government set it for a great mass thrust to carry the battle to the enemy, already virtually within striking distance of Madrid.

As the workers fell in step with the capital's militia reserve a shifting wind carried the crash of cannonade plainly into the city from the hills on the west and the planes on the south.

On both fronts the fascists were well within a 20 mile radius of Madrid.

COURT BATTLE MAY HALT REA

Fight with Private Concerns To Be Brought Out

Reflector Bureau, Sir Walter Hotel, By J. C. BASKERVILLE

Raleigh, Oct. 20.—The long-considered dispute between the Federal Rural Electrification Administration and the power companies in North Carolina has at last flared out into the open as a result of the temporary restraining order obtained here by the Carolina Power and Light Co., enjoining the Johnston County Electric Membership Corporation from building transmission lines in territory already being served by the Carolina Power and Light Co. Plenty of fireworks are expected when the hearing is held November 2 on whether or not the order shall be made permanent.

The Johnston County Cooperative-Carolina Power and Light Co. fuss came to a head as the result of the awarding of a contract by the county cooperative for the building of 77 miles of rural electric lines in territory already served by the Carolina Power and Light Co. without first having secured a certificate of convenience and necessity from the State Utilities Commission. The power company maintains that since it already has this certificate of convenience and necessity and since the county cooperative does not have it, it has no legal right to build transmission lines in the same territory already served by the power company. The Carolina Power and Light Co. has recently built some 170 miles of rural lines in Johnston county and several of the lines the county cooperative proposes to build would duplicate lines which have already been built by the power company.

It is understood that the Johnston county cooperative is blaming its troubles on the North Carolina Rural Electrification Authority and accusing it of "selling out" to the power companies. But the record in the case does not bear out this contention. For the record shows that more than two years ago the state authority approved an application for a loan from the Federal REA for Johnston county, but that this application went unheeded until June 1, 1936, when Administrator Morris L. Cooke advised that the REA could lend the Johnston county cooperative only $80,000 instead of the more than $300,000 which it had requested. The state rural electrification body advised the Johnston county cooperative to refuse to accept the $80,000 which would have been enough to build only 60 miles of line instead of 170 miles which was feasible.

In the mean time, according to Chairman Dudley Bagley of the state Rural Electrification Authority, the Carolina Power and Light Co. had agreed to build from 125 to 150 miles of lines in Johnston county, although it has since built 170 miles while the REA in Washington was making up its mind as to what it would do with the request for a loan from the Johnston county cooperative. By the time the Federal REA approved the $310,000 loan for Johnston county, the Carolina Power and Light Co. had already built most of the lines which had been desired and which much of this loan was expected to build.

From the outset, the state Rural Electrification Authority advised the REA in Washington to insist that all local membership corporations obtain certificates of necessity and convenience from the State Utilities Commission as soon as they were organized, in order to prevent independent power companies from going into these counties and build their own lines before the cooperative membership corporations could get their lines under construction and to prevent what has happened in Johnston county. But the REA in Washington gave the REA in North Carolina to understand that it did not recognize either it or the State Utilities Commission, that it was run-

Washington Daybook

By Preston Grover

Washington — When A. Smit announced for Governor Landon the quick question in Washington was:

"What will that do in New York? Undoubtedly Smith has a New York following, more particularly in New York City. But can he take this following away from Roosevelt? Past election figures don't show, if he can.

Smith, with Roosevelt backing as a gubernatorial candidate, lost the state to Hoover in 1928 by 103,000 votes. Yet Roosevelt won the governorship, Roosevelt, with Smith supporting, won the state by a 607,000 majority in 1932.

Few look this year for a repetition of such smashing victories as distinguished the Republican swing in 1928 and the Democratic backswing in 1932. If the election should be close enough to let New York's 47 votes decide the issue, the importance of Smith's influence might stand out clearly. It might put him in a position where, with a stout following, he could swing New York and thus the nation.

You can get bets here either way you think New York will go.

If there is any fear among New Deal employes of an upset in November it hasn't reflected itself in flights of the underlings into the safety of the civil service.

In past elections year, old civil service employes say, a few nervous job holders have scurried out of appointive jobs into the shelter of the civil service. But no fugitives have shown up in 1936.

In 1932 several attorneys handling claims cases transferred from the justice department into the veterans administration. There they couldn't be removed directly but they were got at in another way. The veterans litigation they had been handling was transferred back to the justice department. This left the transferring attorneys nothing to do. Their jobs ended. New Deal appointees now are doing the work.

Since January 1, some 568 employes have been blanketed into the service, all because of acts of congress or by executive orders, not because of job-fear.

Many of the lesser hands got jobs in the emergency agencies through patronage but it didn't seem to help their pay much. Civil service officials say most of the stenographer-clerk employes in the emergency ranks are paid on a civil service rating. When the 568 were taken in, few salary changes resulted. Some took slight cuts, others slight increases.

ning its rural electrification program to suit itself and that it needed no advice from outside sources, it is understood. It also sent its own representative from Washington to Johnston county, advise the Johnston county cooperative to have nothing to do with the State REA and to rely on Washington only.

But without the protection of a certificate of convenience and necessity, the Johnston county cooperative kept on waiting for its loan—and the Carolina Power and Light Co. kept on building lines. Now, after two years, the Johnston county cooperative has its $310,000 but can't build any lines, because most of them are already built. If the REA in Washington had not dilly-dallied for two years, while the Carolina Power and Light Co. was building lines, or had listened to the State REA instead of ignoring its advice, the present fiasco would not have developed. Now, its attitude of superiority may prove very embarrassing and costly.

How's Your Health—

The Treatment of Rupture

When patient is told he has a rupture, he is naturally eager to know whether it can be cured by a truss or if not cured, whether he can get along without an operation. Also, he may want to know the risks involved in the surgical treatment of hernia compared with those of allowing the condition to remain.

Except in young infants, the wearing of a truss is not likely to effect cure of inguinal hernia. In children, a well fitted truss, or a series of trusses worn day and night, as well as in the bath, may, in a year's time cure the condition.

In adult, a truss cannot cure a inguinal hernia but this must not be taken to mean that trusses are ineffective in retaining within the abdomen the mass that would otherwise enter the inguinal canal.

Provided the hernia sufferer is not called on to do exacting physical work; that his skin can comfortably withstand the friction caused by the truss pads; that his truss is well fitted and most of all that he is reconciled to the wearing of a truss, he may "get along" with it very well.

The direct inguinal hernia, which is usually present on both sides, and is more common in older persons, can be retained easily by means of a truss.

However, in considering the treatment of hernia, we must bear in mind its outstanding risk, which can be avoided only by having the rupture corrected surgically. This complication is strangulation. In strangulation that portion of the intestines which has entered the inguinal canal is compressed, or twisted, so that its lumen is blocked, and its blood circulation is interfered with. If the condition remains unrelieved for any length of time, local necrosis results and peritonitis is likely to follow. The older the hernia, the more likely is this complication to develop.

For this reason, it is advisable that whenever the patient is in fit condition, inguinal hernia should be treated surgically. The sooner this is done the better. The operation is without much risk but the longer it is suffered the more complicated becomes the task of correcting it surgically.

Of late there has been some discussion of the injection treatment of hernia. In a way this represents a superficial application of the form of treatment so effective in dealing with varicose veins, to a condition radically different.

Needless to say, patented rupture "buttons," "electric belts" and "home cures" are worse than worthless.

At present, the best medical and surgical opinion holds surgery the best and safest line of treatment for inguinal hernia.

Jack Denny Pleases Audience
Playing all the leading "Hit Parade" numbers and many selections that he himself has introduced to the radio public, Jack Denny bowed to the applause of 1,500 listeners at East Carolina Teachers College last night.

Judy Lane, brunette, starry-eyed little vocalist from Brooklyn, repeated her feature number, "Basin Street Blues," when the handclaps of the concert audience would not let her take her seat. Judy sang this selection in the manner of a New Orleans negro, "trucking" an "shufflin'".

Myron Hanley, baritone crooner, featured such music as "I Can't Escape from You", and "Night and Day."

The program included all types of American popular music: waltzes, lilting melodies, "swing-time" numbers, blues songs, and outspoken jazz selections. At times the audience settled back in sentimental contentment, and again they "danced" in their seats.

The full program follows: When Did You Leave Heaven? Bye Bye Baby, featuring Judy Lane; In the Chapel in the Moonlight; Stomping at the Savoy; Two Hearts in 3 Time; Moonlight and Palm Trees; South Sea Island Magic; Honeyuckle Rose; I Can't Escape from You; When the Real Thing Comes Along, featuring Myron Hanley; Basin Street Blues, Happy I am Happy; Did I Remember, Melancholy Baby, Star Dust, Night and Day, You Turned the Tables on Me; a medley featuring numbers that Denny has introduced over the air (Sweet Madness, Did You Ever See a Dream Walking?, Tormented, It's a Sin to Tell a Lie); A Fine Romance, Boston Tea Party, The Way You Look Tonight, Waltz in Swing-Time, You're Not the Kind, Tain't No Use, Bells of Saint Mary's, Christopher Columbus.

Party for College Freshmen
A party was given by the Women's Athletic Association of the college in honor of the Freshman Class on Saturday night in the Robert H. Wright building, which is used as a gymnasium. The guests were taken on a trip which was made exceedingly realistic by very clever management.

A train was rigged up to take the freshmen to Hilarity Falls. The engine was made from the piano, which was covered with brown wrapping paper. The smoke stack, a waste paper basket on top of a tall hat rack, was reaching high above the engine. The engineer had a seat on the piano. Three rows of chairs extended to the far end of the gym. These chairs were divided into three sections representing the cars. When they reached the gym the train was ready to move; the engineer had taken his seat; and the freshmen were ushered into the cars by the conductor. The "butch" was strolling up and down the aisle selling candy, peanuts and chewing gum. The porter, all dressed up, was carrying bags and dusting the passengers. When all the freshmen had arrived, the trip began. The whistle blew for the first station. Here they enjoyed the following games and contests: honey-moon race, firemen's brigade, apple race. When the travellers were ready to enter the diner, they found the table spread with ice cream sandwiches. While they ate, they listened to a speech made by the President of W. A. A., Miss Helen Wilson, who told them that they could win their college colors by participating in the sports sponsored by the Intramural Program. The activities in the program are: basket ball, soft ball, horse shoe, croquet, tennis, hiking, and a track and field day which is held in the Spring.

The officers of the association, who were introduced, are: President, Miss Helen Wilson; vice-president, Miss Louise Blanton; secretary, Miss Louise Shackelford; treasurer, Miss Ethel Lee Byrd.

At the end all joined in singing the college song.

PEACE ACTION

Ray Newton, executive director of the Emergency Peace Campaign, in announcing the nine-point nationwide program "To Keep the United States Out of War and to Promote World Peace," declared last spring, as the campaign got underway in this country, that "there is yet time for the American people to arouse themselves and become articulate. We CAN keep this country out of the next war if we act soon enough—with enough strength and vigor. We cannot, however, unless literally millions of people in this country dedicate themselves to this cause—unless they are willing to sacrifice now for peace as much as they will have to sacrifice for war later. If this country is to be kept out of war, money is greatly needed. Only sacrificial service can now prevent the sacrifice of men and millions later. Remember that the great drive for peace depends upon what you do. Don't do your bit—DO YOUR BEST!"

The Emergency Peace Campaign's nine-point program for the United States is as follows:

- (1) MASS MEETING AND CONFERENCES in the principal cities of this country, 278 of which were held last spring, with 500 planned for this fall.
- (2) Enlisting YOUNG MEN AND WOMEN (who would be called first in another war) for a vigorous campaign in politically strategic rural areas, work camps, college campuses and churches.
- (3) Strengthening and uniting the Peace Forces in CHURCHES, SYNAGOGUES and other RELIGIOUS GROUPS.
- (4) Helping to build a Peace Movement OF LABOR, BY LABOR FOR LABOR.
- (5) Conducting a NATION-WIDE POLL OF ATTITUDES on War and Peace.
- (6) Securing a NATIONAL ENROLLMENT OF THOSE DETERMINED TO WORK FOR PEACE and who also are determined not to approve of or participate in (a) any war, (b) and war except in case of invasion, (c) Promoting Peace Education through the GRANGES, FARMERS' UNIONS and other FARM GROUPS.
- (8) Encouraging vigorous LEGISLATIVE MEASURES to make it difficult for the United States to become involved in another war.
- (9) EDUCATION through the Press, Radio, Travelling Motion Pictures, Literature, etc.

CLUB OFFICIAL SPEAKER HERE

Rotary International District Governor Visits City

By WYATT BROWN
"We could do nothing for peace when Italy was at war with Ethiopia," replied an Italian Rotary official to Edmund Harding of Washington, who had asked what peace moves the Italian Rotarians had made. "Rotary must build for the next fifty or hundred years to affect its purpose of World Peace," Mr. Harding went on. Mr. Harding is Rotary International's 57th District Governor who was speaking to the local Rotary Club last night on the occasion of his official visit to the club. For the most part the District Governor confirmed his remarks to indicating the four lanes of approach to the Rotary ideal of service and exporting the official to their role of keeping the machinery going.

The District Governor opened by leading a few songs on what he calls his "squeeze fiddle"—an accordion—remarking that many a poor speech had been saved from being attempted by a good song. With that as an introduction he indicated the four lanes of approach to achieving Rotary's ideal of service: the Aims and Objectives Committee, Vocational Service Committee, and the fourth the International Service Committee. In commenting on the role of the Community Service Committee he insisted that Rotary preferred to act through existing community agencies and not to try to duplicate in its efforts of promotion.

He announced as a set project for the clubs in the 57th District the holding by each club of an Easter Hunt for the children of the respective communities. There were many specific suggestions helpful to the club in the course of his helpful and inspiring remarks.

One interesting thing he told about in making International service appear as a local possibility was how he made an International Rock Garden. He wrote a club in each of the 82 countries which have Rotary Clubs asking for a rock or stone for his unique garden. Every nation replied. Each one sent letters, pictures, and books. And all but one sent a rock; the one that did not explain in their letter that there was not so much as a pebble in their whole country and that David would have had no chance with Goliath in their country.

In closing he exhorted the members to greater vision and to regard the love and friendship of Rotary which all knew was there for they had felt its power.

Guests of the Club were visiting Rotarian Grady Dixon of Ayden and Lee Folger and R. S. McClure, Karl Pace won the attendance prize given by L. M. Ernest, J. B. Kittrell, club president, presided.

Hollywood Sights And Sounds

By ROBBIN COONS
Hollywood — The one-time "bad boy of music" has settled down musically speaking, into the straight and narrow way. He is even composing scores for the movies now.

At 24 George Antheil started the world of music with his "Ballet Mechanique." An American from Trenton, N. J., George went to Paris after service in the aviation corps and began experimenting musically. He was 19 then, and an authentic member of that "lost generation" of Gertrude Stein and

Ernest Hemingway. At least he says: "We were part of a world in which there was nothing left but a need to reorganize. Nobody wanted to hear of love or sentimentality in the midst of Europe's terrific misery. The love-dove, June-moon themes would have made people scream."

Young Antheil put his musical finger on the spirit of the modern, strife-torn machine age and wrote "modern" music to make classicists scream. He was a Surrealist in music, wild and adventurous. Sometimes there were riots while he played, just as there were over art exhibits of the time. But in 1928 he left the group, went to Berlin with the state theater, and—

"I've been writing very melodic and very simple music for about 10 years now," he says. "Today the Ballet Mechanique no longer sounds 'modern,' but like the things one hears constantly. It was a small part of a mass effort to fabricate a new language in music, and the new language has come about thru the fighting, bleeding, and years spent in poverty of perhaps 2,000 men. Thousands of errors, as always, were made in this attempt to express new emotions musically."

In the beginning modern music was "cangorous, discordant, like awakening from a bad dream. Today scarcely a modern gives thought to speed, steel, light, astronomy, mechanics, but tries instead to express the subtle emotions of the times. Their music is no longer discordant—that's old-fashioned."

Antheil, here to write a score for C. B. DeMille's "The Plainsman," expresses scorn for those musicians who scorn the movies and the mass audience, preferring to appreciate each other on a musical Olympus. Musical snobs, he calls them, admitting he used to be one.

He is 36 now, boyish in appearance, casual in dress, enthusiastically discursive on music and its trends.

Having scored "The Scoundrel" and a few other films, he is approaching "The Plainsman" to "do the music of the period and to get as artistically as possible."

Talks To Parents

By BROOKE PETERS CHURCH
"Tom, run down to the store and get me a pound of sugar."

As he went on his errand, Tom whistled for his dog to keep him company, and the boy and the dog romped off together. His mother smiled. A boy and a dog seemed to fit together so perfectly, and these two were devoted to each other.

The dog lived up to his name. Rover. He was of a wandering nature, and found a hundred things to do away from his master's side, often on the other side of the street. Today he found a friend in the middle of the road and stopped to pass the time of day just as a speeding car came in sight. Tom whistled and then rashly jumped out to save his pet. The dog escaped, but the boy was struck.

Boys and dogs do seem to belong together, and the boy who has never had a dog of his own has missed one of the joys peculiar to boyhood. But it is a mistake to let a child and a dog go together where there is any traffic, unless the dog is small and can be easily kept on a leash safe from harm.

The more devoted the child is to his pet the greater the danger, for in saving the animal's life he will disregard every rule of safety and dash into the midst of traffic. It is more often the child who is killed than the pet.

Let Tom roam the woods and fields with Rover, if he is lucky enough to live where there are such things. Let him play with him in the yard or about the house. But there should be a hard and fast rule that when he goes out into the streets or near the railroad tracks, or wherever there is traffic, Rover never, never goes along.

Half of the pecan supply of the world is produced in Texas.

Declares Cotton Crop Ought Bring Premium

Raleigh, Oct. 20.—Nine out of every ten bales of cotton ginned in North Carolina this season have stapled 15-16 inch or longer and as such should command a premium, M. G. Mann, general manager of the North Carolina Cotton Growers Cooperative Association, said here today, as he stressed the importance of farmers having their cotton graded and stapled by government-licensed classifiers before offering it for sale.

Mr. Mann was quoting a government report on grades and staples which also showed that, despite the rainy fall season, more than 90 percent of the State crop is running middling or better.

"With the estimated State crop of 576,000 bales, the shortest in more than a quarter of a century, farmers certainly owe it to themselves and their families to market their cotton in the way they can get the most for it," he said.

VOTE !!!

The greatest possession of a free people is the ballot—the right to vote. It is a defender of our liberties and a weapon against injustice.

Yet that invaluable heritage is not prized by millions of otherwise good citizens. Proof of this statement can be found in undeniable statistics. In most elections, less than half of the persons who are entitled to vote do so. It is exceptional when an election brings to the voting booths more than fifty per cent of enfranchised citizens.

One result is that public officials are elected by minorities—the vote of the majority is silent. Another, and worse result, is a flagging of interest by the people in a thing which vitally affects us all—our government.

This year, there are great issues before us. No matter where we may stand, it is our duty as well as our privilege to mark an X opposite names of our choice on the ballot. Only by doing that, can we have popular government.

In Germany the right to vote has been virtually abrogated—at the last election citizens had a choice of endorsing Hitler or of leaving the ballot blank, there being no opponent. That is true of Italy, of Russia, of Greece, of a dozen other powers. And here in America, where we still have that right which preserves our freedom, half of us don't trouble to exercise it.

So—vote on November 3. Vote for Roosevelt, Landon, Lemke, Thomas—whichever you believe to be the best man for President. Do the same for other offices. It is your inalienable right to vote for whomever you please. And only by voting on the men and issues of the time, can that right be preserved.

THE NATIONAL WHIRLIGIG

have turned in plenty of material which the committee could begin hearings. No hearings have been held. Prospects now are that the committee will merely issue statements. These statements have all reflected upon alleged Republican misdoings and remain silent on such matters as rumored political manipulation of Hopkins' Works Progress forces in Pennsylvania.

Subpoenas will be issued against certain unnamed parties unless they voluntarily appear. That statement is made by Senator Loneran.

Partisanship by the committee in its operations thus far have caused many observers to discount its work in the remainder of the campaign. But it may be that the committee is taking the long-range view, accumulating material with which to prosecute actual violators of the corrupt practices act.

UNMOVED: Another committee to question Senator LaFollette's long-time investigation of alleged industrial espionage and coercion

Two Americans

A 'Non-Political' Comparison

CHALLENGER AND SECOND

Though a comparative newcomer to the political big leagues, Chairman John D. M. Hamilton of the Republican national committee entered the game 16 years ago in Kansas. Governor Landon's campaign manager is a dynamic, red-haired, 44-year-old Topeka lawyer who manned a machine gun in the World War and still is known for his rapid fire attacks.

PRESIDENT AND SECOND

Big "Jim" Farley, Democratic national chairman, brought to the 1936 campaign his experience from directing Mr. Roosevelt's race four years ago. Once a successful salesman of building materials, his technique as campaign manager has won for him the title, "super-salesman in politics." His memory for names and faces, it is said, is prodigious.

of labor. He waits for court action in the case of officers of the Railway Audit and Inspection company, who are charged with contempt. Leisurely court action may prolong the proceedings until long after the election.

Enough was brought out by the LaFollette committee to show that many large industrial concerns take precautions against possible disorders during strikes. They keep an eye on labor unions too, through special agents. On their side, union leaders try to keep thoroughly posted as to the plans of employers.

No information forthcoming from the inquiry seems to have had an influence upon voters. Labor men learned nothing new.

COLLUSION: How far industrial concerns can go in agreeing upon prices in bidding for government contracts is a puzzle to federal administrators. The Navy Department has often found important bids to be identical. Secretary Ickes complained that bids for reclamation works supplies, and equipment were identical. He referred them to the Department of Justice.

The Federal Trade Commission calls upon nine turbine-making concerns to quit price-fixing. Its statement accuses these concerns of practices which are penalized by law.

The Department of Justice is Pervy deliberate in dealing with these alleged collusive bidders. It is one thing to suspect collusion in violation of law, and another to work up a conclusive case. Some contractors plead that they are merely complying with practices established under NRA, when the government itself practically compelled business men to get together and gave them immunity from prosecution under anti-trust laws.

SIDESTEP: In some states farmers are asking for particulars on rival farm-relief programs. They have heard general propositions, but they can't be sure that any definite program has been decided upon by either Roosevelt or Landon.

One thing that keeps farmers in doubt is the talk of a change of spirit in the new congress. The idea prevails that no matter who is elected, the glad free days of outright cash benefits are over, or will be as soon as Congress begins to wrangle with the White House over appropriations.

Congress has never been found failing when it came to helping the farmer. The difficulty now, as some farmers see it, is that disputes over farm programs will give many Congressmen a chance to sidestep or postpone big-time farm relief.

NOTES: Donald Richberg tells Washington la students that the Supreme Court has become a super-legislature that is "thwarting the will of the people." Admiral Hamlet, late commandant of the Coast Guard, now a member of the Maritime Commission, takes a leading part in conciliating Pervy delinquent Coast waterfront disputes. Butter imports took another big jump in August. Building of airplanes for both Army and Navy work up a conclusive case. Some Navy air bases are taking shape.

RARE LINCOLN PHOTOS FOUND

In the dead letter office at Washington were found the original negatives for these two rare photographs of Abraham Lincoln. They were made shortly after the election of 1860 but the negatives were broken by shipment in the mails and finally were relegated to the "graveyard" of the postoffice department. Upon their recent discovery, they were added to the photograph collection of the Smithsonian Institute. (Associated Press Photos)

New York Daily Cross Word Puzzle

By JAMES McMULLIN TRUSTEES: Banking insiders are bracing themselves for another legislative shock when Congress convenes. They get word that David Lillenthal of TVA is working on a bill—as a sort of sidekick—which would impose further rigid restrictions on trust company operations.

Grapevine reports have it that the bill contains a provision which would forbid a bank which is trustee for a corporate bond issue to do any general banking business with the corporation in question. There is a possible conflict of interest in these two capacities which bankers concede may occasionally have done harm to bondholders in the past.

But bankers also contend that such a law would send trustee fees—a cost transmitted to purchasers of a bond issue—kiting to the skies. At present there is keen competition for the trusteeship of large corporate issues—resulting in comparatively microscopic fees—because of the lure of getting the corporation as a general banking client. With that lure abolished no bank would want a trusteeship except at a high price. So it is argued that bondholders are really better off under the present system. In any case, the big banks will be ready for a legislative battle if one develops.

EASIER: Why is TVA-er Lillenthal playing around with trust company legislation? That wouldn't be anything new. Mr. Lillenthal has had a hand in framing several New Deal measures which had nothing to do with the Tennessee Valley.

In this case, the very fact that Lillenthal is reported to be authoring the bill is encouraging to the banks. They doubt that he is working on a White House assignment. It is an open secret that several advisers known to be close to President Roosevelt have a low opinion of Lillenthal and his ideas. Hence he is hardly the logical choice to draft legislation strongly desired by the President.

Of course a bill without White House sponsorship is usually much easier to crowd off the Congressional calendar than one that bears the presidential label.

quest. This power expires in January unless renewed. There is even a possibility that executive authority in this respect will be broadened to give the President a wider range in which to revalue. Sources who predict this move do not imply that either Landon or Roosevelt would necessarily use such powers. But "gentlemen's agreements" do break down at times, and current teamwork between Uncle Sam, John Bull and Marianne rests on a tenuous base. If anything goes wrong, our government would be critically handicapped in protecting our interests unless it had as much freedom of monetary movement as the British and French have.

BLAME: New York dairy farmers have been getting their checks for September milk in the last few days and—as this column predicted—they aren't a bit happy about them. Normally the price received in October is better than that of September, but Sheffield producers are getting 14 cents per hundred pounds less than they did a month ago, and Dairyman's League farmers seven cents less. However, prices to producers are still markedly higher than they were before September.

Despite widespread discontent, a general milk strike is unlikely. This is due to the intervention of nature. Late rains have improved pastureage to such an extent that current milk production is running around 30 pounds more per day per dairy than the average for October. This is discouraging to strike sentiment, because the fact that a large supply of milk than usual is available would make such a strike more costly to participating farmers and less likely to succeed in the end.

But the political repercussions of this month's cut in the price of milk to producers may have an important bearing on the state—and national—elections. Rightly or wrongly, because of his intervention on behalf of consumers, most dairy farmers blame their setback on Governor Lehman. Indications are that they will crowd to the polls to vote against him (and, by that token, against Roosevelt).

DOUBT: Reports have been flying thick and fast about a big "sit-down" strike in WPA, to be staged before election. Don't take them too seriously.

The leader of the insurrectionist element is David Lasser, who has more of a flair for headlines than for organization. Careful scouting indicates that he may be able to kick up a noisy fuss in a few local situations, but nothing worth noticing on a national scale.

Lasser claims around a million followers. Insiders doubt that he actually commands the allegiance of one-tenth that number.

Local Boys and Girls Among Duke Students

Durham, Oct. 20.—Letters from home received here by the 788 North Carolinians enrolled at Duke university bear the post marks of 173 cities and towns in 78 counties of the state, it was revealed here this week in a digest of enrollment statistics for the fall semester. One student out of every four, or 25.04 per cent of the 3,171 enrolled, gives a North Carolina home address.

Not only do the North Carolinians lead in numbers, but they are also counted with the leaders in various campus activities. Such high positions as president of the men's student government, editorships and managements of campus publications, and places of leadership in numerous social, professional and honorary organizations are held by Tar Heels.

Among the North Carolinians enrolled at Duke for the fall semester are the following from Greenville:

- Charles D. Cobb, son of K. W. Cobb, 300 Pitt St.; Nellie Gordon, daughter of Mrs. C. S. Gordon; Benjamin M. Herring, son of Luther Herring, 504 E. Fourth St.; Wardell H. Mills; Charles W. Shuff III, and Landon E. Shuff, sons of Charles W. Shuff, 116 Fifth St.; and James M. and Ronald J. Slay, sons of Dr. R. J. Slay, 508 E. Eighth St.

The Wrong Murderer

By HUGH CLEVELY

SYNOPSIS: Ruth Fraser has failed to reach Terence Mahony, who has been betrayed by the kidnapper Ambrose Lawson and Ruth's guardian, Lee-Ramsden and so has dashed to tears the young Terence to leading against Lawson that the latter is about to ambush her. Ruth has hidden in the house, and a terrific fight has ensued. Fatty Bassett, Terence's second in command, is arranging an escape through a peep-hole in the window, next door to his house. For the balance has been given away by Barney Flynn, who knocked one of Lawson's men through a window into the street.

Chapter 32 THE POLICE

"THAT'S all right, Mr. Bassett," said Eli. "You been in my back room smokin' my cigars. The furniture van is in the back yard."

"Have it brought right up against the back yard at once," ordered Bassett. "An' bring me a big sheet." He called up the stairs to Barney and Chippy: "Come on, you fellows. You got to get away quick. The police may want to search this 'ouse as well as next door."

Fatty's plans were simple and efficient. Lake's bound figure, wrapped in a big sheet, was thrust quickly into the covered back of the van; Barney and Chippy got in with him.

Within a minute of the time when the men had entered the house, the furniture van glided away from the back door and was lost to sight in the traffic. Fatty sat down solemnly in Eli's back room, lit a cigar, and began to take a great interest in a set of pewter tankards.

Ruth, hidden behind the curtain in the house next door, heard the crash as the man Barney hit went through the window, and saw something dark and heavy fall past the window of the room in which she was hiding.

Very cautiously she peered through the window to see what it was. Lying on the pavement outside the house was the body of a man. The crowd which had assembled round her car was now assembling round the fallen man, and growing in numbers every minute; from outside the house came a babel of excited conversation.

Very softly she left the room and peered up the stairs. She could hear nothing. For a moment she hesitated. Then, nerving herself determinedly for the effort, she mounted the stairs to the small landing. A door was open, and she stepped forward and looked into the room beyond.

What she saw made her shrink back suddenly with a gasp of horror. On the floor were lying the figures of three men. Police whistles were blowing in the street; there was a sound of banging on the front door of the house. Ruth went back on to the landing outside the room.

"Mr. Bassett! Mr. Bassett!" she called. But there was no answer. She was alone in the house with the three men lying on the floor of that room.

Swiftly she descended the stairs. The front door was giving; in a moment it would burst open. She must not be found in that house. She went down the steps to the basement and crossed the kitchen to the back door. Luck was with her; no one was there. A few seconds later she was walking quickly along the street away from the house.

BUT though she was free for the moment, she realized that she was in a terrible position. The police would know she had been in the house when that man's death took place; her car was still outside the front door.

If only, she thought desperately, she could find Mahony; he would be able to tell her what she ought to do. Perhaps he would be at his rooms by now. She entered a telephone-box and rang up his number, but his landlady told her he had not yet returned.

At last she thought of a plan. A letter, written and posted to Mahony now would reach him by the evening post. She must write to him and tell him of her plight, and ask him to come and see her.

She must also find a hiding-place where she could wait safely for him in case he did not get her letter till late that night. Her guardian owned an unoccupied house in the St. John's Wood Road. If only she could get into that house she ought to be pretty safe there for a few hours. That would be her best hiding-place. She entered a little stationer's, bought a packet of note-paper and envelopes, wrote a brief note to Mahony, and posted it. Near the post box was a large cinema, and at the sight of it she paused again. In order to reach the house in St. John's Wood she had practically to cross London. Mahony would not receive her letter before about nine that evening; if he came in late he would not receive it till midnight or later. It would be safer for her, she reflected, to cross London after dark than in broad daylight; in the meantime she could remain fairly safely hidden inside that cinema.

She bought a ticket and entered the darkness of the picture theater. With a sigh of relief, she sank into the softly cushioned seat. Here, for five or six hours, she would be safe.

MAHONY waited for about a couple of hours in the empty house in St. John's Wood Road where Lee-Ramsden had sent him. The time passed very slowly; he chafed at his inactivity. All the time he was wondering what was happening, what Lawson was doing, and whether Bassett and his band of toughs would have had time to take advantage of the warning Lee-Ramsden was supposed to have sent them.

It was about four in the afternoon when he heard a sound of wheels on the gravel drive that led up to the house. Looking through the window he saw that a car had drawn up at the front door. Two men were dismounting from it, one of whom was carrying a suit-case. Thank heaven, thought Mahony, here at last was his disguise.

He went down and opened the front door. One of the men spoke to him.

"Is your name Mahony?" he asked.

"Yes," answered Mahony. "I and my friend have been sent here with directions to disguise you so that no one can recognize you," said the man.

"Good. Come along inside," invited Mahony.

He showed them into the empty drawing-room.

"Is this job going to take long?" he asked.

"Half an hour or so," answered the man. "It isn't easy to disguise a man in a way that will defy detection. Now do you mind standing here, well in the light, and keeping quite still!"

He stood in front of Mahony, looking him up and down, while his companion wandered restlessly about the room.

"Stand quite still," he said.

And as he spoke, he made a bad mistake. His glance left Mahony, staring over his shoulder at his companion, who was just behind Mahony, and there was an expression of tense excitement in his eyes that could not be accounted for by any interest he took in transforming Mahony's appearance.

Mahony turned sharply, moving slightly to one side. That movement just saved him. The clubbed revolver, wielded by the man behind him, missed his head and struck him a glancing blow on the shoulder.

That blow hurt Mahony; it also angered him. It seemed to him that everywhere he went he encountered treachery, and he was fed up with it. With a sharp, vicious movement he brought over his right fist in a short hook, and all the strength of his anger and all the power of his right shoulder were behind the blow.

It took the man who had just struck at him fairly on the angle of the jaw. With a heavy bump the man sprawled flat on his back.

And then Mahony sprang at the other man; as he did so the man sprang to meet him. There was a brief, fierce interchange of blows, each man hitting out with all his strength. The fight lasted about twenty seconds. A tremendous right cross to the jaw followed by a left hook to the stomach ended it. Mahony's opponent sank to the ground out for the count.

Both his adversaries were, for the time being, out of action. He stepped quickly across the room, and opened the suit-case which they had brought. It contained nothing but a coil of strong rope. Mahony laughed a trifle grimly at that.

He turned out the pockets of the two men, then tied them securely with the rope they had brought with which to him. There was nothing of any great interest in their pockets, but both men, he noticed, had cards of membership of the Golden Centipede Club. Evidently that club was used by nearly all Lawson's band of crooks.

Leaving the two men tied up on the floor of the empty drawing-room, he left the house.

Mahony gets information from Kennedy, tomorrow, which surprises him.

TEAM TO PLAY ON DAD'S DAY

N. C. State to Meet V. P. I. on Homecoming Day

Raleigh, Oct. 20.—North Carolina State's rejuvenated Wolfpack will wind up its home schedule Saturday afternoon when it meets V. P. I. in Riddick Stadium in a Southern Conference game.

Coming as the big attraction of State's annual celebration of Homecoming and Dad's Day, the game is expected to be witnessed by the largest crowd to see a football contest in Riddick Stadium this fall.

The week's program will begin Friday night with a big pep meeting, "stunt night" and bonfire. Part of the pep meeting will be broadcast. The football game is the big attraction Saturday and will be followed by the Homecoming Day dance in Frank Thompson Gymnasium.

Hundreds of alumni and parents of students will be present for the entertainment program and the big football battle with the Gobblers of V. P. I.

The Wolves will be in fine shape for the game. They came out of their battle with Furman without injury and the 37-0 win gave them the confidence they now have.

Coach Hunk Anderson ran the Wolves through a short practice yesterday afternoon. Hard work theirs today and will continue thru Thursday.

Anderson had nothing but praise for the way the team clicked against Furman. The linemen blocked and charged hard and on defense, crashed through with such force and speed that the Furman backs found it difficult to reach their own line of scrimmage.

Teachers To Engage Cullowhee Saturday

The Teachers College Pirates will go to Cullowhee Saturday to engage the West Carolina Teachers College team.

The Pirates played a practice game with the Duke University B team in Durham yesterday. Coach Farley's eleven looked good in scrimmage, though no official score was kept.

Sixty Australian farmers will come to California in 1937 to study agricultural processes.

Tulane, with Lowell (Red) Dawson, foremost disciple of Bernie Bierman, in the role of head football coach, continues to feel the original Doc Williams-Minnesota influence which it began to encounter in 1915. It was in that year that Clark Shaughnessy, a former Minnesota great who starred on teams of Dr. Williams, went to Tulane as head coach. Shaughnessy continued in that capacity until 1927 with Bernie Bierman, another ex-Gopher, as his assistant in 1923 and 1924.

Bierman returned to Tulane as head coach in 1927 when Shaughnessy left and continued until after the 1931 season when he accepted the head coaching post at Minnesota.

Ted Cox, Bierman's line coach at Tulane and another former Gopher star, succeeded Bernie and remained until after the 1935 season. Then Dawson, a quarterback under Bierman at Tulane and pilot of the Green Wave's 1931 Rose Bowl team, was called in to take over the duties of head coach.

Dawson, meanwhile, had been Bierman's backfield coach through four fine seasons at Minnesota. Thus the 1936 Green Wave team is using, to a great extent, the fundamental system adhered to by Tulane teams through 20 years, plus the newer method instituted by Bierman at Minneapolis.

Dawson and his two assistants, Bill Bevan and Glenn Seidel, recent Minnesota stars and parcel of the new Bernie Bierman stuff, have added power-house technique to the Green Wave's offense.

Cuyahoga county, Ohio, gets its name from the Cuyahoga river, the word being Indian for "crooked."

What does a football team carry along as baggage on a long trip? Here are a few items that the Green Wave had aboard the train when Tulane headed for New York to meet Colgate:

Sixty gallons of drinking water, five pounds of New Orleans drip coffee and drip pots, one dozen footballs, extra shoestrings, approximately 1,000 yards of assorted size tape in addition to many rolls of bandages, extra cleats for dry field or mud, rosin, diathermy machine, small heat lamps to apply to bruises, special baker for use on train, extra shoes, blackboards and crayon, varied supply of medicines, two complete sets of game uniforms and equipment, a movie camera and many, many other things to fill up several trunks and some 40 dunnage bags.

The trainer is in charge of such materials with the student manager and his assistants to help with details. In addition, the team physician is along to administer those in need of attention before and after the game.

All meals are ordered in advance by the trainer. He sets the hours for the meals and plans the menus from the time the season starts until it is finished. He also checks, with his assistants, to see that the lights are out at a specified time and that players have retired.

Additional Grant For Pembroke Settlement

Pembroke, N. C., Oct. 17.—An additional allotment of $101,750 has been made by the Resettlement Administration for purchase of land to be used in the Wolf Pitt Farms project, near here, according to advice received by L. B. Brandon, project manager, from Regional Director George S. Mitchell, Raleigh.

The new sum is in addition to $50,500 previously allotted for land purchase. Development of 110 farmstead units is planned.

The previous allotment of $200,000 for the Pembroke resettlement farmstead project has not been increased, this sum being considered sufficient to purchase land for 180 units.

Funds are not yet available for construction work, the regional director stated, but detailed planning of the farmsteads will be rushed. Construction will start as soon as the money is set up for that purpose.
