SOVIET RUSSIA RETIRES FROM PEACE TREATY

Declares She Can Not Be Bound More Than Others

NEUTRALITY BODY HOLDING SESSION

Competent Observers Believe Soviets As- suming Right to Sup- ply Madrid With Arms

Moscow, Oct. 23.—(AP)—Soviet Russia tonight announced her virtual withdrawal from the European "hands-off-Spain" agreement, declaring she could not consider herself bound to a greater extent than the other participants.

Russia has contended she has definite proof three other participants in the agreement, Italy, Germany and Portugal, have aided Spain's insurgents with war materials.

Her announcement came while the non-intervention committee in London was in the midst of a secret session to consider charges and counter-charges of neutrality breaches.

A communication handed to Lord Plymouth, British chairman of the neutrality group, by Ivan M. Maisky, the Soviet ambassador to London, stated the neutrality agreement had become a torn-up scrap of paper.

It stated other governments must have the right to supply arms to the constituted government of Spain and that the Spanish government must have a right to purchase arms abroad.

Competent observers believed the right had been taken to themselves to supply arms to Madrid.

London, Oct. 23.—(AP)—Soviet Russian spokesmen going into a summer-charged session of the troubled European "hands-off-Spain" committee indicated today that Moscow probably will refrain from taking steps which might precipitate a European war.

At the same time it was stated authoritatively the Russians will continue to operate every possible diplomatic lever to thwart "nazi and fascist" aid to Spanish insurgents.

"The mad fascists' butchery in Spain goes on with German, Italian and Portuguese guns under the cloak of non-intervention, which the world knows is a sham," a spokesman charged.

However, he indicated plainly that Moscow will continue to use diplomatic means to gain its goal of stopping alleged fascist arm shipments to Spain.

The Soviet statements put a new light on the international hearing, called to hear a three-power fascist defense against Soviet charges of neutrality violations.

Simpson Divorce Heads Full List Set For Hearing

Clerk Informs Newsmen That Little Likelihood Hearing Will Be Before Next Tuesday Afternoon

Spawich England Oct. 23.—(AP)—Mrs. Wallace Simpson's divorce suit heads a list of seven which will be heard by Mr. Justice Hawk at Spawich Assizes beginning tomorrow.

This was disclosed by an official list of cases available today.

The suit of Kine Edward's American friend against her husband, Ernest Aldrich Simpson was listed merely as "Simpson vs. Simpson."

It had first position under the heading: "Matrimonial causes undefended." No details were given.

Clerk of Assizes told newsmen that in so far as court officials knew no divorces will be heard before 2:15 p. m. next Tuesday.

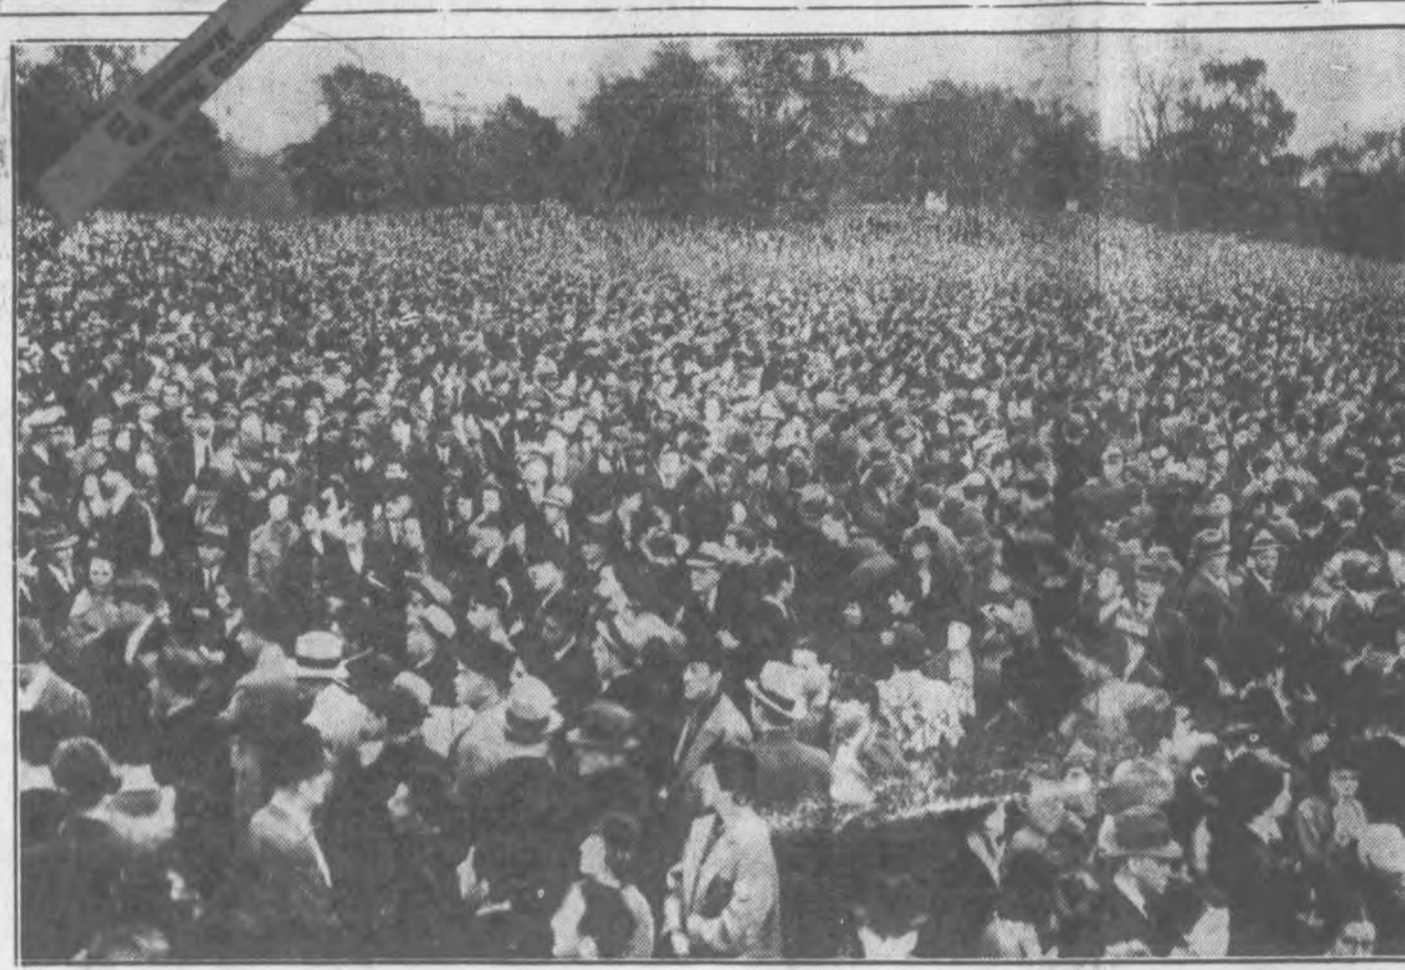

The customary procedure is for the judge first to dispose of criminal actions, of which there are 15 on the court docket.

Mrs. Simpson remained in seclusion at a seaside resort near Ipswich.

After her hearing at the Assizes she will return to London.

Her friends said that while she has made no plans, it would not be unlikely for her to leave England for several months during the winter. They added however that the United States was the last place she was liable to visit just now.

ROOSEVELT DRAWS LARGEST CROWD IN HISTORY OF BOSTON

Here's a general view of probably the largest crowd to hear President Roosevelt deliver a campaign speech and the biggest crowd ever to assemble in historic Boston Common. City officials estimated 175,000 persons were in the mass of men, women, and children that jammed the park. Ending eight hours of whirlwind motor campaigning in Rhode Island and Massachusetts, Roosevelt told the multitude that growth of Democracy was a "bad sign" for those who felt the American people could be swayed this year by "rabble rousers." WEEKLY WEED AVERAGE HIGH

Season Sales of 32- 939,092 Lbs. Bring $7,860,187.71

The Greenville tobacco market has paid an average of $23.96 per hundred pounds so far this year, as compared with a $20.58 average up to this date last year.

This increased price has enabled almost as much money being paid out this year as was to this date in 1935, despite the fact that 5,932,692 more pounds had been sold in the previous year than had been sold through yesterday.

A total of $7,860,187.71 has been paid out on the market this year, compared with $7,998,400.00 up to this date in 1935, a difference of only $138,212.78.

Offerings through yesterday amounted to 32,939,092 pounds, while up to the corresponding date a year ago 38,871,784 pounds had been sold.

Thursday's sales of 814,328 pounds for $219,383.06, an average of an even $27 was another strong day.

Sales last week of 4,776,254 pounds for $1,323,422.59, an average of $27.71 brought the highest prices of any similar period for the past two years. The figures compared with 5,768,370 pounds during the corresponding week in 1935 for $1,415,427.85, an average of $24.54.

Plans To Develop Farming Program To Be Worked Out

Agricultural Extension Service To Sponsor Series of Meetings To Be Held Throughout State

Raleigh, Oct. 23.—Plans for developing in each county a systematic program of agricultural extension work for next year are being worked out in a series of meetings over the State.

The meetings are composed of county agricultural leaders, farm agents, and specialists of the State College extension service making a study of farm problems in the various counties.

"The extension program is flexible," said John W. Goodman, assistant director of the extension service, "and we wish to stress in each county those things of greatest importance to the development of its agriculture."

"In some counties, we may need to stress livestock production. In others, the need for soil-conservation may be uppermost. In others we must emphasize balanced farming."

"Whatever the problems we find, we want to give most attention to the most important things, and give our time to other problems according to their relative importance."

BIG INCREASE SHOWN WORLD ARMAMENTS

Geneva, Oct. 23.—(AP)—A vast increase in the armaments of the world was shown today by the League of Nations' armament year book for 1935.

Soviet Russia's armed forces were placed at 1,399,680 and the year book said the Russian army is capable of absorbing and of waiving an annual maximum of 650,000 recruits.

The League said the book has been unable to obtain in accurate official data on Germany's armed forces, but "according to unofficial publications the effectiveness envisaged or the German army would be 550,000 officers and men."

Germany's navy was listed as including six battle-ships, with two being built, six cruisers, 25 destroyers and 26 submarines, with 12 more under construction.

France's army, both in the homeland and colonies, was given as 642,875 for 1935.

DEATH CLAIMS SEN. COUZENS

Life Packed With Drama of Poor Boy To Millionaire

Detroit, Oct. 23.—(AP)—Death has ended the drama that James Couzens packed into his poor boy to millionaire career after a climactic "curtain call" that doubtless will be remembered long after the heat of this political campaign has died away.

Only a week ago ill with a kidney malady that had troubled him several years, the Michigan senator left Harper hospital to appear with President Roosevelt when the latter brought his campaign to Detroit.

President Roosevelt, informed of his death, said "in the death of Senator Couzens the senate and the United States and people of Michigan and the nation have lost a leader whose convictions were a part of the best that America aspires for and whose courage was a match for his idealism."

The funeral will be held at Wakefield, the Couzens suburban Bloomfield Hills home. Funeral plans had not been completed today.

Washington, Oct. 23.—(AP)—The Interstate Commerce Commission authorized the Norfolk-Southern Railroad today to turn back to the Atlantic and North Carolina 95 miles of railroad line. From Goldsboro to Morehead City which the Norfolk-Southern leased from the Atlantic several years ago.

The commission made its co-ordinated consent however upon the Atlantic leasing for operation 3.1 miles of the Norfolk-Southern lines from Morehead City to Beaufort, N. C. The Norfolk-Southern had asked for authority to abandon operation of both lines.

SAYS NEW DEAL BROKEN FAITH

Landon Makes Bid For Democrats Op- posed to Roosevelt

Oklahoma City, Oct. 23.—(AP)—Gov. Alf M. Landon told Oklahomaans today that the New Deal has "deserted Democratic party principles and violated its oath to support and uphold the constitution."

"Real Democrats I know," the Republican presidential nominee said, "will fight shoulder to shoulder with us in this battle to save our American form of government and our country."

The Kansas spoke in the coliseum after an introduction by William H. (Alfalfa Bill) Murray, former Democratic governor of Oklahoma.

"Only a threat to our form of government could cause a man like Governor Murray to take this step," Landon said, naming John W. Davis, Alfred E. Smith, Bainbridge Colby, Joseph B. Ely, James A. Reed and Lewis W. Douglas as other Democrats "who are putting their country above party name."

"Countless other Democrats feel as strongly as they do," he continued. "They may have made no open break but they will state their positions emphatically at the ballot boxes next month. Their feelings are strong enough to make side above the party name even though it means breaking political habits of a lifetime."

Landon said President Roosevelt had made a "deliberate attempt X X X to break down the confidence of our people in the integrity and independence of the Supreme Court."

"It is only natural," he added, that real Democrats should join Republicans in defense of State's rights—of home rule—against great centralization of power in Washington.

BRIEF RESPIRE IN ACTIVITIES FOR PRESIDENT

Chief Executive En- joys Day of Breath- ing Spell

LANDON SPECIAL CONTINUES TOUR

Senator Tydings Says Republicans Offer Same Policies Of Harding, Coolidge, and Hoover

(By Associated Press)
President Roosevelt took a brief breathing spell from the campaign wars today, while Governor Landon plunged into the drive for Oklahoma's 11 electoral votes.

Back in Washington after the tumultuous campaigning in New England, Mr. Roosevelt had no speeches to make until he addresses a number of business men's dinner by radio from the White House tonight.

Winding up his New England tour at Stamford, Conn., yesterday, he said: "I am confident that the people are using intelligence in this election year and I am not the least bit afraid of the results." Mr. Roosevelt may carry his campaign into Pennsylvania next week with an address at Scranton.

As the "Sunflower Special" carried Governor Landon to speaking dates at Oklahoma City and Tulsa, he issued a statement contending Roosevelt's policies have "corporated the federal government" and that the New Deal "is using the people's money directly and indirectly to secure" the President's re-election.

Alfred E. Smith again assailed the New Deal at Chicago last night and expressed confidence "millions and millions of Jeffersonian Democrats" would vote for Landon.

Stumping in Indiana Senator Tydings (D. Md.) declared the Republicans offer "the same old policies of Harding, Coolidge and Hoover, which in 1929 plunged this country into economic ruin," while Lewis Douglas, one time budget director for Mr. Roosevelt, said he would go to the polls to express his opposition to the New Deal by voting for Mr. Landon.

Spain's Opposing Forces Brace On Three Fronts; Renew London Debate

Durham Man Has Sweepstake Ticket

BAILEY URGES BIG MAJORITY

Senator Traces Pro- gress Made Under Democrats

Durham, N. C. (AP)—Nine American tickets on the Cambridge Shire favorite Dan Butler were drawn today from the big drums in the 19th Irish Hospital sweepstakes.

The lucky ticket holders, each of whom has the best chance of winning one of the $50,000 first prizes, included one named "Hooker" 400 Swift avenue, West Durham, N. C.

By middle afternoon Americans had taken 321 of the 704 Midas-torched tickets, a batting average of nearly 46 per cent.

Although predicting an overwhelmingly Democratic victory in the November 3 election, Senator Josiah W. Bailey last night reminded a Pitt county audience that Western North Carolina needed the aid of the East, called on the electorate to go to the polls next Tuesday week and roll up a large majority for the Democratic ticket.

A good crowd turned out at the court house to hear Mr. Bailey. Recalling that this section is predominantly Democratic, the senior senator from North Carolina said that he expected a 75,000 or 80,000 majority in the area from the Atlantic to Raleigh. He said that the West had come to the rescue of Eastern North Carolina when votes were needed to rid the state of Republican rule and urged Easterners to repay this debt by rolling up such a large majority that Western Republicans could not pile up enough votes to make a showing for the state as a whole.

Decourting the poll being conducted by The Literary Digest, the speaker predicted that the people would return "their friend" to the White House. He said that this poll was the only one in seven major straw votes being taken over the country which predicts the election of Governor Landon. He added that if the ballots had been sent to Democrats and Republicans alike, the Digest poll in its final edition before the election would forecast the re-election of Mr. Roosevelt. He said that a check on the poll showed that 66 per cent of the participants in the poll so far voted for Hoover in 1932. "We are not trying to get the Hoover votes," he shouted, "the Republicans can have every vote that was cast for Hoover in 1932 and we will get a nine million majority."

Fair Eating Booths Must Observe Laws

The local health department has received instructions from the division of sanitation engineering of the State Board of Health to enforce all state hotel and cafe regulations at the fair here next week.

Booklets outlining regulations to be complied with may be secured at the health office by requesting them. The law provides for enforcing of the rules on any place which prepares food for immediate consumption.

J. P. Stowe, sanitary inspector, will have charge of enforcing the law and today advised all operators of eating places to secure the booklet and comply with the law to prevent the embarrassment of being closed.

The regulations are being enforced at all fairs over the state.

Defense Preparations Rushed in Spanish Capital

FASCIST PLANES DRONE OVERCITY

Representatives Of European Countries Assemble in London to Talk Neutrality

(By Associated Press)
Spain's opposing armies braced on three fronts today as diplomats assembled to renew London neutrality debate in the peninsula's civil war.

Insurgent troops of General Emilio Mola routed government defenders from mountain positions 15 miles west of strategic El Escorial, delayed reports disclosed.

The advancing forces occupied the town of Navas yesterday after beating socialists from the jagged passes with a concentrated fire of artillery, machine guns and rifles.

In Madrid preparations were rushed to defend the capital against a projected fascist invasion in the face of movements of heavy artillery into position within 20 miles of the city.

Anti-aircraft guns on the roof of capital buildings blasted today without success at two fascist airplanes which dropped overhead dropping leaflets demanding surrender under threat of bombardment.

Insurgent commander apparently intended to move batteries of artillery ahead in positions from where shells could be sent blasting into Madrid's outskirts, accompanied by artillery onslaughts on capital suburbs.

Brody's

I always look forward with pleasure to my visit to the BRODY DRESS SHOPPE, for they never fail to have something brand-new to show me. This time it turned out to be some very beautiful black velvet dresses... not the kind of velvet we are used to, by any means, but a luscious, rich, smooth Resisto-Velvet. It resists wrinkles... it resists rain (in fact, they say it turns water like a duck's back... isn't that ducky?) Made in street, afternoon and evening modes and reasonably priced. I also had a peep at some new arrivals in millinery... I saw crowns that are high and haughty... brims are as you please... feathers shoot skyward like a warrior's head-dress. In fact, milliners give the Redskins, Eighteenth century Highwaymen and Frontiersmen, arising from the shadows of the past, credit for some of their most startling millinery creations. BRODY'S first Autumn clothes are ready... the first, the finest, the most beguiling. Come, see and be conquered by their beauty.

BERT MOYE

Lella Higgs Studio of Interior Decorating

There is a lot of news in the fabric world just now, for apparently the manufacturers have been searching the highways and byways for patterns that are intriguing and surfaces that are pleasing as they are different. The trend is definitely upward, for the decorators are seeking quality before price. There are, of course, price limitations, but for the most part that limit is higher than it was a year ago. Quite obviously, clients are tired of their make-shift decorations and, as formerly, they want the things around them that are in accordance with their mode of living. It is a pleasure once more to go shopping for fabrics as I had ample proof of this morning at the LELLA HIGGS STUDIO OF INTERIOR DECORATING... I have never seen lovelier and believe the trend to stripes is well directed... there are satin fabrics in conventional stripes varied by floral motifs... wider stripes in reversible weaves some of them having as many as four colors... Damasks and Brocatelles in exquisite raised designs and the more durable fabrics for upholstering furniture in rooms demanding harder wear.

If you were to journey to Williamsburg, Va., and wander through some of the lovely old homes there you would find furniture upholstered in authentic copies of Old Williamsburg Tapestry... the beauty of this fabric will insure it being used in the refurbishing of many lovely old homes... You can see it at the LELLA HIGGS STUDIO OF INTERIOR DECORATING... Also some very lovely silk quilted fabrics in delicate shades for bedrooms and in the conventional deeper shades for living rooms, drawing rooms and club rooms. Brocatelles are ideal for Georgian homes and are sharing honors with satin damasks... of which it is just the reverse, the raised design is satin on plain blackground while the satin damask is plain raised designs on satin blackground... both are charming.

the condition in man. This has at last been demonstrated. A worker at the National Institute for Medical Research, of England, while handling ferrets infected with human influenza virus, noted that "one ferret sneezed violently at close range." Within 45 hours this worker fell ill with a typical case of influenza. The practical worth of this demonstration lies in its bearing on the possibility of developing an immunizing agent against influenza. This, research scientists say, is within practical reach.

Washington — Two years ago there was much talk about the value of the states as experiment stations in which social, political or governmental ideas could be tried out without upsetting the whole national economy.

It was a reaction to NRA, AAA and other like agencies. In effect it was a suggestion that the pudding be tried out on the gardener before being served to the master.

Now comes Senator Lonergan of Connecticut, chairman of the senate campaign funds investigating committee, with a proposal seemingly ideal for a state test. He proposes that the government pay campaign costs of office-seekers.

"If contributions from all sources were prohibited and the government handled the problem," he said, "aspiring citizens, rich, moderately well off, and poor, would be on an equal basis."

Senator Lonergan, in summarizing arguments for it, said it would eliminate slush funds.

But the idea stirs up no end of fury among opponents. Their belief is that it would tend to keep in office those already there and to give up all the quacks and quack ideas ever hatched in the spit-and-think grocery store stove-league.

Naturally, if the idea were adopted, each candidate for a certain office would be allowed a certain sum, the minimum necessary to let him show his wares. But how could an office aspirant compete with the man already in office? How could an "out-er" build-up an organization to compete with the following of an "in-er" with a basketful of political patronage?

Another problem along the same line which foes of the idea quickly pointed out was: How could an "out-er" overcome the effect of such non-political trips as were taken by President Roosevelt into the drought area and to the green pastures conference? Within the states, governors, senators and other public figures take trips in campaign time, oftentimes thinly disguising them as road inspection tours.

Perhaps Senator Lonergan thought every man or woman with a political or social idea, new or used, should be permitted his day before the public, at public expense. Senator Borah once supplied an answer to that, while talking on a different matter.

He said any sound idea ultimately would get a hearing, then a following, than a champion.

Hollywood Sights And Sounds

By Robin Coons

Hollywood — All the funny stories that are supposed to happen in Hollywood, have happened, at one time or another, to Mischa. And this new find among comedians is a good subject. He can take it.

For instance, as he relates gleefully: "I spend eleven years studying to perfect myself as an actor. I work at timing, expression, speech—eleven years. And how do I get recognition at last? How? I do a monkey act—I make faces—I swing from chandeliers and climb gates! Is that a kick?"

The "monkey act" was in "My Man Godfrey" since which picture the erstwhile gangling type has become to his amusement and amusement, a comedian. He is delighted. As Bill Powell told him: "Forget about the Academy awards. March—just make 'em laugh and you're set." Mischa is making 'em laugh. His "dent Indian" in "The Gay Desperado" is a highlight, and in the new Lily Pons film his unsuspected comedy bent gets full play, again.

Funny? He's the grandson of a celebrated musician, and he looks like a Greenwich Village post, with his six-foot-two bean pole frame, his "souful" heavy-lidded eyes, his distinctly foreign appearance. But does he act like that? No, he fools you. He's a smart hombre with a sense of humor, and no off-stage acting.

He has lived plenty in his 31 years. A "white Russian" in the revolution, he was '12 when the red wave swept the country and he was separated from his mother. He foamed Siberia with an army of parentless children, finally rejoining his mother in an attempt to escape the country, made it to the protection of the British. He served with their army and in a refugee hospital founded by his mother. She died there. Leopold Auer, his grandfather, sent for him to come to New York.

Eight years ago Mischa came to Hollywood. He was fired from his first "extra" job because Henry Hathaway, then assistant director, said he wasn't "the Russian type." Mischa still ribs Hathaway about that. Director Frank Tuttle befriended him, as did Act'r N:1

Hamilton, sustaining his morale—and incidentally his stomach—when he was trying to starve as gracefully as possible. He always was sure of a role in Tuttle pictures.

Through Director Gregory LaCava, Mischa got his Universal contract. LaCava first met Auer at a party, eight years ago, when Mischa was doing his "monkey act." On "My Man Godfrey" LaCava remembered that—and insisted it go in the picture. Mischa is married and has a son,

Tony, two-and-a-half. His wife is non-professional, but Mischa is not so sure about Tony. He says: "I fear he has the makings of a ham. I catch him making faces in the mirror at himself, all the time!"

Tishomingo, Okla. (AP)—Forty-year marriage ties failed to hold for Atchison Annotubby, 89. He obtained a divorce from his wife, who, he said, left him 1930. They were married in 1896.

Ferrets and Influenza

Until comparatively recent times, influenza was a condition little understood. The disease was recognized by certain unique symptoms which differentiated it from the ordinary cold with which it is frequently associated, and commonly confused.

The influenza victim shows constitutional effects which are out of proportion with the patent symptoms. Headache, severe backache, prolonged weakness, and mental depression quite frequently persist for weeks if not months after the acute stages of the attack subside. Patients complain of being "hard hit" and of finding it difficult to get back to their normal condition.

Three years ago the initial clue to the solution of the mystery of influenza was discovered. A virus was isolated from a human case of the disease, and its specific cause was thus revealed. That influenza was a virus disease had long been suspected, but the demonstration of the virus was a long delayed achievement.

We cannot make a virus as we do a germ, but can we grow it in an artificial medium. To culture it we must find a living tissue, frequently an animal, susceptible to the disease.

In the early stages of the study of the virus of influenza, human experimental "animals" were employed. But naturally there is a limit to this type of experimentation. Fortunately it was soon discovered that the ferret is susceptible to influenza. From this point on progress was rapid. Not only was it established beyond question that the isolated virus was the actual cause of the disease, but also that influenza in America, Europe and Australia is caused by the same type of virus.

To make the proof complete, according to the postulates of the pioneer bacteriologist, Robert Koch, it

"Society Week" at College

Each of the literary societies of East Carolina Teachers College have been most graciously welcoming the new students, both freshmen and transfers, ever since the opening, making bids for their favor. For the past week each one has given an entertainment in their honor. Next week will be "Society Week" in earnest, with Tuesday, October 27 as "Rush Day," which will reach its climax with decision day, and then the remainder of the week will be devoted to the activities of initiation, culminating in big social affairs on Saturday night.

Last night the Poe Literary Society entertained the College Freshmen and transfer students with a wieners roast near the lake. All participated in games before eating. A large bon-fire was the center of attraction as a large number of people gathered around the fire to roast wieners. Lines formed and the guests were served punch and sandwiches. After eating, they all gathered around the bon-fire and sang the society song. The entertainment closed with the group singing their society song "Alma Mater."

The Sidney Lanier Literary Society entertained the freshmen and transfer students with a picnic and marshmallow roast given Wednesday afternoon at five o'clock. The students built a bonfire at the College lake, at a picnic supper, and roasted apples and marshmallows over the embers. The singing of school of folk, and popular songs, with cheers for the freshmen, the transfers and the society, provided other amusement. The officers of this society are Misses Effie Lee Watson, president; Margaret Gay Overman, vice-president; Geraldine Tyson, secretary; and Lillian Parrish, treasurer.

On last Friday afternoon, the Emerson Literary Society gave a party in honor of the new students, all co-eds, and the society members. A great amount of fun was added to the party by the guests being dressed as children. Children's party games were played. During the afternoon dancing was greatly enjoyed.

PEACE ACTION

In view of the mass meeting scheduled for Greenville next week under the joint auspices of the Emergency Peace Campaign and the Greenville Council for Peace Action, this column will carry today and tomorrow interesting sidelights as to the campaign in some of the localities already reached.

The Emergency Peace Campaign was launched on the morning of last April 22 when John W. Stuebker, U. S. Commissioner of Education and Francis Sayre, Assistant Secretary of State, released several thousand carrier pigeons at the foot of Washington Monument, the birds carrying a message from Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt to the mayors of three cities within a radius of 200 miles from Washington. In which early meetings were scheduled. One city, Richmond, Virginia, replied to the First Lady's greetings via winged messenger also, carrying a message from Mayor Bright. Resultantly the week beginning April 27 was instituted as "Peace Week" in Richmond.

The night of April 22 before a crowded audience in Carnegie Hall, New York City, the campaign got underway, having been preceded by a nation-wide broadcast over NBC in which Mrs. Roosevelt, Kirby Page, noted American peace leader and lecturer, and George Lansbury, member of Parliament and recently resigned head of the British Labor Party participated. At the Carnegie Hall meeting Lansbury, who with Dr. Alfred Salter of London came to this country invited for this special mission, declared that the world had not yet paid for the battle of Waterloo or the Crimean War and that "we never will." Dr. Harry Emerson Fosdick, who was also on the speakers' platform, gave it as his view that there were five major sectors of the peace movement badly, needing strength-

Flash! THE PRINCESS LINE... More outstanding than the Directoire, Oriental and Peasant influences. What exactly is the Princess line? It is the one-piece dress that is fitted divinely through the waist to make slim things slimmer... it sheathes down over the hips so that there are no hips at all and it ends in a ripple of glory terminating the flared skirt.

Flash! THE SWAGGER COAT... For women who like to combine real chic with comfort. "It is an ageless coat, becoming alike to mother, daughter, co-ed or dowager. The slim and not so slim wear it equally well."

Flash! THE TUNIC SUIT... Fashion's latest contribution. "It is a dressy affair which may or may not be fur-trimmed. The jacket is always fitted, sometimes belted, sometimes unbelted, but always the last word in smartness."

Flash! HIGHER CROWNS FOR HATS... Height is one of the crowning achievements of the season. "Crowns are constructed to soar above the brows to far greater heights than they have attained in a long, long while." Feathers reach an all-time high as trimmings.

Flash! HIGHER LINES IN SHOES... "Footwear believes in aiming high in achieving its place in fashions for fall. Any number of the newest shoes are cut so high they begin to look like tiny boots."

Flash! HOSIERY COLORS GAY... Each season they have added a grain more of gaiety. This season "coppertints, brick and bronze colors look on the bright side of life and do a lot to enliven the fashion picture."

Flash! TREND TOWARD EASIER FITTING IN MEN'S CLOTHES... Gone are the days of padded shoulders and fitted hip lines... more and more our designers fashioned men's clothes in the English manner. "A manner that gives ease and comfort first consideration." Important are the drape models which are slightly longer, softer and altogether much easier to wear.

Flash! SPORT BACKS SIMPLER... Free swing backs, gusset sleeves, side vents have replaced the fringed of a season or so ago.

Flash! WIDE BRIMS, LOWER CROWNS IN MEN'S HATS... A revolt from the narrow, curled brims and high crowns. And with the new proportions comes a new trend, that of wearing them "off the face."

FEWER HIGHWAY DEATHS

While the highway accident death rate in North Carolina is still far too large it is gratifying that North Carolina is one of the seven states in the country that has shown a decrease in both highway accidents and highway deaths during the year ending September 30. The number of persons killed on our highways this year through September was 68 less than for the same period last year. No doubt the increased highway patrol, together with the licensing of drivers in this state have had their effect upon decreasing accidents and it is to be hoped that the continued rigid enforcement of the traffic laws will continue to decrease accidents. Another factor in cutting down the number of accidents on our highways is that many of our people are really beginning to realize the dangers that surround fast and reckless driving and they are exercising more caution when they venture on the highways. In the last analysis the motorists can do no more than any other group to cut highway accidents to a minimum and it is to be hoped that the combined efforts of the motorists and the law enforcement officers will bring about a further decrease in highway accidents and deaths in this state next year.

that a controversy is coming over so-called "federal housing". This phrase includes a new mortgage-insurance system, to which few people take exception but it also embraces federal construction of apartment houses and vast slum-clearance rookeries to provide for families that cannot pay rent for ordinary apartments. Congress must either go forward with these socialistic projects or refuse appropriations for their extension. Opposition to use of federal funds to favor some families with low rents is rapidly growing, stirred up somewhat by real estate interests that dread increased government competition. These projects are defended on the ground that they are for relief and for prevention of crime. But this argument meets with the remark that federal relief is an emergency matter and should not be stretched to cover permanent paternalism. RETARDED: There has been

The Wrong Murderer

By HUGH CLEVELY

SYNOPSIS: Elsa Little suspects that Terence Mahony killed her uncle, and is charming him in order to get information out of him. In the next room, listening is Inspector Kennedy. But Elsa is beginning to believe Terence's story; while he is telling it, Terence is perfecting in his mind a plot that will capture and convict Ambrose Lawson, head of a kidnaping ring and murderer of Little. But Ruth Fraser, Elsa's friend, is also mixed up in the matter—and in danger.

Chapter 35 DECEIT WILL OUT

TERENCE went on: "Lee-Ramsden wouldn't believe that Ruth had been kidnapped. He suggested that yarn to her about staying with a friend in the country. I think he wanted to avoid a lot of fuss and bother with the police."

"And where is Ruth now?" asked Elsa.

"I don't know," replied Mahony. "I saw her for a moment this morning in her guardian's house, and I haven't seen or heard from her since."

While he was speaking there was a ring at the front door-bell. They heard the maid cross the hall and open the front door. A man's deep voice sounded in the hall.

"I want to speak to Inspector Kennedy at once," it said.

Mahony looked startled. Elsa went very pale. A frightened look came into her eyes, and she rose quickly from her seat. She did not want to look at Mahony, and somehow she could not look away from him.

For a long moment they stared at one another, Mahony's bewildered eyes asking a question which Elsa's eyes did not want to answer. The maid opened the drawing-room door, and they both looked towards the doorway.

SERGEANT Dawkins entered. "Sorry to trouble you, Miss Little, but I've got to see Inspector Kennedy right away on very important business," he said in a matter-of-fact voice.

Elsa did not answer. She did not know what to say. She found it impossible, in Mahony's presence, to admit that Inspector Kennedy was in the house. There was an awkward, strained pause. Then another step sounded in the hall outside.

"What do you want, Dawkins?" asked Inspector Kennedy's voice from the doorway.

Mahony looked at Elsa, saw her white face and distressed air, and in a stunning shock of insight saw the whole plot. Elsa had betrayed him. She had fooled him. She had deliberately encouraged him to commit himself, knowing that Inspector Kennedy was listening to every word he said.

For a moment his mind fought desperately to discover some way in which it might appear that she had not fooled him, that the Inspector's presence was accidental, and not deliberate. But it was no good.

The facts were quite plain. He had been had for a mug. Well, that was that. It couldn't be helped now.

He smiled. He looked Elsa in the face and smiled quite amiably. It seemed to him the only thing that he could do in the circumstances.

Something in his smile affected Elsa strangely. She made a hesitating half pace towards him. Her lower lip was trembling slightly, and her blue eyes looked very solemn. She looked as if she wanted him to comfort her.

"I... I'm sorry," she murmured indistinctly. "I... I'm very sorry for what I've done."

She spoke like a child confessing to some fault. Obviously she was sorry for what she had done. That struck Mahony as quite unreasonable. He bore her no particular grudge for giving him away to the police; that had been his own fault, for being mug enough to let her do it.

But that she should stand there all sad and sorrowful, irritated him slightly. Did she want him to forgive her, or something like that?

"Oh, that's all right," he said indifferently, as if nothing that she could do or feel could interest him greatly.

He took a cigaret from a box on a small table, lit it casually, and rose.

"I take it you were listening?" he said to Inspector Kennedy.

The Inspector nodded.

"Yes," he replied. "Well, Mahony, it seems that you were in the room when Mr. Little was murdered."

what over-anxious New Dealers regard as inexcusable delay in sending out farm checks under the erosion and soil conservation plan. Here is the election imminent, and farmers in most cases will not receive checks until after they have voted. The political department of Secretary Wallace's great establishment is worried over the delay. Mr. Wallace's present tour thru the farm belt is expected to reassure farmers that the benefit payments will be forthcoming and that it would be unjust to make reprisals at the polls. Physical difficulties delay the check-rain. Counting up a farmer's share of benefit for coopera-

There was no use in denying that now, Mahony shrugged his shoulders. "Yes, I was there." "But he didn't murder my uncle," put in Elsa suddenly. Everyone looked at her in surprise. Her face was flushed, and her eyes were eager and pleading. "I thought he did," she went on quickly. "That was why I arranged this... this trap. But somehow, while I was talking to him, I began to change my mind. He... he seemed to me to be telling the truth when he said he didn't kill my uncle. Oh, I do wish I'd never agreed to that horrible plan of letting you listen to what he said."

TERENCE were streaming down her cheeks. She turned to Mahony. "I'm sorry, really I'm sorry," she said pitiously. "I suppose you hate me for what I've done?"

"Not at all," said Mahony politely. Nor did he. He merely thought she was being stupid, like a woman who puts down a mouse-trap and then weeps when she catches a mouse in it. He thought she was making rather a lot of unnecessary fuss. Apart from that, he seemed to have no feelings about her whatever.

"What is it you want with me, Dawkins?" asked Inspector Kennedy.

The sergeant had been regarding this scene with eyes of wonder. Now he stepped forward with the air of a man carrying important news. He held out a letter.

"I'd like you to look at this letter, sir," he said. "While I was searching Mahony's rooms this evening, according to instructions, the postman delivered this for him. I opened it, and when I saw what it was about I thought I'd better bring it along to you right away."

Inspector Kennedy glanced through the letter, and an expression of satisfaction crossed his face.

"You were quite right, Dawkins," he said, and then to Elsa: "We'll leave you now, Miss Little."

He turned to Mahony.

"You come with us, Mahony," he said.

Elsa stood helplessly and watched them go. She felt utterly miserable. When they had gone she sank into a chair and cried for a long time.

A police car was waiting outside the house, and the Inspector motioned to Mahony to enter it. Mahony did so.

"Am I under arrest?" he asked.

Inspector Kennedy smiled. He had a cheerful air.

"Well, you ought to be," he said.

"And you might be if I hadn't discovered that you were speaking the truth when you said you didn't know Miss Fraser had been in Pennyfields, or where she was."

"Besides, I'm hoping that if I leave you at liberty for a bit I may find out exactly what your game is. But I don't propose to let you go till we've got our hands on Miss Fraser and heard what she has to say. We're on our way to fetch her now."

He handed a letter to Mahony.

"Perhaps you'd like to read this. It arrived for you this evening while Sergeant Dawkins was searching your room."

Mahony opened the letter and read it. It ran:

Dear Terence, I'm writing this in a frantic hurry, and it will probably be all mixed up. I hope you'll understand it.

After you'd left the house this morning I overheard my guardian telephoning to Lawson telling him everything you'd said. I tried to telephone to you, but couldn't get you, so I went off in my car to see Bassett. A man let me into the house, and while I was in it there was a awful fight upstairs, and when I went up to see what was happening I found a man had been killed. I got out of the house by the back door just as the police were coming in at the front, but I left my car outside the front door.

I don't know what to do, and I want to see you. I am sending you this letter, and I shall be waiting for you tonight in an empty house at number 513 St. John's Wood Road. Please come and see me as soon as you can.

Ruth.

"It will be interesting to hear Miss Fraser's story," said Inspector Kennedy.

"Yes," agreed Mahony absent-mindedly.

Mahony wasn't exactly communicative at any time, and certainly he was less so than usual now. The fact was, he could not get the consideration of his own stupidity out of his mind.

He had been deceived beautifully by Lee-Ramsden. And when Lee-Ramsden had betrayed him, the old man had compounded the trick by leading him to doubt the loyalty of Ruth. Now, partly because of Mahony's fatal error, Ruth was in danger. More danger than Inspector Kennedy suspected.

Mrs. Simpson had a modest but respectable place in society, and was seen mostly in the Maryland set. Her beauty and charm were "typically American," and well calculated to arouse envy or jealousy among less sprightly women in the diplomatic corps.

NOTES: Politicians have dubbed "Jimmy" Warburg the "Finnigan of 1936"—off the New Deal, on again, gone again... Increasing American investments by foreigners is arousing much interest and curiosity... Dr. Townsend's prediction that he will have 180 members of the House behind his plan is regarded in Washington as very far wide of the mark... They allow him less than half of that number.

New York

LATE: Both major parties are making extra special efforts to corral the New York State farm vote. For many years upstate farmers—though mostly nominal Republicans—have been helping to elect Democratic governors Al Smith, Franklin Roosevelt, and Herbert Lehman. All three went out of their way to cultivate agricultural good will and frequently adopted programs submitted by leaders of farm organizations as their own. But for some reason Lehman has paid little heed to these leaders in the past year, and this casual attitude may prove costly. Careful scouts report widespread upstate dissatisfaction.

G. O. P. candidate William A. Bleakley has concentrated on the farm vote from the moment he was nominated and has made considerable headway. He held a veritable love feast of a conference with leaders of farm groups about two weeks ago.

This event awakened Governor Lehman to his oversight and last week he called a conference with virtually the same group—the first one he has held in many months. Meanwhile Democratic national headquarters is rushing out last minute literature to the farm belt. But indications are that the awakening has come too late.

HURDLE: Unless Governor Lehman can hold the farm support he had two years and four years ago pretty much in line, he is likely to be out of luck. And so is Franklin D. Roosevelt in his fight to retain his home state's 47 votes.

Exceptionally informed sources predict that Bleakley's appeal to Al Smith's conservative Catholic following will cut the normal Democratic majority in New York City by at least 150,000 votes and possibly a great deal more. Add to this element Tammany indifference to the national ticket and to Lehman, and it's easy to see what a high hurdle Roosevelt and Lehman must leap. It's hopeless to try to win back Smith's followers—hence the fevered appeal to agriculture.

When Lehman was drafted to run again for governor by the national administration, against his wishes, he was expected to pull New York through for Roosevelt. Now for the first time there is talk in informed quarters that Roosevelt may run ahead of Lehman. Religious and racial complications figure heavily—even for this state, where they are always an important factor. New York is one rather bright spot in a pretty dark Republican map.

COLLEGE TEAM WILL GO WEST

Pirates Engage In Workout for Game with Cullowhee

Coach Farley gave his Pirates a final stiff workout this afternoon in preparation for the homecoming game with West Carolina Teachers College at Cullowhee Saturday. The Pirates ran through all their plays worked on offensive and defensive passing, and sowed talent in razzle-dazzle stuff.

Today's workout was the culmination of the Eastern Teachers' hardest week. Monday they engaged the Duke University B team in an unofficial contest in Durham. Tuesday they ran their plays with the Greenville high eleven.

Mickey Northcutt, letter half-back, sprained his ankle in yesterday's scrimmage and will probably be held out of the game Saturday. The rest of the Pirates are in good shape for the affair.

The Pirates will leave for Cullowhee early tomorrow, stopping at some city along the way for a light drill. Coach Farley will take his entire squad.

Devises Plan For Gasoline Savings On School Trucks

Could Install New Distribution Method If Oil Companies Would Grant Hauling Discount

Reflector Bureau.
Sir Walter Hotel.
Raleigh, Oct. 22.—Every county in the state could be provided with the new and more economical system of servicing school buses with tank wagons at the schools and at virtually no cost to the state if the various gasoline companies holding the state gasoline contracts would allow the school tank wagons the same discount for hauling gasoline from the bulk plants which they allow to their agents for this service.

It was pointed out today by C. C. Brown, acting director of transportation for the State School Commission.

For the gasoline companies pay their agents from 1-2 to 2 cents a gallon to haul gasoline from the bulk plants and dump into the tanks at the schools which have storage tanks, Brown said.

"In some 20 counties now we have tank wagon trucks, owned and operated by the State School Commission, which haul gasoline from the bulk plants every day to fill the tanks of the school buses," Brown said. "They get just as much gasoline from the bulk plants as is taken from them by their own or private tank wagon drivers in counties which still have storage tanks, at the various schools and for which the tank wagon drivers get from 1-2 to 2 cents a gallon. But the gasoline companies decline to allow our tank wagons this discount. If they would allow this discount, the saving in the cost of gasoline would pay for our equipment and make it possible to use this new system of handling gasoline and servicing school buses in almost every county in the state."

In the 20 or more counties in which the use of underground storage tanks has been discontinued and tank wagons submitted, with these wagons visiting every school in the county every day to fill the gasoline tanks of buses and check the oil and tires, gasoline consumption has been reduced 21 per cent and mechanical repairs to buses have been cut 60 per cent, Brown said. But because of the high first cost of purchasing these tank wagons or motorized service stations, the commission has been able to put the new system into effect only very gradually.

COLGATE DEFEAT BY TULANE WAS WORST UNDER KERR

Chapel Hill, Oct. 22.—The University of North Carolina meets a team Saturday, which last week-end handed Colgate University its worst defeat under the rule of Andy Kerr. Tulane, the Tar Heels' next opponent, swamped the Red Raiders 28-6 in New York Saturday. And yet Colgate has the best seven-year record of any team in the country.

UNC PRESS RELEASES VOLUME ON TENANT SYSTEM

Chapel Hill, Oct. 21.—Preface to Feasibility: a volume dealing with interracial cooperation share-cropping and the tenant farming system in the South, written by Arthur F. Raper, a member of the Commission on Interracial Cooperation, has just been released by the University of North Carolina press.

Mr. Raper, author of "The Tragedy of Lynching," says of the Southern tenant farmer: "The New Deal has done much for these workers... but reclamation awaits a constructive land policy. Schooled in dependency and without experience in community leadership, the plight of these 'peasants' is deplorable."

WEEK-END CONTEST MARKS SECOND MEETING OF TEAMS

Chapel Hill, Oct. 21.—When the University of North Carolina and Tulane University entangle Saturday in New Orleans, it marks the second meeting on the grid. A brilliant 1922 North Carolina eleven, which lost only to Yale, beat the Green Wave in a nip and tuck battle 19-12. Both North Carolina and Tulane rank high in the standings of their respective conferences.

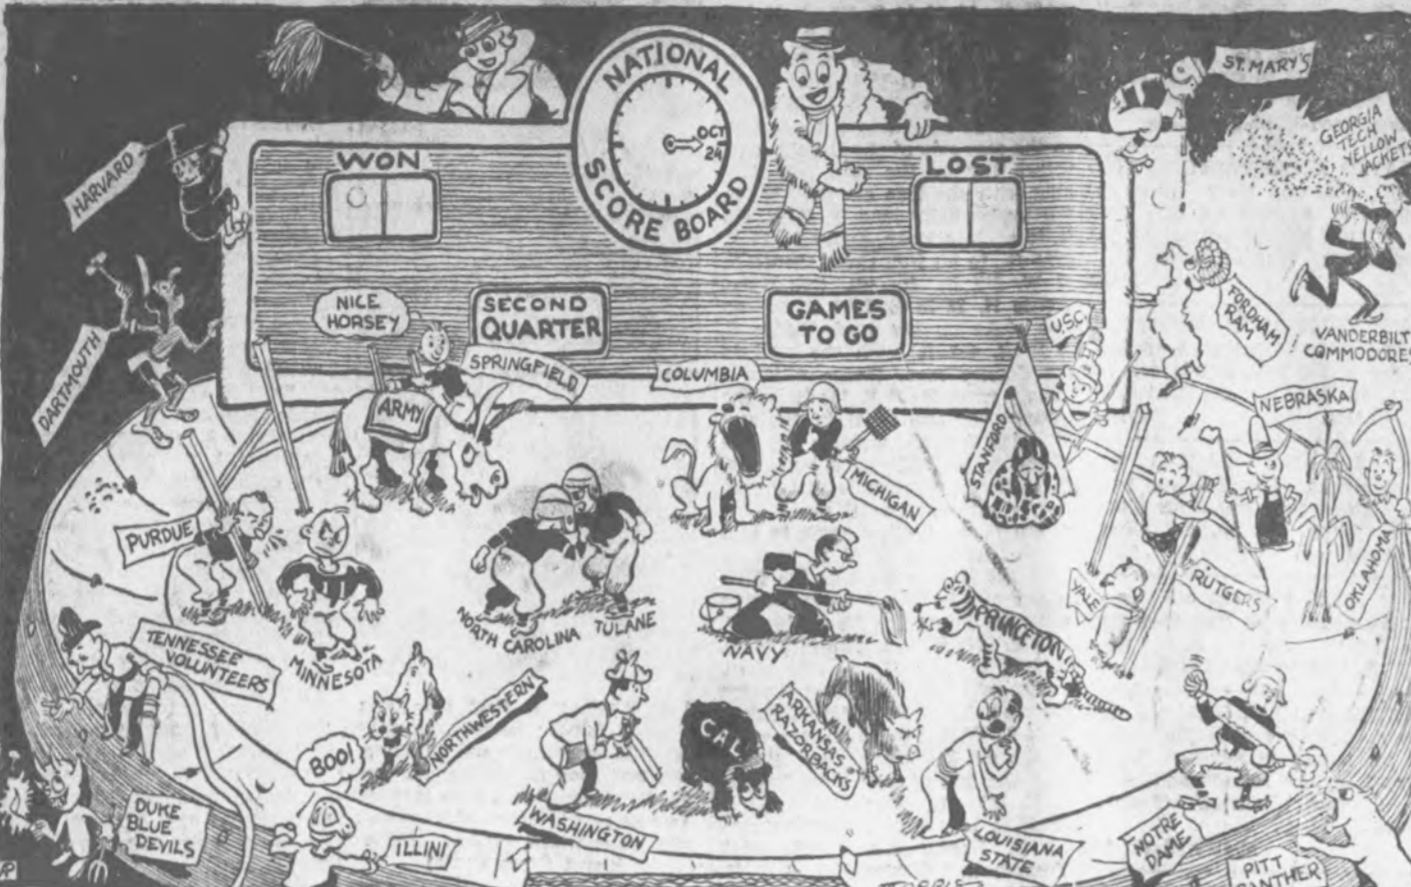

BURNETT TO ENTER GAME WITH PERFECT RECORD

Chapel Hill, Oct. 22.—Tom Burnett, Tar Heel Junior back, will go into the Tulane contest at New Orleans Saturday with a perfect record as far as kicking the extra points after touchdowns is concerned. The Tar Heels have scored two touchdowns in each of their four games this fall. Burnette has exactly eight placements to his credit in as many attempts.

BURNETTE AND MATTIS ARE PUNTING ACES OF TWO TEAMS

Chapel Hill, Oct. 22.—One of the features of Saturday's contest between Tulane University and the University of North Carolina probably will be the punting. Bill Mattis is the boot ace of the Green Wave while Tom Burnette is the Tar Heels' top ranking kicker. Both averaged 37 yards in last Saturday's games.

THIS WEEK'S PIGSKIN PANORAMA

COTTON FABRIC USED ON ROAD

Thousands of Yards of 'Lace Curtains' Being Laid

Reflector Bureau.
Sir Walter Hotel.
Raleigh, Oct. 22.—Thousands of yards of "lace curtains" are being laid on the Rhamkette road, just south of here and then being covered with hot tar. The "lace curtains" are the thousands of yards of cotton fabric being used by the State Highway and Public Works Commission in the construction of the so-called "cotton roads" and in which this fabric, which looks more like fish nets or "lace curtains" than an actual fabric, is used as a binder between the sand-clay base of the road and the bituminous surfacing.

The highway department has been busy all this week putting down this cotton fabric on the 2.4 miles of the Rhamkette road, which was formerly the old road to Fayetteville. Within the next week or two it will start putting down the fabric on 1.6 miles of another lateral road that intersects the Rhamkette road and connects with Route 15-A, the paved highway from Raleigh to Fayetteville.

Both of these stretches are to be experimental on which the effectiveness of the cotton fabric in different weights, will be compared with stretches on which none is used, according to W. Vance Baise, chief highway engineer of the highway commission.

On the present project, Grade A fabric, weighing 5.3 ounces per square yard will be used, on six-tenths of a mile. Grade B, weighing 4.25 ounces per square yard will be used on another six-tenths of a mile. Grade C, weighing 3.3 ounces per square yard will be used on another six-tenths of a mile, while no fabric will be used on another section of six-tenths of a mile, Baise said.

These sections will be carefully marked off and the manner in which the different sections stand up will be regularly studied and recorded. This same procedure will be followed on the second stretch of road, with the exception that each section will be four-tenths of a mile instead of six-tenths.

Some trouble in putting down the "lace curtains" is being experienced due to the fact that the width varies making it necessary to stretch the fabric some. Baise said. The fabric was supposed to be 72 inches wide, allowing for an overlapping of three inches. But much of it is only 64 inches wide.

Man About Manhattan

By George Tucker

his lackadaisical beachcomber was shuffling through Sheridan square the other day when Bob Reid, known evasively hereabouts as Garbo's only intimate, bounced around an adjacent corner.

"What makes you seem so grumpy?" he demanded.

"I'm tired," I told him. "I think I've got a fatigue germ."

"Well, maybe this will cheer you up. I just ran into Carmela Ponselle, sister of the Met, star, and she recited an episode that still has me chuckling. Not because it was so funny; it just proves that a certain fellow I dislike enormously is a blockhead. I'm bitter that way. I like to see my enemies meet up with catastrophes."

"Now to my story. Carmela was having tea the other afternoon with this person and he wanted to know all about her career.

"Miss Ponselle," he drawled, "they tell me you are something of a song bird. Are any other members of your family talented that way?"

"Well," Carmela replied, "they say my sister Rosa can sing a little."

Flash! At last bobs up the name of the original gossip columnist, notwithstanding all claims by modern scribblers to the contrary. Pietro Aretino was that worthy. A fine rogue, too, he was. His idea of fun was to mix a little intrigue with such ingredients as slander, blackmail, libel, greed and gall. Then he made friends with various cuties of the Italian Renaissance and threatened to expose them unless they paid plenty on the line. This in modern racketeer lingo, was known as "protection," and he spared neither princes nor paupers. A bold, lusty fellow, he started a newspaper and printed the most scandalous items about the big shots of the day. Gratitudo was the one word he didn't understand and this, Abern Gibb rises to observe, would have made him a "natural" on Broadway. It was just his tough luck that he was born 500 years too soon.

Perhaps it will surprise you to know that the bagpipe is not of Scottish origin—that it probably was the invention of some early Phoenician with a noisy disposition. That's Harry Salters' contribution to this essay, anyway, and he states further that the French horn isn't French.

Salters is spicing his maestro duties by doing research on all musical instruments. So far, he reports accurately traced. As for marimbas and xylophones, these are refinements of African jungle instruments.

CHANGE DATES HOLD RALLIES

Precinct Meetings To Be Held on Thursday Night

Reflector Bureau.
Sir Walter Hotel.
Raleigh, Oct. 22.—An excellent response is being received by Democratic Headquarters here to the request sent out a few days ago to all county and precinct chairmen that they arrange rallies with local speakers in every precinct where it is possible for the night of October 29, according to Secretary D. L. (Libby) Ward of the State Democratic Executive Committee, in charge of the speakers bureau in headquarters here.

It was first announced that these precinct meetings would be held Friday night, October 30, but the date was later changed to Thursday night, Oct. 29, Ward announced.

"We have already received letters from many of the county and precinct chairmen commending our plan and saying they are already at work arranging for these precinct rallies," Ward said.

"We know, of course, that it will not be possible to hold a rally in every one of the 1,533 precincts in the state, and in the cities and towns a single large mass meeting will probably be held in which all the precincts will be invited to participate. But we are confident that individual rallies will be held in more than a thousand precincts the night of October 29 and we believe that these small, local Democratic rallies, with local speakers, are going to prove very effective in arousing interest in the campaign and in getting the vote out on the day of the election."

The reports coming into Democratic Headquarters from every section of the state are more and more encouraging, Ward said. Senator A. Hall Johnston, of Asheville, was in headquarters here Wednesday and reported that the outlook for western North Carolina was better than it had been so far and that a number of counties which have been Republican in the past, will go Democratic

Question About CARDUI HOW IT HELPS WOMEN

"Who takes Cardui?" Women who are run-down, weakened, nervous, from not getting sufficient strength from the food they eat. — Thousands and thousands have found that Cardui increased their appetite, improved their digestion, thereby promoting better nourishment, and the consequent strengthening of the whole system.

And women who have suffered from functional pains of menstruation have found that, by taking Cardui just before and during the periods, this purely vegetable sedative and antispasmodic seemed to save them much discomfort. This action of Cardui is highly esteemed because the relief "credited" to Cardui is an entirely beneficial way. Cardui is purely vegetable; nothing in it to be afraid of.—(Adv.)

SPECIAL CENTURY ROADMASTER LIMITED

FOUR WONDROUS NEW REASONS WHY: "It's Buick again!"

SENSATIONAL is the fervor with which the American public has taken to its heart the brilliant motor cars offered by Buick this year.

Indeed, the sweeping success of the 1936 Buick program flatly challenged us and our great parent General Motors to a momentous decision.

Should we continue this amazingly popular line of cars into next year, perhaps the prudent thing to do—or should we dare broad improvement upon their spectacular excellence?

We felt there was only one right answer to that question, the bold and progressive answer—and that's why insiders now forecasting 1937 are already saying: "It's Buick again!"

That's why on top of $15,000,000 recently spent re-tooling and re-equipping Buick's great plant, we appropriated and are now spending $14,500,000 more.

That's why every car in the 1937 Buick line—the SPECIAL, the CENTURY, the ROADMASTER and the LIMITED—is a triumph visibly and intrinsically outranking anything we have ever done.

Each has more beauty for dazzling style, more power for breath-taking action, more room for full-family comfort, more downright "road-command" for safety and pleasure.

See them—then you'll know why Buick's soaring sales curve is headed for yet loftier altitudes next year.

YOU'VE GOT WHAT IT TAKES!

You can afford the new Buick. It's easy to buy and thrifty to own. With all its quality, its phenomenal performance and amazing style, price starts as low as $765.

General Motors tries to suit your taste. Safety plus included accessories extra. Price subject to change without notice.

BAILEY URGES BIG MAJORITY

(Continued from page one) rule. He called attention to the strides made in education, saying that back in the days of Governor Russell schools were operating only 14 weeks during the year and some leaders were getting only $17 a month. He alluded to the advances made in roads, saying that no state in the Union surpassed this state in this aspect. He declared that all these improvements were in evidence and without a cent in property tax being levied to pay for them.

Other accomplishments referred to included health and sanitation, strides in agriculture, manufacturing, income and other industries.

The senator took time out to speak of Al Smith, referring to the former Democratic Standard bearer's "Walk." Mr. Bailey said walking was good for him, "he was about the poorest runner we ever had."

"If the Republicans can do anything with him that is more than we could do," he said, adding, "We have no place for him now and the Republicans can't do anything with him."

Mr. Bailey also recalled the days of Huey Long in the senate, saying that the Louisiana dictator got his ideas of progress for his state from North Carolina. He said that North Carolina was a model of progress in the South.

The senator said that all the progress had been made and at the same time a decrease effected in property taxes. He cited figures for Pitt county showing that in 1928 more than a million dollars were paid in property taxes, while in 1934 less than a million dollars were paid.

Mr. Bailey said that North Carolina had had the best governors of any state in the union since the turn of the century. He said he had known all of them, and "the nominee we will elect November 3 is a man worthy of wearing the robes" of these great leaders.

Discussing the national situation, Mr. Bailey compared conditions today with those of four years ago. He said we were lost in 1932 and could do nothing for ourselves. "We did the only thing we could," he said, "but the result was..."

He said Mr. Roosevelt jumped in and did things, admitting that he as senator was unable to help back all of the bills proposed by the president.

Now, the speaker said, we have more money in the bank than at any time since 1929. Answering Republican criticism that the dollar today was not worth its full value, Mr. Bailey declared that it was worth more than at any time since 1914, with the exception of 1931 and 1932, "and no one had a dollar in those days."

Senator Bailey was introduced by F. C. Harding, dean of the Pitt county bar, who in turn was introduced by W. E. Hooks, chairman of the county Executive Committee.
