NATION HALTS TO HONOR ITS DEAD HEROES

Roosevelt and Pershing Head Activities in United States

ARMISTICE WAS SIGNED NOV., 1918

King Edward Leads England in Paying Tribute to England's Fallen Heroes

(By Associated Press)

The 18th anniversary of the Armistice ending the great war in 1918 was the occasion today for pleas for everlasting peace as many nations held commemorative exercises for fallen heroes of the combat.

Cathedrals, churches and synagogues drew millions to worship and prayer. There were parades with martial music reminiscent of the war days.

To President Roosevelt, war time assistant secretary of the navy, and General John J. Pershing, last survivor of the allied high command, fell the leadership of the United States observance—a pilgrimage to the great white tomb of the unknown soldier in Arlington National cemetery in Washington.

Two minutes at 11 o'clock were set aside for a pause in the nation's activity.

In New York's great Times Square traffic was ordered stopped and taps sounded to remind of the day.

King Edward, VIII, of England stood at the Cenotaph, London, war memorial to pay tribute for the first time as sovereign.

The "popular front" government in France stationed guards in Paris to stay possible clashes of political rivals as Frenchmen marched in commemoration.

Three Masked Men Rob Jewelry Firm Of Valuable Gems

Philadelphia Store Owner and Two Clerks Held at Pistol Point While Confederates Grab Valuables

Philadelphia, Nov. 11.—(AP)—Three masked men bound the owner and two clerks in a jewelry store today, broke open the safe and escaped with jewelry and cut stones valued by the proprietor estimated at $250,000.

Charles Diesinger, owner of the shop on the fourth floor of a building in the heart of the downtown business district, told detectives the men entered the shop when an Armistice Day parade was passing nearby.

While one of the men held them at pistol point, he said, the other bound and gagged him and the two clerks.

They were forced to lie on the floor for a half hour while two of the men worked on the safe and the others stood guard. They emptied the safe and disappeared.

Diesinger said the men took all the jewelry on display in show cases as well as that in the safe, and also took $100 he had in his wallet.

Dr. Alan R. Dafeo Named Defendant In $1,000,000 Suit

Process Server Enters Plane Just as Medical Advisor to Dionne Quints Prepares to Leave

Chicago, Nov. 11.—(AP)—Dr. Alan Roy Dafeo, medical advisor for the Dionne Quintuplets, was served with a subpoena in a $1,000,000 law suit a few moments before he left for New York on an airliner today.

The process server entered the plane posing as a passenger. He approached the Canadian doctor and after the latter identified himself the subpoena was served.

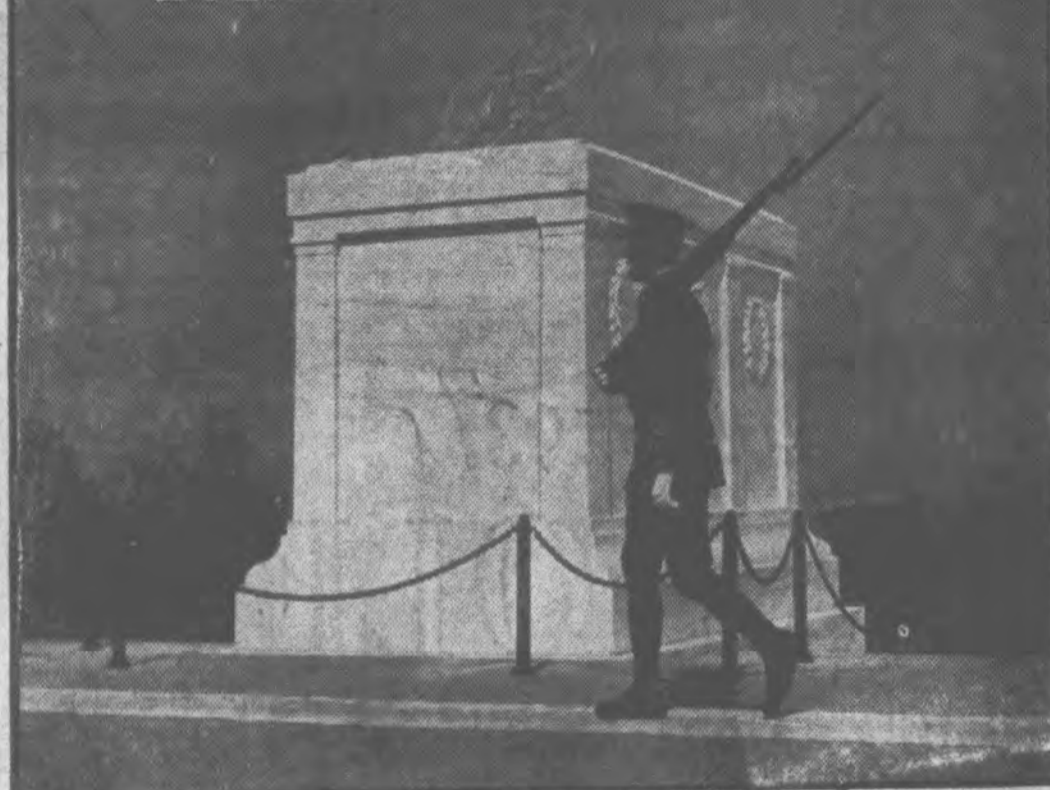

In the resulting confusion the process server disappeared and his name was not obtained. A moment later the plane took off for New York, where it was scheduled to arrive at 4:55 p. m. (est.)

A check of the district court clerk's office disclosed no action against the doctor which had been filed recently.

In February, 1935, a suit was filed here against Olivia Dionne, father of the quintuplets and 15 other defendants including Dr. Dafeo by Ivar Spear, who claimed Dionne had entered into a contract with him to exhibit the babies at the Chicago world fair.

The suit charged breach of contract and conspiracy to bring about a breach of contract.

ARMISTICE DAY

Eighteen years ago the guns stopped booming on the western front. Three years later the unknown soldier was buried in Arlington cemetery. Today, as comrades-in-arms keep vigil over his final resting place, the world has peace as its goal. But the clank of increasing arms and the tramp of marching men make worried pokers ask in fear, "what will the outcome be?"

MOVE NEEDED FOSTER PEACE

Judge Folger Delivers Armistice Day Address Here

Stressing the necessity for some move to foster universal peace, Judge A. D. Folger of the State Supreme court bench, delivered the Armistice Day address in the Campus building at the teachers college here this morning.

The exercises, paying tribute to those who gave their lives in the World War, were sponsored by the Pitt County Post No. 39 of the American Legion. In addition to veterans of all wars, as well as various women's auxiliaries were present at the ceremonies.

Immediately following the exercises, a barbecue dinner was served in the basement of the Campus building.

Judge Folger recounted briefly the past war and pointed out that it was a "war to end war." He declared that "our forefathers came to this country to gain freedom and founded the nation on the basis of freedom and intelligence."

If the world is to be worthwhile in the way of guaranteeing peace, he said, there must be a movement based upon intelligence with a full realization of the futility of war and such a movement must become widespread throughout the various nations of the world.

Judge Folger said that America, with a government based upon freedom.

TRAINMEN DIE IN BAD WRECK

Ten Passenger Cars Plunge Down 40-Ft. Embankment

Indianapolis, Nov. 11.—(AP)—Ten cars of a south bound Big Four passenger train plunged down a 40-foot embankment near here early this morning, causing the death of two men and injuries to a score of other persons.

The dead were the baggage man and the expressman on the train. The wreck occurred as the train was climbing a grade to a bridge. The engine and two cars crossed the bridge, but the other 10 cars left the rails suddenly and plunged down the embankment.

Two of the mail and express cars fell into a creek, one landing up its side. Other cars crashed into a field.

BATTLE RAGES ON SOUTH SIDE CAPITAL CITY

Defenders Hold Insurgents From River Bridges

40-BLOCK FIRE UNDER CONTROL

Press Reports in Madrid Claim Heavy Casualties Suffered By Invaders

Madrid, Nov. 11.—(AP)—Fascists attacked Madrid began a mass assault from the South today.

It came after the defenders of the capital, braced by 4,000 Catalan troops, had held off a new offensive from the west in an intensive engagement.

A terrific battle was raging in the Southern outskirts of Madrid following a shelling of the city.

Detachments of weary militia were called out to meet the fresh assault.

The insurgents had advanced slightly by mid afternoon although the government pressing a flanking movement was menacing the insurgent communications line.

Madrid, Nov. 11.—(AP)—The six day battle for Madrid shifted to the South today after the city's defenders had controlled a 40 block fire.

Occasionally one of the bigger fascist artillery pieces sent a snarl screaming into the Rosales district in the Western end of the capital, where the fire started yesterday, still sent slow columns of smoke into the air.

Earlier in the day, thousands of Catalan reinforcements filled Madrid's battered fortifications. Machine guns sprayed death across the shallow Manzanares river at Moors, Insurgent legionnaires and fascist blackshirts, and for a time the defending artillery held Carabanchel Najo and Casa del Campo, to the South and West, under one of the heaviest bombardments since the World war.

The fire, which menaced government buildings as it spread, burned part of Montana barracks, where powerful government batteries had been placed.

It also menaced the former royal palace and damaged military buildings. The cause was undetermined.

Government lines held the fascist back from the river bridges as socialist fighting planes and artillery (Continued on page six)

Special Terms Of Big Court Called For Pitt County

Judge Frizzelle to Preside at Session Beginning Week of Nov. 30; Judge Williams at January Term

With a scheduled criminal term of court having been called off for last week leaving the jails almost filled to capacity, two special terms of Pitt Superior court have been requested by the County commissioners and granted by the governor's office.

A civil term is scheduled to be held here the week of November 23. The following week a special criminal term has been set, with Judge Frizzelle of Snow Hill, resident judge, scheduled to preside. Another special criminal session has been set for the week of January 25, with Judge Clawson Williams to preside.

Solicitor D. M. Clark said that jail cases would be given preference at the term beginning the last of this month. It was expected that these would take up most of the week, leaving little, if any, time to try bond cases. At the special January term, however, the docket is expected to be relieved of a large number of bond cases.

The docket at the present time is congested considerably. While the term set for last week was called off on account of the illness of a daughter of Judge N. A. Sinclair of Fayetteville, who was scheduled to have presided, county and municipal courts continued to send cases up to the state tribunal.

Peanut Committee To Go to Washington

The peanut committee of the North Carolina Farm Bureau Federation will leave tonight for Washington, where they will confer with department of agriculture officials tomorrow on possible means of insuring farmers a fair price for their product.

The committee went to the national capital last week, but the discussions concerning a program in behalf of peanut growers were not completed and the group was instructed to return again tomorrow.

Art Williams To Search For Long-Lost American

Noted Army Pilot To Comb Jungles For Paul Redfern

New York, Nov. 11.—(AP)—A 1930 plane expedition into the South American jungle to try to find Paul Redfern, the young American aviator who mysteriously disappeared in August, 1927, while on a non-stop solo flight from Brunswick, Ga., to Rio de Janeiro, was projected today under the leadership of Art Williams, former United States army pilot.

Williams, who has spent many years flying over the jungle and working in it, said he has collected first hand information which convinces him Redfern was living with Indians in the fastnesses of Southern British Guiana as late as 1931—four years after his disappearance.

Williams has just made a quick trip to New York in connection with the proposed expedition and left yesterday for Georgetown, British Guiana, piloting a new amphibian plane.

Search has been made for Redfern before, but no adequate expedition had been sent into the wilds. Last February Alfred Harred said he and Art Williams had found Redfern and talked with the long lost aviator. Williams denied the story and Harred was sentenced to jail for a proved fake.

BRITISHER WALKS TO FORGET LOVE

London, (AP)—Nat Mercer, rejected lover, put women behind him—by taking a 1,500-mile walk across the English coast.

"Walking's good exercise," Nat explained. "It takes your mind off things. There's the sun, the air, the open road—and consolation."

Smaller Appropriations Sought By Highway Dept.

Reflector Bureau, Sir Walter Hotel, By J. C. BASKERVILLE

Raleigh, Nov. 11.—The annual appropriation being asked by the State Highway and Public Works Commission for the two years from July 1, 1937 to July 1, 1939 is considerably less than the amount expended by the highway department both last year and this, according to the statement of expenditures and estimated needs submitted to the Advisory Budget Commission here.

This money is allocated so that it will provide approximately $1,000,000 a year more for the maintenance of both state and county highways than has been spent on them last year and this year, the new budget shows.

Under the budget presented to the Advisory Budget Commission by Chairman Capus M. Waynick of the highway commission, a total of $8,000,000 is set aside for the maintenance of county highways and $5,000,000 a year for the maintenance of the state highways, while an additional item of $1,500,000 is set up for "betterments" of state and county highways—the word "betterments" being used to designate all improvements, especially surface treatment work.

In discussing the requested item of $5,000,000 a year for the maintenance of state highways, Chairman Waynick pointed out that he had broken this sum down into two sections, consisting of $4,000,000 a year for general maintenance and $1,000,000 a year for the maintenance, consisting of retreatment of surface treated roads. Heretofore no definite amount has ever been set up for the retreatment of surface treated highways, with the result that there has never been any systematic resurfacing of these roads undertaken or even planned. But not less than $1,000,000 a year of the total amount appropriated for state highway maintenance should be expended on these surface treated roads, Waynick maintained.

"In the first place, we have some 4,000 miles of these surface treated roads in the state highway system. In the second place, it must be kept in mind that these are not permanently hard surfaced roads, but have only a temporary surface (Continued on page four)

BUDGET GROUP NEARING END OF HEARINGS

State Institutions Continue Ask Increased Funds

SCHOOL REQUESTS TO COME LATER

Governor Ehringhaus and Governor-Elect Hoey Sit in on Board Hearings

Raleigh, Nov. 11.—(AP)—State supported institutions continued to ask increased appropriations for the next biennium today as the advisory budget commission neared the end of its oral hearings to push the total general refund request so they will probably run above $40,000,000 per year for 1937-38 and 1938-39.

The Goldsboro Negro hospital, which received $215,480 this year, sought $280,366 for 1937-38 and $290,000 for 1938-39, and Caswell Training School at Kinston requested $214,587 and $184,853.

The appropriations requests for the public schools had not been presented this afternoon.

This year the schools are getting close to $21,000,000 and various predictions have been made that $25,000,000 or more yearly probably would be asked for the next biennium.

Clyde A. Erwin, superintendent of public instruction, said this afternoon the request would be presented later for the schools and thought he would not discuss the probable amount, he said "I do intend to ask the restoration of salaries for teachers to the 1930 level."

Total requests for permanent improvement for various state institutions amounted to close to $9,000,000 today and members of the budget group discussed the possibility of requesting bond issues to carry out "that portion of the improvement which might be considered emergency."

Gov. Ehringhaus, chairman of the commission, and Governor-Elect Hoey sat in for some of the hearings this morning for the first time.

COUNTIES PUT FORTH CLAIMS

One County Seeking Road Refunds On Alleged Promise

Reflector Bureau.
 Sir Walter Hotel
 By J. C. BASKERVILL

Raleigh, N. C. — The late Frank Page, who was Chairman of the State Highway Commission during the period in which the state's highway program was formulated and the backbone of the state's highway system constructed, is accused of having made verbal promises to certain counties with regard to the building of roads not shown in the records of the highway department in at least one brief filed with the State Road Debts Commission. It was learned from an authoritative source here today.

The claims of this county will be heard by the commission here this week, along with the claims of 27 other counties when the commission, of which State Senator Carl L. Bailey is chairman, convenes here Thursday and Friday.

One of the contentions contained in an affidavit which is part of the brief filed by one of three eastern counties seeking very large refunds for highways built with county money which they now want refunded, is that Chairman Page assured this county that if it would turn over this money to the highway commission as a "donation" he would later see that it would be repaid just as if it were made in the form of a loan. The affidavit is from a former member of the county highway commission when Mr. Page was chairman of the state highway commission.

A search of the old minutes of the highway commission during the period involved, shows that the highway department entered into certain contracts and agreements with some 50 or more counties, all of which, setting forth in detail the conditions of each contract, but that no contract was made to repay any of the money ever received from this particular county on the project in question, although there is a definite record that the money turned over on this project was a donation and not a loan. It was learned here today. Yes, the affidavit contained in the brief dealing with this particular project, maintains that Page privately promised a member of the county highway commission that the amount involved would be repaid, even though it was formally and publicly listed as a donation.

But even though Page is dead, correspondence said in the files of the highway department has been found definitely refuting the claims made in the affidavit in question and showing that Page positively refused to consider the amount advanced by this county on this particular project as anything but a donation, in spite of efforts to get it recorded as a loan. It was also learned.

Highway commission officials here refused to make any comment today or to indicate what they expected to do when the claims from this county and some 27 others come up for hearing and argument before the County Road Debts Adjustment Commission this week. But the belief in informed circles is that many of these counties are going to have a great deal of difficulty in making their claims stand up in the face of the actual records which the State Highway and Public Works Commission is conceded to have in its possession. Those who know of the case in which one county is basing its claims for a refund on an unrecorded oral statement by Frank Page, now dead, to a member of the county commission, thus indirectly accusing Page of duplicity, are inclined to believe that this contention and affidavit are more likely to work against the county than help it.

In still another portion of this same brief, the attorney for the county maintains that the county voted on and authorized a $500,000 bond issue for roads, in 1919, with the understanding that the revenue from the sale of automobile licenses in the county and from the gasoline tax collected in the county would be turned back to the county for the retirement of the $500,000 debt, in accordance with the laws in effect at that time. Lawyers here who have looked up the law, however, point out that the law which previously had allocated 70 per cent of the revenue from license sales to counties had been repealed in 1917, two years before the bond issue was adopted. They also point out that no state gasoline tax was enacted until 1921, two years after the bond issue was adopted. So this argument is not expected to prove very impressive to the commission.

Man About Manhattan

By George Tucker

New York — Undoubtedly the most interesting vignettes of life come from the things they say, not after all, from the look of their eyes or the color of their hair.

In a rambling, cat mood, one sneaks up on the extemporaneous utterances of various persons. He made in the presence of this ivory tower from time to time:

Fritz Kreidler, (on the deck of a trans-Atlantic liner in New York harbor): "Since my youth I've had a passionate interest for incunabula published prior to 1500. I have 600 volumes now and I plan to sell them. This may seem a strange thing to do, but I believe that if a man is collector of books he must never allow it to lapse into a status quo. If you can not add and can not exchange what you have for something you greatly want, then you should withdraw. Book collecting is a serious thing."

Muriel Robinson (portrait painter who is pretty enough to be a model herself): "If you want to be a great artist, you should have weak eyes. Leave your glasses off while dabbing and you easily achieve that blurred, diffused effect which many artists strive to attain."

Billy Rose (Broadway's most imaginative impresario, who produces cabarets in circus tents and circuses in opera houses): Paris is a beautiful city, but they run it like a carnival. I'm going back to London and open a nightclub with a chorus of American girls. There are more pretty girls between 42nd and 59th street on Broadway than in all of Europe. All those over there have ankles like Lou Gehrig."

Louis Ferdinand (Prince of Prussia and a son of the Kaiser, on his last visit to New York): "When I first went to America people had a difficult time remembering my name and title. Someone saw my college degree which made me a doctor, and they found it more simple to call me Dr. Ferdinand. I like that much better."

Noel Coward (recalling earlier adventures while idling about the studio of Alfred Lunt and Lynn Fontanne): "The South seas are wonderful to yacht through but not to swim in. The Earl of Amherst and I tried it once and the heavy breakers pounded us against a coral reef. We came out of it with a horrible case of coral poisoning."

Prince Michael Romanoff (alias Harry Ferguson, an East Side boy who kept port authorities in a turmoil for years by stowing away on de luxe ocean liners): "I never read what the newspapers say about me. I haven't read a word written about me in eight years. How could I? It would drive me crazy."

Rosalie de Triana (Spanish dancer, between flurries of her castanets at El Chico's, in Grove street): "If my expressions seem strange, it is because we Flamencos never smile. Do not be alarmed. I am not in pain. I have just come up from South America and intend to stop off only a short while, but, quien sabe?—if I fall in love I may be here longer."

Grace Moore (over cocktails at the Waldorf): "Life for some may begin at 40, but for me it begins at 7 p. m. Then I come home from my work, rest an hour, and put on my most glamorous evening gown!"

W. A. Madigan (keeper of the cellars at the hotel Gotham): "In certain German wines you will find leaten gold, and you could be accused of hoarding if you drink it. Those wisps of gold can't be digested, but they won't hurt you because gold doesn't rust. Fancy that!"

It is estimated that the average man shaves twenty square miles of face during a life time.

Calotabs Help Nature To Throw Off a Cold

Millions have found in Calotabs a most valuable aid in the treatment of colds. They take one or two tablets the first night and repeat the third or fourth night if needed.

Second, Calotabs are diuretic to the kidneys, promoting the elimination of cold poisons from the blood. Thus Calotabs serve the double purpose of a purgative and diuretic, both of which are needed in the treatment of colds.

How do Calotabs help Nature throw off a cold? First, Calotabs are one of the most thorough and dependable of all intestinal eliminants, thus cleansing the intestinal tract of the germ-laden mucus and toxins.

Calotabs are quite economical; only twenty-five cents for the family package, ten cents for the trial package. (Adv.)

Dr. Frederick P. Brooks was guest speaker at the regular semi-monthly meeting of the Round Table Tuesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. C. T. Mumford.

After a few happy introductory remarks, Dr. Brooks entered at once into an interesting discussion of vaccines, serums and anti-toxins, modern aids of the medical profession in combatting contagious diseases.

"Why do thirty per cent of pneumonia patients succumb to the disease and seventy per cent recover?" asked Dr. Brooks. Medical science has proven that this fact is due to the body resistance of the patient.

When the patient's resistance is low, this may be augmented by injecting anti-bodies in the form of vaccine into the system. Then in case of exposure to an infectious disease, the patient may be able to throw off the infection, fighting with the renewed resistance acquired through the anti-bodies provided by the vaccine.

Although vaccination against smallpox was attempted as early as 1774 this process of immunization has only been thoroughly understood during the present century.

Medical science is working laboriously to isolate the cold germ, the infantile paralysis germ, and many others. Vaccines for these diseases have not proven entirely successful. The cold vaccine helps sixty per cent of those who take it, yet forty per cent are unaffected by it.

Serum is the blood of animal, man or beast, in which anti-bodies are prevalent. The effect of serum is temporary; though often, it gives immediate relief, it does not immunize.

Anti-toxin neutralizes the toxin the body has developed from an infection. There has been a marked advance in the treatment of diphtheria since 1896. In both diphtheria and tetanus anti-toxin is a valuable aid in combatting the disease, and, if administered in time, gives marvelous results.

Dr. Brooks showed specimen of the vaccine, serum and anti-toxin, which had been commercially prepared.

Dr. Brooks' talk was greatly enjoyed by the Round Table for the valuable information it contained, couched in language familiar to those present, rather than in obscure medical terms little understood by those outside of the profession.

Mrs. Mumford served a delectable sweet course with dates and nuts. During this social hour a lively discussion was engaged in by the members and Dr. Brooks was generous in answering the volley of questions fired at him from eager, interested Round Table members.

The program was concluded by interesting current events given by Mrs. Austin.—Reported.

TEXTILE MILL WINS CONTEST

Safety Campaign Sponsored By Cotton Firm

Reflector Bureau, Sir Walter Hotel.

Raleigh, Nov. 5.—The three winners in the three different groups of textile mills together with 58 other textile mills which operated for 3-12 months without any lost time accidents, in the state-wide textile safety contest sponsored by the North Carolina Cotton Manufacturers' Association and the North Carolina Industrial Commission, were announced here today by Chairman Dewey Dorset of the Industrial Commission, and Commissioner T. A. Wilson, in charge of safety education for the commission.

The Duchess Fabrics Corporation of Statesville, won the first prize trophy in Group 1, composed of plants having 350 employees or less. The sewing room and bleaching of the Erwin Cotton Mills, Durham, won the first prize trophy in Group 2, including mills having between 350 and 750 employees. The trophy in Group 3, composed of mills with more than 750 employees, was won by The Revolution Cotton Mills Co. (The Cone Mills) in Greensboro.

The contest started July 1, 1936 and closed October 15 and 172 plants competed in the contest, but because of the amount of work and time required to compute the results, the outcome of the contest was not announced until today.

The results of the contest show that in addition to the three top winners, in the three groups, 58 other plants operated for the entire period without a lost-time accident, representing 12,968 employees or 33.5 per cent of all the plants which entered the contest. Mills having a total of 59,977 employees participated.

"The textile industry of the state as well as the N. C. Cotton Manufacturers' Association are to be congratulated on the excellent showing they made in this contest," Commissioner Wilson said today. "The employees of the plants also deserve much praise and credit for the excellent record made in this contest, since it embraced more than half the textile plants in the state. We are hoping that both the employers and employees will continue this excellent record in the future, even though the contest is ended."

Contractors Busy Before Cold Weather Season

Reflector Bureau, Sir Walter Hotel. Raleigh, Nov. 5.—Work on the park-to-park highway in McDowell and Yancey counties is progressing rapidly and the contractors are pushing the work as rapidly as possible before cold weather sets in, fearing the weather may slow them down later. Two sections of the parkway are now under construction in this immediate area, while the bids on the third section have been called for. Actual construction on this last section is not expected to get under way before early spring however, even though the contract may be let within the next 30 to 60 days.

Very decided progress has been made on the Buck Creek Gap to Big Laurel Gap sector of 4-1-2 miles within the last 30 days. Work on this sector has been progressing from both the Big Laurel Gap and Buck Creek Gap ends, and much of the grading has already been completed, despite the fact that much of the right-of-way goes through solid rock. The contractors are now just completing a tremendous cut through solid rock about three quarters of a mile from the Big Laurel Gap end of the sector and have already completed two big fills of from 100 to 150 feet deep. One of these fills is being shored up with a tremendous "dry" rock wall to keep the fill from washing.

The sound of pneumatic drills boring into rock and of motor shovels snorting may be heard for miles as the contractors push the work on the parkway to their utmost. The contractors on both the Buck Creek Gap-Big Laurel sector, and the one on west from Big Laurel over Green Knob to Toe River Gap, are both working seven days a week and using from two to three shifts. Two tunnels have to be bored on the first sector and a third tunnel will be put through on the second sector. While a concrete bridge will be used to span a chasm regarded as too deep to try to fill about a mile east of Big Laurel Gap. A fleet of heavy trucks is being used by both contractors in hauling rock and dirt for the large fills from the deep cuts.

How's Your Health—

Lung Abscess

The lung is subject to the formation of abscesses, and the condition may prove a serious menace to life.

Certain cases of abscess of the lung appear to develop without any preceding illness. However, the commonest conditions which are associated with lung abscess appear to be surgical operations in the mouth, pneumonia, foreign bodies which gain entrance into the lungs, and certain abdominal operations.

We know the diseases in which abscess of the lung may develop as a complication but are still uncertain as to how it develops. This much, however, is known: purulent (pus-containing) material, gaining entrance into the lungs, can induce the development of a lung abscess. For this reason, when operations are performed on the throat or mouth every effort is made to prevent the entrance into the lungs of any foreign substances likely to cause irritation or infection.

This precaution can, however, prove effective only in the prevention of the entrance of the breathing material by way of the breathing tract. There still remains the avenue of the blood stream. In all surgical manipulations involving an infectious material gains entrance into the blood stream.

If it escapes being filtered out by the various means which the body has for such purposes, the infectious material is likely to get into the lung, where it may be caught in some of the very small vessels. Under such conditions it is likely to set up a local inflammation with the production of pus and ultimate abscess formation.

While this is quite likely the "mechanism" of lung abscess formation, it appears that there must also be present an underlying weakening of the lung to enable the process to develop.

The symptoms of lung abscess vary widely. They may be mild, like those of a cold or a bronchitis. Again they may be quite severe.

One characteristic symptom is the sudden bringing up of large amounts of expectoration following a quick change in body posture, as for example when one suddenly bends down low. The explanation for this is that upon change in body position the content of the abscess is so placed that it can drain easily. The entrance of this material into the bronchi induces coughing with the expulsion of the accumulated matter. Spitting up of blood is also a common symptom.

The treatment of lung abscess follows in a measure that of tuberculosis. Rest, good nutrition, postural drainage, and lung surgery are employed according to the case.

WHAT WILL WE DO ABOUT IT?

Just eighteen years ago at eleven o'clock this morning firing on the western front in Europe ceased, marking the end of combat in a war fought "to end all wars." To those brave soldiers on the firing line that morning the armistice meant and end of the fear of death at the hands of an enemy and held out the promise of a return to home and loved ones. Greater than anything else, however, the armistice to the world held out the promise of peace for the generations of the future.

On this eighteenth anniversary of the armistice it is well for us to look back over events from the day of the armistice to the present time to ascertain whether or not the world is any nearer universal peace or whether those who made the supreme sacrifice on the battlefield died in vain.

Since the Allied Powers dictated the peace terms that were supposed to make the world a safer and better place to live in, the League of Nations has been flouted by many of the powers who had a part in dictating the peace terms. South American countries have been at each other's throats, Japan has invaded China and taken a portion of that country, Italy has invaded Ethiopia, and today within the borders of Spain the Spanish people aided by individuals from almost every country in Europe are in a death struggle in one of the bloodiest and most savage civil wars in the world's history.

In addition to these events there have been bloody uprisings in various countries throughout the world and the nations of the world today are trembling with fear lest at any moment there might begin a world conflict that will make the last world war look small in comparison. This is the picture of the world today despite the fact that eighteen years ago this morning the "war to end wars" came to an end.

"What is the matter with the world?" you ask. Just one thing. Selfishness and greed on an individual and national scale, which must be replaced by Christianity and its spirit of brotherly love if the world is to have peace.

The world today is at the turning point. History is in the making and it is up to the people of the world as a whole to decide whether the armistice meant future peace or whether it will go down in history as the end of a

Wings for Sally

by BAILEY WOLFE

SYNOPSIS: Pretty young Tip Warren shocks her family at breakfast by announcing she's going flying with an irresponsible garage mechanic. Gathered around the board are: dainty, unselfish Sally, dutiful and considerate; her petulant stepmother; her tired lawyer father; the 18-year-old twins, vivacious, playful Tip and studious, handsome Ray. To discourage Tip's flying, Sally impulsively promises her mother she will not go up again without parental permission. Then Sally hurries to the Courier and her new job as society editor.

Chapter Three

Terry Asks A Question SALLY was soon so busy she forgot everything but her work. A few minutes before one the phone rang and Sally, answering in her newly acquired business-voice, was greeted with a hearty laugh from Terry Maynard.

"Not an item for the paper," said Terry. "Will you have lunch with me in ten minutes?"

"Of course. I was just wondering where and when I'd have it."

"Good. There's something important I want to ask you."

"You're the only thing that's keeping me," said Terry.

"You mustn't ask me important things at lunch," Sally was alarmed whenever Terry hinted at important questions. She was not ready for him to ask her to marry him, but she liked knowing that he wanted to ask her.

"I promise not to spoil your appetite," said Terry. "Let's celebrate and go to the Lanier—what say?"

"That's extravagant. A drug store would do."

"The Lanier—I'll pick you up in ten minutes."

At one Sally followed the girl reporter, Lola Hopkins, to the small washroom at the back of the building. It was dirty, but Lola didn't seem to mind. While Sally pinned up her hair, Lola splashed about washing her face and rubbing it briskly with a paper towel. When Sally powdered her nose, Lola looked on with some scorn.

"Never use make-up," she said, "unless it's a little powder in hot weather. Never found it improved my looks any."

"They went down the stairs together."

"Take you anywhere?" offered Lola.

"Somebody's coming for me," said Sally. "Thanks just the same."

"I get you," said Lola. "Here he is. See you another time."

Terry Maynard was unmistakably heading for Sally. His disreputable old car was panting at the curb.

"Hi there! How does it feel to be a working woman?" Terry called.

"Not so loud, Terry," said Sally, who could never calm him down into a semblance of respectability. "I'll let you know when I get my first paycheck."

"We'll go on a spree," said Terry.

Terry's 'Big News'

THEY went off gaily to the Lanier Hotel, Warren's one big hotel, and Terry ordered lunch extravagantly.

"At least I'm glad I didn't offer to feed you out of my first paycheck," said Sally. "Now tell me, what's the news?"

"Big news. You know I wrote to old man Willis Cates who was born in Warren and who's all mixed up with this line in South America and asked him for a job?"

"Yes—yes," said Sally breathlessly. "Well, he's on his way now to New York, he's going to fly through Greensboro Thursday night, and he'll spend his half hour stop-over at the airport with me!"

"What does it mean, Terry, for you?"

"Maybe I can talk him into a job. If I don't—it's the army for me."

"You want to go away, don't you?"

"You're the only thing that's been keeping me," said Terry.

"Don't—now, Terry, please," said Sally.

"All right. I promised not to spoil your appetite, didn't I?" His face lost minor conflict that paved the way for even greater and more savage wars. Those who died during the last world war have written their chapter of history; our's is the opportunity to write the happy ending that they would so desire, or else they have died in vain.

its good humor and he played with a fork sulkingly. Sally thought how like he was to Ray when something crossed him. She loved him for being boyish and rough and for being large and blond and unlike the men in her own family. But she was not ready to say she loved him.

"Don't be silly."

"All right," Terry threw off his disappointment. "Listen, Sally, this is what I wanted to ask you—will you go with me to Greensboro Thursday night while I talk to old Cates? Will you, Sally? I can talk him into anything if you're along."

"Oh, Terry!" Sally, remembering her promise that morning, was swept by depression as swift as Terry's.

"You won't do it, then," Terry glowered at her, hurt and angry. "You don't care whether I get the job or not."

"You don't understand. I promised Mother."

"Oh, hang! What's the matter with her, now? Does she think I'm going to talk with you all the way to Greensboro?"

"It's—it's Tip," said Sally miserably. "She's afraid I'm getting Tip interested in flying."

"What if you are? Snap out of it, Sally. The kids are big enough to do what they please, now. Show a little will of your own, why don't you?" Terry spoke irritably.

"Let's go," said Sally. "We can't quarrel in here."

Without speaking, they left the hotel and got in the car. When they reached the Courier building, Terry said, "My big news didn't get much of a break."

"Don't, Terry. You know I didn't mean to."

"If you change your mind about going," said Terry, "you can call me up tomorrow at the airport or the garage. So long."

Without a smile, he got into the car and drove off, leaving Sally staring forlornly after him.

Hampered By Her Promise

WORK, Sally discovered, cannot absorb all one's thoughts, even though it be interesting. All next morning while she typed and took telephone messages at her desk, she heard those parting words of Terry's: "If you change your mind—"

She did want to go. Of that Sally was sure. She had not been flying with Terry many times, but she trusted him utterly. Besides, Terry had said he needed her to stand by him while he interviewed old Mr. Cates for the South American job. Sally was used to Terry's need for her. Since their high school days when she had helped him with his English and talked him into having confidence in his debating powers, Terry had relied on Sally's advice and support. Sally, in turn, had found a warm excitement in Terry's boyish admiration for her. Her occasional flights with Terry had been a welcome break in the routine of her tedious home duties and the round of village parties.

Always when Sally went up in Terry's plane there was conflict at home. Mrs. Warren had never approved of Terry. She did not think flying a career, and she was alarmed at the interest Tip showed in it. She blamed Sally for the times Tip skipped away and went flying with Duke Adams, a younger boy who worked in the Maynard garage. Useless to explain to Tip that Duke Adams was less skilled and less responsible than Terry Maynard. Because Sally knew Terry was developing a mania for flying, she had impulsively promised her stepmother not to go up herself with Terry, without permission.

Yet it was absurd that Sally Warren, at 22, should not be free to decide things for herself. One moment Sally had her hand on the telephone, ready to call Terry and say she would go up with him. The next instant she would push the phone from her, unable to endure the prospect of another row at home.

ness. But that did not prove sufficient to an electorate accustomed to be glamor and finesse which Mr. Roosevelt had brought to the Presidency.

So far as the second factor was concerned—the issues—the Democrats had to their advantage the most compelling of all.

That was the issue of prosperity. It is the long and invariable custom of the American electorate to punish administrations which are in power in evil times, and to support those which are in power when times are prosperous or tending toward prosperity. That rule is almost all-powerful, and it did not fail in the November 3 election.

Finally, in the matter of party organization, the discrepancy was so great as to hardly admit of comparison.

After the debacle of 1932, the Republican managers started with nothing but a hope. They were handicapped by being newcomers on the national scene, hardly on speaking terms with the powerful party leaders in those eastern centers of population which Mr. Landon must carry if he was to be elected. And in the western country which they knew best, their organization lines had been smashed pitifully by the Roosevelt policies.

Against them was an astute Democratic chairman who had had four years to consolidate the triumphant lines of 1932. He spoke the language of the population centers where votes are concentrated—and skillfully managed. He had done what no chairman ever did before in similar measure—taught the great political machines, east and west, how to stand together.

Many additional things might be mentioned—patronage, class legislative favors, government spending, and others. But when all is said and done, history must attribute the greatest political victory in more than a century to two principal causes—the personal qualities of Franklin D. Roosevelt and of Jas. A. Farley.

that needs to be renewed at least every four years," Waynick said. "In the past we have been letting these roads for four, five and even six years without doing anything more than patch them and sometimes not even that much. That is one reason some 450 miles of these roads broke up and went to pieces last winter. If they had been properly maintained before the severe weather hit them, they would not have been damaged near as badly as they were."

"So now we are asking that at least $1,000,000 a year of the $5,000,000 we are asking for state highway maintenance be earmarked and set aside for use on the surface treated roads. This will make it possible for us to retreat, or resurface approximately 1,000 miles of these roads every year and to get around to all of the 4,000 miles every four years, which in turn will keep all of these roads in first-class condition all the time."

The members of the advisory budget commission seemed to be favorably impressed with Chairman Waynick's argument and no move was made to change the manner in which this item had been set up.

Last year the highway department spent a total of $3,500,527 for maintenance of state highways and this year will spend $3,828,639 out of its regular appropriation as made by the 1935 general assembly. Waynick pointed out. But this was found to be decidedly less than was needed, since some $9,000,000 from the former highway surplus has been spent or will have been spent by the end of this fiscal year in emergency maintenance and repair work. As a result, Chairman Waynick and his engineers are convinced that $5,000,000 a year is the minimum which should be used on state highway maintenance the next two years.

The total amount of state funds requested for the year 1937-38 amounts to $27,961,992 and for the year 1938-39 to $27,230,539, exclusive of Federal aid funds, but including $4,000,000 a year of state funds with which to match Federal funds for new construction work. In 1935-36, the state highway department spent $29,087,490, exclusive of Federal funds, and this year will total $40,524,735, the highway budget statement shows. But Chairman Waynick pointed out that from new on the state is not likely to receive any more large amounts for road work from the Federal government.

BLIZZARD BRINGS CALL FOR REAL HORSE POWER

PARTY WOMEN TO GET POSTS

Mrs. Spilman May Be Named School Commission Head

Petitioner Bureau, Sir Walter Hotel.

Raleigh, Nov. 11.—Governor-elect Clyde R. Hoey will be sitting soon with the budget commission working out ways and means for financing his administration; but unless all surface signs deceive Governor Hoey is going to be worried more about the positions which he passes around than the money that somebody else must collect.

The Governor has an official force in his own office which came down from his brother-in-law Max Gardner. The private secretaryship will not bother him, because these functionaries generally step out at the end of their four years. But making the choice for the successor isn't to be easy. There is publicity man Robert L. Thompson who wrote the Hoey releases both in the primaries and in the general election. The former News and Observer staff man did it well. It has been assumed that Governor Hoey will promote Mr. Thompson to the first position.

But there is Mrs. Edna Almond of Gastonia whose friends have urged her to put in her application. If the private secretaryship is not available there is the executive secretaryship, and if it is, there is Miss Mamie Turner who has served through the Craig, Bickett, Morrison, McLean, Gardner and Ehringhaus administrations. In the offices which look out on Hillsboro street are Miss Walter Bell Taggart and Mrs. D. L. Corbit. Miss Taggart came here with the McLean administration. Mrs. Corbit has teamed with her. There is small likelihood of changes there.

But even more interest attaches to the position to which Mrs. John B. Spilman is to be appointed. Mrs. Spilman was Hoey manager for the women's division in the primary campaign and she is now vice chairman of the State Democratic Executive committee.

The opening for her is believed to be in the offices of the executive secretary of the State School Commission. That is much to her liking. Both Lloyd Griffin and his predecessor Leroy Martin supported Sandy Graham in the governorship race, but both went the limit for Mr. Hoey in the second. Mrs. Spilman was with him all the time. Her conspicuously able direction of the Hoey campaign in the violently anti-Hoey East helped the Governor-elect to make a fine showing down there. There never has been any doubt that she will land something important.

But whether she will get the secretaryship or the assistant's place vacated by Claude Gaddy, promoted to the superintendency of Raleigh's schools, is quite uncertain. Mr. Gaddy directed the transportation department of the commission. Mrs. Spilman has a gift for school detail. She lived in the Greenville East Carolina Teachers' College many years. Mr. Spilman was bursar at the time of his death nearly a year ago, and Mrs. Spilman was assistant to him.

Mrs. Spilman has the able championship of Senator Josiah William Bailey for any possible position that she might seek. She has run for office but once and came near in 1934 winning the state senatorship in Pitt county, one little inclined toward women officeholders. She made life miserable for the Republican women who had to meet her women's organization during the late campaign.

There are many others whose aspirations will find some help in the new social security division which undoubtedly will be created during the Hoey administration and by his first legislature which convenes here within 60 days. Only two women will sit in that body, both former members, but there will be lots of lobbying for greater recognition of the women, whose activity in state politics has caused the amazing majorities which the party has won since 1923. Similarly, the women helped to beat Al Smith in that year, a punitive expedition which was not appreciated then, but in the light of the late Roosevelt landslide, quite satisfactory now.

Black-Draught High In Quality Without Being High In Price Black-Draught is "easy to pay for" because it is so economically packaged and so reliable. But as to quality, there's nothing "cheap" about it. For instance, its principal active ingredient is the leaves of a certain species of plant that are brought 10,000 miles from where they grow to the factory where the medicine is made. These leaves from far, far away, help to give Black-Draught its well-known "laxative reliability." They could quality. For a good, purely vegetable laxative not left out of substituted, without real loss of good medicinal value, insist on Black-Draught. About 25 doses in each 25-cent package.—(Adv.)

Will Life Begin at 40 for You?

EVERY man who enjoys whiskey wants fine, rich taste. But when Seagram announced that thorough research had proved Seagram's Crown's "a most wholesome form of whiskey", moderate men for the first time found that there was an important basis for choosing whiskey in addition to "finer taste". That basis is kindness. Your whiskey must agree with you. From the exhaustive research instituted by the House of Seagram and conducted by an eminent group of impartial investigators, you now know that "crown for kindness" rightfully belongs to Seagram's Crown Whiskies—because of the special Seagram method of blending them. Choose Seagram's Crown. Serve them at home, you will find them kind, gentle and considerate. You are sure of getting finer taste, and your guests will compliment your good judgment. Won't you try them?

DEMAND GREEN EXPLAIN PART

Federation Chief Served With Summons By Mine Union

Washington, Nov. 11.—(AP)—A summons was served today on President William Green of the American Federation of Labor, demanding that he explain to the United Mine Workers—his union—what part he played in the mine union's suspension from the Federation.

At the same time the executive board of the international 14-day garment workers union decided not to send delegates to the federation convention at Tampa.

The garment workers' board postponed until after the federation convention a decision on their future course in the controversy between the federation and the committee for industrial organization which is headed by President John L. Lewis, of the mine workers.

United mine workers made public a summons which it said had been served on Green, informing him the executive board would meet here November 16 to review Green's participation in a conspiracy to suspend the United Mine Workers of America from membership in the American Federation of Labor, his failure to adhere and conform to the policies of the United Mine Workers, continuance of association and fraternization with avowed enemies of the United Mine Workers, subsequent to its suspension by the federation and "distortion and misrepresentation of aims and objectives" of the mine union.

Democrats May Supply Chief F. D. R. Opposition

By ALEXANDER R. GEORGE

Washington, Nov. 11.—(AP)—If the second Roosevelt administration is to have stout opposition in the new congress, much of it must stem from its own record-breaking party strength in both houses.

For there will not be enough Republican votes in either house or senate to provide that opposition upon which the framers of the constitution relied for the evolving of legislation by compromise.

The lines of cleavage over some Roosevelt policies in the latter part of his first term frequently ran within rather than between the two major party groups.

Voting Strength A Question.

The voting strength, particularly in the house, of Townsend pension plan endorsees as well as those Republicans and Democrats who were supported by Father Coughlin's national union for social justice remains to be determined. The President might have to reckon with pressure blocs of all kinds in shaping his legislation program.

New Dealers have interpreted the re-election triumph as a vote of approval for a Roosevelt policy designed to occupy a "broad middle ground" between an extreme right and an extreme left in national political thought.

In both of his campaigns he repeatedly described his course as being "straight ahead." His intimates frequently have elaborated on those statements by pointing out that if such a course were planned on a wide-enough basis it would leave the extreme conservatives and the ultra-radicals too far apart for any effective political cooperation.

Pledged Continued Reform.

In the campaign Mr. Roosevelt did not specifically outline his program for a second term. But he answered Governor Landon's demand that he disclose his intentions with regard to revival of NRA and AAA and the declaration: "Of course, we will continue to seek to improve working conditions for the workers of America—to reduce hours that are overlong, to increase wages that spell starvation, to end child labor and to wipe out sweatshops."

"Of course we will continue every effort to support collective bargaining, to stop unfair competition and to abolish dishonorable trade practices. For all these we have only just begun to fight."

Court Large Factor.

Will President Roosevelt's fight for some of these objectives bring him into head-on collision with a supreme court majority? The court looms large as a second-term factor on the basis of possible further invalidation of first-term New Deal legislation, such as the Wagner labor act, and its attitude on measures passed by the new congress which might be challenged in the courts.

The judicial check on legislative action remains. Probably only a slow process of constitutional amendment of which there are at present no definite signs, could remove that check.

Immediately confronting the new congress will be the question of re-issuing to the President those extraordinary powers over the currency and the revision of international trade relationships upon which the reciprocal acts and international exchange stabilization efforts are based.

These exceptional Presidential powers expire within 30 days to six months from the first of the year. That the new congress with its huge Democratic majorities would

COAST STRIKE STILL SERIOUS

Police Protection Is Sought for Maritime Strike Pickets

(By the Associated Press)

Police protection for striking maritime pickets was sought in New York today and the situation likewise remained tense in other blocked ports.

Joseph C. Curran, chairman of the Seaman's defense committee which called the New York harbor walkout eight days ago, declared, "We insist we will do our utmost in maintaining peace and order on the waterfront, but if our men do not receive the necessary protection we will be forced to protect ourselves."

Curran's statement followed the strike picket in San Francisco where the strike began 13 days ago. The maritime commission investigation was to be resumed tomorrow.

Union leaders claimed 178 ships were strike-bound in Pacific coast and Hawaiian ports, and declared 247 more were tied up in Atlantic and Gulf ports.

DR. E. L. HENDERSON ELECTED CHAIRMAN SCOUT COMMITTEE

For the past two years the minister has rendered an outstanding service as district chairman for the Boy Scout committee. Associates declare he has been an inspiration and a guide to each man in the district committee, adding that during the time he has served as chairman, Scouting has more than doubled the scope of its work in Greenville and the entire district through coordination and functioning of the committee, under an able leader.

Dr. Combs has commended each member of the committee for the work carried on, and urged the committee members to continue their co-operation with the council and "make available to more boys in Greenville the character building and citizenship training program Scouting has to offer."

Dr. Henderson, the new chairman, has been one of the most active members since the committee was organized two years ago. He has organized and sponsored several outstanding courses of training for Scout leaders throughout the county.

Dr. Henderson has shown a great interest in the youth of this community for several years and in doing his work on the Scout committee has been one of the most ardent champions of the cause and a persistent worker to make the advantages of Scouting available to more boys, especially the underprivileged youth.

Mr. Patrell has been outstanding as civil service chairman of the district. He has sponsored such "Good Turn" moves as collecting magazines, toys, and "buddy bags" to be distributed to the needy in the community.
