HEATED FIGHT ON FLOORS OF LABOR PARLEY

Federation Convention Argues Suspension of Rebels

HIGH COMMAND FAVORS OUSTING

Resolution Condemning Suspension Results In Fight On Convention Floor

Tampa, Fla., Nov. 17.—(AP)—Presenting a heated fight on the floor, eight resolutions condemning the suspension of John L. Lewis' rebel unions were introduced today at the American Federation of Labor convention.

They conflicted with one resolution introduced by John P. Frey, president of the Metal Trades department, calling for expulsion of the rebels.

Meanwhile the federation's high command had all but finally decided to propose convention approval of the suspension and to continue efforts to bring Lewis and his industrial union allies back into the federation.

Tampa, Fla., Nov. 17.—(AP)—The American Federation of Labor's chief policy makers had all but finally decided today to try again for peace with John L. Lewis' 10 rebel unions.

This word came from the federation convention's inner circle as the resolutions committee started consideration of proposals to expel the rebels definitely and finally.

Unless a considerable number of leaders change their minds within the next 10 days, the convention will ratify the executive council's suspension of the 10 unions, forming the committee for industrial organization and direct the council to continue its peace-making efforts.

Other developments: David Lilienthal, Tennessee Valley authority director, asked the convention to support the TVA program, saying the enemies of the TVA are the enemies of labor.

The Massachusetts Federation of Labor introduced a resolution calling for a constitutional amendment that would validate such measures as the NRA and Guffey control act, both outlawed by the Supreme court.

Funeral Services For Wreck Victim Conducted Today

C. Heber Forbes, Jr., Laid to Final Rest in Greenwood Following Services From Home Here

Attended by a large crowd of sorrowing friends and relatives, funeral services for Charles Heber Forbes, Jr., 29, who was killed in an automobile wreck near Morehead City Sunday, were conducted from the home on Reade street this morning. Burial followed in Greenwood cemetery.

The services were conducted by Dr. Gilbert R. Combs, pastor of Jarvis Memorial Methodist church, assisted by Rev. A. W. Fleischmann, pastor of Memorial Baptist church. A quartet composed of Mrs. G. B. W. Hadley, Mrs. J. H. Waldrop, J. H. Rose and Charlie James sang at the services. The floral tribute was large and beautiful.

Mr. Forbes was the only son of Mr. and Mrs. C. Heber Forbes of this city. He received his education in the local schools and at the University of North Carolina.

Funeral services for Dr. Francis Marion Davis, 32, who was killed in the same wreck, were conducted from the home of his parents in Farmville yesterday.

AMSTERDAM'S BECOMING 'RENO' OF EUROPE

Amsterdam, Holland (AP)—Amsterdam is rapidly becoming known as "Europe's Reno." Five hundred divorces, the greatest number ever granted here, have been registered by the Amsterdam registrar this year as compared with 183 up to the same date in 1935.

Divorce has been made so easy in Holland that many Belgians are settling temporarily in Amsterdam for the sole purpose of obtaining divorces.

Alarmed Dutch conservatives are taking measures to check the increase.

Poles Adopt Market Day
Town, Poland, (AP)—Anti-Semitic passions of the Pomorze, the Polish Corridor, have procured the adoption of Saturday as the official market-day in most communities. This keeps out many orthodox Jews who strictly observe Saturday as a day of rest.

Joint Discussion Resumed Between Strike Opponents

Hopes for Peace Revived Despite Fact Both Factions Deny Concessions in Maritime Walkout

San Francisco, Nov. 17.—(AP)—Resumption of joint discussions between key forces in the Pacific general maritime strike revived peace hopes here today despite denials of concessions by either side.

The joint conference first between the opposing forces, since the walk-out of 37,000 sea-going, dock workers nearly three weeks ago, came after an arbitration appeal from nine east and west coast seaport mayors.

Legal action against steamship companies was agreed upon today by 70 tourists strike-bound in Hawaii, where 700 travelers and 900 seamen were stranded by the strike. The 70 voted unanimously to sue for "adequate compensation" for failure of the lines to carry them to their destination.

Assistant Secretary of Labor Edward P. M. Grady, who arranged the joint discussions here, said "neither side has receded from the original positions."

Interest in the spread in rank and file strike on Eastern and Gulf coasts centered at New York and Houston, Texas.

Pitt Cotton Ginnings Increase For October

M. V. Horton, special agent for the Census Bureau of the Department of Commerce, issued his monthly report today showing that 8,006 bales of cotton were ginned in Pitt county from the 1936 crop prior to November 1, as compared with 5,762 bales ginned in the corresponding date of 1935.

SEEK BROADEN WPA POLICIES

New Emphasis To Be Placed on Training Unemployed

Washington, Nov. 17.—(AP)—Harry L. Hopkins today foresaw a continuing WPA policy, besides providing the unemployment with jobs, will place new emphasis on training them to take their places in industry when opportunity comes.

In a speech prepared for delivery to the United States conference of Mayors, the Works Progress Administration chief cited figures to show that while the production of goods next year will hit 1929 levels, there will still be 6,500,000 to 7,500,000 unemployed.

Appealing to business to shorten hours, provide workers with high buying power and stabilize work, he said:

"The federal government can not refuse responsibility for providing jobs to those whom private industry does not hire."

Because of the higher productivity of machines and other factors, experts have estimated, Hopkins said, "that our total production would have to be 20 per cent above the 1929 level to reduce unemployment to the proportions of 1929."

Carolina Textile Workers To Get Fatter Envelopes

Four Cotton Mills Operating Units in a Number of Piedmont Towns to Give Wage Increases

Charlotte, Nov. 17.—(AP)—Thousands of Carolina textile workers will get fatter pay envelopes as a result of wage increases announced by four cotton mill plants.

Cannon mills, operating units in Kannapolis, China Grove, Salisbury, Rockwell, Concord and York, S. C., announced it would boost wages of its 16,000 employes by an aggregate of $1,000,000 a year.

Cone mills of Greensboro, with plants employing approximately 5,000, also announced a general increase, the amount of which was not made public. The Erwin mills at Erwin also raised employes' wages, effective November 23.

A general increase was also given the 7,000 employes of the 14 mills in the Marshall Field and company chains, with units at Leekeville, Spray and Draper. It was estimated the boost would add $7,000 to $10,000 week to the company's payrolls.

COUNSEL ASKS COURT REVIEW MURDER TRIAL

Lawyer for Martin Moore Again Seeks To Open Case

STATE ATTORNEY FIGHTS REQUEST

Brown Asks Court To Grant Certiorari In Nature of Writ of Error

Raleigh, Nov. 17.—(AP)—Counsel for Martin Moore, Buncombe county negro sentenced to death by gas for the murder of Helen Cleveland of Staten Island, New York, in an Asheville hotel room last July, asked the Supreme court of North Carolina today to grant a new review of the case on appeal.

Sanford W. Brown, Asheville lawyer for Moore, asked the court for "certiorari in the nature of writ of error" which, if granted, would result in the court reporter's transcript of the trial proceedings and evidence being sent to the Supreme court for review.

The petition and answer were taken under advisement in the court's conference.

Recently the court decided to hear Brown present oral arguments for his client on the grounds the case, then on appeal, was not in proper form.

Attorney General A. A. F. Seswell, answering for the state, set forth that the Supreme court granted Brown a writ of certiorari on September 23, but the defendant's case was not properly made up and presented on appeal.

The Attorney General also contended "the defendant has presented no new matter beyond that heretofore considered by the court" and "he has shown no merit whatsoever such as would entitle him to the issuance of the writ."

ORDERS STUDY FARM TENANCY

President Discloses Plans at Press Conference

Washington, Nov. 17.—(AP)—President Roosevelt disclosed today he was considering a system of curtailing the unemployed by a method of self regulation.

At his press conference, the president also announced appointment of a large committee of farm leaders, editors and others to study and report by February 1 on the "most promising ways of alleviating the shortcomings of the farm tenancy system." Secretary Wallace heads the committee.

He said the self-registration plan, toward which he was working personally, would be much simpler and cheaper than a door to door canvass.

L. C. Gray, assistant resettlement administrator, was designated executive secretary and technical director of the committee to study farm tenancy.

The committee includes Howard W. Odum, director of the institute for research in social science, University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill, and Dr. Clarence Poe, editor of the Progressive Farmer and Southern Ruralist, at Raleigh.

Desires To Know Why Pages Torn From Publications

Woman Member of British House Asks Question in Apparent Reference to Mrs. Simpson

London, Nov. 17.—(AP)—A socialist woman member of the House of Commons in apparent reference to the king's friendship with Mrs. Wallis Simpson, asked from the floor today why pages had been deleted from American magazines reaching England "during the last few weeks."

Miss Ellen Wilkinson directed the question at Walter Runciman, president of the British board of trade. "My department had nothing to do with that," replied Runciman.

The question was: "Can the president say why in the case of two American magazines of his reputation which have been imported into this country during the last week at least two and some time three pages had been torn out, can he say what is this thing that the British public is not allowed to see?"

American periodicals have been reaching this country in reference to King Edwards and Mrs. Simpson, his American friends deleted—presumably by the distributors.

Wade, who resigned to head the Raleigh office of the Federal Social Security board, and will serve until January, when Thad Eur, elected Secretary of State in the November election, takes office.

J. C. E. Ehringhaus, Jr., son of the Governor, became his father's private secretary to serve without pay until his term of office ends in January.

CONVICT NEGRO FOR ASSAULT

Swift Punishment Meted Out to Wilmington Convict

Wilmington, Nov. 17.—(AP)—Swift punishment—15 years in State's Prison—fell in Superior court here this morning upon Simpson Beery, East Wilmington negro, who was jailed shortly before midnight last night on charges of attempting to attack a 12-year-old white school girl yesterday afternoon.

The negro, serving a four year sentence for store-breaking here was a trusty at a convict camp in the northeastern section of New Hanover county.

As a "grade" prisoner he was not under guard and was first reported missing about 2 p. m. yesterday. The attempted attack on the little girl apparently occurred around 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon.

Beery was apprehended shortly afterwards. Sheriff officers said the negro admitted the crime.

The officers without telling even the girl's parents anything about the capture took the girl to the stockade and lined up seven negroes before her. She unhesitatingly pointed out Beery.

Solicitor John J. Burney this morning drew an indictment charging Beery with assault with intent to commit rape. A true bill was returned and trial started. The jury returned a verdict of guilt. Judge Henry A. Grady of Clinton, immediately sentenced the negro to serve 15 years at hard labor in the State penitentiary.

New Tuberculosis Cases Throughout Pitt Show Increase

Total of 68 Cases Reported in County So Far This Year, Compared With Only 39 in 1935

Tuberculosis is showing a sharp increase in Pitt county this year over last year, a situation prevalent throughout the entire state, figures released by Dr. N. Thomas Fennett, health officer, revealed today.

Three new cases were reported in the county during October, compared with only one new case in the corresponding period a year ago. The three new cases last month were in the Avde, Stokes and Farmville communities.

During the entire 1935 year 38 new cases were reported in the county. Already this year, up to November 1, 68 cases have been reported.

A 20 per cent increase was shown for the state for the month. In October, 1935, 132 new cases were reported, while in that month this year 157 cases were reported.

In releasing these figures, Dr. Fennett said that the citizenry should be aroused to the situation, and join in all efforts to combat the serious disease.

A county-wide movement is underway to fight systematically the dread malady and all citizens will be asked to cooperate in the campaign to keep the disease at a minimum in the bounds of Pitt county.

The national park service and the biological survey of the United States saved the trumpeter swan from extinction by establishing a refuge in Montana.

BOMBS HURLED INTO CAPITAL

Fascist Attackers and Government Defenders Fight at Close Range as Full Strength of Both Armies Thrown Into Ferocious Battle Near Capital

Madrid, Nov. 17.—(AP)—Fascist attackers and the government defenders of Madrid threw the full strength of their air force, tank corps of artillery into a ferocious battle for the possession of the capital today.

Four months old tomorrow, the Spanish civil war appeared in its decisive stage.

The thunder of artillery boomed ever louder and the chatter of machine gun fire filled the center of the city as government militiamen hurled themselves against insurgent armies filtering across the Manzanares river and into Madrid proper.

They turned close range artillery fire on the Moors and foreign legionnaires who held doggedly to their battle-worn positions in University City inside the northwestern limits of Madrid.

An successive waves, fascist fighting planes dropped over the center of the capital, spilling bombs and killing and wounding an unestimated number of persons.

Red Cross officials said an undetermined number of persons were killed and many wounded in the attacks.

The first assault came at 5:25 a. m., and a second followed five hours later.

Many of the bombs fell in the heart of the city, destroying several houses and wrecking business establishments.

Fascist troops were reported to have captured one University City building and to have established strong positions in the northwestern section.

Engineers Render Favorable Report On Florida Canal

Public Hearing Called for Washington on December 16 Before Board of River Engineers

Washington, Nov. 17.—(AP)—The War Department announced today a special board of army engineers studying the Florida ship canal reported the project is "justified in the public interest."

The department called a public hearing here on the report on December 16 before the board of engineers for rivers and harbors.

The announcement, said the report, dated November 1, 1936 had this to say of the controversial project:

"Construction of a sea level canal to provide a minimum depth of 25 feet and a minimum width of 250 feet at an estimated cost of $197,585,000, exclusive of and in addition to $5,400,000 already expended is justified in the public interest."

NEW ROADS VS. PAYING DEBTS

Commission Studying Claims Faces Big Question

Reflector Bureau.
 Raleigh, Nov. 16.—The big question which the County Road Debt Adjustment Commission will have to decide is whether the 79 counties which have just completed adjusting in favor of their requests for a refund of $61,000,000 for old roads worn out and gone to pieces, should be paid this money from taxes collected to build new roads, or whether to disregard these claims and spend this $61,000,000 building new roads in all the counties. It is agreed in most circles here following the recent hearings, the counties asking for these refunds maintain the state should pay them back the money they spent in supplementing state expenditures for roads when they were not satisfied with the amount the state had to spend and sold bonds and levied taxes to build more roads. But in order to pay this money back to these counties, it will be necessary for the state to abandon plans for $61,000,000 of new construction, much of it in counties which are not asking for any refunds, those opposed to granting these claims maintain. Thus the counties which did not or were not able to build roads at their own expense when these other counties were borrowing money and making donations to the highway commission to supplement the road construction being done by the state, will now be penalized if the state pays these claims. It is also pointed out that for the most part the counties which have no claims or very small claims, are in need of more miles of new roads than these counties with the big claims.

The whole question boils down into whether the counties prefer old roads to new roads, according to Charles Ross, counsel for the State Highway and Public Works Commission. "If the counties—all the 100 counties—are willing to go without any new roads until this $61,000,000 is paid for the old roads, well and good. But many of these need new roads more than they need the money for the old ones, especially the counties with small claims. It will be interesting to see what the members of the general assembly from these counties decide to do, for the fact remains that the money, if refunded, will come from the money intended for new roads."

Man About Manhattan

By George Tucker

New York—Broadway, unfeeling and callous, frequently sees comedy in situations that are tragic to someone else.

A number of years ago New York was startled by the beauty of a young dancer who played a native girl in a drama about the South seas. It was her only hour of fame because she never appeared in another show.

After that she became a sort of barfly, haunting the speakeasies and spending up drinks whenever she could persuade anyone to buy them.

Early one morning there was a sick-up, and a gangster showed several bullets into a bartender who was dull-witted enough to think the fellow was only fooling. A mirror behind the bar shattered, and a lot of the glass went into the dancer's face.

Well, the doctors saved her eyes, but the scars that remain are sufficiently hideous to cause one to look the other way. Of late she has been dawdling in an east side tavern and justifying, to an extent, the arguments that she is on the wacky side. That is, people buy her drinks and excite her into harangues against the theatre for ruining her career, etc. Few take the trouble to conceal the fact that they are laughing at her. There are those who think this is amusing.

Gets It Sworn To.

Joe Zell writes me that he is going to open his new club on a specified date and sends along an affidavit to prove it. You'll remember Zell for his Paris bars, and as the Cash of a $100,000 speakeasy Bagdad here that was wrecked by prohibition agents.

The affidavit, duly acknowledged by a notary public:

"Joe Zell, my mind being in no more than its accustomed state of flux, do hereby testify that the final date for the opening of my new club at 130 East 58th street, has definitely been set for Wednesday evening, Nov. 18, in order to coincide with the new moon.

"Realizing as I do that after postponements which have broken out like rash in the public prints people will begin to question the intention—not to say truth—of my statements. I wish to confirm a general belief that these delays are no one's fault but my own; that in my usual confused fashion I waited until the last minute before spending another $10,000 on decorations by Ruth Urban and Zito; that the exact reproduction of the Place du Theatre in Paris, which is the club's motif, took a damn sight longer to do than I anticipated; that my floor show, starring Rachel Carlay, turned out to be more elaborate than the time allot-

Wings For Sally

SYNOPSIS: Attractive, unselfish Sally Warren joins the Warrenton Courier staff as society editor to boost her fan's dwindling income. She wants to help Ray and pretty, headstrong Tip, the 18-year-old Warren twins. Terry Maynard, boyish blond editor, lands a job with South American prospects and asks Sally to marry him. They become secretly engaged. Philip Page, former Warrenton boy whom Sally hasn't seen since childhood, buys the Courier. That night she crosses the street to the old Page garden to sit under the magnolias and dream once more. Suddenly a man appears.

Chapter Eight

A Ghost In The Garden

SALLY was not easily frightened, and she was not a girl to scream even when she was afraid. She got up hastily and walked as fast as she could toward the gate, not daring to look behind her. She heard the man coming after her, overtaking her, and unable to stand the pursuit any longer, she turned and faced him. She saw at once that he was not a tramp.

"Are you a ghost?" he asked pleasantly.

Sally grew warm with embarrassment. He was making fun of her, whoever he was. "Of course not," she said, feeling ridiculous.

"I'm sorry," said the young man. "They told me my mother's ghost sometimes walked in this garden and I thought you might be Alice Page herself."

Alice Page! So this was Philip Page, and he had caught her fairly enough. She looked at him with interest and saw that the moonlight was certainly flattering to him.

"I am Philip Page," he went on. "And if you are not a ghost, then who are you?"

"You'll know very soon," said Sally, prompted by a sudden impulse. "Do you mind if I don't tell?"

"I mind very much," said Philip Page. "Where are you going?"

"Home," Sally paused, on her way to the gate. "I'm trespassing."

"Don't go. Stay and show me through the house. I've got the keys and a flashlight, but I darsay you can go through keyholes and see by starlight."

"Then you think I'm a witch," Sally was amused.

"Very likely," said Philip Page solemnly. "Will you come?"

For answer Sally directed her steps toward the front porch, and Philip Page followed and unlocked the front door of the old brick house. The door creaked open and a musty odor came out of the hallway to meet them. Philip Page flashed on his pocket lamp and its beams were reflected in a tall gilt-framed mirror as they entered.

"Look at that staircase," said Philip Page. "It's just as I remembered sliding down the bannisters."

"Exactly," said Sally. Philip Page turned his lamp full on Sally's face and studied it, to her confusion.

"You're the girl who used to slide with me," he said. "You always blamed me when you fell off."

"Yes," said Sally. "Once you pushed me at the top of the stairs and I fell all the way down. You were a nasty little boy sometimes."

"You fit into the picture?"

They went through the empty rooms, one by one: the library with its naked shelves; the dining room, bare except for the handsome chandelier; the bedrooms, with bare and there a picture or a shrouded table or bed.

When they were once more on the flagged porch, Philip Page looked about him and threw back his head in a gesture that Sally was to learn meant that he had formed a resolution.

"I'm going to do the house over by and by," he said. "It would set a girl I know crazy to fill it with the proper antiques."

Sally was suddenly, unaccountably annoyed. The house belonged to Philip Page, and there was no reason on earth why he should not let a girl in Washington fill it with antiques, yet somehow the idea was distasteful to Sally.

"She'll have to bring her antiques to fill it," said Sally. "This part of the country has been literally robbed of all its fine furniture by people with money."

Philip Page grinned with amusement. "So you don't like the idea of filling my house with antiques," he said. "Neither do I, but perhaps you'll help me buy something really comfortable."

"I am sure you will be able to choose for yourself," said Sally stiffly. She was conscious of being laughed at. She could never keep what she was thinking from showing in her face.

"Perhaps I shall," said Philip, especially since you don't seem disposed to be helpful. I warn you I mean to live very simply. Just a bed and a few tables and chairs will do for me. I came to Warrenton to work. Besides, I'm poor. I've put everything I own into my business."

"You'll find that most of the people here work," said Sally, somehow resenting the implication. "That is, everyone who can get a job."

"Good," said Philip. "I can see I'm going to like it here."

"I must be going," said Sally. "I only came to sit in the garden for a few minutes. I've always liked the garden."

"Please don't let me keep you from sitting in the future," said Philip Page. "You fit into the picture very well."

His voice was faintly humming and Sally began to feel that she had been very bold. It was not a very good beginning to make with her new employer.

"Goodnight," said Sally stiffly. "And thank you very much for showing me about the place."

Philip Page stared at her a moment, surprised by the conventional phrases. Then he said politely, "It was a great pleasure, Miss—"

"Warren," said Sally, realizing that she had earned the sarcasm with her stiffness and not knowing how to recapture the mood they had lost.

"Goodnight," said Warren. "I hope Philip Page and I shall see you again. He is a very nice fellow. I have the friendliest feelings toward ghosts—after this."

Sally hurried down the path and into her own house. She was relieved to find everything quiet, and determined to pretend that she and Philip Page had not met. It would never do for the family to know that she had gone calling on Philip Page, the first day he arrived.

That night Sally found herself strangely sleepless and excited. For a moment she and Philip Page had played a charming game in the house she had always loved—they had been people in a play. She wondered if Philip Page were always so charming, or if he could be, as Lois Hopkins had said, arrogant and bad-tempered. Certainly he was clever. And clever, charming men were rare enough in Warrenton. He could be very popular if he wished.

Sally decided to be very business-like and stiff with Philip Page when she met him in the office as she must sooner or later. He must be convinced that she did not mean to presume on their childhood acquaintance. She must be competent, Sally thought, punching her pillow resolutely.

When she reached the office next morning with her carefully rehearsed manner toward Philip Page, she discovered that he had come in and gone out again before she arrived. The office was in high spirits over the announcement that there were to be no dismissals. Sally settled down to work and soon forgot about Philip Page.

Invitation To A Dance

HALF way through the morning the telephone rang more impatiently than usual. Sally answered calmly in the formula she had learned from the reporters.

"Courier office."

"Is that you, Sally Warren?"

Sally recognized Mary Morris at once. Although they had been friends for years, Sally had tried to drop out of Mary's set which she could not afford to keep up with. She had scarcely seen Mary since she started to work.

"This is Sally Warren," she said. "How are you, Mary?"

"Don't sound so dreadfully dignified," reproached Mary. "Do you like working in that dirty old Courier building?"

"Yes, it's very interesting," said Sally, hoping no one else could hear Mary, who had a rather strident voice.

"Imagine you a working girl—but when it's being done these days!"

"Did you—did you have an item for me?" asked Sally nervously.

"Listen, yes, darling—if you want to use it for the paper, I was just going to ask you and that stunning little sister of yours to come to a little dinner dance Friday in honor of the new man. Have you met him?"

"Yes—yes," said Sally. She was sitting facing the door, and to her horror Philip Page entered and came toward her.

"But, of course," laughed Mary. "You work for him. Now perfectly thrilling! Now I know why you like it."

"It's—it's very nice," said Sally. She knew she was blushing, and she could see Philip Page looking at her with amused interest. He had stopped a few feet from the desk and was waiting till she finished. Sally was sure he could hear every word Mary said.

"How do you like him?" demanded Mary. "Give me the low-down. Do you realize that you're ahead of all of us? Why with you seeing him every day none of the rest of us have a chance."

"Listen, Mary," said Sally desperately. "Do you mind calling me again later? I've got a lot to do now."

"Of course, darling. I forgot you were in business. By-by. And don't forget the party. I'm going to ask your handsome beau at the garage, too—that Maynard boy who files. I've asked Ray, but he has a date."

"We'll be there," said Sally. Mary was beginning to say something else, but Sally hung up firmly. She turned to Philip Page, all her carefully rehearsed phrases forgotten.

FORD

advances into 1937 with the

and new operating economy

THE ADDITION of a new 60-horsepower engine to the Ford line for 1937 brings you a new, low price and gives you a choice of two V-type 8-cylinder engines. 85 horsepower for maximum performance. 60 horsepower for maximum economy.

In basic design, the new 60-horsepower V-8 engine is a replica of its famous older brother—the V-8 "85." But its reduced size and weight make possible a lighter car, with lower operating costs, and the lowest Ford price in years.

The 60-horsepower engine was originally developed for use in England and France, where fuel costs are high and fuel economy is vitally important. It has been proven there for two years with brilliant success. Now, brought to America, it creates an entirely new standard of modern motoring economy!

The "60" engine is built in exactly the same body size and wheelbase, to the same advanced design, with the same comfort and convenience as the "85." It has all the distinctive Ford features for 1937. And it delivers V-8 smoothness and quietness at speeds up to 70 miles an hour.

Two engine sizes—but only one car and one purpose—to give you more miles and more satisfaction for your money in 1937. We invite you to see this very modern car at the showrooms of the nearest Ford dealer.

Washington Daybook

By Preston Grover

Washington — Anyone listening to arguments in the supreme court these days would be thoroughly justified in suspecting he had drifted into the wrong chamber and actually was hearing a senate debate minus the senate interruptions, of course.

Traditionally, courts are concerned with the law. In turn, you might expect congress and the chief executive to decide what is "good" or "wise" for the country and leave the supreme court simply to determine whether congress and the President were acting within the constitution.

But take the case of the New York unemployment insurance act, whose constitutionality was argued before the supreme court.

Henry Epstein, New York state solicitor general, wheeled before the court a rack of charts. What for? To prove to the court that unemployment insurance was "good" for the state. He spent precious little time debating whether it was constitutional although he submitted a brief on legal questions. A much longer brief was submitted, however, on the economic and social questions.

Not only that, but James McCormick Mitchell of Buffalo, attorney for companies attacking the law, answered in kind. He said the law was unconstitutional, but more earnestly he denied Epstein's arguments that the law was "good" for the state.

Epstein used his charts to show that the ups and downs of business cycles were a recurrent factor in present day affairs.

He showed rail transportation lagging when factory production lagged. Thus, he argued, railroad employees were thrown out of jobs through no fault of their own or of the railroads, but because factory work slackened.

He insisted it was "good" and "right" that the state should tax employers and employees to set up a reserve fund to tide unemployed over the low spots. Moreover, he said it was economically sound to have this reserve to sustain purchasing power in depression periods.

Does that sound like "dry as dust" law arguments?

It is not wholly unusual for the court to hear economic and social arguments. Such factor bear on the court's interpretation of the "general welfare" clause.

But arguments of opposing attorneys on the New York unemployment act sounded definitely as if the court should decide the issue on whether the law was sound economically and socially.

They may have taken their cue from Justice Stone, one of the liberal dissenters. In criticizing the majority opinion by which the New York minimum wage law was upheld Stone said it was "hard to imagine" grounds for the majority decision other than "personal economic predilections" of members of the court.

It will be interesting to note just to what extent the court in future is regaled with arguments based not so much on whether laws are permissible, but whether they are wise.

HOW THEY STAND

Although General Francisco Franco's insurgents controlled well over half the country as they pounded on the doors of Madrid, two loyalist strongholds far removed from the capital promised stubborn resistance and left the final issue in doubt. President Manuel Azana and his government were established in Valencia, on the east coast, where they indicated they would put up a last ditch fight. In Catalonia, in the northwest, leftists had set up an autonomous regime friendly to the government.

of time in the Department of Revenue, where he formerly was Executive Secretary of the State Tax Commission and recognized as the fair-haired favorite, chief brain trust and "yes man" of Governor Gardner. He was also regarded as one of the ablest hands at thinking up new taxes and new plans for extracting taxes ever found in North Carolina.

Accordingly, the prevailing belief in political circles here now is that Dr. Morrison is on an indefinite leave of absence from the office of former Governor Gardner in Washington to snoop around his old haunts here in North Carolina in an effort to develop some suggestion for some new taxes for Governor-elect Clyde R. Hoey to recommend to the general assembly.

It is conceded that Governor-elect Hoey will need all the help and suggestions he can get, especially since the general fund budget requested by the various state departments and institutions now amounts to $44,500,000, or $9,000,000 more than the present general fund budget of $35,500,000. Nor does this amount take into consideration the amount needed for social security legislation, free textbooks for school children or the restoration of the exemptions in the sales tax, which will take another $5,000,000.

Some think that Dr. Morrison is engaged in trying to find some substitutes for the sales tax it is recalled that the consistency was opposed to and advised against a sales tax and that Governor Gardner went along with him in this position. But those who are familiar with the needs of the state, the big requests for appropriations which have been made, do not see how Governor Hoey can consider doing more than restore the sales tax exemptions, especially when that is all he is pledged to do. So most observers here believe Dr. Morrison is merely looking around for more things to tax, rather than seeking substitutes for the sales tax, especially since Dr. McDonald is still in the state.

The sun's rays have been found to be better in winter than in summer.

Fred W. Morrison Thought Studying New Tax Outlook

Former State Tax Secretary Believed To Be Making Study for Governor-Elect Clyde R. Hoey

Reflector Bureau, Sir Walter Hotel, Raleigh, Nov. 17.—Dr. Fred W. Morrison, the one-man brain trust of former Governor O. Max Gardner who so valuable to him that he took him to Washington with him to do the detail work in his law office there when he retired as Governor here, is back in Raleigh, Morrison has been here for a week or more, but no one seems to know definitely what he is doing, although he has been spending a good deal

DUKE'S BLUE DEVILS TRIM CAROLINA 27 TO 7

The widely discussed question of superior strength on the part of Duke university or the University of North Carolina was definitely settled at Chapel Hill when the Duke Blue Devils handed the Carolina Tar Heels a 27 to 7 lacing. "Ace" Parker (arrow), Duke's spectacular back, is shown breaking away for a substantial gain in the second quarter. The victory gave Duke undisputed possession of first place in both the state and Southern conference standings. (Associated Press Photo)

"No, I won't!"

"Very well, then, I shall have to spank you."

If Tommy still refuses to obey the mother has gotten herself into a predicament. She does not want to spank Tommy, and yet she must have obedience. What is she to do? Coach Wolf Worried Over Possibility Of Let Down

Chapel Hill, N. C., Nov. 17.—With the Duke game a matter of history, the University of North Carolina football squad will begin preparations in earnest today for the last two contests on the schedule.

The University of South Carolina is to be met in Columbia Saturday in a Homecoming game for the Gamecocks, and then will come the annual Turkey Day classic with Virginia at Charlottesville Thanksgiving.

Faced with the possibility of a let-down, the Carolina coaches will urge the players to profit by the mistakes of the Duke game and then forget it as soon as possible.

Those here who had observed the Carolina and Duke teams throughout the season expected the Tar Heels to lose to Duke by at least a two-touchdown margin, but they had not figured on Ace Parker's 105-yard punt return.

Carolina supporters had even hoped the Tar Heels might be able to play over their heads and thus possibly overcome certain odds, but they were not surprised when Duke won.

The Tar Heels have won all but two of their games to date, losing only to Tulane and Duke, giving them a better season than most of their supporters had anticipated, but they are anxious to put those remaining two contests in the victory bag.

Coach Ray Wolf had brought the Tar Heels to a peak for the Duke game. It is but natural that he must now worry over the possibility of a let-down, as so often happens in such cases. There is cited, for instance, the recent case of Tulane, a truly great team which, although favored, lost to Alabama 34-7, and then went on a further toboggan and lost last Saturday to Georgia 12-6 when the Greenies were figured to be several touchdowns better than the Bulldogs.

NEW CONTRACT FOR ANDERSON

N. C. State Coach To Be Offered Chance To Stay On

Reflector Bureau, Sir Walter Hotel.

By J. C. BASKERVILL

Raleigh, Nov. 17.—Coach "Hunk" Anderson of the State College football team, has not yet been offered a new contract to continue coaching at State College for another year, in spite of rumors to the effect that he has already been offered such a contract, but he will in all probability be offered such a contract when his present three year contract expires early in December, it was learned from an authoritative source here today.

For while the State College Athletic Council has not held any meeting recently and is not expected to meet until after the close of the present football season, the belief among those who are in a position to know is that a majority of the members of the Athletic Council are well pleased with the work he has done at State College the past three years and that he will be offered a contract for another year.

Whether Anderson will sign such a contract is a horse of another color, it is frankly conceded, since it is known that he now has at least two other offers pending, one from another southern university and one to coach a professional football team in Brooklyn.

The football situation at State College was considered and discussed at length by the members of the executive committee of the State College Alumni Association, which met here last night in executive session, including the status of Coach Anderson, according to reports heard this morning. For while the alumni association has no direct authority over athletics, it is frankly agreed by most observers that both the alumni association and the executive committee have a very powerful influence in athletic affairs, especially in the selection of football coaches.

It is also agreed that some alumni are very bitterly opposed to Anderson and think his contract should not be renewed and who blame him for much of the friction which has existed or which is reported to have existed in the football squad and student body this year. But those alumni and others, who are continuing to support Anderson maintain that this friction and dissatisfaction has been greatly exaggerated and that a majority of the squad men, the students, faculty and alumni believe Anderson has done a good job as coach, even if the team has not won many games this year. A lot of the talk and complaints about Anderson are coming from other than State College Alumni, it is also maintained.

STATE ELEVEN TO MEET DUKE

Blue Devils To Encounter One Of Strongest Lines

College Station, Raleigh, Nov. 17.—Hunk Anderson, head coach, gave the N. C. State Wolfpack a rest yesterday, but this afternoon the squad will start an eight-day training grind for its Thanksgiving Day game with Duke University in Duke Stadium.

Duke, undefeated in the Southern Conference and Big Five, needs just the win over State to add the Big Five title to its trophy room. It won the Conference flag Saturday with a 27-7 win over Carolina.

Although State has in past years managed to upset favored Duke teams it appears hardly likely that the 1936 Wolfpack has enough on the ball to upset this fall's Duke eleven, considered the most powerful team in Duke's football history.

Duke had little trouble beating Carolina, and Carolina scored a 21-6 win over State. Duke also took Wake Forest and Davidson by comfortable scores. State lost to both schools.

There are two things in favor of the Wolfpack. First of all, every year it plays its best game against Duke. Secondly, in its last two games—Boston College and Catholic University—it has shown a powerful defensive line.

Led by Captain Mac Carr, left end, the Wolves limited Catholic U. 1935 Orange Bowl champions, to three first downs Saturday. Only once did the Catholic team get past the field and then on a long pass. The play put the Cardinals on State's one-foot line, but it took three plays to make the 12 inches and a touchdown.

Duke will find State's line one of the most powerful it has faced. Only two teams—Davidson and Wake Forest—made any consistent gains through it. In addition to Carr, the line lists such stars as Alex Regdon, guard; Mason Buggs, tackle; and Louie Mark, center.

Pirates Derive Name From Old Sea Raider

The Pirates of East Carolina Teachers College get their name from Edward Teach, the Pirate of Bath, who married thirteen wives and terrorized Carolina waters way back in the eighteenth century. Teach was perhaps better known as "Blackbeard."

The Eastern "Teachers" expect to terrify the Lenoir College boys in the Homecoming game on College Field Saturday; but it is to be hoped that their piracy will be of a more honest kind than that employed by Teach.

Coach Farley, when asked if the Pirates would follow the example of Teach, replied that he didn't expect his eleven men to marry thirteen wives, but that after graduation the Pirates would probably teach in the high schools of North Carolina.

SECURITY ACT GENERAL TOPIC

Northeastern District Welfare Conference This Week

Williamston, Nov. 17.—Miss Lavinia Engle, Educational Division, Social Security Board, Washington, D. C., will be the luncheon speaker at the Northeastern District Welfare Conference to be held in Williamston, November 20. She will discuss the Social Security Act. Hon. Thad Eure will preside over the luncheon which will be at 12:35 at the High School gymnasium.

The conference theme, "Next Steps Toward Social Security in North Carolina," is of particular interest at this time. Mrs. W. T. Boat, State Commissioner of Public Welfare will discuss the "State's Responsibility in Social Legislation." Dr. Howard W. O'Connell, president of the North Carolina Conference for Social Service, "Next Steps Toward Social Security in North Carolina," and Miss Mary Irene Atkinson from the Children's Bureau, "Services to Children Through the Social Security Act." "The Responsibility of the Local Community" will be discussed by Mrs. J. M. Hobgood, Chairman Pitt County Board of Welfare, with board members and commissioners participating.

An open forum on problems of the county welfare department will be held immediately after the luncheon program with members of the staff of the State Department present to answer questions.

Mrs. Blanche Carr Sterne, President of the State Association of County Superintendents of Public Welfare, will bring the annual message. Rev. E. C. Shoe, member Martin County Board of Welfare, will pronounce the invocation and J. C. Manning, Superintendent of Martin County Schools, will extend greetings.

Miss Mary W. Taylor, superintendent of welfare Martin County, is president of the district and will preside over the meeting. The registration will begin promptly at 9:30 in the Baptist church. Mrs. I. F. Snipes, superintendent of welfare Hertford County, is secretary of the district and is extending a cordial invitation to the public to attend the conference.

N. Y. Stock Market

New York, Nov. 17.—(AP)—With the favorable dividend food showing no signs of slowing down and another business news providing buying ammunition, stocks continued their recovery push in today's market.

A rally in the rails lifted sentiment in the board rooms and prices were given a lift of fraction to two or more points generally. A few recorded much higher advances.

The ticker tape for almost the first hour was continually behind floor ceilings. A little selling was in evidence later and the pace eased around noon.

Getting Fired's A Break Says Doris, Riding High

Hollywood once had Doris Nolan under contract but gave her the gate. She made them do the seeking when she clicked in a Broadway play.

Hollywood — Doris Nolan — discovered in Hollywood by Broadway for Hollywood — joins the list of brighter cinema prospects with "The Man I Marry."

But she almost got away. Even now, she is on duty in Hollywood only six months a year, unless—but that's a long story about her contract.

Twenty, hazel-eyed, blonde, Doris was acting in high school in New York and immediately afterward she went into the profession seriously. While in a little theater at Poughkeepsie, Doris saw the Hollywood bait dangled before her and she bit it. Her seven-year contract, as usual, lasted six months. The axe fell—clunk!—on her and 23 other stock players, all in one day. She could scarcely decide, then, about movie-acting, because she hadn't done any.

"It's been my observation that a film person has to have at least a dozen hobbies, be a fine cook and a fine seam, speak 10 languages, ing opera, and generally be a marvelous creature," she says. "Well, I like horseback riding—maybe I can start with that."

She was set to go home to New York where efforts if they had a job, acted. But there was a chance to do something in a little theater hereabouts—the town has more of these than it has swimming pools—and she took it.

In the audience one night sat Al H. Woods, the Broadway producer, ruminating no doubt on the dastardly way Hollywood kept raiding his home town for talent. He suddenly spotted Doris, and—

"Ah, ha!" he said, or something like that.

While Hollywood looked on smugly, if at all, Woods spirited his find to New York, placed her in "The Night of January 16," watched the play blossom into a hit, and incidentally — from a Hollywood no longer smug—received offers. He took Universal's, which puts Doris with that newly hoarded, revised organization.

For six months Doris is to act in pictures, for six months she is to act for Woods on the stage, in one play a year. But if the play doesn't last that long, Doris has to come back to the cameras. This year's didn't—and Doris is back in a top spot in the futuristic musical, "Top of the Town." She neither sings nor dances, but she doesn't have to, being devoted to the drama as far as

On the heels of long-enduring rumors regarding their betrothal, Mary Pickford at last has confirmed that she and Buddy Rogers, the band leader and actor, will be married "some time in the spring." They are shown together at a recent social function in Hollywood. (Associated Press Photo)
