SAYS CONGRESS WILL NOT ASK TAX INCREASE

Senator Harrison Predicts Balanced Budget, However

REVENUE LARGER THAN EXPECTED

Gradual Curtailment of Emergency Administrations Also Seen by Chairman

Washington, Nov. 20. (AP)—Chairman Harrison (D. Miss.) of the senate finance committee said today there would "absolutely be no increase" in taxes by the next congress and that the budget would be brought into balance during the fiscal year beginning July 1.

Declaring that tax revenues were "picking up faster than we had expected," the Mississippian said the federal emergency expenditures would be curtailed enough to permit a balanced budget within the next fiscal year.

Harrison predicted that congress would make no change in the "basic principals" on the tax on undistributed corporation surpluses, but that "perfections and inequities will be corrected as soon as experience discloses them."

Harrison declared in his talk with reporters that "any extension of the government activities will be scrutinized most carefully and granted grudgingly" by the next congress.

Gradual curtailment of the works progress administration, the resettlement administration and other emergency administrations will be effected, he said, "as the emergency disappears."

Predicting minor revisions in the social security system, Harrison said he saw "no reason to change the tax rates and general philosophy" of the act.

Hope To Complete Armory Structure By February 1st

Expect to Start Work on Roof of Building Within Two Weeks; Plan to Hold Formal Opening

O. G. Guley, superintendent in charge of construction of the City-County Armory, said today he expected to be able to complete the building by at least the first of February and turn it over to its owners.

The superintendent said work would get under way on the roof within two weeks and that after that inside work could be carried on even in bad weather.

Mayor M. K. Blount, who has exhibited a keen interest in the project since it was first started, said some event probably would be held as a formal opening. The Roosevelt Birthday ball has been suggested as an appropriate affair to open the armory.

The structure, which it is said will be the most substantial building in Greenville, is being constructed as a WPA project. The city and county jointly will pay $8,500, the total cost of more than $25,000, with the federal agency providing the remainder.

The auditorium and balcony will be large enough to comfortably seat 600. The main auditorium floor is 45 feet, six inches by 100 feet and the mezzanine, 15 feet, six inches by 54 feet, six inches.

On the north side of the building will be located truck and general storage room for the National Guard, while on the south side a rifle range is being provided for.

The building will be modern throughout. It is expected to be in great demand as a gathering place, both for social and business affairs when it is completed. Its chief use, however, will be to house the local unit of the National Guard, but the large auditorium will be available for all occasions, subject to the permission of city and county officials.

Reports Of Pastors Heard at Conference

New Bern, Nov. 20. (AP)—Reports of pastors and presiding elders and the annual meeting of the board of lay activities, gave the annual North Carolina Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, a busy morning session today.

One of the conference's first acts was to memorialize the College of Bishops to seek a general decision by all conferences during 1937 on the proposed plan of unification for the three major branches of Methodism.

Tonight a Duke University banquet will be held and the board of missions will hold its anniversary meeting.

BLUM'S SUICIDE KILLS SELF

Grave political problems for the French government were created by the death of Roger Salengro, minister of the interior in the cabinet of Premier Leon Blum, whose body was found in a gas-filled room at Lille. He left a note saying he killed himself because of attacks rightists made upon him. Salengro (left) and Blum are shown together at a recent conference. (Associated Press Photo)

Joseph E. Davies Chosen America's Moscow Envoy

Succeeds William C. Bullitt as Russian Ambassador

Washington, Nov. 20. (AP)—The appointment of Joseph E. Davies, prominent Washington international lawyer, as American ambassador to Moscow was announced today by the White House. Davies will succeed William C. Bullitt, who recently was appointed envoy to France.

The name of Davies, who took an active part in the recent presidential election campaign as a member of the advisory committee of the Democratic national committee, was submitted to the Russian government for approval before President Roosevelt left on his voyage.

On the assumption that approval would be forthcoming, the President issued the new ambassador's commission before he left the White House. Davies' formal agreement to the new envoy, always necessary before such appointments are final, was received in Washington this morning.

'STORK DERBY' IS HELD VALID

Justice Upholds Clause in Will Making Bequest

Toronto (Canadian Press) Nov. 20.—(AP)—Justice W. E. Middleton today upheld the validity of the "stork derby" clause of Charles Vance Millar's will.

The clause, providing a bequest of approximately $500,000 to the mother in Toronto who bore the most children in a 10-year period which ended last October 31, had been attacked by relatives of the wealthy Canadian.

Some 17 mothers competed in the derby which wound up in a welter of conflicting claims and accusations.

The judgment was preliminary in nature. It ruled against the claims of relatives of the Toronto lawyer who contended the 10-year baby race was against public policy.

Later Justice Middleton will hear evidence on the claims of the leading mothers and direct the executors of the will as to the distribution of the $500,000.

Meeting Called Discuss Trans-Atlantic Service

Washington, Nov. 20. (AP)—American dirigibles will soon be carrying passengers and freight across the Atlantic with the aid of government subsidies, if plans now coming to a head here are finally approved.

Representatives of the commerce department, the navy and private business will meet next Tuesday to formulate recommendations for such a subsidized service.

The meeting will make a report to the new maritime commission, which in turn will submit its findings to congress.

District Teachers' Meet Gets Under Way In City

Four Dinner Meetings Tonight to Precede Pageant in Robert H. Wright Auditorium Depicting Educational Episodes

The first general session of the Northeastern district meeting of the North Carolina Education Association convened this afternoon at 3:30 in the Austin auditorium at the college. Mayor M. K. Blount welcomed the teachers to the city.

The program consisted of a panel discussion led by Dr. Edgar W. Knight of the University of North Carolina on the subject, "Have We Made Progress in Public Education in North Carolina?"

Participating in the discussion were Dr. Carl L. Adams and Dr. Herbert Recker of East Carolina Teachers' College; Judge Dink James, of the Pitt County Court; W. A. Graham, Superintendent of the Kinston City schools; M. P. Jennings, superintendent of schools in Pasquotank county; Roy T. Cox, chairman of the Pitt County Board of Commissioners; and Senator Arthur B. Corey of Greenville.

At six o'clock this evening there will be four dinner meetings. The class room teachers association will meet in one dining room of the college. The School Master's Club in the other. There will be interesting programs in connection with both of these. The teachers of home economics and of agriculture will have a dinner jointly at the Parish House. The American Childhood Association will hold their dinner at the home of Mrs. Edward Ferguson.

The pageant which will be presented at 8 o'clock is the most interesting feature of the program perhaps to the Greenville public. Tomorrow morning at nine o'clock nineteen sectional meetings will be held in various class rooms and auditoriums on the college campus. At each of these, there will be prominent speakers and an interesting program.

Two episodes of the historical educational pageant, "Progress in Public Education in North Carolina in the Last Hundred Years," to be staged in the Robert H. Wright auditorium tonight feature the Greenville schools and the college. The pageant is a high spot in the meeting.

LABORERS GET INCREASED PAY PLAN DEDICATE LOCAL CHURCH

Textile and General Electric Workers Beneficiaries Exercises To Be Held at Local Presbyterian Church

Gastonia, Nov. 20. (AP)—Apparently 50,000 textile workers will get 8 to 10 per cent wage increases at once, running into a total of millions of dollars throughout the combed yarn industry, it was announced here today following a meeting of the board of directors of the southern combed yarn spinners association.

Spokesmen for the manufacturers made it plain the board of directors took no official action, but nevertheless from the meeting came the decision to raise wages eight to 10 per cent at once.

Conservative estimates placed the total annual payroll increases at $2,000,000. Some sources estimated it would run as high as $3,000,000. Exact dates of the raise will be left to individual mill owners, but there was a general understanding among them following the meeting that raises will go into effect no later than January 1.

New York, Nov. 20. (AP)—A $14,400,000 extra dividend by the general electric company and added compensation for workers under its profit sharing plan topped another shower of dollars from industry today.

Some 41,000 general electric workers were counted into the hundred of thousands sharing the year-end dollar windfall through wage increases and special payments. The company, in line with a recent policy for adjusting compensation to living cost changes, added two per cent to the year end profit-sharing disbursements, estimated at six per cent of employees' earnings.

The 1936 payment was expected to be substantially larger than the $1,500,000 divided among employees last year.

It sent the week dividend total soaring toward the $300,000,000 mark for some 140 companies. Year-end disbursement announced in the last month by nearly 200 companies approximated $75,000,000.

More than 25 companies added nearly $50,000,000 to the total today.

Miss Persons Assumes County Welfare Post

President May Be Goat At Crossing Of Equator

Party Noses Into Blue Waters of Caribbean Sea on Indianapolis

Aboard the U. S. S. Chester at Sea, Nov. 20. (AP)—The cruiser Indianapolis bearing President Roosevelt to Buenos Aires for the inter American peace conference nosed into the blue Caribbean sea today and members of the Presidential party had their first sight of land in two days.

"King Neptune's loyal subjects" aboard the Indianapolis and its escort, the Chester, took the entry into tropical water as the occasion for making initial plans incident to the crossing next week of the equator.

There was much conjecture as to whether the President, who never has crossed the equator, would be subject to the same practical jokes as other members of his party.

The party will reach Trinidad early tomorrow. The next stop after Trinidad will be at Rio de Janeiro probably November 27.

HAWAII FEARS STRIKE RESULT

Asks Federal Government To Prevent Food Shortage

San Francisco, Nov. 20. (AP)—Hawaii, which imports about 80 per cent of its foods, urged the federal government to prevent a possible "panic among our people" by a rushed shipment of supplies, as the 3-week-old maritime strike held 213 ships in Pacific ports today.

No American ships have carried food to the islands since the strike was declared; foreign ships have deposited only small cargoes, and the situation in partially isolated Honolulu has been aggravated by the presence of 700 stranded passengers and 1,000 striking seamen.

Meanwhile the picture of other widespread labor troubles was brightened by developments in a milk workers dispute. It had caused (Continued on page four)

Swirling Waters Destroy Entire Japanese Village

Osarusawa, Akita, Prefecture, Japan, Nov. 20. (AP)—A rushing avalanche of water from a burst mine reservoir swept away this little Japan town today drowning more than 1,000 residents and destroying 500 homes.

The torrent raced down upon the village from one of the largest copper mines in the empire. Sleeping inhabitants were trapped in their beds. Their homes were caught by the released flood and dashed against the rocky banks of a mountain stream.

The majority of the residents met immediate death by drowning. Others were suffocated in mud carried by the water.

Numbers of bodies were washed onto the banks of the mountain stream, transformed into a muddy torrent.

Rehabilitation work began immediately after the news of the disaster was flashed to nearby Akita city.

FASCISTS MAY DESTROY PORT IF NECESSARY

Intent on Cutting Off War Supplies For Loyalists

SECRETARY EDEN REVEALS THREAT

(By Associated Press) Spanish fascists intent on cutting off war supplies to the Madrid government will destroy the port of Barcelona if necessary, British Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden informed the House of Commons today.

Eden disclosed his government had received a communication November 17 from the Burgos Junta threatening such action to halt what it called "the scandalous traffic in arms, munitions, tanks, airplanes, and even toxic gases."

The administration of General Francisco Franco charged the "real nationality" of ships bringing the supplies to Barcelona was "Russian or Spanish."

Some quarters in London interpreted the British action as lending "tacit recognition" to the provisional administration at Burgos merely by acknowledging its presence.

Some sources insisted the British government never would acquiesce to any attempt to divert or endanger its maritime fleet by threats of a bombardment.

France, although well informed sources said the government is determined to adhere to strict neutrality, answered the reported threat with warships. Authoritative sources said four vessels were ordered to stand off Barcelona.

In Madrid fascists troops repelled insurgent infantry and heavily attacked at the start of the third week of the siege of the capital, the war ministry asserted.

Authoritative estimates of the death toll were not available as fascist air raiders dumped new loads of bombs into the heart of the battered city. The figure, however, was said to be "hundreds."

Teachers College Plans To Observe Homecoming Day

Dr. Meadows to Welcome Old Graduates Back to East Carolina Teachers College Tomorrow

Everything is set for the first Homecoming celebration at the College tomorrow. Many alumnae have already made reservations and, with hundreds of teachers already in Greenville for the northeast district meeting of the North Carolina Education Association, indications are that one of the largest crowds ever to assemble on the College campus will take part in the Homecoming program.

The barbecue luncheon for students, alumnae and people connected with the college will be served at the picnic tables on the back campus at 12:45. In case of bad weather, the luncheon will be held in the basement of the Robert H. Wright building.

The Homecoming assembly will take place at 1:45 in the Austin auditorium. Dr. L. R. Meadows will welcome the "old grads" back to the college. Mrs. Charles M. Johnson, of Raleigh, will introduce Mrs. J. E. Spillman, the guest speaker of the day.

The Homecoming football game with the Trojans of Louisville college will start at three o'clock. The Greenville high school band will play for the contest, and during the intermission between halves, sponsors from the two colleges will be presented.

Freddie Johnson and his University of North Carolina orchestra, which played at Myrtle Beach last summer, will furnish music for the alumnae dances from 8:30 to 11:45. Miss Elizabeth Smith, alumnae secretary, predicts that the Wright auditorium will be filled to capacity for the dance.

Wings For Sally

by BAILEY WOLFE

SYNOPSIS: Sally Warren, attractive young society editor of the Warrenton Courier, becomes secretly engaged to Terry Maynard, boyish blond aviator who has just been promised a job in South America. Ever thoughtful of others, Sally feels she can't marry him at once because her salary is needed at home, especially to help Ray and pretty, headstrong Tip, the 15-year-old Warren twins. Handsome, dark Philip Page returns to his boyhood home and buys the Courier just as trouble starts in the Morris mill. He backs the workmen. Wealthy Mary Morris gives a dance for Philip.

Chapter 11

Tip Learns to Fly

AS the music paused for intermission, Philip Page turned to Sally. "Shall we go out for a while and cool off? There's my car and we can drive a bit if you like."

"I don't think we'd better," said Sally, as they sauntered out on the terrace. "She knew Mary Morris would be furious and that she was probably expecting Philip Page to come and find her at the moment. And then Terry wouldn't like it."

"I don't allow Tip to do it."

"You take your responsibilities rather heavily, don't you?" said Philip Page.

"Perhaps I do."

"As I remember you at the age of 10, you were even then facing things. For instance, you jumped out of that hay mow I dared you to jump from, when I wouldn't have done it myself."

"I'm not very proud of that," smiled Sally. "I carried my arm in a sling for weeks."

"I hope you still take darts, Miss Warren," Philip Page looked at her searchingly. "I'm going into a fight where I'll need people who dare to stick by me."

"I'm not afraid of Mr. Morris," said Sally. "If that's what you mean."

"It's not so simple as that," said Philip. "This fight with Mr. Morris over his broken agreement with his workmen has opened up a good many things. We're going to have to fight graft in this city government, maybe the state government as well."

"Father says you mustn't move too fast," said Sally. "He says you're a newcomer, and you'll make mistakes if you don't go slowly."

"I'm depending on men like your father to help me not to make mistakes."

Sally Confides in Philip

THERE was a sudden burst of music from inside the house. Philip Page straightened up, as if to throw off thoughts that oppressed him.

"The been boring you," he said. "After all, this is a party for you, even if it is part of my fight to me."

"Don't be too hard on Mr. Morris till you know more about him," Sally urged, feeling somewhat that she was betraying her host. "He's really kind-hearted. If only he could understand—"

"He understands well enough," said Philip Page grimly. "But look here, this sort of talk's out of place at a dance. I'm tiring you—and here's your husky aviator coming to take you away. Suppose he has the right?"

He added the last mockingly, but Sally felt he was asking a question and she was too honest not to answer. "Yes," she said quietly. "We're engaged, but we aren't telling about it yet. He goes to South America in four months."

"Then I must be looking for another society editor," said Philip Page, frowning.

"No—no, you mustn't! Sally was in a panic. "I can't go with him. I need the job. It's—it's my family," she went on hurriedly. "They need me, and that's why I can't marry for a long time, not for years, maybe."

"I see."

"I didn't mean to tell you. No one else knows. I—I have no idea why I did," said Sally hurriedly.

"I promise to forget that you ever told me you were engaged," said Philip. "I'd much rather forget."

"Hullo," said Terry, coming up. "Where did you get to?"

The two men exchanged greetings and Philip left. Terry and Sally sauntered into the garden.

"I've been wanting to talk to you about Tip," said Terry, "but I couldn't somehow get up the nerve to confess to you—something I've got to."

"What on earth do you mean, Terry?" Sally was frankly astonished.

"It's only that, well, I may as well get it over with—I've been teaching Tip to fly."

"Terry?"

"She's crazy about flying. She took to it like a duck to water. You and your mother haven't got any business standing in her way, either." Terry sounded almost resentful.

"But she's so young, she—"

"She's nearly 19, and she knows what she wants to do. That's more than most girls do," said Terry stubbornly. "Think it over, Sally, and help us figure out a way to break it to the old folks."

Sally was too shocked to argue with Terry, or to reproach him. One thing she saw clearly enough. She herself had been responsible for encouraging Tip to fly. The blame for the whole thing must fall on her.

That Boy Has Spunk!

AT breakfast the next morning after the party, Sally looked at Tip with new interest. Tip was munching toast and jam and trying to read a magazine at the same time. She had not bothered to dress, but had on her favorite pink robe in which she often spent the morning. Sally, looking at her, could not possibly imagine that she would ever be able to learn to fly a plane. Yet Terry had said positively the night before that Tip had the making of a good pilot, and that Tip herself was determined to fly. Terry had begged Sally to explain matters to the family, and get permission for Tip to go on with her flying.

Tip herself had said nothing at all about the fact that Terry was teaching her. Sally knew that if she could only get Tip to talk to her about it they might work out some way of satisfying the family.

"Tip, have you really tried to get a job?" Sally questioned.

"Uh-huh," Tip did not look up.

"There aren't any jobs around here," "I've got one," reminded Sally.

"And so has Ray."

"That's only because Philip Page likes you. That's why he gave Ray a job," said Tip wisely.

"It isn't at all," said Sally, blushing in spite of herself. "I'm there some, thing you want to do—really, want to do?"

"Yes, there is," said Tip, suddenly putting down the magazine. "But never will be allowed to do it—no, unless I run away!"

"Tell me about it," begged Sally.

"No," Tip's mouth was stubborn. "You're just like Mother. You'll only scold. The only person that understands is Terry."

Sally was determined to push the matter further, but before she could say anything her father came in, waving the Courier excitedly.

"What do you think?" The employees in old Joe Morris' mill have gone out on strike," he declared.

"What of it?" demanded Tip.

"There's always trouble over there in Milltown."

"People don't know when they're well off," said Mrs. Warren, coming in from the kitchen. "As scarce as jobs are, they ought to be thankful they've got work, instead of quitting."

"There's going to be more excitement than usual over this trouble," said Mr. Warren. "Philip Page is backing the mill employees. He's going to use this strike to back a whole program for better living conditions in Warrenton."

"Give me the society page," demanded Tip. "I want to see what it says about the party last night."

"That boy Philip Page has got spunk," said Mr. Warren, "but he's up against it. He's fighting money, now, and old Joe Morris can ruin the Courier if he makes up his mind to."

"I've got to get to the office," said Sally. "Philip will be wanting me to take some letters this morning, you know."

"Since when did you start calling your boss Philip?" demanded Tip.

"He asked me to," said Sally. "After all, it's not so shocking. We've known each other since we were 10."

Sally found the office lively with news. Lola had just come in with pictures of the delegation of workmen that had gone to see Joe Morris and ask him to fix up their houses. The leader was a tall man with a look of strength about his face.

"That's McDonald," said Lola. "He's been talking to the boss. Boss likes him fine. McDonald's a weaver. His wife sews to help make a living. Makes some of the fancy party dresses the well-dressed woman of Warrenton is wearing this season."

She turned to Sally. "Want to go down to McDonald's house with me later?"

Sally nodded. "I'd like to."

Just then the office boy broke into the group and called to Sally, "Boss wants you."

Sally got her pencil and tablet hastily. If Philip Page used her as secretary much more, he would have to get a new society editor, Sally decided. Of the two jobs she liked much better the idea of being Philip Page's secretary.

Sally found a strange man sitting by Philip Page's desk. He was introduced to her as the buildings inspector of Warrenton, Mr. Horton. Sally found that she had been called in to take a statement from Horton to the effect that many of the buildings, including workers' houses, which Mr. Morris owned, had been condemned as unsafe or unfit to live in. Mr. Horton made a direct, clear statement, and Sally took it down faithfully.

"This is going to cost me my job," said Mr. Horton, as he rose to go. "I wouldn't have given it, only I'm sick and tired of being told what to condemn and what not to condemn. I'm saying what I think and getting out. Friend of mine has promised to give me a job selling insurance."

"This is the best day's work you've done in some time," said Philip Page. "Goodbye—and good luck."

which the hotels have. Accordingly, the hotel interests do not want to see their business cut down by centering all of the liquor purchasing in one board here in Raleigh.

2. Although no hotels are allowed to sell liquor, it is agreed that most of the hotels make a big profit from the sale of ginger ale, bubbling water and from room service that accompanies the missing of drinks in hotel rooms, so some hotel men fear that if the sale of liquor should be put under state control, the state might attempt to tighten up on hotels.

There is no law restricting in any way the right of any person to take a drink of liquor in his hotel room in either "wet" or "dry" counties and no such law could be passed. But it is common knowledge that in most hotels it is a very easy matter for a guest to learn the telephone number of a leading bootlegger and have liquor of almost any brand or amount delivered to his room within a very few minutes, regardless of whether the hotel is located in a "wet" or a "dry" county.

If all liquor stores should be put under state control, it is assumed that the state would also tighten up on the enforcement of the laws against bootlegging, which in turn might make it more difficult for guests in hotels who run out of liquor to replenish their supply. So it is now generally agreed that the hotel forces and their lobbyists will work with and for those favoring county control.

It is also agreed that the liquor manufacturers would rather see the county liquor control system continued than have state control, because:

1. They believe they can sell more liquor to county boards than to a single state board and have a better chance to persuade county boards to push their liquor ahead of other brands.

2. They believe that the counties are likely to establish more stores than the state would, and hence provide a larger outlet for retail

STRIKING BENDIX WORKERS DEFY LOCKOUT

Defiant of the Bendix Products corporation's orders to close its huge factory at South Bend, Ind., workers estimated to number somewhere between 600 and 1,500 remained inside the plant and calmly continuing their "sit-down" strike. A group of the strikers is shown receiving food through a window from their wives and sympathizers. The factory manufactures vital parts for most of the automobiles and airplanes made in the United States. (Associated Press Photo)

Advocates of the county liquor stores plan and who want it continued and expanded by the forthcoming general assembly, maintain that most of the counties in the eastern part of the state adjoining those which now have legal liquor stores, also want liquor, but want it under the county control system instead of under a state system. They believe that most of these counties will line up with the present "wet" counties in opposition to any state-wide liquor control program and in favor of county control.

The counties which prefer county control to state control of liquor stores are also expected to receive very strong and valuable support from two other sources—the hotel men of North Carolina and the liquor manufacturers, according to reports already going the rounds here. The hotel men are believed to be in favor of county control for two reasons, as follows:

1. More salesmen are required to sell liquor to 50 or 60 county liquor boards, than are required to sell to a single purchasing board or commission here in Raleigh, and these liquor salesmen are conceded to be among the most lucrative guests

LAUREL-HARDY IN 'WIFE TROUBLE'

Bitter Fight Predicted Over Control Of Liquor

Raleigh, Nov. 20.—A bitter and probably a much longer fight over the liquor question is expected to develop in the forthcoming general assembly since it has been learned that the State Liquor Control Commission will, in all probability, recommend the enactment of a state-wide liquor control and liquor stores

It is now regarded as certain that the liquor fact-finding commission which has been conducting its inquiry and investigation into various liquor control plans and systems, and which is now writing its report to submit to Governor J. C. B. Eli-

Its history, and the last giving a bit of the present with a prophetic touch of the future.

The first part is a realistic presentation of the breaking of grounds for the first building. The time is July 2, 1908; the place, an abandoned cotton field in the eastern part of the town of Greenville in Pitt county. The characters are: the spade which was used in laying the cornerstone of the college; William H. Ragsdale, superintendent of schools in Pitt county, represented by his son, Hugh Ragsdale; Senator James L. Fleming of Greenville, represented by Dr. A. D. Frank of the History Department of this college; Governor Thomas J. Jarvis of Greenville represented by Frank M. Wooten, the law partner of Governor Jarvis; a boy of Greenville, represented by Stanley Scarborough, a college student; and other citizens of Greenville and Pitt county, who were present in 1908, Sam White and Jesse Speight.

The sons of others who witnessed the scene take the places of their fathers and these are: James Burton James, son of Col. F. G. James; Richard King, son of R. W. King; Dave Whitchard, Jr.

The second part of the pageant is a tableau of the progress of the college. The time is from October, 1909, to the present and into the dreamed-of-future; the place, everywhere within the buildings of East Carolina Teachers college and far beyond its borders. The characters are: The Voice of Prophecy Truth, represented by Lucille Lewis, a college student; the Spirit of Service, represented by Miss Frances Wahl, principal of the Training School; Children Whom the Spirit Regards, represented by little Miss Eleanor James, granddaughter of Col. F. G. James, and Master Billy Mac Batchelor.

A Friend of Education, Dr. J. Y. Joyner, Superintendent of Public Instruction in North Carolina from 1902 to 1913, represented by Dr. Joyner himself who is now a resident of La Grange; five teachers who were elected to the college faculty the first year, Miss Sallie Joyner Davis, professor of history, Miss Mamie E. Jenkins, professor of English, Miss Maria D. Graham, professor of mathematics, Miss Kate Lewis, teacher of art, and Dr. Leon R. Meadows, professor of English, and second president of the college. There will also appear in the tableu Symbols of the Teachings of the Past, represented by young men of the college, and many students through the years since the opening of the college, represented by the officers of the various classes and organizations on the campus, and practice teachers and children of the Training School of the college. The tableau closes with the singing of the college song by the student body of 1936-1937.

The third part is a realistic conclusion to the opening scene and closes with the realization of the joy of all that the first significant spading of the grounds would mean in the future.

The costumes used in this episode are those made for the pageant that was to have been presented at the end of President Wright's twenty-fifth year as president of the College, but was not staged as Dr. Wright died just before the end of the year. This is the first time these costumes have been used.

The final rehearsal for the pageant was planned for this afternoon, when the eight episodes and the prologue were to be played as a whole for the first time.

The titles of the episodes and the schools which will present them are as follows: Prologue, Rocky Mount; I, Apprenticeship of Orphans, Hertford; Mr. Johnson II, "First School in North Carolina—1705", Elizabeth City; III, "First Free School—1744", Beaufort; IV, "Calvin H. Wiley School—1850", Rocky Mount; V, "Inauguration of Book Rentals", Washington; VI, "East Carolina Teachers College", E. C. T. C. Greenville; VII, "The Aycock Period", Aulander; VIII, "The Modern School", Greenville. Mr. Harrington and Miss Russell have directed the other sectional pageants also, and will compile the best episodes into a pageant dramatizing the history of education in the entire state to be presented at the spring meeting of N. COURT DOCKET SHOULD BE CLEARED

With more than 60 persons already in the county jail awaiting trial in the week of criminal court that opens here Monday, November 20, it is hardly possible that even all the jail cases can be heard during the week with little or no attention to the cases on docket with the defendants free on bonds. This business of arresting people for crimes they commit, permit them to give bond and then let the case stay on the court docket until everybody forgets about it, is getting us nowhere in the way of crime-punishment or crime prevention. Almost every session of criminal court finds so many jail cases to be heard that other cases just have to be continued and continued, and some of them never get to trial. This county, along with some other counties in the state, should have a special term of criminal court to convene and stay in session until every case on the criminal docket has been disposed of in some way. If the defendants have left the vicinity or cannot be located then the bondsmen should be made to forfeit the bonds. So long as persons can commit a crime, get arrested and get someone to sign a bond with them and then hear no more about it, there will be little respect for our laws or our courts. We would like to see the criminal dockets in this and other counties cleared and then kept cleared by speedy trial and sure punishment for criminals. This is the only way we can hope to gain respect for our laws.

PITT FARMERS GET TRAINING

Thrifty Pig School Conducted for Swine Raisers in County

The Pitt county Thrifty Pig School was held in the Austin building at East Carolina Teachers College Wednesday. About 40 interested farmers attended. The school was arranged by county agents, R. R. Bennett and C. D. Griggs in cooperation with the office of State Extension at State College. The program consisted of talks by Mr. Bennett and H. W. Taylor of State College, followed by two moving pictures that showed how to grow thrifty pigs free of internal parasites.

It was brought to the attention of the Pitt County farmers that worms cause more losses in hogs than all diseases combined. Worms are grown on the same land for a long period of time. The soil becomes infested with worm eggs and pigs feeding on such infested land swallow the eggs along with the feed. Experience has shown that worm medicines are practically useless in so far as control is concerned because the damage has already been done when the symptoms become noticeable. Wormy pigs are hard to fatten and expensive to raise. A wormy pig has very little resistance and is more susceptible to disease than a thrifty pig. It is more practical to prevent worms than it is to try to eliminate them after infestation has occurred. The plan of prevention is simple and the main points in the Thrifty Pig program are:

1. Plow up that old hog lot and put it in cultivation.
2. Make a new hog pasture on well drained cultivated land away from streams and marshy places.
3. Use only temporary pastures for sows and pigs. Use rye and crimson clover in winter and soybeans in summer.
4. A warm portable farrowing house is a good investment and will soon pay for itself in pigs saved.
5. Farrow pigs on clean land that has been cultivated in a crop since hogs have been allowed to range on it. Keep the pigs away from a hog lot. They get wormy there. Keep them on clean land until they weight one hundred pounds and until they are ready for the butcher.
6. Clip the tusks with a pair of side cutting pliers. Do not break them but make a clean cut halfway between the tip of the tusk and the gum. Pigs with sharp tusks cut each other around the face and injured the sow may cause a pig to kill one or more pigs or she may even refuse to allow them to nurse.
7. In cold weather put the new born pigs around a jug of hot water in a clean tub or basket in which an old sack has been spread. Keep them there until they get dry and then put them back with the sow.
8. Feed the sows one-half pound of fish meal per head daily during the period from breeding to farrowing. Give enough corn to keep them gaining gradually in weight during this time and provide green pastures at all times.
9. When the pigs are about two weeks old and the sow is on full feed, use a self feeder until weaning time. When the pigs are weaned continue them on self feed until they are ready for the butcher.
10. Allow pigs range on good pasture and keep fish meal and bone meal in separate compartments of a self feeder. Provide a pig drink supply of water near the feeder. Fish meal and bone meal mixed in equal parts makes a good protein supplement. Another good supplement is lean meat one-third, cottonseed meal one-third and soybean meal one-third. Ask your County Agent for a copy of Form 44.
11. Keep a mineral mixture in a separate compartment of the self feeder at all times. A good mineral can be made by mixing equal parts of ground limestone (14 pounds), common salt (two pounds), ground bone and phosphate of lime (two pounds) and powdered iron. These may be substituted for the above meal, but the latter is to be preferred.
12. The board should have the end of the pasture further than any other sleeping quarters. The board is a mixture of 33 pounds of ground bone and five pounds of fish meal. Feed two pounds of mixed corn for each pound of the mixture. Keep a mineral mixture beside it. This ration is also good for pregnant sows.
13. Use a self feeder instead of feeding by hand, because cheap rations can be made by this method. Do not grind corn. It does not pay. Put the clean farrowing house on the clean field before farrowing time. Wash the sow with warm water and soap to remove any worm eggs and put her on the clean field about four or five days before she is due to farrow. Reduce the sow's feed before farrowing time, giving only a thin slop and a limited amount of corn. For the first twenty-four hours after farrowing give her all the lukewarm water she will drink and no feed. Start feeding a thin slop and gradually increase the thickness and quantity until she is on full feed. Examine the pig for white scours before feeding the

New York—There is a restaurant in 44th street with blood on the menu. It says quite plainly: "Blood and Liverwurst, 60c." Morbidly fascinated, I motioned the waiter. "Canned blood," I inquired, "or fresh from the slaughterhouse?" That made him laugh. "Blood," he said, "is fresh-killed pig sausage. The meat hasn't been smoked. It's very good. An amusing vignette of the new season is a scene in "Stage Door" when one of the stage pretties describes her new show as a cross between a circus and the Passion play. "The trouble is," she says, "you never know whether the nuns or the elephants are supposed to go on."

Jimmy Durante insists on having a written "release" before appearing in benefit shows. He recalls the time he participated gratis in such an entertainment and was dunned $15 for damaging the piano.

Society Songstress.
 And pleasant too, is Eve Symington, whose papa and mama are Congressman and Mrs. James W. Wadsworth of New York. Miss Symington in private life is Mrs. W. Stuart Symington, 3rd, granddaughter of John Hay, who was secretary of state in Teddy Roosevelt's cabinet. She is, also, a niece of Payne Whitney and very social. That's one reason why nightly a good portion of the society crowd is in attendance at the Sert Room, New York's and the Waldorf-Astoria's grandest dinner room. Miss Symington sings there. It is, really, a happy experience to hear that warm, low voice accompanied by a smile which already has most of New York talking. What seems astonishing is that Miss Symington is not a product of the big city. Her social position, withal, she was brought up on a farm near Geneseo, N. Y.

Reminisces the judge: "I come from a town so small that it disappeared when two woodpeckers ate up the depot."

One of the Rialto's better professors of Ballyhoo is Bob Reud, a faster talker than Floyd Gibbons. New York postmen do not blow whistles when they deliver your mail. Miriam Hopkins is a mighty good friend, but she can also be a formidable enemy. Joseph Cummings Chase has likely wheeled a more portraits of, including Tammany sachems, actors and Presidents. A peak in his career was when he painted Rint-Tin-Tin.

A lot of important theatrical figures on Broadway keep fit by working out daily in a mid-town gymnasium. I hear Ronald Colman may come to New York to do that play about Lord Byron. If he does, it will be his first experience on a New York stage. At that, plays about poet have fared ill in New York. The last was the one about Poe. It went out after only 11 performances.

Broadway stars aren't always nice. A red-head I know has a very disagreeable temper. She borrowed some money from her manager, got married, and refused to give her manager a new contract when the old one expired.

A great many things can cause constipation and there are many remedies to relieve it, but possibly none more popular than the "vegetable" laxatives.

Among these, Black-Draught is outstanding. In its manufacture, leaves of a certain plant are used, and the roots of certain others. These are dried so they will keep without preservatives... no other chemical change from the way they grew in "Mother Nature's medicine garden." By their being finely ground, the digestive system extracts the active medicine right where it is needed. Constipation is relieved. Black-Draught is so economical that a 25-cent package averages upwards of 25 doses.—(Adv.)

A STANDARD measure of value in a straight whiskey is proof... the strength of the whiskey. Just as "100% wool," "100% pure silk" is the measure of good fabrics, so 100 proof is "tops" in straight whiskey value. Some folks think that a 100 proof whiskey just can't be as smooth, as mellow, as they like a whiskey to be. We believe... and its phenomenal sale certainly proves... that Old Mr. Boston Straight Whiskey is an exception... a 100 proof straight whiskey that is as smooth as any whiskey you ever tasted. That is why so many people now buy Old Mr. Boston 100 proof Straight Whiskey—not once but again.

SCOTT TO TRY IMPROVE DEPT.

Agriculture Commissioner Elect Sets Forth Aims

Reflector Bureau.
St. Walter Hotel.
Raleigh, Nov. 20.—W. Kerr Scott, recently elected Commissioner of Agriculture who will take office in January, succeeding W. A. Graham, the present head of the State Department of Agriculture, plans to inject new life into the department, bring about closer cooperation between the department and the School of Agriculture and the Farm Extension Division at State College and to make the department of real and vital value to the farmers of the state, he said here today.

Scott also indicated that a good many changes in the personnel of the department would undoubtedly be made, but declined to specify definitely who of the present personnel would be dismissed and who would be retained. He also indicated that whatever changes he makes in the organization of the department and its personnel will be made gradually and that there will be no wholesale firing of present employees until after they have been given an opportunity to show what they can do.

"My foremost desire, of course, is to build up a State Department of Agriculture that will be of genuine benefit to the farmers and farming interests of the state—one which will lead the way towards better farming and better farming practices," Scott said. "I realize, however, that I will have to proceed slowly at first and gradually bring about the changes which I hope to make. I also realize that many of the present employees of the department are efficient and intelligent and that I cannot hope to operate the department without some of these there to help me."

"So while it has been rumored that I planned to make a clean sweep in the department and fire all of the present employees, this is not the case, although there are some who will have to go, of course. But for the time being, I am planning to give most of the present employees a chance to show me what they can do before reaching any decision as to whether I will keep them or let them go."

While Scott did not say definitely, those known to be close to him indicated that they did not expect him to make any drastic changes in the personnel of the Department of Agriculture until after the general assembly adjourns, or at least not until it has been here some time. It is also believed that Scott is going to select his division heads and employes on the basis of efficiency and fitness for the work they are supposed to do and that from now on family and political connections are going to count for very little. It is expected that many new faces will eventually be seen in the Department of Agriculture after Scott takes charge of it, especially as heads of many of the divisions.

"The thing I want to do most of all, of course, is build up the best State Department of Agriculture the state has ever had," Scott said. "And I know that is going to take time and a lot of hard work. I want the department and all the employes in it to feel that they are working for the people of North Carolina and especially for the best interests of the farmers. I want to work in closer cooperation with the Agriculture Extension Service out at State College and all the other agricultural divisions out there, since we are all working towards the same ends—the improvement of farm conditions in North Carolina. But Rome was not built in a day and I am not expecting to bring about any drastic changes overnight."

Scott admitted that he is being deluged with requests for jobs from every section of the state and that many people seem to have the idea that he has hundreds of jobs to pass out. He also said that he is being kept busy conferring with present employes of the department, most of whom are nervous and worried as to whether they will be able to keep their jobs. But so far he has reached few definite decisions, he indicated.

"The only thing I know right now is that I have a big job and a hard job and that I am going to try to perform it to the best of my ability," Scott said.

follicle. Depending upon the site, the intensity and multiplicity of the infection, there may result a boil, stye or carbuncle. A single boil may develop, run its course and be cured without the subsequent appearance of another. Not infrequently, however, one boil is followed by another, and a whole series is suffered. The prevention of the recurrence of boils depends upon the recurrence of treatment of the first boil and on the elimination of a variety of contributing conditions. Local mechanical friction in the region of the boil should be avoided. This includes not applications, mechanical appliances and infected clothing. The skin should be kept clean of dirt and oil by washing it frequently with warm water and soap. Foci of infection such as dental abscesses, diseased tonsils, infected head sinuses, should be eliminated. The urine should be examined for the presence of sugar, and if necessary a blood examination should be made to determine whether the patient is suffering from diabetes or hyperglycemia (the presence of an excessive amount of sugar in the blood). Anemia and malnutrition, by lowering body resistance, frequently contribute to the development of boils. Anxiety and overwork, adversely affecting the physical condition of the individual, may also contribute to lowering of resistance to skin infections. Exposure of the body to sunlight and to ultraviolet radiation apparently raises the resistance of the skin to staphylococcus infection. Ultraviolet radiation and X-ray have proved beneficial methods for treating boils, and contribute to the prevention of the recurrence of this condition.

Washington — Secretary Wallace wasn't knocked back on his haunches when the farm leaders meeting here sort of thumbs-downed his crop insurance plan.

He came right back at them with a speech before land grant college officials in Houston, Tex. "It does seem probable to me," he said, "that crop insurance is likely to fall within the range of permanent constructive measures." Right quickly he added, however, that "it cannot and is not expected to serve as a substitute for other programs."

Farm leaders meeting here wanted AAA and its fairer benefits, to replace the present soil conservation

Karl von Ossietzky (above), the celebrated pacifist who has just been released after three years' confinement in a German concentration camp, is reported to have been voted the Nobel peace prize. It was indicated, however, he would refuse it as a consequence of the Nazi view that acceptance would be an offense to the Third Reich. (Associated Press Photo)

Benefit Plan

Those from the mid-west and south had a special reason for preferring AAA, which was expressed by Secretary Wallace in one of his books. There he said: "Producers of wheat, corn, cotton and tobacco will not receive quite as much money for their work under the new (soil conservation) program as they did under the old. Producers in the east and far west will receive somewhat more."

Wallace says frankly that crop insurance alone might be disastrous if two or three successive fat crop years resulting in piling up a large surplus of crops paid by farmers "in kind" as premiums. He insists crop control measures must go along with insurance.

Just how and in what form the premiums will be collected is not settled upon. Eastern farming involves less risk than much western farming. Because of this, AAA officials doubt whether a blanket rate based on average loss experience over the nation would work. Easterners, with low risk farms, would not come in. Westerners would rush in, and throw the plan out of balance.

Inside you learn Wallace at present leans toward a premium based on loss experience on each farm.

For instance, say a rather hazardous crop area in the Dakotas is to be blanketed under one general rate, subject to modification to fit the loss experience on each farm. Each farm must be classified, not only as to the type of farm land but as to the type of farmer. Then a rate must be fixed for that farm. That involves much machinery, and dickering with farmers about premiums.

By paying farmers for crop losses in lean years with part of the surplus collected as premiums in fat years, Wallace expects, with the aid of crop control agencies, to smooth out the surplus-shortage cycle that at times makes farming a gamble. Incidentally, he estimates premiums will be arranged to prevent inept farmers slipping in on a marginal tract and collecting insurance benefits for crops they fail to grow.

Boils and Their Prevention
The human skin normally has present upon it germs of the staphylococcus variety. These germs belong to the "booi" group—that is, they are spherical in shape and usually are to be seen collected in bunches of irregular shape. They are to be distinguished from the streptococci, which belong to the "chain" group, but usually are found in long chain formations.
The staphylococci are commonly responsible for the infectious conditions of the skin, such as boils, abscesses, carbuncles and pimples. In these conditions the responsible germ is usually of the staphylococcus aureus type. "Aureus" describes the yellow pigmentation of the normal staphylococcus inhabitant of the skin to the aureus variety found in staphylococcal infections of the skin usually develop around a hair

CLYDE R. HOEY ALREADY BUSY

Governor - Elect Getting First Sample of Headaches

By J. C. BASKERVILL
Raleigh, Nov. 20.—Governor-elect Clyde R. Hoey of Shelby is here getting the first samples of the headaches he may expect to have later on after he becomes Governor. He is meeting with the Advisory Budget Commission, which has been in session here for several days, going over the requested appropriations of the various state departments, institutions and agencies, preparatory to formulating its recommendations to the 1937 general assembly, which will convene in January.

The Advisory Budget Commission also prepare a tentative Appropriations Bill and Revenue Bill to be submitted to the general assembly along with its recommendations, which is a big job all by itself and the task which will keep the general assembly in session here for from four to five months the last three sessions.

The immediate task before Governor-elect Hoey and the members of the Advisory Budget Commission is to trim down the requests of the various state departments and institutions, including the public schools, which now total approximately $41,500,000 a year, exclusive of the highway department, to a figure which they believe is in keeping with the amount of revenue that can be found. This $41,500,000 requested from the general fund is just $9,000,000 greater than the present fund budget of $32,500,000 a year and does not take into consideration the amounts needed for old age pensions, old age benefits, unemployment insurance, free textbooks and other activities to which Governor-elect Hoey and the incoming administration, are pledged. Nor does it take into account the $25,000,000 a year which the State Highway and Public Works Commission is requesting from the highway fund.

Accordingly, if the departmental requests should be allowed to stand as made, and the amounts needed for social security and other matters added, the coming general assembly would have to raise a general fund budget of at least $45,300,000 a year, or $13,000,000 in excess of the present expenditures from the general fund this fiscal year. And if the general fund and highway fund requests and needs should be lumped together, they would call for a total outlay from state revenues of $73,500,000, or $11,000,000 more than the present combined appropriations for both the general and highway funds.

It is not believed, of course, that Governor-elect Hoey and the Advisory Budget Commission will recommend that the general assembly appropriate the full amount requested by the various state departments and institutions. These requests are always pared to the bone by the commission, which must also prepare a Revenue Bill to raise the money with which to pay the appropriations. Accordingly, the Advisory Budget Commission, with Mr. Hoey sitting in at the meetings being held behind locked doors, is now engaged in the task of paring the various requests down to a figure on which its members believe the various divisions can operate. The prevailing opinion in state governmental circles here is that the Advisory Budget Commission will bring out a general fund budget not more than $6,000,000 larger than the present budget, and that it will recommend a total general fund budget of about $38,500,000 instead of the $41,500,000 already requested. Some doubt if the commission will recommend an increase of more than $36,000,000 larger than the present budget, and that it will recommend a total general fund budget of about $38,500,000 instead of the $41,500,000 already requested. Some doubt if the commission will recommend an increase of more than $36,000,000 larger than the present budget, and that it will recommend a total general fund budget of about $38,500,000 instead of the $41,500,000 already requested.

So as Mr. Hoey sits with the Advisory Budget Commission and hears the various requests analyzed and picked to pieces, he is getting an excellent introduction into matters which are expected to cause him plenty of headaches for the following four years of his term as Governor, veteran observers here agree. He is also getting some information that will be very valuable to him when the legislature gets under way, since all of these items and requests will be gone over and over again both by legislative committees and in the legislative proper. But the main thing Mr. Hoey is learning is that he has been elected to job with plenty of work and worries.

Equipment Installed For Morton's Bakery

The Morton's bakery has just installed the latest equipment for bread making and will offer to its patrons home-baked bread made in a modern and up-to-date plant. The new equipment is said to be the same as used by the largest bakeries.

The firm began operations here 12 months ago with five employees. The bakery now employs 15 persons.

N. Y. Stock Market

New York, Nov. 20.—(AP)—Stocks flattered rather feebly in today's market and intermittent rallying surges were brief and unconvincing to trading forces. Dampening sentiment were fears of a European explosion over the Spanish war and the belief further regulatory restrictions on stock exchange dealings are to be imposed by governmental authorities. Mixed price changes were the rule near the end and the activity was exceptionally small.

Talks To Parents

Learning To Give.
Early in November the Jones children always made up their Christmas lists, and there were always two for each child. One was what the child wished to receive, the other what he could make his wants known, the smallest Jones began to learn to give, and as much care and attention was given to compiling the one list as the other.

Of course it is hard to save money when one is very small and has consequently a microscopic allowance. But even the baby of three saved a few pennies which father and mother eked out with a few more. And every one who was able to use scissors and needle, or hammer and saw, set himself to making some of the gifts he had planned.

Children lose half the joy of Christmas if they only receive and never give. Giving tactfully, and with imagination is, in itself, an art and cannot be learned too early. And half the fun of Christmas lies in getting ready for it. The day after Christmas is and should be an anticlimax. The important part of the festival lies in its preparation, an ocean be stretched over a period of weeks, with Christmas Day as a grand finale.

It is too bad to deprive children of all the fun of preparation. They, too, want secrets which they are bursting to tell; the excitement of doing up parcels; the thrill of poking their work out of sight when someone comes into the room. Most of all they want the joy of seeing faces light up with surprise and pleasure when they make their presentations on Christmas morning.

Half the Christmas spirit is gone if one has nothing to give. The little child feels this even if he does not express it. Let him learn early that no one is too little or too poor to share with someone else.

PIRATES READY FOR LOUISBURG

To Enter Battle Here Tomorrow With Full Strength

The East Carolina Pirates, who were handicapped by injuries in the game which they dropped 6-0 to the Guilford Quakers last Saturday, will display their full strength in the Home-coming game with the Louisburg Trojans here tomorrow. Shelton, who is recovering from a bad ankle, is taking it easy this week, while Ferebee, who suffered a face injury in the Guilford game, will probably start against the Trojans tomorrow.

The Teachers have been scrimmaging this week against the Greenville high eleven, and have developed a successful passing attack.

The passing of Shelton and Powell has featured in the season's play to date.
