Sees Possibility Crowning Duke King Of Scotland

LONDON TIMES HINTS OF MOVE

Visit of Duke and Duchess of York to Edinburgh Said To Have Encouraged Possibility of Break-Up in British Realm, Paper Insists

London, Dec. 2.—(AP)—Possible break up of the British realm with the Duke and Duchess of York as king and queen of Scotland was hinted today in an editorial in The London Times.

The article, which did not mention King Edward's friendship with Mrs. Wallis Simpson, was interpreted by some readers as the strongest veiled reference to "the affair Simpson" which has yet appeared in England.

At the same time it was learned the friendship of the king and Mrs. Simpson has been placed on the "permanent agenda" of the British cabinet.

Prime minister Stanley Baldwin and his ministers held their regular session today and it was reported the meeting, after skipping hurriedly over the Spanish situation, dealt with great interest in the new discussions from the royal romance.

The editorial was pegged to the visit of the duke and duchess of York to Edinburgh for the Saint Andrews Masonic banquet and concluded:

"This visit of the heir presumptive to the British throne encourages speculation as to whether the time may not some day come when historic honors may be used again in the crowning of a king of Scotland on the stone of destiny."

(The stone of destiny is in the seat of the Scottish coronation chair.)

Joseph D. Everett Dies From Wound Inflicted Himself

Belvoir Man Said by Family to Have Taken Life Because of Disappointment in Love Affair

Joseph Dennis Everett, 38, died at the home of his father near Belvoir school at 9 o'clock last night from a wound in the head inflicted by the discharge of a shot gun said by officials to have been self-administered.

Everett, a widower, was said by members of his family to have gone to his bed room, secured his gun, got down on the bed and shot himself in the head. He died instantly. No inquest was deemed necessary by the coroner.

The family declared that they believed disappointment over a love affair caused him to take his own life.

Services were conducted this afternoon from the graveside in the Worley cemetery near Conetoe. The services were conducted by Rev. J. R. Potts, Greenville Presbyterian minister.

The victim is survived by his father, J. H. Everett of Belvoir; three daughters, Mary Elizabeth, Amy Worsley and Lena Everett; his stepmother; four brothers, Harvey, Robert Curtis and Billie Everett; and the following sisters, Mrs. W. I. Smith of near Conetoe, Mrs. E. A. Williams of Goldsboro, Miss Louise Everett of Greenville and Misses Nellie, Evelyn, Lina and Clara Everett of the home place.

Confesses Killing Brother in 1901

Thirty-five years after Henry J. Koehr was reported accidentally drowned in 1901, his older brother, Charles Koehr (above), now 64, was quoted by Chicago police as confessing he killed the youth. RINGLING DIES OF PNEUMONIA

Circus Magnate Last of Seven Brothers to Succumb

New York, Dec. 2.—(AP)—John Ringling, whose name was synonymous with the "big top" sawdust ring and circus spangles from coast to coast, died today.

The circus magnate succumbed at the age of 70 to a brief illness of bronchial pneumonia, the last of seven brothers whose backyard playtime show in Baraboo, Wis., grew to become perhaps the nation's largest entertainment combine.

At Ringling's bedside at his Park Avenue home when death came were Mrs. Ida Ringling North, his sister, John Ringling North, a nephew, his physician and Frank Flannery, a life-long friend.

Funeral arrangements were being made today.

The son of a German born harness maker whose name originally was August Ringeling, John Ringling was born at McGregor, Iowa, and at the age of five he collected pins for admission to the performance and his brothers gave in their father's backyard.

Lester Jones, But Not Lieut. Jones Bound Over Court

Highway Patrol Officer Finds Truck Driver by Same Name Causes Him Some Embarrassment

Two persons bearing the same name cause a misunderstanding most any time, but when a person bearing the same name as the lieutenant of the Eastern division of the State Highway patrol is arrested on a charge of driving carelessly and recklessly, it puts the patrol head explaining to his friends that he was not the Lester Jones in question.

Lester Jones, bakery truck driver, was named defendant in an action brought last week charging him with careless and reckless driving after he had driven his truck into a youth here causing slight injury.

The news was printed in The Reflector and a day or so later Lieut. Lester Jones of the highway patrol force declared that he had been kept busy explaining that he was not the only Lester Jones in Greenville. He said he was questioned in all parts of the state he visited.

Today Lester Jones, truck driver, was bound over to County court under bond of $200. Mayor M. K. Elount ruling that he did not have jurisdiction in City court to dispose of the case.

The truck driver had at least half of the court—so far as defendants are concerned—to himself today. Only four cases were tried and he was defendant in two of them. In the second case he was fined $10 and costs upon conviction of being drunk and disorderly.

Charlie Maury, negro, was sent to the roads for 30 days on a drunkenness charge and Scott Terry, negro, was taxed with the costs for trespassing in the only other cases tried at the regular Wednesday morning session of City court.

Chief L. G. Phares of the Texas highway patrol says members of the patrol wear "guns" to show they're not bus drivers. The uniforms are similar.

PRESIDENTIAL PARTY LEAVES ON TRIP HOME

Roosevelt Waves Argentine Flag To Cheering Crowd

DELEGATES HAIL PARLEY ADDRESS

Predict Mr. Roosevelt and President Justo Started Assembly On Way to Success

Buenos Aires, Dec. 2.—(AP)—President Roosevelt, hailed by the Latin-Americans to whom he brought a picture of a new world united for peace, left Argentina today for his journey home.

Standing on the deck of the United States Cruiser Indianapolis as it sailed for Montevideo, Uruguay, at 3:30 p. m. (1:30 p. m. EST), he waived a small Argentine flag to the rain-soaked throng which cheered from the docks and nearby streets.

Despite the downpour, his three-day visit ended in a farewell almost as enthusiastic as the reception the United States President received on his arrival Monday for the Inter-American peace conference which he proposed.

With the President's plea to consolidate Western World democracies against aggression for "our mutual safety and mutual good," the conference launched into informal organization.

Delegates from many of the 21 American nations represented at the conference enthusiastically praised the opening address of the United States chief executive last night.

They predicted Mr. Roosevelt, and President Justo of Argentina, had set the assembly firmly on the path to success.

Little Hope Seen For Martin Moore By Parole Office

Slayer of Pretty North Carolina Student Stated to Die at Prison Dec. 14th

Raleigh, Dec. 2.—(AP)—Clyde R. Hoey, of Shelby, will become governor of North Carolina on January 7.

The date for the traditional inauguration was revealed today when the chamber of commerce director was called for a special session to discuss plans with Adjutant General J. Van N. B. Meets.

The legislature will convene on January 6.

Governor Ehringhaus said it suited him for the inaugural ceremonies to be held any time. "The sooner the better it will suit me," he said.

There has been much recent speculation that Governor Ehringhaus will enter the practice of law here with Kenneth Royal of Raleigh and Goldsboro when he returned from office.

Wheeler Predicts Death Knell For Holding Concerns

Senator Forces End For Railroad Holding Companies As Result of Pending Senate Probe

Washington, Dec. 2.—(AP)—A "death sentence" for railroad holding companies—patterned after the 1935 public utilities holding company act—was foreseen by Senator Wheeler (D. Mont.) today as an outgrowth of a pending senate investigation of a railway financing.

Wheeler, who is chairman of the senate inter-state commerce committee, asserted that there is "no justification whatever for railroad holding companies." He predicted the inquiry would result in legislation abolishing them. He will open the investigation December 7.

Accused Of Larceny; Sent State Hospital

Junior Wynne, charged with the theft of an automobile, was ordered sent to the State hospital for the insane for safekeeping and for observation and treatment when his case was called in Pitt county Superior court here today.

The special order signed by Judge J. Paul Frizzelle, presiding jurist. Without counsel, the defendant tendered a plea of insanity and Solicitor D. M. Clark said that he had heretofore been informed of the alleged insanity. The case was submitted to the jury on an issue of insanity and such a verdict was returned.

BABY FOR SALE? LAW INTERVENES!

The bizarre story that a two-month-old baby girl was offered for sale at Baton Rouge, La., for $75 brought an investigation by police who took charge of the infant and arrested an aging man and an 18-year-old girl who claims she is the mother of the child. The girl, who gave her name as Lillian Cornell, is shown holding the baby. The man (right) listed his name as Jim Cornell and claimed the young mother is his daughter. (Associated Press Photos)

Negro Woman Tries Kill Witness Against Her Son

Much Excitement Is Created in Court-house by Incident

Much excitement was created at the court house today when Dora Green, said by officers already to have killed at least one man, attacked Arthur Tyson with a knife in the hall just after he had testified in a case against Herbert Green, son of Dora, in a case charging the defendant with assault with a deadly weapon.

As Tyson walked from the court room and down the hall of the first floor, the negro woman whipped out a knife from her clothing, slashed the witness across the arm, and chased him down the hall and out on the porch before she was taken by officers and rushed to the jail.

Sheriff S. A. Whitehurst was in his office as the woman chased the man by his door and rushed out and with the aid of deputies subdued the woman. A warrant charging her with assault with intent to kill was sworn out and she probably will be tried at this term of court.

Dora's daughter, Emma Green, also engaged in a disturbance following the trial of her brother and she was cited for contempt of court and given a 30-day jail sentence.

Chief George Clark gave the Green family a bad record, declaring members were always causing trouble. He recalled that she had been tried for killing one man.

Called before the court, the daughter acted indifferent to the charges of contempt and was said by court attaches to have declared that she did not care how much time she got.

Officers also quoted Dora as declaring she would kill Tyson regardless of the outcome.

The disturbance occurred immediately after the trial of Herbert Green, before court had recessed for lunch.

Local Educators Depart From City To Be At Meeting

East Carolina Teachers College and City Schools To Be Represented At Educational Meeting

Dr. L. R. Meadows, Dr. C. L. Adams and Dr. R. J. Slay left for Elmond this morning where they will attend the convention of the Southern association of colleges and secondary schools to be held Thursday and Friday.

J. H. Rose, superintendent of city schools, left yesterday.

Dr. Howard J. McGinnis went to Richmond Monday to attend important committee meetings preliminary to the general sessions.

East Carolina Teachers College was accredited as a class A College by the Southern association in 1927, giving it a rank among the best colleges of the South and making possible credit exchanges between E. C. T. C. and Duke University, the University of North Carolina, and other high-ranking Southern colleges and universities.

The Southern association is the standard accrediting agency for colleges and secondary schools in the South. To be accredited by this agency, a college must maintain high standards in every department; rigid entrance requirements; a high level of instruction; a restricted number in each class; adequate library facilities; a satisfactory number of hours before granting a degree, and other standards.

In Italy, Carlo Forlanini successfully performed the operation known as pneumothorax. Air is introduced into the chest cavity between the chest wall and the lung, thus collapsing the diseased lung and putting it to rest. The healthy lung then does the work. In this country, Dr. John B. Murphy of Chicago first described his success with this treatment in an article in "Surgery of the Lung" given in 1928. Its more widespread use did not begin until 1912.

WINTER HOLDS STATE IN GRIP

Carolinians Shiver From Mountains to Seashore

(By Associated Press) Carolinians shivered again today as king winter continued to hold forth from the mountains to the sea.

Sub freezing weather kept streets, highways, buildings and open fields in many sections coated with ice, sleet and snow.

A man was killed near Hendersonville in an automobile accident caused by a slippery road.

In western North Carolina, highway crews worked all night to keep the highways in condition for travel.

In South Carolina the entire state highway system remained open and little affected although ice prevailed far into the low country.

Place Confession Of Gastonia Man In Court Record

Statement Read To Jury Trying Raymond Edwards for Killing His Wife With An Axe

Gastonia, Dec. 2.—(AP)—Raymond Edwards' written confession that he killed his wife with an axe was read to the jury in his murder trial today as defense attorneys, by their questioning of witnesses, indicated they expected to rely upon a plea of temporary insanity through drunkenness, to save the 29-year-old textile worker from the gas chamber.

A relative of the slain woman, Mrs. Fannie Burrell Edwards, was among the first witnesses called after a jury had been completed.

Her brother, Dennis, testified to hearing Edwards tell his wife, "I'll kill you. Keep your mouth shut," while they argued in their three-room house on November 5, a few hours before the woman's almost decapitated body was found in a bed room in which were her two children.

Red Cross Roll Call Held Up By Weather

Rev. W. A. Ryan, chairman of the Red Cross Roll Call, announced today that receipts so far have passed the $200 mark, despite the fact that several sections of the city have not been canvassed as yet.

Mr. Ryan said that workers were kept from their duties today because of bad weather, but added that if the weather permits tomorrow, he expected the workers to report a sum sufficient to equal that raised last year.

OFFICIAL SEES GRAVE DANGER

Government Head Declares General War Already Being Fought on Small Scale; Reinforced Government Troops Drive Back Fascists

(By Associated Press) Reinforced government troops drove back a violent fascist attack on Madrid today after Premier Francisco Caballero, addressing the Spanish social parliament at Valencia, warned there was imminent danger of a European war.

"A European war is now being fought on a small scale on Spanish terrain," the premier declared, "and unless the League of Nations takes steps to permit the legitimate government to purchase arms and supplies, it will inevitably spread over Europe."

The premier declared the Spanish insurrection would have been subdued within a few weeks had the fascists not had "direct assistance" by Germany and Italy from the beginning.

He denounced the "tolerance and passivity" of other nations toward the civil war in Spain and declared their attitude was a source of "great danger."

Spanish officers in Madrid declared the insurrection "driving power" appeared weakened, possibly broken, after the most bitterly fought battles in the nearly month long siege of the capital.

Insurgent aid raiders, however, again visited the heart of the beleaguered city, dropping at least 10 bombs into the central section near the Puerta del Sol.

Delayed reports from the fascists, moreover, declared the front lines had advanced 500 yards from Campo Park toward Madrid proper. Insurgent commanders said Moorish troops attacked the Toledo bridge south of the city and captured a government trench.

COUNTY TEAMS WIN AND LOSE

Winterville Basketball Teams Split Double-Header

Winterville basketball teams played their second game of the season against Stokes High school Tuesday night in the new gym at Winterville.

The Stokes girls won with a score of 23-17. Christine Leggett of Winterville led both teams in scoring with 10 points. Doris Bowlin was one of the outstanding players on the court. She played forward in the first half and made 4 points. The last half she was shifted to guard and held her forward scoreless.

For the Stokes team M. Bullard carried off honors by leading her team in scoring. She rang the basket from all angles of the court. The passing of the Stokes team was exceptionally good.

The Winterville boys were more successful than the girls and came out on the big end of the score, 25-20.

Barnes and Waters were the outstanding performers for Winterville. Barnes was the high scorer for the game, making several shots from underneath the goal. After the first team had piled up a score of 25 to 12, Coach Webster substituted his second team late in the game. The Stokes boys took advantage of this and ran up 3 points before the game ended.

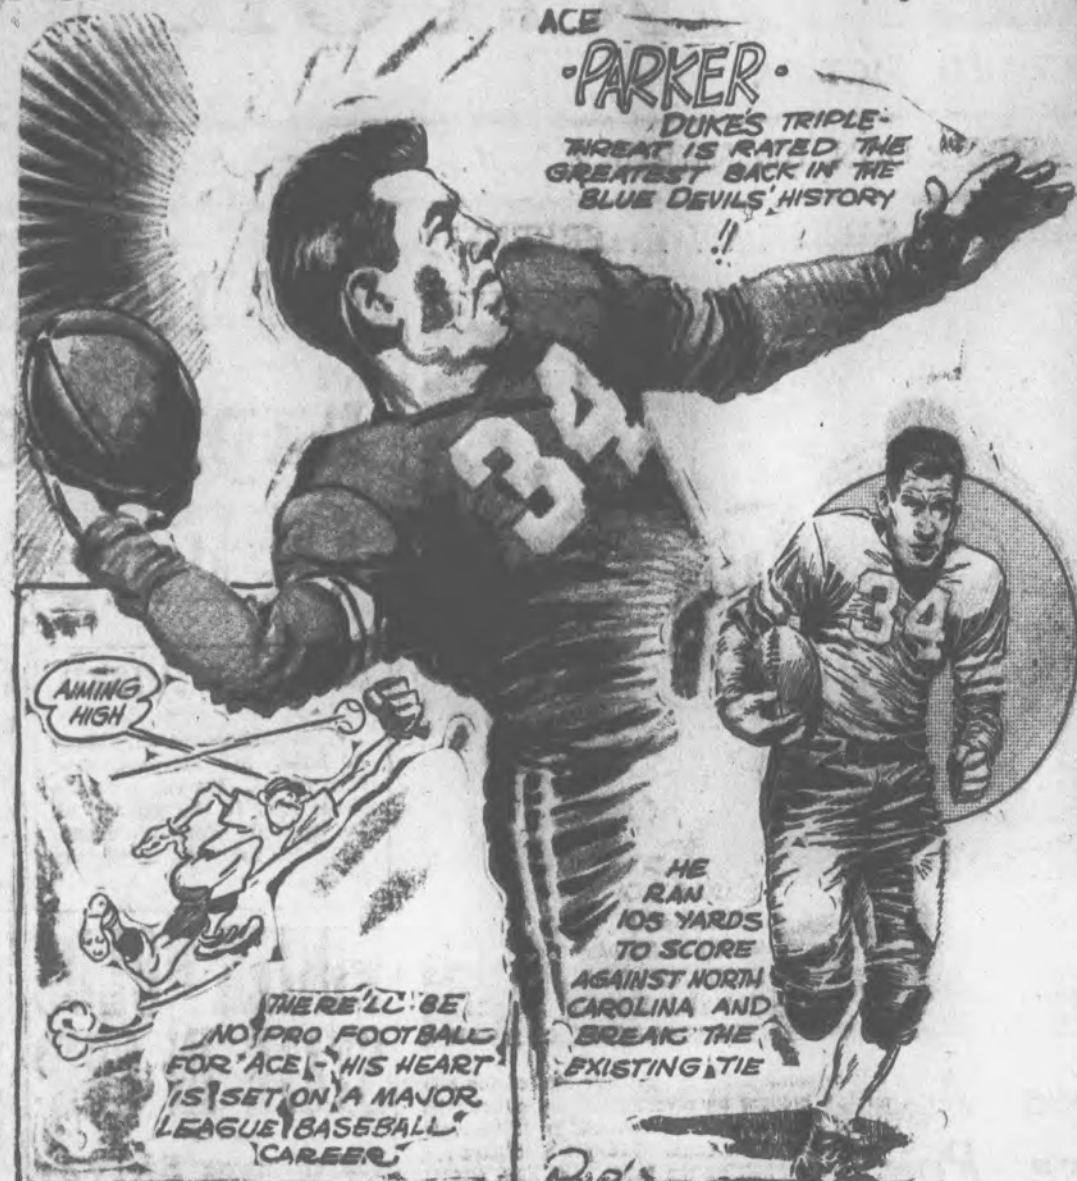

Fleming led the Stokes team with 12 points, Nelson following with 6 points.

The referees for the girls' game were J. W. Webster, Alex Evans and Miss Minnie Brooks and for the boys' game, Don Langston and Alex Evans.

Each game was fast and thrilling. The spectators thoroughly enjoyed the game as well as the warmth of the new gymnasium.

Ace of Gridders

SPORT SLANTS

Students at Duke university who have termed Capt. Clarence McKay (Ace) Parker of their football team as "Duke's ideal undergraduate" will tell you that "it's only the beginning for Parker."

They will tell you that you've only heard of him as one of the greatest football players in Southern gridiron history (incidentally, they think he's the best in American football history) but that there will be years to come when you'll hear of him as one of the greatest of major league baseball players.

They will tell you that "their Ace" is a money athlete—one who can run 105 yards for a touchdown when the score is tied—one who can come up in the last of the ninth with one on, two out, his team one run behind, take two and hit one out of the park for the ball game.

They will tell you that because they've seen him for years. They've seen him roam the gridiron, they've seen him on the basketball floor, on the golf links, on the tennis court, in the swimming pool, on the cinder path.

They will tell you that he's one of the greatest all-around athletes in this country's history. Even the coaches of the various sports at Duke will tell you he could make letters in football, basketball, and baseball (he did that last year) and in track, golf, tennis and swimming, if time allowed his participacan do anything he sets out to do in athletics.

He has convinced everyone who knows him at Duke that athletes, like poets, are born, not made.

THE SPORTSMAN

By LARRY BAUER

The University of Missouri, by mid-winter, will have begun operation of the only game sanctuary in the United States devoted exclusively to the study and preservation of wildlife.

The preserve, located 15 miles south of Columbia, seat of the university, constitutes 2300 acres of hill land worn out agriculturally. It was purchased by the federal government for the university's use and work on it is being financed by the Rural Resettlement administration.

D. Rudolf Bennitt, university zoologist active in the project, points out the sanctuary will be peculiarly valuable to wildlife propagation because—being used exclusively for that purpose—it will furnish the "perfect laboratory" in which to try out various conservation measures.

"There are many game preserves in the country, both public and private," Dr. Bennitt explains, "but no other is used solely for this purpose. In every other one extraneous interests such as lumber, fishing or commercial projects are represented."

The university, Dr. Bennitt announces, will carry on a 3-point

DATE SET FOR POWER RULING

Caldwell Co-Op Must Apply to Utilities Commission

Reflector Bureau, Str Walter Hotel, Raleigh, Dec. 2.—The Caldwell County Electric Membership Corporation, which has received a tentative grant of about $400,000 from the Federal Rural Electrification Administration, must obtain a cerificate of convenience and necessity from the North Carolina Utilities Commission before the North Carolina Rural Electrification Authority will approve its application for a loan, the NCREA decided again here in a meeting Tuesday.

Thus the NCREA stuck by its guns and adhered to the policy previously decided upon, requiring all electric membership corporations seeking Federal REA loans to secure certificates of convenience and necessity from the Utilities Commission.

The preserve, although open for public inspection, will not be a public game preserve or for use as a picnic ground.

18 as the date for the hearing by the Caldwell county cooperative for its certificate of convenience and necessity. If the certificate is granted, the belief is that the NCREA will then sign the application and give its approval to the Caldwell county enterprise.

The authority now takes the position that unless the cooperative secures this certificate, it might be subject to court action and have an injunction suit brought against it such as was brought against the Johnston county electric membership corporation by the Carolina Power and Light Co. and which has halted all rural electrification in that county pending the appeal to the supreme court on the case there.

But if the Caldwell county group obtains a certificate of convenience and necessity, it will be impossible for the Duke Power Co. or any other agency to prevent the cooperative from building its proposed rural electric lines.

Some believe that both the N. C. REA and the State Utilities Commission might attempt to postpone action on the Caldwell cooperative as a result of the Johnston County case, now on appeal to the supreme court. But both Chairman Dudley Bagley of the NCREA and Commissioner Wirborne said today that they intended to proceed with the Caldwell county case on its merits without paying any attention to the Johnston county case.

Chairman Bagley also pointed out that the NCREA is really acting to help and protect electric membership corporations by insisting that they get certificates from the Utilities Commission, since these certificates will protect them from any court action by power companies.

The meeting was opened with the roll call, to which members responded with current events. After the business session the meeting was turned over to Mrs. W. A. Ryan, program leader for the afternoon. Mrs. Ryan read an interesting and instructive paper on "Arctica," a sixteenth century romance. She prefaced her paper with a biographical sketch of the author, Sir Philip Sidney, and read excerpts from the book which illustrated the elaborate and beautiful language used. The chief importance of the style of writing for some time thereafter.

There will be a very important practice of the Junior choir on Thursday afternoon at 4:30.

Sans Souci Book Club. The Sans Souci Book Club held its regular meeting with Mrs. S. T. White on the first day of December. After a short business session, there arrived a host of her friends to share with the club a most delightful program arranged by the hostess. Yester Mulholland had been invited to present a review of "Gone With the Wind," by Margaret Mitchell.

The guests were greeted by Mrs. White and her daughter, Miss Helen White, and directed to the seats arranged informally about the house by Mesdames Charles Forbes, Curtis Perkins, Louis Cooper and Miss Frances Norton.

As chairman of the program committee, Mrs. Will Hooker, in presenting the program, stated that when the committee selected the subject "The Old and New South" for the year's work, the book "Gone With the Wind" had not been published. She deemed it most fortunate for us that the book made its appearance at this time for in it we have a most graphic picture of the Old South as a background, and the New South, as depicted in the character of Scarlett O'Hara, rising from its ashes.

Introducing the speaker, Mrs. Hooker said that we were particularly fortunate in having the review of this book given by one of our such ability and understanding as Mr. Mulholland, one whose accomplishments as head of our High School English department and director of the school paper "Green Lights" is so well known to us.

Mr. Mulholland made use of a generous hour, holding the delighted attention of his listeners, as he gave a most comprehensive and entertaining review of this book which has literally swept the country, regardless of sectionalism.

He portrayed vividly the four leading personalities through whom Miss Mitchell presents a distinctive conception of the Southland—its follies and its heroisms. He read excerpts from the book, pages that depicted outstanding flashes of humor and subtle interpretations of the characters and the situations of war.

He commented on the book relative to grammar and narrative readability and historical value. He left in the minds of those who had read it a deepened appreciation and to those who had not, an awakened anticipation.

Following the program the guests were invited into the beautifully-appointed dining room, where Mrs. Hortense Moya and Mrs. J. E. Bernhill, seated at the table, served a most delicious and delectable repast of many dainty and delicious delicacies. They were graciously assisted by Mrs. George Hadley, Mrs. W. L. Best, Mrs. J. L. Fleming, Mrs. W. E. Hooker and Mrs. Aubrey Shackell.

The club and her guests are peculiarly indebted to Mrs. White and Mr. Mulholland for a very delightful afternoon.—Reported.

Sauntering From A Distance. Tell me do the old streets run. Just like they used to run? And do the children who play in them.

Have the same kind of fun? Do the jolly girls from the E. T. C. Parade the streets on Saturday? And do the business men greet you. In the same old friendly way?

Do passersby still stop to chat, With Harris, Blunt and Best? And does the town still welcome glad.

As of old each foreign guest? Does the present Mayor smile Like the one of years ago. On rich and poor? It made them feel Mightily good, don't you know?

Some day I'm going to get me up. And commute, hitch-hike or walk Back to Greenville town again. And with the old-timers talk Of joyous times of other years; And meet new friends, and hold Them just as dear in future years, I'm sure, as I do the old. LOY EVERETT BALLARD, Asheville, Nov. 29, 1936.

"Smilin' Through" which the senior class at the College will present Friday, December 11, is now in its second week of rehearsal. Clifton Britton, experienced student director, is in full charge of the production.

The students who play the important roles come from all college classes and were selected because of their performance in the tryouts for the parts.

Irina Skariatina Here Tonight. Irina Skariatina, noted Russian authoress and lecturer, will speak tonight at 8:30 in the Robert H. Wright auditorium at the College. According to the most recent advice received here, Miss Skariatina will arrive in Greenville this afternoon with her husband straight from their home, Englewood Cottage, St. Davis, Philadelphia.

Miss Skariatina, formerly the Countess Keller, maid of honor to the Empress of Russia, comes to Greenville in her more recent role, as an author known around the world.

Her life has been rich in adventure. During the World War she served first as a Red Cross nurse and later as a doctor. After the war, the remains of what had once been a great family fortune were confiscated by the revolutionary government. Miss Skariatina's father was beaten to death, and she was driven from the country.

Her life has been one of great struggle, of triumph over almost impossible odds; but Miss Skariatina has not been embittered by her hardships. She is sympathetic and understanding. The first Russian of noble blood to re-enter her native country after the revolution, she stands today as one of the best interpreters of the new Russia to the modern world.

Her books are "A World Can End," "First to Go Back," "Little Era in Old Russia," and "New Worlds for Old."

SIMPSON GREETS MRS. RAFFRAY IN ENGLAND

Ernest Simpson, divorced husband of King Edward's friend, "Wally," is shown in this radiophoto leaving the train at London with Mrs. Jacques A. L. Raffray of New York. He had met her at Southampton on her arrival from America. A moment later they separated and then darted into the same cab, where they lay on the floor boards to escape public attention. Before sailing from New York, Mrs. Raffray denied reports linking her name with Simpson. (Associated Press Photo)

Eastern Counties Again Have Legislative Power

Reflector Bureau. Sir Walter Hotel. Raleigh, Dec. 2.—The eastern counties will again control the 1937 general assembly, as they have most of the sessions for the past ten to 20 years, according to those who have been studying the make-up of the new house and senate.

The reason for this is the fact that again the eastern counties have more experienced men in both the house and senate, thus assuring them of the more important committee chairmanships and assignments, which in turn will give them control of the most important legislation, it is agreed.

For those who are familiar with legislative procedure agree that the committees have more power and influence than any other portion of the legislative machinery and that the chairman of the various committees virtually dominate them, so that in the final analysis, the legislature usually acts as the committee chairmen want it to.

Not that committees and their chairmen are not occasionally overruled, for they are. But those who have made it their business to watch the influence of committee chairmen and committee recommendations on legislation are convinced that it is the exception rather than the rule for a committee recommendation to be disregarded.

The rule, though based entirely on custom and precedent, that the longer a member serves in the senate or house, the more he is entitled to a chairmanship of a major committee, though there are always some exceptions to this rule.

The result is that most of the better chairmanships and committee assignments go to those members who have had previous experience in the general assembly. This also generally means that no matter how able the new members of a senate or house may be that they cannot expect any important chairmanships until they have served at least one term.

On the basis of this reasoning, a survey of the 1937 senate discloses that the senators from the first to seventh districts, inclusive are for the most part experienced men having served in either the senate or house in previous legislatures. Without exception, either one or both members of the senatorial delegations from these districts has had previous legislative experience.

The first district will be represented by W. I. Halstead and J. J. Hughes, both of whom are new to the senate, although Halstead served in the house in several sessions from Camden in the county and hence is no newcomer to the legislature. The senators from the second district are W. B. Rodman, Jr. of Washington and R. L. Coburn of Williamson, with Rodman a new man but Coburn a veteran of the 1935 senate.

Senator A. C. Gay will be back from the third district, having represented this district in previous sessions. The fourth district will be represented by Senator W. G. (Un-

How's Your Health—

Respiratory Diseases In The Young. During the last 20 years, the infant mortality rate and the deaths due to the common infectious diseases of childhood have been very appreciably reduced. Heretofore the diseases of the digestive tract, and principally cholera infantum, accounted for a large percentage of the mortality among infants and young children.

Thanks to the pasteurization of milk, the refrigeration of foods and the general improved anti-bacterial and dirt cleanliness, diseases of the digestive tract in the young have been reduced.

In prominence, therefore, today stand out the respiratory diseases. Certain anatomic and physiologic facts concerning the respiratory system of the young child will help us to understand why youngsters are particularly susceptible to respiratory diseases, and why once developed, they prove so serious a menace.

The respiratory mechanism has to start work quite suddenly within a few moments after birth. This abrupt taking over of the task of oxygenating the blood in the newborn may account for the marked liability of the young infant to respiratory infection.

Significant, too, is the young child's low resistance to infection. Germs which in the adult may cause a mild condition are in the infant and young child quite likely to cause very severe or even fatal disease. As the child grows older, it acquires greater immunity, so that after the age of three or four it is able to withstand respiratory infections much better.

The heat-regulating mechanism of the child is also unstable in its operations. The result is that the child is not always able to meet the respiratory requirements of infection.

The respiratory system plays a very important role in regulating the temperature of the body. In the infant and young child, the surfaces presented by the so-called bronchial tree are large in ratio to the air cell area. This in part explains the frequent involvement of its bronchial structures by so-called bronchitic inflammations.

The respiratory system of the child has a protective mechanism consisting of lymphatic tissue (tonsils, adenoids, lymph glands) which, while of value in fighting off infections, is likely to prove a source of chronic infection. The various lymph glands, subsequent to an acute infection, may fall to return to their former state. They may become so enlarged that they interfere with normal breathing and may continue to harbor a smoldering infection.

Four-H Youths Must Offer Reports Soon

Raleigh, Dec. 1.—Four-H records submitted for county, district, and State awards this year must be in the office of L. R. Harrill at State College not later than December 15.

Harrill, state 4-H club leader, announced that a number of awards are to be made this year on a basis of club members' records on their work during the past year.

The awards include wrist watches to county winners in corn growing, a scholarship to the 4-H short course next summer for the best all-around 4-H club record in each county, four one-year college scholarships to district winners in corn growing.

A one-year college scholarship for the best record made by a 4-H calf club member, a four-year college scholarship to the member making the best corn growing record in the State, and a four-year scholarship to the member making the best all-around 4-H record in the State.

Talks To Parents

By Brooks Peters Church. The Enticing Horizon. There was a time when every household was more or less of a unit and to some extent self-contained. A woman could, or at any rate often did live inside the four walls of her home, or at most was neighborhood with those who lived nearby. Of course there was always such work to be done, and in the city her duty might lead into public charities. But as a general thing, life for the woman, at least, tended to be narrow and self-centered.

But such times are no longer to be neglected; the world outside. The family has become an integral part of the community. The children spend half their waking hours away from home. They are at school, scout meetings, the athletic field, the movie house, the community house. They are riding on buses or trolleys or trains, meeting people and making contacts with new ideas and influences everywhere. For the sake of the entire family, mothers, no matter how home-loving or shy, must broaden the scope of their activities and their interests to include the group, the community, the town, the state, the nation. Even if they themselves stay at home, their children do not and cannot.

Every household is a part of the whole community, and is affected by or has an effect on every other. If the Smiths have a contagious disease, the Joneses are in danger of catching it unless the town health regulations are good. If there is a center of vice a mile away from the Browns' house, it may still be a danger to the Brown children. Traffic regulations affect everyone. And the health board, the police force, the traffic squad, the school board, all the public service agencies are the business, not of the local politicians, but of every citizen, and especially of parents—fathers and mothers both.

Recruiting District To Fill 4 Vacancies. The United States Marine Corps Recruiting District Headquarters, Post Office Building, Savannah, Ga., announces forty vacancies to be filled at that office during December. Captain A. C. Small is the officer in charge.

In addition to the regular quota there are a number of vacancies for qualified musicians. It was stated. Young men in this vicinity desiring information concerning service in the Marine Corps may write the Marine Corps Recruiting Station, Savannah, Ga. Applications will be mailed upon request. Captain Small announced.

Guernsey Cows Sent To Pitt County Boys. Raleigh, Dec. 1.—Thirty-four fine Guernseys have been placed with farmers largely in 10 eastern North Carolina counties as a result of the annual fall cattle sale of the North Carolina Guernsey Breeders Association held in Wilson last Saturday.

A. C. Kimrey, extension dairy specialist at State College, who attended the sale, declared that "these high quality heifers, cows, and bulls will be a big help in increasing milk production in those counties."

"The consignment included 18 or 19 heifers," Kimrey continued, "and many of them went to 4-H club members in Sampson, Wayne, Pitt, Johnston, Bertie, Gates, Wilson and Halifax counties."

Millions have found in Calotabs a most valuable aid in the treatment of colds. They take one or two tablets the first night and repeat the third or fourth night if needed.

How do Calotabs help Nature throw off a cold? First, Calotabs are one of the most thorough and dependable of all intestinal eliminators, thus cleansing the intestinal tract of the germ-laden mucus and toxins.

Second, Calotabs are diuretic to the kidneys, promoting the elimination of cold poisons from the blood. Thus Calotabs serve the double purpose of a purgative and diuretic, both of which are needed in the treatment of colds.

Calotabs are quite economical; only twenty-five cents for the family package, ten cents for the trial package. (Adv.)

Washington — When the navy takes the President for a cruise on the Indianapolis such as that to Buenos Aires, it supplies him with just what a high ranking navy officer gets—and little else. And that isn't much, on a cruiser.

On the Indianapolis, which is a flagship, with accommodations for an admiral, the President occupies the admiral's quarters. They are forward, one floor above the main deck. He has a bit, a bed room, and one fairly large room to serve as combination office and dining room. The furnishings are like those in a two-room and bath apartment at $50 a month in an inexpensive apartment house.

His office-dining room has a dark table, radio, lounging chair,
sofa, and such little odds and ends.
As a small silver cabinet, a cigar
box and two or three straight chairs. More chairs can be brought in when company comes. The rug is middle grade, no deep plush.
There are curtains, and navy
china.

Trunks and from the President's desk up to the communications deck, and down to the main deck.
Meals (of course, of course, calls it meals) are served to the President in his quarters.

Methodical and thorough officers
detailed to provide for the President's welfare on the Indianapolis had a list of 154 things to do.
They began doing them last July.
Very secretly, of course, as that was long before the President announced his trip. The 154 items ranged all the way from putting motion picture films on board to arranging deck facilities at South American ports.

Next trip the President takes the officers probably will list 155 things to do. The extra will be to provide the ship with a crew. It is

Wings for Sally

by BAILEY WOLFE

SYNOPSIS: Dark, handsome Philip Page returns to his boy-hood home and buys the Warrenton Courier, backing the workmen of the Morris mill in their fight for better living conditions. He quietly admires attractive Sally Warren, the society editor. His engagement to Terry Maynard, boyish blond aviator, breaks when he admits he has come to love pretty, willful Tip. Sally's younger sister, But Terry can tell Tip he is free, she disappears, turning up the next day in a home in Milltown.

Chapter 21

Lost: A Pair Of Wings

JOE MORRIS left them at the Warren house, considerably refusing to come in.

"I'll call up later," he said, "just to see if she's still here. So long."

"He's a peach," said Tip soberly, as they went into the house. "I'll never laugh at him for being too fat again."

Mr. and Mrs. Warren were in the dining room. Tip ran to her mother and hugged her close without speaking. None of them spoke until Mr.
Warren said gravely, "Now, Tip, sit down and tell us where you were last night. You've caused all of us a great deal of anxiety, your mother especially. I hope you can justify your actions."

"Yes, sir," said Tip meekly. They all sat down solemnly around the bare table, as if Mr. Warren were holding court and they were the jury. Tip drew little circles on the table with her finger as she talked.

"I went riding with Duke Adams
last night. I—I know you forbade me to go out with him again, but, well—
I did. I guess it must have been eight o'clock last night when I called him up."

"You called him up?" cried her mother. "How could you, Tip?"

"—I felt I couldn't bear to stay in the house another minute longer,"
said Tip, without looking at Sally. "I tried to get Joe Morris, but he was out. Then I thought of Duke. I was crazy to get out of town—get a job somewhere. I thought Duke might help me. He's not a bad boy, honest he's not. He hasn't had much of a chance—"

Sally interrupted. "You may as well know that Duke Adams had a crash in his plane last night. He'll get over it, but he'll probably not fly again."

Tip grew very pale, and her lips
trembled. "He tried to get me to go up with him last night."

"But you didn't," said Sally. "Go on."

"When I called Duke, he didn't want to come and get me. He—he said he'd promised father not to see me again. But I begged him, and finally he said he'd meet me at the drug store."

"So this disgraceful escapade was entirely your own doing," said Mr.
Warren sternly.

"Yes—yes, it was," Tip went on hurriedly. "Duke took me a way I'd never been before, through Milltown.
He said it was one way of getting to the airport. When we got out into the country he tried to kiss me. I was sorry enough I'd called him by that time. I—I knew he'd had something to drink. I asked him to take me home, but he wouldn't. Then he turned into a little bumpy road, that I knew didn't go to the airport."

"He'll pay for this," said Ray furiously. "When he gets out of the hospital I'll put him back in again."

"Quiet!" Mr. Warren was angrier than Sally had ever seen him. "Your sister was more at fault than the Adams boy!"

"Yes," said Tip. "It was all my fault. I had better luck than I deserved. The engine of the car went dead. Maybe we were out of gas.
Anyway, Duke got out and raised the hood. While he was looking at the engine, I sneaked out of the car and ran down the road the way we had come. Afterwards I heard him calling me, but when he turned the car and came by, I hid in the bushes."

"You've got more nerve than I gave you credit for," said Ray grudgingly.

"Such a thing never happened to anyone in this family before," said Mr. Warren. "The whole thing sounds like a cheap novel."

"That's me," said Tip. "Everything that happens to me is like that."

"Go on," said Ray.

'I Wish I Was Dead'

THAT'S all—except that I walked and ran till I thought I'd die of things in the dark, trying to jump out at me. I sat down and cried. Then I'd get up and walk some more. I didn't see a soul the whole way. It must have been awfully late when I got to Milltown, only I didn't know it was Milltown. I saw Mrs. McDonald's light. She was up late sewing, and I guess she thought I was a tramp at first. She made me some coffee and told me to lie down on her little girl's bed. I wouldn't tell her who I was because I was afraid she'd tell about me and you'd all be disgraced. I meant to wake up and walk the rest of the way home, but, well—you know the rest. I slept till this morning."

"I never in all my life heard such a tale," said Mrs. Warren weakly.

"Go on and say it," Tip's voice

the last few hours were fruitless.
It was found the Chester had one,
and as it was going along everybody felt better.

Notably the Chester went along to take press correspondents and certain aides. But that was not the basic reason, which was not published. It was for safety and expediency. The navy's job is to get the President to his destination. The extra cruiser goes along as a spare to carry on if the President's ship is disabled. Thus the worry about a brow.

When the navy takes the President over, it cuts him off from the White House to a degree. Personal secretaries are left behind and Charles K. Ciaunich, brown haired, brown eyed, thin cheeked naval chief yeoman, takes the job. He hold it when Hoover went to sea.

Now he is Roosevelt's sea-going secretary. The Democratic purge didn't reach him, in the navy.

trembled. "I'm a little fool. I ought to have a nursemaid. I deserve anything you say or do to me."

"You do," said her father sternly.

Suddenly Tip raised her head and broke into a wild speech that started them even more than the story she had just told—started all but Sally,
who knew what lay behind the outburst.

"You sit and stare at me!" cried Tip. "all of you! Thinking you're so wise. You're not so wise. If you were you'd know why I went with Duke.
I wish I'd gone up with him last night —and crashed—and died. I wish I was dead!"

Tip put her head down on the table and wept, hopelessly. Mrs. Warren stroked her hair and tried to silence
her. The others looked on uncomfortably. Mr. Warren got up.

"I'm going to the office," he said.
"I have an appointment. You will go to your room, Theresa, and I will talk to you after lunch."

Sally followed him out. She longed to tell him that he need not worry much longer about Tip. She would soon belong to Terry. Terry's love would make him know how to take care of Tip. But the news was not Sally's to tell.

When Mr. Warren had gone, Terry came around from the side porch,
where he had been waiting.

"Terry! I'd forgotten about you!" It was true. In the excitement she had not given Terry's anxiety for Tip a single thought.

"I came just after you went for her," said Terry, turning his hat awkwardly in his hands. "I knew nobody would want me to horn in. But I had to wait around. I had to see her."

"Go down there to the hammock,"
said Sally. "I'll send her to you."

"Will you?" Terry's face lighted up. "You're pretty swell, Sally. I guess I couldn't hope to have a better friend than you've been."

"It's all right," Sally went into the house. If she could not have his love she could not bear his friendship—
not just now.

Sally Plays Her Part

She managed to get Tip away from her mother and send her out into the garden. Afterwards she went upstairs, brushed her hair, and powdered her nose mechanically. She was the same work-a-day, sensible girl who held down a desk at the Courier. And yet, she was not the same.

The Sally of yesterday, of these last few months, had carried about a dream of adventure and romance in her heart. She had kept it buried deep.
She had gone about the duties that were necessary. But she had known that she had, folded close to her, a pair of wings, waiting to be tried.

Terry's love had given them to her—
now Terry's love had taken them away. While she dreamed, Terry's love had gone elsewhere, and taken with it Sally's wings.

Sally took up her hat and purse and went downstairs. There was one thing more to be done. Tip must be faced. Tip must be believed that Sally had given Terry up because she wanted to—not because she must. Sally had expected to find Tip in Terry's arms, but she had reckoned without the pain that the sight of them caused in her own heart.
Best get everything over quickly.

"Happy—you too?" she asked lightly.

"Oh, Sally, I don't believe it yet!"
Tip looked at her incredulously.
"How could you love Terry so much
last night, and not love him at all today?"

Wise Tip! How could she indeed?
But that was nothing that Tip or anyone else could help her with.

"It's not so strange," lied Sally glibly. "When I found out that you loved Terry, I was angry. I couldn't believe that you weren't just flirting with him to hurt me. If I hadn't been so angry with you, perhaps I'd have spent more time deciding whether or not I loved him enough to marry him myself. Last night, when it came to a decision, I simply found out I couldn't go away with him. That opened my eyes, and I saw then that what I had felt for him all along was really—a sort of friendship."

"That's it," said Terry. "We've been good friends—we've had some swell times together—and I'll never forget them."

"Of course not," said Sally. "We have a lot to remember."

"And I want you to know, Sally, it's not a mistake this time. I love Tip.
I never will quit feeling—the way I do now. I'll take good care of her."

"I know you will, Terry," said Sally.
"Now go in, both of you, and break the news to the family. After all the excitement, the family resistance is so low you can put almost anything over on them. Tell them you're engaged and that you're going to be married next week. I'll back you up."

"Sally! Wait a minute, Sally!" cried
Tip.

But Sally had turned her back on them deliberately and gone resolutely up the street. She had played her part well thus far. The rest would be so hard, perhaps. A week long, and she would, at least, not have to look at their happiness.

Sally was glad of the busy clack of typewriters in the office. Everybody was at work. She, too, had work to do and no more time to think about herself.

N. Y. Stock Market

New York, Dec. 2.—(AP)—Specialties, notably those of the low-price division, scampered blindly up the trading incline in today's stock market, while many of the old line leaders failed to find a recovery foothold.

Dividend earnings and other business news encouraged the financial sector and tended to offset to some extent foreign complexities. But the failure of the list as a whole to respond was a depressing influence in the board rooms.

Sharp Split Seen On Reduction Of World War Debts

Some Legislators Look With Sympathy on New Move to Remove International Sore Spot

Washington, Dec. 2.—(AP)—A sharp split developed on Capitol Hill today on the question of granting further reduction in the $12,000,000,000 war debt Europe owes the United States.

It followed a disclosure that France in an informal and wholly tentative way had made overtures looking toward a possible settlement of the debt question. France, which owes the United States $4,001,234,000, has been in default five years along with 47 other nations.

Some legislators inclined to look with sympathy on a new move to remove the long-standing sore spot in international relations. Others, however, indicated that if some of the debtors were planning to make some small payment with the idea of being allowed to borrow more money in the court they were doomed to disappointment.

Before any new arrangements about the war debt can take effect, congress must give its approval.

"If You Don't Like Us," Russia Tells Japan, "Then You Can't Fish in Our Backyard"

On the map are shown the Soviet waters off Maritime and Kamchatka provinces and Kamchatka peninsula where Russia threatens that Japanese will lose their right to fish unless Japan repudiates her new anti-communist agreement with Germany. The fishing concession expires December 31, as does another giving Japan permission to drill for oil in the Russian north half of Sakhalin island. Until news of the anti-red pact leaked out, Russia appeared ready to renew both concessions.
