Special Session Convened To Adopt Social Measures

SECURITY BILL GIVEN SOLONS

Governor Asks For Speed in Adopting Insurance Bill

DRAFT DECLARED HAVE APPROVAL

Special Session Of Legislature First Called in This State Since 1924

Raleigh, Dec. 10.—(AP)—Governor Ehringhaus asked the special session of the legislature today to speedily adopt an unemployment compensation insurance measure "carefully prepared and which I am sure is federally approved."

Controversial questions have been avoided in its drafting," the governor told the legislators an hour after they convened in extraordinary session, the first in the state since 1924.

Governor Ehringhaus also assured the legislators "the administrative set up" proposed in the bill "is along lines approved by my successor." Governor-elect Clyde Hoey will take office January 7.

The Governor recalled his recommendation to the 1935 general assembly that an unemployment compensation insurance act be passed and told of the session on the last day of the session on the "Cherry" act, authorizing a state commission to administer such a program with employers making "contributions" for the maintenance of the activity.

Copies of the administration act were distributed to the legislators for study.

"The nearness of the regular session and my unwillingness to trespass unduly either upon your time or the prerogatives of my successor," the governor said, "suggest the advisability of my making now my further recommendation. Permit me, however, to welcome you and voice my complete confidence in your ability and disposition well and truly to perform the duties which have been placed upon you."

The senate was called to order 11:10 and quickly adopted a resolution to limit legislation during the special session to unemployment compensation insurance bills or social security measures. A 5x min. (Continued on page six)

Sen. J. W. Bailey Issues Statement Regarding Agency

Declares All Federal Appointments Under Social Security to Be Made Under Civil Service

Senator Josiah W. Bailey in a letter today called attention to the fact that all federal appointments under the Social Security organization, except a few experts and attorneys, are under the Civil Service and it is useless for anyone to apply for a position who does not have the Civil Service status.

In his letter Senator Bailey quoted the following from a formal communication from the Social Security board:

"Notwithstanding previous Board announcements that all employees, except a few technical experts in social security problems and attorneys, jobs are not eligible under civil service regulations. The Board's representatives in Washington and the field have been instructed to inform all applicants that they must have a civil service status and that those who have taken civil service examinations such as the recent one for administrative positions with the board would in the event of vacancies be certified by the Civil Service Commission in the order of their standing without further action on their part."

Fayetteville, Dec. 10.—(AP)—The death toll in the state's most disastrous school bus accident mounted to four today with the death in a hospital of Harlan Haywood, 16-year-old high school boy, injured when an orange-laden truck crashed into a homeward bound bus near here yesterday.

Three pupils were killed almost instantly and 19 were injured, five seriously, when the truck ploughed into the bus bearing more than 40 children on a straight stretch of highway.

J. H. Gibbs of Fayetteville, driver of the truck, was ordered held without bond by Coroner W. C. Davis pending an inquest.

Davis quoted Gibbs as saying the steering gear of his truck locked as it approached the bus.

Ernest Johnson, Mack Williams and Inez Bulla, 15-year-old pupils of Cedar Creek township, were killed almost instantly.

Four of the injured remained in the hospital today.

Doctors said they may have to amputate a leg to save the life of Grace Owen, the most seriously hurt. The others, Stanley Parham, Gailther Cain and Myrtle Clark, were reported recovering satisfactorily.

REESE BAILEY GETS 20 YEARS

Heavy Penalty Meted Out to N. C. Prison Fugitive

Columbus, O., Dec. 10.—(AP)—Reese Bailey, 30-year-old fugitive from a North Carolina prison, was sentenced to 20 years imprisonment in a federal penitentiary after pleading guilty in United States district court here today to two charges of assault on a federal agent.

Judge N. G. Underwood gave Bailey 10 years for each count, the sentences to run consecutively. In first pronouncing sentences he imposed fines of $5,000 each on the two charges in addition to the imprisonment, but he rescinded this part of the penalty upon a plea by Bailey's attorney.

The latter, E. D. Bailey of Burnsville, a distant cousin of the prisoner, told the court the defendant had only $300 in cash and that his wife and children needed the poultry farm he owned.

Foreman On Farm Falls Dead While Attending Duties

H. C. Garner, 49, foreman on the J. Key Brown farm on the Washington highway just east of this city, dropped dead as he went about his duties on the farm about 1:30 this afternoon. Death was the result of a heart attack. The body was taken to Newport, N. C. late this afternoon where funeral services and interment will take place tomorrow afternoon.

Mr. Garner came to this city about four years ago and has made a number of friends in the community. He is survived by his wife, four sons, W. G. Leroy, Arnold, Leslie and Leland Garner and one daughter, Mrs. H. C. Rivers, all of Greenville. Other survivors include two brothers and four sisters.

POPE SUFFERS FROM RELAPSE

Reported Holy Father Will Never Walk Again

Vatican City, Dec. 10.—(AP)—It was reliably reported at the Vatican that Pope Pius XI, suffered a relapse today from paralysis.

The holy father, who was stricken last Saturday, has been reported as recovering.

A verbal bulletin by the Pope's physician during the morning had said while the 79-year-old pontiff was remaining in bed his condition was the same.

Shortly after the relapse was reported a high Vatican source expressed the opinion that even if his illness recovers from his present crisis he will never walk again.

Even if he leaves his bed, it was said, the Pope will be compelled to spend the rest of his days in an arm chair.

Official Surveys Truck Operations In School System

To Recommend Purchase of Tank Truck to Deliver Gasoline to Various Schools in County

L. C. Thornton of Raleigh, in charge of school bus routines, has completed a survey here and approved changes put into operation at the beginning of the present term.

Mr. Thornton made a thorough study of the schedules in the county system, going over the various bus routings and making a few minor adjustments.

He announced he would recommend that the School Commission deliver gas to the various schools on hard surface highways. Under the plan a tank truck will be purchased and work out from the county garage in Winterville. A 600 gallon tank will be used and the truck make a round every other day, filling up the trucks. It was explained that a tank full of gas should be sufficient to operate the trucks two days. Only trucks operating for schools on good roads will be serviced, it was declared, as the undertaking would possibly run into a loss if all the school trucks in the county had to be serviced.

It was stated by county school officials that the proposed plan would enable a closer check to be kept on the amount of gas used and also on the trucks as to needed repairs.

The state agriculture department estimates the Pinellas county (Fla.) citrus crop will yield from 1,500,000 to 1,700,000 boxes this season.

BANDIT STAGES BOLD ROBBERY IN ROCKINGHAM

Posse Sends Word That Man Surrounded in Swamp

$3,000 PAYROLL TAKEN IN HOLDUP

Official of Mill Released After Having Been Forced to Accompany Bandit

Rockingham, Dec. 10.—(AP)—An unmasked bandit held employes and officials in the office of the Hannah Pickett mill here today and fled with approximately $3,000, taking with him M. B. Leath, secretary and treasurer of the plant, who was released from his own car, unharmed, a few miles away.

Officers in hot pursuit recovered Leath's car abandoned on the road to Cheraw, S. C., a few miles from where he had been put out. In it was the bandit gun. A posse with bloodhounds sent word back to town that the man was believed surrounded in a swamp.

Leath said the bandit overlooked several thousand dollars more which already had been placed on shelves preparatory to paying off different shifts.

Leath said he had just come from the bank with the payroll money and an officer who accompanied him had started for another plant with additional money. Two packages of the payroll had been put away and the $3,000 lay on his desk when the man walked in. Leath said, flourishing an automatic pistol and saying quietly:

"Stick them up. I am taking that money."

Prefers Marry American To Retaining His Throne; Duke Of York Next Ruler

SUCCESSOR TO BRITISH THRONE

Albert Frederick Arthur George, Duke of York, who succeeds his brother, King Edward VIII, to the British throne, is shown above in a striking photograph. The shy, studious duke is known as royalty's "family man" and often has been likened to George V. The accession of the Duke of York to the throne insures Great Britain of a reigning queen, as his only two children are girls, the elder being Princess Elizabeth, who will succeed her father to the throne.

Mrs. Simpson Has Nothing To Say About Abdication

DUKE OF YORK A FAMILY MAN

Resemblance Seen To Home-loving King George V

London, Dec. 10.—(AP)—The Duke of York, who will succeed King Edward VIII, to the British throne, is the House of Windsor's "family man."

Married since 1923 to Lady Elizabeth Bowes-Lyon, he has two children, Princess Elizabeth and Princess Margaret Rose. The former so captivated the British public that he once remarked: "My chief claim to fame seems to be that I am the father of Princess Elizabeth."

While likening Edward to his sprightly grandfather, Edward VII, London often has noted a resemblance between the sober, studious duke and home-loving King George V.

Typical of the difference between the brothers was the way they went at golf.

Edward, as Prince of Wales, hired a professional and never lost a chance to get pointers from visiting Americans, especially Walter Hagen and Leo Diegel.

"Bertie," the duke, erected a net in the handkerchief-sized lawn back of his London home, 145 Piccadilly, and practiced strokes by the hour.

His brother had a head-start in learning to play the game—but "Bertie" advanced so quickly that in 1933 he defeated the then Prince of Wales in a club tournament.

In the same slow but sure way, he took up riding and fox-hunting. "The Duke of York," Captain G. H. Drummond, his frequent host, has related, "came down to my place with two of his brothers and you can imagine my feelings when we put him on a hunter for a trial. (Continued on page six)

TERMS SIGNED BY OWN HAND

Official Announcement Made in House of Commons

SUBJECTS ASKED UNDERSTANDACT

Three Brothers Of King Witness Document Renouncing Throne of Greatest Empire

London, Dec. 10.—(AP)—King Edward of England abdicated his ancient, mighty throne today.

He will marry Wallis Warfield Simpson as man and monarch.

Albert Frederick Arthur George, the tall 40-year-old Duke of York will rule over the 496,000,000 subjects of the greatest empire on earth.

He will reign as George VI. In "a message from his majesty, the king, signed by his own hand," sombre Stanley Baldwin, the kingdom's first minister, announced the abdication to a House of Commons in which tension and hysteria were breathing living things.

Edward's abdication was officially announced in the House of Commons by Captain Edward Fitzroy, speaker of the House.

Prime Minister Baldwin presaged the announcement by telling the members he had "a message from his majesty, the king, signed by his own hand."

King Edward's words in renouncing the British throne, the speaker read, were:

"I have determined to renounce the throne."

"After long and anxious consideration I have determined to renounce the throne to which I succeeded on the death of my father. I am now communicating this, my final and irrevocable decision."

"Realizing as I do the gravity of this step, I can only hope I shall have the understanding of my peoples in the decision I have taken and the reasons which have led me to take it."

"I will not enter now into my private feeling, but I would beg that it should be remembered that the burden which constantly rests upon the shoulders of a sovereign is so heavy that it can only be borne in circumstances different from those in which I now find myself."

"I conceive that I am not overlooking the duty that rests on me to a place on the forefront of public interest when I declare that I am conscious that I can no longer discharge this heavy task with efficiency or with satisfaction to myself."

"I have, accordingly, this morning executed an instrument of abdication in the terms following:

"I, Edward, VIII, of Great Britain, Ireland and the British dominions beyond the seas, King and Emperor of India, do hereby declare my irrevocable determination to renounce the throne, for myself and for my descendants and my desire that effect be given to this instrument of abdication immediately."

"In token whereof I have unto set my hand this 10th day of December, 1936 in the presence of the witnesses whose signatures are subscribed.

"Signed Edward R. I. "My execution of this instrument has been witnessed by my three brothers, their royal highnesses, the Duke of York, the Duke of Gloucester and the Duke of Kent."

Cheering crowds greeted Prime Minister Baldwin today as he arrived at the House of Commons to deliver what was expected to be a final explanation of the controversy between King and Cabinet over Mrs. Wallis Simpson.

The British House of Commons reconvened at 6 p. m. tonight. (Continued on page six)

12 DAYS to SHOP Behind the CHRISTMAS SEAL 1936 Theobald Smith demonstrated two types of tubercle bacillus - human and bovine

Our country is proud of the important contribution to tuberculosis control made by this distinguished research worker. Dr. Smith showed that the germs commonly found in human beings and the germs attacking cattle are distinct species of tubercle bacilli. Both types, however, may cause disease in either man or animals. Milk from tuberculous cows is of danger, especially to babies and children and many important steps have now been taken to protect them.

Typhus Fever Found Over North Carolina

Raleigh, Dec. 10.—Twenty-eight cases of typhus fever and three deaths from this disease reported to the State Board of Health for the eleven months' period of 1936 arouse interest in an old disease, but one not frequently heard of in Southeastern United States until more or less recently. As reported to the Division of Epidemiology of the State Board of Health, five cases were in New Hanover county, five in Mecklenburg, four in Craven, three in Sampson, two in Granville, and one each in Lenoir, Catawba, Robeson, Durham, Vance, Pitt, Cumberland and Duplin. In the minds of most Americans, typhus is associated with the World War, with the body louse or "cootie," as the doughboys called it, as the carrier. But typhus fever such as is being found in North Carolina and several other southern states today is not the epidemic form that is common in the countries of Europe and other parts of the world. It is not that type that is usually associated with armies, encampments, and slums, filth and squalor.

DENVER TIGHTENS RULES ON DYNAMITE

Denver (AP) — With a mining revival in full swing and greater highway programs out in the west, Denver officials have decided they need more stringent rules regulating the transportation of dynamite through the city.

One-half billion pounds of high explosives have moved through the city in the past seven years, Police Chief George Marland said as he called a conference with officials of four explosive concerns.

Only one accident occurred and nobody was killed or seriously injured.

Marland said police escorts will be provided every truck loaded with explosives and the trucks will use streets on the outskirts of the city.

Special Session Expected To Stick To Its Knitting

Reflector Bureau Staff Writer Hotel.
By J. C. BASKERVILLE
Raleigh, Dec. 10.—The special session of the general assembly which convened here this morning for the expressed purpose of enacting unemployment insurance legislation so that the state will not lose between $2,500,000 and $3,000,000 in unemployment taxes which otherwise would go to the Federal government instead of being held to the credit of North Carolina, is expected to stick strictly to its knitting.

For while there is no way by which the governor can limit the session to the consideration of nothing but the unemployment insurance bill, there are means by which the leaders in the senate and house can hold the noses of members to the grindstone and prevent them from trying to take up anything but unemployment insurance, it is readily agreed.

It is fully expected, of course, that some attempts will be made by members in both houses to introduce bills dealing with other matters besides unemployment insurance and to get them considered. Some members will undoubtedly have some local bills which they have "promised" the people back in their home county they will get through for them which they will attempt to introduce.

Others may attempt to introduce a state-wide measure or two.

The most persistent report current is that Senator A. Hall Johnston of Asheville, Buncombe county, will try to get enactment of a bill which would permit Buncombe county to hold an election and set up a county liquor store system such as is already in effect in 18 eastern counties. Other reports are that some of the other western counties, such as Henderson, Haywood and possibly Polk, may also make an effort to get liquor bills through, before the State Liquor Commission makes its report and before a state-wide liquor bill can be introduced.

But the prevailing belief here today is that members who want to introduce bills dealing with anything but unemployment insurance will need to be equipped with burglar tools and an acetylene torch outfit, in order to break through the almost impregnable barrier which the leaders in both houses are planning to erect to prevent the consideration of anything else but unemployment insurance.

For the old timers have no desire to see anything else come up in this special session and know that they might have to stay here more than ten days if the gates should be let down and the session develop into a general rabbit-chasing orgy. They know enough of this will be done when the regular session opens in January.

Accordingly, the first move which is expected to be made today after the senate and house get organized and ready for business, it is the introduction of a resolution which will bind the house and senate to the consideration of nothing but the unemployment insurance bill. If this resolution is adopted, as it is expected to be, it will solve the problem and effectually prevent the consideration of any other legislation at this session.

Even if this resolution fails of adoption by the assembly, however, it will still be possible for the presiding officers and leaders to hold the members in line and prevent their chasing rabbits by the introduction of other bills, it is pointed out.

One reason both Lieutenant Governor A. H. Graham and Speaker of the House R. Gregg Cherry decided not to appoint any committees at this special session, was because the absence of committees to which bills must be referred, would discourage the introduction of bills and hence make it more difficult to get any bills before either body, it is generally agreed.

The Speaker or the Lieutenant Governor can hence rule any member as being out of order if he should attempt to introduce a bill. Such a member would either have to sit down and give up his attempt to introduce a bill or appeal from the ruling of the chair—requiring a two-thirds vote and a procedure only rarely accomplished.

So the odds are decidedly against any members who might try to introduce bills of an extraneous nature which might divert the minds of the members from consideration of the unemployment insurance bill or bills which may be introduced. It is generally agreed especially since most observers feel sure a majority of the members are in favor of considering nothing else. Most of the members are also anxious to get back home as soon as possible both because of the nearness of Christmas and to get their business arranged so they can come back in January.

color's his whole life. Most of the unadjusted and delinquent children, most of the modern rebels against the very idea of home and family life, many of the inmates of sanitariums and frequenters of mental hygiene clinics are the products of unhappy and broken homes.

The home as an institution has not failed, nor has it lost its place and meaning. It is as necessary as it ever was, but no longer in quite the same way. Once it was a factory, a business, a training school. Today it should be a unifying center where one can experience life whole, and have a firm footing from which to start out on one's own adventures.

Home in the modern world is in a state of transition, not of decline.

BOY'S REVERSED SIGHT CORRECTING ITSELF

teacher, said special meetings caused transposition of his sight nerves.

Mark, who is left-handed, entered her special pupils' class and read and wrote backwards. He saw and wrote "cat" as "tac."

Mrs. McLaughlin said the boy's normal sight is returning so rapidly she thinks he'll be able to continue his studies in regular classes by next fall.

But Mark is happy that he can see "right" now because he wants to be a football player.

With that objective, he set out to become right-handed, as well as "right-eyed."

ANOTHER MILESTONE

The Reflector as a daily publication has passed another milestone, today entering its 43rd year in the daily newspaper field. For 13 years prior to becoming a daily The Reflector was published as a weekly and semi-weekly paper, so in reality the paper is 55 years old. During all these 55 years the control and operation of the paper has remained in the Whichard family.

At the beginning the founders of this paper felt that it would fill a need of this city and county and during the years that have followed the publishers have endeavored to keep step with the times in order that the paper might carry out the purpose for which it was established.

It is impossible to endeavor to recount here the growth and progress of this city and community since The Reflector came into existence but it is likewise interesting to note from the files of those long passed days that many of the dreams of those early days have come into being in this community. Our files present a continuous graphic picture of the forward march of this community and we are pleased that along with other progressive citizens and business establishments, we have had at least a small part in helping to bring these things to pass.

The first issue of The Reflector stated that the publication would be devoted to the upbuilding and betterment of Greenville and Pitt county, and in the years that have passed since that time, those in charge of the paper have endeavored to live up to this first statement of purpose.

On this our birthday, we wish to extend our grateful thanks to the people of this community whose patronage has made it possible for us to continue in business over this long period of years and we again emphasize our pledge to try to make our paper worthwhile to this community and pass up no opportunity to lend our aid at all times to those things that mean progress toward a bigger and better Greenville and Pitt County.

Wings for Sally

By BAILEY WOLFE

SYNOPSIS: Dark, handsome Philip Page returns to his boyhood home and buys the Warren-Courier. He backs the workmen of the Morris mill in their fight for better hours. Occasionally he squires Sally Warren, the attractive, thoughtful society editor who loses her fiancé, Terry Maynard, to her younger sister, Tip. Wealthy Mary Morris, who is pursuing Philip, despite his newspaper battle with her property-owning father, gets Sally to stay at her house a month as companion. Philip asks Sally to see McDonald, a workman in Milltown, for him.

Chapter 28

The Errand for Philip

IT was late afternoon when Sally left her desk clear and set out on her errand for Philip Page. Although the sun was low in the west, the August day was sultry and close. Rain had not fallen in some time and the blistering heat poured down on Warren, drying up the grass, blighting the flowers. The sidewalks were hot to the touch of the feet, and the few pedestrians hurried from one bit of shade to another.

Along the shady avenues of the older section of Warren, where Sally lived, people found some comfort under the spreading branches of great trees, or behind the awnings on broad porches. There the women sat through the afternoon on a playing bridge, drinking tea and gossiping. But in the poorer section of the town the people did not fare so well. Sally walked through streets where the houses were mean and crowded. The sun beat down mercilessly on the roofs or cheap tar paper coverings. Women sat in rockers or on the steps, fanning themselves with paper fans, brushing the flies from their babies, watching their children play, half-naked, up and down the red gullies that served as roads.

Before Sally had gone half the distance she had to walk, her white linen dress was wilted, and her face, under the wide yellow straw hat was burning with heat. She passed the Morris mill, where there was a smell of oil, and the noise of machinery. Several women stood in a doorway of the mill, trying to catch a breath of air. To Sally their faces seemed pinched and pale, their bodies appeared to droop, and they stared at her with dull, eyes.

As she turned in at the McDonald house, a little boy ran to meet her. It was little Joe, wearing just overalls, without shirt or shoes.

"Hello," he greeted her. "Member my?"

"Of course I do," said Sally. "How's your mother?"

"She's sick," said Joe. "The doctor comes to see her most every day."

"What's the matter?" Sally asked anxiously. She knew that the family could have nearly nothing to live on if May McDonald were kept from sewing.

"She's got to go to the hospital and be cut," said Joe. "Then she'll be well."

"But who's taking care of the children?"

"Lula Belle is. She's eleven and a half, now. She's real big."

Patience and Poverty

THEY went up the steps of the McDonald house, but this time the busy whir of the sewing machine did not greet Sally. Instead, a thin little girl was making a rhythmic noise with voice and chair rockers to soothe the baby that fretted in her arms.

May McDonald lay in the brass bed beneath the best crocheted coverlet. Sally was shocked to see how drawn her mouth was and how her skin had yellowed in the few days of her illness.

"Sit down, Miss Warren," said May. "You'll have to excuse the way the house looks. Lula Belle can't do everything, seems like."

"I had no idea you were sick or I'd have come before," said Sally.

"I did try to send you word," said May. "But they said you'd gone off to stay in Mr. Morris's house, I seen in the paper you been having a big wedding at your house, too."

"My sister was married," said Sally. Suddenly she was ashamed of the lavish spending for the wedding, ashamed of her own cool comfort at the Morris house, in the face of so much patience and such poverty.

"I bet the little girl was a pretty sight in her wedding dress," said May. "I made a wedding dress for a girl just before I was took sick. I guess I won't make no more soon."

"Yes, you will," said Sally. "It must be true, it had to be, that May would get well again."

May shook her head. "I'm old and wore out," she said. "They want to cut me at the hospital, but I hate to go off and leave Lula Belle. I hate to leave Lula Belle. I hate to leave Lula Belle. I hate to leave Lula Belle."

"Was it about your going to the hospital that you called Mr. Page?" asked Sally.

"No, honey. He can't do nothing about that," said May. She looked around nervously, although there was no one in the room but herself and Sally. "My husband sent for him—Mae wants to see Mr. Page."

"Mr. Page had to go out of town for a day or two," said Sally. "He sent me instead." "Mae won't talk to you, honey," said May. "It's real important. He's afraid to talk to you." "Then he'll have to wait for Mr. Page," said Sally, disappointed, but understanding McDonald's reluctance to talk to a strange girl. "Has he got work now?" she asked. "No child. Most of the men's gone back to the factory at whatever price they'll pay. But the foreman wouldn't take Mae back—nor any of the others that walked out and asked for more pay."

"It's About The Fire" "MR. MORRIS is angry," said Sally slowly. "I heard him say the other night he couldn't pay his workmen any more."

"That's not the truth," said May.

Where They Gathered

A favorite gathering place for writers was the Pilgrims' Club, and Ruyard Kipling was frequently there. Also Conan Doyle and H. G. Wells, who looked like "a bust of Shakespeare." G. K. Chesterton, "a great tub of a man who never seemed comfortable in his dress suit," was another of the literati who enjoyed the humor of the Pilgrims' club members, as was James M. Barrie, whom James Gordon Bennett once attempted to lure into a literary contest. Bennett wanted sensational stuff for his papers and he guaranteed the playwright $25,000 if he won, $10,000 if he lost. Barrie, in a rage, advised Bennett to go-you-know-where!

Henry Irving, Ellen Terry, Lily Langtry, Austin Brereton (who was Irving's Boswell), Duse, the Grand Duke Cyril (now Czar of all the Russias), all pass in review, spilling anecdotes and rosemary for remembrance.

So one comes back to the New York of the present, wondering whether the Cornells and the Hayeses of now will intrigue future gadsabouts as the Duses and the Langtrys do to us today.

Before Sally had walked half way to the McDonalds, her white linen was wilted.

Her gentle face was suddenly fierce with conviction. "It ain't so—not as long as the factory's running day and night with a big order. Not as long as he rides in a fine car and his girl hires folks from Tennessee to play the music for her parties."

May sank back on her pillow and closed her eyes. Sally was frightened at the white look around her mouth.

She held a glass to May's lips and May sipped a little of the tepid water. "I'm going now," said Sally. "I'll be back soon, and I'll send Mr. Page as soon as he gets back to town."

"That's mighty good of you," murmured May. Then, in a whisper, "Tell Mr. Page it's about the fire at the Palace theater Mac wants to see him about."

"I'll tell him," said Sally. She went outside. May's last words had disturbed her more than she admitted to herself. Surely McDonald, that blue-eyed, honest McDonald, had had nothing to do with burning the Palace theater which belonged to Mr. Morris. And yet—Sally looked around her at the dreadful poverty of the McDonalds—a man without a job, a man with a grievance and a sick wife, mightn't he be provoked to any violence against the rich man whom he thought had wronged him?

Sally pressed a quarter into little Joe's hand as she left. "Buy some oranges for your mother," she said. Joe dug his big toe into the dusty road. "Mom don't allow me to take money from nobody," he said stubbornly.

"But this is some money I owe her," said Sally, "for taking care of my sister one time you remember?" Joe's face brightened. "Sure, I remember," he said. "I guess it's all right, then."

Tomorrow, polite Gile. Benton takes Sally driving—with a purpose a book that, between then and midnight, was to acquaint one with scores of diverting characters... romantic divas and international jewel-thieves... adventurers whose bones lie scattered from here to Sholapur.

Seen By Roaming Writer

This was the diary of a foreign correspondent who moved with the seasons from Aix-les-Bains to Monte Carlo to London in the days when Caruso was alive and Sarajeva was just a name on a map. Melba, for instance, liked to check her public by giving interviews in bed... After becoming freed from an annoying "entanglement," Caruso triumphantly explained: "I am not a singer; I am a bachelor." One day in Paris the editor of a paper was startled to see a curious fellow "who spoke with an accent but claimed to be an American" enter his office. He was a magician, he said; quite a good one. He would be glad to give an entertainment in return for a little publicity. That was the man the world now remembers as Harry Houdini.

Mary Garden in those days "was a sort of chrysalis" from which the fascinating personality we know was later to emerge. At that time she was singing "Louise" in the Opera Comique. A. J. (Tony) Drexel was in London and distinguishing himself by chasing down four-alarm fires in a top hat.

Sir W. S. Gilbert could not appear in public without being wildly applauded.

SCOTT BEGINS TO WIELD AXE

Notifying Employees Their Services Not to Be Needed

Raleigh, Dec. 9.—W. Kerr Scott of Haw River, who will become Commissioner of Agriculture January 7, is losing no time in starting his promised clean-up and clean-out of the Department of Agriculture. For while he will not take office for almost 30 days yet, he has already notified a number of employees that their services will not be needed after he becomes head of the department.

Almost two weeks ago he announced that married women whose husbands have jobs and are able to support them will not be retained, also that he does not intend to keep more than one member of a family on the department's payroll.

Scott has had the employees of the Department of Agriculture on the pay roll and needles for several weeks and the worst cases of jitters to be found among any state employees are to be found in that department now, since most of those in the department still fear they will lose their jobs, even though they have not yet been notified.

The rumor is now going the rounds in the Department of Agriculture that even the unmarried women stenographers and clerks, if they smoke cigarettes, are likely to be fired. This is due to the fact that one of the first questions Scott has asked the employees he has interviewed—and he has talked to almost all of them within the last two weeks—is whether or not they smoke cigarettes. Some of the stenographers and clerks frankly admitted they smoked, others denied it, though their fingers showed plainly they did smoke, it is understood. After they had blushed and stammered a few moments, Scott would say:

"Well, it's all right with me if you smoke—I have no objections to it. I smoke cigars myself. I just wanted to know."

Scott has already indicated he intends to keep some of the employees of the department. But the prevailing belief is that a majority of those now employed there will not be retained.

REMEDY SUGGESTED FOR CALCIUM DEFICIENCY

Manhattan, Kas. (AP)—Deficiencies of calcium and phosphorus in rations due to the drought may seriously affect the health of mid-western dairy cows, Professor W. H. Riddell of Kansas State college says. To correct the deficiency he recommended a simple and inexpensive mineral mixture made of equal parts of finely ground limestone, steamed bone meal and common salt fed at the rate of three pounds to each 100 pounds of grain mixture.

Riddell says legume hays are excellent sources of calcium and wheat bran and high protein concentrates are the best sources for phosphorus.

Santa and the Viking

BY SIGRID ARNE

What how "thir?" she asked, irritated.

THE STORY SO FAR: Nils, a Viking, has stopped at Santa's township to rest from his search for his daughter, Gudrun, when a magic whistle gives him directions. He sets out again with Captain Buttons, a tin soldier, and Mister, a woolly dog.

our world, followed by her winds, she lingered outside our homes and stared longingly into our cozy rooms.

Several times she had enticed people to follow her to the north pole. But the best she could offer them was her spectacular storms, and the people soon sickened of the cold and left.

So the day came when the Ice Queen, riding a storm over Norway, saw Gudrun lying asleep on the steps of a cathedral. She swooped down, imprisoned the child in ice, and all the years that Nils had sought his daughter, the child had been in the Ice Queen's palace.

The queen knew of Nils' sorrowful wanderings, but each time she thought of him she shrugged her shoulders petulantly, and said, "Let him find another little girl." Now she planned to keep Gudrun if she possibly could.

Jeweled Buttons

Paris (AP)—Jewel-studded buttons achieve color accents for many of the new dark dresses. L'Etalon runs a row of gold-set sapphire buttons down both sides of a blistered black crepe dress. One of Chanel's new cashmere-printed cotton blouses has ruby-red buttons on a dark green foliage background.

Her Dearest Treasure.

"What howling is this?" she asked, irritated.

"Sweet mistress," whined the fox a little frightened, "there comes a man to the north who will take your dearest treasure."

"Who is he?" asked the Queen, starting forward on her throne.

"Nils of Norway," said the fox. "Ah," sighed the Queen with a crafty smile. "So-o-"

She ordered the snow fairies to stop dancing, and asked a guard to pull aside curtains hanging at the end of the room. There appeared an alcove of ice, and in it lay a great block of ice in which was imprisoned a little girl with golden hair, sound asleep. She was Gudrun, the daughter of Nils. For 300 years she had lain there asleep.

She was there because the Ice Queen had always hated her loneliness and isolated kingdom. In the winters when she came down to

N. Y. Stock Market

New York, Dec. 10.—(AP)—Settlements of England's romantic crisis with the abdication of the king today was followed by a burst of buying in the stock market.

In the trading rush many issues were pushed up fractions to two or more points and for a brief period the ticker tape fell three minutes behind dealings on the floor of the stock exchange.

Near the first hour, however, the pace slowed appreciably and the most conspicuous leaders reduced their gains.

Bonds improved moderately as did commodities. Cotton especially exhibited strength. Foreign currencies were slightly higher in terms of the dollar. At London securities rallied while the Paris bourse was a trifle unsettled.

L. J. CHAPMAN DIES IN HOSPITAL

He is survived by three daughters, Mrs. J. Ludlow Williams of Greenville, Mrs. Charles of Wilson and Miss Marie Chapman of Grifton; two sons, J. S. Chapman and L. J. Chapman, Jr., and three grand children.

DUKE OF YORK "FAMILY MAN"

(Continued from Page One) run round a field. Like the character in "Jorlocks" he sat a horse with ease, elegance and firmness until the animal moved—and then he generally fell off.

But "Bertie" kept trying and in 1929 Captain Drummond was able to say: "He is as good a rider to the hounds as anyone."

Stammering was, perhaps, the duke's greatest handicap. His inability to speak smoothly made him shy, sensitive and reserved. Because he never could be sure he would be able to utter the word "king" in his speeches during his father's reign, he substituted "his majesty" or "my father."

Facing a microphone leading to a battery of amplifiers, when opening an explosion in vast Wembley stadium in 1925, he began his address—but not a word did his audience hear. The current was off. He turned to the chairman at his side and, just as the electricians started the system, his voice rang through the loud-speakers. That was the climax of his difficulty. Soon afterwards he began an intensive two-year course of treatment and vocal exercises. For hours he would practice "ah" sounds. The reward for his effort came in 1927 when he went to Australia and, with fluent, unbroken speech, opened the new parliament building in Canberra.

Edward is known the world over as the Duke of York, though far less a public figure, has among his subjects more persons who know him from first-hand contact.

These contacts mainly grew out of hundreds of visits to factories and his famous boys' camps. Since 1921, with the exception of one year, he has been host to 403 boys on a fortnight's campaign vacation. Half of his guests have come from the factories and half from the great preparatory schools, including Eton and Harrow. When he was married he arranged for a number of his work-boy friends to be invited.

In camp he often took part in the rough-and-tumble games. Once a pushball match was arranged and the Duke of York was asked to referee.

"Referee be damned," he said. "I'm going to play."

He has visited industries the kingdom over. Employers often tried to make ceremonial occasions of these visits but the duke brushed ceremony aside and slipping into overalls, said he wanted to mingle with the workmen.

"It falls to my lot," he said once, "to hold many positions: I am president of hospitals and societies of every kind; I hold commissions in all three fighting services; I am a major, a boy scout, a driver, but I have never been invited to become a judge."

He has done almost everything from driving locomotives (one of his hobbies) to playing tennis at the Wimbledon championships.

Destined for the navy, ill health during the World war interrupted his service but he was under fire in the battle of Jutland and was cited for coolness in that action. After the war he went to Cambridge to study history, economics and civics. In all his work he has insisted on first-hand knowledge.

Once when he trekked down through London's east end he was affectionately "mugged" by a host of girls. One succeeded in kissing him.

Officials were horrified. "I've no bones broken," he commented. He showed a close interest in machinery—but he admitted: "I seem sometimes to place an evil spell on any machine in which I take an especial interest. Once, to my surprise and dismay, I was dropped in a lift (elevator). Another time, a supposedly foolproof stamping-machine ejected 40 unstamped envelopes for my benefit. The threads of looms, at times, break as I approach them."

"In spite of these things," employers, I am glad to find, are ready to welcome me in their midst."
