LEAGUE MOVES KEEP CONFLICT WITHIN SPAIN

Resolution Adopted After Stormy Council Session

WILL COOPERATE WITH COMMITTEE

Four Principal Points Understood To Have Been Contained In League Proposal

Geneva, Dec. 12.—(AP)—After a stormy, secret session the League of Nations council agreed today on a resolution designed to isolate the Spanish civil war.

The resolution was understood to contain four principal points:

First, recognition of the Valencia government's appeal to the league to recognize the war as a danger to international peace.

Second, support of a more rigid system of international control to prevent foreign assistance to either warring faction.

Third, approval of Franco-British suggestion for mediation of the war.

Fourth, recommendation of co-operative action by the league and other international bodies, including the London non-intervention committee, in attempting to halt the civil conflict.

Former Member of College Infirmary Claimed by Death

Funeral Services For Miss Annie Morris Conducted In La Grange; Burial Made in Durham

Miss Annie Morris, from 1926-1934 head of the East Carolina Teachers College infirmary here, died in Whortonville at the home of a relative, at 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon.

Funeral services were held in La Grange this morning and she was taken to Durham, her former home, for burial.

Miss Morton, dean of women; Miss Mary Lee Smith, who was Miss Morris's assistant in the infirmary and had her nurse's training under her; and Misses Moore, Wahl, and Jenkins represented the College at the funeral. Misses Smith and Moore went to Durham.

The funeral services were conducted by Rev. J. C. Humble, pastor of the Methodist church, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. N. Parks, cousins of Miss Morris. A sextette composed of Mesdames N. D. Harper, Lenore Barwick and W. L. Johnson and Messrs. Wade Ferguson, J. P. Joyner, and J. H. Rouse, all of La Grange sang two beautiful songs.

The pallbearers were Dr. M. L. Carr, W. N. Parks, Don Slade, Clem Ireland, Milton Walters and W. R. Crews.

In addition to her service at the infirmary here, Miss Morris was superintendent of the Moore-Herring Hospital in Wilson for thirteen years. She received her training as a nurse at the Wilson Sanatorium.

She spent years in private nursing. She retired from active work two years ago because of failing health. She was born in Craven county, but her family moved to Durham. Most of her active mature life was spent in Wilson, where she had hosts of friends, among whom are former patients and nurses, who had their training under her. To these were added members of the faculty and hundreds of College girls. She was an efficient and popular superintendent, and institutional administrative officer. She was noted for her work among the poor, seeing their needs, first hand and giving personal aid.

SESSION EASES HOEY'S BURDEN

Enactment of Unemployment Program to Be Helpful

Reflector Bureau.
Sir Walter Hotel.

Raleigh, Dec. 12.—The enactment of the unemployment insurance bill, which is expected to become law by Wednesday, is going to be of great help to Governor-elect Clyde R. Hoey from a political standpoint, since it makes it mandatory for him to appoint two members of a three-member commission at from $5,000 to $6,000 a year each, it is being pointed out.

Per while the law leaves the fixing of the salaries of the chairman and members of the commission to the Governor and Council of State, the general belief is that the chairman of the new Unemployment Compensation Commission will probably get a salary of $6,000 a year and the other appointive member $5,000 a year. The third member of the commission is the State Commissioner of Labor, who is an elected state officer and will hence serve on the new commission without additional pay.

It is expected that the attention of those whose mouths have been watering for one of the thirty or more appointive jobs which Mr. Hoey already has the power to fill, and which are already occupied, will now be turned to these new jobs. It is also expected that since the new commission will need from a score to a hundred or more clerks, stenographers, accountants and so forth, that it will make it possible for Mr. Hoey to help many job seekers get jobs who otherwise might not be able to get the pie counter.

For while all of the employees of the new commission must eventually pass civil service examinations before getting permanent jobs, temporary employes may be appointed for not more than six months. Within that period they may take the civil service examinations required and if they pass, will be assured of having permanent jobs.

Accordingly, the enactment of this law is regarded as helping Mr. Hoey by giving him more patronage to dispense. It is also regarded as a definite help to present holders of appointive office, since it is expected to decrease the demand upon Mr. Hoey to make changes in these jobs. Still another advantage of the situation is that the salaries of the two commission members and of all the employes will be paid from Federal funds rather than from state funds.

HOUSE PASSES SECURITY BILL BY 111-0 VOTE

Many Solons Return Home to Await Regular Session

SENATE TO GET ACT ON MONDAY

Only Eight Senators On Hand for Satur- day Session of Up- per Branch

Raleigh, Dec. 12.—(AP)—Without a dissenting vote, the House passed the administration's unemployment insurance bill on third reading today and sent it to the Senate. The vote was 111 to 0.

The Senate will meet Monday to take up the measure and leaders predicted it would become a law by Wednesday unless the upper branch of the General Assembly materially amends it.

Revenue bills necessarily must pass three readings on separate days in each House. The bill encountered no opposition in its passage through the House.

Eight senators in a three-minute session this morning with Lieut.-A. H. Graham presiding, adjourned that body until 2:30 Monday afternoon.

There was no daylight House session as the representatives held the day's session required by the constitution at 12:05 a. m.—five minutes after last midnight.

HEAVY LOSS IN CHICAGO FIRE

Blaze At Union Stock- yards Brought Un- der Control

Chicago, Dec. 12.—(AP)—Firemen early today brought under control a fire which destroyed sheep and cattle holding pens on the western edge of the Union stockyards, causing damage deputy fire marshal Anthony Mullaney estimated at $50,000.

Starting in a wooden sheep barn, the flames spread to an area a block long and 500 feet deep. Firemen fought the flames from a fire truck of the Chicago junction railroad. The railroad right-of-way helped check spread of the blaze and it was under control about an hour and a half after the first alarm.

Grifton, Dec. 12.—The funeral of Laurie J. Chapman, 79, prominent business man and leader of this community, was held from the late residence Friday morning at 11 o'clock. Rev. Perry Case, pastor of the Grifton Christian church, of which Mr. Chapman was a lifelong member, conducted the service.

Chinese National Government Calls For War On Japan

Authoritative Sources Declare Gen- eralissimo Chiang Kai Shek Rush- ed to 'Take Control'

Shanghai, Dec. 13. (Sunday).—(AP)—Authoritative Chinese dispatches from Sianfu today said Generalissimo Chiang Kai Shek, Chinese premier, had hurried to that place to "take control" after an estimated 3,000 Shensi provincial troops had mutinied.

Tokyo, Dec. 13. (Sunday).—(AP)—The Domei (Japanese) news agency, in a dispatch from Shanghai today, said the Chinese marshal, Hsiao-ling, who kidnapped Chang Kai Shek, the premier of China at Sianfu, had issued a circular telegram demanding immediate war against Japan by the Chinese National government.

The Domei agency asserted the young Chinese marshal also demanded emergency measures be taken to cope with a grave crisis, and said the rebels guaranteed Chiang Kai Shek's life.

Replying to Marshal Chiang demands Domei quoted the national government as saying: "The national government fully appreciates the young marshal's proposals but the national government first desires the immediate release of Chiang Kai Shek."

"After that it will discuss emergency measures in connection with the young marshal's demands."

Censorship reportedly was imposed at Shanghai by the Chinese government.

TWO BROTHERS FOLLOW PATHS NEW FOR EACH

King George, VI, Be- gins Duties As New Monarch

EDWARD AT SEA ON DESTROYER

Coronation Officially Announced For May 12, Date Originally Set For Former King

London, Dec. 12.—(AP)—The British destroyer Fury took Edward of England to guard Quai at Boulogne-Sur-Mer, France to start his lonely wait for happiness today, while medieval heralds proclaimed George VI as British king.

The destroyer tied up at 4 p. m. at the Boulogne dock near which an especially reserved sleeping car was standing. The car it was believed would be coupled to the Calais-Basel express to carry the Duke of Windsor as far Zurich, Switzerland.

Edward could not be identified.

London, Dec. 12.—(AP)—King George, VI, will be crowned May 12, next, in coronation ceremonies originally planned for his brother, King Edward.

Official announcement of the coronation plans was made today shortly before the new ruler was proclaimed the British king in public ceremonies.

Personnel attending the coronation next year will not be required to wear coronets of the present monarch bring a queen to the throne with him.

Edward's ship from the Quai and it was believed he would remain there until train time.

From Biou his path may lead to Austria or Italy to the Danubian coast or elsewhere where he chooses to wait for Wallis Warfield, his bride, and a peaceful spread out before the musty battlements of St. James while trumpets shrilled and Sir Gerald Wollaston proclaimed George VI, the only lawful liege lord of 485,000,000 people.

At the world-watched Villa near Cannes, Wallis-Simpson let it be known she does not know where her betrothed is going that she has no plans to join him until she is free. Her diligent escort, Lord Brownlow turned back toward England.

London, Dec. 12.—(AP)—Brothers of Windsor—George, VI, the King and Edward, the man who acted a dual drama of duty and freedom today: The king, amid the trappings and pomp of another age, the man, alone on the ship, lashed decks of a British war ship, Sovereign, almost unguarded to the musty, brick walls and terrace of the old St. James palace to stride before the vast crimson and gold throne and hear:

"I, x x the high and mighty Prince Albert Frederick Arthur George is now by the grace of God become our only and lawful and rightful liege lord as King George, VI, x x x."

Aboard the destroyer fury, bound for Boulogne—or elsewhere—was Edward. Around the empire he renounced for "the woman I love," Wallis Warfield Simpson, there still echoed his cry before a listening world: "God bless you all God save the King!"

There were reports the Fury's foaming prow was pointed for the Mediterranean, perhaps for Italy.

It may well be—and from Mrs. Simpson at Cannes came every indication—that the man who was king and his American betrothed may not meet until the day late next April when the woman Edward loves is free to wed.

Man About Manhattan

By George Tucker. New York - The manager of a Broadway musical show tells of circulating a questionnaire among the mademoiselles of the chorus in order to obtain data for ballroom purposes.

Name: "Taliah." Sex: "Female." Age: "Really 24 but 22 for the newspapers."

Nationality: "Hungarian with some Arabian." Part in French Casino: "Dancer."

Where have you played before: "Budapest, Warsaw, Berlin, Zurich, Riga, Bruxelles, Lieg. Prag, and coming to America on the Normandie."

How did you decide on show business as a career: "I was always talented to show business directly bonded. Never learned dancing. I arranged the dances what I do and my sister learned from me."

Relate any interesting experiences you have had in private life: "I was in the bus talking Hungarian with my sister and one good looking man spoke to us in our language, and in my minute asked me to marry, but I refused him, because one German is waiting in Berlin already and in 4 years marry me. When I was 16, school girl, I was fugitive from home to one other town to dance in theater, and I had there already great success 3 days when policeman was coming, and after my dance have taken me to the prison, and in the morning my sorrowful mother came and carried the bad child to home. The newspapers written about that and I was so ashamed, but always said I directly show to everybody. I'll be an artist and nothing to do with me. And after any years happened, and my mother is happy too."

What is your ambition: "My only ambition is to play one great Egyptian film about the life of the famous Queen Nofretite (her statue is in the Berlin Neues museum) and everybody say I'm her incarnation because I've the same head, the same body, the same looking like she, and I've the only desire to play her interesting, nice, sentimental film in film. I must do it and I'll sure do, when it's the now plus ultra my dreams."

In case you'd like to check up on Taliah's sister, Mily, she cast her net with the theater because: "My sister and me, we are the same looking, and she made from me dances, and I like this life very much. I've no experience in love because I'm always with my sister, and when she was interested already in another love, I've seen, they love in me my sister. So I'm waiting for somebody who will love just me, but I'm afraid I've long wait, because I've observe the man love women with lots experiences."

As for Mily's hopes for the future, she wishes: "To be my sister's secretary, when she'll be film star, and marry a nice, rich man, who loves me and I too. But not one of them, who are in love with my sister."

Talks To Parents

Only Child. An only child is at a disadvantage, and the disadvantage extends to his parents. Of course if one can have but one child there is no help for it, but deliberately to limit one's self to an only child is short-sighted and generally unfair to all parties concerned.

To say that one's means are inadequate, and that there is only so much money available to give education to one child is really no excuse. People seldom know how much they are capable of earning until they have to earn it. Where as at the moment there seems enough for only one child, some years hence there may well be enough for several, but the time for the children to come will be past.

Furthermore, no material or educational advantages can make up for the handicap of being an only child. Always to play alone, to know no one with whom to share secrets and sorrows, to live exclusively with adults to be the sole object of attention and anxiety, the focus of worry in the home, these are just a few of the only child's possible burdens. Of course he can make friends outside the home, but they are poor substitutes for sisters and brothers, some and the home itself is still lonely.

Wings for Sally

SYNOPSIS: Dark, handsome Philip Page buys the Warrenton Courier and campaigns for better living conditions, backing the workmen of the Morris mill in their fight for better homes. He is assisted by Sally Warren, the attractive society editor, whom he admires. Sally is a house guest at the home of wealthy Mary Morris who pursues Philip despite her father's battle with him. Giles Benton, a new arrival in the employ of Morris, takes Sally for a drive. On returning, they glimpse at the gate a man in work clothes who resembles McDonald, a former mill worker suspected of burning Morris' theater.

Chapter 30 The Truth About Benton

"Do you know that fellow?" demanded Giles as the man in work clothes disappeared in the dark. "No," said Sally. She could not explain what prompted the lie, perhaps some feeling of uncertainty that she had really recognized McDonald.

"It's not the night watchman," said Giles. "I've talked to him."

"Perhaps he came to see the night watchman," said Sally hopefully. If the man was really McDonald, then he certainly had some legitimate reason for being at the Morris house. But what could he want there at midnight? If he had come to see Sally, he would hardly have come at that hour, nor would he have retreated so hastily at sight of the car.

Giles Benton left Sally at the front door. "I'm going to find the night watchman," he said. "Morris has information around to keep just such fellows as that out of the grounds. He'll have to do some explaining if the fellow wasn't a friend of his."

Giles spoke with such authority that one would have thought Mr. Morris had delegated to him the power of instructing the servants. Sally went into the library to wait for Giles' return. He was not long in coming.

"The night watchman was having a bottle of beer in the kitchen," he said grimly. "If there's another threatening letter for Morris, perhaps we'll know who left it."

"But surely the blackmail letters are not left on the doorstep," said Sally. "I thought they came through the mail."

"They did at first," said Giles. "But the last one was left here in the library. No one knows how."

Sally shivered. The library, steeped in shadow except for the one corner she had lighted, seemed capable of harboring a dozen criminals. She was glad when Mary and Bob Dawes arrived. Mary listened with wide eyes to Giles' story of the figure they had seen skulking in the driveway.

"Why it's like a detective story!" she exclaimed. "Let's turn on all the lights and search for a letter with a skull and crossbones on it."

With Mary in the lead, they searched the big house for any sign that the man in the driveway had entered. To Sally's relief, they found nothing. The search ended with a raid on the ice-box.

A Call From Philip

THREE uneventful days passed, with Philip still away. On the third evening, as Sally was having coffee on the terrace with Mary and Giles Benton, a telephone call came for Sally.

"Sally!" She recognized Philip's voice with a feeling of glad relief. There were so many things she had to tell him—things that puzzled her. "I'm so glad you've come!" Sally could not keep the relief out of her voice.

"And I'm glad to have some other welcome than the slack of mail on my desk," said Philip. "Can you come to the office for awhile?"

"Of course, I'll be down in a jiffy," Sally ran out happily to speak to Mary. "I've got to go to the office, business."

"Philip Page is back in town, then," said Mary eagerly. "Yes, he's probably got a dozen letters for me to do tonight."

"I'll run you down to the office," Giles Benton offered. Sally said she would walk, but he insisted on taking her.

"I hear Page is a hard taskmaster," said Giles, "and can't afford to pay good salaries."

"He pays enough," said Sally. "Everybody in the office would work for him, no matter how little he could pay."

"He must be a remarkable man to inspire such loyalty," said Giles. As Sally got out of the car, he said in his usual smooth voice: "Have lunch with me tomorrow, will you?"

"I may not have but half an hour," said Sally. "Mr. Page does allow you a little time for lunch, though."

Sally could not bring herself to be ungracious to Giles, and she was anxious to see Philip.

"I was only warning you that I can't have lunch in the leisurely style Mary has it. But if you'll stop for me at one—"

"I'll be delighted," said Giles. Sally found Philip at his desk, which was in riotous disorder. He looked up with a smile as she came in. "It's good of you to give up your

Santa and the Viking

BY SIGRID ARNE

THE STORY SO FAR: Santa has sent two toys along with Nils, a Viking, to rescue his daughter, who is imprisoned by the Ice Queen. Mister, a toy pup, has decided to invade the Queen's palace all alone.

CHAPTER VI Mister in Danger. Mister the woolly pup, was so brave he never stopped to think he might be harmed in the Ice Queen's palace. He rushed down the snowy hill outside the palace leaving Nils and Captain Buttons behind him.

His fat paws scuffed up the snow as he ran through the great gates of the castle, and on into the long chilly halls. But, as he drew near the throne room, he grew a little more cautious. He could hear the queen's winds moaning, and he crouched down and crawled quietly to the throne room doors.

But when he saw those long gray winds of the queen racing around the room, he lost all his caution. He hopped into the air and caught one between his little white teeth. The wind howled, but Mister hung onto him.

Fairy Queen to the Rescue. Of course, the other winds came to the rescue of their brother, and they tossed Mister high against the arched ceiling, and then out thru the chimney into the cold, gray sky.

"Poo-oo, drop him hard on the lead," shouted the wind in the lead.

"Where-ee?" answered the other winds. Mister would have been badly hurt if the Fairy Queen hadn't come to his rescue. She was still riding quietly on Nils' helmet. But she saw Mister, tossed about by the winds, and she flew to Nils' shoulder and whispered softly into his ear. "Look up!" Nils did look up, and there to

EXPLAINS WAY TO CURE MEAT

Farmers Gather At Winterville For Discussions

A group of Pitt county farmers gathered at the agriculture building at Winterville today for a demonstration in killing and curing meat on the farm. The hogs were prepared by J. H. Mobley, agricultural teacher at the Winterville school, and the discussion was led by R. E. Nance, meat specialist at N. C. State college.

Mr. Nance opened the discussion by declaring that at this time of the year every farmer is faced with the problem of killing, cutting and curing his pork for the coming year. "It is a task most of you dread, simply because it is usually a long, drawn-out, tedious task," he said, adding, "too, the average farmer is not sure he is following the best method. Usually he just salts his meat and trusts to luck that it doesn't spoil."

He first listed the necessary tools for the task, including knives for butchering, skinning and boning, several hog gambrel sticks, two bell shaped hog scrapers and one 28-inch meat saw.

He explained that the average dressing percentage for hogs, the proportion of chilled dressed carcass to live weight, should run from 70 to 80 per cent.

It was explained that no hog should be fed for 24 hours before killing, but should be given plenty of water. It was advised never to overheat or excite the animal before killing it.

Best results in scalding, it was declared, can be obtained by using water at a temperature of 150 degrees. In cold weather this may be reached by adding one bucket of cold water to about a half barrel of boiling water. Oak barrels were advised.

As to curing the meat farmers were told "common salt is the basis of all meat curing. Sugar is sometimes used to give a better flavor and to counteract the action of the salt by keeping the muscles soft, where salt alone makes them hard. Salt peter (potassium nitrate) may be added to give a natural red color and it also has some preserving qualities. In all cures it is absolutely sure that the meat has all the animal heat out of it and that it has not been frozen. Cure in a cool, well ventilated place."

EXTRA SESSION HAS BENEFITS

Leaders and Lobbyists Sizing Up New Members

Raleigh, Dec. 12.—The special session of the general assembly now meeting here is a windfall to the party leaders and especially to the lobbyists, most observers here agree since it is giving them an opportunity to get acquainted with the new members and get them "sized up" before the regular sessions opens in January.

It is conceded that both Speaker of the House R. Gregg Cherry and Lieutenant Governor-elect W. P. Horton are especially glad of this opportunity to meet the new members of the senate and house, look them over and observe them at work. It is believed that quite a number of new members are likely to get unexpectedly good committee assignments as a result of being "on parade" for a week or ten days before the regular session starts, while some others probably will not get as good committee assignments as they otherwise might have had.

But the lobbyists are like pigs in clover or bees in a honeysuckle vine. These members of "the third house" as they are referred to, started arriving the day after the call for the special session was issued before the members of the body established in the best hotel suites before the members of the general assembly started to arrive.

Assembly Speaker
"The Personality of the Mississippi River" as described by Miss Emma Hooper, of the English department, entertained the student body of the College yesterday during the assembly hour. Since a greater part of her life has been closely associated with the river, her experiences and descriptions were very vividly told.

Something of the size of the River and its tributaries, the size of the bridges that span it, its discovery by DeSoto, and its early history, helped the students to visualize the river as it is today.

"The Mississippi River is like a book," Miss Hooper brought out "because one must read all parts of it. If one cannot read it, he is entirely lost."

Miss Hooper explained how the river is a thing of usefulness, a being of service, and a person of companionship.

"Personality," she said "is that quality that causes a person to be remembered, to be sought again, to be talked about and to be written about." Then truly the Mississippi does have personality.

"As we read of the progress that is being made, we see how the education of man is like the conquest of the river—straight and narrow but very deep, free for service, happy in giving, controlled in his passions. Only thus, can the fine personality of man or river fulfill its place in the Creator's scheme of things," she said.

In concluding she said that in a few days she hoped to be riding along the Rivers' driveway that will be lighted by many colored lights and to see the river, not at flood tide of terror, but in its normal height and in the peaceful mood of the Christmas season.

"Smilin' Through" Presented
Matinee and evening performances of "Smilin' Through," by Allan Langdon Martin, were presented by the senior class in the Austin auditorium yesterday.

The story was based upon a love tragedy which occurred in the Cartaret garden fifty years before the time of the play.

After a Prologue, which featured Saxon Bray and Maribland Albritton as angels at the gateway to the Cartaret home, the first act revealed the love of Kenneth Wayne, played by Alvah Page, for Kathleen Dennonang, played by Bonnie Mae Hall. Kathleen's uncle, John Cartaret (Bill Pratt), forbids Kathleen to see Kenneth, for reasons which remain mysterious.

Kathleen finally induces her Uncle John to explain his hatred for Kenneth, and in the second act, the genes flashes back to the same garden fifty years before. It is John Cartaret's wedding night. He and his young bride-to-be, Moonycene Clare (Effie Lee Watson), are in the garden. Jeremiah Wayne, Moonycene's rejected suitor (Joe Hefert), enters the garden, and in his effort to kill John, shoots Moonycene, who dies in John's arms.

In the last act, Kenneth returns from the war, crippled. Uncle John reverts, and Kathleen realizes her love. Uncle John dies and his youthful form withdraws from the corpse to meet Moonycene at the gateway. Bill Pratt as John Cartaret turned in a finished and convincing performance. As a young man he was sufficiently dashing and romantic, while as an embittered old man his continuously pecking stick gave him a professional air. As the murderous Jeremiah Wayne, Joe Hatem, gave a gripping representation. His rich, deep voice is well-adapted to the part. Marian Wood, as Mary, and Frances Barnes, as Ellen, showed graceful stage presence and Alvah Page played the part of Kenneth Wayne adequately.

The direction of Clifton Britton gave the play convincing movement, which was at times slow, especially in the scenes which involved John Cartaret and Doctor Harding (Gilbert Britt).

The scene-makers more nearly achieved the professional level than other division of the production staff. The Irish house and garden were neatly executed under the supervision of Roy Barrow.

The lighting, arranged by John Crow, was altogether experimental. The spots failed to focus properly and the heavenly bodies played peculiar stunts in illuminating the garden.

Music was provided by Nola Walter, Wesley Bankston and Wayne Whittington.

From the standpoint of entertainment, the play was an unquestionable success.

SEN. GRAVELEY MAY GET POST

Being Considered for Chairman Appropriations Group
Reflector Bureau, Sir Walter Hotel.

By J. C. BASKERVILLE
Raleigh, Dec. 12.—Talk going the rounds in political circles here is to the effect that Senator Lee T. Graveley of Rocky Mount, Nash county, is likely to be appointed chairman of the senate appropriations committee—the same committee of which he was chairman during the 1935 session.

Until the last few days, the belief has been general that Graveley was not likely to get a major committee chairmanship this time, due to the fact that he did not support Lieutenant Governor W. P. Horton in the primary but backed Paul D. Grady instead, who was defeated.

Grady had supported Horton, he would now be in line for chairman of the senate finance committee, regarded as the most desired committee chairmanship in the senate. Likewise, if Grady had been elected Lieutenant Governor instead of Horton, there is little doubt that that Grady would have been selected to head the finance committee.

But the fact that Graveley bet on the losing horse in the race for Lieutenant Governor, combined with the fact that he and Horton frequently got into some pretty bitter clashes in the senate in 1935, has caused most observers to believe in this session Graveley would pay the price of being on the wrong side of the political fence in the contest for Lieutenant Governor and hence would be left out in the cold when the better committee chairmanships are passed out by Lieut. Gov. Horton.

Another factor causing a good many to take this view was that Graveley made himself rather unpopular with a good many of the senate members two years ago by his talkativeness and fence-straddling.

Within the last few days, however, there are reports that Graveley and Horton have decided to let bygones be bygones and that Horton is now seriously considering Graveley for chairman of the appropriations committee. One reason for this reconciliation, observers believe, is that Graveley is admittedly one of the ablest floor leaders and has one of the most brilliant legislative minds ever seen in a legislative session and has outstanding ability both in handling committee hearings and in steering a bill through debate in the senate. The fact that he was chairman of the appropriations committee during the 1935 session and has since been a member of the Advisory Budget Commission for two years, makes him better qualified to handle this important and difficult committee than any other member of the senate, it is said.

In fact, most observers consider him better qualified to be chairman of the senate finance committee than any other senator and believe he would be named as head of the finance committee but for the fact that he bet on the wrong horse in the primary.

Still another reason why a good many here now believe Lieut. Governor Horton will name Graveley as chairman of the appropriations committee is that Horton knows Graveley's ability as an opponent as well as an ally and hence knows it is better to have him as a friend than as an enemy. There has probably never been a member of the senate who could make it more uncomfortable for those who oppose him or to whom he is opposed than Graveley, most observers agree. If Horton should ignore Graveley in making committee assignments, the chances are that Graveley would not feel any too friendly towards the new Lieutenant Governor and that as a result he might make things very unpleasant for him.

How's Your Health?
Edited for the New York Academy of Medicine

Forgetting
Matthew Arnold said, "We forget because we must and not because we will."

He anticipated modern psychological thought, which maintains that forgetting, from the mild degree witnessed when an appointment is missed or a promise not kept, to total amnesia, represents a significant psychological mechanism by which the individual seeks to escape an unpleasant reality.

Freud propounded the theory that what he terms the minor slips such as mis-speaking, mis-hearing, mis-reading, are not simple accidents, but are caused by and are revelations of the emotional attitude of the individual to the particular elements involved.

Thus the man who is forced by someone anxious about his catching cold to carry an umbrella or to wear overboes, is particularly likely to misplace and forget them. The appointment which is missed is likely to have been one not looked forward to with any joyous eagerness. The failure to remember a well known name usually indicates that the individual or some associated element carries an extraordinary emotional charge.

The more serious degrees of forgetting, those which we call amnesia, have the same type of causation which, however, is of a more involved nature. In the most marked degree of amnesia, where the individual has lost contact with his immediate world, when he is unable to tell who he is, where he came from, and what he is doing, we are likely to find an antecedent history of some extremely trying or painful situation which the victim was not capable of meeting.

In many such cases, hypnosis is effective in breaking through the amnesia and in uncovering its preceding difficulty.

Amnesia varies in degrees. The loss of memory may be limited to recent or remote events.

Certain amnesias are due to specific injuries or illnesses. Usually such losses of memory extend over a definite period. The person suffering with the delirium of illness, for example, is likely to have an amnesia which has a definite beginning, and also a fairly definite ending. Such is known as retrograde amnesia.

In the senile individual, we sometimes encounter what is known as anterograde amnesia. In this state the patient seems no longer able to store up memories, and the amnesia is continuous, the individual forgetting what had but just transpired. Oddly, such a person may recall clearly and correctly the events of his early lifetime.

The number of persons employed in 1308 Kansas industries decreased one-half per cent during October but payrolls increased two per cent.

Hollywood Sights And Sounds
By Robbin Coons

Hollywood—"Playing House" is actually an accredited endeavor in the movies.

Grown men do it, and get paid for it. Walk into the office of practically any movie studio art director and you're likely to catch him in the act. He may have his desk, tables, chairs, and even the floors littered with cardboard models of houses, flats, apartments, penthouses, medieval castles, or Quatchproof shanties.

Not all of these at once, of course, or at least not all in the same room. Your art director keeps his models for one picture all in one place. When they are all completed, there wouldn't be room for models of sets for another picture, anyway.

These models represent big business, even if they look like toys for a child's playroom. Here in Art Director Alexander Toluboff's desk—which is today's example—is a honeymoon house to which (when he is "blown up" to life size on a real set) Henry Fonda will lead his bride Sylvia Sydney in the picture "You Only Live Once." The house is a rambling two-story structure with garden and trees outside, and very beautifully furnished in miniature with chairs, beds, rug, book-cases, stairs and draperies.

Toluboff who was an architect before he became a movie art director, designs these sets to scale and has them fashioned by experts working under his supervision. For this particular film there are 40 different sets, and Toluboff expects to have models of most of them.

Making a "doll house" saves money and time. When Effie Lang, who is directing, comes in to see the set he may have a suggestion or a change. If the real set is up, that would mean money. The camera man comes in and figures out his "angles." The set dressers take a look and start working on the materials and furnishings they will need.

The chief electrician can tell from the doll's house, where to spot his lights. Lang can plan the movements of his characters, decide whether Miss Sydney shall walk up stairs as she says a line of dialogue, or be sitting in a chair in that cozy fireside group. And the producer, can see how it all stacks up. After all this, they can go ahead and build the set and know that it pleases everybody.

When an art director takes on a "spectacle film" he is even more likely than usual to "play house" before building a set. For "The Crusader" one of the most elaborate medieval castles took shape in a cardboard miniature on a workman's table long before the lot heard the sound of hammer and saw in actual construction. The infinite detail lavished on the models was never more apparent than here. They carved the figures (representing actors) from soap so they would have "roundness" and reality—and then dressed them and applied make-up!

THING CONTROL OF LIQUOR TO BE LEFT IN COUNTIES

in order to insure uniform procedure in the operation of liquor stores throughout the state and to prevent inter-county competition for the liquor trade.

A good many members believe this system is advisable and that it would help rather than hurt the counties, provided the revenue from the sale of liquor is left in the counties.

The "drys" in both houses, however, are expected to oppose any and all liquor control plans which may be presented—and there are still a number of "drys" in both houses, though regarded as decidedly in the minority this time. It is already being pointed out that in

Legislature Must Set Up Security Administration

Reflector Bureau, Sir Walter Hotel. By J. C. BASKERVILL

Raleigh, Dec. —An administrative agency must be set up for the collection of the state unemployment insurance tax by the special session of the general assembly which will convene here at 11:00 o'clock tomorrow morning, in addition to the levying of the tax of nine-tenths of one per cent on the payrolls of all employers who come under the Federal law, it was learned here today.

It is expected that this agency will be designated as the North Carolina Unemployment Insurance Commission and that it will be composed of three members, two of whom may be ex-officio members, but with an all-time chairman, to be appointed by the Governor. This commission will not only collect the state unemployment tax from employers, but will administer the law.

It was believed for a while that the bill which will be presented to the special legislative session would not do more than levy the tax and leave the question of administrative machinery up to the regular session. But it was learned here today that the Federal law and the Social Security Board insist that the administrative machinery be set up in the same law which imposes the tax.

Accordingly, it is now agreed that not only must the state tax of nine-tenths of one per cent be imposed before December 30, but that the State Unemployment Insurance Commission, composed of not less than three men, must be appointed to collect this tax and administer the law and that these appointments must be made and announced before December 30. In other states which already have unemployment insurance laws, the commissions are composed for the most part of three men, though in some they have five members.

While the general assembly may direct that the commission named to collect the tax and administer the unemployment insurance law be composed either of some ex-officio members or of appointees with no other connections, the belief in most circles here today is that the bill will propose that the Commissioner of Labor and the Chairman of the Industrial Commission be named ex-officio members of the Unemployment Insurance Commission, while the chairman be a full-time officer, appointed by the Governor. The chairman and all of the salaried employees of the commission will be paid out of the administrative fund set up in Washington, and not from state funds. If the other two members of the commission are state officials receiving salaries from the state, they would serve on this commission without further compensation.

While the appointment of the chairman of this commission will have to be made before December 30, and hence be made by Governor J. C. B. Ehringhaus, it is generally agreed that the appointment will in reality be made by Governor-elect Clyde R. Hoey and that Governor Ehringhaus will confer with Mr. Hoey and abide by his wishes in making the appointment.

While the Unemployment Insurance Commission may eventually become almost as large an organization as the North Carolina Industrial Commission, which administers the state workmen's compensation law, it is expected that for the first two years the unemployment insurance commission will be little more than a skeleton organization, since all it will have to do will be to collect the tax from employers, certify the fact that they have paid their tax to the Social Security Board in Washington and then relay the revenue from this tax to Washington, where it will be held to the credit of the state.

For no benefits or claims will be paid under this law until it has been in effect for two years. Hence the Unemployment Insurance Commission will be nothing but a tax collecting agency until January 1, 1939. After that date it will administer or at least supervise the payments of benefits under the law and pass on all claims.

Assuming that the special session of the general assembly passes this law by December 19 or 21 and that the commission is appointed immediately, it will then have only until January 30, 1937, to collect the tax from all employers in the state subject to it and certify the payment of the tax to Washington. It is believed, however, that a record of all the employers who are subject to the tax and the amounts due can be obtained from the Social Security Board in Washington, so that this task will not be as complicated as it otherwise would be.

Home Harder To Run Than A Bank Harrison, Ark. (AP)—Operating a bank is a "soft job" compared with running a house, says Mrs. Agnes Shinn who does both. Mrs. Shinn, who five years ago inherited a bank presidency at the death of her husband, reflects: "Mothering six children, seven-in-laws and four grandchildren is my biggest job."

She says the secret of successful banking is "being careful with the people's money." Second in command at the bank Mrs. Shinn directs is another woman, Vice-President Jobelle Holcomb.
