Local Young Man Slightly Injured In Automobile Wreck

Joe Smith, Jr., Overturns Car After Swerving From Road to Avoid Hitting Wood on Highway

Joe Smith, Jr., 19-year-old Greenville student of Wake Forest college, home for the holidays, escaped serious injury last night when he drove his car off the highway to avoid hitting some cord wood in the middle of the highway.

The accident occurred about 11:30 o'clock as he was returning from Farmville. As Smith swerved the car to the side to avoid the wood, the vehicle turned over two times, looking him in the car with a cut on the right leg.

Hugh ("Runt") Johnson happened by and released Smith and took him to his home, where he was treated.

Police officers passed the wrecked car soon afterward, righted it and drove it in.

The officers were on the road investigating a complaint of a Washington party that someone had thrown a brick at their car. None of the Washington party, which was returning from a dance at Farmville, was injured, the brick having struck the side of the car.

Local police officers expressed the belief the wood was placed on the road and did not fall there. They were at a loss as to the purpose of the culprit or culprits.

Another report of a road having been blocked with wood was made here only last week.

EXPRESS FEAR FOR POPE PIUS

Vatican City, Dec. 29.—(AP)—Physicians attending Pope Pius, seriously ill with paralysis and old age complications, searched today for mild sedatives to relieve the Pontiff's pain.

The pontiff's condition was described as "unchanged" and inspiring hope in prelates simply because no new crisis has arisen.

Vatican City, Dec. 29.—(AP)—Best informed Vatican circles, it was learned today, are prepared for the death of Pope Pius, XI, at any moment.

This feeling was reportedly based as much on the Holy Father's final realization of his own critical condition as on the fact that he is 82 years old.

Gatesville Woman In Line to Succeed Mrs. J. B. Spilman

Miss Ethel Parker Regarded as Sure of Vice Chairmanship of Democratic Executive Committee

Raleigh, Dec. 29.—Miss Ethel Parker of Gatesville, for years one of the outstanding women Democratic leaders in the eastern part of the state, is regarded in most circles here as more likely to be selected vice chairman of the State Democratic Executive Committee than any one else, when the committee meets to elect a new vice chairman to succeed Mrs. J. B. Spilman of Greensville, who has just resigned.

Mrs. Spilman resigned as vice chairman following her appointment as one of the two appointive members of the new Unemployment Compensation Commission.

Miss Parker is not without opposition, however, since it is already known that she is already regarded as a sure thing for the position.

Business Recovery Rivets Tightened by Improvement

By THOMAS E. FLANAGAN Associated Press Financial Writer New York (AP)—Heavy industry drove home the rivets of business improvement in 1936 with more force than any year since 1930.

Sentiment may have been warmed by sharp retail gains, by the highest electric output ever recorded, by sweeping wage boosts, by the sudden flood of extra and special year-end dividends. But nothing did so much to buttress hopes of sustained progress as the gradual mounting of the tide of orders for rails, construction steel, freight cars and locomotives.

JANUARY—Following an unexpectedly fast December pace, industrial operations slipped back a little. Invalidation of AAA brought a passing quiver of apprehension that farm prices might slide. Little happened as heavy farm surpluses had already been sharply reduced, with the exception of cotton. Heavier railroad buying helped cushion a

HAIL DECISION OF STATE DEPT.

United States Firm Granted Permit To Ship Second-Hand Planes to Socialists

Madrid, Dec. 29.—(AP)—Fresh battles in Southern Spain shifted the center of the bitter civil war today from fortified lines around the capital.

Andujar dispatches declared socialist militiamen made important gains in what is known as the Cordoba sector. Enemy losses were set at 5,000 men during fighting in two sections, the report said.

Four battalions of German soldiers and several squadrons of cavalry participated in the insurgent defense against government attacks, the advices stated.

Madrid, Dec. 29.—(AP)—The War minister was informed today Socialist troops had captured a cemetery, giving the Madrid forces complete domination of the Saragossa valley.

Despite thick fog and piercing cold, the report said, the militiamen took their objectives in the salient Northwest of Madrid after slight resistance from the insurgents.

Madrid authorities acclaimed a decision by the United States state department at Washington to allow Vinjart company, limited, to ship $2,777,000 of second-hand air planes and equipment to the Socialist headquarters at Bilbao.

They interpreted the export permit as evidence the United States believes it legal to permit shipments of arms to European governments engaged in civil war.

Pierce insurgent counter attacks failed to drive government forces from recaptured territory behind the Fascists' step lines.

REICH VESSEL FREED AT NOON

Release Said to Have Been on Demand By Cruiser

Berlin, Dec. 29.—(AP)—The curt demand of a German cruiser and a threat to halt and search the ship of any nation heading for Bilbao won freedom today for the interned German freighter Palos.

The freighter, sequestered by Basque authorities at Bilbao last week, was liberated "upon demand of the cruiser 'Koenigsberg' official announcement said, but part of her cargo and one unidentified passenger were retained by the Basques.

Nazi naval might immediately was pressed toward the Bay of Biscay to free the prisoner and the rest of the cargo.

A cruiser and torpedo rushed toward Spain to protect German shipping soon after the Palos was captured, were due in the bay today.

Berlin authorities expressed confidence their presence would lend further emphasis to the reich's demand for unconditional release of the Palos passenger and the rest of the cargo.

BERLIN, Dec. 29.—(AP)—A laconic official bulletin announced today the German freighter Palos, captured by Basque Spanish authorities at Bilbao, had been released "on demand of the cruiser Koenigsberg."

A foreign office spokesman said at once German efforts would be concentrated obtaining release of "passengers" and part of the cargo still held at Bilbao.

The propaganda ministry fixed the time of the release at noon, Berlin time, following a "radio demand" from the cruiser. The Palos, said the communique, continued her voyage interrupted last Thursday by Basque marine controls who contended she was carrying war materials and suspicious persons.

Mother Slain Man Seriously Wounds Accused Murderer

Jackson, Kentucky Court House, Scene of Bitter Fued Trials, Site of Wild Shooting

Jackson, Ky., Dec. 29.—(AP)—Johnny Sheppard, 18, charged with murder, was critically wounded in court here today by a rain of bullets fired by the mother of the man he is alleged to have killed. Stray bullets wounded two spectators and bruised another.

The court room, scene of bitter feud trials in the old days, had just been called to order by the judge, George Little, for Sheppard's examining trial.

A deputy sheriff said Mrs. Viola Wickline, mother of Harvey Gabard, 17, opened fire without a word, her eyes bulging and her face pale.

George Shouse, a spectator, was critically wounded. Miss Noble, an attorney, fell with a bullet in his leg. A bullet bruised the knee of Hoard Moore, a spectator.

More Power Favored For Each N. C. University Unit

Reflector Bureau, Sir Walter Hotel, By J. C. BASKERVILL

Raleigh, Dec. 29.—Sentiment in favor of local self government for the three units of the Greater University of North Carolina has been growing rapidly since the meeting of State College alumni here last week in which it was decided to make an active fight to give more authority to the administrative deans and faculties of the respective units and to curb the present dictatorial powers of President Frank Graham, under which he can virtually veto any acts of the deans and faculties of the other units.

Reports indicate that a large number of alumni of the Chapel Hill and Women's College units are joining hands with the State College alumni and will back up the State alumni in asking the board of trustees to give each unit full autonomy and local self government over its own affairs.

Two Rum Runners Find Pitt Justice Both Swift, Stern

White Men Given Two Years Each, William Tucker, Negro Caught in Store, Gets Four Years

D. C. and Walter Evans, white men of Rocky Mount, R. F. D., found Pitt county justice both swift and stern.

The two men were arrested last Friday night a week ago with a load of liquor on their car as they came in the city on the Washington highway. One week ago today they were tried in County court and Judge Dink James sentenced each to one year on the roads. The men appealed to Superior court and bond was fixed at $1,000 each.

Today they were tried and convicted in Superior court and, in passing sentence, Judge J. Paul Prizelle asked them how much time Judge James gave them and informed it was one year, told the defendants they made a mistake in appealing. He gave them two years each.

William Tucker, negro who was caught robbing Nicholl's market last week and who also was charged with having entered and taken cash and goods from Pleasant's drug store, Hill Home's drug store and Baker Davis hardware store, was sent to the road for one year each on the counts, the sentence to run consecutively.

Willie Bright, white youth, was given 18 months upon conviction of stealing an automobile.

Wilbur Jackson, another white man, was given a two year sentence for the larceny of a cow.

Ernest Blacklock, negro, was acquitted of a larceny charge.

SHOT IN HEAD, BADLY BEATEN

Local Drug Store Owner and Taxi Service Operator Attacked On Old Stokes Road by Two Men; Search For Pair Continues Over Eastern Carolina

G. L. Pleasant, local owner of a drug store and operator of a taxi-cab service, is in Pitt General Hospital critically, and perhaps fatally, wounded and the combined police forces are searching for two white men alleged to have beaten, robbed and shot him. The pair fled in the taxi, leaving their victim by the side of the road.

The automobile in which the pair fled was found abandoned on Dunn this morning and local police officers, including Chief George Clark, father-in-law of Mr. Pleasant, went to that city to search for the car. A car was stolen from Dunn this morning and officers said the couple evidently abandoned the taxi for another vehicle.

The pistol which was said to have been used by one of the men in shooting Mr. Pleasant was found in the car, it was reported here.

Hospital attaches the afternoon reported that the victim, while remaining conscious, continued in a critical condition.

The attack took place some time around 8 o'clock last night. Pleasant was found on the Old Stokes road about 9 o'clock by Rupert Deal, employee at the Greenville hotel and a girl companion.

Mr. Deal did not recognize the wounded man and rushed on to a filling station, put his first-aid kit out and he and Rudolph Phillips returned to find Mr. Pleasant staggering along the road, head side to side.

Although having been beaten over the head with what was thought to have been a hammer and shot over the right eye, Mr. Pleasant was (Continued on page four)

Wings for Sally by BAILEY WOLFE

SYNOPSIS: Philip Page, dark, handsome young publisher of the Warrenton Courier, loves Sally Warren, the thoughtful society editor. They are fighting to save McDonald, a discharged mill worker who is on trial for burning the Palace theater. By snatching up on Giles Benton, an unscrupulous detective, and his employer, Mr. Morris who owns the theater and the mill, Sally gets proof of McDonald's innocence. She confronts Benton with this information as he is leaving the mill and she is leaving the mill with a black and white accomplice, Mrs. Picard. Benton kidnaps Sally.

Chapter 41. The minute Sally entered the house, she knew she could expect no help from whoever lived there. She was alone with Giles Benton and Mrs. Picard, who had already shown they would stand up to nothing to extort money from the richest man in town. She was miles from home, somewhere within the shooting preserves of a group of men who never visited their property at this time of year. And yet the circumstance that oppressed Sally most was that she alone knew the truth that would set McDonald free from the threat of prison.

The outside of the little house in the woods had looked cheerful and inviting to Sally. The inside was desolate indeed. The place was a hunting lodge, well furnished, but evidently it had been boarded up for the furniture was covered with dust protectors and the windows were still nailed down in some places. Someone had broken into the lodge and simply camped there, with no attempt to keep the place clean. Ashes, burned matches and cigarette stubs littered the floor. Beer bottles and cans of food were stacked against one wall. An opened tin of sardines had been left on the arm of a chair.

When Sally entered the living room of the lodge a large dog was chewing a bone on the hearthrug. The dog simply lifted his head and looked at her calmly, then without so much as a growl, he went back to his bone. Giles Benton and Mrs. Picard did not follow Sally at once. She knew they were talking about her outside.

The longer they stayed outside, the more time she had to look around her. In a place like this, Sally thought, there must be a telephone. If she had time to find it, she might phone Warrenton before Giles Benton discovered her.

Sally opened a door that led from the living room. The dog lifted his head and growled, but Sally went on. She was in a very dark, narrow hallway from which a spiral staircase climbed to the second floor. Sally was feeling about for the light switch when she remembered that the room she had just left was lighted by a kerosene lamp and two candles. As she turned to go back to the other room for a candle, her hand touched a wall phone.

With a hasty glance at the door, through which she had just come, Sally took down the receiver and jangled the telephone hook eagerly. There was no response—the wire was dead. Sally could not believe her misfortune. Now that she had found the telephone surely there was some way of using it. But for all her impatience, the telephone remained dead. She hung up at last. Of course, whoever lived here, or rather, had broken in here, would not risk discovery by having either lights or telephone connected.

Who was the person who lived in the lodge? It was not Giles Benton. Could it possibly be someone Sally knew—someone from Warrenton, who could be induced to take a message for her? Sally would not give up hope until she had exhausted this last possibility.

Helpless And Furious. AS Sally re-entered the living room of the lodge, she heard the car start outside. She rushed to the door in time to see the red tail-light swiveling to nothing in the distance. So they had gone and left her alone in this house in the woods. Didn't they know that she was young and strong, fully capable of making her way along the dark road to the highway? She shivered at the thought of that journey along the woods road in the dark. There was no moon and the darkness was so thick Sally felt she could have snipped a hole in it big enough to look through if she had some scissors sharp enough. This darkness was like a thick black anapoy that was too smotheringly near.

Suddenly a man stepped up to Sally. She gave a little nervous start and shrank back against the house. The man moved again and the light shone on his face. It was Giles Benton! So only Mrs. Picard had gone away in the car.

"Won't you come inside, Miss Warren?" asked Giles Benton. "The gentleman who lives here is out just now, but I'm sure he will not mind if we make ourselves comfortable."

"I should like to get back to Warrenton at once," said Sally. "I'm sure you understand why. Will the car be back soon?"

"I'm afraid I can't answer that question," said Giles. He entered the into the street by an ingrate son in . . . the . . . first . . . de-gree . . . Next to murder, crimes involving sex attract the largest 'gates.' Blackmail trials are also important. Felony court is where those accused but unindicted for major crimes are arraigned. Trials for malfeasance in public office are always attended by wide-eyed politicians, and the off-stage utterances (which do not get into the records) are wonders of epithetical rhetoric.

Only early arrivals are accommodated at supreme court hearings, where nightly divorce suits are recited and where celebrities try to extricate themselves from entanglements of one nature or another.

Special Cases. Sometimes, however, the machine slows down for special cases: A mother has been beaten and cast

Chapter 42. Philip Starts To Search. SALLY followed Giles up the stairs meekly enough. The promise of a key and the opportunity to put a locked door between herself and Sam while Giles Benton was away gave Sally courage.

The upper half of the lodge formed a sort of gallery from which three doors opened. The middle one showed light beneath it and this one Giles Benton threw open.

"I must go now," he said hurriedly. "There's the car."

He grasped Sally's arm, quickly thrust her inside the room, closed the door behind her and locked it from the outside.

"Give me the key!" cried Sally. She pounded against the closed door. "You promised to give me the key!" But Giles Benton had gone. When she could no longer hear his footsteps, Sally ceased calling or banging on the door. She did not want Sam to come.

Wearily she turned and surveyed the room. It was musty, and a little air came through a single broken window-pane. The furniture was shrouded, but comfortable enough. Sally stretched out on the bed wearily and stared at the circle of lamplight on the ceiling.

She felt faint, and remembered that she had eaten scarcely any lunch and no dinner at all. The thought of eating the food that Sam had stacked against the wall downstairs was revolting. Yet, if she were to get away from the house and walk the woods road till she found the highway, Sally knew she would have to eat. She went to the door and called, but she got no answer. The car had come and gone. Could they have taken Sam away and left her in the house alone?

Sally took off her slipper, went to the window and began deliberately to break out the panes. When she had smashed three, and the cool night air blew against her face, she heard a shout from below and the barking of a dog.

"Hey, stop that!" yelled Sam. Sally leaned out of the window and called down to him. "I'm hungry. Will you please get me something to eat?"

"Sure," said Sam. He stood there a moment. "I haven't got the key to your room. About all I can do is pitch a few things in the window."

When Sam had gone back around the house, Sally sat in the cool night air and waited. Beyond the house a whippoorwill called. It was a lonely sound, and Sally shivered.

Mr. Morris Has A Stroke. WHILE Sally was imprisoned in the hunting lodge some 40 miles from home, a combination of circumstances back in Warrenton delayed the search for her.

A messenger boy had delivered Sally's note to Mr. and Mrs. Warren about 10 o'clock in the evening. The message, which Sally had written under compulsion, surprised her parents but did not alarm them.

"Where could Sally be staying over night?" puzzled Mr. Warren. "I don't like to have her mix up in this McDonald case. I've spoken to Philip about it before and he promised not to encourage her."

"Sally's awfully stubborn when she sets her head," said Mrs. Warren. "I'll call Philip," said Mr. Warren. "He probably knows something about this errand of hers. He may even have sent her from the office."

But Philip Page was not to be found by telephone. His house across the street from the Warrens was dark. At the office they said he had just left in answer to a telephone call.

"You go to bed, Adelaide, and don't worry," Mr. Warren said to his wife. "I'll sit out here and wait for Philip to come home, and when I see a light over there I'll go and ask him about Sally."

SPEED TRUCKS ROAD MENACE

Tourist Cars Also Threat to State's School Buses

Reflector Bureau.

Raleigh, Dec. 29.—Speeding automobiles and trucks, especially cars driven by tourists from other states passing through North Carolina, are among the worst hazards school bus drivers have to contend with and cause many more accidents involving school buses or school children than do drivers of school buses, according to executive secretary Lloyd Griffin of the State School Commission and L. C. Thornton, of the transportation division, which has direct supervision of the more than 4,000 school buses which transport some 272,000 school children to and from school every school day.

"The drivers of the school buses tell us that they fear heavily loaded, speeding trucks, such as that which ran into the school bus in Cumberland county" some three weeks ago, wrecking it and causing the death of four children, more than anything else," Thornton said.

"Next to these trucks, they say their fear the cars driven by tourists from other states, on the grounds that more of these cars and their drivers disregard the law requiring all cars to slow up before passing a school bus and to stop whenever a school bus halts to unload.

"The drivers of North Carolina cars seem to observe the law better and to be more careful in passing school buses or in stopping when the buses stop to unload, although some of them disregard the law and speed right on by. But they maintain that the drivers of cars from other states drive faster and show less regard for the laws about passing school buses than any of the others."

Both Griffin and Thornton commended Capt. Charles D. Farmer of the State Highway Patrol for his warning to truck operators and drivers that they must slow down and for issuing orders to patrolmen to arrest any truck drivers found traveling over 35 miles an hour, or trucks with trailers traveling more than 30 miles an hour—the speed limits fixed on trucks during the 1933 general assembly.

The truck which struck the school bus in Cumberland county, in which four children were killed, was traveling between 50 and 60 miles an hour, according to reliable estimates, and was carrying a four-ton load.

David Kellogg Carter of Massillon, O., clinched the nomination of Lincoln by announcing a change of four votes in the Ohio delegation in the Republican national convention of 1900.

spurred. Automobile makers stepped on production accelerators. Beneficiaries were producers of steel, parts, tires, accessories and gasoline. Retailers did a brisk Easter trade.

MAY—Motor makers drove steadily along. Steel mills held gains stubbornly. Cotton consumption hit a peak for the month since 1929. Railroads bought more equipment than in any month since 1930.

JUNE—Drought threats loomed. Industrial production further postponed its "normal" decline. Mailmen distributed $1,600,000,000 in soldiers' bonus bonds, giving a fillip to trade.

JULY—Retail trade was hit in drought regions. But farmers in other sections got scarcity prices for staples, a factor which helped ### offset losses in blistered districts. Industry continued to fight off summer drowsiness. Threats of conflict between workers and employers in steel and other industries cast a shadow.

AUGUST—Vacation slackening of trade and industry was smaller than usual. There was no seasonal drop in steel operations. Cotton manufacturing ran at the highest summer rate on record. Miscellaneous demand for steel held steel operations at more than 70 per cent of capacity.

SEPTEMBER—Cotton goods sales boomed, moving swiftly into consumption channels. Automobile operations slid further as the 1936 season ended. Industrial demand helped steel operations jump to 75 per cent of capacity, a new top for the year. Many industries took steel in advance of expected price increases.

OCTOBER—New model motors swung off production lines. U. S. Steel Corporation put its preferred stock back on a regular dividend basis and announced a big construction project for a subsidiary. The cotton goods industry did an enormous business. Commodity prices advanced, some to recovery peaks.

NOVEMBER—Wage increases were posted for the entire steel industry, for motor and textile workers, and many others. Wage bonuses spread. A burst of extra and special year-end "surplus-profits-tax" dividends slugged more than $800,000,000 into the hands of shareholders. Bethlehem Steel announced major construction plans.

DECEMBER—Railroads, with earnings swelled by the best carloadings since 1930, bought heavily of locomotives, cars, rails and other equipment. Electric power output hit unprecedented peaks. Retailers prepared for the best Christmas trade in six years or longer. Analysts, surveying the year's employment gains, said best progress had been made by heavy industry.

the Greater University. The alumni of these two units are perfectly willing for President Graham to have complete authority over the Chapel Hill unit of the University, but think he should have advisory power only over the other two units, instead of both dictatorial and veto powers.

While it is admitted that the firing of football Coach Harty W. (Hunk) Anderson by President Graham last week was the match which set off the powder among the alumni causing the explosion which resulted in the meeting at which it was decided to seek "home rule" for State College in all academic matters as well as in athletics, it is maintained that the Anderson incident is merely one of many similar incidents in which Dean Harrelson and the faculty have been overruled by President Graham. In Anderson's case, the new contract which had been offered him by the athletic council and which had been approved by Colonel Harrelson, was set aside by President Graham although the faculty council is understood to have stood 7 to 4 with the athletic council in favor of Anderson's retention for another year.

Just how far the State alumni can get with the board of trustees in their effort to seek "home rule" for State and the other units of the university and to curtail President Graham's authority over more than the Chapel Hill unit, remains to be seen. It is no secret, however, that a good many members of the board of trustees are not as willing to back up Graham as they were a

Talks To Parents

Chasing Rainbows

For a mother and father deliberately to court old age, and by neglect permit themselves to grow old prematurely, is a great pity. But it is possible to go quite as far wrong in the opposite direction.

The effort to look and act younger than they are, parents may become ridiculous and lose the respect of the young.

The child who feels or says "Be your age" to or about his parents is not in an enviable position—nor are the parents.

There is the father who has never passed the rah-rah stage of the sophomores. He may enjoy sporting with the young things, but is he sure that they enjoy him?

There is the girlish mother still breathing baby talk in her son's ear and clinging to him like a flapper. Or one sees mother and daughter out together, looking equally vivacious and coy, except that mother's complexion is more obviously out of a box.

If one's object in life is to stay young, it really is a mistake to have a family. How can one guide and train children to maturity when one's own ideals are still adolescent? There are many mothers to whom the greatest compliment they can receive is, "You look like your own daughter." That is their ambition in life; not wisdom, nor maturity, nor the graciousness of years accepted.

The adolescence from which they have never emerged is more than skin-deep too, for the effort to detain youth and push off old age occupies so much of their time that they cannot achieve the development of mind and spirit which should bring.

There is much that youth has not and cannot have, much joy and peace of mind that only maturity can bring. Why throw these away to chase a mirage?

Auto Mileage and Deaths

Chicago (AP)—Auto accident deaths rose one per cent in 1936 but fell off remarkably in relation to mileage traveled, the national safety council estimates. It attributes the improved record to its safety campaign, opened the first of the year, in which 1,000 cities participated.

Judging from records of the first 10 months, the council predicts that 37,100 persons—500 more than last year—will have died in auto smash-ups by the year's end.

This represents a one per cent increase over the number killed in 1935 but the council considers it a good record because:

1. A greater number of cars than ever before was registered.

2. Traveled an estimated seven per cent or 4-1/2 billion miles farther than in 1935.

The chart shows how the picture has changed since 1934 when deaths were 15 per cent higher than 1933 with mileage up eight per cent.

In 1935 deaths increased two and one-half per cent as mileage jumped six per cent over 1934.

Hay Comes Easy In Texas

Houston, Tex. (AP)—When a Texas goat cost farmer wants winter hay he goes to a pasture and mows it. There is never a shortage of the hay, used for winter roughage, on the coastal prairies. The grass grows waist high in pastures that are not overstocked. No seeding or cultivation is required.

Hollywood Sights And Sounds

By Robbin Coons

Hollywood — The Mauch boys are what the casting directors call a "natural."

Identical twins, 12 years old, Billy and Bobby have their work cut out for them. If they stick around Hollywood, they will be the answer to the problem of every picture requiring great similarity between two characters.

Ten years from now, when "A Tale of Two Cities" should be ready for another filming, Billy and Bobby will be a convincing Sydney Carton and Charles Darnay, without benefit of shadows in the prison scene. Later, perhaps, would come "The Masquerader," recently done with Ronald Colman in both key roles.

Bobby plays the prince and Billy plays the pauper. This casting was determined by one of the relatively few differences between the boys. In tests, both proved equally proficient in performance, so that the choice seemed immaterial. Then they began fencing lessons, whereupon Billy was revealed as left-handed. The prince has to wave a sword prolifically. Right-handed Bobby got the job.

The director, William Keighley, has his difficulties. Like others in Hollywood, except their mother, he cannot tell them apart. He has coined the name "Billy-Bob" to apply to either. Audiences are likely to have the same trouble, especially when the prince and the pauper exchange clothes.

So remarkable is their resemblance that when both were on the stage in New York their mother could send either on a job when the other happened to be working already. (This should make her the envy of every movie mamma.)

Billy got the "Anthony Adverse" role because Bob was on another job, making a choice unnecessary. When Bobby arrived, he "stood in" for Billy, and occasionally fooled the director by playing a scene for him. There's no professional jealousy between them.

A serious sleuth could distinguish between the two easily. For one thing, Bobby's chest is one-eighth inch larger than Billy's. Billy, too, on occasion wears spectacles. And when their father, a New York railway agent, comes with their dog it will be Bobby the pet trails but Billy that he "minds."

For ordinary identification, the boys wear rings. Sturdy youngsters and mischievous, they sometimes exchange these tokens. Their mother, playing safe and giving no quarter, insists this ruse seldom confounds her. But I wonder.

Hull, Eng. (AP)—Sir Kingsley Wood, minister of health, disclosed a woman complaining of delay in getting her widow's pension, wrote him: "If I have to wait much longer I shall begin to wish my husband hadn't died at all."

Reviewing MARCH 1936

By VOLTA TORREY AP Feature Service Writer Time, the old gypsy man, darting down many nations' streets last March, must have smiled wryly, wanly.

Busy, broad Unter den Linden was busied. From loudspeakers Der Fuehrer's voice proclaimed: "Germany has regained her honor, re-found her faith, conquered the greatest economic distress, and finally inaugurated a new cultural advance."

"The Ghost Goes West," said movie marauders. But worse than Glourie was the ghost beside Herr Hitler. For even as he spoke men were marching westward as to war—into an arena of hate and slaughter since the year 843.

That was when Charlemagne's empire was divided into three parts, one to become France, another Germany, the third a "Middle Kingdom." Schoolboys know how that

"Middle Kingdom's" ghost haunted Burgundy dukes, Charles the Bold, Louis XIV and Joseph II, embittered the long feud between Bourbons and Hapsburgs and robbed France's revolutionary armies of their winnings.

Out of Johnstown, Pa., streets, where 2,300 died in 1889, fearful folk fled from another flood. In Pittsburgh's golden triangle, a swimmer could not have touched bottom. Without electricity, with no gas or stoves or steam for radiators, the city saw muddy water course through its store windows and fill two theaters to the balcony.

Down both sides of the Appalachian watershed the water roared; 13 states, including New England, counted the dead in the hundreds, the homeless by hundreds of thousands, and losses of $300,000,000.

A blizzard followed in the east; dust blew in its western bow. Along America's Main street, Red Cross solicitors made their way. Forgotten for a time was the bonus glimmer of Future Wars and President Roosevelt's tax to yield $1,614,000,000 a year.

Franklin Roosevelt, Jr., used a coast guard plane to meet Miss Ethel du Pont. Douglas Fairbanks married Lady Sylvia Ashley. Serge Medwan was killed in a polo game.

Under Big Ben, M. P.'s paused to laugh while muddling through the king's expense account. Edward had requested consideration of the "contingency" of his marriage, so that, in that event, there should be provision for Her Majesty the Queen.

"Can I ask" a Laborite asked, "whether His Majesty has given any guaranty that he is going to be married?"
