NEW CONGRESS IS FACED WITH BUSY SESSION

Question of Constitutional Amendments in Spotlight

RAYBURN CHOSEN PARTY'S LEADER

Swearing of New Members Constitutes Only Immediate Business

Washington, Jan. 5.—(AP)—The 75th congress opened amid a quickening tempo of national prosperity today to face a batch of problems embracing labor strikes at home and war rumbles abroad.

Sharp gavel raps by Vice President Garner in the Senate and Sam Rayburn in the House officially began at noon the organization chores of the third congress of Franklin Roosevelt's presidency.

Washington, Jan. 5.—(AP)—A sense of historic decisions impending pervaded the capitol today for the opening of the new congress.

Questions of constitutional amendments, how far to go on neutrality and whether to tighten up on relief commanded more attention from the legislator than the organization formalities.

Outwardly all was serene. Congratulations greeted Rep. Sam Rayburn of Texas at every turn following his election to the Democratic floor leadership of the House late yesterday.

Rep. William Bankhead (D. Ala.) again had a clear path to the speakership.

The swearing in of new members constituted almost the only immediate business. Of the 96 freshman representatives and 16 new senators a few had yet to reach the city.

Because of the "same-day" amendment, it was the first time in history that a new congress was called together before the inauguration of the president.

Heralding the second Roosevelt administration, it contained also the greatest majority in both houses attained by any party since the civil war.

There were indications, however, that the budget message on Friday will contain "more surprises" than the one tomorrow. Some took this to foreshadow an attempt for a more closely balanced budget in the next fiscal year than has been predicted.

Winterville Youth Cops First Honor For Corn Growing

Austin Smith, 18, Produces 120 Bushels on One Acre For Net Profit Realized of $73.15

Austin Smith, 18-year-old 4-H club member of Winterville, won first place in a contest conducted in Pitt county by club members, having made 120 bushels of corn on one acre of land for a net profit of $73.15.

Young Smith, a member of the blood 4-H club kept close accounts on his expenditures, which totalled $38.85. His yield sold for 85 cents a bushel, bringing him a total of $102, deducting the expense of raising the corn, the cash realized on the crop reached the unusual high mark for an acre of corn.

The average yield per acre of corn in Pitt county is a little better than 19 bushels, about one-sixth the amount the club member produced.

An itemized account of the expense of growing the corn showed that $5 was listed as rent, 75 cents as value of member's time, $1.85 as helper's time, $3.25 for value of team's time, 50 cents for seed and $17.50 for fertilizer.

A. C. Rowland of the Belvoir club made the second best yield in the county, 108 bushels for a net profit of $59.52. Elmer Tucker of the Grimesland club ranked third with a yield of 68.55 bushels and a net profit of $41.60.

C. D. Griggs, assistant county farm agent, has charge of 4-H club work in Pitt county.

John Reaves was given four months on a whiskey charge.

Wilbur Dixon entered a plea of guilty to operating an automobile while drunk and was given a four-months sentence. His license was ordered revoked for 12 months.

Clay Green was acquitted of a whiskey charge.

S. L. Dilda was convicted of giving a worthless check and given a 90-day sentence, suspended upon provision he pay the costs of court now and pay one-half the amount of the check at the end of two months and the balance by the end of four months. An appeal was noted to Superior court and bond was set at $200.

Churches Of City To Unite Sundays In Joint Services

First of Such Meetings to Be Held Sunday Night With Able Speaker In Pulpit

With the promise of an able speaker and excellent music led by a large choir of local people, the first of the inter-denominational union Sunday evening services to be held this coming Sunday promises to get off to an auspicious start.

Under the supervision of an executive committee which has complete charge of the programs for these services, Jarvis Memorial Methodist church, because of its central location, has been selected as the place where each service will be held. Members of the Executive Committee include a lay representative and the minister of each of the six participating churches: Eighth Street Christian, St. Paul's Episcopal, Jarvis Memorial Methodist, Immanuel Baptist, Memorial Baptist and the Presbyterian. Definite 'Break' Thought Near In Kidnapping Case

Sources Close to Family Hint Dr. and Mrs. Mattson Expecting Important Development, Ransom Payment or Release

Tacoma, Wash., Jan. 5.—(AP)—Sources close to the family of kidnaped Charles Mattson intimated strongly today definite progress was being made toward winning the 10-year-old boy's release.

They hinted Dr. and W. W. Mattson, the boy's parents, were expecting an important development soon, but whether it was payment of the $28,000 demanded ransom or the child's actual release was not disclosed.

Official sources gave the same impression in guarded words. Tacoma officials a few days ago expressed grave fears for Charles' safety.

The overwhelming opinion was a satisfactory contact had been made with the abductor, who broke into the Mattson home Sunday, December 27, and carried the boy away from the room where he was talking with his brother and sister and her girl chum.

Dr. Mattson was known to be definitely relieved by the quick response to his plea that the law enforcement agencies cease work on the case until his son's safety was assured.

A dreary cold night passed with Charles still missing on the ninth day although an intermediary was busy yesterday and visited the Mattson house several times.

HEALTH DEPT. MAKES REPORT

Reviews Accomplishments and Outlines Some Objectives

The annual report of Dr. N. Thomas Ennett, health officer, submitted at the meeting yesterday afternoon of the Pitt County Health department reviewed in brief the work of the department during the past year and outlined some of the objectives for 1937.

All members of the board were re-elected unanimously, no opposition to the present members having been placed in nomination. Roy T. Cox, chairman of the county board of commissioners, M. K. Blount, mayor of Greenville and D. H. Conley, county superintendent of schools, serve as ex-officio members of the health board. Other members are Dr. W. I. Wooten of Greenville, Dr. M. T. Frizzelle of Ayden and Dr. Paul Fitzgerald of Greenville.

The report of the health officer showed that the department has six full-time employees at the present time, an additional white nurse having been furnished during the past year through Social Security funds. Beginning August 15, the City of Greenville and the State Health department jointly employed a sanitary inspector for the city and placed him under the direction of the health officer.

In comparing contagious disease statistics of 1935 with 1936, the report set forth:

"Diphtheria, 1935, 27 cases; 1936, 90 cases. Measles, in 1935, 181 cases; 1936, 1 case. Typhoid Fever, 1935, 26 cases; 1936, 23 cases. Tuberculous, 1935, 29 cases; 1936, 76 cases. Infantile Paralysis, 1935, 14 cases; 1936, 2 cases.

"You will note that there was a great increase in the number of diphtheria and tuberculous cases for 1936 as compared with 1935, and while there was some reduction in the number of typhoid cases, it was not a material reduction—26 cases for 35 against 23 for 36. As regards the other two contagious diseases mentioned, measles and infantile paralysis, we do not know the cause of either and hence can do little to control them; however, when it comes to the matter of diphtheria, typhoid and tuberculosis, we not only know the causes of these diseases (Continued on page six)

TARBORO, Jan. 5.—(AP)—Floyd Duke, 22, of Enfield was shot and killed in a pitch dark back room of a store near here last night.

State Urged Wield Club Over Gasoline Companies

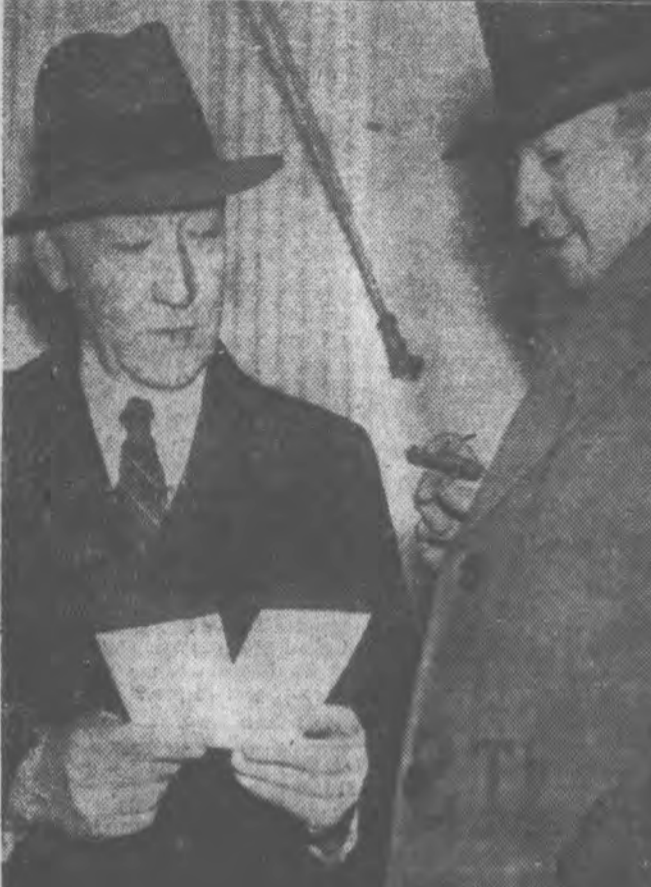

Reflector Bureau, Sir Walter Hotel, By J. C. BASKERVILL

Raleigh, Jan. 5.—If the 1937 general assembly adopts the recommendations of the gasoline and oil fact-finding commission headed by Rep. Oscar G. Barker of Durham, it will enact a number of laws which will enable the state to hold a perpetual club over the heads of the gasoline and oil moguls with which to slug them into line if they ever again attempt to discriminate against North Carolina, either as a state or against the gasoline users of the state, according to those who have read the report of the commission.

The report was submitted to Governor J. C. B. Ehringhaus Monday afternoon and immediately made public by him.

The most far-reaching recommendation contained in the report is that the general assembly appropriate $100,000 to be used by the Governor and Council of State for the erection of a state-owned gas-

Nazi Government Issues Ultimatum To Loyalists

Officials Told Cargo of Palos Must Be Surrendered

Nazi Germany "closed" the dangerous incident caused by Spanish detention of a German freighter's cargo today with a bloodless warship ultimatum which said the cargo must be returned within three days.

The Spanish government, told by radio it must surrender the Palos' cargo and a Spanish passenger, or see two of its merchantmen seized by German warships, go to insure against the daily wage loss in such event as $1,000,000 and the company daily profit reduction at $30,000.

Labor men at Washington predicted direct intervention by President Roosevelt if the general strike materialized.

With Basque supporters of the Spanish government contending they had killed five German aviators, the British government pressed Hitler and Benito Mussolini of Italy for quick replies to a Franco-British plea they stop sending volunteers to Spain.

German sources indicated the Reich's reply to be dispatched later, would be conciliatory, although making German action dependent upon the intentions of other powers.

Leading up to these late pictures of the international scene, were these basic developments:

Berlin.—The Koenigsberg informed the Spanish Valencia government by radio that two seized Spanish merchantmen would be handed over to Spanish insurgents for a "settlement" unless Bilbao Basques gave up an interned German cargo and passenger by 8 a. m. Friday.

London.—British warships won a pledge of respect for British shipping in the Straits of Gibraltar but official British reports of 10,900 new Italian volunteers in Spain complicated the grave matter of controlling the scope of the "little world war."

Madrid, Jan. 5.—(AP)—Victorious Spanish insurgents formed their left flank to the important El Estero communications road on the northwest of here today.

Two closed in villages appeared threatened after the government defenders had withdrawn from bomb-split Majadahonda. To the South of the fighting front Boadilla del Monte remained the lone government outpost.

Casualties of yesterday air raid were given officially as 60 dead with two or three hundred wounded. There is no doubt that the oil and petroleum companies do not want (Continued on page six)

The primary purpose of the discussions is to build up an enlightened public opinion concerning world affairs, with particular emphasis on the place of the United States in international situations which have arisen within the past few months. It was announced, "The question of neutrality is a complicated one to which there are many sides. The action which our national government may take regarding this question will be a matter of grave concern to every citizen of our country. The part taken in such action by the congressional representatives from our district in such action should be a matter of deep concern to our people and the Greenville Council feels that every possible effort should be made to have our (Continued on page six)

STATE SOLONS READY TACKLE BITTER FIGHTS

General Assembly to Meet at Noon Tomorrow

LIQUOR CONTROL MAJOR PROBLEM

Legislature Also Faced with Raising More Revenue Than Ever Attempted

Raleigh, Jan. 5.—(AP)—Ready to tackle the problem of raising more state revenue than ever has been attempted before in North Carolina and facing a bitter fight on liquor legislation, members of the general assembly arrived today for their regular biennial session.

The legislature will convene at noon tomorrow, but probably will not start its real work until some time next week. Thursday will be devoted to inaugural ceremonies when Clyde Hoey will become governor and the senate's new presiding officer, W. P. Horton, will become lieutenant governor.

Sentiment was developing with Horton and Speaker Gregg Cherry of the House leading the fight, to have the legislature work six full days every week, instead of doing very little on Mondays and Saturdays.

Usually little legislating is done until the governor's budget message has been heard by the assembly and now Hoey has not indicated yet when he plans to talk on financial policies, except that it will be next week.

The advisory budget commission's biennial report recommending "record appropriations" was in the hands of the printer. No figures on the recommendation were released but requests aggregated some $70,000,000 per year for the next biennium, up about $7,000,000 yearly over current appropriations.

To meet the recommended appropriations, if the legislature approves them, the law makers must not only find additional revenue over and above present sources, but it is generally agreed they will reduce the present sales tax income by around $2,500,000 yearly which will have to be replaced.

The contract award for extension and remodeling of the Greenville postoffice, announced yesterday in Washington, does not include the plumbing, heating, wiring and equipment contracts for which will be let later.

The building contract was awarded to James I. Barnes of Charlottesville, Va., for $37,450.

Original plans called for an expenditure of $75,000 on the local building and T. T. Hollingsworth, postmaster, said today he expected that amount would be necessary when the work is completed and new equipment installed.

The postmaster's office will be moved back and more lobby space provided where the office is located at present. Additional lock boxes will be installed, as well as new furniture, it was stated.

The rear of the building will be extended, leaving only driveway space. Arrangements also will be made for loading and unloading three trucks at the same time. At the present facilities are insufficient for the handling of more than one truck at a time.

Mr. Hollingsworth said it would be some time before his year-end report would be available, but stated that the business of the past year was sufficient to insure the office remaining in the first class division.

The unit is considered one of the best in the state. It wins high honors at each summer encampment. Last summer it brought home a number of trophies won both in sports and in war maneuver practice.

The first drill of the year was scheduled for tomorrow and it will be definitely determined at tomorrow night's meeting whether the unit will attend the ceremonies inaugurating Clyde R. Hoey as governor.

PIANIST TICKLES KEYS AS BUGS TICKLE HIM

New York, (AP)—Jim Smierlin, young tough baldish pianist from Poland, spent a good deal of time brushing insects from the keyboard while touring this fall in Java and Sumatra.

Sometimes he couldn't see the keys, he declares, for the insect corpses. And at his first recital he almost ran from the stage when the flying foxes began circling around him.

"By the time I finished my tour," says he, "a piano without insects crawling over it didn't look natural. But I grew to like the flying foxes because they ate large quantities of the mosquitoes which fill the concert halls."

URGE FARMERS HALT EROSION

Bare Hillside Sheds Water Like the Roof of a House

Raleigh, Jan. 5.—A bare hillside sheds water like the roof of a house said E. C. Blair, extension agronomist at State College. The rain falls faster than the water can soak into the soil, and the excess runs off in small rivulets, carrying away the soil particles and forming small gullies which in time, if neglected, will grow into large ones. But when a hillside is covered with vegetation, and the soil is well filled with organic matter, it absorbs water like a blotter, Blair pointed out. If a blotter is placed on a house roof and covered with a Turkish towel, the falling rain spreads out through the nap of the towel and is absorbed by the blotter. That is the same principle by which rain water is absorbed on a vegetation-covered hillside, Blair added. Trees, shrubs, grass, and close growing crops like wheat and legumes are like the thick nap on the towel. And the soil, made porous by burrowing worms, insects, and plant life, and made absorbent with organic matter, soaks up the rain water just like a blotter, Blair observed. This not only checks erosion, he continued, but it also holds the water in the soil where it is needed to keep the ground moist and to feed plants and streams between rains.

FRIENDSHIP CLUB TOPIC

Rev. Thos. M. Grant Speaker at Rotary Club Meeting By WYATT BROWN A sound philosophy of a passion for men must be behind the most perfect mechanics of friendship declared Rev. Thomas M. Grant last night at the Rotary Club's regular weekly meeting. In discussing briefly how to make friends he said that friendship was a reciprocity of souls which is something rare and big. Then he recited Albert Swettzer's experience of finding himself in an experience in an African native's hut. "A sound philosophy to put the dynamic in the making of friends," the speaker declared "is to believe in men for what they might be and not what they are." Ollie Van Nortwick, Junior, who was in charge of the program last night presented Miss Elizabeth Ferguson in two vocal solos which she did in her charming manner and in a beautifully placed voice rendering "Deep River" and "In Old Madrid." She was accompanied at the piano by Miss Shindler. Proceeding the program Dr. W. I. Wooten presented Mrs. Denison and Mrs. Tolar. The former the local representative and the latter the Field Supervisor of the Eastern North Carolina Hospital Saving Association. Mrs. Tolar explained the purpose and source of the organization which is a non-profit organization financed in part by the Duke Endowment attempting to bring hospitalization to the underprivileged in such a way that they can get it without depending on charity. Guests of the club were John J. Sigwald, a visiting Rotarian from Wilson, Dr. W. I. Wooten, Arthur Corey, Ralph Moxo, and R. M. Adams of Danville, Va. The attendance prize given by Billy Nesbit was won by Dr. N. Thomas Nesbit. President J. B. Kittrell announced the coming installation of a Rotary Club at Manteo, North Carolina which will be club number 4094.

HIGHS SET FOR COURT BATTLE

Cage Squad Resumes Training After Holiday Lay-Off

The Greenville High School basketballers got down to serious business yesterday after a two weeks' layoff for the Christmas holiday. The Greensies underlock the stiffest schedule that any local team has ever undertaken, and fans of this city are in for some real treats during the coming two months.

Coach Reynolds' May's proteges are in for a real test this coming Friday night when they take on the powerful New Bern Bears in the High School auditorium. The Bears have a veteran team to throw against the locals, and fans can get a pretty good idea Friday night as just what to expect of the Greensies for the rest of the season. The New Bern aggregation would like nothing better than to atone for the two lickings suffered at the hands of the Greenville cagers last season, and they are coming to town Friday to "shoot the works" in an effort to get on the win side of the ledger. The ball game is a natural anyway you look at it.

Local fans can see games cheaper this year by buying a season ticket. This ticket will cost $1.50 and will entitle them to see every game played in the High school auditorium this year, both boys and girls. There will be eleven home games; the schedule to come out in tomorrow's paper. All home games will start at 7:30 unless announced otherwise.

LIQUOR ISSUE BILLED FIRST

Hoey Hoping For Speed in Disposal of Problem

Reflector Bureau, Sir Walter Hotel, Raleigh, Jan. 5.—Governor-elect Clyde R. Hoey is hoping the general assembly will not spend too much time on the liquor control problem and that it will dispose of it quickly, according to word heard here from Shelby.

No intimation has been given by Mr. Hoey as yet, however, as to his personal views and whether he favors state control, county control, a combination of the two as recommended by the liquor control fact-finding commission, or state-wide prohibition. The belief in most political circles here is that Mr. Hoey is not likely to take any hand in the liquor control dispute unless a deadlock should develop and threaten to prolong the session of the general assembly or impede other business. In that case, it is regarded as likely that he might take a hand in untangling matters.

It is known, of course, that Mr. Hoey is a personal and political dry and has been a believer in and proponent of prohibition for years. On the other hand, Mr. Hoey is understood to have intimated at various times that prohibition has not proved successful in North Carolina, especially since the repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment and that a strict system of liquor control which would regulate sales and discourage bootlegging might be preferable to conditions as they now are in most of the dry counties. Since the Democratic platform is regarded as being wide open on the liquor question, it is believed that Mr. Hoey will not oppose anything the 1937 general assembly may decide to do with regard to liquor control.

There is no doubt, however, that Mr. Hoey wants the general assembly to deal with the liquor question as speedily as possible and that he has expressed the belief it will do so. It is understood that Mr. Hoey already is convinced a majority of the members of both houses of the general assembly favor some form of liquor control rather than a continuation of prohibition and that the only thing necessary is for these to agree on a definite program and bill and enact it.

Thanks To Woman's Club. It has been a custom in the City Schools for Negroes for more than thirty years to do something at Christmas time to make children happy. Through the years we have sought to inspire confidence in us, by all citizens in this community. The Woman's Club, possessing that loftiest attribute of "Christian Character-Love" demonstrated this quality on Christmas Eve when these ladies thru Mrs. J. H. B. Moore gave to forty-three needy Negro children toys and fruit that they might enjoy this day. Preceding this act, gifts of twenty-two pairs of shoes were given to needy children by Mr. Mat Long, Cotton Broker.

The Principal and Teachers, as well as parents, desire to express their appreciation and heart-felt thanks to these people, who have made others of a less fortunate group happy. The years that have passed register highest Christian interest manifested by Greenville citizens—not for self—but for others. Gratefully yours for the children, C. M. EPPS.

THREE SOUGHT FOR DYNAMITE 'EXECUTION'

Search has centered in Sioux Falls, S. D., for three gangsters accused of executing Harold Baker by tossing him into a storage house for explosives near that city and touching off a fuse. The terrific blast blew away all traces of the building and presumably tore Baker to bits. Helen Sieler, Baker's companion, was shot eight times and left to die in the snow. But she was found alive and taken to a hospital. She named Lee Bradley (inset) as one of the "executioners." Officers are shown inspecting the gaping hole left by the explosion to mark the spot where the powder house stood. (Associated Press Photos)

Free Trip Is Offered to 4-H Club Members

Raleigh, Jan. 5.—A free trip to Washington, with expenses paid by the Atlantic Coast Line, is offered this year to two North Carolina 4-H club members.

The two will be selected from the four club members who are to represent this State at the national 4-H club camp in Washington next summer, said L. R. Harrill, 4-H club leader at State College.

Each summer, he said, the two boys and the two girls who have the best club records in the State are awarded a free trip to the national camp.

Approximately $60,000,000 worth of gold passed through the Denver mint in 1936, about 50 cents for every man, woman and child in the United States.

The land owned in Hudspeth county, Tex., alone by the University of Texas is larger than the entire acreage of some other state counties.

State Retirement And Pension Law Gaining Support

Provision For All State Employees, Including More Than 23,000 Teachers, Urged

Reflector Bureau, Sir Walter Hotel, Raleigh, Jan. 5.—A state retirement insurance and pension law for all state employees, including more than 23,000 school teachers, will be urged of the 1937 general assembly as part of its social security program, according to reports being heard here.

The several thousand state employees as well as the school teachers, who do not come under the Federal retirement insurance laws because they are state employees, feel that they are entitled to the same benefits as those employed in private industry. There are also some who favor the enactment of a state unemployment insurance law which would give to state employees the same protection given other workers in case of unemployment. But the principal interest is in retirement insurance, and pensions after state employees reach the age of 65.

Most of those interested in this movement, however, feel that the state law should provide for the deduction of at least 5 per cent from the salaries of state employees to be paid into the state insurance fund and that the state should contribute an equal amount to the fund each year, at least until the fund becomes large enough and experience definite enough to show whether the percentages can be reduced.

Under the Federal law, the percentage paid by the employees and employers is smaller, ranging from 1 per cent to 3 per cent, with the result that the old age benefits paid are relatively small. Most of the state employees feel that the benefits or pensions paid after age 65 should be larger than the amounts paid by the Federal government and are hence willing to make larger contributions from their salaries.

But this, in turn, will mean that the setting up of such an old age benefits system by the state would cost the state more money. On the basis of contributions by employees of 5 per cent of their salaries each year, the school teachers alone would pay in over $900,000 a year and the state would have to contribute an equal amount. It is estimated that other state employees would contribute some $350,000 a year, with the result that the state would have to contribute at least $1,250,000 a year to this insurance fund to match the payments of state employees. The question is whether the legislature can find this additional $1,250,000 a year in new money.

"Our forestry experts say that at least 1-1/2 cords of pine wood per acre can be marketed year after year without depleting the supply, if the wood is properly cut."

BIG CONCERNS SEEKING SITES

Three Paper Pulp Plants Desire Location in State

Reflector Bureau, Sir Walter Hotel, Raleigh, Jan. 5.—At least three more large concerns are seeking locations for paper pulp plants in the eastern part of the state, one of which plans to manufacture news printing paper from pine pulp.

It was learned today from the Department of Conservation and Development. A new paper pulp plant has only recently decided to locate at Plymouth, where a large factory will be erected. Two large paper pulp plants are already located in the western part of the state — at Canton and Sylva — while a third plant is located at Roanoke Rapids in Halifax county.

The probable locations of the new plants could not be learned, other than that all three are planning to use loblolly pine wood in the manufacture of paper and pasteboard and that the new plants, when completed, will offer a market for several thousand cords of pine wood per day.

"Two definite advantages of the Department of Conservation and Development pointed out. One of these is that they will provide employment for hundreds of persons in the plants themselves, and build up large payrolls in the sections where they decide to locate, which in turn will help business in the entire eastern part of the state."

"A second and perhaps the biggest advantage is that it will offer a ready and profitable market to farmers and landowners for a crop which so far has been regarded as almost worthless—their pine trees. There are literally millions of acres of pine forest lands in the eastern part of the state which can be utilized by these pulp plants. If the farmers who own these lands will market their pine wood properly they can be assured of a good income from this source for years to come."

The Awkward Years

Boys frequently do a large part of their growing after they are 14. That a boy is small or even definitely undersized well on into his teens need not be a cause of undue worry. He may shoot up at the rate of two or three inches a year and end well above average height. His strength also increases perceptibly during these years. Often the increase in strength and height are not proportionate, and it is this physical unbalance and the resulting lack of co-ordination which makes the adolescent boy so awkward. It is really not his fault that he runs into the furniture, trips over the rug, cracks his mother's rib with a heavy bag or inadvertently pushes the frail cup that he is drying.

He does not mean to be awkward. He is probably straining every nerve and muscle not to do any of these clumsy things.

He knows that every one of these mishaps will be greeted either with roars of laughter or with annoyance or reproof. He is in a constant state of embarrassment which confuses him and leads him from bad to worse. He used to know where his hands and feet were, and just how much muscular effort was needed, to make them do as he wished. Now his hands and feet have suddenly become so remote that all his calculations are wrong, and his slightest gesture has a force which is forever causing catastrophes.

The less attention paid to a boy at this transition stage the better it is a period when he needs understanding. He is bound to wreak a certain amount of havoc wherever he goes, but fault-finding and laughter only make him worse. He is quite uncomfortable enough without having attention attracted to him, and the fullness of time will be his only cure.

Nurseries around Tyler, Tex., supply more than a third of the nation's roses, bringing a revenue of nearly $1,000,000 annually to growers.

The earliest English reference to peaches is in a will dated 1259. More than 10,000 cases of tuna are canned annually in Hawaii.

Wings for Sally
by DAILEY WOLF

Chapter 49
Under The Magnolias
AS if by common agreement, Philip and Sally took the garden path to the little clearing under the magnolias. The grass was deep and the unclipped hedges brushed their hands and faces.
"This place is a wilderness," said Philip. "I'm always forgetting to have the grass cut."
With a little sigh of contentment, Sally found the wicker chair under the biggest tree and sank into it. Philip sat down on the grass. The smell of the yellow jasmine was overpoweringly sweet. A little wind rustled the still leaves of the magnolias.
"When I sit here with you like this," confessed Philip, "what I have to say doesn't sound important enough to talk about." She stirred restlessly. "Yet—we do have some things to explain to each other."
Sally would have stopped him if she could. She did not want to know what he was about to tell her. She guessed that he had loved Mary and lost her. He wanted to be friends again. Sally would not let her pride stand in the way of that. If she could not have Philip's love, then his friendship was a thing to be grateful for. Only, if he did not speak and put the words between them, for this one time she could pretend that he was loved instead of friend.
"You're still going away?" he asked, after a time.
"Day after tomorrow," she told him, wondering how she could be so calm. He had only to say he wanted her to stay, and nothing could drive her away from Warrenton.
"I didn't know, until today, that you were taking another position," said Philip. "I took it for granted that you meant you were going away to be married."
"—going to be married?" Sally sat up straight with astonishment. "Whatever gave you that idea?"
"Some time ago Mary told me, when you were staying at her house, that you and Bob had fallen in love with each other."
"But—surely—you—you couldn't have believed that!"
"I was a fool to believe it," said Philip soberly. "But you seemed to be out with him a great deal. I—I felt that he was nearer your own age—that he had a great deal to offer you—and that I had no business trying to make you—care for me."
"That was stupid!" cried Sally. "Surely we were good enough friends—you could have talked to me about it." Tears of anger and relief came to Sally's eyes and she did not try to stop them.
"I was a stupid fool!"
"We were good friends," said Philip. "But when a man is in love, he ceases to be a friend. He loses the reasonableness he had in friendship."
"But Mary said you and she had an understanding—" Sally went on miserably.
"So we did," admitted Philip. "An understanding that I was not to allow the blackmail story to get to the newspaper. An understanding that she was not to come to my house again, alone, at night."
"But she did come! I saw her!"
"Yes, she did come. After she had promised not to," said Philip. "Mary imagined herself in love with me, but she never was. It was first a sort of infatuation born of boredom. Afterwards, she stuck to it because her father objected so strongly. The last time, when she came to the house that night, she was simply hysterical with the excitement of the trial and her father's illness."
"But you were in love with her," said Sally uncertainly. "You went out with her. You stopped letting me share the work with you—never called me into your office. All the hurt she had suffered for the weeks past came out now. That night you found me at the lodge, you were angry. You scarcely said a word."
"I was wrong. I was a stupid fool," said Philip. "I shut you out of the McDonald case because your father asked me to. I didn't want you to get mixed up in it any further. I knew I'd been wrong to let you get in as deep as I had."
"But there was more than that," Sally urged. "You were—almost like a stranger."
"I was," admitted Philip. "I thought you had fallen in love with young Dawes. I tried to tell myself you were easily consoled. I was angry with you. I was angry with myself for caring for you so much I could scarcely keep my mind on the job. Besides, I had the McDonald case on my hands, not to mention Mary and my own affairs, which were going badly. I knew I might lose this house and the paper."
"But why wouldn't you talk to me?" "I did once. When I told you I loved you, you begged me to stop. I saw, then, that you thought of me as a friend, as a sort of elderly comforter in time of trouble."
"That was a long time ago," said Sally in a low voice.
"The night I found you at the lodge," Philip went on. "I was half crazy for fear of what had happened to you. I was angry with you for getting yourself mixed up with Benton and his gang and running into danger. But when I found you—all that was swallowed up in—just loving you. I didn't mean to take you in my arms."
"But you did. Why did you let me go, then?" cried Sally. "Why did you—if you loved me?"
"If I loved you, my darling!" Philip cried, drawing her into his arms. "I wanted you to have your chance to get away from me because I loved you."
"What a funny thing to want—if you love someone," said Sally tremulously. The words were lost on Philip. He kissed her lips, her cheek, her hair.
The Magic Of The Garden
"I'll tell you, you love me, Sally," he insisted. "I want to hear you say it. Say it enough times to blot out all those fine speeches you made about not loving me but wanting my friendship."
"I love you, Philip."
There were no more words spoken for a long time. The magic of the garden wrapped them round. The wonder of their love could not find words to tell itself. Eventually Philip spoke again.
"I don't want you to make another mistake, honey. If you marry me, I've nothing to give you but a mortgaged business and a mortgaged house. We may even lose this garden."
"We couldn't," said Sally with firm conviction. "Why this is where we first saw each other."
"A very good reason for keeping the place," said Philip, but not one that would have any weight with the bank that holds the mortgage."
"I'll work and help you," said Sally staunchly. "I've saved enough to start Ray to college, and he's saved, too. Together we'll be able to save the house."
"Together we can do anything," said Philip. "There are a lot of things to fight for still in this town. We've only begun to make it a better place to live in for the McDonalds and the rest of us." He held one of Sally's hands firmly in his. "But it means we're committed to fighting and working—not to making money."
"I'm glad," said Sally. "That makes it perfect."
"When I came here," Philip went on, "you wanted romance—if I remember, you said Terry had offered you wings to fly away from the humdrum life you'd always had—"
Sally put a small hand firmly over his mouth.
"It's not fair to tease me about Terry," she said. "I was a silly girl when you first came. I dreamed about running away from unpleasant things. I guess I didn't really love Terry at all. I loved the excitement I thought he could give me."
"But I can't promise you excitement," teased Philip. "I promise to give you a job."
"You've already taught me that I can't fly away on anybody else's wings," said Sally. "I've got to— to grow my own."
"And even then I may not let you use them," threatened Philip. He pulled her head down on his shoulder. "Not if you plan to fly away from me."

The Coats twins of Seattle, Wash.—Louise and Lois—anc the Sharp twins of Corinth, Miss.—Hubert and Herbert—were married at Marion, Ark., two weeks after their first meeting. Starting four years ago when the girls inserted an ad in a newspaper, their romance thrived by correspondence in the mails. They are shown honeymooning in Memphis. KEEP THEM SEPARATED

Because of the big profits being derived by some of the counties from the legalized sale of liquor, the liquor question is going to be one of the big bones of contention in the coming session of the legislature.
While we believe that there should be a uniform law under which every county that desires to sell liquor should operate, we do not favor the setting up of a state system with the purchase and control in the hands of a state board, for experience has shown that there can be no form of a state board for anything in which politics does not play a great part.
If North Carolina will keep politics out of its attempt at liquor control and keep as much liquor as possible out of its politics, we will find that the state will do a better job all along the line.

How's Your Health?
By Dr. Igo Goldston
Man and Animals
Medicine does not follow closely Pope's dictum that "The proper study of mankind is man." Medicine draws as much profit from the study of animals as from that of human beings. Indeed, without the study of animals and their reactions to various disease agents, we would be seriously limited in our war against disease.
At the same time it is to be understood that the well-being of mankind is not entirely separated from that of the rest of the animal world. Man depends upon animals for food and for a variety of essential materials. As long as man and animals co-exist, the diseases of one are quite likely to affect the other.
Among the conditions common to both man and animals may be counted hydrophobia, plague, anthrax, glanders, tuberculosis and psittacosis, or parrot fever.
As man has gained in the war against diseases through the use of animals, experimental and otherwise, so animals have gained freedom from disease by the discovered facts. But the store of knowledge to be gained in animal experimentation and through the study of animal life has been drawn on but meagerly.
There are many fascinating problems concerning resistance to disease as well as on the development of pathologic conditions which remain to be explored. For example, it has been widely thought that cirrhosis or hardening of the liver in human beings is mainly traceable to the excessive consumption of alcohol, and yet cirrhosis of the liver is found affecting certain animals which, of course, consume no alcohol. The guinea pig and the cow fall easy victims to the germs of tuberculosis, but the rat is resistant to it.
Even psychology and psychiatry gather much from animal study and experimentation. The contributions made by Pavlov in the study of dog behavior are world famous. In recent times it has been shown that animals can suffer from symptoms similar to those witnessed in insanity in man. Dogs may be thrown into a state of hysteria by being required to perform tasks beyond their capacity, a circumstance which parallels the engendering of hysteria in human beings.

HIGH PRAISES FOR GOVERNOR

Review of Administration Shows Accomplishments

Reflector Bureau.
Sir Walter Hotel.
By J. C. BASKERVILLE
Raleigh, Jan. 5.—When the administration of Governor J. C. B. Ehringhaus comes to an end at noon Thursday, as he turns the wheel of the ship of state over to incoming Governor Clyde R. Hoey, he will leave behind a record of accomplishment that is going to make him go down in history as one of the great Governors of North Carolina, those who have been evaluating this record are convinced.
For while his record is not spectacular, it is the sort of record which shows real and solid accomplishment along many lines and shows up best under close examination. This record also shows that while Governor Ehringhaus has probably been one of the poorest politicians who has ever served as Governor, judging from the generally accepted meaning of the term, in that he has not played the kind of politics that most of the politicians wanted him to play many believe, that his new kind of politics, based on efficiency and an insistence that full value must be received for every dollar of public money expended, carried him a long way.
Virtually everyone who has come in contact with him, opponents as well as friends, agree that Governor Ehringhaus throughout his administration has shown the courage of his convictions, a keen insight into governmental problems, an unimpeachable honesty, unchanging courtesy, continuous good sportsmanship, fine fighting ability and an amazing amount of intestinal fortitude.
While people generally are inclined to regard the financial accomplishments of Governor Ehringhaus as the most outstanding achievements of his administration, those who are familiar with his record during the past four years maintain that his accomplishments in the fields of public education, agriculture, prison reform, governmental reorganization, labor reforms and social security are just as outstanding.
When Governor Ehringhaus took office as Governor four years ago, not only was he a sick man, but the state was sick as well—financially sick. Not only did he find the state with a deficit of $15,000,000, but it was facing steadily decreasing revenues, with banks bursting like firecrackers, and with factories and business concerns shutting down or falling on every hand.
In fairness to former Governor O. Max Gardner it should be said that this deficit was not any fault of his but was largely due to the failure of the 1931 general assembly to levy enough taxes to meet appropriations and especially to its failure to extend to the Governor and budget bureau the power to reduce the appropriations for schools, just as it had the power to reduce other appropriations.
At this same time, the state's bonds had dropped as low as $70, the state could not borrow a nickel in New York and was being pressed for the immediate payment of some $6,000,000 in short term notes, bearing 6 per cent interest. In addition, counties, cities and towns were defaulting on their indebtedness to counties and cities were not able to collect the taxes due them and the schools were being faced with the spectre of having to close for lack of money to pay the teachers, to buy fuel and to operate buses. Those were bleak, dark sick days for a new Governor and a sick Governor to face.

But Governor Ehringhaus was not discouraged, not frightened and unafraid. He rolled up his sleeves and went to work. He held the 1933 general assembly that first of all must assemble the budget—provide a dollar of revenue for every dollar appropriated. He also maintained that with the tremendous shrinkage in property values, and the difficulty of collecting taxes, the only way to keep the schools open was to transfer school maintenance to the state—and that the schools must be kept open, even though a general sales tax should be required.

There never has been a session of the general assembly like that of 1933 session and those who went through it hope there never will be another. And while it wore the toughest and hardest members down and almost out, Governor Ehringhaus seemed to thrive and grow stronger as it progressed. When it was over, the budget was balanced, the state's credit had been restored, the schools had been kept open, property taxes had been reduced to the extent of at least $12,000,000 a year or in an amount equal to one-third of the total property tax bill of the state and the state government was being operated on a cash and carry, pay-as-you-go plan, which has been maintained for four years. Since the day Governor Ehringhaus took office four years ago, the state of North Carolina has not had to borrow one penny for operating expenses or to pay out one cent of interest on any tax anticipation notes.
When the present biennium ends June 30, 1937, the state will have a credit balance of at least $4,500,000 in the state treasury—the balance is almost this large now—while at the present time North Carolina bonds are back above par and being sought after by investors everywhere as among the safest and best investments that can be found. In addition, the state has paid off something like $24,000,000 of its bonded debt during the four years, or more than it had paid off in all the administrations of all former Governors. Within this same four year period, the state and local governments have paid off approximately $60,000,000 in debts, of which $36,000,000 has been paid off by counties, cities and towns.
But the administration of Governor Ehringhaus has been almost as notable for what it has done for the public schools as for what it has accomplished for the state's finances. For while the assumption of the cost of maintaining the schools by the state has undoubtedly worked a hardship on some of the city school systems which had nine months terms and which were cut back to eight months, the Ehringhaus-sponsored program of state support for the schools from indirect taxation has brought an eight months school term to every child in the state, has resulted in keeping every school in the state open and in every teacher getting paid promptly every month. If the state had not assumed the task of maintaining the schools, it is generally agreed that in most of the rural sections of the state, the schools could not and would not have been operated for more than three to five months a year during the past four years. The state has increased its expenditure for schools from $16,000,000 a year in 1933-34 to $21,000,000 this year (1936-37) and is expected to boost this to at least $24,000,000 a year during the next two years... with the local unit having the privilege and right to supplement this.

Succession Of Precedents Marks History - Making Reign Of Pope

BLESSING BY BROADCAST

The reign of Pius XI, Pope during some of the most troublesome years the world has known, has been marked by history-making precedents, including the introduction of the most modern means of communicating with his far-flung church. Here he broadcasts his blessing to a congregation in Ireland.

Seven years after his election in 1922 came one of his most noteworthy achievements—reconciliation with the Italian government. No longer a "prisoner in the Vatican" Pius emerged from its confines—the first Pope to do so since 1870—and went to St. John Lateran Church in Rome to pray.

Another achievement for which he is most famed is modernization of the Vatican. The pontiff brought to the Vatican electric lights, a telephone system, a radio system, modern fire department, roads and a railroad. In this picture, he is turning on the steam that furnishes the city with electricity.

Pius set another papal precedent when he became the first to wear ear talking pictures. The occasion was the reconstruction of the world's first ultra short-wave telephone station at Vatican City on February 11, 1923. This is how he looked through the lens of the camera as he talked freely for the benefit of the sound recorder.

In recent years as he wrestled with problems beset by unrest in many countries, recent reports that the Pope was ill have reached the world. But he has maintained his rigorous work schedule. On February 6, 1936, he was carried on the papal throne to St. Peter's for the celebration of the 14th anniversary of his coronation.

him 9,000,000 votes or retire. Calmly, men of science journeyed to Boston. Sir Arthur Eddington had calculated the number of electrons in the universe (a figure 30 digits long; he couldn't remember it all offhand) and Dr. Edward Kanner had solved the Greeks' horn-angle riddle and evolved a non-Archimedean geometry in which the whole was less than the sum of its parts. The widespread parts of man's knowledge were to be co-ordinated into a whole, insofar as possible, at the Harvard tercentenary.

ESCAPE IF YOU CAN BY FREDERICK JACKSON

Chapter One. A Russian Dancer Intrigues Her Shipmates

IN ONE way or another, most of the passengers in the same class get acquainted before the ship is three days out from port, but on that particular crossing, nobody had succeeded in making the acquaintance of Madame Karsanokoff. And although there would have been gossip about her in any case, there was a good deal more owing to her plain determination to remain aloof. Neither Bigelow nor Dr. Austrelitz—with whom he was traveling—had made any attempt to speak to her, but a number of others had without accomplishing anything. If she happened to be walking when addressed, she always replied politely if briefly and passed on. If she happened to be lying out in her steamer chair, swathed in furs, she acknowledged whatever observation was made to her and closed her eyes. "Woody" Taylor had been the most persistent in making friendly overtures to Madame Karsanokoff.

deck chair or in her cabin—which was directly opposite Bigelow's. On that particular voyage, there happened to be no other celebrity on board, except Dr. Austrelitz, of course, and there is never so much interest in a psychologist—even a world-famous psychologist—as in the most inconsequential theatrical personality. And Karsanokoff was well up toward the top of her profession. So naturally everybody on the ship watched and dissected Karsanokoff. exchanged revealed the friendship that existed between them in spite of the difference in their ages. Bigelow was accustomed to explaining that he had inherited Austrelitz, who had been a close friend of his father. "She is such a perfect specimen of her type," continued Bigelow, "so sleek and well groomed—so poised." Austrelitz nodded. "And she looks, he agreed, 'as if she knows everything there is to know about life and finds nothing worth while.' "Exactly." "Whereas," pursued the doctor laughing offily, "she really knows nothing and finds everything worth while. She merely has the gift of inspiring one's imagination. That is what makes famous courtesans. They need not be beautiful; they need not be clever nor talented; they need not be even young; they need not be able to stir a man's romantic imagination. This intangible quality—which I believe was called 'glamor' yesterday—is only a kind of mirage." Austrelitz drank his brandy and drew out his cigar case. With loving care, he selected a cigar, punctured the end and lighted it. Bigelow admired the long, slender, clever fingers. Then his thoughtful brown eyes moved upward to study the lean, tanned face of the older man. It was an arresting face. Bigelow wondered how many women had loved this man—he was so obviously the type that appealed to women.

SUBJECT OF CONVERSATION. Mary Astor takes stand in child custody case

By VOLTA TORREY (AP Feature Service Writer). Last August the fascist forces neared Madrid and the war dogs growled louder far from Madrid. Berlin, furious when Spanish pilots sank four German ships, ordered her fleet to attack if Spain went on halting ships. Moscow thundered "war is near" and accused the Reich and Japan of forming an alliance. Paris, staid by London, bustled with efforts to keep hands off the hot Spanish fireworks. Washington warned Americans they could continue sestas in Spain only at their own risk. F.D.E. Bares Attack. At Rapid City, S. D., the President on a "journey of husbandry," released more foreign news: A U. S. Destroyer had been attacked thrice by an unidentified airplane off the Spanish coast. "It had fired back. "I hate war," Roosevelt had emphasized earlier. A battle of another sort was being fought at home: Searing sunshine sent swarms of farmers onto WPA. More than a thousand forest fires darkened the sky.

Batista, Cuba's "President-Maker", Scores Again

OUT OF THE RANKS
Presidents have core and presidents have gone in Cuba, pretty much at the whim of Fulgencio Batista since September 4, 1933.

HIS FIRST PRESIDENT
The revolutionary junta headed by Batista named Dr. Ramon Grau San Martin (right) to the presidency and then the ex-army court stenographer, who wasn't given a ghost of a chance to succeed, met with flying colors.

THE COLONEL TAKES STOCK
Three years later—snarling groomed in a medal-bedecked uniform—Batista seemed to be dreaming of glory, past and future, while he reviewed the third anniversary of his coup.

ANOTHER CRISIS
Cuba faced with another crisis with Colonel Batista, here leading his men on a recent march, filling his usual role of the "man behind the throne." Batista's follows sponsored impeachment against President Miguel Gomez for opposing a sugar tax bill and army-taught rural schools.

THREE YEARS AFTER
Three years in power have matured Cuba's "iron man" who defies dictatorial ambitions but who has turned his important military command to his advantage in making—and breaking presidents.

STATE URGED WIELD CLUP OVER GASOLINE COMPANIES

this state or any other state to go into the gasoline and oil business, and with that threat constantly over their heads they are not likely to run the risk of offending the state to the point where it would build its own gasoline and oil terminal. In other words, most observers here believe that if this $100,000 should be appropriated, the money would never have to be spent, since the mere fact that it was there would serve as an almost perpetual insurance policy against discrimination and unfavorable prices on the part of the gasoline companies.

The word came from the unofficial committee on senate patronage, which explained that Holt "gave comfort, if not aid, to those who were seeking to defeat the Democratic national ticket, and also opposed the election of a Democrat to the United States senate."
