PARENTS FEAR FOR HEALTH OF KIDNAP VICTIM

Coldest Weather of Winter Alarms Mattson Family

ANOTHER KIDNAP NOTE IS PRINTED

Fourth in Series Believed to Be From Family of 10-Year-Old Chas. Mattson

Seattle, Wash., Jan. 7.—(AP)—The Seattle Times carried a new advertisement in its personal columns, fourth of a series believed to be from the family of Charles Mattson of Tacoma to his kidnapers today.

It stated: "I am giving all the notes. I am not intercepting them. I accept your message of identification. All requests have been carried out. I will do as instructed without anyone knowing—Ann."

Tacoma, Wash., Jan. 7.—(AP)—Coldest weather of the winter today alarmed the parents of Charles Mattson who believed the 10-year-old boy might be suffering from exposure.

The thermometer went to 15 above zero during the night as the kidnappers ignored opportunities to return the victim or collect $28,000 ransom.

Dr. W. W. Mattson, the boy's father, was more apprehensive that Charles, recovering from a cold which seized December 27, might be seriously affected if he were being kept in an outlying, poorly heated shack as some other kidnap victims have been.

Dr. Mattson has made careful preparations for the boy's care when and if he is turned loose.

It was agreed to extend all of the emergency acts until June 30, 1939, with the provisions the president could end the lending functions of RFC.

Germany, Italy Reply To Pleas

Answer France and Germany on Non-Intervention

(By the Associated Press)
Germany and Italy, the fascist powers of Europe, answered French and British pleas, that they stop sending volunteers to Spain, in conciliatory, yet reserved notes tonight. Both replies were said to agree in principle that volunteers should not go from other countries, in help with the Spanish government or insurgents.

London, Jan. 7.—(AP)—Great Britain, with a warning eye on her mighty fleet massing in Spanish waters, locked to Germany and Italy today for a "constructive" answer to demands for non-intervention in the Spanish civil war.

Observers pointed out British men of war were moving toward Spain in sufficient numbers to enforce a blockade of the peninsula should such action become necessary. At the same time a statement in Glasgow last night by Sir Thomas Inskip, defense coordination minister that there would be no army conscripts during peace time was taken to mean Britain was ready to draft soldiers immediately if peace was endangered.

Greenville People At Inauguration

Greenville was well represented, both officially and unofficially, at the inaugural ceremonies for Clyde R. Hoey in Raleigh today.

The local unit of the National Guard accepted an invitation to take part in the program and be in the parade. Forty-five men and two officers left here early this morning by motor and arrived in Raleigh in time to be entertained at dinner.

The unit's commander, J. H. Waldrop, was unable to leave his duties here and Lieutenant L. A. Brock and Lieutenant William S. Tyson took control. Mrs. Frances Spillman, daughter of Mrs. J. B. Spillman of Greenville and Raleigh, with her marshal, Louis Stewart Ficklen, will lead the grand march at the inaugural ball tonight.

In addition, a large number of Greenville individuals attended the inauguration and associated events. Some left last night, while others waited until this morning.

American Woman Leads Chinese Communist Move

Sanfu, Shensi, Province, China, Jan. 7.—(AP)—Agnes Smedley, an American, is credited with playing an important part in a campaign to establish a Communist empire in North-west China openly opposed to Chiang Kai Shek's government at Nanking.

The movement, reported to have attracted support from 200,000 members from Manchuria, China, Hsueh-Liang's former Manchurian army, together with Chinese communist forces numbering 50,000, has emerged into the open with a burst of propaganda led by Miss Smedley. Reliable sources declared communists in Shensi and Kansu provinces are in open revolt against the Central government as a development of Chiang's military rebellion in the Generalissimo was held prisoner two weeks last month. Miss Smedley's activities have been confined to radio propaganda. Several hours she broadcasts appeals in English for new recruits to the movement.

RESULTS SEEN FROM EFFORTS TO END STRIKES

Breach Between Employer-Worker Appears Narrowing

G. M. OFFICIALS SUGGEST TERMS

Conferences Launched at San Francisco Seeking End Pacific Coast Strike

Detroit, Jan. 7.—(AP)—James Dewey, United States Labor Department conciliator trying to bring together General Motors corporation officials with representatives of their striking employees, and Frank Murphy, Michigan governor, arrived at the General Motors offices today.

(By Associated Press)
Signs that employer-worker breaches were narrowing heartened conciliators today as they pressed efforts to shake the deadlocked automotive and maritime strikes.

At Detroit officials of the General Motors corporation submitted terms for a basis of negotiations with striking automobile workers of America. The union accepted all but one, which provided that "sit-down" strikers must leave General Motors plants. The strike has made 50,000 General Motors employees idle. Negotiators launched four peace conferences at San Francisco between ship operators and unions involved in the costly 70-day-old Pacific coast maritime tie-up. At stake was employment of 40,000.

New conferences were called at Detroit in the hope of a compromise agreement could be effected which would bring union and company officials together for discussion of the automotive strike issues.

TAR HEEL HELD IN EXTORTION

Newton Man Arrested for Sending Threatening Notes

Newton, N. C., Jan. 7.—(AP)—Joe Robinson, 18, a resident of Newton, was arrested here today in connection with threats received by C. M. Rowe, North Newton merchant, in a $2,000 extortion attempt.

Police did not reveal the evidence which led to the youth's detention. Young Robinson was merely doctored for "investigation."

Rowe, since last Sunday, had received four telephone calls, a letter and a post card, all advising him to bring $2,000 to the postoffice here "if you value your life."

Chief of Police Parks Robinson said the youth had been tentatively identified as the one who used a drug store telephone here at the time one of the calls was traced to it, but cafe employees said he was not the one who placed another of the calls over their telephone.

Buying power of the farmer's net income was the highest in December of any period in 17 years, according to the U. S. Bureau of Agricultural Economics.

Tobacco Compact Bill Sets Quota For State

Reflector Bureau, Sir Walter Hotel, Raleigh, Jan. 7.—The Tobacco Compact's measure drafted in Washington and sent here for adoption in the legislature as soon as that body gets down to business provides for assignment of a state marketing quota by joint action of state commissions, control of North Carolina's quota by a state commission chosen by tobacco producers, and payment to growers whose crops are short of their quota by reason of damage from weather, fire or disease.

It is provided that the measure shall become effective upon adoption by North Carolina, South Carolina, Virginia and Georgia in the case of flue-cured tobacco and by North Carolina, Virginia, Tennessee and Kentucky in the case of curly.

The bill covers 18 pages of legal cap paper and goes into great detail in setting out how quotas shall be determined.

Control of administration of the bill is kept in the hands of tobacco growers through the method of appointing state commissions. The whole process is set in motion by the Director of the State Agricultural Extension bureau who is directed to call a meeting of growers in each county at which three county commissioners are to be chosen. The Director then divides the state into from 3 to 7 districts and arranges for meetings of the county commissioners in each district. At these sessions three commissioners are chosen in each district and from these three the Governor names one to the state commission, upon which the Director or one member appointed by him likewise serves.

The state commissioners, under terms of the bill, then meet jointly with the commissions from the other compact states to set a marketing quota and a base yield for each state. The "marketing quota" of each state is to be that percentage of (Continued on page six)

Inauguration Program Filled With Pageantry

Clyde R. Hoey Becomes State's 31st Governor

Raleigh, Jan. 7.—(AP)—Clyde Roark Hoey of Shelby became North Carolina 31st governor, elected by the people at 12:48 this afternoon.

Chief Justice W. P. Stacy of the Supreme court administered the oath. Governor Ehringhaus in presenting Hoey said:

"In the comfort and satisfaction of a hard journey's end, in the consciousness of a never-flagging effort to do the right as I have seen it, in love for my state and conviction that she has chosen a capable captain for the voyage ahead, I proudly present for oath of office to her general assembly and her people, the governor-elect of North Carolina."

Raleigh, Jan. 7.—(AP)—Amid the traditional pageantry and fanfare associated with the quadrennial ceremonies, Clyde Roark Hoey of Shelby, 59-year-old lawyer (climaxed a 39-year career in Democratic ranks today as he became North Carolina's thirty-first elected governor.

Tousands jammed Memorial Auditorium and historic Fayetteville street for the procession, actual inauguration and delivery by Hoey of his inaugural address and the parade. Lacked up the capital's main thoroughfare from the auditorium to the capital.

A misty drizzle falling from laden skies failed to dampen the ardor of Hoey stalwarts from all parts of the state.

The ceremonies marking the entrance of the state on its second century of rule by governors elected by the people started shortly after 11 o'clock at the executive mansion.

Governor Ehringhaus, after a last breakfast at the mansion as the state's higher officer, walked to the veranda. He was announced by his adjutant general, J. Van B. Mett, and ranks upon ranks of uniformed members of the national guard honored him as a military band played "Hail to the Chief." He and Hoey then headed the inaugural procession.

Both divisions of the General Assembly held brief sessions in the halls in the capital, recessed and the members in a body marched to the auditorium for the inaugural (Continued on page four)

Patrolmen from all over the Eastern part of the state will be in the state capital to handle the traffic situation.

Claudius Jackson, 88, Is Claimed By Death

Raleigh, Jan. 7.—(AP)—Ransom Dodd, of Bunn, was killed, and M. J. Beddingfield, of Pine Ridge, suffered serious injuries in a car accident near Seaboard late last night. Officers today had not ascertained who was driving the machine the men were in. It crashed with one driven by R. E. McBryer, of Raleigh, who suffered minor cuts and bruises.

Claudius Jackson, 88, prominent citizen of the Ayden community died at 5 o'clock this morning at the home of Frank Hart, near Ayden.

Funeral services will be conducted from the home tomorrow afternoon. Burial will follow in the Jackson cemetery. Rev. R. F. Pittman, Free Will Baptist minister, will have charge of the services. Mr. Jackson is survived by a large number of relatives.

Free Textbooks, Cheaper Auto Tags, Restoration of Teachers' Salaries and Balanced Budget Among Recommendations in Inaugural Address

Raleigh, Jan. 7.—(AP)—Clyde R. Hoey, taking up the reins of North Carolina's government, called upon the Legislature today for 16 specific aids to the State's economic and social structure.

The new governor advocated, in brief, in his inaugural address:

2. Repeal of the sales tax on necessities.
3. Reorganization of the State Highway Commission for greater attention to the needs of local roads.

14. A national exposition, along the lines of the Texas Centennial, to advertise North Carolina to the nation.
15. A balanced budget.
16. Reappointment of legislative representation.

'Sandy' Graham Ends Long Career As Public Servant

Hillsboro Man, Defeated in Last gubernatorial Primary, to Be Missed in Legislature

Raleigh, Jan. 7.—When Sandy Graham handed over his gavel to Lieutenant Governor W. P. Horton during today's inauguration ceremonies his public career, at least a legislative career which had extended continuously from 1921—more than 15 years.

Sandy laughingly remarked that he retired "amid general rejoicing," but in a unanimous comment of those who spoke about it is a true criterion of opinion he actually quit the state's service leaving a feeling of deep regret to all those who have known him or served with him.

Mr. Hillsboro man, whose remarkable race for the gubernatorial nomination was one of the surprises of 1936, first came to the North Carolina legislature in 1921, less than two years after his return from military service in France. Even as a House "freshman" he made a deep impression on his colleagues and for almost a decade he was one of the landmarks on the house side of the legislature. He served continuously in every session through that of 1929 and returned (Continued on page four)

Clean Greenville Aim Of Officials

The Greenville Board of Aldermen last night instructed a committee to proceed with negotiations looking toward purchasing a new street sweeper and members declared that a drive would be waged to have the business firms sweep the sidewalks at night.

It was pointed out that a city ordinance provides that each firm shall clean the sidewalks in front of its business just before closing each night. By doing this, it was pointed out, the sweeper will remove the trash each night.

All members of the Board were anxious that the business men of the city cooperate in keeping the city clean. It was emphasized that without their co-operation it was impossible to keep the streets free of unsightly waste.

The old sweeper belonging to the city is practically worn out and does not do a good job of cleaning the streets. The new machine will cost approximately $6,500, but members of the Board declared it would be money well spent.

While he was born in Russia, he has lived in America for years and is considered an American. This is his twenty-fifth anniversary concert tour, and Greenville is very fortunate in securing a date this season.

He made his American debut in Boston in the fall of 1911 as guest soloist with the Boston Symphony Orchestra and was immediately hailed as a great artist. He was then only 22 years old, fresh from training under the great violin teacher, Auer, at the Imperial Conservatory in Petrograd.

His wife is Alma Guick, the noted singer, who retired from the concert stage at the height of her popularity. They, with their two children, live in a bungalow in the East Forties in New York City.

Miss Laura Rose, chairman of the committee on international relations of the A. A. U. W. Study Group, invited the Round Table to join the group and attend the meetings on Thursday afternoons at 3:30 o'clock in the Austin building of East Carolina Teachers College. These meetings begin January 14th.

Mrs. S. J. Everett, chairman of the program committee, announced the subject of Mrs. W. C. Vincent's paper, "Air Conditioning." In the absence of Mrs. Vincent on account of her recent sorrow, she had requested Mrs. C. T. Munford to read her paper. This very interesting paper covered the rolling of a boulder against the mouth of a cave by Ah, the cave man, until today, when air conditioning capable of keeping a house like June weather the year round with a unit as neat and handsome as a new automobile, capable of performing within itself the regulation temperature, humidity, cleanliness, circulation.

Price and perfection, the paper stated, depends in the future on the number that use it—a matter of volume and production. Air conditioning is used in everything from truck cabs to $300-foot deep mines. The benefits outside of increased comfort are improved health conditions, less house cleaning and less damage to books, painting and furniture.

The first job of modern air conditioning is supposed to have been done in a Rajah's palace in India in 1887. The first installed in the United States was in a lithographing plant in New York in 1903.

Mrs. W. B. Tighman gave a very interesting current event.

New Year cards were distributed for each one present to write a New Year's resolution. Little Sellers Crisp, the lovely son of Dr. and Mrs. S. M. Crisp, representing the New Year, entered with a basket to collect the cards. These were read by Mrs. Keck to the pleasure of all.

At the close of the meeting the hostess was assisted by Mrs. R. C. Merritt and Mrs. Hunter Keck in serving most delicious refreshments.

RED OAK NEWS

Red Oak home demonstration club made a good start Wednesday afternoon for the new year, 1937. The meeting was called to order by the president, Mrs. Leon Tyson. Mrs. Patrick Vainwright, our secretary, then read the minutes of our last meeting and called the roll. Twenty-four women answered and we had a new member to join our club, Mrs. Dora Griffin. Mrs. Bessie James, Mrs. Burney Moye and Mrs. Eld Tyson were appointed as a dish committee. The club now has cups and saucers, plates and glasses. We want to keep adding to those until we have plenty for our club use.

Addition to our present club house was discussed and we hope to have this addition by the end of the year so that we can have our social meeting there next December.

Mrs. James Allen and Mrs. Roy Allen volunteered to take our club curtains and have them rejuvenated by our next club meeting.

Mrs. Thurman Page assumed her duties as our new treasurer to succeed Mrs. Godfrey Evans. We were mighty sorry to give Mrs. Evans up but we were very fortunate in having Mrs. Page to take her place. Mrs. Evans will still have charge of the brooms. She says she has a dozen new ones on hand now.

Miss Inez Allen attended the leaders' school in Greenville Tuesday afternoon and she was present Wednesday afternoon to pass on the information gained at the school to us. She did this in a most enjoyable way. She was followed by Miss Nice who added a few points to what Inez had said. The subject was "Foundation Planting." We were very sorry that our other leader, Miss Rubelle Vandiford, could not be present. Several of our club members were sick. We wish for them a speedy recovery.

Delicious decorated cakes and hot chocolate were served by our hostesses for January, who were Messdames James Allen, Hazard May, Billy May, Misses Myrtle May and Ella V. May.

Immediately after the meeting we adjourned to the outdoors where Messrs. Tom Manning, Hazard May and Billy May had prepared the ground around our club house in which to get the shrubs that each club member had been asked to bring. About forty shrubs were planted. The club wishes to thank these men for helping us in this work.

We hope that the year 1937 will mean much to us in our club work. Friends of Miss Minnie Ella Smith, daughter of H. C. Smith, will be sorry to know that she was painfully hurt at school this week when she fell against the brick wall of the building. The doctor reports that she is getting along nicely now.

We will begin practice for the community sing right away. The sing will be at Walstonburg on the fifth Sunday night in January. This is the second in a series of sings to be held this year in the churches of this group. The first was held the fifth Sunday night in October at Red Oak and was enjoyed by a large audience. We are looking forward to being at Walstonburg on January 31st.

CELEBRATE GOLDEN WEDDING

Mr. and Mrs. John Franklin Young

Mr. and Mrs. John Franklin Young, of near Farmville, observed their 50th wedding anniversary on Tuesday, January 5.

Most of their six children, forty-two grand-children, and five great grand-children honored them on this occasion by giving them a surprise supper at their home near Bell Arthur.

Mr. Young celebrated his seventy-third birthday on October 27th.

at which time the tenth annual barbecue dinner was served by his family and a group of friends.

Mrs. Young's sixty-seventh birthday was celebrated in August in a similar manner.

The couple have resided in Pitt, Greene and Edgecombe counties, having purchased their present home in 1919 and have lived there since that time.

"Have-nots" were advanced not as vague theories but as practical possibilities. Based as they were on various backgrounds of religion, economics, sociology and politics these suggestions formed the basis for a most interesting and stimulating discussion and one which led to a clearer understanding of the implications of true neutrality.

These meetings sponsored by the local peace council are being held in the library of the Greenville High School on Wednesday evenings at 8:30. The same plan is to be followed regularly, namely a brief lecture by a well informed leader followed by an informal discussion for the remainder of the hour.

Next Wednesday, January 13, Dr. A. D. Frank of the college faculty will speak on definite phases of neutrality, for which last night's meeting gave background. All interested persons are invited to attend this and other coming meetings.

First Meeting In Series Held Here On Peace Action

United States Foreign Policy From Beginning of History to Present. Recounted by Speaker

The Greenville Council for Peace Action opened last night the first of a series of discussions on problems of international relations and neutrality. Rev. W. A. Ryan leading the meeting reviewed briefly the foreign policy of the United States from the beginning of its history to the present time and from that drew some general deductions as to what the future policies of our government might be.

In the informal discussion which followed, many methods of attaining security for America, and ultimate world peace were mentioned. Removing the profit motive from war, promoting international understanding, offering fair opportunities for advancement and the idea of the "Haves" sharing with the

FIGHTS WAGED FOR POSITIONS

Bitter Undercover Battle Fought Over Chairmanships

Reflector Bureau, Raleigh, Jan. 7.—A bitter undercover fight has been in progress and is more and more intense for the chairmanships of the house and senate agriculture committees, it was learned here today. The reason for this unusual interest in the agriculture committees is the expectation that a tobacco compact bill will be introduced early in the session and the forces for and against this bill are anxious to have chairmen named who will be favorable to them, according to most observers here.

The two most influential farm organizations in the state, the Grange and the North Carolina Farm Bureau, are already on record as favoring the enactment of a tobacco control and compact bill, while most of the large tobacco farmers are also interested in the enactment of a bill of this nature. They believe that it will limit acreage, hence decrease the size of the tobacco crop and accordingly compel the tobacco manufacturer to pay higher prices for their tobacco.

The compact and crop control movement is also regarded as having the full approval and cooperation of the U. S. Department of Agriculture and the Federal Agricultural Extension Service.

But not all of the tobacco farmers favor the bill, it is readily agreed. The smaller tobacco farmers feel that it hurts rather than helps them and give the big tobacco growers a tremendous advantage, especially if the Federal government does not enact a law prohibiting the transportation and sale of tobacco across state lines. For without this law, the smaller farmers maintain that the big farmers can haul their excess crop into another state and sell it, so that those who violate the compact law the most will gain the most and those who conform will be penalized.

It is also agreed that most of the tobacco warehousemen are opposed to the compact plan, in the belief that it will hurt the warehousemen and the small farmers and tend to help the big growers. As a result, most of the warehousemen are expected to line up with the smaller tobacco growers in opposition to the compact law unless Federal prohibition of interstate shipment and sale is guaranteed. It is also believed that the tobacco manufacturers are opposed to any form of compact or tobacco control legislation. There are also some 40 counties which do not grow tobacco which are not interested one way or the other.

There are four active candidates for the chairmanship of the house agriculture committee, as follows: W. W. Eagles of Edgecombe, a farmer, who was chairman of the committee during the 1935 session; William Wiley Andrews of Wayne, also a farmer, who was vice chairman of the committee during the 1935 session and presided over many of the hearings, due to the injuries sustained by Eagles in two automobile accidents; W. E. Fenner of North county, a Rocky Mount tobacco warehouseman and business man, and Claude C. Abernethy of Spring Hope, Nash county, a lawyer.

In the senate the three men being most prominently mentioned as under consideration for chairman of the agriculture committee are W. G. (Uncle Willie) Clark of Tarboro, Ernest V. Webb of Kingston and L. L. Gravelly of Rocky Mount. Clark is a merchant and farm owner, while Webb is a tobacco warehouseman and Gravelly another tobacco man.

It is known that the State Grange has already sent a committee to call on Speaker R. Gregg Cherry of Gastonia, asking him to name Eagles chairman of the house committee. It is also understood that W. Kerr Scott, new former master of Agriculture, and former master of the Grange, was named a member of this committee, but did not serve, also that he is personally backing Fenner for the chairmanship. Yesterday the directors of the N. C. Farm Bureau Federation met here and named a secret committee to call on Speaker Cherry and Lieut. Governor W. P. Horton to urge the appointment of a "dirt farmer" as chairman—that is, either Eagles or Andrews and neither Fenner nor Abernethy. This also means that this Farm Bureau committee urged the appointment of Clark as chairman of the senate agriculture committee rather than Webb or Gravelly. It is also believed that the Grange will urge the selection of Senator Clark as chairman of the senate committee rather than either Webb or Gravelly.

The belief in most circles here today, however, is that Eagles will not be re-named chairman of the house agriculture committee, since he headed it two years ago, also that the chances look better for Fenner than any one else.

The house in which Gen. Sam Houston, liberator of Texas, died at Houston, Tex., has been restored and opened to the public.

Hollywood Sights And Sounds

By Robbin Coons

HOLLYWOOD — When Bill James, newspaper reporter booted a theatrical troupe's train to do some interviewing, he spent most of his time with the blonde, statuette comedienne, whom he promptly nicknamed "Duchess."

Eight months later he telegraphed his proposal of marriage, and Margaret Irving became Mrs. Bill James. They are in Hollywood now, and Bill is getting the nickname in reverse. His friends hail him as "Duke."

For it seems that Margaret Irving, after all, really is a duchess—"the last duchess of Navarre." Born in Kentucky and transported to the stage via a beauty contest when she was 13, Miss Irving had not bothered to look up her ancestry, she says, until that day in New York—during the run of "As Thousands Cheer"—when she met Georges Levee, wealthy Parisian.

Parisian Traces Line
It was at a party, and she noticed that Levee kept staring at her. Hadn't he met her before? In Paris, perhaps? No? Still, he was certain... Ah, he had it now! She was the image of the portrait of Marguerite of Navarre in the Louvre. Was she descended from that line? Why yes... and she'd understood vaguely that back in the family history there was a title, but—

The upshot was that Mr. Levee declared he would investigate upon his return to France. Back to the War of the Roses and beyond he went, and according to his reports to her, there is no doubt that she is sole heiress to the medieval dukedom.

But the lady is taking the surprise in stride. She is waiting for time off from pictures to go to France. "I've no idea," she says, "what the properties amount to. Seems you have to appear in person to establish your claim, and I may get away next summer. But I understand they hold you responsible for everything your ancestors did—and I want to be sure there wasn't a horse thief or two among them!"

Plays Menace Role.
She was brought to Hollywood for "Thanks a Million," and got an encore—not as a comedienne, but as a menace. In "San Francisco" she was Clark Gable's underworld gal, and in "Charlie Chan at the Opera," she has her first singing role. She is under contract to Mervyn LeRoy, but to date has been kept busy by other producers.

As for being a duchess, she laughs: "Same as washday—just another Monday." And the good-natured "duke"? "Why, it makes me the logical butt for the smartcracks of my friends, he says, "and that's about all."

HOLLYWOOD — The most ingratiating thing about Patsy Kelly's wisecracks is the unstrained, casual ease with which she tosses them about.

help you because they're going to keep on trying until you laugh. If they think you didn't hear the first time, they'll repeat so willingly.

Patsy is natural.

Not Patsy. The girl just talks that way, and doesn't try. That may be why, when you try to reduce her humor to print, it seldom jells. As they always say of the village cut-up, "it's not what she says so much as the way she says it."

She was telling us on the set the other day she thought she'd have to start saving her money. Once she'd thought she was safe. She was no glamor gal, but she had something the glamor gals hadn't. She was always willing to be the Patsy. Custard pie? Sure, right in the face.

"But I went to a movie last night," she said, "and what d'ya think? The beauties are stealing my stuff. When gorgeous girls like Irene Dunne, Carole Lombard and Joan Crawford are going in for comedy, will anybody there see Kelly—with a pan like mine? I'm saving my money from now on."

So saying, she went into a scene which demonstrated how little she needs to worry. Ben Bernie, here for a picture, was telling her how his recent tour made him glad that ever you saw, she was going to be in the Bernie-Winchell movie. Everybody wanted to know about Patsy Kelly.

The old maestro was out for lunch, talking over a broadcast idea with Patsy. He and the two gag-writing gentlemen he brought along were gleeful about their program, but they were more ecstatic about it when Patsy hit her stride.

She's Kept Busy.
Most actors (you're welcome, Bernie) are happy to have Patsy Kelly in their films. She may steal them, but she also will keep an audience from feeling it's been robbed. She is kept pretty busy. "Twenty minutes between pictures," she said, "and I'm sitting tired. I go to bed early Saturday night when I could stay up, and then last night I stay up till 5:30 talking over old times with a visitor from Brooklyn. That's Kelly—no sense."

A GOOD BEGINNING
 The North Carolina General Assembly got off to a good beginning yesterday when the first bill presented was for abolishing the absentee ballot law in this state. There is no one thing that has had more effect in corrupting the politics in this state than the absentee voting privilege. Through the absentee balloting, thousands of illegal votes find their way into the ballot boxes in this state and in many instances it is charged that ballots are cast in the names of persons long dead.

Voting should be a personal matter with every voter going to the polls in person and casting his or her vote without interference from the outside.

The absentee ballot law should be repealed and the measure, also introduced yesterday, that would abolish markers at the polls and prohibit anyone entering the voting places but the voters and the authorized election officials, should likewise be passed.

We believe that the average voter desires cleaner politics and more honest elections in this state and the legislature can help assure these things by adopting the above measures.

WASHINGTON—Senate investigators have set out to present the Van Sweringen railroad empire as a "made to order" sample of a system jockeyed about by financiers who know little or nothing of the actual operation of the lines they control.

It was not a piece of investigational blundering that prompted the senate committee to call to the stand first the famous bottle maker, George A. Ball, who for a pittance had come into control of a railroad and industrial empire with ramifications beyond his dreams.

Here was a maker of bottles whose name was as familiar to many a housewife as was the name of her favorite remedy for aches and pains. Suddenly he somehow blossomed out as an operator of railroads. How? Oh, high finance had toiled him into the job, mercy knows how, but certainly not of his own desire.

That is precisely the sort of picture Senator Wheeler, chief of the investigation, wanted to draw. Testimony of security deals, of new corporations formed to govern dozens of other corporations, of dribbles of money somehow able to control rushing trains loaded with coal and wheat and oil, all was intended to arouse amazement that the whole system should not collapse.

How does anybody remember to put new ties in the roadbed? How can a Cleveland bottle maker, as true as he may be in his own field, understand that hundreds of refrigerator cars are needed in Texas in early January to handle the mid-winter turkey pool?

ESCAPE IF YOU CAN BY FREDERICK JACKSON

SYNOPSIS: Plainly determined to remain aloof, Madame Karsanokoff, the striking looking Russian dancer, arouses great interest among her shipmates. Bigelow, the young American whose home is Paris, discusses her with his old friend, Dr. Austrelitz, the psychologist. Woody Taylor, the millionaire playboy, invades Karsanokoff's cabin with champagne and drunkenly urges her to drink. Barefoot, in negligee, the dancer is thankful when Bigelow offers help and removes the offending Woody. She invites Bigelow to return and share the champagne.

'Do You Know Vronski?'

BIGELOW refilled their glasses.

"You think they will like me in New York?" Karsanokoff asked eagerly.

"I am sure of it. You will have an enormous success and make more money than you have ever made before," he promised.

"That is good." She nodded her head gravely. "A singer has not so very long. Actresses—singers—they can go on forever. But not a dancer!" She sighed, and setting down her glass on the floor, relaxed, clasping her hands behind her head and staring moodily into space. It was as though the thought of the future cast a shadow over her. "But I shall be bored in America, bored, not... The people?—One hears they are very good and pure and quickly disapprove. One must avoid scandal. It is not like Paris where one can live as one chooses. Is it not?"

"Oh, New York is quite cosmopolitan," he answered. "There are people of all races and nationalities, there. Even scores of Russians who will quickly claim you. And that reminds me—do you know Count Anton Vronski?"

"She sat up abruptly and looked at him. 'Count Anton Vronski?' she repeated.

"Yes, a Russian exile. He used to live in Paris, I understand, but he is in New York now."

"It is a name very well known in Russia," she answered slowly, "but the man you mean I feel quite sure I have never met. What age has he?"

"I can't tell you that. I've never met him myself, but he is a friend of some friends of mine. I should think he'd be fairly young."

"I should like to meet—Count Anton Vronski," said she.

"Long after he had left her, Bigelow wondered what had been in her mind then. If she hadn't met him, she had certainly heard of him and knew something about him. That was obvious. There had been a guarded look in her eyes; something tense in her manner. He made up his mind before he went to sleep that somehow he would contrive to bring Vronski and Karsanokoff together. . . .

Dinner With The Dancer

THE next day, when she appeared on deck in the afternoon, Bigelow introduced her to Austrelitz. And to the astonishment of the rest of the passengers, the three of them dined together that night. Woody Taylor, she told them, had apologized most humbly for his unpardonable behavior the night before and had been forgiven, but he was not included in her little party.

She was in white satin and wore pearls and looked incredibly soigné and lovely. And she put herself out to be charming to them both. They talked about the various cities of Europe that they all knew and a few acquaintances that they had in common. But although Austrelitz spoke of Russia, she had little to say about her own country, explaining that she had left home as a small child—just after the revolution—and had never been back there. Vronski's name was not mentioned, although Bigelow had confided to Austrelitz the fact that she seemed to know something of the man she was disinclined to tell.

Before they parted, Karsanokoff told them she planned to go to the Carlton and asked them to come to see her there. They both promised.

The next day they landed. They had been so delayed by fog that although they were due to dock at one o'clock, it was after eight before they finally got in. As one of Bigelow's trunks was mislaid, he did not reach his hotel until after ten.

However, he had cabled ahead for rooms and a suite in the tower was awaiting him.

"The key is at the floor desk on your floor, Mr. Bigelow," said the reception clerk, when he registered.

A bell boy with his bags conducted Bigelow to the elevator.

On the thirty-second floor, as they approached the desk, Bigelow saw a girl in conversation with the floor clerk. And as he advanced toward her, he thought her quite the loveliest girl he had ever seen.

She had thick tawny hair with gold lights in it, and skin of creamy tan. Under her dark coat, he caught a glimpse of a gold frock, and gold slippers peeped out as she turned for an instant on their approach. Her eyes were blue with very thick lashes and delicately arched brows, and her finely modeled features had distinction. There was something arrogant about the tilt of her head—and in her eyes as they met his casually, a sudden flash of something like defiance.

"Yes, he told me he might be delayed," she said in sweet, rather husky tones, continuing her conversation with the desk clerk, "but he said he would leave his key for me so that I could wait in his rooms."

"Yes, miss," said the floor clerk, and handed out a key. The girl turned then, without another glance at Bigelow and moved off down the hall.

Who Was The Girl?

BIGELOW saw the bell boy who was waiting with his bags wink at the woman behind the desk, who smiled slightly and discreetly lowered her eyes. Then Bigelow's key was produced and the bell boy led the way to his rooms. But Bigelow was conscious of a hot feeling of resentment as he followed. What these hotel employes thought about the girl who had so interested him was plainly apparent and he was annoyed that she had been so indiscreet as to create such an impression. It was nothing to him, really, because he did not know the girl. But she hadn't looked the type to be going alone to a man's rooms. There had been something very fresh about her—the direct, candid eyes of a girl who had nothing to hide.

"But could one ever tell about girls, nowadays?" he asked himself rather wistfully.

The bell boy opened the door for him, raised a window, accepted his tip and departed. Bigelow crossed to the window and looked out at the myriad lights of New York far below him. He had got the impression of a dream city as his ship lay in the bay, but he had thought that was due to the fog.

His mind went back to the girl as he stood there whistling below his breath. Who was she? What was she? Who was the man in whose rooms she intended to wait?

"Oh, damn the girl!" he thought in swift irritation as he turned from the window and opened a suitcase.

 Commenting on its discovery, von Helmholtz said:
 "It needed no more knowledge than what I had acquired in my optics course at school. It is a combination of glasses which lights up the dark background of the eye and permits all the interior details to be examined. They can be seen, more accurately than one can without magnification see the outside of the eye."
 The ophthalmoscope is essentially so simple in structure that one must join Helmholtz in wondering why it had not been discovered before 1851. Basically the ophthalmoscope consists of a concave mirror with a hole in the center. The examining physician by means of the mirror casts a beam of light into the interior of the patient's eye. The hole in the center of the mirror allows the physician to place his own eye behind it and thus to see and to examine the illuminated interior of his patient's eye. A series of lenses of graduated powers of magnification are interposable between the eye of the examiner and the eye of the patient, and by means of different lenses the structures placed at various depths in the examined eye can be clearly brought into focus.
 The ophthalmoscope, the modern example of which usually contains a miniature electric bulb, is a most useful instrument. It not only enables the physician to see clearly the changes that have taken place in the eye structure proper, but also to diagnose remote and systemic diseases, such as arteriosclerosis, syphilis, diabetes, nephritis and brain tumors.

 The eye is the only organ in the body in which, without surgical preliminaries, a living nerve can be seen and studied. In it, too, we may see arteries and veins "carrying on their work." The condition of the local blood vessels is thus revealed and from them we may in a measure deduce the condition of the blood vessels in remote parts of the body.
 Because the optic nerve is part of the brain, disease of this portion of the nervous system frequently registers their symptoms in the form of visible changes in the optic nerve.

Frank Faces His Hardest Battle Over Wisconsin U. Ouster Move

By KENNETH E. HOPPING
Madison, Wis. Jan. 7.—(AP)—President Glenn Frank of the University of Wisconsin has battled hard to get where he is and he may have to fight all the more to stay there.

He has been on the firing line ever since he started out at the age of 16 to ride a Methodist church circuit in Missouri and train himself for leadership. Usually he came through with colors flying.

On January 6 he will face the crucial point of his career when he appears before a bitterly divided board of regents to oppose a move for his dismissal.

Both friends and critics of Frank agree he always has been ambitious to succeed. He could make a fair speech when he was a boy in short pants and his rhetorical excellence has been a vital asset in the struggle to get ahead.

He used it on the sawdust trail as an aide to Billy Sunday, the evangelist, and on the Chautauque circuit. He combined eloquence with scholarship at Northwestern to become assistant to the president there.

Edward A. Filene, Boston business man and philanthropist, recognizing in him personal charm and powers of persuasion, gave him a good job. Century magazine backed on to him next and at 22 he became the "boy editor" of the country.

Eleven years ago, at the age of 27, Frank arrived at Wisconsin as a "journalist on parole." His liberal views on economics and education won him loud acclaim in his center of new ideas. No president had a greater reputation. But Frank soon discovered his struggles were just beginning.

The LaFollette rallied to his side and prominent conservatives lined up against him in a situation somewhat the reverse of what now prevails.

He started out to overturn the ancient system of class lecture by inaugurating an experimental college in which students lived and learned on social terms equal with their tutors. His plan was to teach young people "how to think," not "what to think."

Frank found himself in hot water with groups ranging from the D.A.R. to the state bankers' association. They frowned on his liberal tendencies.

Then came a faculty upheaval over an incident in which a boy and a girl student were found sharing the same room. The dean of women, who lost her job partly because of this incident, accused the president of dodging responsibility. She retired with the statement: "You can't nail a custard pie to the wall."

The experimental college, after five years of operation, folded up with disputed results. Old friends, including Governor Philip LaFollette, grew antagonistic and Frank heard the charge that he was beginning to straddle on liberal principles he once espoused.

An acquaintance, who was surprised to see him at a horse show, asked him if he rode. The president replied: "No, I'm being ridden."

He declared himself to be a Republican by "ancestry and inertia" and campus gossip mentioned his movements in Republican circles just as they referred to his impeccable manners, sleek tailoring and spats.

But it was the editor of a Republican newspaper, running for the senate, who gave Frank his next headache. Although LaFollette had turned cold, Frank discovered himself linked with the governor as an accused harbinger of reds, atheism and communism.

He gathered his student body in special convocation to defend freedom of thought at the university, which he did in these words: "I believe that just as a germ dies in the sunlight but thrives in the fetid air of the dungeon, so radical ideas are less dangerous when expressed than when repressed."

A senate red investigation had already died down when affairs in the athletic department erupted. Two more names were inscribed in the graveyard of dismissed officials and LaFollette-appointed regents demanded that Frank's name be inscribed there too.

Their indictment of him is that he has proved to be an inefficient administrator and has shouldered the regents with responsibilities he should have assumed. Frank will defend himself on educational achievements which he claims they have overlooked.

Accused of mismanagement and dodging responsibility, among other things, Dr. Glenn Frank appeared before the board of regents at Madison and launched his fight to keep his job as president of the University of Wisconsin. ## Talks To Parents

By Brooke Peters Church

Ideals In School

Indicative of the modern trend of thought is the present attitude of young people in the face of such a statement as that made by Horace Mann 100 years ago: "Be ashamed to die until you have won some victory for humanity."

It was Mann's basic tenet that no man or woman could be truly educated unless he was cultivated in character as well as in mind. The brilliant scholar with no moral standards, no ideals, seemed to him more of a curse to be world than a blessing. In Mann's eyes a school not to fulfill its function unless it developed the rounded personality.

Today a teacher has to specialize and is not asked to concern himself with the child's attitude toward life as long as the school work is properly done. That there is any purpose in life beyond making a living and caring for one's self and one's family, it is not the duty of the school to teach.

So education consists of learning one's assignment and getting a diploma. Ideal, hero worship, even school and college spirit are things of the past. Let the state take care of the past. Why should individuals fight the world's battles and look upon humanity and its struggles as their affair?

Great men and women, whether scientists, philosophers, poets or artists do not spring from such a practical and material background. Facts or formulas may be of help in material matters, but are not food for the spirit.

And both food for the spirit and food for the mind are essential. Today we are in danger again of forgetting the purpose of our schools in the struggle to keep alive, to find machinery to do our

HARD CONTEST IS PREDICTED

Local High Cage Team to Meet New Bern Outfit

Tomorrow night at 7:30 o'clock two Eastern North Carolina's best High school basketball teams will swing into action. The game which will be played in the Greenville High school auditorium will see Coach Reynolds May's Eastern champions against New Bern's powerful court aggregation.

New Bern and Greenville always put on a colorful exhibition and the game tomorrow night promises to be packed with thrills and excitement. The Greensies would like nothing more than to gain revenge for the licking the Bears handed them during the past football season.

On the other hand Coach Allison and his boys are on a "revenge seeking tour" of their own. They haven't forgotten the two dubbings that Greenville handed them last season, and they are out to make up for them Friday.

Fans who view the game Friday will get to see some of the best high school basketball players in state circles perform. Coach May has four veterans who would do credit to any school. George Lautares and Carl Piers are two crack forwards; Simpson at center was mentioned for all state last year, and Tom Parrish, stella guard was voted the outstanding player in Eastern North Carolina's invitational tournament. Either Howard Hodges or Tom Cox will be at the other guard post when the team takes the floor Friday night.

The Greensies are not lacking in reserve material. George Sakas, Trotman Nobles, John Lautares, Earl Hulen, Richard Gaylord, Hubert Roberts and Charles Gaskins are all good ball players. They should see action Friday also.

Leading New Bern's list of "ball hawks" will be Fred Locky, giant 6 foot 3 inch center. This boy is almost a team in himself, and the Greensies will have a hard time stopping him.

Man About Manhattan

By George Tucker

New York.—As last is explained the reason why doctors do young actors are to blame.

This fact became evident when speakers for an Al Jolson broadcast wished him and recited certain distressing rumors that had reached their ears.

"See here, Al," one of them fretted. "It has come to us that you have fallen ill on the eve of your last several openings. After advertising this broadcast, it will be a terrific financial loss if you aren't able to appear."

Peck-pocking the idea, Actor Jolson invited them to have a specialist spend several days with him, noting his reactions to tennis and the pursuits of every day life. This was accepted and in short order an expensive medic arrived at the Jolson manor.

Al took him first for a swim. There followed in this order 18 holes of golf, three brick sets of tennis, a three mile stroll before dinner, and instructions to be ready for a horseback ride at 5 o'clock the next morning.

Bounding down for an early work and robots to run the machinery. Somewhere we must seek a constructive idealist who will give education a soul again.

SEARCHERS RESCUE INDIANS STRANDED IN SNOW

Snow-bound nearly a week in the Zuni mountains near Gallup, New Mexico, after a severe blizzard swept that territory, 300 Navajo Indians were rescued by a searching party that dug through deep drifts for two days with the help of a snow plow. One of the rescue trucks is shown taking a group of the Indians to safety. (Associated Press Photo) breakfast. Jolson was wolfing coffee and flannel cake when a servant came in and inquired after the number of a local physician.

"What," cried Jolson, "is some one ill?" "Yes, sir," the servant replied, "the gentleman upstairs is suffering from extreme exhaustion."

Recently an actor, finding himself unexpectedly with a couple of dollars, wandered into a pawnshop to redeem a watch and to pick up a gift for one of his friends.

"How much for that camera?" he inquired, picking up one that takes motion pictures.

"For you it is $20," declared the proprietor in an amiable tone. But the actor shook his head.

"Well, make it $17," the merchant decided.

"That's too much money," the actor answered. "I'll just take my watch."

"Listen," went on the old man, "at a sacrifice it is yours for $15.50."

"Not today," said the actor. "And besides," encouraged the heck shop boss, "I'll throw in a lesson on the guitar."

YOU'VE GOT TO START THE YOUNG 'UNS RIGHT—

AND THAT GOES FOR TOBACCO PLANTS ESPECIALLY

Whether dog, or pig, or horse, everybody knows the young 'uns have to be properly started off in life or they won't turn out right later on. Wise tobacco growers know that goes double for tobacco plants. They're very delicate. They've got to have special food—they've got to be wrapped up softly and warmly—they almost have to be nursed. That's why Blue Ribbon Guano for Tobacco Beds was put on the market four years ago. That's why thousands of wise tobacco growers have tried it, and kept on using it ever since.

Blue Ribbon has a heavy loading of soft, soil-warming, bacteria-producing organics. It has a higher nitrogen content than ordinary plant bed goods. And less than 1% chlorine guaranteed. Thousands of tobacco farmers find that Blue Ribbon brings in plants from ten days to two weeks earlier—that it helps plants hold on and grow right out of blue mold—and that it prevents chlorine injury. Try it yourself once, and you, too, will be a loyal Blue Ribbon user. Ask your neighbor who uses it.

TOBACCO COMPACT BILL SETS QUOTA FOR STATE

The United States consumption produced by the tobacco growers in the year 1936 will be 1,000,000,000 pounds, according to the estimate of the Federal Bureau of Investigation. This figure is based on the estimate that the average yield per acre will be 1,000 pounds, as the case may be by the amount of fertilizer used and the amount of water available to the plants.

Under terms of the act no tobacco may be sold by the grower without a marketing permit and no resale by any handler or dealer is permitted without permission from the commission.

CROP CONTROL LEGISLATION AND LIQUOR REFERENDUM CALLED FOR BY CLYDE HOPE

With the view of bringing the highway system into a more intimate relationship with the needs of the State, I recommend that the Highway and Public Works Commission be composed of ten members, including the chairman. I do not favor the appointment of the members of this commission upon the basis of the location of the several Congressional districts.

He continued with an appeal for the State Highway Patrol, all State agencies and the people to cooperate for greater highway safety. Pointing to what he termed the improvements brought about by NRA and the desirability for adequate regulation of working conditions and progress toward better wages, the Governor said that "reasonable and prudent regulations will aid materially in reducing unemployment and stabilizing business and furnishing the basis for continuing the fine relationship now existing between employers and employees in this State."

Landon Chews a Stogie, and assails New Deal

By VOLTA TORREY (AP Feature Service Writer) "How do you do, Mr. President?" "How are you, Governor?" America's Presidential rivals looked each other over in Iowa in September, then sallied on.

"I have not sought, I do not seek, I repudiate," said Roosevelt, "the support of any advocate of communism or any other alienism which, by fair means or foul, would change our American democracy."

Fascists End Alcazar Siege and gingerly search the ruins.

The Governor asked the legislators to reappoint legislative representation throughout the State in accordance with population shifts. Passing on to the agricultural field, Mr. Hoey said farmers were tremendously interested in legislation looking to the control of production, especially with regard to tobacco and cotton.

"I am not a fanatical liquor questioner, but I continue to regard liquor as public enemy number one. I have not changed either my opinion or position on this question, and I do not believe any solution has been found for this vexed problem. Personally, I cannot subscribe to the doctrine that the way to advance the cause of temperance and decrease drinking is to provide all the liquor you want and make it easily obtainable and readily accessible. This theory is contradicted by all human experience."

He continued with an appeal for the State Highway Patrol, all State agencies and the people to cooperate for greater highway safety. Pointing to what he termed the improvements brought about by NRA and the desirability for adequate regulation of working conditions and progress toward better wages, the Governor said that "reasonable and prudent regulations will aid materially in reducing unemployment and stabilizing business and furnishing the basis for continuing the fine relationship now existing between employers and employees in this State."
