CINCINNATI FLOOD ZONES BECOME SEA OF FIRE

Already devastated by the greatest Ohio river flood in history, sections of Cincinnati were subjected to added perils and terror when floating oil and gasoline from wrecked storage tanks became ignited and spread flames over a wide area. Scores of buildings burned rapidly while firemen waded in icy water up to their armpits in battling the inferno. This picture shows flames ravaging the Crosley Radio Corporation's plant. About 200 people in the building crawled to safety through exits. (Associated Press Photo)

FLOOD TRAPS HUNDREDS IN HOMES AT PORTSMOUTH

Several hundred people were marooned on top floors of their homes and were threatened with drowning when the Ohio river reached a stage of 60 feet and raced through the heart of Portsmouth, Ohio. Of the city's 45,000 population, 25,000 were left homeless. The yards of the Norfolk and Western railroad are shown deep in water. In the background are the inundated business and residential districts. (Associated Press Photo)

FARMERS STRUGGLE TO CHECK MISSISSIPPI

Toil in bitterly cold weather, farmers and boys are shown in a futile fight to check the spread of the flooded Mississippi river in the Birds Point-New Madrid floodway by raising the levee near Wolf Island, Mo., with sandbags. It was, at the lower point of the floodway that armed farmers prevented government engineers from breaking the levee to relieve Cairo, Ill., of increasing danger. (Associated Press Photo)

Astronomy Class
The weather man is interfering seriously with the astronomy class at the college as the students are having difficulty seeing the heavenly bodies through the mist and rain. If the elements continue to defy their efforts to learn about the stars by direct observation, they are afraid none of them will become great astronomers. Clear nights have become very precious to them, and on these rare occasions the campus has been dotted with groups of star-gazers.

Only two nights since the course began, three weeks ago, has the class as a group been able to study the heavens, although watchful individuals have been catching glimpses of a few patches of stars between times. Venus is, perhaps, the only heavenly body with which all have become thoroughly familiar.

This is the first time these has been a course in popular astronomy, offered by the Science department of the college, and it has proved popular in more senses than one, as there are a number taking it. Further proof of its popularity is that it is a free elective so all students in the class take it by choice.

FLOATING INFERNO BATTLED ON THREE-MILE NT

Standing in water almost waist-deep, Fire Chief Barney Houston of Cincinnati is shown (left) directing the battle against the $1,500,000 fire that started in that flood-stricken city when oil and gasoline floating on the water exploded. Flames raged over a three-mile front for many hours. At the right, firemen are pumping streams of water onto the blazing plant of the Standard Oil Company. Huge quantities of oil and gasoline stored there made that the principal danger spot. (Associated Press Photos)

AYDEN PASTOR CLUB SPEAKER

Rev. Mr. Bronson Welcomes Two New Rotarians

"To the new members of Rotary," stated Rev. W. H. Bronson of Ayden as he inducted T. M. Grant, Marshall Brinkley, R. R. Bennett, Staunton Harvey, Lee Folger and Captain C. G. Bates into membership of the Greenville Rotary club last evening. "I want to present the positive side of Rotary—what is Rotary, the founding of Rotary and what Rotary means today."

"Rotary was the outgrowth of one man's, Paul Harris's, loneliness in the great city of Chicago. His desire for fellowship led him to contact two other business men who with him, met together for lunch-dinner discussions. The name, Rotary, was derived from the fact they rotated in meeting from one place to another. This was the beginning of the natural development of Rotary—today Rotary means high ideals and rich fellowship."

The motto of Rotary, "He profits most who serves the best," Mr. Bronson pointed out, "was the closing phrase of a Rotarian's speech at an International Convention. Immediately upon the conclusion it was moved and passed that this phrase would be adapted as the motto of Rotary."

"Today, Rotary fills a need of fellowship in the life of man. It is a ray of light down the pathway of time. It helps men feel life is worth living. But not only is Rotary fellowship, though fellowship alone would justify Rotary," he continued, "Rotary has created new and higher business and professional standards." It has advanced the understanding between nations as Rotary is International in scope.

"You are coming into an organization," stated Mr. Bronson in conclusion, "that is of fellowship, one that is molding high ethical standards of business and professions, and one that is international in its understanding of good-will."

Johnny Overton, chairman of the program committee preparatory to the main speech, read a short article entitled, "What is Rotary" taken from the current issue of the magazine "The Rotarian."

President J. B. Kittrell announced there would be a meeting of the council, Monday night, February 1, at 8:30 at the Rotary Club. All members of the Board of Directors and Chairmen of the various committees were asked to attend.

A telegram from Edmund Harding, District Governor, was read urging contributions by the club toward Flood-Relief. Wyatt Brown, chairman of the Pitt County Chapter of the Red Cross, explained all such contributions given through Rotary would be applied to Greenville's quota which had been dou-

Patrick of Shelby Falls, Mass., Haywood Dall, convalescing from recent illness, was welcomed back after an absence of some weeks.

On one side he carries a notice pointing out the perils of being impaled on such railings by a shove or a slip; on the other a notice urges people to visit St. James' Park and see our spikes.

In dozens of communities through the two states Red Cross clubs were quickly over-subscribed and goals were doubled and more contributions gathered.

At Greenville, S. C. where the Red Cross share was quickly subscribed, citizens stopped all activity today to pray for five minutes for flood sufferers and thank God the area had been spared.

Winston-Salem WPA sewing rooms were mobilized with 40 women band to mend every resource to making mattresses to be sent to the flood area.

SAYS SECURITY HARD PROBLEM

Director Tells Legislators Changes To Be Made

Raleigh, Jan. 25.—(AP)—Frank Bane, executive director of the federal social security board told a North Carolina legislature which is grappling with measures to provide old age and child aid today that the problem would continue for years.

The legislators already have bills for old assistance, old age pensions and aid for indigent children and a measure to provide for assistance to the needy blind is due this week.

Bane said "The Federal Social Security act is not perfect and probably will be the most amended law passed by congress in a long time, but is a constructive effort in the right direction."

EXPRESS FEAR OF FLOODS IN STATE RIVERS

Excessive Rains In Last 24 Hours Cause Alarm In N. C.

CONCERN IS FELT FOR TAR RIVER

Roanoke Water Now Standing at 13.8 Ft. At Williamston; No Threats On City

Raleigh, Jan. 26.—(AP)—Lee Denton, in charge of the weather bureau here, warned today "heavy to excessive rains" during the last 24 hours would cause the fifth material rise in a month in the waters of the Cape Fear, Neuse, Tar and lower Roanoke rivers.

The Roanoke rise, however, will come below Weldon from press indications, Denton said, and will not threaten the seven-mile dyke at Caledonia prison farm.

"It rained hard yesterday and last night at Caledonia and a material rise in the river there now would doubtless break the dyke," Penal Division Director Oscar Pitts said. "The dyke has been soaked by rains and floods for a month and the earth is getting very loose. We hope there will not be another immediate flood at the farm."

Chairman Ryan Appeals For Relief Contributions

Rev. William A. Ryan, chairman of the local flood relief campaign of the American Red Cross, today issued an urgent appeal to Pitt county residents to contribute freely to aid the increasing list of refugees.

URGENT: "Ambulance wanted at 21st and Dickerson. Child critically ill. Must be got to hospital at once to save life."

"Eight persons marooned at 9th and Colandac. Send boat at once." "Three persons at 10th and Evans. Have had no food for three days. Send relief immediately." "Aged man at 5th and Washington in desperate need of medical attention. Send nurse, doctor and stretcher at once." "Three hundred people marooned in Pitt Theatre. Send boats. Cannot hold out much longer."

No. The above calls for help by distressed people have not come to the people of our community, but they are being duplicated a hundred thousand times all along the banks of the Ohio River and its tributaries. In Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Kentucky a half of a million people are destitute. Food, clothing, medical attention, hospitalization, shelter—all these are needed, and needed at once. The President has issued a call to the people of all states to bend every effort toward helping in this, one of the greatest catastrophes in our national history. Even as we write this additional tens of thousands are having their homes, possessions, even loved ones, swept away from them by the mad, swirling waters of the raging rivers. Every moment of delay counts.

Death Toll Reaches at Least 125 With Homeless Estimated At 550,000 as Raining Ohio Continues to Cut Path of Destruction on Way to Big River

(By Associated Press) The yellow tide of the Ohio river swelled to record breaking heights today on its turbulent rush to the Mississippi as the death toll rose hourly and a "super flood" was predicted.

Haggard refugees by the thousands fled from the devastated flood zone embracing 11 mid-west states from Pittsburgh, Pa. down the debris-littered river valley to Memphis, Tenn.

The trial of Bernice Aspinwall and Bernard Moore, two young white men charged with the brutal attack on G. L. M. Pleasant, the night of December 28, probably will not be tried at this term of Superior court.

The case had been set for Thursday of this week, but Solicitor D. M. Clark said he would not call it unless Mr. Pleasant was here to testify if members of the family preferred to wait.

Mr. Pleasant is being kept at Johns Hopkins hospital in Baltimore for several days longer until specialists determine for certain there is no hope of saving his left eye. It had been announced that the eye was definitely lost, but hopes have been revived that the sight in the left eye can be saved. All hope has been abandoned for the right eye.

Death Toll Reaches at Least 125 With Homeless Estimated At 550,000 as Raining Ohio Continues to Cut Path of Destruction on Way to Big River

(By Associated Press) The yellow tide of the Ohio river swelled to record breaking heights today on its turbulent rush to the Mississippi as the death toll rose hourly and a "super flood" was predicted.

Haggard refugees by the thousands fled from the devastated flood zone embracing 11 mid-west states from Pittsburgh, Pa. down the debris-littered river valley to Memphis, Tenn.

Eddying in muddy torrents the water spread along a 1,500-mile front. The death list was unofficially placed at 132, with 550,000 driven from their homes and thousands of others marooned in precarious straits.

The companions of disaster, panic, famine, pestilence and fire, constantly menaced cities and towns in the 11-state flood area which holds more than one third of the nation's population. Added to these were the threats of water and power shortages.

ESCAPE IF YOU CAN
 BY FREDERICK JACKSON

SYNOPSIS: Count Vronski, who is blackmailing Anne Phelps with a packet of love letters, is shot to death in her studio. Only Anne, Bigelow, the young American from Paris, and Karsanoff, the glamorous dancer, are in the apartment. They hide the body in a cupboard during a gay party, then Bigelow and Dr. Austrelitz, the psychologist, remove it to Vronski's apartment. Police arrest Thorne Dryden, a young millionaire who hated Vronski, but refuses to talk. Dryden saw Vronski being taken home, his lawyer says. Anne and Bigelow call on Karsanoff.

Chapter 19
Bigelow Sees His Shadow
 The Russian woman was in and I would be charmed to see them, they discovered.
 Her suite was full of hot-house lilies and daffodils and bowls of heavy Parma violets, although spring was still a long way off.

"Woody Taylor," she explained, with a wave of her hand toward the flowers. "He sends me a florist's shop every day. An impossible young man. One simply cannot discourage him."
 She was wearing an elaborate negligee woven of the blues and greens of a peacock's tail, and smoking one of her long Russian cigarettes.

"You have lunched?" she asked. "I did not want anything—only caviar and champagne. . . . So—after all—it was someone named Dryden who killed my tiresome countryman, eh? The papers said it, so it must be so. A stupid man who announces everywhere what he intends to do. So for us, the incident is ended, is it not?"

"I hope so," said Bigelow.
 "But it must be so. She dismissed the matter with a shrug and turned from him to Anne. "And you, my dear—you are feeling better, yes?"

"Yes," answered Anne, hesitatingly.
 "That is good. It is foolish to concern oneself too much over anything. The past is finished—one can do nothing about it. And the future nobody knows. When it arrives, one will consider it. Until then, it is no use to make plans. So it is only the present that is important. That is how I look at life. If the present is agreeable, one cannot ask more."

She leaned back, smiling, and clasping her hands behind her head, called out something to Mariushka in Russian. "Wait. I will surprise you, now. I have another gift from that ridiculous Woody Taylor which you must see," she explained. "Mariushka is bringing it."

Tsarevitch and Fox
MARIUSHKA came in smiling for a wonder, with a tiny yellow tiger cub in her arms. Its eyes were only half open, and it was very plump, but not much larger than a good sized cat.

"What is it?" cried Anne, staring.
 "A tiger," cried Karsanoff, "but a baby!" She took it into her arms and hugged it. "Isn't he sweet? He has my eyes. You see? And he is called Tsarevitch. Until now, he takes only milk from a feeding bottle. You shall see. But when he grows teeth, he shall eat all my creditors and the critics who do not admire me, and rival dancers, perhaps, and lovers who no longer please me. So he will grow fat, no?"

Mariushka was dispatched for the feeding bottle and serious matters were ignored for the rest of the visit.
 As Bigelow and Anne passed through the lobby of the hotel on their way out, Bigelow saw an inconspicuous little man rise and follow them. And going uptown his taxi was just behind theirs. But Bigelow did not mention the matter to Anne.

He dropped Anne at her door, explaining that he had promised to look in on Austrelitz, and was relieved to see that the little man in the second taxi trailed him instead of remaining on watch before the Phelps house. He was the quarry, apparently, and not Anne. This fact encouraged him considerably, although it did mean that someone was already hot on the trail. Was it only Strong, he wondered, or the police?

At the doctor's office, Bigelow gave his name to the nurse in attendance in the waiting-room—an attractive, competent-looking young woman with auburn hair. Then he waited with what patience he could muster until Austrelitz had got rid of a number of patients. However, he had plenty to occupy his mind. . . .

Austrelitz was still sitting behind his big desk when Bigelow was finally welcomed in half an hour later. He was looking tired, Bigelow noted.
 "Did Strong call upon you?" asked the doctor, nodding a greeting and wasting no time over preliminaries.

"Yes, but I admitted nothing and denied nothing," answered Bigelow.
 "Did he call on you, too?"
 "Yes—with the same result," stated the doctor. He drew forward a hard-wood cabinet and opened it with an eager air to select a cigar. "I somehow feel inclined to accept his statement that Dryden refrained from making this disclosure to the police."

Seamen would be more specific of the distressed areas is getting under way at the Treforest trading estate in South Wales.
 Work has recently started on the construction of the first factory on the estate, which is a state-aided venture.

Soon hundreds of men, many without jobs for years, will be employed making roads, drainage schemes, and six more factories will be erected in the first half of the coming year.

Aid to Motorists
 Pierre, S. D. (AP)—The state's powerful road magnet collected 26,465 pounds of metal pieces scattered along 3,907 miles of highway in 1936. State engineers estimate that these operations, costing $3,284, saved motorists thousands of flat tires.

LEGISLATIVE CHAFF and CHATTER

Reflector Bureau.
 Raleigh, Jan. 26.—Echoes of Major L. P. Mcendon's advice to the Democratic party that it do a bit of cleanup work with regard to the absentee ballot and election abuses generally are still being heard not only here in Raleigh but apparently throughout the state. Down East the election board chairman is being acclaimed as a keen physician who has correctly diagnosed a disease which is slowly eating away at the party's vitals. Old liners, however, who privately admit they don't think it's wrong to steal votes from Republicans, are sharpening stilettos for the good Major whose political life may be endangered by his frankness.

A. D. (Lon) Folger, national executive committee man from North Carolina, will arrive here on Wednesday to remain for the rest of the legislative session.
 He hasn't any particular aim and objective in view, he says, but naturally he wants to keep a finger on the political pulse of the party and there's no better vantage point right down than here in the capital.

The address of Frank Bane, Social Security board secretary, to be heard by the solons Tuesday afternoon, should do much to clear up many questions now agitating the minds of many legislators. An extremely large percentage of the House and Senate members are frankly widely uninformed about the whole S. S. program of the Federal government. This fact, no doubt, has something to do with Mr. Bane's visit to North Carolina at this particular time.

School officials—and school lobbyists—are beginning to ring the changes on the old standby—shortage of teachers. Every time the legislature convenes the appropriations committees are told they positively must increase teachers' salaries because if they don't the state schools will not be able to secure a sufficient number of properly trained instructors.

Yet the cold figures show that even in the best times there were more than two applicants for every teacher post open in North Carolina. And throughout the worst of the depression this state was able to outbid practically every other Southern state for the services of competent teachers, as North Carolina salaries, even with big cuts, were higher than in other parts of Dixie.

Even in advance of the liquor hearing set for Thursday "Dry's" have opened up with the same old battery of eargymen they have employed for years. First gun fired was by the Reverend Arthur Barton, of Wilmington, with a fulmination about the increase in bootlegging he claims has occurred in New Hanover since opening of county liquor stores. He cited no figures to sustain his assertions.

Opponents of reapportionment by which New Hanover, Nash and Rockingham would lose a member each to Guilford, Buncombe and Mecklenburg—are apparently much more optimistic than ten days ago. They feel the "unconstitutional" argument advanced by Representative J. C. Hobbs, of Wilmington, is bearing fruit and they are counting strongly on the fact that most of the legislators have no keen or close personal interest in the matter. Representative Rupert Pickens, of Guilford, is buttonholing all and sundry, however, in his efforts to put his bill across.

Sunshine and wind are the two things most desired by the State Highway and Public Works Commission right now, since nothing else can dry out the thousands of miles of muddy county roads and thus make it possible for the road forces to get to work on them. For road machines and scrapers are no good on muddy roads.

"Ten days of sunshine and win would literally be worth millions of dollars to us at this time," Chairman Capus M. Waynick of the highway department said today. "For if we had millions of dollars to spend on these roads now—which we haven't—we could not spend it until after we had enough sunshine and rain to dry them out first."

Watch the joint appropriations committee laid its axe and chop millions off the requests for appropriations made by the various state department and institutions recently. For while the various state agencies asked for some $11,000,000 more than the Advisory Budget Commission recommended during the public hearings by the committee, expectations are that the committee is going to cut these requests back to about the same amounts recommended by the budget committee. This will mean a general fund budget of between $37,000,000 and $38,000,000 instead of one of about $48,000,000.

Bids on the state's longest and most expensive bridge—the Albemarle Sound Bridge—are being opened here today by the State Highway and Public Works Commission. First estimates were that this bridge would cost about $1,600,000 but present indications are that because of the rapid increase in the cost of materials, the bridge will cost at least $2,000,000 or perhaps even a little more.

Last summer, when the controversy over the location of the Albemarle Sound bridge was raging and when Wallace Tatem was opposing the location finally selected, he declared that the highway department could not find 30 people in Tyrrell county who wanted the bridge located where it now is to be located. A petition was received Monday by Chairman Waynick of the highway commission signed by 635 Tyrrell county citizens urging that the bridge be built at the present location as now planned.
