MALAGA FALLS TO INSURGENT SPANISH ARMY

Italian Cables Advise Of Important Rebel Victory

MEDITERRANEAN IS DOMINATED

Insurgent Troops Far Less Successful in Assaults Against Madrid Front

(By Associated Press)
Fascist troops marched victoriously into Malaga today, said Italian cables reports from that point, seemingly winding what the Fascists said was a "rule of the gun" by defeated anarchists and communists.
Cable reports said the army and fleet of General Francisco had won complete domination of the Mediterranean port, last government stronghold in the Gibraltar Straits area.
Fleeing Socialist officials of Malaga were seized in a boat in the harbor, it was reported.
On the Madrid front the insurgents with far less apparent success, tried to take the highway to Valencia, besieged Madrid's main "lifeline." Valencia is the temporary seat of the Socialist government.
Capture of Malaga would monopolize a section of the Mediterranean coast which the insurgents must take sooner or later if they dominate Spain.

Louisburg, Feb. 8.—(AP)—North Carolina's worst aviation tragedy which killed four yesterday today was under investigation by county and federal authorities.
Relatives from Ohio and West Virginia came to claim the mangled bodies of three men and a woman.
Franklin County Coroner R. A. Bobbitt established early today the woman, first identified as Miss Carolina Danley of Miami, Fla., was Mrs. Dan'ey, a daughter of Mrs. J. W. Carpenter of Villa Route, Charleston, West Virginia.
The other dead are Arthur Conn, president of a motor sales and taxi cab company in Akron, Ohio; Daniel Brown of Akron, vice president of the motor sales concern; and Chet Betz, the pilot, also of Akron.
The coroner said Joe Conn, a brother of one of the men killed, left Akron by plane to fly here. He had not arrived here nor at Raleigh's airport this morning.
J. G. Nail, Department of Commerce inspector at Charlotte, joined Bobbitt in an official investigation today, finding the plane scattered over 10 to 15 acres of a farm near the Gold Sand school, 13 miles northeast of here.

CHARGES MADE OF BLUNDERING FLOOD BATTLE

Civic Club Claims Enforced Evacuation Unnecessary

STURDY LEVEES HOLDING WATER

Engineers Continue to Battle Sand Boils and Seepage From Cairo Southward

Memphis, Tenn., Feb. 8.—(AP)—Record flood waters, apparently checked by the river study levees pushed slowly down the Mississippi today while a civic group charged "official blundering" in the valley's high water battle.
The Greenville, Miss., Rotary club deplored "the reckless manner" in which unwarranted predictions of disaster had been made by a few of those charged with the duty of our protection and resolved "to fix later on the responsibility therefor to the end that it shall not happen again."
"Panic created by higher predictions" has now happily been mostly allayed, in Washington county, the club asserted, urging delta citizens to return to normal business.
Specific reference was made in resolutions adopted yesterday to a Washington order calling for the evacuation of as many as 500,000 residents within 50 miles of the Mississippi river from Cairo to New Orleans, if it became necessary.
"We specially deprecate the blunder in Washington about enforced evacuation of the Yazoo basin among other areas," the club said.
"That a feeble effort at correction later was made does not minimize the original error." The club also criticized some newspapers and radio stations for their handling of flood news.
Army engineers charged with direction of the food fight made no comment on the charges.
Meanwhile engineers continued battling sand boils and seepage, but reported they had "no adverse reports from any point" in the levee line from Cairo south and tributary conditions showed steady improvement.

them and pay them homage. Mr. Mulholland found that in China, where reverence for master magicians is supreme, a magician never introduces himself to a fellow by giving his name. He says, rather, he is the pupil of such-and-such a master. Young hopefuls apprentice themselves to a venerable wizard and acquire the best techniques and methods in presenting tricks.

John Mulholland, by dint of long and arduous study under the living masters in many countries, by diligent perusal of the accounts of former great magicians, and by having many personal experiences of human interest, has evolved a technique in presenting his program that has seldom failed to elicit unreserved praise. He tells the story of magic and performs many tricks, but never gives away their secret.

PEACE ACTION

Dr. A. D. Frank, head of the history department at the College, was asked by the Peace Council to prepare for this column his personal opinion as to the sort of neutrality legislation best calculated to keep the United States out of war. His statement follows:

"Before 1914, neutral nations were expected to continue to trade with belligerent nations except in contraband of war. And, even in contraband of war, all limitations on trade with any belligerent power or powers were imposed by the enemy nation or nations.

"During the World War, 1914-1918, it was clearly demonstrated that the portion of international law dealing with trade in time of war needs reworking, or that neutral nations themselves should change their policies. The United States sold billions of dollars worth not only of food and necessities, but also of guns and munitions to the Allies, while the Central Powers were so completely isolated that trade with them was impossible. Thus, a neutral power became practically an ally.

"Also, the contraband list was expanded to include even food. Such an act appeared justified, due to the fact that in modern war the fight is literally between the masses of peoples. Thus, everything in contraband—the importation of which releases men for the army or the manufacture of munitions. Then, most belligerent powers placed food and all necessities under control of the military forces.

"After the war, the League of Nations provided a new policy in regard to trade in time of war. The member nations were obliged to prohibit all trade with aggressor nations, but were expected to continue trade with the non-aggressor powers.

"Such a policy plainly places much responsibility on neutral powers. It has been difficult in the past to determine the aggressors in many wars. Any jury of competent historians would find it difficult to agree on the aggressors in 1914. Also, such a policy undoubtedly offers a threat of war to any neutral power that attempts to enforce it.

"In view of the admitted failure of the old policy and the apparent dangers of the League policy, it seems that the United States would do well to regulate its own trade in time of war.

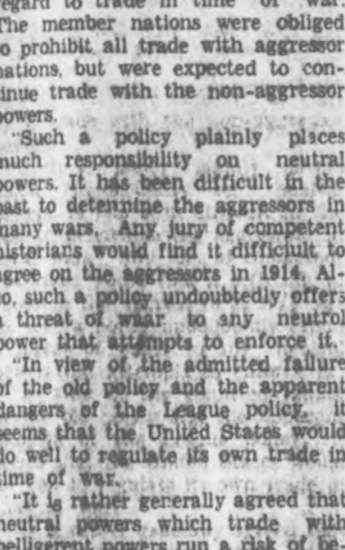

"It is rather generally agreed that neutral powers which trade with belligerent powers run a risk of being drawn into the war. Thus, whatever profit is made out of trade is lost many times over by the subsequent war.

"The only safe position for a neutral nation seems to be non-intercourse with all belligerents. Thus, the United States probably should enact legislation to prevent all commercial intercourse with any belligerent power.

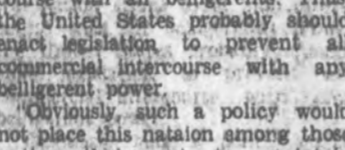

"Obviously, such a policy would not place this nation among those nations that want to maintain the peace of the world through the League. But, it would render us rather safe in case of a general European war. And, it might serve as an example that would prevent more wars than would our cooperation with the League to stop trade with belligerents."

Actor, Under Makeup Magic, Grows Old In A Hurry

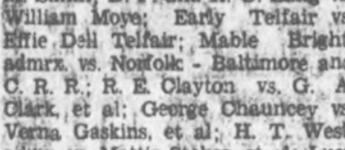

FROM THIS... Walter Brennan, youngish at 40 but a Hollywood favorite for old-man roles, arrives at the makeup studio for his transformation.

BY THIS... Really it doesn't hurt, but he has to screw up his face like that so Artist Bill Phyllips can mark the furrows with grease paint.

AND THIS... Silver threads of age are added in the form of a wig installed right over Brennan's own sparse, but naturally dark hair.

The latest domestic animal census figures available show 712,500 reindeer, against 6,888 sheep and 1,809 cattle. The second largest classification of "livestock" was work dogs, of which there were 37,287.

Black-Draught is "easy to pay for" because it is so economically packaged and so reliable.

But as to quality, there's nothing "cheap" about it. For instance, its principal active ingredient is the leaves of a certain species of plant that are brought 10,000 miles from where they grow to the factory where the medicine is made. These leaves from far, far away, help to give Black-Draught its well-known "laxative reliability." They could not be left out, or substituted, without real loss of good medicinal quality.

For a good, purely vegetable laxative, insist on Black-Draught. About 25 doses in each 25-cent package.

Greenville Only Undeclared Class A Team in State

Durham and Greenville clash Tuesday night at Durham in a return contest to feature the fifth week of play in the Class A basketball series.

Salisbury's spectacular 25 to 21 upset win over High Point Friday night left the fast-stepping Pitt County quint as the lone undefeated team in the Eastern and Western Conferences. Salisbury also defeated Gastonia, 32 to 18 to advance from fifth to third place in the Western ladder.

Greenville scored its fifth victory by beating Rocky Mount 19 to 17 in one of the hardest games of the entire campaign. The Greenies were forced into an extra period by the brilliant and dogged fight of the Maccombe lads to attain their win.

Durham continued its sterling brand of play by beating Raleigh's state champions of last season, 39 to 10. In the lone other Eastern contest, Rocky Mount conquered Wilson's celebrities 25 to 18.

Other results in the west showed a 35 to 19 victory for Greensboro over Winston-Salem, and a 25 to 15 triumph for High Point over Charlotte. By beating Charlotte the Pointers strengthened their hold on first place.

The engagement with Greenville Tuesday night is the crucial test for Durham. A victory for the Bulldogs would give them a first place tie with Greenville, while a defeat would practically assure the Greenies of a place in the Class A finale next month.

The complete Eastern schedule is as follows: Feb. 9—Greenville at Durham; Feb. 12—Rocky Mount at Durham and Raleigh at Greenville. The Western program lists: Feb. 9—Charlotte at Winston-Salem and Salisbury at Greensboro; Feb. 12—Charlotte at Greensboro, High Point at Gastonia, and Winston-Salem at Salisbury.

The Class A standings follow:

Team	W.	L.	Pct.
Greenville	5	0	100.0
Durham	4	1	80.0
Rocky Mount	4	3	55.6
Raleigh	0	3	0.0
Wilson	0	7	0.0

Team	W.	L.	Pct.
High Point	6	1	85.7
Greensboro	4	2	66.7
Charlotte	3	3	50.0
Winston-Salem	2	3	40.0
Winston-Salem	1	3	25.0

SMITH - DOUGLASS CO. TO CONTINUE PRICE GUARANTEE

Norfolk, Va., Feb. 8.—R. B. Douglas, Vice-President of Smith, Douglas & Company, Inc., fertilizer manufacturers of Norfolk, made the following announcement today with respect to price guarantee and refunds to customers during the coming season:

A great many farmers have written us or inquired of our representatives as to whether or not we will continue this season our policy of guaranteeing prices, and in event of decline in price making refunds to customers in the same manner and for the same reasons as caused us to make such refunds last season.

"I am very happy to announce that our policy will be the same as in 1936. We will continue to guarantee our prices against our own decline. Also we will continue to refund to customers such savings as they help us earn by paying cash with order, cash on delivery, or by making early payment.

"We believe that this is the fair thing to do with our customers, and we will continue this policy indefinitely in the future."

It will be recalled that in July 1936 Smith-Douglas started the fertilizer and farming world by mailing checks to its customers totaling nearly $100,000, based mainly on its guarantee of its prices against decline.

At that time, Oscar F. Smith, President of Smith-Douglas, made the following statement with respect to his company's refund policy:

"To do other than guarantee our fertilizer prices against our own decline would be grossly unfair. It would be even more unfair after guaranteeing our prices not to refund to our customers in event we reduced our price. There is no reason why a customer who orders early at a certain price should be penalized if, at a later date, we decide for one reason or another to lower our price on the same piece of goods for the same crop. We have always tried to make it a point of company honor to see to it that no customer, regardless of when his order was placed, paid a higher price than other customers in the same area for the same grade and quantity."

GREENIES WIN CLOSE BATTLE

Local High School Defeats Danville, 30 to 27

The fast-moving Green Phantoms went out of the state Saturday to gain their eleventh straight victory when they defeated the powerful George Washington quint of Danville, Virginia, by a score of 30 to 27. The game Saturday was the best the Greenies have turned out all season.

The lead seed-sawed back and forth during the first-half with the Greenville boys enjoying a 14 to 12 advantage at half-time. George Washington tied it up in the third period but in the final quarter, the Tar Heels racked up 9 points in five minutes, which was too much lead for the G. W. Cardinals to overcome, and the game ended with the Virginia lads firing away at their rivals' basket.

All of the Greenies turned in top-notch performances with George Lautares, Tom Parrish and DuBoise Simpson leading in the scoring.

The Greenies will travel to Durham tomorrow night in a return engagement with Bulldogs. They are expected to turn in a good performance at this game which is sure to be a crisis contest. The Greenies have won all their games in Class A competition and will have to fight to protect this record.

SENATOR NYE TO SPEAK AT CAROLINA IN MARCH

Chapel Hill, Feb. 8.—Senator Gerald P. Nye, (R. N. D.) well known for his inquiries into munitions industries, has accepted an invitation from the Carolina Political Union to speak at the University on March 19, it was announced today by Frank McGinn, president of the Union.

An organization for the purpose of bringing prominent political speakers to the campus, the Union will also sponsor the appearance of Congressman David J. Lewis, of Maryland, who is to speak here Monday evening Hill Music Hall at 8:30 o'clock. Congressman Lewis will speak on "The Future of the Constitution."

Senator Nye's topic has not been announced but it is expected that he will discuss the subject of munitions. He made a visit to the University in the winter of 1934 and has expressed a desire to return.

Onlookers express the opinion that Senator Nye will figure prominently in the presidential race of 1940.

WOMAN'S AILMENTS

MANY women are troubled with monthly pains, headache, backache, or "heat flashes." All women who suffer from nervousness, irritability and the discomforts associated with functional disturbances, need a tonic like Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. Read what Mrs. L. H. Smith of 31 S. Swain St., Raleigh, N. C., said: "I have always relied upon Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription as a tonic when I would become weak from over-work and long hours in nursing. At middle life my nerves were bad, I could scarcely eat and became weak. I took a few bottles of the 'Favorite' and it caused my appetite to improve, it quieted my nerves and in no time I was enjoying life again. Buy at drug store. Tab. 50c. Liquid $1 & $1.35."

SPEED HALTED BY ASSEMBLY

Money Committees Realize Bills Are Not Balanced

Raleigh, Feb. 8.—The legislative machinery which has been whizzing along in high gear for the past four weeks and which gave promise of bringing the appropriations and revenue bills into the house from four to six weeks ahead of the usual schedule, has almost halted to a stop as a result of the realization that the revenue and appropriations bills are from $1,000,000 to $2,500,000 out of balance and the admission by the finance committees that they see no way to obtain the additional revenue needed without increasing present taxes still higher.

CHAIRMAN VICTOR S. BRYANT OF THE HOUSE FINANCE COMMITTEE ADMITTED TODAY THAT HE AND HIS COMMITTEES HAVE CONSIDERED AND INVESTIGATED EVERY POSSIBLE SOURCE OF REVENUE THEY COULD THINK OF, THAT THE BILL WAS STILL ABOUT $1,300,000 SHORT OF PRODUCING ENOUGH REVENUE TO BALANCE WITH THE APPROPRIATIONS BILL ON THE BASIS OF PRESENT ESTIMATES, AND THAT THEY WERE UP AGAINST THE PROPOSITION OF "FINDING THE MONEY WHERE THE MONEY ISN'T."

He admitted that the committee might have to go back and consider a general upward revision of the income tax schedules, both personal and corporate, unless some new and as yet undiscovered source of additional revenue can be found. It is generally agreed that a revision of the income tax schedules and the boosting of the income tax limit to seven per cent, which can now be done as a result of the enactment of the constitutional amendment last November removing the six per cent limit, would just about yield enough additional revenue to bridge the gap between the two bills and make them balance.

The argument against any further increase in the income tax, however, is that it is already higher than in almost any other state, and as it now stands the corporation income tax is going as a stone wall by keeping new industries out of the state because of the high taxes imposed. It is further pointed out that while Governor Clyde R. Hoey and others are urging the spending of more money to advertise North Carolina and to attract new business and industry into the state, that there is no hope of getting any of these new industries if the general assembly decides to increase personal and corporation income taxes still further. It is also maintained that the general assembly will drive what industries are in the state into other states if it attempts to squeeze them much more by any increase in the income or corporation franchise taxes.

There are two other alternatives open for getting the revenue needed if it is generally agreed but no sentiment can be counted on for either. One of these for the state to take a larger share of the profits from the sale of liquor in the county liquor stores—provides its substitute exactly the bill which has already passed the house, setting up a combination state and county system of liquor stores on a county option basis. The other is for the state to go back to a state-wide property tax for state purposes with which to augment its present revenue, obtained entirely from other than taxes on property. It is generally agreed that if the counties would agree to divide their liquor profits on a 50-50 basis, giving the state half of these profits, instead of only 7 per cent on the gross receipts, that this revenue would be sufficient to balance the budget. But few here believe the general assembly will dare to incur the ill-will and resentment of the county governing bodies by attempting to take any more of their liquor profits than it is now prepared to take.

There are some who believe the only thing to do is to reduce the school appropriation, set it up largely as the old equalizing fund was set up and then announce to the counties, cities and towns that if they want to go beyond what the state can provide with the school fund available they will have to pay local property taxes with which to supplement the state fund. These maintain that the state has already reached the saturation point in levying indirect taxes and that if these taxes are increased any more, the law of diminishing returns will go into action and the state hence get less instead of more revenue.

At any rate, it is agreed that the burst of legislative speed is over and that from now on it is going to be slow, hard pulling.

CONGRESSMAN LEWIS TO SPEAK AT U N C

Chapel Hill, Feb. 8.—Congressman David J. Lewis of Maryland will give an address at the University Monday night, February 8, in Memorial Hall at 8:30 o'clock on "The Future of the Constitution."

ESCAPE IF YOU CAN

BY FREDERICK JACKSON

SYNOPSIS: Count Vronski, who was blackmailing Anne Sigelow, helps with love letters, is shot dead in Anne's studio.

Chapter 30 Lorna's Story

WHAT'S the idea of disappearing anyway? asked Anne. "It's a long story," said Lorna faintly, and she took a drink.

"We can take it," said Anne with a smile. "Well—then—" began Lorna, tugging a long drag at her cigarette.

"Don't limit it," said Anne. "You see, said Lorna, ignoring her and including Bigelow with a grave look, "when my mother died, my father didn't know what to do with me because I was only 13 and something of a responsibility I mean, I was pretty fat and I'm immodest or silly vanity or anything, is it, Anne? I mean I really was, wasn't I?"

"And precocious," sighed Lorna, as though she deeply regretted it. "So, what did father do but chop me quickly into a convent in Belgium? And the nuns were terribly strict. Sweet, you know, but strict and we never got a lock outside the place except with two nuns to keep an eye on us. And it was pretty poor sport. But here I stayed until I was 18. Imagine it. Seven years of that. No wonder I came back and then men were a novelty to me and I liked them."

She looked appealingly at Sigelow and he nodded. She slipped, then, and beamed at him as she went on. "Naturally, I went a little wild. Any girl would in those circumstances. Even Thorne understood that. We talked it all over when we became engaged and I was quite frank with him."

"What do you mean by quite frank?" asked Anne. "Well, I mean I told him almost everything there was to tell," explained Lorna. "But not absolutely everything," asked Anne.

"No," admitted Lorna. "I was crazy about him, you see, and I didn't want to risk losing him." Anne and Topsy exchanged a comprehending glance.

"You mean," Topsy interpreted, "you gave him a general idea of your goings on without exact details?" "Yes," breathed Lorna gratefully. "So then we were married and then Thorne turned out to be frightfully jealous." She looked at them wide-eyed, counting on them to share her surprise. "After all I'd told him, I mean and—knowing me—must say I didn't expect that, but there it was. So when Vronski called up and said he had to see me, I went to lunch with him without telling Thorne. And Vronski said he was hard up and would I lend him some money, and he was so distressed at having to ask me, I gave him a check of twenty. And in a week or two, by some agent and then again. The third time, I told him that it couldn't go on if Thorne would find out and he furrowed and then Vronski said that he had some letters of mine and they weren't dated I hardly ever date letters, do you? She looked from one to the other appealingly as she reached for another cigarette.

"Always," answered Topsy grimly, as Bigelow struck a match. "Never mind. . . . Go on," begged Anne.

"I was in a spot," WELL, he said that he'd had photographs made of the checks I'd already given him and that unless I went on paying, he'd go to Thorne and swear the letters had been written since my marriage. And the dates on the checks would bear out his story."

"Well I'm damned!" gasped Bigelow. "Of course then," Lorna assured them. "I saw that I was in a spot so I went straight to Thorne and told him everything. And he was furious and said he would deal with Vronski, and he made it his business to visit Vronski that night and he went straight up and knocked Vronski down and told him he was going to do it every time he met him so Vronski would save himself a lot of pain and humiliation if he got out of this country at once. . . . Wasn't that splendid?"

"Very satisfactory," agreed Topsy. Bigelow drew a long breath but said nothing. "And then what happened?" asked Anne.

"Vronski called me up the next day and said that unless Thorne paid him a hundred thousand dollars to settle down immediately, he would bring a suit for assault and introduce the letters and my checks when the case came into court." Lorna gazed at them, awaiting their reactions.

"That was when your husband decided to kill him," said Bigelow. "Yes, but I didn't know it until afterward. He told me he had a business meeting—just as he said. And he was swearing he didn't kill Vronski. What was in the papers is exactly what he told me."

"But why have you run away?" asked Anne curiously. "Why," said Lorna as though astonished Anne couldn't see that, "so that the police will suspect me of course." Bigelow and Anne stared at her. "But you didn't kill Vronski!" said Anne.

"No-o," admitted Lorna wistfully, "but the police won't know that! After Thorne was arrested, I thought the whole thing out. I mean I realized he was in a pretty dangerous position and it was all through my foolishness. But he was determined not to tell about the blackmailing and he made me promise not to, because he didn't want people to think maybe there had been more between Vronski and me than anyone had supposed. But I thought that if I vanished, people would wonder why, and think maybe Thorne was shielding me, and that would raise a reasonable doubt in the mind of the jury and he'd probably be acquitted."

Bigelow and Anne gazed back at her questioningly. "I told her, Topsy declared, "that she is quite mad and I tried to dissuade her the instant I heard her fantastic plan. But nothing would do her and if I hadn't agreed to let her be, she'd have gone somewhere else. In any case, you know how she is. One can't refuse her."

Lorna frowned anxiously at Anne and Bigelow. "Don't you think it's a good plan?" she asked. "Well—" began Anne doubtfully. "You see, I'm already getting publicity. My disappearance is a mystery. And people are bound to talk about it and wonder why I went and that. Topsy seems to think there isn't much of a case against Thorne anyway. But if they do try him, it might shake their conviction a little and he'd be found. They'll know he hasn't been got out of the way because I know something against Thorne, because a wife can't be made to testify against her husband. So they'll think I'm being kept out of the way to conceal my guilt. They're going to think that. . . . Anyway there's a chance my vanishing will help him and I can't do him any good by hanging about."

"Do you mean to stay out of the way, then, until after the trial?" asked Bigelow. "Of course," Lorna assured him. And then quite suddenly, she burst into tears. "You don't think I'll help," she sobbed. "I see you don't. But what can I do, then? I must do something! Must. It's all my fault. Thorne wouldn't be in this mess if I hadn't gone to him about Vronski!"

"Soup's ready!" Lorna turned a terrified face to Anne who promptly put her arm around Lorna and began to soothe her. "I think your disappearance might easily have the effect you hope," she declared.

"You—don't," sobbed Lorna. "You're only—humoring me." "I do, B. G. des. It will keep your pictures on the front pages of the newspapers and the public always sympathizes with a pretty woman."

"They do don't they?" agreed Lorna with an eager April smile. Lacking up. Her eyelashes were glistening with tears and she looked a good deal prettier than before.

"Soup's ready," said Topsy cryptically, as she began to lay the table. Lorna sighed and powdered her nose. "Poor Topsy, I know this is awfully hard on her, but I honestly couldn't think of anywhere else to go where people wouldn't think of looking for me. And when I thought of this place—it was like an inspiration."

"It was an inspiration, all right," agreed Topsy gruffly. "But the trial may not come off for a long time," said Anne. "Still, we are going to stick it here," said Topsy.

Lorna fixed sorry eyes on her. Topsy laughed. "Never mind, I'm glad to do anything I can to help, you know that, darling. And I'm only intending to mind it here. It's rather fun, really. I'm looking forward to a genuine shopping tour in the village. I haven't got round to it yet. But I've been making a list. I'm going to get a radio and a phonograph and all the magazines and some murder mysteries and some wool work. Did you ever do wool work?"

"No," confessed Anne. "I used to do it in Kansas. You make simply hideous rugs in patterns—you know—on canvas. And present them to people. They hate them as a rule and never know what to do with them, but you have the fun of making them. Oh, we'll keep ourselves entertained. And I have a kind of feeling I'll reduce."

The baroness is expected as "the woman in the milk coat," tomorrow.

twice. But so far this session, no one has locked horns with Bill, although Administrator Morris of the Federal Electrification Administration, is beginning to get in his hair somewhat.

Senator (Mrs.) E. L. McKee of Sylva, Jackson county, the only woman member of the senate, is getting along with her male colleagues much better this session than she did when she served her first term in the senate in 1931.

She is also showing real ability in her understanding and handling of legislative problems. She is being highly commended for the manner in which she handled the hearings on the old-age pensions in the committee on Public Welfare, of which she is chairman. And while "Poppy" McKee is still spending most of his time here, he is nothing like as much in evidence as he was in 1931, when he even sat by her during many of the senate sessions and was generally referred to as "the other Senator from Jackson county."

While he is for the county option liquor control bill which has already passed the house, Senator J. Benton Stacy of Rockingham county, has not decided whether to favor another county election on liquor stores in his county or not. It was the only one of the 18 counties which were included under the Pasquotank liquor bill of 1935, which voted "dry" in the county election.

"The reason Rockingham county voted dry was largely because the bootleggers, tobacco warehousemen and preachers in Danville, Va. joined with the bootleggers in Greensboro and Winston-Salem in helping the preachers, drys and bootleggers in the county keep the county dry," Senator Stacy said. "Another election will mean another fight along the same lines."

Wake county wants to protect the farmers and others who are the principal purchasers of second-hand automobiles, against crooked and unscrupulous dealers. That is why he has introduced his bill to require all second-hand car dealers to register with the Department of Revenue, obtain a license, and then register every car brought in from other states for re-sale here in North Carolina.

"The used car business will get to be a racket if outsiders are permitted to buy old cars in other states, then bring them here and sell them, unless they are strictly regulated. This bill will tend to keep the business in the hands of local and reputable dealers."

While a much larger proportion of the members of the house and senate than are willing to admit it openly, agree with Representative Ed R. Hanford of Alamance county that if the state is going to permit the sale of liquor, it might just as well permit the manufacture of liquor also, the prevailing belief is that Rep. Hanford is not going to get very far with his efforts along this line. As a result, his latest bill to authorize the manufacture of liquor in North Carolina, also authorizing the state to go into the wholesaling and jobbing of liquor, is not expected to ever get out of committee. Two years from now, Rep. Hanford might succeed in this move, but this session, most observers agree.

State Auditor George Ross Pou and Secretary of State Thad Eure are still having a steady stream of applicants for jobs pour into their offices—many of them young things just out of business college who voted for them because they "are so good looking" or the daughters, sisters, cousins, nieces, granddaughters or "friends" of persons who worked for them in the primary. It is understood that recently Pou and Eure have been "helping" each other by telling these many fair applicants for jobs that while they have nothing open at the present time, they might go and see Mr. Eure (or Mr. Pou) "right across the hall" assuring them that they "feel sure you will be able to find a place for you—since his appropriation is much larger than mine."

Bob Thompson, private secretary to Governor Hoyer, is becoming an expert in looking through the closed door to the Governor's private office and telling when visitors are rising to leave. Thompson squints intently at the door a moment, then tells a waiting caller: "You can go in next—the man in there now is getting ready to leave."

"In a second the door opens, the caller on the inside comes out, the one on the outside goes in. "It is really very simple," Bob explained. "I can see a shadow under the door whenever the Governor or his visitor stand up—which means that the call is over."

Going To Flood Problem's Roots, U. S. Stresses Soil Conservation

LESSON SEEN IN LATEST HAVOC

By SIGRID ARNE
(AP Feature Service Writer)

WASHINGTON (AP)—Congress passed an omnibus flood control bill last spring which authorized expenditure of $310,000,000. Why, then, are hundreds of thousands homeless, hungry, cold and wet today in the Ohio and Mississippi river valleys?

"Wal-al-ait aminite," say federal flood experts. "There's nothing magic about stopping these annual disasters. It takes hard work, time, and lots of money; nobody knows how much." But on one point they agree: No matter what it costs, it's worth many times the amount.

1936 Loss: $500,000,000

From a private business concern which made a survey of last year's flood destruction, the soil conservation office learned the total destruction in 13 states was estimated at more than $500,000,000.

By states the figures were: Pennsylvania, $200,000,000; West Virginia, $5,000,000; Ohio, $12,000,000; Maryland, $6,000,000; New York, $5,000,000; Massachusetts, $200,000,000; Vermont, $1,000,000; New Hampshire, $25,000,000; Maine, $25,000,000; Virginia, $2,000,000; and the District of Columbia, $600,000.

At Pittsburgh the 1936 flood broke all records for a period of 150 years. This year, between Cairo and Cincinnati they have eclipsed all previous records. Last year saw 350,000 homeless, says the red cross, and this year there were 750,000 homeless when the floods were at their peak.

Red Cross Bill: $7,652,964.

Last year the red cross spent $7,652,964 up to September giving food, clothing and shelter to refugees, and helping to rebuild homes. This year it had 49 concentration camps and 25 hospitals in the flood area during the early days of disaster, and what the eventual cost will be is not known.

Flood waters not only wreck homes, tear up roads, wash out bridges, drown people, and kill them off from exposure, but also wash life-giving top-soil away from farms.

Destruction strikes in two directions, says H. H. Bennett, chief of the soil conservation service: In the cities, where waters inundate the streets; and back on the farms, where millions of little trickles of water carry off the soil.

So the theory of beating floods is changing in government councils. Last spring's flood-control bill is an excellent example. It provided $310,000,000 not only for the building of dams, as such bills used to do, but for soil conservation work back at the source of streams.

Dams Not Enough.

That inclusion of soil conservation is new. Dams formerly seemed to be the only answer to floods. But look at the Ohio river now. It has 50 dams. Army engineers, extremely expert in such building, constructed 49 of them at a cost of $125,000,000.

So there must be another half to the answer of the puzzle, and Bennett thinks he has it in a slow tedious but important change in the way Americans use their land.

Bennett believes the volume of spring floods can be cut appreciably if farmers strip soil conservation; if they strip crop (planting a row of corn, and then a row of grass, for instance), if they terrace, and if they plant their crops in rows that follow the lines of the hills.

Forestry Work Helps.

The forest service steps in on the steeper slopes. Its been are planting trees where crops won't grow. The trees take root and cling, underbrush and grass grows up, and the water's headlong rush is stopped.

But all this work moves as slowly as a beetle going up hill, says Bennett, because it costs much money and demands much education of farmers, and takes much preliminary survey work to determine where the money can best be spent.

That preliminary work has been started by the department of agriculture, which is collecting all government data on the subject.

But the work under last spring's flood-control bill still awaits the necessary green—the money. The bill just "authorized" the expenditure.

Some of the money is requested in the President's 1937-38 budget. He asks $26,000,000 for flood control. Half a million of that is asked for the department of agriculture for survey work, and another half million is asked for a survey by army engineers. The remaining $25,000,000 is to be used for actual work and material.
