MATTSON CASE SUSPECT HELD

Ex-Convict Questioned in Tacoma Kidnap-Murder

Seattle, Wash., Feb. 10.—(AP)—An ex-convict, whose arrest was termed "hot" by one officer, was fired questions today about the brutal kidnap-killing of 10-year-old Charles Mattson. Plans were rushed for witnesses of the abduction to confront him.

The man, identified as James McDonald, steadily denied any connection with the crime, but William Cole, chief of the Washington state police, said he strikingly fitted the bearded kidnapper's description and his movements at the time of the kidnapping were suspicious.

"It may be just another false lead, but it looks hot to me," Cole said.

After the one-time thief had been questioned for 10 hours, a high police official said William and Muriel Mattson, brother and sister of the kidnapped victim, would be brought from Tacoma to face the man, Miss Virginia Chatfield, 16, who also saw little Charles seized December 27 at his Tacoma home also will be brought here, the officer said.

BEGIN DEBATE SECURITY BILL

Senate Starts Work On Old Age And Child Benefits

Raleigh, Feb. 10.—(AP)—Legislative debate on two major problems, taxes and social security started today. The house got the $75,000,000 biennial general fund revenue bill and quickly, as a committee as a whole, started adopting sections as amended by the joint finance committee.

No opposition developed to the inheritance and license tax articles, except the sections on contractors, plumbers, etc., which were "tentatively" adopted while all others adopted as written.

Representatives were asked to withhold proposed amendments until the bill had been worked through one time.

Senators started working on the administration's old age assistance and child aid bill.

Senator Gravelly of Nash explained it. Senator Abernethy of Caldwell, supported by Sparker of Stokes, proposed an amendment to make his state pay half the cost of the old age program with no burden on counties. Gravelly opposed this and warm debate followed.

The senate decided to recess until tonight before voting on the amendment.

Representative Bryant of Durham, house finance chairman, explained the tax bill. It would raise $5,329,400 for the general fund for the biennium, he said, which, with an expected $3,653,882 surplus on June 30 would estimate revenues $9,223,282 under proposed appropriations.

REVENUE BILL REPORTED OUT BY COMMITTEE

Would Balance Budget Recommended By Commission

NO PROVISIONS SOCIAL SECURITY

Measure Designed to Yield Total of $74,750,000 During Next Biennium

By J. C. BASKERVILL (Reflector Bureau)

Raleigh, Fe. 10.—The revenue bill for the new biennium beginning July 1, 1937, designed to produce the revenue needed for the operation of the state government and the public schools for the next two years, was reported into the house today by Chairman Victor S. Bryant of the house finance committee.

The revenue bill will yield a total of $74,750,000 during the next two years, exclusive of the highway fund, according to the committee estimates. The bill is expected to yield $36,750,000 for the year 1937-38 and $38,000,000 for the year 1938-39.

The bill is regarded as being in almost exact balance with the appropriations bill as recommended by the Advisory Budget Commission, calling for appropriations totalling $74,750,000 for the biennium, which is regarded as being about in line with the appropriations bill which will be reported out by the appropriations committee.

The revenue bill, however, does not make any provision for the financing of old age pensions and aid to dependent children. Chairman Bryant pointed out. Accordingly, the measure lacks $2,000,000 of providing enough revenue to finance the social security program advocated by Governor Clyde R. Hoey. It is expected that a supplementary bill will be introduced later to provide the additional $2,000,000 a year needed to provide old age pensions and aid to dependent children.

Chairman Bryant and the finance committee regard the revenue bill as representing the maximum amount of revenue which the state can raise from indirect taxation during the next two years, without recourse to a state-wide property tax. They admit that the committee could have recommended more increases in present tax rates, but maintain that any such increases, if made, would probably result in less rather than more revenue.

About the only new taxes contained in the new revenue bill as compared with the present bill is the new state-wide tax on intangibles, the 7 per cent liquor tax—provided the general assembly enacts the state-wide liquor control county option bill which is still before the senate—and an increase in the income tax on personal incomes to 7 per cent in the higher brackets.

Domestic Trouble Takes Up Portion Of Court Session

Other Charges Aired as Weekly County Court Completes Hearings During Afternoon

A portion of yesterday afternoon's session of County court was devoted to hearing domestic difficulties as Judge Dink James ruled on two cases involving abandonment and non support.

W. S. Harrington, white man, was ordered to pay one dollar each week for the support of his children, all doctor bills and to provide an additional $10 a year for clothes. Failure to pay, fine judgment provides a six months sentence would be executed.

John Greene, convicted of assault, was given a 90-day sentence, suspended upon payment of cost and provision that he remain off the premises of the prosecuting witness.

Claid Clemons was acquitted of a charge of operating a disorderly house.

Dan White and Otis Bowen brought charges of reckless driving against each other and Judge James, finding no cause for the actions, assessed each with the costs of the other's trial.

Eleven Plane Occupants Listed Dead From Crash In San Francisco Bay

OPPOSITION TO COURT CHANGE

House Defeats Proposal Offered By Republicans

Washington, Feb. 10.—(AP)—The house beat down today a Republican proposal to allow Supreme court justices to retire at 75 instead of 70 after 10 years' service.

This action followed a fiery attack on President Roosevelt's court reorganization program which marked the start of house debate on the measure.

Raising his voice to a shout, Representative Lamneck (D. Ohio) asserted any enlargement of the high tribunal's membership might lead to a "Hitler, a Mussolini or a Stalin government."

Lamneck was joined by Representative Cox (D. Georgia) who told his colleagues Mr. Roosevelt asked "for something which no man in all this world ought to enjoy."

Lamneck spoke even as five senators were summoned to the White House to talk over the general court situation with the president. Some officials said he conferences were arranged so that the president might amplify his aims in proposing the judicial reforms.

Outspoken opposition in the house followed organization of a group of 10 Democratic representatives to unite efforts against the plan.

In a special message Mr. Roosevelt asked congress to work out a long time program for reclaiming the once fertile lands of mid-America's dust bowl.

Little Objection Being Heard From School Officials

Classroom Teachers and Principals not Demanding 20 Per Cent Salary Increase

Raleigh, Feb. 10.—The school leaders of the state, including both classroom teachers, superintendents and principals, now realize that the average of $24,500,000 a year recommended for the schools for the next two years by the appropriations committee, and which will provide an increase of about 13 per cent in salaries for teachers, including the increments, is all the state can afford at the present time and are satisfied with this amount, Chairman D. L. Ward of the house appropriations committee said today.

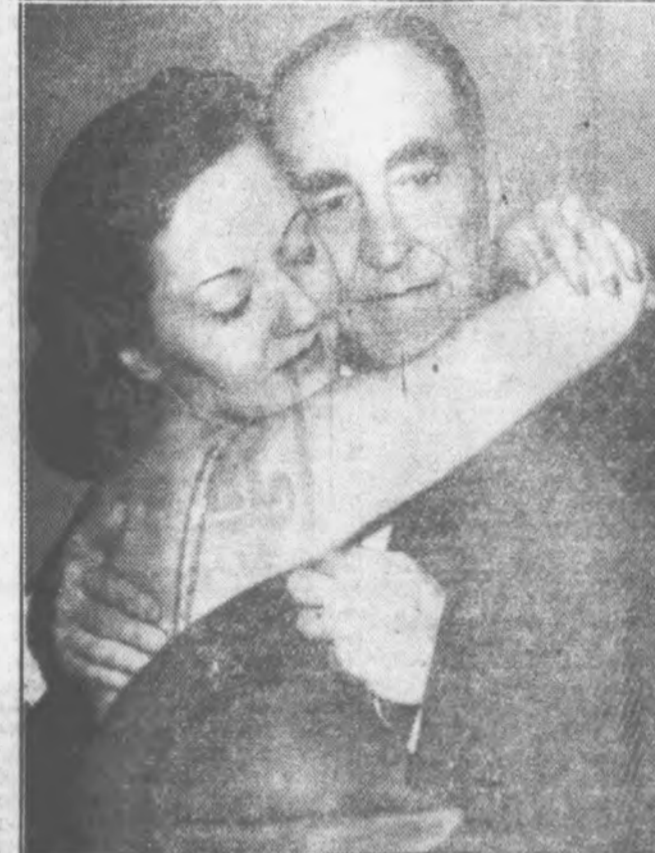

As a result, he feels sure that the school forces have given up their campaign for a 20 per cent increase in salaries and will be entirely satisfied with the increase proposed in the appropriations bill.

"The trouble with the school leaders and the school teachers was that they did not understand the state's fiscal situation and knew next to nothing about the difficulties of raising revenue for the state," Chairman Ward said. "But after conferring with them for almost three hours the other night, and explaining in detail the needs of other departments and divisions, a delegation of school leaders, including State Superintendent of Public Instruction Clyde A. Erwin, Secretary Jule B. Warren of the N. C. Education Association, Miss Oma Lafferty, president of the Classroom Teachers Association, and others, assured me they were satisfied with the present appropriation, providing for a ten per cent increase in salaries and that they would not seek the 20 per cent increase they had been holding out for. They admitted they had not understood the situation as it really is and that they are not nearly as bad off as they thought they were."

Chairman Ward does not now expect any concerted opposition to the school appropriation as recommended by his committee when the bill reaches the house and senate except from a few persons or groups who do not understand the situation and what the bill provides.

The Durham school teachers which came before the appropriations committee Monday actually had no grievance against the state but should have gone to their local school board in Durham, Ward pointed out.

THE SPEAKER IS SPEECHLESS!

Action spoke louder than words when Rep. William B. Bankhead of Alabama, speaker of the House of Representatives, went backstage in a Washington theatre to congratulate his daughter Tallulah for her performance in "Reflected Glory." There was a big hug and a kiss from the speaker when Daughter Tallulah asked him how he liked her on the stage. (Associated Press Photo)

SHIP PLUNGES BELOW WATER

Latest Tragedy Increases to 43 Number of Victims Claimed in Western Transport Mishaps Since December 15

San Francisco, Feb. 10.—(AP)—Its eleven occupants given up for dead, a wrecked United Air Lines plane was found early today under water, except for its tail, in South San Francisco bay, where it plunged last night after passing up a landing field.

"There is no possibility anyone on board is alive," said B. M. Doolin, San Francisco airport manager, after returning from inspecting the wreckage.

Several prominent westerners, including a millionaire were on board.

A derrick and deep sea diver were ordered to the scene.

Later shifting tides pushed over the wreckage of the 12-ton ship and submerged it while a derrick and deep sea diver prepared to go to the scene.

The tragedy increased to 43 the number who had died in Western transport crashes since December 15.

William Reed, noted diver, said the most practical procedure was to lift the plane by derrick and remove the bodies after the wreckage had been ferried to the United Air Lines shop in Oakland.

The 11 occupants announced by United States air lines officials included Mark Fontana, 57, millionaire manufacturer and yacht man of San Francisco.

FLOOD CRESTS REFUSE TO EBB

Record Levels Remain Unchanged in Memphis Area

Memphis, Feb. 10.—(AP)—As if determined to gain by siege what they failed to win by assault, ponderous crests kept flood fears alive along the Mississippi today by stubborn refusal to spend their almost imperceptible southward crawl.

The river fell slowly above Memphis, but in this section record levels remained unchanged hour after hour while the brown tide edged higher down stream to New Orleans, forcing more evacuations.

The Memphis district officer of the army engineers warned the top of the flood is "very flat" and the river will stand near its crest here for several days. As long as this situation prevailed the relentless pressure on the over-taxed levees may force a major breach at any time.

The engineers remained confident they would win their fight, but explained sluggishness of the crests made imperative a ceaseless vigil along the dikes from here to Helena, Ark.

Rehabilitation went ahead at quickened pace in the Ohio valley, and the list of homeless shrank while residents moved into their homes there; but in the Mississippi valley the spreading waters swelled tributaries and routed hundreds of lowlanders.

Kiwanis Club to Hold Annual Ladies' Night

The Greenville Kiwanis club will hold its annual "Ladies' Night" at the regular meeting at the Woman's club building Friday night, at which time wives and fiancées of members will be special guests.

Favors will be given each woman present and a few additional prizes will be presented.

CONSIDER PLAN TO END STRIKE

Recess Taken After Lengthy Morning Conference

Detroit, Feb. 10.—(AP)—Representatives of General Motors corporation and labor considered a definite plan for strike settlement for two and three-quarter hours today and then recessed for two hours.

Governor Frank Murphy said "the situation was unchanged from last night" and announced another conference would begin at 3:30 or 4 o'clock this afternoon.

John Lewis, director general of strikes against General Motors automotive units, and the board of strategy of the M. A. W. A. met earlier in the day in a possibly significant session that delayed the opening of the 13th assembly of the governor's strike peace conference.

The board of strategy has authority to approve a proposal for settlement of the bitter dispute that has halted the corporation's passenger car production.

Censored Reports Tell Of Fighting On Madrid Fronts

Fascist Planes Soar Over City as Bitter Battle Rages on Outskirts of Capital

(By the Associated Press) Censored reports limping over crippled communications lines from Madrid described today a new crisis in the fascist's siege of Spain's capital.

With telephone lines cut by a fascist assault on the Madrid-Valencia road, meagre reports from Madrid by cable included:

1.—Fourteen fascist planes flew over Madrid this morning. Whether they tried bombardment was not stated.

2.—Fierce fighting raged south-east of Madrid for possession of the Valencia road which leads to the seaboard seat of the temporary government, with socialist commanders insisting the fascists have not "physically cut" the road up to last night.

Volger Has Plan For Elimination State Sales Tax

Reflector Bureau.

Raleigh, Feb. 10.—Representative J. B. Volger, Mecklenburg, has announced his intention to offer to the House a member which he believes will abolish the sales tax and at the same time raise more money for the state than that much attacked measure has ever netted.

Briefly he proposes to tax every form of business activity in North Carolina, levying one-quarter per cent on gross receipts of manufacturers, one-half per cent on wholesalers and one per cent on retailers.

He estimates the levies would yield from $15,000,000 to $18,000,000 annually as compared with the $11,000,000 to $12,000,000 which it is estimated a 3 per cent sales tax, with exemptions, will produce as revenue.

The Charlotte representative has been busy bitton-holing members of the Revenue committee of which he is a member for some time past, but he has been unable to make much progress with his committee colleagues; and so he now plans to put his plan in as an amendment to the Revenue bill when it comes up for consideration by the House as a committee of the whole.

The Sans Souci Club
The Sans Souci club held an enjoyable meeting at the home of Mrs. G. B. W. Hadley on Tuesday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock. Sickiness among the members accounted for the rather small attendance, but the club was delighted to have as guests Miss Zoe Anna Davis, Mrs. J. W. Perkins and Mrs. N. W. Outlaw of Goldsboro.

In the absence of the president, Mrs. W. E. Hooker, the vice-president, presided, and in an able manner disposed of routine business and turned the meeting over to the program committee, who presented Mrs. C. S. Forbes as program leader for the afternoon.

In line with our topic for the year, "The Old and New South," Mrs. Forbes' subject was "Southern Magazines," and she traced most interestingly the beginning and the growth of magazine publication in the South.

At the close of the program, three very interesting current events were given, during the discussion of which, the hostess served a delicious salad course.—Reported.

Famous Magician at College
John Mulholland the famous magician who will appear in the Robt. H. Wright auditorium at the College at 8:30 tomorrow night, will lecture on the subject of magic and his experiences with magicians, and illustrate his talk with some of his unusual feats of magic.

In the printed story of his experiences he tells how he discovered some of the tricks of the fakirs in which the hand deceives the eye. One is the burning glass and cotton trick, which first came from India. He saw one old Hindu fakir perform this trick, focusing burning glass on cotton until it began to smoulder, and producing any perfume called for, doing this by an easy sleight of hand trick that fooled the audience.

Another illusion which he explains is the world-renowned rope trick, in which a magician throws a rope upward to remain hanging from nothing, and a boy climbs it and disappears in the sky, finally reappearing with all sorts of mummbo-jumbo.

Mulholland discovered the secret not only of these tricks but of many others. Some of these he will explain tomorrow night but he will perform other tricks which will fool you and will not let you know how he does them.

Literature Dept. of Woman's Club

Tuesday afternoon Mrs. J. R. Gullledge delightfully entertained the Literature Department of the Woman's Club at her home on Fourth street. The rooms were gay with early spring flowers. In her most charming manner, Miss Elizabeth Hyman ably reviewed Anne Morrow Lindbergh's "North to the Orient." In her introductory remarks, Miss Hyman said that it was needless to introduce the author who has been mercilessly "in the spotlight" for a number of years. The book was characterized as one of "heart throbs" rather than air routes. Miss Hyman carried her listeners with the Lindberghs through frozen Canada, across into Russia, through a perilous experience of making a forced landing in a mountainous region, to Japan and finally to flooded China. She did not appraise the value of her book, but voiced a strong personal approval of it.

The department was delighted to hear Mrs. Travis Hooker give a short sketch of her recent visit to South America.

At the conclusion of the program, Mrs. Gullledge assisted by Mrs. P. W. Picklesimer, Miss Elizabeth Smith and Mrs. Paul Ricks served hot coffee, sandwiches, cakes and nuts to the club members and the following guests: Miss Mary Hyman, Miss Maude Adams, Miss Elizabeth Smith, Mrs. Diane Tabor, Mrs. Denver Baughan, Mrs. R. To Present "The Mikado"

The combined glee clubs of Greenville High School will present "The Mikado," a Gilbert & Sullivan opera, under the direction of Miss Ona Shindler, Tuesday, February 16, at 7:45 P. M. in the auditorium of the High School.

The cast, containing nine principals, Beva Dare Harris, Claire Brown, Mattie Lawrence Holliday, Kate Foley, Mary Lorraine Horne, Edward Conway, Robert Musselwhite, Earl Dunn and Robert Earl Clark, is well supported by several choruses; two of boys; two of girls and some mixed.

The first act takes place in a court yard; the second act is set in a charming Japanese garden with trees and a quaint little gray bridge in the background. These sets were built by Sam Field, Industrial Arts teacher, and several of his senior students.

A contest between the junior and senior high school has been in progress since the first of this week, in an attempt to encourage the of tickets.

World Day of Prayer

In 1920 the first Friday in Lent was selected for the Day of Prayer for Missions when many church women of many denominations in Canada and the United States joined in common prayer. The Call to Prayer was sent out by the National Women's Missionary organization, home and foreign. The theme was "The World to Christ We Bring," and the Call was for meetings to be held in cities, towns and villages, morning, noon or in the evening to ask God's mercy upon the troubled and confused nations.

The thought of a day of prayer spread until at the request of far away friends, the World Day of Prayer was first observed in 1927. The theme was Pray Ye Therefore, and the call carried a weekly cycle of prayers to be used in preparation for the observance. In 1936 the response to the program "On Earth, Peace Goodwill Toward Men" was world-wide.

In the United States the Day of Prayer is truly inter-church both locally and nationally. Federations of Churches, hospitals, schools, mission centers as well as individual Christians participate. The National Council of Federated Church Women cooperates in the promotion of the observance of the Day of Prayer.

The service this year will be held on Friday morning at 11 o'clock in St. Paul's Episcopal church. The public is invited and urged to attend.

The next World Day of Prayer will be March 4, 1938.

There is no doubt that this bill was virtually beaten last week when the house committee on Manufacturing and Labor, with Rep. George Uzzell of Salisbury, chairman, reported the bill unfavorably by a vote of 11 to 8. But the following day it was referred back to the committee and indications now are that after some changes are made the bill will be reported favorably. Credit for sending the bill back to committee for further consideration, instead of letting it die on the unfavorable calendar, is due to Governor Clyde R. Hoey more than any one else, according to most observers here. It is understood that he felt in view of his recommendations for stricter labor laws, that it did not look very good to have the child labor amendment and the 40 hour week bills killed, all within a week. And while it is agreed that Governor Hoey shed no tears over the defeat of the child labor amendment bill and made no move to help it along—something he helped kill it—the belief now is that he is going to bat for the 40 hour week bill and is going to put the full force of his influence back of it.

As a result, it is believed that the textile manufacturers and merchants who are still opposing the bill will eventually modify their opposition to it and that it is now likely to be enacted. Indications are that the tobacco industry, already on a 40 hour week basis, is not opposing the bill.

SCOTT FAVORS LARGER BOARD

Agriculture Commissioner Proposes 10-Man Board

Reflector Bureau.
Raleigh, Feb. 10.—Commissioner of Agriculture Kerr Scott seems to have torn a leaf from President Roosevelt's notebook in his proposal to increase membership of the Board of Agriculture from five to ten. The idea was translated into action Tuesday with introduction of a bill to Representative J. H. Poole, of Moore.

According to those who ought to know the inner workings of the Board of Agriculture, a majority is not in accord with the Commissioner on a number of policies and Mr. Scott has been forced to contend with open hostility in certain instances.

Hence the effort to increase the board in expectation that the added members will show a more sympathetic attitude toward the commissioner and his projects. Hopes along this line, however, will prove well or ill-founded only after the additional members have been named, if the Poole bill passes, for the measure puts their selection in the hands of Governor Hoey and it is by no means a certainty that the executive would choose only Scott yes-men for the places.

At the same time that he introduced the reorganization measure, Representative Poole also tossed in a bill repealing an act of 1925 which gave the Commissioner of Agriculture almost dictatorial powers in appointment and dismissal of personnel and in some other features. Comment has been heard here to the effect that Mr. Scott, having already completed a wholesale reorganization of his department is now anxious to "get out from under" responsibility for further hirings or firings.

Mr. Poole said Tuesday that both bills were introduced at the specific request of Commissioner Scott.

PHANTOMS SWEEP TOWARD CHAMPIONSHIP

EAST CHAMPS INVITED TO TOURNEY

EKE OUT WIN OVER DURHAM

Greenville High Already Assured Of Tie for Honors

The powerful and fast-moving Green Phantoms swept onward to the Eastern Class A title and a possible crack at the state championship by nosing out their hardest and most worthy rivals, the Durham Bulldogs 22-21 last night at the Bull City.

In a fourth period packed with nerve-tangling, devastating basketball, the boys from the Bright Leaf belt showed the stuff that champions are made of when they came from behind after being on the short end of a 19-11 count and showed up the ball game.

Going into the fourth quarter, the Greenies were eight points behind and it looked as if Coach Stuessey's boys had things all their own way, but Parrish dropped in a two pointer and Simpson followed him with a long shot to settle the lead to four points. In another minute George Lautares made a beautiful follow-up under the basket and then took a tip-off play to register the goal that deadlocked the ball game. He was fouled as he made his last goal and converted his gratis toss to put the Greenies one point ahead for the first time during the evening.

Durham had a chance to tie when Hackney was fouled while dribbling, but the rangy guard missed and the Phantoms sported a one point lead with a minute and a half to play. It was then that little John Lautares got loose on one of his famous dribbling acts and made a beautiful one-handed shot from the right side of the basket to put his mates three points out in front and fifteen seconds to go.

That should have been enough, but the Bull City boys were not through fighting and in a general scramble under the basket, Pierce, lanky center for the red outfit baited in a goal and was fouled by Gaskins. He had a foul shot to tie the ball game with only two seconds remaining to play, but old man Pressure got the best of him and he threw wildly at the basket missing and wiping out his mates' last chance to overtake their rivals.

It was a grand victory for the Greenville boys to win, and clearly showed that sheer fight and determination will do when a group of boys make up their minds that they won't be licked. Mathematically, the Greenies have not won the Eastern championship yet. They still have two hard games to play with Raleigh and must win one of them before they can wipe out every mathematical chance of being overtaken. Should they lose them both they will be in a tie with Durham and necessitate a play-off. One victory will assure them of the title. The first Raleigh game will be played in the High school auditorium this coming Friday night.

GIRLS DEFEAT BEAUFORT FOE

Team Plays Its Best Game of Season in Winning 20-18

By JOHN DAVID BRIDGERS
Playing the best game of the season so far, the Greenville High school girls' basketball team last night rode to victory over the Washington girls' team by a score of 20 to 18. The game was a hard-fought battle on the part of both teams and during the second half the score was even during most of the time.

With a little over a minute left to play in the last half the score stood at 18-all, but Betty Tyson, Greenville's freshman star, managed to snuff out the Pamlico girls with a side hand shot.

The Greenville lassies had a good offensive team which was led by Betty Tyson and Frances Clark who collected seven points each and were followed up by Mary Eakes who scored six points.

The Washington girls were led by Jeanette Hackney, who tallied 10 points.

Dorothy Merritt, Madoline Woodard and Nancy Roberts turned in some good defensive playing and added much toward the victory.

This was the girls' second victory during a week and the team has improved greatly since the first of the year.

Locals Invited To Play At Southern Tournament

Greenville High School Basketball Squad Gets Bid To Be Guests of Raleigh Junior Chamber of Commerce

The Greenville High school basketball team, practically assured of the Eastern Class A conference championship and a strong bidder for the state title has been invited to play in a preliminary game at the Southern Conference tournament in Raleigh next month.

Supt. of Schools J. H. Rose and Coach Reynolds May announced receipt of the invitation this morning and said they had accepted the bid.

The invitation was tendered by the Raleigh Junior Chamber of Commerce, sponsors of the tournament. The local squad will be guests of the sponsors during the entire tournament and will be entertained at the Sir Walter hotel.

A bid for the local team has not been decided, but there is talk of such a plan. The high school championship is arranged by the University of North Carolina and is usually played at Chapel Hill. Should officials consent it is understood tournament officials would like to have the high school championship played as a starter for the college tournament.

Mr. Rose said the matter was being discussed with officials of the University but said he would not oppose such a plan if it could be worked out satisfactorily to everyone concerned.

Belongs in Majors.
Jackson takes over the management of the Jersey City club with the good wishes of the writer's group. If his wishes could make it so, Jackson's stay in the minors would not be long. He'd be back in the majors, where he really belongs.

The idea of Jackson returning to the big show before long is not fantastic. The Giant front office has a warm spot in its heart for him. Jackson seems satisfied that his future lies with the Giants. He indicated that last fall when Burleigh Grimes, the new Brooklyn manager, approached Bill Terry with a proposition to make Jackson his assistant. Jackson himself vetoed the idea. Then came the opportunity to guide Jersey City.

Terry May Step Out.

HIGHS TO PLAY GAME TONIGHT

Will Meet Washington Quint in Local Gym at 7:30

Greenville fans will have an opportunity tonight to watch the High School Green Phantoms in action when they meet the Washington quint in the local gymnasium. The game will be called at 7:30 o'clock.

The team, back from a one-point margin over Durham which gave them a virtual clinch on the Eastern championship, will be in tip-top shape for the game, no injuries having been suffered in last night's contest.

Although expected to encounter little difficulty with the Beaufort team, overconfidence is a deadly weapon and may upset the apple cart for the locals.

around incidental to managing the Giants is not pleasing. Bill would not be unhappy to step out of the managerial berth if something better in the way of a front office job turned up. Then there is Terry's farm. Bill often bemoans the fact that his baseball connections keep him away from Memphis. Terry's contract to manage the Giants runs through the 1938 season.

Perhaps Jackson has some inside knowledge on what the future holds. Perhaps he is just satisfied to work with the Giant owners, doing what he can to groom Class AA leaguers for the Giants. In any event, he will have an opportunity to get some practical experience in handling a club, and if and when the opportunity to manage a big league team comes along, he will know what it's all about.

SPORT SLANTS

Travis Jackson long has been rated "a ball-player's ball-player". The gesture of the New York Baseball Writers' association in naming Jackson for an award as a player who has done much for the game over a period of years indicates that the talents of the former Giant third baseman were not wasted on sports writers. The award, incidentally, was decided upon before Jackson signed to manage the Giant farm in Jersey City.

Few ball-players have earned the respect of the lands in the press box as has "Old Stony". He has been a favorite since joining the Giants—15 years ago. The early part of his career he was rated at the top as a shortstop. Later, troubled with knee injuries, he moved to third, where he gamely battled odds that would have discouraged a less courageous individual.

Mr. Rose said the matter was being discussed with officials of the University but said he would not oppose such a plan if it could be worked out satisfactorily to everyone concerned.

ROYAL RESIDENCES GIVE THEIR NAMES TO COLORS

London (AP)—Colors for coronation year are taking their names from royal residences. Among the latest is Marlborough blue, a forget-me-not tone. The color was named Marlborough because it is Queen Mary's favorite shade. Buckingham lilac and St. James' rose—a soft, old rose—are other coronation color names.

Suit Styles Vary

New York (AP)—Although many of the spring suits will be manufactured a number of shops here are backing several other suit styles. They include suits with short peplum-trimmed jackets, those with sweater or reefer coats and a number of fur-trimmed models.

Too Many Onions

Salt Lake City, (AP)—Overproduction of onions in Utah is so great this year that they are selling at 25 to 30 cents a bag when the sacks alone cost 18 cents each. Advice to David F. Smith, state commissioner of agriculture, indicate a nationwide surplus which may run as high as 8,000 carloads.

CITY BOWLERS TRIM KINSTON

To Meet Rocky Mount Team in This City Tonight

The Greenville Bowling team had little difficulty in defeating the Kinston team last night, trouncing them 2432 to 2014.

Not a single Greenville player fell below the 400 mark, the lowest score being 414. Three Kinston players had scores lower than this, their highest being 498, made by Stepleford.

The local team will engage the Rocky Mount bowlers in a match here tonight at the Automatic alleys.

Last night's score card follows: Greenville.

Calotabs Help Nature To Throw Off a Cold

Millions have found in Calotabs a most valuable aid in the treatment of colds. They take one or two tablets the first night and repeat the third or fourth night if needed.

How do Calotabs help Nature throw off a cold? First, Calotabs are one of the most thorough and dependable of all intestinal eliminants, thus cleansing the intestinal tract of the germ-laden mucus and toxins.

Second, Calotabs are diuretic to the kidneys, promoting the elimination of cold poisons from the blood. Thus Calotabs serve the double purpose of a purgative and diuretic, both of which are needed in the treatment of colds.

Calotabs are quite economical; only twenty-five cents for the family package, ten cents for the trial package. (Adv.)

Legislative Chaff and Chatter
 Raleigh, Feb. 10.—Considerable speculation is going on here about Governor Clyde R. Hoey's reasons for jumping into the New York fight against ratification of the federal Child Labor amendment, after the Tar Heel chief executive kept quiet for several months while the battle was raging in his own legislature.
 The governor, who had nothing whatever to say in North Carolina, now lets New York and the rest of the world know that he considers conditions in North Carolina practically ideal.
 "I can say, without any sort of hesitancy, that child labor in North Carolina is negligible," Governor Hoey wrote for Sarah H. Birchall, representative of the New York State Economic Council, Inc., an organization which is assembling data for use in its fight against the federal amendment.
 Advocates and opponents of a law absolutely outlawing slot machines in North Carolina are delugging legislators with data, appeals and literature.

 Somebody has stirred up enough support for the machines to have telegrams sent to every law maker, while H. Clifton Blue, editor of the Sandhill Citizen of Aberdeen, is seeing to it that everybody in authority shall have the chance to know that he (Editor Blue) is against the slots and all their works.
 Prospects are dark, however, for any act which would effectually put the machines out of operation, although nobody can be found who will openly defend them as instruments for the public good.

Advocates of a statewide referendum on the liquor question seem to be highly elated because they have enlisted Former Governor and Senator Cameron Morrison as one of their oratorical big guns for the public hearing to be held Thursday.
 Controllers point to the Reynolds-Morrison primary vote as a clear-cut indication of just how much weight Mr. Morrison will have.
 A large number of North Carolina's aspiring politicians - jurists are much more interested in the filling of this state's two Supreme court vacancies than they are in President Roosevelt's proposal to put six more judges on the United States' highest tribunal.
 Wallace Wintborne, Democratic state chairman, would be universally conceded one of these posts were it not for an increasing public feeling against the appointment of judges as a reward for purely political service. As it is, he is given a wide edge over other aspirants.

One legislator will gravely assure you that the Assembly will finish its work and go home by March 15. Another will just as earnestly inform you that the "boys" will be here until May 15.
 The same wide divergence of opinion exists among the news men covering the session.
 As a matter of cold hard fact, nobody has any idea of the closing date and all predictions along that line are either for the purpose of having something to say of the equally laudable purpose of filling up space.
 This column has finally "arrived." It has been quoted in the political gossip in Raleigh's well-known morning sheet.

APPEAL MADE JOBBER FIRMS WRONG GROUP FIGHTING ACT

Teachers Take Grievance to Wrong Committee
 Raleigh, Feb. 9.—The classroom teachers who have been protesting to Chairman D. L. Ward of the house appropriations committee against allowing superintendents and principals a larger increase in salaries than is recommended for teachers, have a real grievance but are making their protests to the wrong committee, it is pointed out here.
 For while it is admitted that in a number of cities and towns where local supplements have been voted, the principals and teachers have gotten a much larger share of the supplemental funds than have the teachers, the reason has been because the local school board decided to increase the salaries of the principals and superintendents more than those of the teachers and not because of any action by the general assembly.
 Accordingly, the teachers, who are now protesting to Chairman Ward of the appropriations committee, should really be making their protests to their local boards of education, it is pointed out, since at the present time no principals or superintendents have obtained a larger percentage of state funds in salary increases than have the teachers.
 If anything, the teachers have gotten really more than have the superintendents and principals, because they have received their salary increases and increments both, it is pointed out. Nor is there any proposal at this time to give the superintendents and principals a larger share of the proposed 10 per cent increase than the teachers.
 In fact, all the appropriations committee does is to decide upon the lump sum for the schools. It does not even break the appropriation down into the amounts for teachers' salaries and other activities. The manner in which the school appropriation is to be spent is set forth later in the School Machinery Act, which in turn directs the School Commission as to how it shall allot the school fund for expenditures by the superintendents.
 If the teachers want a section written into the state law to prevent local school boards from increasing the salaries of superintendents and principals more from local supplemental funds than local teachers, they should go before the joint education committees of the assembly and ask such a section written into the School Machinery Act, it is pointed out.

Object to Big Tax on Cigarette Slot Machines
 Raleigh, Feb. 9.—Cigarette jobbers and retail merchants who sell cigarettes are up in arms at the action of the joint finance committee in classifying cigarette vending machines in the lowest brackets of the slot machine section instead of the higher brackets and maintain that if the law is enacted as now written, that these cigarette vending machines will work a serious hardship upon legitimate merchants and jobbers who pay rent, pay their licenses, spend money on advertising.
 It is maintained that the cigarette slot machines will be placed over the state in filling stations, cafes, lunch rooms and other places which pay no tobacco dealers' license and thus will discriminate against the established merchants who pay their license fees and other higher costs.
 The regular tobacco and cigarette dealers and jobbers also point out that in almost every case, these slot machines are owned by a corporation outside the state and that the profits from the operation of these machines, after giving the "split" to the person operating the places where they are put, go outside the state.
 The profits earned by local dealers stay right in the city and town where they are earned and help to build up the community, it is pointed out. These merchants must pay a state license tax of $10 a year if inside incorporated cities and towns and of $5 a year if outside the corporate limits.
 Yet as the slot machine section of the revenue act is now written, operators of these cigarette vending machines will have to pay a tax of only about $1.65 a year on each machine, although heretofore these machines have been taxed at the rate of from $10 to $50 a year. The merchants wanted them taxed at $50 a year each, since they pay no rent, no other taxes. But the slot machine people employed J. M. Broughton, Raleigh attorney, to argue their case for them and he convinced the committee they would get more revenue from the lower tax than from the higher tax now in effect. Indications are that the cigarette dealers and jobbers will ask another hearing.

 calling for the diversion of $2,100,000 a year of highway revenue from the highway fund and the use of $1,500,000 a year of the surplus expected at the end of this biennium. If the general assembly should refuse to approve this diversion from the highway fund, the bill would be more than $2,000,000 out of balance with the appropriations bill, excluding the social security program, and $4,000,000 out of balance if the social security needs are included.

The bill itself regarded as a victory for the conservative administration forces on the committee, due to the fact that it agrees in its total almost exactly with the revenue bill written by the Advisory Budget Commission, before the general assembly convened and because it has made virtually no increases in any of the taxes already in effect. It remains to be seen whether the conservatives in the house and senate are as strong as they were in the committees and whether the bill will go through the house as smoothly as it went through the committees.

Chairman Bryant and his committee have scored a big advantage by bringing the revenue bill into the house ahead of the appropriations bill, most of the political strategists agree. For if they can now get the revenue bill enacted ahead of the appropriations bill, they can say both to the appropriations committee and the general assembly, "This is all the revenue there is—there isn't any more" if either attempts to increase appropriations in excess of the revenue available. This will then compel the committee or the assembly to revise the appropriations downward instead of compelling the finance committee to revise the revenue bill upward, which has usually been the procedure in the past.

The enactment of the revenue bill ahead of the appropriations bill is regarded as a hard blow at the big appropriators and the forces seeking a larger school appropriation, but is also regarded as a big step towards an early adjournment.

 Elected on an out-and-out anti-sales tax platform, Mr. Volger has battled against that tax through every committee hearing and is still ready to go down the line in opposition. He has so far been hopelessly outnumbered and outvoted at every turn, but he is still full of enthusiasm and will doubtless make a strong plea for his ideas.
 The only argument his opponents have advanced to his tax plan, Mr. Volger says, is that business couldn't stand the tax. He scouts at the idea that such small levies would have any marked effect.

REACH END OF INDIRECT TAX

Saturation Point In Raising Funds Declared at Hand

Raleigh, Feb. 10.—The reason the state still approximately $2,000,000 out of balance, the reason the general revenue and appropriations bills assembly cannot add another $2,000,000 to the appropriations bill and give the school teachers the 2 per cent salary increase they want, the reason the thousands of insane patients in the various state hospitals are being fed on only molasses and bread on an allotment of only 14 cents per day per patient, is that the state has reached the saturation point in raising revenue from indirect forms of taxation and has milked its tax cow dry, in the opinion of most observers here.

The trouble with North Carolina is that it is trying to raise enough revenue to operate a stream-lined, 1918 horsepower, 1937 model state government when the revenue available is only enough to buy gasoline for a model T. Flivver government.

Chairman Victor S. Bryant of the House Finance committee said today.

"These who are the members of the finance committees just do not want to raise the revenue are not fair to the members of the committee — we want to get all the revenue we can. The trouble is that the state has already taxed virtually every source of revenue to the limit, with the result that there is nothing more left to tax. Some seem to think that we can go ahead and raise taxes still higher, but these seem to forget that when a tax is raised beyond a certain point, the revenue from the tax starts to diminish instead of increase, and that in the end there is less instead of more revenue."

The reason the state is in its present position of not being able to find enough revenue to meet even its most necessary expenses, is due very largely to the action of the 1931 general assembly in passing the MacLean Law putting the total cost of the operation of the six months school term on the state and the subsequent action of the 1933 assembly in expanding the school term to eight months — also at state expense — according to many of those who have been analyzing the present situation. For even since the general assembly enacted the MacLean Law, under which it abandoned the principle of dual support of the public schools and freed the counties, cities and towns from any and all responsibility in the support of the schools, the state has been finding it increasingly difficult to get enough revenue to balance its budget; it is agreed.

For while the MacLean Law brought about by the emergency existing during the depression and the revolt against high property taxes, especially for the schools, many students of the state's government and fiscal ability are now convinced that the general assembly made a serious mistake when it abandoned the principle of dual support and removed all property taxes for school purposes. For it is already apparent that the state is going to have to return to the dual support principle for schools if the schools are going to ever get anything like the revenue they need or if the other state departments and institutions are going to get the support they need, more and more members of the general assembly are beginning to admit. Many of the larger school systems — the city systems which suffered most from the MacLean law and state support of schools — have already come to realize this and are already levying supplementary taxes for schools. Indications are that more and more of the school leaders already realize that the only hope for educational progress and for anything like adequate salaries for teachers, at least in the cities and towns, can be brought about only by supplementing the state funds with supplementary taxes. Some of the school leaders, of course, are still trying to force the state to "get the money where the money is" and to put the entire state school system on a higher basis. But most of the school leaders and school teachers now seem to realize that the state has just about reached the limit of its tax levying ability, without recourse to a state property tax, and that their only hope now is in local supplements.

In other words, from now on the state appropriation for schools, must be regarded very largely as nothing more than a state equalization fund, capable of providing only a minimum school term, with the result that those counties, cities and towns which want more school service than can be provided with state school funds must levy local supplementary taxes, it is being agreed here. For the outlook now is for less rather than more state aid.

ESCAPE IF YOU CAN

BY FREDERICK JACKSON

SYNOPSIS Count Vronski, who was blackmailing Anne Phelps with love letters, is shot dead in Anne's studio. Clarke Bigelow finds Anne and Karsanoff, the glamorous dancer, staring at the corpse. They hide it during a party, then Bigelow and Dr. Austrelitz, the psychologist, move it to Vronski's rooms. Police arrest Thorne Dryden, a wealthy chap who hated Vronski, and his wife, Lorna, disappears. Anne and Bigelow find her hiding with Topsy Kane. Lorna thinks her disappearance will make police suspect her of the crime.

Chapter 31 Checking the Mink Coats

TOPY began to shove the soup. They took their places at the kitchen table. "I can run down again with anything you particularly want from town," said Anne. "No," cried Lorna. "You mustn't come again. Nobody must come. We will manage somehow by ourselves."

"Yes," sighed Topsy resignedly. "But you could post a letter to Thorne for me," suggested Lorna. "He probably gets the newspapers and is wondering what has happened to me. I didn't think of disappearing until after they'd taken him away. v. s. e. and I haven't been able to communicate with him because the removed beforehand unknown to Anne. "We never thought of that!" cried Bigelow, sitting up.

"No," admitted Austrelitz. "But then we hadn't the same incentive. She was actually in the room where the gun was supposed to be!" "But who could have removed the gun?" asked Anne. "When had you seen it last?" asked the doctor. Anne thought hard. "I don't know. The last time I went for cigarettes, I suppose, I kept them in the same drawer."

"When do you remember going to the drawer for cigarettes?" "Not for several weeks. You see, I usually fill all the boxes and don't go to the drawer again until the supply in the boxes runs low."

"And have many people been in and out of the studio in those weeks?" "Dozens," sighed Anne. "So really the gun might have been taken a week or two before the night of the murder—without your knowing?"

"Yes, I suppose so," Anne looked troubled. "Which makes the case look much less dark against Karsanoff," said Bigelow.

"And increases our number of suspects by dozens of my friends," said Anne. They were silent for a moment or two, each busy with his own thoughts.

"Did Karsanoff have any more to say that was interesting?" asked Bigelow. "Yes. She said that in her opinion we were wasting time over this problem that might be much better employed. She said that none of us is of much importance in the world, in any case and—so far as she could tell—that Vronski was even less than that. And that she could not look on his death as a calamity."

"I wonder what she knows about him and how long she has known it and how she found it out?" murmured Bigelow. Austrelitz smiled dryly. "Yes, that might be most convenient." He reached for a hand-worked silver cigarette box on his right table and offered cigarettes. "Have you dined, by the way, you two?" he asked with belated condescension.

"No," answered Bigelow, "not yet. We thought we'd rather come and compare notes with you first."

Austrelitz rang. "I'm sure we can fix up something for you here," he said. "My own hours are so uncertain. Deakin has become quite an expert in the matter of scratch meals."

"Please don't bother—" begged Anne. "As a matter of fact," grinned Bigelow, "we've had one scratch meal today. It consisted of soup. I'll admit that there was everything in it that could be in soup, but I think I should prefer a proper dinner tonight, if you don't mind. Thanks just the same."

"Well, we'll have a drink in any case," said the doctor. "If you like old-fashionedness, we'll take them rather well here."

"Adore them," Anne assured him enthusiastically. Deakin came to the door and was instructed to prepare the drinks.

"It Would Be Sordid" "I SUPPOSE you've not had an answer yet from your colleague in Paris?" asked Bigelow. "About Karsanoff, is that?"

"No. It will probably come tomorrow, but it is not only a routine inquiry and I don't expect to learn much from it, you know. One reads and hears a great deal about these women like Lorna Karsanoff but in the end one learns little more than they or their press agents wish one to know. Their private lives remain largely a mystery. My colleague will cable me a record of her professional appearances and perhaps report a few of the scandals that have been circulated about her. But if there is no mention of Vronski we will be no wiser than we are now."

"It would be interesting," said Anne, "to know exactly what her life has been. I mean the true story without any glossing."

"Much of it would be sordid, should think," said Austrelitz. "Oh, quite," agreed Anne. "But she probably didn't begin with many advantages."

Austrelitz smiled. "You mean she may not have had wealth—beautiful surroundings—governesses—the opportunity to acquire various accomplishments. But who id all these things have been advantages?"

"Wouldn't they?" asked Anne, surprised. "Would she have developed her artistry, do you think? Would she have become a famous dancer?"

"Probably not," Anne admitted. "Then both she and the world have benefited from the fact that she found the strength to lift herself out of difficult conditions. I sometimes think that is the Scheme of Things—and why the world is in such a chaotic state. We're here to work things out. To fight our way up. To escape if we can."

SYNOPSIS When Count Vronski, who is blackmailing Anne Phelps with love letters, is shot dead in her studio, three persons are nearby. Anne, Clarke Bigelow and Karsanoff, the glamorous dancer. They hide the corpse during a party, then Bigelow and Dr. Austrelitz, the psychologist, move it to Vronski's rooms. Chapter 32 A Cryptic Utterance "SO," said the doctor, thoughtfully summing up the report of Anne and Bigelow, "she didn't come to the studio and she wasn't the woman in the mink coat who went to Vronski's apartment?"

"No," answered Anne. "Then," said Austrelitz, "Karsanoff must have killed him."

"Or the baroness?" suggested Bigelow. "The baroness?" The doctor regarded him curiously.

She was invited to the studio party. She might have made two trips: the first to shoot Vronski; the second to pretend she hadn't been there before and to see what he had done about the murder. She was the only one who kept remarking on Vronski's continued absence and thinking it odd. Maybe she knew why it wasn't there. And maybe she deliberately created that scene at the Colony next day knowing we must have got the body back to the apartment. No or else could have, you see."

Austrelitz frowned in deep thought. Anne stared at Bigelow. "But how could she have got the gun from the drawer in the bedroom? Did she know it was there?" Austrelitz asked.

Anne shook her head. "She'd never been in the studio before."

"Could she have been there with Vronski without your knowledge?" "Impossible," Vronski never had the key," declared Anne.

"Had she ever met Karsanoff before that night?" "I don't know," answered Anne. "I wasn't paying much heed to anything at the party. And Vronski had introduced a number of them to Karsanoff in the bar at Madge's—before the party began. So she already knew them when they arrived there."

"If we only knew what Karsanoff knows about that night," sighed the doctor. "We might question her—" suggested Bigelow.

"I'm afraid she'd tell you only what she wanted you to know," he answered, smiling faintly. "She called on me today, by the way."

"You may remember I promised to dine with her tonight, but this morning, I realized that would be impossible, so I sent round some flowers with a note to make suitable apologies and break the engagement. I was out most of the afternoon—called in consultation over a very interesting case at one of the hospitals."

"In your private office?" repeated Bigelow, in surprise. "Yes. She had persuaded Miss Westcott to let her wait there as the waiting room was full. She said they must be ill or they would not come to see me and that she had a horror of germs. She said if she sat in there she would imagine them breathing them out by the thousands and she would certainly have hysterics."

Anne smiled. "Was The Gun Stolen?" "WHAT did she want?" asked Bigelow. "To know all about the new theory of the crime that I had mentioned on the telephone yesterday. I explained that we wondered if a fifth person might not have managed to gain entrance to the studio and shoot Vronski while the rest of you were out of the room. She thought it over for a long time with her eyes fixed on my face, but her expression revealed nothing. Finally, she said she supposed it was possible, but that she did not think it probable that it could have happened without her knowledge. I call your particular attention to that cryptic utterance. She pointed out that she was in the next room all the time with the door open between. She then said there was the gun, too—one would have to think how it could have got into the possession of this mysterious fifth person. She reminded me that Anne had identified it definitely as hers and had said that it was in the drawer of the bedside cabinet, but she added that, of course, what Anne had really meant was that it was habitually kept there, and as nobody had looked for it upon entering the studio that night, it could—she supposed—have been police would naturally see the letter, and learn from the postmark that it is in this vicinity.

"Of course," nodded Anne. "Write what you like and we'll post it to town."

Who Went To Vronski's? BIGELOW, making sure that all traces of recent grief had vanished, said to Lorna hesitatingly, "I don't tell us about going to Vronski's apartment, you know?"

"Going to Vronski's apartment?" repeated Lorna, looking at him wide-eyed. "Yes. On the night of the murder."

"Oh. But I never did," said Lorna. "But the papers said a taxi driver had come forward—?"

"I know," said Lorna. "I saw it. Topsy goes in to Larrytown for the papers. But I wasn't anywhere near Vronski's apartment. I didn't even know he'd got an apartment. I thought he was still at the hotel."

"So the woman in the mink coat was not you?" cried Bigelow. Anne stared. She had forgotten all about the woman in the mink coat for the moment.

"No," said Lorna positively. "I don't know who she was. Maybe someone else but was blackmailing. I don't suppose I was the only one I mean a man who would go in for that sort of thing wouldn't be content with one victim, would he?"

"No," agreed Bigelow dryly. "And so many women have mink coats, have they? I mean—Topsy's got one?"

"It went off to be relined that very day, thank God," granted Topsy. "I didn't mean you were the woman. You're not small and dark—"

"Nor young," agreed Topsy. "But there must be hundreds who would fit that description," went on Lorna. "For instance the Baroness Dormstatt!"

"But she's got gray hair," said Topsy. "Yes, black mixed with gray. Under a black hat and an eye-veil it might easily look dark. And she's small."

"Not young, either," said Bigelow. But he was wondering. To what extent could one depend upon the taxi driver's description being true? Suppose the baroness had gone directly to Vronski's apartment from the studio party? She could have got there and gone again before he and Austrelitz arrived. She would just have had time to do it. And for all they knew to the contrary, she might have had a key. Perhaps she hadn't been in love with Vronski

The Doctor's Pajamas "THE doctor had had an unusually busy day and had gone to bed with a book but he sent down word for them to come up. They found him propped up in a very handsome old four-poster, clad in Chinese pajamas, not just pajamas cut on a Chinese pattern, but fine old Chinese garments of faded apricot.

"You're expecting someone?" cried Anne. "I'm afraid we're in the way."

"You flatter me. I'm not so optimistic," smiled Austrelitz. "This garment—five or six other sets—was presented to me by my housekeeper on her return from a holiday in China. And if I don't wear them, she knows about it. So wear them. Also some very comfortable Chinese slippers. She's an excellent housekeeper."

"Don't apologize—" begged Anne mischievously, sitting on the foot of his bed. He smiled. Bigelow sat on the other side of the bed opposite Anne. "So you traced Mrs. Dryden?" murmured the doctor.

"You guessed, because we're looking so pleased with ourselves," said Anne accusingly. "Of course."

Bigelow began the tale of their adventures and—considerably assisted by Anne—retold Lorna's story. (Copyright, 1937, Frederick Jackson)

Specific Salary Raises Sought for State Employees

Reflector Bureau.
Raleigh, Feb. 10.—Heads of North Carolina's departments will not have unhampered discretion to apply salary raises how and as they please if final legislative approval is given a measure introduced in the House Tuesday by Representative Virgil Wilson, of Forsyth.

The act lays down hard and fast rules, within certain salary brackets, of the minimum salary increase which shall be granted.

The scale is:—Employees earning $48 or less per month, to receive at least a thirty per cent increase; those getting from $49 to $67, not less than twenty per cent; those earning from $78 to $100, not less than ten per cent; and those making more than $100 not less than five per cent.

The act would apply to all state departments and institutions except schools, and its provision would reach every state employe in the departments and institutions.

It is the most-sponsored bill to be introduced at this session, no less than thirty-one representatives having lent their names to it. This starts the bill well on the way to favorable action in the branch of the Assembly, though it gives no indication of its final fate in the Senate.

Introduction of the bill seems to be in line with fears on the part of many legislators that any salary increase permitted by the appropriations act as finally passed would be so distributed as not to do full justice to employes in the lower salary brackets. Many of the solons are determined that the "little fellow" shall be taken care of by mandatory provisions which will make impossible discrimination against him by reason of his lack of political pull with department heads and minor officials.

N. Y. Stock Market

New York, Feb. 10.—(AP)—United States steel topped 10 $104 1/4 share today for the first time in more than five years and many leaders crashed through to new high recovery territory with gains of fractions to three points.

The fresh buying wave touched off at the opening by the utilities put the ticker tape in arrears for a while. Profit taking then appeared and along with the reduction of extreme advances in numerous instances the turnover narrowed. Minus signs were also plentiful near the fourth hour.

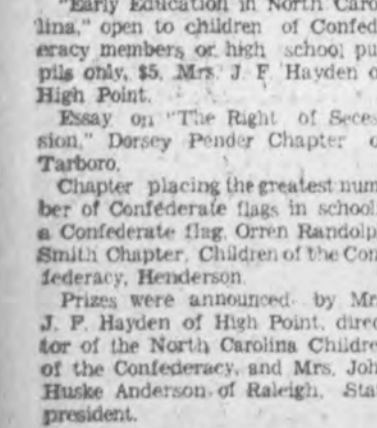

Bonds and commodities were a bit uneven.

New York Cotton

New York, Feb. 10.—(AP)—Cotton futures opened barely steady, one to three lower under liquidation and hedge selling and on indifferent Liverpool cables.

May eased from 12 5/16 to 12 1/8 and was selling at 12 1/8 after the first half hour when process general.

BILL IS AIMED AT UTILITIES

Would Prevent Over Valuation for Rate Making Purposes

Reflector Bureau.
Raleigh, Feb. 10.—Seeking to prevent utility companies from blowing first cold and then hot as to valuation of their properties, Representative Sam Blount, of Beaufort county, Tuesday introduced a bill aimed at prevention of over-valuation for rate making purposes.

Under terms of the measure the utility commission is directed to require a sworn statement, accompanied by certified statements from every county, showing the total valuation of the property within the state of any and every utility for which the commission is to establish rates.

The commission is further directed to establish rates for the utility using the total valuation, as shown by the tax lists of all counties, as the sole basis for fixing rates.

Commencing on the bill, Mr. Blount said it will prevent the prevalent practice of utilities listing their property for taxation at far below its fair value and subsequently boosting these values beyond all reason when the time comes for rate fixing by the utility commission.

He cited the case of a utility which listed its plant at $44,000 for taxing purposes in Beaufort, but which he said "would probably claim the same plant is worth $600,000 for rate fixing purposes."

He pointed out that the bill would also have the effect of raising taxable values in the counties as utilities would quite naturally list at reasonable and fair values if they knew these values were going to be used as "yard sticks" for rate fixing.

This land is sold subject to all unpaid taxes.

A deposit of 10% will be required from the purchaser at the sale. This the 13th day of January, 1937.

This is the verdict of a great psychologist after studying the reactions of these men over a period of 41 days.

The 5740 records now in our files suggest that you will find the rich-tasting Crowns kind to you. Enjoy them at home and sec.
