LOYALS SCORE VICTORY OVER REBEL FORCES

Insurgents Are Driven From Strategic Point

SPAIN PROTESTS AGAINST ITALY

Scathing Note to League Declares Regular Army Units Engaging in Conflict

Madrid, Mar. 13.—(AP)—Government troops supported by planes which dropped bombs on insurgent positions drove enemy concentrations from a strategic point 12 miles north of Guadalajara, the Madrid defense junta reported today.

One complete artillery battery was seized in the government counter attack.

The onslaught interrupted consolidating activities by the insurgents two hours after the advance guard of General Francisco Franco marched into the town, the government report said.

(By Associated Press) Spain's government forces drove against a motorized division of insurgent legionnaires at a place 44 miles northeast of Madrid, counter-attacking to disorganize the Guadalajara offensive.

The insurgents were forced from positions in the town, the government report said.

Insurgent advances made no mention of further advances and acknowledged the government had counter-attacked twice. The cost, however, was said to have cut heavily into government strength while Francisco Franco's insurgent army consolidated its positions.

A scathing note was handed the League of Nations at Geneva in which the Spanish government charged Italy was warring on Spain with units of her regular army.

As the warships of four great powers, Great Britain, France, Germany and Italy, began taking over "bases" to police the Spanish coast in enforcement of the 27-nation arms and men embargo, the Spanish government protested to Geneva.

Italian and German warships, the note declared, will attack Barcelona and Valencia under pretext of guarding the coast.

German Ambassador Von Ribbentrop told British Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden the Reich strongly objected to entering a New Western European security pact on present suggested lines.

Young Folks Plan Conduct Program At Joint Service

Dr. John Barclay, Director of Public Forum Project, To Deliver Special Message

Tomorrow night at the Methodist church, at 7:30, the Union Service will be sponsored by the young people—the local group of the United Youth Movement of America.

This Youth Rally has been planned by the young people themselves, under the direction of the Advisory Board, which is made up of the presidents of each group and the advisers of the young people at each of the six Protestant churches. They have selected Dr. John Barclay as their speaker and have arranged for each church to be represented on the evening worship program, the High School Glee Club leading the singing and giving a special number, under the direction of Miss Ona Shindler.

Dr. Barclay will speak on the subject: "Whither Religion?" and after the service, will meet all the young people who are interested in discussing any of the points made.

Ushers have been appointed from the young people's groups of the various churches, and the center section will be reserved for the Youth Movement group. Adults are asked and expected to be present as this program is sponsored by the young people for the churches of Greenville.

In the fall this group assisted the Greenville Council for Peace Action in presenting a peace pageant on Armistice Day at the Pitt Theatre, and in January, the group met for a discussion of "Sunday Movies" led by Dr. ReBarker from the college, and T. Y. Walker.

The Youth Movement group is planning an Easter Sunrise Service and its social committee is making plans for a social event to be given in April.

COURT BATTLE HOLDS INTEREST IN CAPITOL

INVENTOR DIES AT AGE OF 83

Dr. Elihu Thomson Succumbs to Serious Illness in Mass.

Swampscott, Mass., Mar. 13.—(AP)—Dr. Elihu Thomson, 83, of the General Electric Company, inventor of electric art welding and contemporary of the late Thomas Edison, died today at his home. He had been seriously ill since January.

The famous inventor, who received his first patent on electric welding in 1886, would have been 84 March 29. Last fall engineers gathered in Detroit and Lynn to celebrate the 50th anniversary of his discovery of electric welding. Then he exchanged greetings over a special wire with the two celebrations. It was his last public activity.

All City Car Owners Had Better Get Tags

City tax officials said today that letters sent out to delinquent automobile purchasers were bringing a number of late buyers in to purchase the tags, but added that there still were many persons owning automobiles who had not bought the plates.

Officials said a short while would be given, probably until the latter part of next week, after which warrants would be issued. "We are in earnest about this thing and unless they come in we are going to send for them," emphatically stated one official.

Edenton Excursion Eases Tension Over Legislature

Raleigh, Mar. 13.—(AP)—Thursday's excursion to Edenton for a day devoted more to fun and frolic than to serious business had about the same effect upon tired legislators as the little week-end "aprees" of a football team after a hard Saturday game.

It eased the tension of intensive and continuous grinding of the legislative mill and brought the law makers back to Raleigh ready to wind up the current session safely and sanely, yet with all possible expedition.

The visit to Chowan's ancient capital was colorful and enjoyable. Never has the entire population of any city done things in more thoroughly "bang up" fashion than the Edentonians. They were ubiquitous in their efforts to show the law makers and their attendants every possible courtesy.

The buffet luncheon at St. Paul's parish house was a delightfully informal affair, with the wonderful Chowan ham drawing more comment than anything but the un-

Busy Week Ahead For Assemblymen

Both Houses of Legislature Work Diligently; Leaders Disagree Upon Exact Time For Sine Die Adjournment, However

By RALPH L. HOWLAND Raleigh, N. C., March 13.—(AP)—The General Assembly, weary from the rapid pace at which it has been working, removed this week several obstacles to adjournment as leaders disagreed upon the exact time the final gavel would be sounded.

Next week probably will be the busiest of the session as the calendars are cleared in attempt to dissolve the term by the weekend. A host of minor details await attention together with the road reorganization, school machinery and permanent improvement bills.

Even a pleasure trip to Edenton, scene of one of the first general assemblies, did not result in the loss of a day's work Thursday as the legislators received and passed measures in the historic town.

Enacted into law this week were the aid to blind, old age assistance and relief to dependent children measures, designed to cost $16,000,000 during the biennium. Over the protest of Representative Ward of Craven, the legislature retained the original stipulation requiring counties to bear part of the expense.

Sponsored by Governor Hoey as part of his campaign pledge, a bill providing a $1,500,000 bond issue for free basal textbooks in elementary schools passed the assembly. The measure is not mandatory, however, the decision being left to the state textbooks commission. High school students still would rent their texts.

A state advertising program, also administration-sponsored, allocating $250,000 during the 1937-39 biennium for publicity, passed the legislature with negligible difficulty.

A probation system allowing judges to suspend sentences of criminals also was enacted into law. The measure had the endorsement of the federal government.

The house received the permanent improvements bill, which had been juggled from committee to committee, with a $2,345,000 allocation of funds. Originally set at $1,900,000, the measure was increased to more than $4,000,000 at one time.

The joint finance committee, which conducted public hearings on the measure, heard statements that if improvements were not made at certain institutions, "the state (Continued on page four)

DENY OFFENSE WAS INTENDED

German Minister Replies to Protests Made by U. S.

Berlin, Mar. 13.—(AP)—Foreign Minister Von Neurath, sources close to the Wilhelmstrasse said today, has answered United States Ambassador William Dodd's representation against German press attacks with the explanation they were not intended to offend.

Van Neurath, they said, pointed out the strictures of Mayor La Guardia of New York against the German regime and said they created "understandable" indignation throughout the Reich.

If some German newspapers exceeded proper bounds in their comments, the foreign minister was said to have asserted, it was because of their excitement over the La Guardia remarks.

Baron Von Neurath assured the United States ambassador no insult to the United States nation was intended, these circles said.

In so far as the German government is concerned, informed quarters said, the incident is closed.

NORTH CAROLINIANS IN NATION'S CAPITAL

By PAUL BARKLEY

Washington, March 13.—(AP)—The path from the capitol to the White House is being trod often by North Carolinians in Congress who are seeking assurances the great Smoky Mountains national park will be formally taken over by the national park service this year.

Representative Robert L. Doughton of Laurel Springs, dean of the state's house delegation, called at the White House this week in the interest of the park, coming away with the expressed belief a way would be worked out for the government to assume jurisdiction.

Previously, Senator Robert R. Reynolds had trekked to the White House. Upon his return to Capitol Hill, he, too, was optimistic over the park possibilities.

The matter of land acquisition is delaying formal transfer of the 400,000 acres of virgin forest to the park service. North Carolina has taken over its quota but difficulties arose over acquisition of about 17,000 acres in Tennessee.

Representative Zebulon Weaver, of Asheville, sought in a house bill this week to clear up the matter of the Blue Ridge Parkway entrance to the Great Smoky Park.

His measure would provide a right-of-way through the Cherokee Indian reservation by giving the Indians other land in the park.

COURT SESSION OPENS MONDAY

Moore and Aspinwall Scheduled Be Tried March 23rd

A two week's term of Pitt County Superior court is scheduled to get underway here Monday morning with Judge E. H. Cranmer presiding over the criminal session.

A number of important cases appear on the calendar prepared by Solicitor D. M. Clark, but the one which is expected to attract the most attention is that charging Bernice Aspinwall and Bernard Moore, two young white men, with the brutal attack on G. Len Pleasant on a lonely road here the night of December 23.

The case is scheduled to come up for trial on Tuesday, March 23. Although the case will attract much interest, it is not expected to take a full day for trial. Chief of Police George Clark, father-in-law of Mr. Pleasant, has declared the two men charged with the crime have confessed to participating in the attack, but each blames the other with actually firing the pistol that caused their victim to lose one and possibly both of his eyes. Some hope is held, however, that he will regain sight in one of his eyes.

The usual run of cases appears on the calendar with numerous larceny, whiskey and assault charges scheduled to be disposed of during the two weeks.

LEGISLATORS PUT IN FULL DAY AT DUTIES

Flanagan Anti-Slot Machine Act Enacted Into Law

Raleigh, Mar. 13.—(AP)—Working hard, trying to get in position to adjourn sine die next week, legislators passed more than 85 bills today and advanced a number of other measures on their legislative course.

The record $76,000,000 biennial revenue bill, largest in the state's history for the general fund, was ratified into law.

The senate concurred in a house amendment and enacted the Flanagan anti slot machine act, making it effective June 30.

Senators passed also on final legislative reading the Murphy-Uzell bill to permit Rowan citizens to vote on creation of a racing commission and legalization of pari-mutual betting.

Representatives passed on second reading a measure to provide $675,000 for a state office building here and finished work on the $2,345,000 general permanent improvement bill for state institutions and sent it to the senate.

The senate passed over protest of Bel of Mecklenburg a house-approved bill to appropriate $25,000 for adult education and adjourned to meet on next Monday night.

Each division of the assembly suspended its rules to receive a few new bills, which were supposed to have been banished after Wednesday.

Charges power companies were seeking to obstruct federal projects were made on the house floor during debate on the revenue bond bill.

Brooks of Johnston argued "there is a nigger in the woodpile" as he charged "power companies are trying (Continued on page four)

N. C. Democrats Exhibit Faith In Chief Executive

Raleigh, Mar. 13.—If there has ever been any doubt about the loyalty of most of the Democrats in North Carolina to President Roosevelt and their support of his entire New Deal program, including his plans for enlarging the Supreme Court, there is no doubt of it today, following the "correct the record" dinner here last night, attended by at least 2,000 honest-to-goodness New Deal Rooseveltian Democrats.

And these Democrats applauded, shouted, yelled and even "hollered" as "Honest Harold" Ikes, Secretary of the Interior, lauded President Roosevelt, extolled his great victory over the forces of special privilege and called on the real Democrats of North Carolina and the nation at large to stand by the President as he continues his fight to free the many from the control of a few.

Secretary Ikes did not hesitate to call the President by name and to point out the many things he has accomplished for the welfare of the state and nation. This was in decided contrast with the speech made week before last at the first so-called "Victory Dinner" by Senator Millard F. Tydings of Maryland in which he did not once mention the President by name and in which he made an indirect attack upon the President and his court reorganization program by inference and insinuation and criticized virtually his entire New Deal program.

It was this dinner which so angered the regular rank-and-file of the Rooseveltian Democrats in the state that they demanded this second "correct the record" Victory Dinner held last night, with a real dyed-in-the-wool New Dealer as speaker, in order to wipe off the record the anti-New Deal speech made by Senator Tydings. Perhaps it was not by accident that Secretary Ikes took as his topic last night "Tidings of Victory."

Those in charge of the dinner here last night are telling the world that Senator Josiah W. Bailey was not asked to select a speaker for this second dinner, after more or less apologizing for a week or more (Continued on page two)

Chrysler's Dispute With Union Expected Come to Head

60,000 WORKERS IDLE IN PLANTS

Differences Between U.A.W. and General Motors Declared Composed

(By Associated Press) Industrial union enthusiasts counted one big gain in the automotive industry today and pressed campaigns in other fields.

Final agreement in the General Motors strike, affecting 135,000 employees, brought wage, hour and other concessions to an affiliate of the C. I. O., but did not achieve the national minimum hourly wage nor 30 hour week goals. Ratification by union locals was withheld temporarily.

To the Wayne county court at Detroit was transferred temporarily the controversy between the United Automobile Workers, a C. I. O. union, and the Chrysler corporation. Arguments in the corporation plea for legal ouster of 5,000 sit-downers from its plants jammed the court room and brought a picket line to the building itself. The court deferred decision until Monday.

On the steel front the Blawie company and four subsidiaries announced signing of a union contract with 2,000 workers for a 40 hour week—35 daily minimum wage and bargaining recognition.

Philip Murray, C. I. O. leader, and Benjamin Fairless of the Carnegie-Illinois steel corporation agreed to resume their contract Monday.

(By Associated Press) The Chrysler Motor corporation's dispute with union leaders, major sore spot in the nation's strike-riddled industrial world, approached a show-down today.

60,000 idle workers were involved in the corporation's projected injunctive proceedings aimed at removal of 5,000 strikers who have held its eight Detroit plants for a week.

Insistence by the U. A. W. A. for recognition as exclusive bargaining agency for 87,000 Chrysler workers precipitated the strike. Union officers were summoned to court today to show cause why the sit-down strikers should not be ejected.

Capella Choir of Guilford College
The public is invited to the sacred concert to be given by the Capella choir of Guilford College tomorrow afternoon, at 2:30 o'clock, in the Robert H. Wright Auditorium.

This is one of the greatest Capella choirs, that is, the choir that sings without the accompaniment of an instrument, there is in this country and perhaps the best in the South.

The program is a combination of the most beautiful music ever written for choral singing, and includes both old and new compositions. The people of this vicinity have the rare opportunity of hearing such singing as is seldom heard in this section. The choir gave a concert in Greenville two or three years ago on a night when there were a number of conflicts, but music lovers in the town and college let other engagements go. They were so enthusiastic and ever since many of those who could not hear them that night have been eager for the opportunity to hear them.

Dr. Ezra H. F. Weiss, is a director of national reputation. The members of the choir are Guilford county students, some of whom have been in the choir for three or more years and all of them carefully selected because of musical ability.

It is hoped that they will have a large audience tomorrow afternoon.

In sacred memory of my dear daughter, Beatrice Hill:

That we never more on earth shall hear.
Her Mother,

In Memoriam
In memory of Jonas G. Owens:
Just one year ago you left us,
And how dark and dreary is the way,
For life is not the same to us
Since that day.
In our hearts your memory lingers
Sweetly, fond, and dear;
There is never a moment that our thoughts are not with you
And to feel that you are near.
Mild and gentle as he was brave,
When the sweetest love of life he gave;
We cannot say that he is dead:
He is just away.

Senior-Normal Play Pleases

The audience, judged by their frequent spontaneous laughs and applause, enjoyed thoroughly the amusing situation and lines of "Tweedles," as presented last night by the "last of the d's," the senior-normal class of 1937. And the class upheld the reputation for the twenty-six classes preceding them for giving high class plays in a creditable manner.

There was no doubt left in the minds of those who had been curious to know the answer to the question "What's a Tweedle?" They found the head of the Tweedle family stood for all persons anywhere, are arrogant in their pride in family.

The director of the play, Clifton Britton, a student, proved, unmistakably ability, especially in getting stage effects and by devices that help to create the illusions of the theatre. He created and gave a good all-round production, with a good, strong play, well cast and well interpreted.

There was some remarkably good acting, especially for amateurs. The audience followed the affair between the lovers with eager interest. Alvah Page, played the difficult part of the dreaming, insistent lover and rebellious son remarkably well, and the audience from his first line did not miss a trick or mood. Miss Rebecca Williams was a happy choice for the lovely New England provincial girl who was awakened on understanding of her family, and by the magic of love.

Joe Braxton was excellent as the rough, but proud, boasting head of the Tweedle family, Bill Pratt was a sharp contrast as the arrogant gentleman of culture, the head of the Castlebury family. He and Miss Lucy "Fouts" as the elegant Mrs. Castlebury, the ideal snobbish aristocrats, handsome, well-dressed and sure of themselves.

Miss Ellen Moore was a fine combination of the thrifty proprietress of the shop and tea room and as the dragon aunt, Miss Bettie Sue Heath, as the wise young widow in her modish dress, proved herself truly sophisticated, from the first flip of her cigarette. Harvey Deal played well the part of the slouching, awkward, meddlesome boy of the Tweedle household. Ralph Hutchinson as the rough Policeman Tweedle brought down the house every time he appeared and especially when he got gloriously drunk on "confiscated liquor."

The stage was exceedingly effective, with the action taking place in a real antique shop, with the terrace just outside, the scenery in the background through the window showing the blue ocean waves, and the opening on the terrace showing the landscape. Dr. Dorothy Schnyder of the art department, painted this scenery. Roy Barrow designed and made the interior. The lighting effects were also remarkably good, showing sunsets, shadows and other changes. The roaring of the ocean added to the seaside effect. Vincent Romano and Harding Sugg had charge of the lighting.

There were a number of real antiques on the stage, thanks to the furniture shops and to friends who loaned their treasures.

Miss Irene Williamson, the capable class president, most graciously thanked those who had contributed articles used on the stage as well as those who assisted with the play. ## 1939 Speakership Candidates Given Chances In Chair

Present Speaker, Gregg Cherry, Allows Number House Members Opportunity to Show "Stuff"

Raleigh, Mar. 13.—Several potential candidates for speaker of the house in the 1939 session of the general assembly are being given work-outs by Speaker R. Gregg Cherry, which gives the house members an opportunity to see how they work—and hear how they sound—in the speaker's chair.

Among those regarded as potential candidates for speaker in 1937 are Representatives Robert H. Rouse of Kinston, who occupied the speaker's chair during much of the Friday session; D. L. Ward of New Bern; Victor S. Bryant of Durham; W. E. Fenner of Rocky Mount, Nash county and Sam M. Blount of Washington, Beaufort county.

Those who have heard and seen all of these preside over the house at the invitation of Speaker Cherry—the Speaker may designate any member of the house to act as Speaker at any time—most observers agree that Rouse handles the work very smoothly and has an excellent knowledge of parliamentary procedure, that Fenner has one of the best voices, but is inclined to be too quick tempered and heavy-handed.

It is agreed that Libby Ward knows how to handle the gavel and push the bills through, also that he has a good voice. But some members feel that Ward is too liberal in his use of sarcasm, too prone to stick it in and break it off in his opponents, has too little respect for the opinions of those who disagree with him. Sam Blount is also regarded as being a trifle too sarcastic and cynical to be popular enough to be elected speaker.

Victor Bryant is regarded as having the edge on all of the others at the present time, although it is agreed that he does not have quite as suave a voice for speaker as some of the others being mentioned. There is no doubt, however, that Bryant is one of the most popular members of the house, that he is conceded to be one of the hardest workers in the house and to have outstanding ability. And regardless of whatever side of a question he is on, he always has respect for the views of those who disagree with him, is always courteous, considerate, polite, smooth and conciliatory. As a result, he has made many friends, few enemies in the house.

I love God--and apple cider

I LOVE apple cider because it tastes good—a love of the senses, like a dog's love for a bone.

I love my wife because of her charm and character and fitness to be my partner throughout life. A love of the senses, yes; but also of the intellect.

I love God because of His perfection, His power, His justice, His Mercy, and because of His promises and warnings.

I have never seen nor heard God; nor do I expect to ever in this life. I cannot love Him with my senses. My love, though directed by my intellect, must emanate from my will.

God has revealed to me His will—what I shall do—what I shall not do. He has promised me eternal bliss if I obey—eternal torment if I disobey. He has given me intellect to weigh the results of obedience against disobedience. He has given me free will to choose between the two. To me this is eminently just; and so to God I give my intellect and my will. And this is the love that God asks of me.

I love God and therefore the love I have for my wife is supernaturalized. Our union was given the indelible stamp of sanctity through the Holy Sacrament of Matrimony. We are equal partners in the business of life, each responsible for the spiritual and material welfare of the other, and for that of the little ones whom God may have placed at our fireside.

I love God and therefore I can even supernaturalize my love for cider—if I remember that God gave me the taste to enjoy it, and that cider is squeezed from apples, and that apples grow on trees, and that—as the Catholic poet sings to posterity—"only God can make a tree."

EVE'S ORCHARD

By MARGARET WIDDEMER

SYNOPSIS: After five years of work and play in New York, Eve Mannersfeld goes back to her 200-year-old farmhouse and orchard in Connecticut. Quiet, practical George Cleveland, a young fruit experimenter who lives nearby, and Uncle Henry, an old family friend, help her clean and move the antiques from the attic. Eve intends to rent or sell, marry gay, aim Denny and return to New York apartment life, but the tendency to stay in her beloved old home is strong. Denny comes for the weekend and Uncle Henry moves in as chaperon.

Chapter 15 Before The Fireplace

DENNY came back downstairs, fresh from brushing and cold water, and demanded to help explore. Hand-in-hand they went over the old house. Denny's spirits were high; and in spite of her hard day's work Eve found hers rising to meet them. "Isn't it heavenly?" he whispered, stopping to catch her in his arms as they went through the halls. "Isn't it like being married, just you and I alone in a house? It won't be long now, you'll see, sweetie."

"Not long now," she echoed happily. They ate their sandwiches and milk on one of the old japanned trays, before the replenished fire. They held hands, toasted crullers as an experiment, kissed across the tray at odd times, began to roast apples and forgot them till they were crisp. "The wood burns well," Denny said, assuming a competent air, after they had put everything away and come back to the fire. "Where did you get it?"

"George Cleveland brought it in. You know, he's really awfully decent, he's helped us like everything, and turned in Adriano too." "Sure, all the virtues," said Denny, with a note of jealousy. "Doing what I ought to have done if it weren't for this cursed poverty that makes one have to crawl to people." "Denny, you idiot! If you had the Cleverlands' money you'd no more put up beds and carry down furniture than the Queen of Sheba!" Denny conceded the point, a hand in her soft gliding hair. Suddenly he began to laugh.

"Anyway, it's something to have a girl who can get all the local nobility and gentry doing her chores the second day she gets here!" "The first," said Eve impudently. Denny, sitting on his heels before the well-laid logs in the high square fireplace, sat back suddenly and shouted with laughter. "All you have to be is a well-made mouse-trap, and the mice come dropping in even if you're in the Berkshire wilderness!" he said. "But look here, sweetie, Uncle Henry will slip. Is the old boy really coming back tonight?" "Mhm." She had set the fat old loveseat, with its fraying brocade, at one side of the fireplace where she remembered it. She was leaning back in it. Her normally neatly set yellow hair stood up wildly over her head, like a tousled child's. She hadn't taken off the long tight yellow apron; it wound about her, outlining every shallow soft curve of breast and hip and knee. Her lovely slim bare arms, a light gold down lying up the fore-arms, were locked behind her head, one long leg in its dusty brown ghillie and tan stocking was thrust out, balancing her as she stretched. Denny's face lighted, and he stopped talking for a moment as if his eyes couldn't have enough of her. They had set a tall candlestick at each end of the mantel. He stood up and lighted them, then dropped beside her.

Denny is Impressed "OH, YOU beautiful!" he said. "I'm going to stay right here, getting up to look at you from time to time. . . . I say, Eve, what a good Christmas card we'd make—First Night in the Old Home—what?" "Mind?" "I'd be a Helen Holkinson New Yorker cover if you'd be the other half of the sketch. That's how far my object worship goes. Besides, I'm impressed. I didn't know you owned a full set of household goods in the best colonial style."

Denny was impressed. She'd forgotten he was a southerner. She remembered that he had never known much more about her background than she had about his; less, indeed, because Denny sometimes discoursed with a scornful sadness on his mother's outworn lamentations over the things burned by Sherman. "I didn't realize you were old American."

"Thought you were second-generation Scandinavian," Denny said frankly. "Because I have yellow hair that's natural! You can still find occasional throwbacks to pure Saxons types in New England. Aunt Lisa always said."

Those who attended the dinner last night did so to show their loyalty to and belief in President Roosevelt and his program. The great majority of them made it clear and plain that they do not believe in a system of government under which "nine old men" can hold the veto power over Congress and the will of the people as expressed through Congress.

"So she did, very good ones. Taught me how, incidentally—I'll make you some today. She did it so we could hold on to this house and furniture you like." "Game old girl!" He kissed her irreverently and thought of something else. "Look here, sweetie, is the old gentleman who guards your virtue just here, for the night, or really staying as long as you do as he threatened?" "Long as I do, I'm afraid—"

"She confessed, a little ashamed of her own impulsiveness: 'In a moment of enthusiasm I asked him to stay till I rented. But he is a darling. I don't think I'm sorry. Mind?'" "Delighted in fact, I feel safer about you. This is a pretty big house for you to be alone in, and I don't want to scare you, but I saw a rather tough-looking customer shambling about as I drove up, one of those snagle-toothed, ragged, slack-jawed young fellows. Wanted to carry my bag in, as if this was Grand Central. Said his name was Seymour."

"Oh, Lane. He wouldn't hurt a kitten." "You aren't a kitten. . . . Yes, you are. Come over here and put your head on my shoulder and purr. . . . Love me?" They sat drowsily, happily together before the fire till they heard Uncle Henry's heavy footsteps on the uncarpeted stairs.

Visitors Pour In ON SUNDAY morning Eve's next visitor, Ellen Walton, walked in, neat and pale and smiling. Eve was standing in the middle of the kitchen, making the cheering discovery that Uncle Henry had left oatmeal in the double boiler, coffee ready to boil and toast cut in the oven. He had also washed up the dishes. His painful fear of being a burden was going to take various burdens off her shoulders, she realized.

"Isn't this the most beautiful house you ever saw—and even food ready!" Ellen said cheerfully, from the kitchen doorway. "Food ready," said Eve, kissing her friend. "This is Aladdin's palace, I'd have you know; your room's ready too, and when you've come down we'll eat."

"Oh, may I make waffles? There's an iron." Ellen's thwarted domestic tendencies were one of the crowd's jokes. "Of course you may—it will be time for lunch by the time you make them—and oh, Denny ought to be down by then, I should think—" "Denny?" "Oh, don't worry! I've gone back to the day of the chaperon, if you please!"

Eve was glad that she could tell conventional-minded Ellen about Uncle Henry's firm stand. Ellen was at the waffles in five minutes, tied up in the checked apron from her overnight bag. Eve stood leaning against the open back door; it was a crisp bright morning, warm for April first. Uncle Henry had already raked the tattered lawn stretching away to the orchard slope. The grass was raising its blades above the yellow spots where rubbish had lain. Beyond, a tangle of tall dry blackberry canes from last year lay above the straw area that must be the old strawberry bed. There was, over to the south, a fresh-turned area of ground. The damp fresh earthy smell came to her. She looked up to the rank on rank of the old apple trees, marching away over the hill, to the meadow at the other side, and realized that she was mistress of these acres of lovely land. Worthless as she supposed the possession was, she thrilled to it. As she leaned by the door in her sweater, in the sun and wind, something in her quieted, steadied, to match the rhythms of the spring around her. She was at peace. She tried to laugh at herself. Peace, steadiness, with her job thrown away, her marriage uncertain, the place itself a problem—everything going through one of those times of flux which are such a nuisance?

But she could not laugh the feeling away. The sun and the wind and the earthy smell, the greenness and spaciousness of her possession made her happy. It was a strange happiness; it did not depend on things. Not because of parties, people, excitement. Not even because of Denny here with her. But because of her feet on the earth and the world at spring noon. She remembered feeling this way only once before: a little girl alone in the meadow there above, in daisy time. She never remembered that she was to have been married today.

And then she heard the violent blowing of a horn. She went to the front door. There, shiny in the noon sun, stood Milti Power's limousine, her smart young chauffeur (whom Milti said she had had to discourage) holding the door open for a crowd of people to descend. They had all come as Marilyn had promised. All these people caring enough for her to come out and see her the very first Sunday, bless their hearts!

Anti-Slot Machine Bill Appears Sure Of Final Passage

House Accepts Flanagan Measure and Returns It to Senate For Concurrence in Amendment Despite the expressed feeling of some proponents that the measure would not be enacted into law, the anti-slot machine proposal appears headed for law early next week. Senator E. C. Flanagan, introducer of the bill, maneuvered it through a somewhat hostile senate a week or so ago without an amendment and the bill was sent to the house as written. Rep. M. S. Moore, declaring that he was heartily in favor of the bill, expressed fear, however, for its passage in the house. Yesterday, however, the house passed the bill and returned it to the senate for concurrence in an amendment to make it effective June 30, instead of next week. This apparently was for the purpose of granting owners of the machines time to take them out of operation. The measure is declared to be one of the most stringent ever introduced to outlaw the "one-armed" bandits and other gambling devices. Efforts already had been started here to have the measure passed as a local bill applying to Pitt county if the state-wide proposal failed. The action of the house, however, in adopting the act makes such a move unnecessary. Pressure for passage of a state-people bill was started here nearly a year ago when a local campaign was waged against the slot machines. At a mass meeting Mr. Flanagan pledged his efforts to secure the passage of a measure outlawing the devices.

SHANGHAI CLAMPS DOWN ON RADIO BEDLAM Shanghai, China (AP)—Boasting of 35 radio stations, more than any other city in the world, Shanghai is now attempting to ease the congestion of the ether and raise the standard of broadcasts. The Bureau of International Telegraphs has decided to decrease the number of licenses and has already ordered 8 stations off the air. During 1929 China became radio conscious and practically overnight numerous uncontrolled stations sprang up. Until the bureau took control in 1931, the loudest program in the city was the best. Sir Edgeworth David, Welsh exile, was the discoverer of the south magnetic pole.

GAS HAVEN

HOOKWOOD, England (AP)—Sir Malcolm Campbell is a man who believes in preparedness. The world famous racing driver has built a "better 'ole" on his estate here to which to flee from air raids if war comes. The two-room concrete dugout (above) is covered with fifteen feet of cement and earth over which rhododendrons will bloom for camouflage. He plans to spot raiders from a lookout tower, (left), then retire to his dugout where he can get war news by radio (at left, below). He has special equipment to light and ventilate his refuge. ## PAT CRAWFORD CLUB SPEAKER

Coach May and High School Team Guests of Kiwanis Club

Reynolds May and his Eastern Carolina championship basketball team were paid high tribute at the regular meeting last night of the Kiwanis Club, at which "Pat" Crawford, nationally known baseball player, was the guest speaker.

Coach May and his team were special guests of the club. Following a brief account of the divisional meeting in Goldsboro on Thursday night by Dink James, a quartet composed of Misses Mabel Beaman and Rosalyn Swindell and Robert Earl Clark and Edward Conway, rendered several selections. Miss Ona Shindler accompanied the quartet.

"Twist" Matthews, who was in charge of the program, recognized Mr. James, who presented Coach May.

The popular coach thanked the Kiwanians for the support they had given the team during the season and declared that without the support of citizens of the town the team could not have made the record it had. He stressed the psychological effect cheering and support from the sidelines had on members of the team.

He also took occasion to express his feeling for members of the team. He gave them full credit for having gone as far as they have, declaring that they had to be driven from the practice court. "These boys would practice the regular periods and then remain on the court running plays and shooting baskets for hours after the regular practice period was over," he said.

He also paid tribute to the boys, terming them as "fine young men." He introduced each member of the club and each was given a round of applause.

Mr. Matthews then introduced his former college mate and friend, Pat Crawford.

The noted professional baseball player and college star at Davidson conducted an informal "sports chat." After recounting several anecdotes, he turned to the serious side of sports.

He described the members of the local basketball team as thoroughbreds, saying that it took players of this calibre to make championship teams. He also paid tribute to Coach May, saying that it was evident that his talk "came from the heart."

In closing his talk, Mr. Crawford suggested a prayer for athletes in which they ask to play the game on the square and be graceful losers as well as winners.

Other guests at the club included J. H. Rose, superintendent of the city schools, Dr. T. E. Browne of N. C. State College extension service, and J. H. Mobley, agricultural teacher in the county schools, and Rev. C. H. Patrick, new pastor of Immanuel Baptist church.

of the Grimesland troop their charter. Prof. D. H. Music was furnished by the Grimesland School Choral Club. After remarks by Mr. Setzer, the Principal and the Supervisor, the meeting closed.

The Cherry Lane Group Teachers met Wednesday, March 10, in group contest. The schools were all represented and a large number of the parents were present. The morning was spent in Literary Contest. A delicious lunch was served by the parents. The afternoon was spent in Athletic Contests.

The Greenville Group Schools met Thursday, March 11, in group contest at the Greenville High School. The morning was spent in Literary Contests. The afternoon was spent in athletic contests. Each school was well represented by pupils and parents.

High School Seniors Win Tourney Opener

The girls' basketball tournament between the classes of the high school opened Friday afternoon with a double-header.

In the first game the seniors won over the sophomores with the score of 17 to 15. Mary Eakes was the high scorer for the seniors, leading with ten points. Maude West ranked second in scoring with 4 points. Due to the good defensive playing of the senior guards, Marie Simpson, Hilda Herring and Lucille Coward, the seniors were able to emerge victorious. Geraldine Porter was high scorer for the defeated team with 8 points. The sophomore guards also played a good game.

The second game was played between the freshmen and juniors. The game was close, the score being 6 to 6 at the half, but the freshmen finally won with the score of 12 to 10. Betty Tyson was high scorer for the winners, closely followed by Joy Flanagan and Jane Scoville. Jane Harrison, Doris Roberts and Elizabeth Wells proved themselves to be valuable guards for the future varsity team. Rose Collier, a substitute for the juniors, was their high scorer with 4 points. Other forward scoring for the juniors were Frances Clark, Marjorie Sugg and Jane Rowlett who scored one goal each. Each junior guard played a good defense game.

The two winners and two losers will play each other Monday afternoon in a doubleheader. There will be no admission charge.

might as well give them up."
The measure will go to the senate next week.

The house enacted the Flanagan bill to prohibit the manufacture and sale of slot machines in the state. Efforts to exempt "pin boards" were futile and Flanagan, senator of Pitt, said the exemption would "kill this bill."

In another bill, the house allowed permission to the voters of Rowan county to decide whether they want pari-mutuel betting on horse races and received a similar measure pertaining to New Hanover county.

The senate killed a measure permitting the state to vote on abolition of the death penalty and tabled a bill which would have scrapped the gas chamber and returned to use of the electric chair in capital cases.

Dr. G. S. Coleman, prison physician and official at executions, told the senate calendar committee that death in the gas chamber was "horrible."

Still before the assembly are the school machinery and motor vehicle bills, the latter reducing tax cost for automobiles.

Despite an unfavorable committee report, the house placed on its calendar a measure to endorse President Roosevelt's plan to reform the nation's supreme court. The house recently killed a proposal by Representative Bailey of Madison, a republican, which commended Senator J. W. Bailey in his opposition to the reform idea.

The house and senate worked diligently as the weekend neared in efforts to clear their calendars in hope of adjournment sine die by next weekend.

'SETTING UP EXERCISES' PUT PEP IN PLANTS

Urbana, Ill. (AP)—Scientists at the University of Illinois who have been giving plants "setting-up exercises" claim this has increased the plants' work capacity 41 per cent.

W. E. Burge and G. C. Wickshire, physiology instructors, chose the common mimosa, a plant which responds to stimuli by folding its leaves. They attached tiny weights to the leaves.

Repeated stimulation produced weight lifting exercises, claimed to have improved the plants' general condition noticeably over that of "ordinary" plants of the same species.
