NOON TUESDAY DEADLINE SET FOR ASSEMBLY

Both Divisions Work Briskly Throughout Today

HOUSE ACCEPTS MACHINERY ACT

Resolution to Support Court Reform Again Reported Without Prejudice

Raleigh, Mar. 20.—(AP)—The legislative voted today to adjourn its 1937 session sine die at noon Tuesday.

Both divisions worked briskly on odds and ends of legislation after adopting the joint resolution setting the hour for quitting.

Early in the month the legislators voted to quit March 18, but were unable to complete their tasks.

Conferees on the school machinery act ended their work and reported at an afternoon session.

The house accepted the school compromise and adjourned until Monday at 2:30 p. m.

Representatives enacted into law the motor vehicle code act cutting license tags to a minimum of $7 from $8 for private cars and renewing the general automobile laws.

The house also accepted senate amendments to a bill providing expense money for superior court solicitors.

Another "without prejudice" report was given by the senate calendar committee to the house-adopted resolution endorsing the supreme court reorganization program of the President. Last night the senators refused to take the resolution from the committee.

The senate received a measure it killed yesterday which would require laws governing general contractors and amended and passed it and sent it back to the house.

The senators made a typographical correction in the bill to appropriate $3,520,000 for social security purposes and passed it but later brought it back.

On motion of Senator Graveley of Nash it was amended to provide an appropriation of $137,500 for completion of the Western Carolina tubercular sanatorium at Black Mountain when federal funds are available, was passed again and sent to the house for concurrence.

BUSY DAYS ON CAPITOL HILL

Court Reform Shares Interest With Other Problems

Washington, March 20.—(AP)—The problems of holding to industrial recovery and safeguarding American neutrality shared interest in the capital this week with the Supreme court controversy.

Chairman Eccles of the Federal reserve board warned against a too rapid upward swing of prices and asked that the budget be balanced—with increased taxes on income and profits if necessary.

Congressmen who balked at the suggestion of more taxes were heartened by a treasury estimate income tax collections this month probably would reach $840,000,000—nearly double those of March last year.

Secretary Roper appealed for business initiative in studying means of preventing a run-away boom, and Secretary Wallace says the government has power to influence, but not control a business boom.

Strikes, often associated with recovery, drew criticism in the senate and house because of the new sit-down technique.

Senator Borah (R. Idaho) declared the strikers are "fighting for what they deem to be their right, in an economic system dominated in a great measure by lawlessness."

Senator Robinson (D. Ark.) suggested the Federal government's powers depend on a Supreme court ruling on the Wagner labor relations act, but opponents of the President's court reorganization proposal the court and strike situations were connected.

ASSEMBLY ON HOME STRETCH

Week Spent in Cleaning Up Legislative Odds and Ends

Raleigh, Mar. 20.—(AP)—North Carolina's general assembly, in a home-stretch drive for final adjournment, cleared up odds and ends and put finishing touches on important legislation this week.

Leaders today predicted confidently the 1937 session would be concluded early next week, possibly by Tuesday.

Bills calling for a bond issue of $2,344,000 for permanent improvements at state institutions and for payment of $417,000 in back salary to state employees were ordered ratified this week, and a measure calling for a $975,000 bond issue for a new state office building in Raleigh was amended by the senate and returned to the house for concurrence which that body gave. The board of health also got permission to issue $160,000 in revenue bonds for a building.

A move by Senator Graveley of Nash to increase the permanent improvements allotment to more than $4,000,000 was turned back in the senate by a narrow margin.

Also ordered ratified into law was the important revenue machinery bill, under which municipalities and counties levy taxes. As the act stands, the property of homesteaders will not be exempt from taxation.

Both houses agreed to a conference committee's changes in the motor vehicle code, and the proposal will be law as soon as it has passed third reading, as amended, in the house. The bill calls for a reduction from 40 to 35 cents per hundred pounds of car weight, in the price of automobile license plates, with the minimum charge cut from $8 to $7.

The house concurred in minor senate amendments to the highway reorganization bill advocated by Governor Hoy, enacting the measure into law. It provides for the appointment by the Governor of 10 highway commissioners and a commission chairman, and the state then would be divided into 10 highway districts, with a commission member residing in each district.

Another Hoy "must" measure ordered ratified was a child labor bill, which will prohibit children under 16 years of age from working in industry and regulate employment of all children under 18.

Passed by the house and sent to the senate for ratification.

Wilson Merchant Convicted Here On Receiving Charge

Bernice Aspinwall and Bernard Moore Scheduled to Be Tried Tuesday in Pleasant Attack Case

Joe Boswell, white man of Wilson county, was convicted in Pitt Superior court yesterday afternoon of receiving stolen property, but was convicted only of the receiving charge.

Several Wilson peace officers testified in the case and declared that Boswell, who runs a store about three miles South of Wilson, had as much as 1,500 pounds of meat in his place. It was understood that cases are pending against him in Wilson county.

The case consumed all of yesterday afternoon's session of court. Following its completion, the court adjourned until Monday morning, when hearings will be resumed.

Toll Boosted to 455 As Court of Inquiry Convenes

New London, Texas, Mar. 20.—(AP)—Toll of the London community school blast was boosted to 455 by latest checks today as a military court of inquiry convened to hear contrasting theories of the cause — one accumulated gas as a result of inadequate radiator vents; another a nitro-glycerine explosion.

The casualty list showed 94 hurt and two missing. The list, as relief workers checked it, still was subject to revision.

The military court was convened while this stricken community and surrounding of country prepared to bury its dead.

Dr. E. P. Schoch, University of Texas chemist, held out a belief the explosion on Thursday was caused by gas forced into cells of the hollow tile school room walls by lack of ventilation.

REBELS SMASH INTO CAPITAL

Insurgents Reported To Have Crashed Defense Lines

Navalcarnero, Spain, Mar. 20.—(AP)—Insurgent forces in the University City sector, on the outskirts of Madrid, were reported today to have smashed through the capital defenses into Northern Madrid.

Word of crumpled resistance and a sudden thrust into the long besieged city was brought to this insurgent base by persons who said they witnessed the incursion.

The troops of General Francisco Franco were said to have beaten their way into positions near a large thoroughfare bisecting the Northern part of the city from North to South.

Madrid, Mar. 20.—(AP)—Government armies based at General Francisco Franco's Guadalajara near guard today with bombs and machine guns as trying to complete what General Jose Maja already termed the "implacable defeat" of that Madridward offensive.

Officers said the insurgent forces, whom they described as Italian peasantry, broke in wild confusion under the sudden strafing.

Bi-motored bombers and fast pursuit planes waged the onslaught to facilitate a two-headed push by government troops into the Guadalajara province territory they lost in the nearly two weeks' insurgent offensive.

Chrysler Strikers Claim To Be Using Only Weapon

Detroit, Mar. 20.—(AP)—Representatives of 6,000 sit-down strikers defying court orders for their eviction from Chrysler automobile plants, informed Governor Frank Murphy today they were using "the only weapon we have" and warned use of state troops to eject them "would lead to bloodshed and violence."

Deputy Sheriff Bernard McGrath, accompanied by 75 officers wearing bullet proof vests and armed with tear gas bombs, marched to the gates of the Newton Packing company plant here today and read a court order demanding more than 100 sit-down strikers there evacuate the premises.

(By Associated Press) Opposing forces in a number of industrial disputes involving thousands of idle workers tried to compose their differences over the conference table today.

Agreements between employer and employee ended several strikes in scattered parts of the nation, but major disputes remained unsettled.

Federal and state mediators pressed the settlement of the Chrysler strike that has kept 60,000 employees idle for two weeks.

Governor Frank Murphy of Michigan said the dispute was "moving along rapidly and satisfactorily toward solution."

Governor Murphy conferred with officials of the company and the United Automobile Workers Union last night in what he called "preliminary conference." Secretary of Labor Perkins talked by telephone with the Governor and Walter Chrysler.

Only One Proposal Amend Constitution

Raleigh, N. C., Mar. 20.—(AP)—Constitutional amendments had a tough going in the general assembly now ending its session, though the voters last fall approved all submitted at the election.

The only proposed basic law change approved for submission in 1938 would give sheriffs four-year instead of two-year terms of office.

The house approved and sent to the senate one to permit the creation of a state department of justice but it has not been acted on by the upper division.

Each division received measures to amend the constitution to prohibit diversion of highway funds but they never got out of committee.

Senators defeated a bill to abolish capital punishment and approved one to permit the legislature to decree the death penalty for kidnapping but a house committee killed it.

Four proposed amendments endorsed by Governor Hoy were killed in senate committee. They would have given the governor veto power, reorganized the state board of education, prohibited local legislation and abolished capital punishment.

Last fall the voters wrote changes into the constitution to: limit debts of the state and political units; increase the membership of the supreme court; permit classification of property for taxation; permit exemption from taxation of homesteads up to $1,000 of tax valuation; and authorize an increase in the maximum tax on income from six to ten per cent.

Sees Increase In Tenant Farmers

Deq Moines, Ia. (AP)—B. H. Hibbard, University of Wisconsin economist, told a group of farm owners here he believed the recent small gain in the number of owner-operated farms in some sections of the country is "only incidental and temporary."

His theory is that the farm owners moved back from town to the country because their usual landlord's income that has been depleted. He thinks that with better times they will be looking for tenants again.

Luncheon Thoughts

Ideas for luncheon: Cheamed fish, souffles, fondues, macaroni and cheese, Spanish rice, rice and chicken, corn pudding, stuffed peppers or tomatoes, casseroles of leftover fish or fowl, omelets, creamed mushrooms.

HOT PUNCH IS GOOD AFTER SKATING PARTY

Hot punches, either plain or spiced are good served after a skating or sliding party. Hot cider will prove to be especially popular.

EVE'S ORCHARD

By MARGARET WIDEMER

SYNOPSIS: Eve Mannersfeld goes back to her 200-year-old house and orchard in Connecticut after working five years in New York. She plans to marry, marry pay, slim Denny and return to Manhattan apartment life. Uncle Henry, an old family friend, moves in to help Eve run the place. George Cleveland, her calm, practical neighbor, wants Eve for his wife, but she loves Denny. Peter the penniless artist, his wife Marilyn and their serious young son Judge join the menage as boarders. Eve's friend Ellen Weston and Uncle Henry raise the finance question.

Chapter 21 Signing A Paper

WHEN Eve returned, Ellen was talking. "I was telling Eve that you'd better get your finances straightened out," she said resolutely. "Then there won't be anything to come up and be a bother."

"Just my idea," said Peter cordially. "Let's go."

"Let's go."

"It's about the expenses," Eve began bravely. "I think we'd better prorate them."

"Swell," said Peter sunnily. "Can you prorate? I can't." He turned the coffee pot upside down again, shook his head sadly, and said: "Well, after all, two cups are enough at eight p. m. I'll tell you, Eve, how it is. We haven't a penny right now. We get our money in a lump twice a year, except what I pick up by my work. I thought that if you could carry us from now till June first we could turn over the trust money to you then. You said you had enough savings to manage with till fall."

"I wouldn't blame you," said Peter earnestly. "If you didn't want to do that, it's horribly unbusinesslike. And I know you'll find it a nuisance keeping track. But at least we'd lay every penny at your feet when it comes, wouldn't we?"

"You can tell us exactly what you think we ought to pay and we hand it over like gentlemen the minute the old firm comes across. I'll tell you—we'll sign a paper. He brightened at this.

"And if she can't do it that way," asked Uncle Henry from the back parlor, "what then?"

Peter laughed and shook his head. "Frankly, Mr. De Remer, I don't know. You see, we can't get on relief because we do have this money twice a year from old Judge Allaire's estate. Nell Martin throwing us out of the apartment rather put us on our beam-ends. I've read about all sorts of things—you build a tar paper shack in Central Park, or you throw a stone through a plate-glass window and they put you in a nice warm jail. We'd have to throw three stones," said Peter whimsically, "through three windows."

John looked up, scared. "Oh, darling, don't talk like that, even in fun," said Marilyn, shivering in her pretty rose-colored wool sports frock.

Peter pushed aside the little table, and sat down against Marilyn's knee on the hearth, ere hand in hers. He squeezed the hand and said: "It won't be as bad as that, sweet. We both know how wonderful our friends are; and what a splendid, friendly lot of people we've always run across in our own except just believing in them and loving them."

Ellen Figures

ELLEN had a pencil. She began figuring. There was a silence, broken only by Judge's oblivious, eager questions about the book he and Uncle Henry were busied over, and by the crackling of the logs. Eve thanked her stars for Ellen. She was beginning to feel rather like a pig. She wished for Denny, to handle the things for her; and then hastily unwished. Denny never had much patience with the Featherstones, though he enjoyed them. . . . Denny was going to telephone tomorrow, he'd said. She'd told him to be prudent and put the money in their painted pig bank, but she hoped he wouldn't. He'd said he wouldn't; he'd said: "Five minutes of your voice is cheap at the price, and we'll hear no more about pigs or prudence, miss!"

She came back from a long way to hear Ellen's deliberate, clearly rounded voice.

"I've figured on what Eve has saved and on what Mr. De Remer is doing to help out expenses with the milk and eggs and butter. I don't suppose you want them to do more than share actual expenses, do you, Eve?—laundry and a cleaning woman and light and heat and telephone and what?"

"You're wonderful, Ellen," said Marilyn admiringly. "I wish I was as businesslike as that!"

"Well, you might try to be." Ellen had fended for herself since she was 16. She continued: "Eve can manage it, but I think you had better sign a paper about the money, Peter. Here's what it will come to, proportionately for the three of you. I'm counting in two tons of coal, Eve, and if I know anything about houses, repair money."

"And now we'll sign away our souls, Marilyn lamb," said Peter gaily. He drew up a very formal statement of the bargain with his fountain pen, on the top of next Judge's found for him; and added of his own accord that he would accept Eve's account of what the expenses were without any questioning. He bordered it with Indians and settlers and frewetter bottles and insisted on sealing it with yellow wax from the candle on the mantel.

"And now you have us in your power!" he added blithely, lifting his pen from its neat artist's signature of "Peter Featherstone and Marilyn his Wife." "But you're going to have to prorate, I can't. Just dumb, that's the Featherstones. . . . Seriously, Eve, this is a heavenly thing you're doing, the sort of thing that makes one feel friends are worth while and the world's pretty darn fine place."

"And Eve isn't one of the finest!" added Marilyn. "Never mind, darling, when our ships come in we'll remember it of you. And they will come in," Marilyn ended gallantly, "and you and I'll be glad we wouldn't do pot-boilers, Petesweet."

Mizzi and Marriage
THEY began to plan about the work then. Peter said he was magnificent about sweeping.

"And Judge is practically the perfect housemaid," Marilyn added.

"And we must all be adamant about company," said Peter sagely. "Week-ends are devastating."

"Nobody admitted under two chickens or a whole ham!" Marilyn added joyfully. "Dillard said I want to get in on gin, and drink it all before he goes, like the stories of old-fashioned donation parties."

"Girl, if you think old-fashioned donation parties included gin, I can only say you sound irreligious to the last degree." Her husband ruffled her hair affectionately.

"Dillard went too far with Mizzi this time, if you ask me," Marilyn added irrelevantly. "One thing you mustn't tell Mizzi is that she couldn't get married three times a day if she wanted to. I call it a siren complex. Probably some secret inferiority; somebody may have jilted the poor darling when she was seven. And I know poor Dill was hoping to get another loan from her; he needs it badly. They both have such silly baby temper, bless their darling hearts!"

"Oh, well, all she has to do to prove it isn't true is to get married again," Ellen said idly from her half of Eve's love seat.

Marilyn objected. "I don't think our Mizzi would be happy married. I'd hate to see her tied down, and we mightn't like her or he, and our crowd would miss Mizzi."

"Just the same," Ellen persisted, "I wouldn't put it past Mizzi to marry now, just to show Dillard. I don't like her, as you know, but she interests me a lot, and I've watched her."

"Well," Peter said, yawning, stretching his long tweed-clad arms, above his head in a smoky dizziness, "let's hope that the happy man fits into the gang, and especially that he isn't the latest pretender, the Kilian lad with the pink cheeks and black mustache, illustration by John Held."

"Time you went to bed, son," came Uncle Henry's voice from the back parlor. "Your mother said she'd rather you slept in with her, so we put you up a cot. Take the candle and run along now."

"I said that what Judge needed was somebody who possessed his own fine old republican virtues," Marilyn said sleepily. "Simply swelling with delight at being ordered to go to bed at a proper hour, aren't you, darling child? Well, I may even go myself, now I think of it."

But Judge scarcely heard her. "I think Belle is a very handsome cow," he was saying as he followed Uncle Henry out of the room.

DIVORCE EASY IN STATE NOW

Until 1907 Only Way of Severing Bonds Was Death

Raleigh, Mar. 20. — (A)—Until 1907, when the general assembly passed the state's first divorce law, there was but one way to sever marriage bonds in North Carolina—death.

Thirty years ago, however, the legislature approved a measure allowing childless couples who had been separated for 10 years to obtain divorces.

Newspaper files show there was much opposition to the measure, which some law-makers asserted would undermine a sacred American institution—the family.

At intervals since that time, the legislatures have passed statutes making divorce easier. On almost every occasion, the arguments of the opponents have centered around the "undermining of the sacred American institution."

In 1911, the assembly made divorce possible after 10 years of separation, whether or not there were children. The 1931 body enacted a law allowing divorce after five years separation in childless marriages.

And in 1933, a bill of Representative Claude W. Allen of Greenville was enacted which permitted divorce after two years of separation in all marriages, provided the separation was by the mutual written consent of both parties, or provided the action was brought by the "injured" party.

Consequently, no one was particularly surprised at this session of the assembly when ten or more proposals, affecting divorce one way or another, slid into the legislative mill, most of the measures were killed, but three were enacted into law. They will:

1. Allow divorce on the grounds of incurable insanity of two years' duration.
2. Allow divorce after two years' separation with or without mutual consent.
3. Allow divorced women to resume the use of their maiden names.

Bills killed would have ended marriage after drunkenness of six months' duration, because of venereal diseases criminally contracted, and because of drug addiction.

Another measure tabled would have allowed breaking of the bonds after separation of one year, with mutual consent.

Hand in hand with bills to make divorce easier came one to make marriage harder. Introduced by Senators Larkin of Jones and Abernethy of Caldwell, the measure would have raised the age requirement for marriage from 16 to 18 years. The present law, which allows girls having the consent of a parent or guardian to wed at 14, also would have been amended to permit them to marry with consent at 16.

The proposal was tabled, however.

The senate calendar committee, of which Senator H. P. (Pat) Taylor is chairman, has worked just as hard as the house committee and the last few days has probably had even more work to do than the house committee, due to the flood of bills that has come over from the House. No bill is permitted to go on the senate calendar unless it has first been studied by the calendar committee and given a favorable report. The members of this committee, in addition to Senator Taylor, are Senators H. M. Ratcliff of Forsyth, S. Gilmer Sparger of Surry, John D. Larkins, Jr. of Jones and W. B. Rodman of Beaufort county.

"Every minute we have been able to get outside of senate sessions, we have spent in reading and studying the bills referred to the committee," Senator Taylor said. "I have not kept an exact check, but I feel sure we have read and passed on more than 1,000 bills since the committee was appointed. Most of the bills have been short ones, of course, but some have been quite long and all of them have required careful study. We have tried very hard to see to it that no dangerous bills got by."

"I also want to say that out of the hundreds of bills we have studied, we have not found a single bill that might be called a 'sneak' bill, although we have found some 'spite' bills, though very few. I think this is a very fine testimonial to the character of the members of this general assembly."

Since very few new bills have been introduced during the past week and since most of the bills have at last been acted upon, the members of the calendar committees for the first time in three weeks today have virtually nothing to do.

This committee has met morning, noon and night virtually ever since it was appointed, the members frequently having worked until two or three o'clock in the morning reading and passing on bills. Chairman Paylor is never seen without his satchel full of bills and during sessions of the house always has a stack of from 100 to 300 bills on his desk.

"The committee has spent anywhere from five to ten hours a day reading and studying the bills referred to it," Chairman Paylor said. "We have tried to hold as many meetings as possible and several nights have worked until long past midnight, trying to get caught up. It has been a big job, but we have tried to be fair, to hear every one who wanted to be heard and to give every good bill a fair chance. We have naturally reported a great many bills unfavorably, since many of them duplicated laws already on the books or were just naturally bad bills. There have been very few 'sneak' bills, however, and not so many 'spite' bills, though there have been more of this latter class. Many of the local bills—and most of them have been local—have been trivial in nature. We killed those."

Chairman Paylor said that he has personally read and studied every bill which has been referred to the committee.

NUMBER STUDY GROUPS NAMED

Bills and Resolutions Introduced Number 35

Raleigh, N. C., Mar. 20.—(AP)—The 1937 general assembly, which moved at record-breaking pace, authorized the appointment of a number of commissions and study-groups to investigate varied state matters and file their findings accordingly.

Bills and resolutions were introduced, which, if ratified, would have created 35 such units. A number, however, died in committee or on the legislative floor.

Exclusive of the investigating bodies, the assembly authorized creation of a number of administrative boards and commissions. Among those which created most interest among legislators and voters were the state board of alcoholic control and the revised state highway commission.

The control board, into which the various county units will be responsible, will consist of a chairman and two associate members. The chairman, to serve full-time three years, will receive $6,000 annually while the associates will receive $25 per day.

The highway commission will be composed of a chairman and 10 members. The Governor will appoint the chairman and three members for a term of six years, three members for four years and four for two years. A member will be appointed from each of the state's ten districts.

Following approval of a constitutional amendment last November, the assembly adopted a resolution providing for the appointment of a nine-member commission to make a study of classification of property for taxation and exemption of property from levies and report its findings and recommendations by October 1, 1938. The Governor was advised, but not directed, to appoint representatives on the commission from the Duke, Carolina and Wake Forest law schools, the Revenue Department, the Attorney General's staff, League of Municipalities, County Commissioner's Associations and the Institute of Government staff.

A state board of examiners of tile contractors to license persons engaged in the tile contracting business was authorized. The body will be composed of five reputable contractors who have been in business for five years. They will be appointed by the Governor. The board has the right to revoke licenses.

During the session a commission was appointed to study the needs for a state office building and reported to the assembly that the structure was needed. The building was provided for in an additional appropriation.

A commission was created to study the needs in education. Plans from Negroes in the state for better educational facilities resulted in the authorization of a five-man commission to investigate conditions and report its findings to the 1939 assembly. The original measure called for the appointment of a 15-man commission but the bill was amended in the senate.

A commission to oversee the state probation system, under which judges would suspend terms of convicted criminals was allowed by the assembly. The measure was described as having the endorsement of welfare officials and the Federal government.

An investigating body to study the needs for a state medical school, affording the course of study required to entitle persons to apply for license to practice medicine, together with a draft of proposed legislation, was authorized. Seven persons will be named by the Governor to the commission to serve without compensation and to report 60 days before the 1939 session. The measure was endorsed by physicians throughout the state, according to Senator Long of Halifax, the introducer.

A joint resolution authorized the Governor to appoint a commission of five members to inquire into the feasibility of establishing a department of justice for the state, a move which was endorsed by Federal officials. The department would cooperate with the courts and would interview parolees.

Passed in the last days of the session was a resolution allowing the Governor to appoint a commission of five members to study and report to the next assembly as to the matter of relieving the legislature through a constitutional amendment of the necessity of enacting special, public - local and private laws.

A state board of examiners of electrical contractors to draft and enforce regulations for reduction of fire hazards, designed to save life and property, was authorized to consist of the state electrical engineer, the secretary of the association of electrical contractors of than $30 a month to any person—will draw rules and regulations under which financial assistance will be granted applicants. Counties are to levy a special tax to cover one-fourth of the total awards. The balance will come from state and federal funds.

Another commission will prepare and carry out plans for observance by the state of the 150th anniversary of the formation of the United States constitution.

A real estate commission to be composed of five members was authorized. Members would receive $10 a day. Brokers licenses would cost $10 and salesmen licenses $5. Applicants must have affidavits from two property owners testifying as to their good character and reputation for fair dealing.

Creation of the commission resulted, according to information given at hearings, from the presence of "real estate racketeers" and from an effort of realtors to protect their profession.

the senate was a resolution endorsing President Roosevelt's Supreme court reorganization plan. The proposal was given a "without prejudice" report by the senate calendar committee, and may be acted upon by the higher branch before adjournment.

A proposal which would have required all persons wishing to purchase liquor at county alcoholic beverage control stores to contain annual $1 permits reached the senate, but was killed after brief debate.

Killed in the house was a measure to regulate trade practices of tobacco warehouses, described by its sponsors as "similar to the old NRA code" and a $5,000,000 road bond bill for secondary roads.

Enacted into law were measures to create a state bureau of identification; tighten the present regulations for optometrists; amend the 1933 fertilizer law; place a prohibitive tax on the sale of low-grade scrap tobacco; create a state planning board and impose a tax on

BARBER BOARD POWERS SHORN

Extra Fees Must Be Spent in Hiring Inspectors

Reflector Bureau.
Raleigh, Mar. 20.—The last-minute attempt of the state barbers' board to get through a supplemental bill which would have diverted all the money from increased fees into its pockets instead of for the employment of more barber shop inspectors, was knocked for a loop by the house Friday when it defeated the bill by a vote of 49 to 32. The house had previously passed the bill, with an amendment by Representative W. C. Fenner of Rocky Mount, bringing all the barber shops in the state under the state-wide barber shop inspection law and increasing the fees the barbers pay the board each year, with the provision that all of the money accruing from the increase must be used by the board for the unemployment of additional barber shop inspectors.

The members of the state barbers' board, however, tried to get the bill through without any provision for the employment of additional barbers and made a determined effort to eliminate the Fenner amendment, which had the backing of virtually all of the journeymen barbers and of many of the master barbers and shop owners.

For most of these barbers have been frankly disgusted with the manner in which the three members of the state barbers board—M. C. Whitney, J. M. Cheek and Sid R. High—have not been carrying out the law and have not been enforcing the inspection provisions, they told the committees which heard the original bill.

They agreed to support the bill, however, if the Fenner amendment to require all this additional money to be spent for additional inspectors was added. The bill and the amendment passed both houses some weeks ago.

But the board members were not satisfied to see the thousands of dollars in additional fees that otherwise would have been theirs to use as they pleased, earmarked for the employment of additional inspectors and the enforcement of the law, it was pointed out in the debate Friday. So a bill was clipped into the senate and passed there, virtually repealing the previous bill and removing the effect of the Fenner amendment, so that the board members could do what they liked with the additional money.

The bill did not get by Rep. Fenner, however, who showed the bill up and demanded that it be killed. It was.

of proper vents for gas-fired individual radiators.

The Oiler Morning Telegraph quoted Capt. Z. Z. Coombes, member of the military court, as saying two oil field workers turned over to him short pieces of sewer pipe from the blast ruins, which they said, would show traces of nitro glycerine. The pipes, they contended, had been blown to bits by a terrific explosion within. The captain explained other witnesses discounted the men's theory, but said he would call them as witnesses and show their exhibits.
