LARGE POWERS SEND WARNING TO INSURGENTS

Great Britain And France Demand Ships Left Alone

FRANCO IMPORTS 1,000 COLONISTS

Rebel General Reported Have Boosted Lines in Effort to Halt Defenders

(By Associated Press) Apparently reliable reports General Francisco had imported 1,000 Italian colonial troops to stamp out revolt in Spanish Morocco...

French Moroccan sources heard the "overseas colonial troops" had landed at Ceuta, Spanish Morocco...

Italy, one of 27 international pledgers of neutrality, stirred European alarm only a few days ago by refusing to withdraw any of the thousands of "volunteers" she had in Spain...

At Tangier a semi-official Spanish new organization declared the counter-revolt, had been crushed with the execution of 50 men and the arrest of 1,100 officers, soldiers and civilians...

Serious international trouble was threatened further as Great Britain and France protested to Spanish Insurgents against halting their ships.

Great Britain, already having warned Insurgents interference with her shipping on the high seas would not be tolerated, demanded an explanation of three attacks on British merchant men by Insurgent war ships.

A French steamer said she was halted by an Insurgent flotilla off Santander, in the Bay of Biscay, and was only permitted to proceed after a strong protest.

In Spain government troops launched offensive on nearly all fronts while Insurgents claimed a series of government thrusts against their lines outside the Northwest corner of Madrid were stopped with heavy losses inflicted on the enemy.

SIT-DOWN HOLDS VIRGINIA PLANT

Spokesman for Strikers at Covington Rayon Plant Says Dispute Friendly

Lansing, Mich. Mar. 31.—(AP)—Labor bills before the Michigan legislature moved into the spotlight today with the Chrysler strike peace conference in recess until Friday.

Only a few doors from Governor Frank Murphy's office, where officials of the Chrysler corporation and the U. A. W. A. have been conferring, the Senate was ready to vote on three measures intended to curb sit-down strikes.

At the opposite end of the capital another fight over a labor bill was brewing in the House.

"The chances are bright for a settlement not long after we reconvene," Governor Murphy said late yesterday when the conference recessed until 11 a. m. Friday.

"There are no hard feelings," Lloyd Mays, president of local 2214 of the Synthetic Yarn Federation, said, "is a friendly strike."

Charles Dasher, plant manager, declined to comment, saying any statement would have to come from officials at Cleveland, Ohio, headquarters of the plant.

William Craighead, member of a union committee that recently deauthorized in negotiations with the company, said the immediate cause of the strike was "discrimination" against union members in promotions in the twisting department.

He said, however, the striking workers would prosecute their demand for acceptance of a 12-point program discussed during the previous negotiations.

Washington, March 31.—(AP)—Senator Minton (D-Ind.) told the Senate today Chief Justice Hughes, once a candidate for president, had "never forgotten the lesson he learned in the arena of politics."

Meanwhile, in the Senate, the author of the Wagner Labor Relations act said its enforcement would have prevented the sit-down strike crisis.

"The root cause for the present economic warfare," Senator Wagner (D-N.Y.) asserted, "is the lack of power in the federal government to enforce the law which guarantees to labor the right of collective bargaining."

Only a short time before he spoke, Representative Dies (D-Tex.) went before the House Rules committee to demand a "fair and impartial investigation" of strikes.

Author of a resolution for an inquiry designed to supply facts helpful in writing "necessary remedial legislation," Dies said the sit-down strikes are a matter of "national concern."

Wagner told the Senate sit-downs have been "provoked by the long-standing tactics of a few great corporations."

The controversy over reorganizing the Supreme court, before which the Wagner act is pending on a constitutionality test, went forward with Professor Edwin Borahard, of Yale University, on the stand for the Senate Judiciary committee.

Borahard argued in a sense the President's plan for reorganizing the court was unconstitutional because, "in the minds of many it is calculated to make the Supreme court subservient to the executive."

Augusta, Ga., Mar. 31.—(AP)—Secretary Wallace said today failure to reorganize the Supreme Court would allow the nation to drift again into economic depression.

Wallace speaking at Augusta annual fair cattle show urged Southern support for President Roosevelt court program, describing it as a means of controlling the nation's course "before it is too late."

He mentioned the court proposal late in his address, leading up to it with a discussion of general steps looking to continued improvement of Southern agriculture — better farming methods, maintenance of world markets, soil conservation and forest management.

These steps, he said, are endangered by barriers which the courts have placed in the path of the President's social and economic program.

"The barriers raised in the courts of the United States against the continuance of such action should be removed," he declared. "Unless they are removed the nation will drift again as it did in the years before 1933."

One tract of the project is located in Wilson County. Tracts are now being paid for at the rate of about four per week, he said, as rapidly as titles are cleared by special attorneys of the Department of Justice.

Legislation recommended by the President's Special Committee on Farm Tenancy, which would provide help for tenant families on a large scale, is now before Congress and has not yet been acted upon by the body. The WPA grant, for $2,500, is only a start of what is hoped to be accomplished, however. Part of the land was donated to the city and the remainder was purchased at a small price.

Former Resident Of This City Dies In Murder-Suicide

IDENTIFIED BY CHECK IN POCKET

Bodies Are Found In Tourist Cabin Near Norfolk, Va., By Attendant

Norfolk, Va., March 31.—Norfolk county officials investigated today the death in a tourist cabin of a man identified as Berry S. Dail, and an unidentified woman who, Coroner L. C. Ferebee said, were fatally shot last night in a murder and suicide.

A call bell brought a Negro porter to their cabin at a tavern near here about 10 p. m., but a muffled shot stopped him short of the door. He returned to call the proprietor, C. G. Bennett, who started to investigate. He heard another muffled shot and called County Officer H. W. Carr.

Berry S. Dail, who is said to have committed suicide in a tourist cabin near Norfolk last night after having fatally shot a woman companion, is well known in this city, where he made his home up until a short while ago. He was a native of Greene county, having come here from Snow Hill.

He was a visitor here during the past week end.

Mrs. Dail lives here at the present time. She and her husband have been separated for several years.

Carr entered to find the two bodies, partly clothed, lying on a bed. The woman was shot through the heart and the man in the head. A pistol with two cartridges fired, lay nearby.

Dail, believed to be a salesman, was about 50 years and the woman about 30. Checks in his clothing were drawn on a Greenville, N. C. bank.

The coroner, Bennett and officers made the identification.

The couple had dinner at the tavern late yesterday and rented the cabin.

Jerold Frederic Here Friday

The great pianist, Jerold Frederic, will give a concert at the College on Friday night of this week in the Robert H. Wright auditorium.

Even while Frederic was the "boy wonder" it was predicted that he was destined to become an eminent figure in the annals of pianistic greatness, and as a young man he is fulfilling the prophecy. His playing has been compared to that of Franz Liszt and advance reports speak in superlative terms of the fire and poetry of his genius, and of his amazing brilliance and personality.

The critical press of this country have acclaimed him "the phenomenal pianist of the new generation." His vigor and charm appeal especially to young people, and the older ones admire his musicianship.

The artist will find the beautiful new Steinway concert grand piano worthy of his best efforts, and the audience will enjoy its beautiful tone.

Dr. Brown Addresses Vocational Students

Explaining the qualifications needed for success in the field of pharmacy, Dr. J. Key Brown, prominent Greenville druggist, gave a highly interesting and instructive talk Tuesday to the new class in Vocational Guidance which T. C. Bryan is teaching in Greenville high school. Dr. Brown called the attention of the class to the many opportunities in pharmacy and to features of the pharmacist's work. Making an allusion to his personal experience and to the many difficulties which he overcame in securing his higher education, the Greenville pharmacist urged the boys to give every effort to deciding their choice of vocation and to attaining an ultimate goal.

The class in Vocational Guidance was organized recently in the high school in order to assist certain pupils in determining their innate abilities and to prepare them for good citizenship and economic independence.

Discussions of personal problems which have a direct bearing on the daily life of the individual and his relation to society occupy a principal part of the classroom project.

Other prominent men who soon will address the class and the subjects they will discuss, follow: R. E. Sellars, brick manufacturing; A. B. Ellington, book and office specialties; G. C. Honeycutt, the grocery business; Dave Weichard, newspaper work; Dink James, the legal profession; Dr. Paul Fitzgerald, dentistry; Professor Ralph Deal, teaching; J. Nat Harrison, insurance; and J. J. Herbert, Waldrop, banking. Additional men will be added to the schedule at a later date.

ETIQUETTE

By JOAN DURHAM (AP Feature Service Writer)

It's an ill wind and your own carelessness that blows cigar ashes and smoke into your neighbors' faces. Because there's really no excuse for it.

Surprisingly few people know how and where to smoke.

It isn't a good idea, for instance, to smoke in theatres at which the seats are too crowded to provide ample dumping space for cigaret ashes. That's why most managements have set aside for smoking the loges or other sections in which seats are comparatively far apart.

If smoking is permitted in the theatre, however, it's only Golden Rule ethics to watch how you hold your cigaret and not to blow smoke into other people's eyes. It's also important to make sure that discarded butts are extinguished. Object lessons on that score range all the way from the familiar cigaret tatted coat to theatre fires.

Watch Stray Ashes.

Smoking in automobiles, too, has many thoughtless addicts who invariably leave behind them a trail of suffering pedestrians and fellow-passengers—victims of stray ashes and matches.

areting gingerly between the second and third fingers and take nervous puffs at frequent intervals. Between those puffs they dip minute sections of ashes into the nearest ash tray—or scatter the ashes about the floor if the ash trays aren't convenient. Even worse, they leave their cigarets, half-smoked, on the edges of ash trays or chairs or tables to smoulder until some nearby victim becomes sufficiently nauseated to extinguish them.

Carolina Baseball Team at Home Next Five Days

Chapel Hill, March 31.—Starting tomorrow afternoon, the University of North Carolina baseball team will play four games in the next five days, all scheduled for Chapel Hill.

All contests here will start at 4 o'clock, except on Saturdays when play will begin at 3 o'clock.

Carolina opened its season Saturday by beating Springfield college 4 to 1. Irby Wright, only pitching holdover from the 1936 team, limited the opposition to six hits, three of the scratch variety.

Coach Bunn Hearn will probably send Wrigh back to the mound against Michigan State. "Duffy" Parker, fine reserve prospect, will likely get the starting call as hurler against Washington and Lee and Ike Jeanes or Bunn Hearn, Jr. likely will be tried in the Richmond game Saturday.

Lawson Melchor and George Wethercutt will likely divide catching duties in the contests this week. The remainder of the lineup will be Harold Bissett, first base; Ed Bullard, second base; Matthew Topkins, short stop; Foy Grubb, third base; Captain Burk McCann, Cicero Groome and Tom Burnette, outfielders.

The Spartans of Michigan state are taking south a veteran battery combination. Steve Sabo, the stubby-legged boy who has been scoring touchdowns and kicking field goals for Michigan State for three seasons, will direct the team from behind the bat once more.

Sabo with Milt Lehnhardt, who is also a football regular at right-end, share the captaincy. Lehnhardt plays in center field. George Hill and Elaine Henkel are veteran pitchers and Arthur Libbers is a bright prospect as a sophomore. All three are right handers.

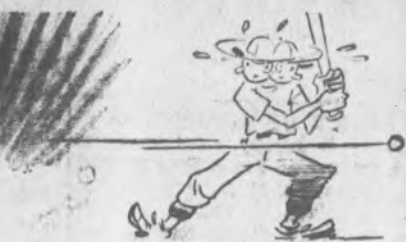

The infield will have two veterans in Clyde (Red) Randall at first base and Harper Scott at second. Randall, normally a short stop, is playing out of position on first but is doing a fine job. Coach John Kohn thinks he will have Gene Ciolek at short stop and either George Kovachik or George Thorpe at third. Ciolek and Kovachik were football stars last fall as backs.

Lehnhardt is the most promising player on the squad. The strapping center-fielder is a long distance hitter and a veritable net when it comes to gathering in drives.

Three letter winning outfielders from last year's team, Don MacOrain, Kurt Kuhne and Gordon Barringer, may be on the bench this season. Johnny Kuk and Allen Diebold, a pair of sophomores, appear to have won jobs because of their heavy stick work.

ALL-AROUND STARS? HERE'S THE BOY THEY MEAN

Omaha, Neb. (AP)—When they talk about "all-around" athletes at Creighton university they mean Paul Hartnek.

Hartnek, a junior in the Creighton college of journalism, has two main loves, football and boxing. Last year he won the Chicago golden glove light-heavyweight championship. He has been fighting since he was 13, has his eye on a professional ring career.

Paul is a bruising, smashing full-back on the football field where he has been Creighton's star.

As a discus thrower Hartnek is no slouch. He started doing this at a Kenosha, Wis., high school, won the interschool title.

He tried basketball, won his letter three times. During the off-season he is a life guard at Kenosha, holds many medals for swimming ability.

Injury Jinx Rides Irish Leaders South Bend, Ind. (AP)—The football captaincy is an honor no Notre Dame man would turn down, but for three successive years misfortune in the form of ill health has come to elected leaders of the "Fighting Irish."

Joe Sullivan of New York was elected captain of the 1935 team, but didn't live to fill the position. He died March 20, 1935, after several mastoid operations.

William Robert Smith of Hackensack, N. J., was elected to lead the 1936 team. Three operations for removal of gallstones kept him from ever putting on a uniform during the season.

Joseph Zwiers of Grand Rapids, Mich., is the third of the captains-elect to go under the surgeon's knife. The 1937 captain recently was hustled to a hospital for removal of his appendix. Zwiers will not be able to participate in spring practice but will be available in the fall according to Dr. J. E. McMeel, university physician.

Sport Slants

By PAP

Four years ago, John Vander Meer played the part of the Typical American Boy in a National league educational film. The boy has grown up. Today he is bent on winning a regular berth on the Cincinnati Reds' pitching staff.

Vander Meer comes to the Reds after being named the outstanding minor league player of 1936. The young left-handed giant earned the distinction with the Durham team of the Piedmont league.

Blinding speed enabled him to lead every league in strikeouts—with 295. Although he did not join Durham until June 1, he was able to chalk up 19 victories for the Bulls. He was charged with six losses during the regular season. He was credited with two victories and one defeat in the playoffs.

He led the Piedmont league in effectiveness with an earned-run average of 2.65 per 9-inning game.

Vander Meer nearly achieved another distinction, which would have been dubious to say the least, when he nearly led the circuit in bases on balls. A teammate, Hamilton, nosed him out for the honor of being the league's No. 1 philanthropist, however. Hamilton issued 116 Annie Oakeys in 214 innings—exactly two more free tickets than Vander Meer passed out.

Vander Meer's wildness reacts in his favor, for, accompanied by a spectacular strikeout record, it indicates he has plenty of natural stuff. Because he was even wilder at Nashville than he was later at Durham, he was transferred to the Bulls. At Nashville he walked 25 in 32 innings and tossed five wild ones.

Vander Meer has one odd record to his credit. He walked 16 men in one game when hurrying for Scranton of the N. Y. Penn. league in '34. Yet he won 2-1.

He started his pro baseball career in '33 with Dayton of the Mid-Atlantic. He was with Scranton in '34 and '35. He was purchased by Nashville, optioned to Durham and bought by the Cincinnati Reds. Because the Reds had to buy his contract from Nashville, it cost them plenty of Powell Crosley's money to buy a man from their own farm. Durham being a Red ranch.

Vander Meer has one odd record to his credit. He walked 16 men in one game when hurrying for Scranton of the N. Y. Penn. league in '34. Yet he won 2-1.

ACT PROVIDES ROAD REFUNDS

Highway Commission Authorized to Adjust Claims

Counties all over North Carolina will receive with pleasure the news that House Bill No. 778 passed which authorizes the new Highway Commission to adjust claims which certain counties have against the State for roads constructed prior to the States taking over the system with a great deal of enthusiasm, according to a statement made by N. G. Bartlett, Secretary of the Eastern Carolina Chamber of Commerce.

The 1936 General Assembly passed an Act which directed the Governor to appoint a Fact Finding Commission to receive the claims of the various counties and to make recommendations to the 1937 General Assembly as to what should be done. This Commission was appointed by Governor Ehringhaus and sat in hearings at Asheville and Raleigh during the last year and heard the arguments of the various claimant counties. The Commission made it report to the Governor and General Assembly about the middle of February this year. Six of the members of the nine stated that they felt like there was some merit in the claims but that they did not feel that they had had sufficient time to determine the exact amounts but suggested that the matter be referred to the incoming Highway Commission with power to act. Three of the members of the Commission of nine made a minority report in which they said several of the counties were entitled to definite amounts but did not see fit to designate the amounts that each county is entitled to.

It was no surprise that the authorities were not satisfied with this type of report and so with the assistance of Governor Hoy and members of the House and Senate, House Bill No. 778 was drawn up and passed by both Houses of the General Assembly. Judge Guy Elliott of Kinston, Chairman of the Legislative Commission of the Eastern Carolina Chamber of Commerce and Secretary, Mr. Bartlett

Teaching Table Manners

Parents are apt to make heavy weather of teaching table manners to their children. They insist on too many arbitrary rules. Table manners vary according to time and place, and to teach local or even national conventions to the young is a waste of time.

In some places it is proper to cut lettuce with a knife, in others it is a breach of etiquette. Whether to eat asparagus with a fork or lift it to the mouth with one's fingers, is a moot question. Corn on the cob is a problem to many. The English never shift the fork from the left hand to the right as Americans do. Some people bite bread, others conquer such behavior barbarous, and break it into mouthfuls.

Anyone can learn these superficialities of good table manners by observing the people about him. Just as by a little delay, he can learn which fork or spoon to use next. There are only a few fundamental rules to teach children, and these are all based on consideration for others.

One eats with one's mouth closed and as silently as possible. It is not pleasant for one's table mates to watch the process of mastication. For the same reason, one does not talk with one's mouth full. No one wants to be poked by his neighbor's elbow; therefore a child must learn to keep his elbows close to his sides.

Grabbing food, taking the largest or the best piece on the dish, complaining of food or service are unsocial acts. Lolling on the table takes up more space than is allotted to a single individual; moreover it is an unattractive attitude. Drinking before wiping the mouth leaves an unsightly smear on the glass.

These are the rules which children need to learn, and there is good reason for every one of them.

Four Eyes Help 'Bama Hitter University, Ala. (AP)—At the University of Alabama, they wish they had more 4-eyed ballplayers.

Young Booser, Alabama's leading hitter last season, wears glasses both on and off the field.

Booser, who played right field for the Tide last year, hit above the 500 mark nearly all season. A slump near the close of the season brought his stick mark down to Commerce, the sponsoring organization of this program. "It has been a long drawn-out proposition but now that the machinery has been set up for the settlement of these claims by the State for the various counties, there is no need for much more delay," stated Mr. Bartlett to a representative of this paper.

THE CAVALCADE OF DEATH

When in the boom year of 1929 the traffic death toll reached the new and awful high of 30,000 deaths, the nation was shocked—but not sufficiently. Now, with business indices rising steadily, we seem to be embarking on a new boom year in accidents. And there is a danger that traffic death in 1937 will reach the 40,000 mark.

Where will this cavalcade of death halt? When will we turn it back? Surely the American people are adequate to cope with this social emergency. Here we have the automobile, endowing us with the blessings of a motor age. Why don't we control it, and retain the blessings, rather than dissipate them in death, injury and destruction?

The great irony is that while some people shrug their shoulders, or shudder and say, "Nothing can be done about it," others are doing something about it, and doing it very well. It is a matter of record that the cities and towns which are pursuing positive, planned and permanent policies of routing out the fundamental causes of their traffic accident problems, are reducing accidents and chopping away congestion. It is a matter of record that despite the unprecedented number of deaths in 1936, nineteen states reduced their traffic fatality records on an average of 7 per cent. All but two of these states carried out positive traffic control problems. Yes, it can be done!

Traffic control is not yet an exact science. But authorities agree that far more is known about it than is being applied by the average community. We need not kill 40,000 men, women and children this year if we determine not to, and if we put the goal of halting the cavalcade of death on the list of things to be done now!—Industrial News-Review.

Man About Manhattan

New York—Helen Morgan is an extravagant creature who usually spends every penny she earns. Nevertheless she is the most generous of actresses and would cheerfully toss out her last quarter to anyone who needed it. This makes for an interesting career, if not always a financially successful one, and it also provides an explanation for this little episode in which she played a typical Morgan role. There was an impromptu party at her apartment. Several friends having dropped in for a bite and a chuckle of bridge. While Helen was in the kitchen the telephone rang and a smartly lifted the receiver.

"Helen," he bawled, "it's Paris on the telephone."

Casually her voice floated back: "Be in a minute." Recognizing a pal on the other end of the wire he chatted with the caller from Paris a moment, and then, realizing what the call must be costing, he called to Helen again.

"I can't come now," she yelled back. So the guest asked his friend in Paris (an ardent claimant of her hand) to wait a moment. He rushed into the kitchen. Helen, looking prettier than ever, glanced up.

"Paris-Paris-glug-glug," spluttered the astounded guest.

"But, I can't answer it now," replied Helen sweetly. "Don't you understand, I'm dying. Easter eggs. If I leave them they'll be ruined."

Add financial note: Easter eggs are 40 cents a dozen; telephone calls from Paris are 40 dollars a dozen words.

That's Helen Morgan!

These Gobi natives aren't afraid of anything human. But the supernatural—that's something else again. Dick Luther tells of approaching a village on the fringe of the Gobi one hot summer day. At his side trudged a blond giant with flowing beard and hair. One eye was covered by a huge white patch.

As they climbed out of the desert the natives broke into hysterical shrieks, and fled into the nearby brush. It required several hours to coax them back.

Says Luther: "Those poor fellows had never seen a newspaper; how were they to know Floyd Gibbons!"

One of the sights of the town at the moment is that display of war propaganda posters at the Sherry-Netherland. This weird collection of lurid, patriotic, fever-inducing posters show the enemy doing all manner of monstrous deeds, such as sticking their swords into little babies. Most of these ultra-imaginative posters are products of the British, French and American governments.

It is America's island problem child and its 1,600,000 undernourished (often) underprivileged (always) inhabitants can't look forward to any very exhilarating future even though they are not troubled greatly by such problems as the Supreme Court and a paying job for James A. Farley.

It is three times the size of Rhode Island and doesn't have quite as many people to the square mile but they all have to live off the land without any steel factories or spinning mills. Whatever bad may be said of the hard labor and the stretch-out system in spinning mills, at least the mills provide more bread and lettuce per acre than a sugar plantation.

With part of the $35,000,000 of public works money spent down there a large sugar plantation was purchased for splitting up in subsistence homesteads for the natives. But it is well recognized that even a broad expansion of subsistence homesteading doesn't promise relief from more than a few of the evils besetting the overpopulated island.

While it is true the island is sheltered under the protective wing of the United States it also is guarded behind the tariff walls. The tariff keeps prices high there though the islanders with few exceptions are in the very low income brackets, even measured by the humblest of American standards.

At present the political issue is statehood versus independence although in times past it has been "big sugar."

The liberals now "out" accuse the republican-socialist coalitionists of being subservient to the big sugar barons but a while back when the liberals were in they were accused of the same thing by the republicans and socialists.

Among the outers are the nationalist campaigning for independence but among their ranks are cool heads who think that would not make a Valhalla of Puerto Rico although it might help to lower prices for a time.

The shooting affray was just an indication of the underlying strain that probably won't end until, as one perplexed source said, the island is submerged for 24 hours and then brought up to make a fresh start.

How's Your Health? Suggested by the New York Academy of Medicine. By Dr. Iago Goldstein.

Rubbing It In The treatment of pains, aches and injuries by massage seems to be a matter of intuition. Animals when they are hurt spontaneously lick and rub the affected part. Children bumping themselves instinctively massage the hurt.

The ancient Greeks knew the value of massage as a therapeutic and tonic practice. The rubdown given the modern athlete by his trainer or attendant, is unquestionably similar to that administered in time past to the Olympian contestants. In recent years, massage has come much into style and many seem to believe that if a little rubbing is good, a lot of it must be excellent. In this they are sorely in error.

Vigorous massaging, more properly called mauling, seldom if ever does any good, and frequently causes damage. Particularly is this likely to be so when violent massage is applied in the treatment of rheumatic or other joint diseases, to acutely inflamed tissues, during fever and when there are abdominal disturbances. In the last condition, violent manipulation has been known to cause uterine displacement, has injured abdominal adhesions and has been responsible for the furling up of quietest gall-bladder and appendix disease.

In general it may be said that when massage or manipulation leaves an individual exhausted and "aching all over," the treatment was too violent. There are some rare cases in which forceful massage or manipulation is indicated. These instances must be determined by the attending physician, who should either administer or supervise the treatment.

Massage is extensively advised and applied for the local reduction of fat. Notwithstanding all the supposed proof that this is effective, careful medical inquiry has failed to show that local fat can be removed by manipulation. There is no such thing as "breaking up the fat." Anyone bent on weight reduction must depend upon a combination of exercise and dietetic restrictions.

Properly applied, massage can prove of inestimable good. Massage should not, however, be applied in acute or chronic infections which are accompanied by fever, nor where there is disease of the veins and arteries, except on specific instructions from the attending physician.

Negro Teachers Meet in Raleigh The North Carolina Negro State Teachers' Association held its 56th annual session in Raleigh at Memorial Auditorium.

Of the more than seven thousand teachers in the State, 6,500 are registered.

The opening session was called to order by Dr. Charlotte Hawkins Brown, of Sedalia, N. C. Invocation was offered by Dr. George Fisher, rector of St. Ambrose Episcopal church. The addresses of welcome were delivered to the teachers by Mayor George Iseley, Superintendent Charles Gaddy, and Rev. Oscar Bullock of First Baptist Church for Negro Business Activities. Dr. Charlotte H. Brown, the president, introduced the Principal of the Greenville Negro Schools, C. M. Epps, to respond. In his response, Principal Epps took occasion to boost North Carolina and Greenville citizenship for leading Raleigh in voting a nine months' school. He also assured Mayor Iseley, Supt. Gaddy and Dr. Newbold that forward-looking Negro teachers were determined to cooperate with the administration for the good of all concerned.

The departments of Supervisors, and Supervising Principals, Elementary and High School Principals, met at Shaw University and Washington High School, Greenville and Pitt county, for the first time in eight years, were largely represented: the city by 100 per cent and county by 50 per cent. The new Supervisor, working cooperatively, has placed Pitt county schools in the limelight in the State association. Ayden, Winterville and Grifton principals supported the County Supervisor by their presence.

The association elected Dr. James E. Sheppard president for 1937 and 1938.

Resolutions commending the General Assembly for its aid to State Schools were adopted.

The association adjourned to meet in Durham in 1938.—Reported.

EVE'S ORCHARD

By MARGARET WIDDEMER.

SYNOPSIS: Eve Mannersfeld no sooner returns to rural Connecticut after five years in New York, than she is joined in her 200-year-old house and orchard by the penniless Featherstones and their serious young son, Judge. Uncle Henry, an old family friend, moves in too, to help run the place. George Cleveland, Eve's calm, practical neighbor, declares his love, but she is engaged to gay, city-loving Denny and crazy about him. Actress Ellen Walton, Eve's close friend, confides her intense love for square-shouldered George.

Chapter 30 Off For Hollywood

It was at the strawberry bed that George, too, found Eve next morning. She smiled up at him, thinking of Ellen. He began to help her pick with his unhurried efficiency.

He said without further preface, "Eve, there's something I want you to do for me."

"Anything on earth, George?"

"It's about little Judge," he said unexpectedly. "The kid's a malnutrition case. I'm pretty sure. Uncle Henry and I thought the life outdoors, less strain and a lot of milk, would fix him. He was better for a while, but he's been complaining of face-ach lately. I want you to take him into town to the dentist and the doctor. I'll foot the bills, of course. You can do it without upsetting us people. I couldn't arrange to be doing a movie next Friday with Carter. I suppose he's coming out. You take the kid in Friday morning and bring him back Monday."

"Of course not!"

She would have time for shopping and a beauty parlor before Denny was free. Grand!

Judge's parents were amiably amused at the idea, but didn't object.

"Be sure to have gold fillings, baby, so we'll have something to fall back on next time we're on the point of starving to death!" Marilyn called after her son taily as they drove to the station the following Friday.

Judge gripped Eve's hand tight and said in a low voice, "But they won't starve, will they, Eve?" She wondered, appalled, how much of this sort of thing the child had supposed real before this.

"Why, darling, Marilyn was just joking!"

"How can you tell about grown folks?" Judge said, his face twitching.

She was relieved when he began to discuss dentistry. It seemed he had never had a tooth filled. They always moved to some other school before he could get around to the school nurse's requests.

"This little man," said the New York dentist when Eve had deposited a rather awe-stricken Judge, had her wave and called for him, "will have to come back next week for the rest of the fillings. Always a mistake to give in to children about staying away from the dentist." He gave her the appointment card with a disapproving air, crisp in his white coat.

Luncheon With Denny:

THEY saw the Mickey Mouse film of George's suggestion. Then they met Denny for luncheon. Denny was on top of the world, and all packed for a grand weekend. He had nearly promised they would both finish it at Milton's Southampton place.

"We took the house last week," told you—did, my child, Milton moved in, he's all on the spot, and I stayed there, over night! Had a house party, as you, is Milton efficient? Both with every room—breakfast, I bed—diversified slaves unpacking for you, at every turn Dillard Bet is still groveling to get back. But as I told her she's right to be through with the little hound. It was really a wanton insult he threw at her—she says it isn't as if she hadn't had dozens of men wanting to marry her!

"That's the life you and I ought to have, darling. When I think of you having to play round with cows and yokels and apple trees, and being so sweet about it!"

"I like it, nitwit!"

she be a—didn't believe that.

"Back to the mines," he said when they were through their luncheon, helping her into the too-warm coat, she was about to abandon if she could find a summer print the liked. The day had turned hot. Corporations certainly work a fellow hard! But your faithful toiler is making good, I think."

He kissed her, audaciously there in the middle of the Algonquin, and they parted.

A little more shopping for the child and herself. The doctor next. George's appointment was a passport to fastidious attention from the nurse and interest from the doctor. Judge, tense but independently certain that he didn't need Eve with him, went off with the nurse for a thorough examination.

Your little nephew—is it?—will be out as soon as he is dressed," said the young doctor later, coming out to sit gravely for her. "Meanwhile I'd better give you an idea." He too, seemed rather disapproving. "The child is in a bad state mentally as well as physically. A fine type, as

George says—classmate of mine, George Cleveland. The boy has a good constitution and his I. Q. is probably unusually high. Life's harder, of course, on highly intelligent children. That manner of his isn't calm; it's acute tension desperately controlled. His parents—forgive me, but I must be frank—have given him a fear complex about poverty."

"But doctor, they're the last people in the world to do that, they never worry themselves at all. They make jokes about it."

"Their son does the worrying for the family," said the doctor grimly. "Tell them from me, or send them in and let me tell them, that if they don't stop discussing poverty and failure before him, in fun or earnest, he will go the rest of the way toward a nervous breakdown."

"But, doctor—he's been weeding, and feeding a pet pig, and doing errands outdoors—has that been bad too?"

"Probably what saved him from a crash," said the doctor. "Mind, explain to them or I will. No anxiety, no strain, long hours of uninterupted sleep in a room by himself outdoors all day if possible. Here's a diet list, and a prescription for the tonic. Get a quart of grade-A down him every day."

Eve, rather shocked, poured it all out to Denny, driving out in his old car. Judge sat behind them with two books of comics thoughtfully; bought by Denny to keep him from talking.

"Doctors is swabs," Denny quoted Long John Silver. "Anyway, you can't turn the Featherstones into model parents. Gosh, imagine them living for the cheese-ild! Not a chance. Send 'em in, though, and let him blow them up. I don't want my sweatshirt being scolded about other people's children. . . . He tightened his hand over hers, where they sat together, and they began discussing whether they would go to Milton's or not."

Did They Leave The Money?

AFTER the unseasonable heat of the day, in New York, the old house felt cool and fresh they stepped inside. Judge, a little tired from his strenuous day but feeling rather important, preceded them in.

"It seems a long time since we were here," he said over his shoulder, and stopped short to add in surprise: "Marilyn! left—note tied to the banister! They've gone out, and I wanted to show them my new filling!"

The letter was for Eve. Idly she opened it a long page as typing on Marilyn's portable.

"Eve darling," it said. "The most marvelous thing! Jimmy Katz drove in for a drink of water and directions to Cornwall. And he says he has a job for Pete in Hollywood—quite all-musture. So we said as he was driving there tomorrow couldn't he drive us along? And he said sure—we paid our share of the oil and gas; it was lunch time anyway, so he waited while Peter parked and I got a grand luncheon. I knew when it meant all this you wouldn't mind hideous depredations on the evening meal! Jimmy says we may get taken aboard a world tour in the fall! Pete will do posters, and he's actually going to I'm terribly sorry about having to take the Blessed Dividends but we'll send it back from Hollywood first thing and gas and oil can't wait but I know my darling Eve will kiss my dear boy for me a hundred times and tell him we'll miss him terribly but there wasn't any more room in the car. With a thousand thanks to you, Eve sweet, for being as good as you will be to my little abandoned Ian B. and for taking in us useless but loving bums, your own always devoted Marilyn."

"What does she say?" Judge asked nervously.

Eve, appalled, nevertheless remembered the doctor's words, "No shock, no strain—"

"They've had to go to Hollywood suddenly, Judge."

"Did they leave the money for our board?" (Oh, fatally responsible Judge, he would ask that!)

"They had to have it, dear, to pay their way out."

Judge turned his back. His thin shoulders heaved in it's pathetic little new coat. With a final effort at control he face her again and as if desperately, "Well, what you going to do with me? Throw me out!"

Over his head Denny, his face darkening, waited for her answer.

Eve dropped to her knees there in the wide hall and caught Judge in her arms. "Why, you little idiot, of course not."

"There, stop it, Judge," Denny said as the child broke into sobbing, and tried to take him from Eve. But he clung the tighter and sobbed the more, until Uncle Henry came in from the portico.

He said in his slow fatherly way, "Now, son, you better wipe your eyes and come feed the little pig, he's hungry. You can tell me all about it there. You know I sort of depend on you about that pig."

After a final gulp, Judge got hold of himself and followed the old man out.

Eve insists on keeping Judge, as Denny deserts, tomorrow.

Finding Correct Job For Land Important

Raleigh, March 23.—Finding the right job for every acre of land is a mighty good method of keeping things running smoothly on the farm, in the opinion of H. B. Cook, cooperator of the Soil Conservation Service in the Franklinton demonstration area.

Cook is an enthusiastic young farmer, but he had a six-acre piece of land that was just sort of "loafing on the job" when he became a cooperator in the program. He was trying to cultivate one acre, but the rest had been abandoned and was growing up in scrub pines.

Soil Conservation Service officials told him that those six acres ought to be put to work and that

TOUR MADE OF RURAL SECTION

'Electrified' Country Ham and Sausage Impress Observers

Raleigh, Mar. 23.—A platter of sizzling, steaming, delicious, "electrified" country ham, sitting on the top of a gleaming, white-enamelled electric stove, on which it had just been fried, in the kitchen of a farm house "somewhere in Nash county" and a sausage grinder rigged up to an electric washing machine so that it could be used to grind hog meat when not needed for "grinding" clothes, were the high-lights in the "look-see" tour of the electrified sections of Wilson and Nash counties, made last week by the members of the North Carolina Rural Electrification Authority, news writers and others, as guests of J. L. (Josh) Horne, Jr., of Rocky Mount, a member of the state authority.

For while the members of the party saw mile after miles of new rural electric lines of various types, saw houses and cabins of all types connected with these lines and enjoying the convenience of electricity miles away from main highways and the former "high lines," visited many of the recently electrified farm homes and talked with the farmers and housewives—the big plate of sizzling country ham and the sausage grinder attached to the washing machine, remained the most impressive incidents of the entire trip. Not even the delicious barbecue prepared by Bob Melton in Rocky Mount and served to Josh and his guests could dim the memory of these two incidents.

Starting in Wilson about noon and led by Josh Horne and City Manager W. M. Wiggins of Wilson, the motortrade of those interested in seeing rural electrification first hand and in action, zig-zagged across Wilson and on into Nash county with many stops during which Josh would point out different types of line construction and how construction costs had been brought down by the use of new methods and lighter equipment. As a result, some of the rural lines now being built at a cost of only about $800 a mile as compared with $1,000 to $1,500 a mile two years ago.

Those who had not been out in any of the counties before and who had not yet seen the miles and miles of rural electric lines, were amazed at the network of copper wires and crosset poles that stretched along almost every road or across fields. Now and then a farm house or tenant house was observed which was not connected with the electric line—but these were few and far between, since even most of the tenant houses were connected and electrified. The "look-seers" were also impressed with the large number of electric appliances found in most of the homes, in addition to electric lights. Radios were perhaps most numerous, then there were vacuum cleaners, electric fans, electric heating pads—and even an electric razor.

"This is what my husband enjoys most—his electric razor," said Mrs. John W. Roberson of Stanhope, in Nash county, when the "electrified" sightseers stopped at her home. It was at this home that the visitors saw the sausage grinder rigged up to the washing machine motor and which later caused Dr. S. H. Hobbs, of the rural-social economics department at Chapel Hill to remark: "I have long wondered what happened to the tails of my shirts when I sent them to the laundry—but at last I think I have solved the mystery."

But it was the gleaming, white, epic-and-epic kitchens, with their electric refrigerators, electric stoves, hot enamel sinks with steaming hot water, electric water heaters, that made the visitors sit up and take notice—especially when accentuated by the tantalizing aroma of the country ham. The housewives invariably spoke of how much easier all these things made their work, and especially of the convenience of having running water and being able to have bath rooms right in the house.

"You men can't get more than a glimpse of what electricity has meant and is meaning to the people in the country," Mrs. Effie Vines

BE WISE—ALKALIZE!

Gordon, home demonstration agent in Nash county told the group after they had eaten more of Bob Melton's barbecue than was good for some of them. "But I come in contact with them all the time. The convenience of electric lights and appliances has opened up a new world for them. One woman told me she and her husband stayed up all night the first night after their lights were turned on. It is also helping to keep the children at home and better satisfied. You people from the cities just can't realize what it means to these people. And those who don't have electricity yet want to know how soon they can have it, too."

HOLLYWOOD SIGHTS & SOUNDS

Hollywood.—at fairly regular intervals the quiet neighborhood of Los Angeles' Fifth avenue—the 800 block—experiences the excitement of movie-making. The kids come from blocks around, and housewives saunter over.

The arrival of a sound truck at the Herbert E. Pelton house—844 Fifth avenue—tells the community that the Jones family is with it again. This cinema clan, seemingly destined to a longevity like Charlie Chan's, Tarzan's, and Philo Vance's, usually stays a day or so, during which the residents get the thrill of first-hand contact with the town's biggest industry.

of Wurtzel's minions selected the Pelton home, a pretty two-story Dutch Colonial dwelling, as exactly the sort of house the producer's Jones family would occupy. They chose it for its back and front yards as much as for its structure, for the Pelton-home serves only for exteriors. When the Joneses are seen inside their home, they are cavorting in studio sets.

Only Mild Fans.

Mr. Pelton is an automobile distributor in Los Angeles. He and Mrs. Pelton and the two girls, who are in college, are only mild movie fans. They like pictures, but are choosy about what they see. Of course, after the studio put their own home on celluloid, they all went to see the Jones family. "Of course!" said Mrs. Pelton.

The movie people—including Jed Prouty, Spring Byington, Shirley Deane, George Ernest, Kenneth Howells, Florence Roberts, et al.—have made a very good impression on Fifth avenue.

"They're very cordial," Mrs. Pelton said. "Of course, they're busy, and we all try not to be annoying. Have we ever appeared in the pictures? Oh, my, no! But it's interesting having them here."

Puttering Papa.

The Jones family, typically American, includes a puttering papa, played by Jed Prouty. Putterers traditionally revel in back yards and garages. They dig in gardens, make holes in lawns, hammer at walls and tinker with the plumbing. All these things are done to the Pelton home, but that's all right because the studio not only does them to suit itself, but afterwards undoes them to suit the Peltons.

Mrs. Pelton thought it might be none of my business what the studio paid for its invasions of the Pelton privacy, but rerelected and said it was $100 a day. She thought it wouldn't last long, however.

Calotabs Help Nature To Throw Off a Cold

Millions have found in Calotabs a most valuable aid in the treatment of colds. They take one or two tablets the first night and repeat the third or fourth night if needed.

How do Calotabs help Nature throw off a cold? First, Calotabs are one of the most thorough and dependable of all intestinal eliminators, thus cleansing the intestinal tract of the germ-laden mucus and toxins.

Second, Calotabs are diuretic to the kidneys, promoting the elimination of cold poisons from the blood. Thus Calotabs serve the double purpose of a purgative and diuretic, both of which are needed in the treatment of colds.

Calotabs are quite economical: only twenty-five cents for the family package, ten cents for the trial package. (Adv.)

FIRE CHIEF CATCHES FIRE AFTER CHASE

McPherson, Kas. (AP)—Fire Chief Hobart Lindgren never lets a good blaze leave town.

He received a call that a car trailer was going through the business district, the driver apparently unaware that smoke was pouring from his house on wheels.

Lindgren's truck started in pursuit, overtook the trailer three blocks from headquarters and the chief extinguished a burning mattress.

N. Y. Stock Market

New York, Mar. 31.—(AP)—Stock buyers put their support behind metals, oils and specialties in today's market and favored issues moved up fractions to two points.

At the same time steel, motors and real estate met sufficient profit selling after their sharp rally on yesterday to keep them in the background.

Trading was brisk at the opening. It quieted later and the tape was somewhat slow near the fourth hour.

Another decline in U. S. government securities on moderate offerings was a sobering influence. Commodities were moved.

But it doesn't take a barrel of DOUGH-RE-MI to buy it!
