

COUNTY HEADS VOTE REVALUE PITT PROPERTY

Appraisers Appointed and Will Begin Work Soon

EXPECT PREVENT BOOST IN TAXES

Revaluation First In County Since 1928, Since Which Time Two Cuts Made

The Board of County Commissioners, in regular session yesterday, unanimously ordered a revaluation of real property in the county.

The last revaluation was in 1928 and since that time the horizontal reduction, one of 10 per cent. in 1931 and another of 33 and one-third per cent. in 1933 have been made.

Members of the Board expressed the opinion that a revaluation was not only necessary, but would serve to equalize the valuations on property. It was pointed out that developments had enhanced the value of property in a number of sections, while there will be found some property that is listed too high.

It also was pointed out that economic conditions were so that a revaluation was necessary. When a revaluation is made it has to continue in effect for four years, state law prohibiting another being made within that time.

Members of the Board stated that they hoped a revaluation would eliminate the necessity of an increase in the tax rate, which otherwise will be necessary to meet the cost of social security. They said they felt the former course would be fairer to all concerned. Seventy per cent of all the taxes collected in the county go to the bonded indebtedness and there is no way of reducing this expenditure.

It was recalled that several counties had restored the horizontal reduction made during the depression, with the consent of the State Legislature. Such a procedure for Pitt was not deemed a wise one as it would not take the place or reap the advantages of a revaluation. One neighboring county made a reduction in valuations of 50 per cent during the depression and it is understood recently voted to return to the old values, thereby (Continued on page six)

Parachute Fails; Man Dies In Jump

Winston-Salem, April 6.—(AP)—John (Red) Harmon, pilot attached to Miller airport here, was killed this morning when he leaped from a spinning plane and his parachute failed to open.

Harmon, who got his flying license in 1927, was testing a 1933 biplane and at a height of about 5,000 feet when it went into a spin. At 2,500 feet, observers said, he leaped from the plane and hurtled to his death. The airplane crashed about two and a half miles from the airport. Harmon's body was found nearby.

Cause of the spin was not known, although department of commerce investigators were busy this afternoon on the tragedy.

SCORES OF OTHER MINOR DISPUTES

Alabama And Tennessee Miners Facing Possibility Of Long Lay-Off

(By Associated Press) Labor troubles in automotive plants of the North and coal mines of the South kept more than 125,000 wage earners idle today.

Between the geographical extremes in the nation were scores of minor industrial disturbances.

Prospects for a quick settlement of the Chrysler Motor corporation strike, involving 80,000 workers, were bright, but 20,000 Alabama miners and 7,000 around Knoxville, Tenn., faced the possibility of a long lay-off pending approval of a new contract.

All mines of the Pittsburgh Coal company and Pittsburgh Terminal Coal company remained idle, too, pending negotiations on agreements covering working conditions. The Alabama and Tennessee miners, a union spokesman said, would demand time and a half for overtime and a wage increase.

Governor Frank Murphy of Michigan, occupying the role of peace maker in the Chrysler dispute, declined to predict when an agreement would be reached, but there were reports a pact would be signed in time to permit resumption of operations next week.

Observers felt settlement of strikes involving 10,000 Hudson Motor car employees and 2,200 Reo Motor car company workers hinged on the outcome of the Chrysler parley. It affected 65,000 Chrysler workers and 20,000 employees of automotive firms selling to Chrysler.

Alfred Sloan, Jr., president of General Motors corporation, condemned sit-down strikes in a statement issued at Phoenix, Ariz. Their seriousness, he said, lay not in themselves, but "in what they will lead to."

State's Attorney Explains Reasons For Allowing Plea

Declares Developments in Case Would Not Uphold First Degree Charge Against Dentist

Charlottesville, Va., April 6.—(AP)—Commonwealth's Attorney William Fife today explained his willingness to accept a plea of second degree murder from Dr. R. G. Miller, accused of causing the death of 18-year-old Cleo Sprouse by saying the catch is that the stream is usually dry. Young Edwards made his trip during a recent flood, but before five companions could follow his example the river had dried up again.

The 53-year-old dentist was indicted on a charge of first degree murder after the pretty high school junior's body was found near the University of Virginia cemetery, but Mr. Fife and Robert E. Taylor, of defense counsel, announced this week a plea of guilty to second degree murder had been agreed upon.

Under Virginia law conviction under second degree murder charges calls for prison sentences ranging from five to 20 years.

WILSON YARDS WRECK SCENE

Six Norfolk Southern Employees Leap to Safety

Wilson, April 6.—(AP)—Six Norfolk Southern railroad employees leaped to safety here today when a freight train ploughed into the rear of another standing in the yards.

A caboose and one box car were telescoped by the first engine of a double header which overturned and set fire to the debris. The men who jumped were H. M. Godwin, of Raleigh, engineer; and R. O. Richardson of Raleigh, fireman, and a Negro brakeman on the first engine of the double-header, and J. T. Boykin, engineer; G. M. Dodson, fireman, and a Negro brakeman, all of Raleigh from the second engine.

Wrecking crews from Raleigh arranged temporary tracks to restore service on the line while the wreckage was being cleared. Godwin is in a local hospital and it is feared he is suffering a back injury. X-ray pictures are being made.

Navigates 'Dry' River

Fulkerton, Calif. (AP)—To make a 28-mile trip down a river in a boat is nothing that would daunt the average youth, but W. E. Edwards is proud of his navigation of the Santa Ana river from Olive to the sea. The catch is that the stream is usually dry. Young Edwards made his trip during a recent flood, but before five companions could follow his example the river had dried up again.

Only One Highway Death In Section During March

Only one person was killed in highway wrecks in Eastern North Carolina during March, the monthly report of Lieut. Lester Jones, head of the Eastern division of the State Highway Patrol, revealed today.

In the previous month six persons were killed. The one fatality is thought to be a record since the patrol was organized.

During March there were only 74 wrecks, compared with 102 in the previous month. Forty-six persons were injured in the latter month, while in February 45 persons were hurt in accidents. More arrests were made in March, however, than in the previous month. Last month there were 908 arrests, 95 of which were for driving drunk, while in February there were 725 arrests, 66 of which were for driving drunk. Sentences meted out by the

LARGE POWERS MAY ATTEMPT ENFORCE PACT

BRITAIN, FRANCE WORK TOGETHER

Spanish Insurgents Claim New And Important Successes on Northern Front

(By Associated Press) Great Britain and France were reported ready today to try to line up the Balkans against Italy if Premier Mussolini moves to quit the International "hands-off-Spain" agreement.

That plan was recounted by an informed Paris source as the Spanish Insurgents, friendly to Italy, claimed new important successes on the Northern front. Their commanders asserted 2,000 government soldiers had been killed in recent fighting for Durango and Bilbao.

The possibility Italy might quit the non-intervention accord was raised by an Italian spokesman as the outgrowth of authoritative Italian charges France had "flagrantly violated" it, allowing aid to be sent to the Madrid Valencia government.

Britain and France would act to isolate the Balkans from Italy only as a "last resort," the Paris source said, as they are not anxious to attempt a major political realignment in Europe.

Although all the nations in the non-intervention agreement have already agreed to stop movement of volunteers to Spain, the land and naval patrol scheme for making the plan fully effective has not been put into effect—and its success depends on Italy's cooperation.

The Insurgent successes in Northern Spain brought a "final ultimatum" from Insurgent General Mola to the Basque defenders of Bilbao.

Mola's men were within sight of one objective, Durango. The Madrid Valencia administration organized new militia bodies to reinforce troops trying to break the semi-circle of insurgent lines near Madrid.

Institute Helped To Keep Check On Local Legislation

Given Credit For Aiding in Preventing Bad Measures From Being Enacted During Assembly

Raleigh, April 6.—Much credit is being given here to the Institute of Government in Chapel Hill for helping to prevent the enactment of bad local legislation for cities and towns in the 1937 session of the general assembly.

Observers here generally agree that fewer bad local bills were introduced this time than in any previous session and that those which were introduced were given unfavorable committee reports more promptly than heretofore and that the Institute of Government played a big part in this due to the information it supplied city and county officials with regard to bills introduced and acted upon every day.

"The fact that the Institute of Government was able to put out its mimeographed lists of new bills introduced every day, with a brief analysis of the contents of each bill and its purpose and the fact that these lists were in the hands of every board of county commissioners and of city officials the next day, kept these officials constantly informed of what was going on in the general assembly, a state official remarked here today.

"Whenever a bill was introduced which they did not know about or to which they were opposed, they were informed of it through this daily bulletin service and could at once take action on it.

"The members of the house and senate soon learned of this and it made them more careful and cautious in the introduction of legislation affecting counties, cities and towns in their territory. As a result most of the legislators found it better policy to discuss proposed legislation with their county commissioners and city officials before it was introduced rather than have a contest over it after it was introduced. There is no doubt that the Institute of Government performed a real service through the issuance of its daily bulletins."

The Institute of Government, of which Albert Coates is the head, maintained an office and staff here throughout the general assembly which made a factual, non-partisan analysis of every bill introduced.

MEET HELD ON CITY STADIUM

Project Appears Step Closer; Site Committee Chosen

The proposal to develop a modern municipal stadium in Greenville in the immediate future appears a step nearer following a meeting last night of city officials and a committee representing the local baseball club.

A committee to be headed by Guy V. Smith will study proposed sites available and report back at a later meeting. This procedure was decided upon after a committee representing the City Board of Aldermen and the baseball directors, which had been asked to make a direct recommendation, reported that they would prefer a committee be appointed to make a definite suggestion.

The group is working on the idea that WPA funds can be secured to pay for the labor on the project. It was estimated that approximately one-third of the total cost of the project would be utilized in labor. The remaining cost would be stipulated by public subscriptions and a contribution by the city. It is estimated that a stadium such as sponsors have in mind and hope to develop would cost in the neighborhood of $40,000.

The necessity of proceeding at once with the project was explained because of the fact that the fiscal year is drawing to a close and WPA funds might not be available thereafter. Also, it was pointed out, the property can be purchased cheaper now than later.

Two sites are under consideration and the committee headed by Mr. Smith is expected to choose between them. They are a tract in the old fairgrounds and a plot along the Washington road, in the area near the city limits. Both sites are available at the present time at a price declared to be a fair figure.

To Close Court House Saturday Afternoons

The Pitt county commissioners yesterday afternoon voted to close the court house each Saturday afternoon during May, June, July and August. The decision was taken after a petition had been presented bearing the names of a large number of local attorneys.

Whether or not this action will cause the Wednesday afternoon holiday to be dispensed with was not stated as this was not taken into consideration by the Board.

Change Hours Of Pitt ABC Stores

Announcement was made today by C. O. H. Horne, chairman of the Pitt County ABC board, that all Pitt stores would remain open evenings on weekdays until 7 o'clock and on Saturdays until 8 o'clock. Stores will continue to open at 7 o'clock.

Chairman Horne declared the action was taken with the idea of making legal liquor available to persons who work until 6 o'clock and, unable to purchase it legally, resort to bootleggers. The new hours already are in effect.

SENATE HEADS IN AGREEMENT ON SIT-DOWNS

Decide To Modify Resolution Offered By Sen. Pittman

GROUP REJECTS FARM PROPOSAL

'Friend' of Roosevelt Opposes Proposed Supreme Court Reorganization

Washington, April 6.—(AP)—Senate majority leader Robinson (D. Ark.) said today he had agreed with other administration chiefs on a "declaration policy" on sit down strikes. It will be brought before the Senate for speedy action, Wednesday, he said.

Robinson said a group of Democratic Senators had decided at a prolonged conference this morning on a modified version on a resolution offered yesterday by Senator Pittman (D. Nev.)

Elsewhere in the capital a former New York bar association press attacked the President's court reorganization plan as a "shabby enterprise."

Appearing before the Senate Judiciary Committee, Charles Burchingham said, "as a supporter and admirer and friend of the President, I can not refrain from saying that I think he has made a great blunder and should retrace his steps and proceed on the road charted for him by the constitution—I mean by amendment."

Although the committee hearing went forward, the Senate itself was not in session and the House took up a calendar of major bills.

One of President Roosevelt's problems, what to do about relief, was pointed up by a group of representatives who demanded a $400,000,000 Works Relief program for the next fiscal year.

The House Agriculture Committee stood firm on its rejection of a $50,000,000 annual appropriation for buying and reselling farms to tenants and share croppers.

Reports Discovery Plane Wreckage

Albuquerque, New Mex., April 6.—(AP)—Major A. D. Smith, division superintendent of the Transcontinental & Western Air Lines, in a radio message to the airport here at 10 a. m. today said the wreckage of an airplane was sighted northwest of Mount Baldy, in Eastern Arizona.

The veteran pilot, flying a tri-motor transport, said the wreckage was in an inaccessible region. He told airport operatives here his ship was circling the spot until Major Victor Brandtland could arrive from Winslow, Ariz., with his ship which had been held there for emergency.

Winslow, Ariz., April 6.—(AP)—Belief persisted today an airliner, missing for three days with eight persons aboard, would be found in rugged, snow-covered country along the Arizona-New Mexico border, probably wrecked.

Major Brandtland, airport manager for Douglas Aircraft Corporation, which built the plane, held to such a conviction despite a two-day plane search of the area.

EVE'S ORCHARD

By MARGARET WIDDEMER

SYNOPSIS: Eve Mannersfield and her city-loving Denny Carter are on the verge of marriage when they quarrel and he walks out. Eve stays in her 200-year-old Connecticut house with kind old "Uncle" Henry and serious little Judge Featherstone whose parents have deserted him. Her steps go, Eve resumes her aunt's baking business. A shattering letter tells her Denny is to marry wealthy Mitzzi Work and the encouragement of her steady, dependable neighbor, George Cleveland, who loves Eve, keep her going.

Chapter 5

Eve Bakes and Sings

JULY and August, and still the routine of the baking, and being kind to the old man and little boy, and making—strangely—new friends. Finding herself pulled back into the village's rhythm because she was Aunt Lina's niece and the Grange, the book club, all the civic activities which had owed so much to her aunt, expected her to do what her aunt's niece would do. So she did. It was something to do.

"I couldn't have done differently," she told herself, working alone through the sunny mornings at her kitchen window. She did not mind thinking about things now. At first it had hurt to think now. Now it felt smoother, clearer. "I couldn't have set Judge adrift in the condition he was in. I couldn't even go off and quit on Uncle Henry now, bless his heart."

"Fresh from what, out with it!" She looked at him more curiously. "George, you angel, you've been up to some work of mercy, don't deny it."

"Well, I didn't mean to boast—spraying your orchard. I couldn't do less considering I stole suckers last spring."

"She dashed to the oven before she spoke, and dragged a pan of rolls out triumphantly. "Just right. I hadn't forgotten. It's good, making things. Don't you love to make? I suppose everybody does."

"Yes, I do, but lots don't. Remember, when you were little,

The children of Holland take pleasure in making

What the children of England take pleasure in breaking

I think those are the main divisions of the world. And I've heard that if there are too many breakers and not enough makers in a generation, or two, things go to smash rather."

She turned serious, bending over her fragrant brown rolls and brushing them over with melted butter with a camel-hair brush.

"Why, I suppose so—I never thought about it."

"No, your processes are so blessedly unconscious. I'm slow-minded. I have to think things out an inch at a time. But I didn't mean to philosophize. I came really to see if you couldn't leave Adora Gray in charge this afternoon. The Gardiners are coming over for tennis and swimming afterwards."

Adora Gray was a village girl. Eve had had to hire her three days a week during the last month and a half.

'I'll Bring A Cake'

EVE held out a plate of thin white cookies to George, who greedily took a handful, and said thoughtfully: "I can. Judge and Uncle Henry won't mind a pantry supper for once."

"But I was going to get hamburger, and have a fry in the outdoor fireplace. They can come too. We'll try to keep the Gardiners."

"If you think you can get the Gardiners to do anything but stay, when they hear about a hamburger fry, you're an optimist!" Eve said, adding, "I'll bring salad and a chocolate cake."

"Well, if you have one. Market prices, remember."

"Market price, of course! Or I might charge for everything but the piece I eat myself."

They both laughed. George and Eve had achieved a comradely relation which made George's head in Eve's kitchen window and Eve's presence on George's tennis court a matter of course. His mother was still in Southampton; his father stayed with her except for an occasional weekend.

"Well, I'll let you contribute this cake for the good of the community," he said, showing his big even white teeth as he sauntered off. Eve went back to her baking and singing. It sounded like a swell party.

George reverted again that afternoon, as they lounged in bathing suits on the edge of his pool, to their first meeting.

"Funny, wasn't it?" he said. "I took you for a scroungily sophisticated New York playgirl. And as nearly as I can remember you supposed me to be a haughty, inarticulate slumming—what is that horrible word?—socialite."

"Whereas I was just Little Country Girl Dazzled by Bright Lights," said Eve, thoughtfully regarding one beautifully tanned leg, "and I don't know about your being a socialite; but your darn well aren't inarticulate, George, the only time I get a chance to talk to you is when I interrupt."

"But there was something I wanted to say to you, Eve."

"Heavens, what that you haven't said in the last three months?"

She laughed again. She felt very happy, stretched along the broad edge of the pool in the bright sunshine.

"Nothing, if you feel that way."

Eve absentedly traced a hand in the water.

George gets tired of being "an angel" tomorrow, and drives off to a house party.

She had saved a child, to grow up and be sound and right-minded and intelligent in a world that needed such children badly. She had kept a proud, decent old man from unhappiness and dependence. At least her unhappiness had not been in vain. It did not make her happy to feel this. But it made her feel safe. It made her feel right with herself. She had done what the old house made her do, the old house whose people had always stood for right first, for decency first. Whether or not she was ever happy again, she knew simply that in the end she could be content.

"If this had happened to me," she thought, "in the city, I couldn't have borne it. Out here I can."

For the hours was behind her. The house foregave her and took her back after her years of forgetting it.

She was young and strong and normal. After a while she could forget some of the time, and laugh naturally, and be gay sometime, without pretending.

Eileen came and went. Usually she brought some young actor with her. Barely the same one twice. They would make a foursome, with George, weekends, driving about the country, swimming, playing tennis. George's place was more and more a rendezvous for the young people around the countryside with its swimming pool, tennis courts, and a host whose housekeeper loved nothing better than unexpected company. There were friens and companionship for Eve, as well as work. To her surprise the longing for Denny quieted little by little. She hoped they would not meet for a long time.

And at last the summer was over; there was warm beautiful Connecticut Septer weather.

Contents: Eve Realizes

WORKING in the old kitchen that September morning, young and light and strong, Eve realized that she was content. She liked to cook and be praised for it and make money by it. She liked to move about her own house and orchard. If she saw Denny, she supposed it would bring the pain back. But she did not have to see Denny.

Uncle Henry passed under the window in his straw hat, calling up a cheery word to her. Judge's clattering feet followed him; "Hey, wait for me!" he called shrilly.

She could see the orchard slope, where the apples were ripening now in the hot morning sunshine, across the greensward. As she stood by her table, singing and beating eggs in the fresh wind, George came past too. He stopped by what had come to be his usual leaning-place, the outside sill.

He said, smiling at her, yet with an odd intensity: "You look as if you liked to do that. Do you?" He was hatless and blue-shirted. He folded his bare sunburned arms on the sill as if he were in no hurry, and waited for her answer.

She was delicious, her curls tied tight in an old copper-colored silk kerchief, her tall thinness wrapped in her long yellow apron, her face flushed and fresh as she scooped the sticky white dough out of the mixer machine.

She laughed and nodded. "Yes, I do. Quiser, isn't it, after doing office work so long in New York? But I suppose a string of ancestresses who lived out here and did this—without a mixing machine—are responsible. This is going to be eight handsome loaves of bread for the Methodist church supper. Then I scald it and

EXPERT WORRIES OVER AMERICAN LIQUOR GULPING

Chicago, (AP) — A gulp and a gladder is the American technique of drinking liquor, says Harry L. Lourie, executive secretary of the National Association of Alcoholic Beverage Importers. He thinks it's all wrong, too.

"The average American picks up a shot glass of a fine old rye, bourbon or corn in his right hand, gestures vaguely with his left, and then tosses it off with an 'expert flip,' says Lourie.

"The fine old liquor splashes against the back of his throat, gushes down into his stomach and begins to burn. Here the drinker gives three shudders, wipes his lips with the back of his hand and says, 'Ah, there was a drink!'

Lourie says any liquor fit to drink is fit to sip and that one gets the flavor of the liquor by sipping and sniffing its aroma.

BUREAU BUILDS TUNNEL FOR COAL MINE RESEARCH

Washington (AP) — The bureau of mines has undertaken further experiments to improve underground working conditions affecting the health of miners.

The bureau has established a research tunnel at Mt. Weather, Va., a spot once considered as a site for summer White House, to carry on such studies.

Similar research for coal mines is being done by the bureau at its experimental mine at Bruceton, Pa., where special emphasis is placed on the study of prevention of coal dust explosions.

The Texas Highway Department reports more than a half million trees and shrubs were planted in the state during the last two years in maintenance and construction work.

HOLLYWOOD SIT-DOWN: Starlets Just Go 'Near' The Water

HOLLYWOOD—The capacity of any Hollywood swimming pool is several gals. But the cameraman always seems to find them just sittin' down. Striking, too!

1 June Travis, maybe, is afraid the water would wash the flowers off her suit. So she just sits on the diving board and squints at the old photographer's birdie.

2 Ruby Keeler bars the entry. Who cares? Hollywood bathing pools, like their owners, were built to be photographed. No shoving, please.

3 Ann Sheridan takes a rug and sombrero with her, but she teils not, neither does she swim. It would be silly, wouldn't it, to go swimming in a hat like that?

4 Maxine Jennings, in her two-piece get-up, is another one of the ornaments. Maybe she thinks she's in a chain gang.

Titterton Case Sets Pace for Solving Murder

By CHARLES NORMAN (AP Feature Service Writer) (SECOND IN A SERIES)

New York—The murder that looked like a suicide and the suicide that looked like a murder are two cases Edward Mullins would rather talk about than the Titterton slaying which his men helped to solve.

"Whereas I was just Little Country Girl Dazzled by Bright Lights," said Eve, thoughtfully regarding one beautifully tanned leg, "and I don't know about your being a socialite; but your darn well aren't inarticulate, George, the only time I get a chance to talk to you is when I interrupt."

String Brings Conviction

Mullins fidgeted. His face seemed to be saying, "Aw, what's the use of rehashing that stuff. But you take the murder that looked like a suicide and the suicide that looked like a murder—"

Let him tell you about them.

"We went around when the body was discovered," he begins matter-of-factly. "It looked like a suicide, all right. It was a young woman. She was hanging there, and there was a chair on the floor looking like it had been kicked over."

"Now there's always a routine investigation, even when we're sure it's a suicide case, and this time we got a surprise."

"We learned that the girl had given her mother a five dollar bill that morning and that she had received four dollars in change which were folded all together and put in her bag. This was strange, because we found no money in the girl's purse."

"Then, while questioning her boyfriend, we went through his pockets. In his wallet was some money, and as we examined it, the mother exclaimed: 'Why, that's just how the four dollars were folded by me this morning.' We counted the bills, and there were four."

"That changed the layout for us, and we went to work on the boy friend. Finally he confessed."

And the suicide that looked like a murder?

"Well, this fellow was found lying on a Bowery barroom floor with a big stab wound. He was still alive. We rounded up everybody he had been there and questioned them, but got nowhere."

"We took this fellow to a hospital, and when he regained consciousness he told what had happened. He had been drinking a lot and staggered over to the lunch counter. At the bar was a bunch of tough guys, and he began to call them names. All of a sudden they started for him—at least, he thought they did."

"Fiorinza was always putting himself to the forefront," Kear says. "He was trying to divert suspicion from himself. He discovered the body and notified the police. We questioned him and let him go, questioned him some more."

"After 15 hours of questioning, he cracked. There are types that have the ability to resist pressure of this sort longer—or forever. That's where circumstantial evidence comes in—like ballistics and fingerprints. Such things prove beyond doubt that the suspect was the criminal."

Friends Of Bob Reynolds Not Worried Over Rumors

Reflector Bureau.

By J. C. BASKERVILL

Raleigh, April 6.—Friends of Senator Robert R. Reynolds are not greatly worried by reports which have been current for several weeks now that Congressman Robert L. Doughton is planning to oppose him for his seat in the Senate in the Democratic primary next year.

For while they agree that "Farmer Bob" Doughton is a campaigner of parts and a vote-getter, of note, they maintain that he cannot compare with "Our Bob" on either count, and that Doughton cannot possibly get a following big enough to out-vote the following Reynolds already has or will have by the time the 1938 primary rolls around.

If Congressman Doughton were planning to oppose almost any one else but Senator Reynolds, it is generally agreed that he would stand an excellent chance of winning the nomination. For his record in Congress, especially as chairman of the House Ways and Means committee, and the manner in which he has stood by the President and supported his program, has admittedly made him one of the strongest and most influential men in Congress and one of the most popular here in North Carolina.

It is also agreed that Doughton is one of the few men in the state who enjoys the confidence of the big business interests, of labor and the farmers, all at the same time. Many astute political observers still are confident that if Doughton had decided to become a candidate for the Democratic nomination for Governor last spring, that Mr. Hoey would not have run and that Doughton would have been nominated with ease over Dr. Ralph W. McDonald—if McDonald had been a candidate—since he seems to be as popular with the McDonald "Liberal Democrats" as he is with the "Regulars." It is reported that on a recent visit to the state, Doughton told a friend that he would have been a candidate for Governor last Spring if he had known as much then as he did now about sentiment.

But Reynolds is no novice in politics, his supporters maintain, and has just as many factors in his favor as Congressman Doughton has. In the first place, they point out that Senator Reynolds has supported President Roosevelt in his Supreme Court reorganization proposal from the very outset, that he has also stood with the President on most of his other New Deal measures since he has been in the Senate.

They admit that Senator Reynolds has not always seen eye to eye with the President on everything, and that he differed with him on the World Court matter and on immigration, but that in so doing Senator Reynolds was representing a majority of the thought in North Carolina on these matters. But in all of the more important matters advocated by President Roosevelt, Senator Reynolds has given him whole-hearted support, it is maintained.

But it is as a campaigner and in his understanding of the people of North Carolina and what they want that Senator Reynolds is expected to surpass Congressman Doughton; his friends maintain. For while Doughton is admitted to be an unusual political figure, no one has ever said he was a colorful political figure—and no one can deny that Reynolds is a colorful figure, probably the most colorful figure in North Carolina politics. There is zest, zip and zing to everything Reynolds does.

If Congressman Doughton had kissed Jean Harlow and had the pictures broadcast over the country, it would have created a scandal. But the words and music concerning Reynolds' oscillatory adventures with the Hollywood platinum blond have only served to make "Our Bob" more popular than ever here in North Carolina, especially when he said that Jean's kisses could not compare with those of North Carolina girls.

"Bob Reynolds just naturally has a personality and a knowledge of North Carolina psychology that gets votes and keeps them," one of his admirers said here today. "An when he comes back here next year and starts campaigning from one end of the state to the other in another old Ford and starts passing out the well-known Reynolds barney and verbal flowers, neither Bob Doughton nor anyone else can stop him. For he has the same kind of 'it' in politics that Jean Harlow has in the movies and he is just as irresistible. Doughton had better decide to be satisfied with another term in the House and not try to get Reynolds' seat in the Senate, for he is likely to be disappointed."

SEN. FLANAGAN CLUB SPEAKER

Declares Last Session Best He Ever Has Attended

'This last legislature was the best I ever attended,' declared Senator E. G. Flanagan as he spoke before the Rotary club at their regular meeting last evening.

The legislature was under the influence of a governor who had the love of his state at heart, and enacted most laws recommended by him declared Mr. Flanagan.

Briefly reviewing several bills in which he either had introduced and supported or opposed Mr. Flanagan went into detail concerning the bitter fight waged against his slot machine bill.

Mr. Flanagan discussed briefly his advocacy for the 2 per cent sales tax bill which was defeated, his opposition and final defeat of a bill awarding the chair and desk used by the former Governor to the Governor at the end of his term.

In conclusion Senator Flanagan discussed the constitutional amendment dealing with the tax on intangibles. He pointed out that there should be special pains taken to avoid double listing but that all intangibles would have to be listed.

Senator E. G. Flanagan was introduced by K. W. Cobb, chairman of Fellowship Committee.

President J. B. Kittrell informed the club that the next meeting would be for the nomination of officers for the coming year.

T. Y. Walker, chairman of the Boys' Work Committee announced that his committee at the request of Roy Campbell, Jamboree chairman, had met and discussed the possibility of sending a Boy Scout to the National Jamboree to be held this year at Washington, D. C.

Constitution. For the Court to fail to declare invalid any act of Congress which exceeds these limits is to permit encroachment upon the rights of the several states or the people, in violation of the Tenth Amendment, which reads: "The powers not delegated to the United States by the Constitution, nor prohibited by it to the States, are reserved to the States respectively, or to the people." For this provision and others of the Bill of Rights we have the great liberal, Thomas Jefferson, to thank. We may be assured if the present plan to emasculate the Supreme Court is adopted, it will never recover prestige enough to declare another law of Congress unconstitutional. What will be the effect then? With this bulwark gone we shall witness a centralization of power in Washington and a consequent decline in the power of state governments such as we have never known. It would indeed be a strange thing if we, of the South, who fought a civil war to uphold state's rights, should favor such a proposition. HARRY M. BROWN. Greenville, April 5.

Man About Manhattan. By George Tucker. New York — Maxwell Anderson's third play of the season, "The Mask of Kings," is a poetic, romantic interpretation of the tragedy at Mayerling, where, in 1889, the Crown Prince Rudolf, heir to the Austrian throne, was found dead with his 17-year-old mistress in his shooting box not far from Vienna. In the Anderson story, the pair shot themselves, just as other writers have substantiated the suicide theory. An interesting and different version, however, is that Rudolf was slain accidentally in a brawl. This account of the Mayerling doings comes from the Archduke Leopold Wolfing, kinsman of the Hapsburg heir, and undoubtedly possessed of facts which never have been made known. Wolfing says this: "The girl, Marie, probably committed suicide as she knew that Rudolf was slain. But Rudolf himself I believe to have been the victim of manslaughter. I don't believe he was deliberately murdered, but the pieces of green glass, which I saw the doctor extract from his head, most certainly belonged to a champagne bottle, and from what I was told at Schonbrunn, my opinion now is that he was slain by accident in a drunken brawl. "You must remember that the girl, Marie, had other admirers — men whose intentions to her were honorable and who would have married her, if they could. Rudolf was outwardly on friendly terms with these men, and what I understood at the time was that one of them turned up at Mayerling, and late at night, while Rudolf and he were drinking heavily together, Rudolf, who was always apt to wax abusive when drunk, insulted this man in such a way that (the man) without meaning to kill him, smashed the champagne bottle across his head. Of course, the man was not proceeded against. Before receiving the blow Rudolf might have assaulted him physically, for all we knew. . . In any case the Emperor (Franz Josef) forbade investigation. The whole thing was so frightful that it had at once to be hushed up." Another version whispered at the time, but later rejected, was that after Rudolf and his mistress arrived at the shooting lodge he went out one night to meet the wife of one of his foresters. The woman's husband, discovering them together in the woods, killed him on the spot. Later, the story goes, Marie discovered his body in the woods, and, feeling forsaken, returned to the lodge and took her life. Anderson's view of the dual suicide is the charitable explanation, and other writers before him have held to this belief. But Wolfing insists on the champagne bottle version, and he advances a convincing argument in his autobiography, "From Archduke to Grocer," published in this country by Dutton. Whether you accept his account or not, there's one thing you've got to hand the Hapsburgs. They may have been epileptic and imbecilic, but, as subject matter, they certainly make exciting theater.

OUR HIGH SCHOOL FORGING AHEAD. The victories of Greenville High School debating teams yesterday is another evidence that the local school is forging its way to the front as one of the outstanding high schools of the state. While yesterday's victories were in debating, the recent honors won by the school cover several phases of school work and athletics. In basketball the local team won the eastern state championship and was defeated for the state championship by a team representing a much larger city than Greenville. Green Lights, the high school paper, recently won high honors in New York in a nationwide contest of high school publications. Reports from various colleges throughout the state indicate that former members of the local high school are making scholastic honors, indicating that the training they received in high school here adequately fitted them for their college work. Considered from every angle the Greenville schools are making fine progress and the citizens of Greenville can be justly proud of their school system.

To the Editor—Sir: The sole argument of the proponents of the President's court changes is that the Supreme Court as it is now constituted does not interpret the Constitution in the light of the progress of time; in other words, that the Court does not allow the federal government enough power to meet the present situation. These advocates, in their zeal, seem to forget what every one who is acquainted with the principles of the American government knows, namely, that it is the duty of the Supreme Court to allow to the federal government only those functions which are granted in the Talks To Parents. By Brooke Peters Church. They Need The Bible. By BROOKE PETERS CHURCH. Sam was answering a general information test on "who's who in ancient literature." He knew about Homer, Achilles, Ulysses, Odysseus, The Old, Roland, Siegfried, Virgil, and a host of other characters. But he had never heard of Ahab, Isalah, Deborah, Jeremiah, Jehu, Elijah, Jacob and Esau. He knew Samson was a strong man; Adam and Eve and Noah struck responsive chords in his memory, but for the rest the Bible was a blank in his mind. When the teaching of religion was taken out of the schools, the study of the Bible was lost to a large part of the country's children. It is surprising how few children read the Bible or hear it read at home. College instructors are repeatedly faced with classes in history or literature, even in comparative religion, to whom the Bible is quite unfamiliar. To pretend to study the literature or history of the western world without any knowledge of half the source material is absurd. To consider one's self cultured or even educated without any conception of the foundations on which the cultural material of the accident is based, is impossible. If all that we had left of Greek literature were bound in one volume, that one volume would be the equivalent in value of the ancient Hebrew library which is the Bible. Out of these two volumes it might be said our civilization sprang. The children read and study the stories of the ancient Greeks. These are a part of every school library and curriculum. It is for the home to foster an equally intimate knowledge of the Old Testament at least. The stories of the great men of old, the magnificent poetry and oratory of the psalms and prophets are part of our background and should not be lost.

When Les (Dynamite) Scarsella, Cincinnati first baseman, walked on the field for his initial spring workout, the first to greet him was Charlie Dressen, peppery Red manager.

"Come here, Sockerella," he called. "I want a word with you. I want to hear a lot of noise from your corner. If anyone gets rough, take a sock at him. Start a couple of fights. I'll give you $50 for everyone you get into. They'll lay off—then."

Scarsella accepted the challenge. Said he:

"I guess I'm quiet because I work in a dynamite factory during the winter months. That's no place to be noisy. Get ready to kick in with several of those 50's this year."

Recalled from Toronto last June 1, Scarsella improved steadily until the end of the season. He closed his first year in the big show with a batting average of .313 and a .989 fielding average. Only Catcher Ernie Lombardi and Outfielder Kiki Cuyler were more effective with the stick among 1936 regulars.

But Scarsella lacked the color that goes to make a ball player popular. His awkwardness decreased, but, try as he would, Manager Dressen couldn't get Scarsella to talk it up.

This year, in the Tampa training camp and in exhibition games, Scarsella has been showing some of the desired pepper. Much credit should go to Mrs. Scarsella, the former Anna Emmanuel of Cincinnati.

"Did you know," she asked, "Les told me his ambition was to be the very best at first base in the National league?"

"So I sat down with him one day. We took stock of every National league man in that position. We dissected them all carefully and, when we were through, I said to him: 'See, not one has anything on you. You can step out there and show 'em all!'"

Scarsella has caught the new rollicking spirit of the Reds. He does his share of chattering. He's determined to collect a few of those $50 bank notes Manager Dressen has dangled before his eyes.

BISSETT HAS BEST FIELDING PERCENTAGE MARK FOR UNC.

Chapel Hill, April 6.—Harold Bissett, sophomore first baseman, who comes from Bailey, has played errorless ball to date in four games with the Carolina baseball team. Bissett has accepted 45 chances, 43 putouts and two assists. The stock first-sacker has been pulling 'em out of the air from all positions and has yet to drop one of the tosses of Infielders Ed Bullard, Matty Topkins and Poy Grubb.

CLARENCE KLUTZ IS FIRST TO SHOOT PAR GOLF FOR UNC.

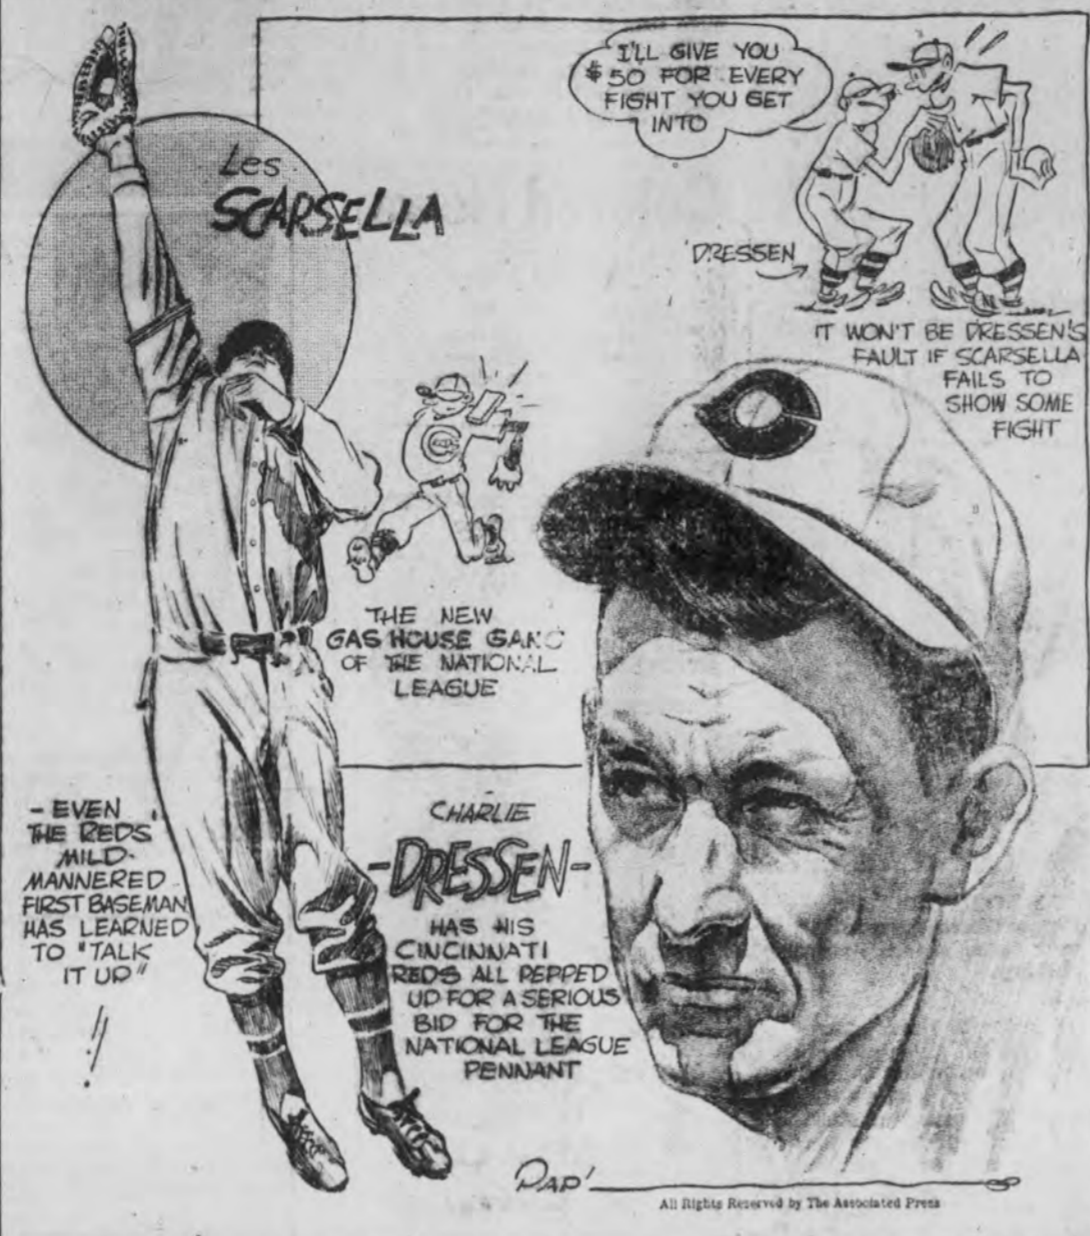

Chapel Hill, April 6.—Clarence Klutz, Salisbury boy and No. 3 ranking Tar Heel golfer, is the first Carolina man to shoot par 70 on the Hops Valley course this season. Klutz turned in his brilliant performance against Wake Forest Saturday. By getting three points for winning the match, Klutz was the big gun in the Tar Heels' 9-1-2 to 8-1-2 win. Rex Dornin, Wake Forest ace, shot a 71 for the 18 holes to lead the Baptist linksmen.

TAR HEEL NETTERS HAVE WON 48 OF 49 MATCHES

Chapel Hill, April 6.—The University of North Carolina tennis team, with five victories in as many starts, has won 48 of 49 singles and doubles matches this season. Carolina beat Yale three, 10-0, 10-0, 9-1, Lehigh, 10-0 and N. C. State, 9-0. Coach John Kenfield's charges have copped all 15 doubles contests but lost one singles engagement to Yale. Two home meets are scheduled this week: Harvard Thursday and Williams Friday.

Veil Resurrection: Paris (AP)—Smart Parisiennes are resurrecting veils worn by their mothers and grandmothers. And they're not wedding veils—simply veils which adorned millinery of a decade or two ago. The Countess de Coese-Brissac wears an emerald-colored grey veil, which once belonged to her mother, on her silver-colored straw sailor. She ties it under her chin.

MAKING READY FOR BASEBALL

Arrangements Proceeding for Professional Entry

With the scheduled date for opening of the Coastal Plain baseball league only about a month off, arrangements are proceeding here at a rapid pace.

Bo Farley, who has been selected to manage the local entry in the league, declared today that he was signing up a number of players, some of whom will come here direct from big league training camps in Florida and elsewhere. Most of those being signed are young players who were not quite able to make the big league grade, it was stated.

D. C. Moore, Jr., has been named secretary-treasurer of the team and already has assumed his duties. Practice will begin within a week or so it was stated, and a number of exhibition games are being arranged. Several are expected to be played, beginning 10 days or two weeks prior to the opening date.

Monday, May 10, has been designated as official opening date, but a proposal to open on Sunday, May 9, is being considered. Unlike last year, the teams will play seven days a week, no opening dates having been provided, if a proposal is carried out. The schedule is being prepared and probably will be announced this week.

Local officials feel that there is little doubt but what the league will operate as an eight club unit, although Ayden and Tarboro had not posted their $500 at the latest reports. It is understood other towns in Eastern North Carolina would like to have the franchises if these two towns fail to qualify. The other six teams in the league last year already have posted their $500.

This season will mark the first time organized ball has been played here in a number of years. The league will operate as a Class D.

BURNETTE SETTING PACE FOR TAR HEEL BATSMEN

Chapel Hill, April 6.—Tom Burnette, hard-hitting outfielder, is the leading Carolina batter at the end of the four game mark. The Tarboro boy has collected seven hits in 15 attempts for a percentage of .567. George Nethercutt, sophomore, who comes from Roanoke Rapids, actually has the best percentage although he has played but one game. Against Michigan State, Nethercutt garnered two hits in three trips to the plate for a .600 mark. Ranking third is Pitcher Trby Wright, who has three clean knocks in seven tries for a .428 record.

Local College Anxious to Keep Season's Slate Clean

The Teachers have two straight wins to their credit. Little is known of the A. C. team. But the Wilson and Greenville teams are rivals and a good game can always be expected when they meet.

CAROLINA TRACKMEN HOPE TO DO BETTER WEDNESDAY

Chapel Hill, April 6.—When the University of North Carolina track team meets Princeton University here Wednesday afternoon in an intercollegiate feature, the Tar Heels will be doing their utmost to win more first places than they did against Dartmouth last week. In losing 68 to 38 to the Indians, Coach Bob Pezzer's charges won only two first places in 14 events; Graham Gammon in the mile and Powell

By Pap'

Richard in the javelin. Carolina placed in all but two events against Dartmouth but couldn't match the blistering pace set by the New Hampshire in the running and field events.
