UNION GROUPS HASTEN DRIVES

Legislative Developments Also Claim Attention

Labor leaders divided attention today between unionization campaigns and legislative developments affecting hours, wages and sit-down strikes.

The two largest groups of the organized labor field, the C. I. O. and the American Federation of Labor, quickened their unionization drives as a result of the Supreme court validation of the Wagner Labor act.

At the same time they kept a close watch on congressional moves to restrict the tactics of opposing forces in labor disputes and the anticipated presidential recommendations on establishment of minimum and maximum hour standards.

Rival labor leaders, William Green of the A. F. of L. and John Lewis of the C. I. O., will attend a conference called for Tuesday by Secretary of Labor Perkins.

Henry Ford said in an interview the "useful" provisions of the Wagner act long "have been policies of the Ford Motor Company."

Homer Martin, president of the United Automobile Workers union said an intensive campaign to enlist Ford workers in the union impends.

ITALY ADVISES REBELS TO SINK 'ENEMY' SHIPS

Great Britain's Sea Strength Disparaged By Fascists

BLOCKADE HELD BY INSURGENTS

Britain Charged With Competing with Russia and France in Supplying Loyalist

(By Associated Press) Italian Fascists pointedly disparaging Great Britain's sea strength, advised Spanish insurgent warships today to sink "enemy" vessels indiscriminately.

Coupled with glowing insistence by British ship owners that their cargo vessels be protected within Spanish territorial waters, informed sources feared the Italian jibes might have considerable importance.

The Regime Fascista of Cremona, Italy, a semi-official Fascist organ, taunted Britannia for being able no longer even to protect her own ships.

Conservative ship owners and labor leaders joined forces in London against Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin's cabinet which assured the British Unionjack protection up to, but not beyond, Spanish territorial waters.

The incident was provoked when British food ships were turned back from Bilbao by an insurgent blockade of the Basque capital. The city is under siege by land and sea and its population, swelled to more than 300,000 by war refugees, is reduced to virtual rations.

As the Spanish Republic observed its sixth anniversary, General Jose Miaja's troops launched a new attempt in the week-long battle of Madrid to lift the Insurgents' siege, but there was no decisive change in the battle lines.

Insurgent advisers said heavy casualties, placed at 12,000 by one high official, had sapped the strength of the government's Madrid offensive.

Court Cost Added To Initial Price Of City Auto Tags

Several Defendants Convicted Here This Morning, Making $1 Auto Licenses Cost Total of $5.95

Several defendants in City court this morning were convicted of owning and operating motor vehicles here without securing a city license tag and were taxed with the costs and ordered to purchase the tags. The cost of each case amounted to $4.95 and in addition the defendants had to pay the $1 for the tags.

W. L. Patrick, assistant tax collector in charge of the motor vehicle division and Chief G. A. Clark said warrants would be sworn out against others who are operating vehicles without city tags. The court ordered that the costs be assessed against any person buying a license when a warrant already has been served on him.

Those convicted in City court this morning were Linwood Woodard, Willie Sugg, Dock Perkins, Walter E. Flanagan, J. S. Elliott, Wm. H. Gardner and John Gurganus. The cases against two defendants, Joe Dresback and D. L. Carson, were dismissed when it was discovered they had bought the tags before the warrants were sworn out.

A case also was dismissed against two Negro women, Helen Tucker and Jessie May Tucker. They were charged with engaging in disorderly conduct.

Coy Moore, Negro, was bound over to County court under bond of $300 on a charge of possessing illegal whiskey. George Shine, Negro, was fined $5 and taxed with the costs upon conviction of drunkenness.

O. D. Ingram, lawyer who came here several months ago and since which time has been in the hands of the police on several occasions on charges of drunkenness, again was convicted of the charge. Mayor Pro-Tem H. H. Duncan gave him a 30-day road sentence, to start tomorrow. The understanding was that if he would leave town local officers would not search for him.

POTENT LIQUID GRAND RAPIDS IN EXISTENCE BANK ROBBED

World Probably Exists Where Such Liquid Used for Water

Chapel Hill, April 14.—(AP)—A new, straw-colored liquid that can dissolve almost every substance in the world except glass, platinum and tungsten was reported to the American Chemical Society today.

Somewhere in the universe a world possibly exists with this liquid substituted for water, said Prof. L. S. Smith of the Polytechnic Institute at Brooklyn, N. Y.

"In such a selenium liquid world," he said, "the temperate zones would be studded with huge glaciers of white crystals, the frozen solvent, which has the highest freezing point of about 65 degrees, Fahrenheit."

"Mountains would consist of glass or felspar and all bridges and boats would have to be constructed of platinum or tungsten, virtually the only metals which do not react readily to it."

"Snow would fall every time the temperature dropped below the mild warmth of spring, men would have to carry umbrellas of glass, tungsten or platinum. The Ohio - Mississippi floods of this winter would be a circumstance to what might be regularly expected by a selenium oxychloride man. x x x"

Final Plans Being Made For Fine Arts Festival

The Woman's Club will hold its third annual Fine Arts Festival at the club house next week. Plans provide for a four-day festival, beginning April 22nd and lasting through the 25th, which will comprise many unique attractions.

Special efforts are being made this year to have something new and different in both program features and in exhibits, looking toward a bigger and a finer festival in every way, than the two preceding ones.

As usual this event, the most important project of the club during the entire year, promises to attract many out-of-town people and is to be given, as heretofore, free of charge to the people of the community.

The doors of the club house will be thrown open to the public at two o'clock on Thursday afternoon of next week. A delightful program is being arranged for this time which promises to attract large numbers.

Roosevelt Declares Best World Peace Guarantee Lies In Mutual Confidence

UNION EXPECTS AID FROM U.S.

Government Looked To For Protection Of Organizers

Washington, April 14.—(AP)—A United Mine Workers official advised a senate committee today his union expects the government to protect its organizers when they undertake a unionization drive in Harlan county, Kentucky.

The official, Philip Murray, United Mine Workers' vice-president, appeared before the Senate Civil Liberties group at the start of its hearings on labor conditions in Harlan county.

He said the United Mine Workers do not have a foothold now in Harlan county. The coal operators there, he charged, are "maintaining a tyranny over the men employed in their mines which has no equal in the civilized world."

While the civil liberties hearing went forward, the Senate Judiciary committee pushed its study of the President's court bill.

Frederick Sheppard, who said he represented the bar association of Nassau county, New York, filed a statement with the committee, opposing the bill.

William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, rival organization of the CIO, went before a house group to endorse the Wagner housing bill and warned, "labor is impatient" over delay in enactment of housing legislation.

Developments on capitol hill included approval by the House Ways and Means committee of a measure to repeal an income tax law provision for publication of all corporation officials' salaries of $15,000 or more.

Meanwhile Senator Byrnes (D-SC) said the Supreme court decision upholding the Wagner act proved Congress undoubtedly has the power to outlaw sit-down strikes.

Proponents suggested the financing of a $1,000,000,000 housing program out of relief funds with a cut in Works Progress expenses to meet administration warnings that new spending will mean new taxes.

BURNETTE OUT FOR ALDERMAN

Announces for Fifth Ward Seat Now Held by Hobgood

R. Troy Burnette, popular young man of this city today publicly announced his candidacy for alderman from the Fifth Ward, subject to the primary election to be held on May 3.

A. E. Hobgood is at present representative from the ward. Although he has made no public announcement, it is understood he would be in the running.

Should he decide to seek re-election, the city has promise of three contests for aldermanic seats and a two-way race for mayor. This would leave only two of the five posts to be vacated this term without contest. No opposition has been announced either for L. B. Fleming from the First Ward or A. C. Tadlock from the Fourth Ward.

J. Hicks Corey and Jack Spain have announced from the Second Ward post, which will be vacated by Vernon Parrish, who has announced that he would retire from politics.

R. E. Sellers and J. D. Simpson are contesting for the aldermanic seat from the Third Ward, which will be vacated by H. H. Duncan, who has announced for mayor.

Mr. Duncan is opposed by the incumbent, M. K. Blount, who was appointed to the office of mayor by the present Board to fill out the unexpired term of the late Roy C. Flanagan.

Mr. Burnette is the youngest man to enter the race. He is a native of Greenville and is connected with the Carolina Sales Corporation here.

Permit Required For Starting Woods Fire

R. W. King, Pitt county fire warden, today again called attention to the new statute enacted by the 1937 General Assembly making it unlawful to start a fire in woodlands under the protection of the State Forest Service or within 500 feet of such protected area between April 1 and June 15 without first obtaining a permit.

The permits may be secured from any of the 16 wardens located in the county. These wardens may be located by a yellow sign in front of their homes with the words "State Forest Fire Warden" written thereon.

Anyone desiring further information on the new law may get full information by contacting Mr. King.

PAN-AMERICAN DAY OBSERVED

President Addresses Governing Board of Pan-American Union of 21 American Republics On Best Methods To Avoid War

Washington, April 14.—(AP)—President Roosevelt said today continued maintenance and improvement of Democratic mutual confidence and positive cooperation form the most important guarantees of a durable world peace.

The President, addressing the governing board of the Pan-American union of 21 American Republics in observance of Pan-American day, asked a pledge to give practical effect to the 19 agreements to advance peace, trade and purchase, reached at the recent conference at Buenos Aires.

He recalled his own attendance at the conference and told the gathering of diplomats in the white marble Pan-American building near the White House:

"The deepest impression which I carried away was the potent of the unity of the Americas—in developing Democratic institutions in the new world and, by example, in helping the cause of world peace."

"Democracy can not thrive in an atmosphere of international insecurity. Such insecurity breeds militarism, regimentation and the denial of freedom of speech, of peaceful assembly and of religion. Such insecurity challenges the ideals of democracy based on the free choice of government by the people themselves."

"And as a logical development of the Americas believe that the continued maintenance and improvement of democracy constitute the most important guarantee of international peace."

The Americas, he said, had reason for profound satisfaction in the "great gains" in national economy as well as in their international relations since he made his "good neighbor" speech before the United States four years ago.

Spanish Civil War Topic At College Forum Discussion

Dr. Woodhouse Declares That Revolution So Complex No One Seems Able To Agree on Issues

"The Spanish Revolution" was the subject of Dr. Woodhouse, professor of Political Science from the University of North Carolina, who was the guest speaker this morning at the weekly open forum which is connected with a course arranged by M. L. Wright, head director of the Sociology Department of the College. Several of the classes in history and government participated in the forum.

"The Great Revolution is so complex that no one seems to agree on its issues," Dr. Woodhouse says. "Even the Spanish people themselves cannot agree."

He compared the Spanish people with other nationalities. The chief characteristic of the English people, he said, is that they are a moderate people the French are characterized by the word—systematic, while the Spanish are widely known as being reckless.

He believes that Spain is a nation committing suicide, for no matter who wins, it will take Spain hundreds of years to recover from this war.

He grouped the people of Spain into many groups ranging from the very lowest of the masses to the highest aristocracy and pointed out that the cause of this rebellion is the oppression of the masses for so many years by the higher classes.

"Revolutions in Spain have been numerous and where we have an election in our country they have a revolution in Spain," he said.

At the close of this talk the opportunity was given to the students to ask any questions about the Revolution in Spain.

GREEN WRITES ISLAND STORY

Pageant to Be Presented at Gala Roanoke Celebration

Manteo, N. C., April 14.—It's a unique historical event, indeed, which can exist the dramatic enthusiasm of such a notable theatrical figure as Paul Green, of The University of North Carolina, Broadway and the movie lots of Hollywood.

But for the 356 celebration of the birth of the first white child of English parentage in America, Virginia Dare, Paul Green, whose play in Abraham's Bosom won the Pulitzer Prize in 1927, has written "The Lost Colony." This dramatic pageant will tell poignantly the tragic story of Sir Walter Raleigh's effort at colonizing Virginia, the first extensive attempt at stabilizing New World development.

Almost two hundred actors, professional and amateur, will be directed in this pageant by no less a personage than Professor Frederick H. Koch, also of the University of North Carolina and father of America's Little Theatre movement. Of Fort Raleigh on Roanoke Island, Against the authentic background on a specially constructed stage, utilizing scenically the waters of Roanoke Sound, Paul Green's lines and action will be the feature of a celebration extending from July 4 to September 6, Labor Day, and reaching its climax on August 18, the birthday of Virginia Dare. This work of art will be presented several times each week.

Basing his play on the mystery surrounding the disappearance of Sir Walter's colony, during the absence of its leader, Governor White, Professor Green takes issue with the contention of some historians that this first colony, started in 1587, was ultimately assimilated into the Croatan Indians.

Four new buildings in the restoration program of Fort Raleigh are now under construction as a part of the extensive preparations for the reception of thousands of historically-minded tourists who are already inquiring concerning the celebration.

Many notable Virginia families have contributed colonial relics to the museum of Virginia which is being established at Fort Raleigh as a feature of the restoration program.

The President of the United States, the governors of the forty-eight states, and other nationally distinguished men and women have been invited to participate in this commemorative of a most significant historical event. A number of these have signified their intention of being present.

Allen Gwyn Holds Inside Track For State Court Post

Stated to Be Named Superior Court Judge in 21st Judicial District Created by Assembly

Reflector Bureau, Raleigh, April 13.—At the present time, Solicitor Allen H. Gwynn of the Eleventh Judicial District is regarded as having the inside track for the appointment as Superior Court Judge in the new Twenty-first Judicial District, created by the 1937 general assembly, although the appointment of the new judge and solicitor are not expected until late in June.

For the new district was created as of July 1, Senator S. Gilmer Sparger of Stokes county is also regarded as being first in line for the appointment as solicitor. It is known that Floyd Crouse of Alleghany county would like very much to be appointed solicitor in the Eleventh district, while some reports also are that Ira Johnson of Ashe county is in a receptive mood towards it, though some of Johnson's friends here say that he is not a candidate for this post and is backing Crouse for it.

Most observers here, however, are inclined to believe that two Winston-Salem lawyers known to be receptive candidates for the job of solicitor in the new Eleventh district, have a much better chance at getting it than Crouse or Johnson. They are Earl McMichael and Forrest Miles, both of Winston-Salem. It is being pointed out that Crouse was not a "Hoey man" in the primaries but supported Dr. Ralph W. McDonald instead, also that in order to be eligible for an appointment by Governor Clyde R. Hoey, the applicant must have been an "original Hoey man," which means he must have supported Hoey in the first primaries. It is also understood that seekers of appointments must also have the indorsement of the Hoey chairman in the county of which he is a resident, also an indorsement from Huert Olive, Mr. Hoey's campaign manager. If this is the case, most observers agree that Crouse has little or no chance of getting the job.

Two other known seekers of the appointment as judge in the new twenty-first district are E. C. Bivens of Mount Airy and J. M. Sharp of Reidsville, while there are undoubtedly other applicants. But most observers believe that Gwynn, who is from Reidsville, is more likely to get the appointment than any one else.

It was a fine tribute paid to Senator E. G. Flanagan when Judge Cranmer in court here this week declared that the people of North Carolina owed the Senator a vote of thanks for his untiring efforts in behalf of the anti-slot machine law enacted by the recent session of the legislature. Under the law sponsored by Senator Flanagan, North Carolina can rid itself of the slot machine evil after June 30 this year if the enforcement officers will see to it that the law is carried out.

The criminal term of court, started here Monday, ended yesterday for lack of cases on the docket to be heard. This is the first time in many years that the court docket here has been even close to being caught up and it speaks well for the court officials who have been exerting a special effort of late to clear the docket. When cases remain on the court docket for long periods, usually justice is not done when the cases finally come to trial. Now that the docket is about clear it is to be hoped that the officials will try to keep it that way.

Washington — John L. Lewis is rapidly being transformed into an act of congress.

That may be carrying an analogy far, but not too far. Actually he has been stuffed into the new revised Guffey bill to take the place of the part carved out by the Supreme Court.

There is no provision in it for labor, or seemingly none. Yet congress confidently expects that John L. Lewis will see to it that labor gets its cut out of any improvement in the bituminous coal industry brought about through authority to regulate prices and production. His recent success in getting a pay raise for his miners indicates the Lewis part of the Guffey-Lewis act will work.

Just to make certain Lewis and his miners will have a hand in developments, the bill provides that a labor representative sit on each of the 23 district boards it creates. The coal industry will provide the other two. These boards will have authority to bring together all the factors going into determining the cost of production of coal. Recommendations of these boards then are to be given special weight by the federal bituminous coal commission in saying what should be the minimum price of coal at the mine.

To the labor spokesman on each board will fall the job of including a fair wage for labor in the cost of coal. Back of him will be John L. Lewis and his miners.

To finance the act a tax of one cent a ton on coal at the mine is imposed. This is roughly one-half of one per cent of the usual $2 a ton mine price.

If any coal mine owner refuses to abide by terms of the act and insists on selling at cut rates if he likes, the law provides a 20 per cent penalty tax.

There is another provision in the bill designed to protect consumers. If the coal mines should attempt to take advantage of an emergency shortage of coal and hike prices upward, the federal coal commission can impose a price ceiling beyond which prices may not climb. Just how nicely the federal board can balance production against consumption will be discovered only by experience.

Man About Manhattan

New York — The opening of the "King Cole" bar at the St. Regis brings back a bit of the sentimental, roccoco part of New York that has been missing a long time. Surely you remember this extraordinary Maxfield Parrish mural which used to hang in the old Knickerbocker, at 42nd street and Broadway, where Caruso was wont to have his spaghetti and Diamond Jim Brady his orange juice — where George M. Cohan, the late DeWolf Hopper, and others of like celebrity tarried under the affectionate gaze of the old monarch.

John Jacob Astor paid Parrish $50,000 to paint this canvas especially for the Knickerbocker bar. What is more important, it quickly became famous, and now there is no price that could lure it away from the Astor estate, so great has become its sentimental value.

Astor was appreciative of the work his friend had done, and several months after old "Cole" had proved the town's delight, he sent him an additional check for $10,000 just as a measure of appreciation.

This was in 1905, and the King hung there until prohibition drove most of New York behind closed doors. Later, the King bobbed up at various places, but the surroundings were never entirely compatible. Then, when the Astors decided to bring the old King out again, they built the bar especially for him — that is, they hung the mural and then built the bar around it.

A minor problem at the time was the 30 years' accumulation of dirt on the classic features of the monarch, his fiddlers, pages, guards, and assembly.

Usually varnish remover is the cleaning agent for such canvases. Had they gone ahead with these plans, tragedy would have resulted. In mixing his paints, Parrish used varnish instead of oil. It doesn't take much imagination to guess what would happen if the remover had been dabbed on the canvas. As a matter of fact, the artist was compelled, grumbling every step of the way, to quit his Vermont hide-away and come to New York to oversee its cleaning.

With fitting ceremony the old King was undraped and most of the town's better artists, close friends of the monarch and of Parrish, dropped around to make obeisance and reaffirm their allegiance. Among those have been Carl Muelter, James Montgomery Flagg, Dean Cornwell, McClelland Barclay, John LaGatta, Bradshaw Graffell. Each lifts a mug of foaming brew to his highness on the wall — certainly the finest and most sentimentally treasured mural of its kind in existence today.

WHERE THEY BELONG

Letters Of Max Gardner Appear To Be Prophetic

Reflector Bureau, Raleigh, April 11 — A lot has happened in the last eight years and a lot of things have been forgotten since times began to get better after the dark days of the depression, right after former Governor O. Max Gardner went out of office and finished an administration that started in at the peak of the 1929 boom and then tobogganed to the bottom of the depression.

There is also a lot that should be remembered about these years, and the darkness of some of the days and some of the almost prophetic utterances made by Governor Gardner during that period, in which the proud ship of state which he mounted as Governor in January, 1929, almost wallowed into bankruptcy before he turned the tiller over to Governor J. C. B. Ehringhaus in 1931.

Many of Governor Gardner's colorful utterances in speeches, letters and other state documents are now being recalled and quoted with much interest, especially those of a prophetic nature, as a result of the release today of the volume of "Papers of Oliver Max Gardner" just off the press, and published by the Council of State. The letters were compiled by Edwin Gill, at present commissioner of paroles and was private secretary to Governor Gardner from June 1, 1931 to January 7, 1933 and edited by David LeRoy Corbett, chief library assistant in the N. C. Historical Commission.

That Governor Gardner well realized he was taking office at the end of the state's great joy ride and spending spree and that he was facing a most serious period of readjustment, is indicated in many of his letters. In a letter to J. C. Carr of Wilmington, written January 24, 1930, the Governor said: "The advent of my administration really marked the beginning of the era of paying back that which we have spent. . . . In my judgment, the next general assembly will be faced with problems more serious than those which have faced any legislature in recent years. Local government, education, fiscal policy and tax reforms are some of the problems which will be to the forefront, in my opinion. . . ."

In a letter to B. B. Gossett of Charlotte, dated Feb. 1, 1930, Governor Gardner said: "I am satisfied that I am facing the gravest situation that has confronted North Carolina since the Civil War," while in another letter to Gossett, dated January 23, 1930, Governor Gardner said: "My job is most unenviable. It is mighty easy to raise salaries and to experience the joy of spending, but God pity the bill collector—and yet that is exactly my business today."

In another letter to Gossett, in December, 1931, Governor Gardner was fully aware that conditions were getting worse and worse, when he said:

"It seems to me that we have been steadily slipping since October. I had hoped that we might finally strike rock bottom and from that point ascertain our bearings and determine the depths to which we had fallen. . . . I had to borrow $3,000,000 for the state this week. Our bankers in New York were so inquisitive and autocratic that they hesitated for a few days and then assumed the air of rendering a great favor by letting us have the money at 6 per cent. They had just turned down seven states and pretended to pay us a great compliment by letting us have it at all."

But all of Governor Gardner's letters are not as serious and as doleful as these, written when the depression was rapidly nearing its depths. For in January, 1932, after a trip to Washington and New York, Governor Gardner issued a statement in which he said: "In some respects, North Carolina was the last state to feel the effects of the business panic. We had made comprehensive plans to adjust our operations to its demands even before its ravages began to shrink revenues. We have put our house in order. We have not only adjusted our operations to live through it, but when its weight lifts, this state will surely be one of the first. . . to push ahead with accelerated progress."

It is in his letters to Franklin D. Roosevelt, then Governor of New York, that many of Governor Gardner's letters now seem to be strangely and accurately prophetic. In one letter to Roosevelt, written in July, 1932, Governor Gardner says: "Demagogues do not create movements, they merely ride them," and again "if the leadership of the nation is so blind that it dismisses the discontent and restlessness of our people as springing from nothing fundamental, I predict a tidal wave of aroused public opinion which will bring about not only a new type of thought and speech, but in fact, a new kind of government."

In another letter to Governor Roosevelt about this same time, Governor Gardner said: "It is my opinion that the American people are on the move and I firmly believe that the liberalism of Roosevelt, if he goes far enough, is bound to have a stabilizing effect in the process of preparing the people for an opportunity of to express their convictions concerning their government in November, we would today be in the midst of a violent social and political revolution." Another paragraph in the same letter states:

"My chief criticism of Mr. Hoover is that he always acts but acts too late. He sees the cloud on the horizon; he watches it gather violence until it reaches the proportions of a tornado; and then he commences to make plans to save the public from its destructive force."

"I do not contend that the Republican party created the depression, but I do say that after the panic commenced, the leadership of the Republican party utterly failed, from the President down, to guide this nation with wisdom or foresight. I do think there has ever been in the history of the country a greater blundering, a more inadequate concept, a more hesitant policy or a more vacillating performance of high public duty than has characterized the whole administration of President Hoover."

And in another later speech on "New Conditions Demand New Remedies," Governor Gardner said: "We not only anticipated the future—we spent it."

UNDECIDED ON HIGHWAY JOBS

Hoey Rapidly Sifting Applications For Post, However

Reflector Bureau.
Raleigh, April 13.—Although Governor Clyde R. Hoey has as yet given no indication as to who he expects to appoint either as chairman of the new State Highway and Public Works Commission or as members, he said today that he has already begun the process of elimination among the 70 or more applicants or "indorsees" and that he hopes to announce his final decision with regard to the highway body some time next week. He had at first planned to announce some of his appointments this week, but has since decided to postpone all appointments until next week, including the members of the new state liquor board, he said today.

"I find there are still some individuals and delegations who want to be heard, with the result that I have decided to postpone all appointments until after April 15," Governor Hoey said. "But after that date I do not intend to hear any more delegations or consider any more indorsements. In fact, I have already heard most of the delegations that wanted to be heard and the pressure is already beginning to let up somewhat."

The conviction continues to grow in most circles here that Capus M. Waynick will be reappointed chairman of the reorganized commission of 11 members, but that not more than three and possibly not more than one of the members of the present commission will be reappointed. The belief that Waynick will be reappointed is based largely on the fact that the group opposed to Waynick now seems to be entirely without a candidate in opposition to him, since the candidacy of George W. Coan, Jr., boomeranged and blew up, also that they seem unable to find another candidate. It is known that several persons have been approached and assured of the backing of the anti-Waynick group if they would consent to become receptive candidates for the chairmanship of the commission, but that without exception they have refused to let themselves be brought out in opposition to Waynick. As a result, most observers now feel that Waynick has virtually no opposition and that he will be reappointed.

There is far less unanimity of opinion, however, with regard to who will be appointed as the ten members of the new commission, who will serve under the chairman. Most observers agree that only three members of the present six-member commission who have any chance of being reappointed are E. F. Allen of Lenoir, James A. Hardison of Salisbury, and Ross M. Sigmon of Salisbury, while some think that only one of these three will be reappointed. Of these three present members, the belief is that Allen is more likely to be re-named than any one else, do to the fact that he has been on the present commission for a shorter time than any of the others, also that there is no opposition to him in the counties surrounding Caldwell.

Scarcely any one here who has been following the trend of things in connection with the highway commission appointments expects the three other members of the commission to be reappointed. These three are Frank W. Miller of Waynesville, Julian Wood of Edenton and W. C. Woodard of Rocky Mount.

In the far western district, west of Asheville, J. H. Yelton of Hendersonville is regarded as having a good chance at one of the district highway appointments, although Walter Mauney of Murphy is also said to be very strongly indorsed. The fact that Judge Frank S. Hill, one of the three special judges, is from Murphy is regarded as being favorable to the appointment of Yelton rather than Mauney, however. It is also known that a strong campaign is being put on by Asheville and Buncombe county for the appointment of either E. C. (Deacon) Green of J. G. Stikelather, both of Asheville. But the recent appointment of A. Hall Johnston of Buncombe as Superior Court Judge to succeed Judge P. A. McElroy, is regarded as making the appointment of any one from Buncombe as unlikely.

In the Charlotte sector, it is known that Thomas W. Bird, former state commander of the American Legion, is being urged for one of the posts on the commission, but the chances of the various candidates in this section are regarded as dependent upon whether Jim Hardison is reappointed, it is generally agreed. The middle Piedmont district, or rather the counties in this district, are reported to be urging the reappointment of S. S. Simon, just as the counties in the Caldwell county area are said to be urging the reappointment of Allen. In the north central Piedmont sector, R. L. Harris of Roxboro or George Bacon of Yanceyville, Caswell county, are regarded as being in line for district commissioner. It is expected that this district will probably include both Guilford and Durham counties.

In the northeastern district, N. Collin Barnes of Murfreesboro, Hertford county, is regarded as having an excellent chance at getting the district appointment. In the eastern Piedmont area, D. B. McCrary of Asheboro is being mentioned for a member of the commission if another district is set up in this sector.

TEACHERS SET FOR TWO TILTS

College To Play On Thursday and Saturday This Week

Teachers College has two hard baseball games on the local diamond this week. The Pirates have won four and lost none. They will find plenty of opposition from the Duke B team Thursday and from Oak Ridge College Saturday. The Duke B team is made up of men just a bit shy of varsity ability. Oak Ridge is coached by Colonel Earl Holt. The College always has a good team. Many fine players go to Oak Ridge just to be coached by him. Harrington and Holland will likely pitch the two games for the teachers, with Martin, Wells and Roebuck ready for relief duty. The Thursday game with Duke B will start at 3:15 in order to permit the high school visitors to leave for home a bit earlier. The Saturday game with Oak Ridge will be called at the regular time 3:30.

Sport Slants

Oddly enough, Manager Charlie Grimm of the Chicago Cubs, who was a mighty fine first-baseman in his day, is having a headache finding someone to cover the initial sack in a satisfactory manner. A couple of seasons ago the answer to his prayers for a first-baseman appeared in the form of a high school youngster, one Phil Cavarretta of Chicago. Grimm gleefully retired to the dugout. It was too good to be true. Cavarretta did fair enough for a while, but it was not long before Grimm had to get back into the Kinston is regarded as almost sure to be named a member of the commission from a district composed of a group of counties surrounding Lenoir, while Representative E. A. Rasberry of Snow Hill is also reported to have strong backing in that section. Both Senator J. H. Clark of Bladen county and Clyde Council, of the same county, are regarded as being under consideration from the southeastern tier of counties, although some think Governor Hoey will offer a more important post to Senator Clark. In the district extending from Pender county south and east to New Hanover and including Duplin, Sampson, Onslow and possibly Jones, although no definite districts have as yet been created, Robert Grady Johnson of Burgaw, Speaker of the House in the 1935 general assembly, is being strongly urged for district commissioner. No one knows yet, of course, just how the state is going to be divided up or what counties will be included in what districts, since the law does not fix any definite districts. But most observers believe that Governor Gardner has already divided the state up into ten tentative districts and that the commissioners, when appointed, will officially set up the districts in accordance with the wishes of the Governor.

fray. Last season Grimm was convinced he would have to do something about the first-base situation. Cavarretta would not do. Grimm, with 20 years of service to his credit, was through.

A trade was pitched with the St. Louis Cards. Chicago gave up Pitches Lon Warneke for first-baseman Jimmy (The Ripper) Collins and Wildman Leroy Parmelee. After that, Grimm sat back to figure out how his Cubs would win the National league pennant. On paper that was easy. Collins would cover first, and at the same time would give the Bruins more punch at the plate.

Came spring. And training sessions, Grimm installed Collins at first and told Cavarretta to go chase around the outfield. That's the way things stood until the Cubs broke camp and started the exhibition games that lead to Chicago. Collins failed to show any great power at the plate, while the supposedly weak-hitting Cavarretta fairly blasted the cover off the ball and appeared to be covering centerfield well. In fact, Phil did so well that he kept Joe Marty, $75,000 rookie outfielder from the San Francisco Seals, on the bench.

Grimm has given some thought to returning Cavarretta to first unless Collins produces at the plate. It is evident that Joe Marty is not another Joe Di Maggio. At least he's not on what he has shown the Cubs this spring. He earned his chance with Chicago by winning the coast batting crown with 358.

The big moment of his career to date came in the 1935 playoff for the Pacific coast league pennant. In the deciding game of the playoff series, two on base, none out, score tied, Marty went up to bat with everyone in the park expecting him to lay down a bunt. On orders from Manager Lefty O'Doul Marty took a full cut at the first pitch and belted the ball into the bleachers for a home run—and the pennant.

ANNUAL STYLE SHOW PLANNED

Affair to Be Held At State College On April 22nd

Raleigh, April 14.—On April 22nd the tenth annual Style Show, conducted by the Textile School of North Carolina State College and the home economics departments of North Carolina colleges for women will be held at Raleigh.

Started in 1928 in order to aid in popularizing cotton and rayon products, this Style Show has developed into one of the important events of the year at State College and has materially benefited Textile students because it affords them an opportunity to study the type of fabrics which appeal to young women.

This year the cooperating institutions are:

Appalachian State Teachers College, Boone; Catawba College, Salisbury; Elon College, Elon; Flora Macdonald College, Red Springs; Greensboro College, Greensboro; High Point College, High Point; Lenoir College, Lenoir; Meredith College, Raleigh; Peace Junior College, Raleigh; Salem College, Winston-Salem; Woman's College, University of North Carolina, Greensboro.

Fabrics designed and woven in the Textile School have been supplied to 138 young women who, as a part of their classroom work in home economics, will make costumes which they will model at the Style Show. Thus, these annual Style Shows demonstrate to the public the high calibre of work done by the Textile students at State College and by young women in the home economics departments of the cooperating institutions.

It is interesting to note that 117 of these young women are from North Carolina and that their homes are located in 80 different cities, towns and villages scattered from one end of the state to the other.

HOLLYWOOD SIGHTS & SOUNDS

Hollywood — The strange case of Edward Norris can be blamed, in a way, on the show Taylor. Or you may, if you prefer, ascribe it lightly to the vagaries of movie fortune.

Norris, who looks a bit like Taylor — only a bit because he isn't pretty — has been under contract to Metro as long as Taylor has. Norris's claim to film fame is based on one bang-up lead in a snatch story, "Show Them No Mercy." Taylor's — but why go into that?

After "Show Them No Mercy" it looked as if Norris would get places in a hurry. Instead he retired to the comparative oblivion of his studio stock list, played a few roles in minor films, and waited. Darryl Zanuck, who had borrowed him for his bit performance, wanted to buy his contract. So did other producers, but Metro refused to sell except at prohibitive terms.

So it was that Mervyn LeRoy, looking for "unknowns" for "The Deep South," picked on Norris. If you think a lad who has cycled in one picture cannot qualify as "unknown" you don't know Hollywood. Norris is as obscure as Taylor would have been if Metro had not cashed in quickly on "Society Doctor."

The obvious conclusion is that if the studio had no Taylor, Norris — or some other boy — might draw a "build up." There is only one "teacher's pet" in every classroom.

From Philadelphia, son of a noted medic, Norris signed up for a stage show locally. Rouben Mamoulian spotted him, and eventually the director put him into "Queen Christina." Six months later he joined the Metro stock company. There he served as test partner for some hundreds of feminine applicants for film jobs.

Most of what he knows about acting he attributes to Akim Tamiroff. Before Tamiroff checked, he and Norris exchanged instruction. Norris worked on Akim's English diction, and Tamiroff on Norris's histrionics. Tamiroff from the Moscow art theater, was a hard teacher. Day after day, for a month he had Norris open a door to "greet a long-lost friend." After a few days Norris loathed the mythical friend, and most days he left the lesson swearing he'd never return. But he always came back for more.

EVE'S ORCHARD

MARGARET WIDEMER

Chapter 42 Judge Runs Away

FOR this little while the knowledge that George loved her, even though he was going to marry Ellen, was upholding her, making her happy. But she faced the fact; it would not keep her happy. When he actually married Ellen, Eve did not know how she was going to bear it. Ellen adored him. She would be his wise, devoted wife. He was easy-tempered and kind. This was real life.

The inevitable thing would happen; after a while Ellen and their children and their common interests would be everything to him. His love for Eve would inevitably fade to a pretty memory, a pressed appleblossom in a book opened once a year. The thought wrenched at her.

And Denny? She knew the worst of Denny and the best. They had been playmates and comrades and sweethearts in that bright hurried routine; city life which seemed now like a dimly recalled movie. They could be again. She had loved him; the love might return. If it didn't, she could play her hand all the better.

It had only taken a moment to think all this. She opened her lips to speak; and then Denny laughed and snatched her into his arms. And she knew at the touch that there was no question of better or worse, wiser or more foolish. She could not marry Dennis Carter. She moved slowly definitely from him.

"No, Denny."

"Come, Eve, it isn't like you to be so resentful. Any man would jib at marrying with a nine-year-old boy hung round his neck! I've come back and I'm sorry and the water's over the milldam. That's all that matters, if you're the generous Eve I love. As for Judge, if he isn't well now he never will be, and after all, they're his parents. I'll finance his trip to Hollywood with my own fair hands! They're in Hawaii."

"Your gossip Marilyn seems to have omitted a confidence. The old lady who was their transportation ticket is still in the hospital, when she found out she had to stay there she didn't keep them on in her house. Mitzl had a letter asking for a loan."

"Yes, it's The House"

"HUSH!"

Eve had heard Judge coming in. She turned. The child stood in the doorway, rather pale. She hoped he had not heard anything.

"Darling, speak to Denny and then do something for me, will you?" she said hurriedly. "Ellen is coming back for supper and I'm late. Set the table and put in some potatoes to bake like a good boy."

"How do you do, Denny. All right. Eve, I'll fix the potatoes," said Judge. He went, and she heard him open and shut the kitchen door.

"Thank goodness," Denny said, stretching his arms in the late sunlight. "Eve darling, we're through having it out, aren't we? Come over here and be sweet to Denny."

She stood quiet in the radiance of the tall window. From where she was she could see the gleam of the old crossed swords in the dining room over the painting of Colonel Mannersfield; the little wooden painting of Patricia Denton, the plainly framed photograph of her own Aunt Lina by the door, the beautiful curve of the old stair itself. They were behind her as she answered.

"It isn't that I won't marry you, Den, but that I can't make myself marry you any more than I can make myself want to be a surgeon or a policeman! Don't you understand? I've turned back into the person I really am. You never knew her. And she never knew you."

"It's the house? This damn country place has got you. Once back in New York you'd be sane again!"

She nodded. "Yes. The place—and what it stands for. You don't want a house—you don't want roots. You live in a rootless world. I can't any more. I'm the sort of person you and the crowd used to think was funny, Den. I

ETIQUETTE

By JOAN DURHAM AP Feature Service Writer

One of the cardinal virtues of the modern woman, says Ford Frick, president of the National Baseball League, is that she knows how to behave at a baseball game.

"Ladies' Day," which has grown to be an institution with many baseball leagues, has brought about this innovation, he says.

"Dressed for do's and don'ts on the subject of how a feminine fan should behave at a baseball game, Mr. Frick contributed a number of the following. 'Pap,' sports cartoonist, rounded out the list:

Don't complain when your partner thrusts a bag of peanuts at you at the very beginning of the game. Hold them in reserve. There are such things as 'extra innings' in baseball — and dinner may be a long time off.

Don't be surprised if your escort engages everybody within yelling distance in conversation. In case of an argument walk... don't run... to the nearest exit.

Every fan has his favorite spot, and your escort is likely to pick out the most uncomfortable place on the field—where there's everything from sun to soot in your eyes. What's more he'll expect you to like it.

If you must ask questions, be sure to ask the right ones. It's all right, for instance, to ask about the batting averages of some of the outstanding players. (If he says any of them had 300 or more, turn on that entranced expression that gets him — and leave it on.) But keep in mind that many a romance has been blighted by the wrong question at the wrong moment.

Join in all outbursts of noise, being careful to keep in harmony. (That means don't yell for the opposite team. But it's perfectly all right to clap, whistle or otherwise try to unnerve the opposing pitcher or ride the umpire.)

Stand up when everybody else does. But before starting to leave the ball park be sure the game is

Judge Leaves A Note

SHE watched, presently, his tall swinging figure going down the steps and wondered that she had no recollection, no uncertainty. For she knew there was long lonely pain ahead of her. Even tonight would be hard, if Ellen made George come back here with her. But in spite of it all Eve knew she had done the only thing she could do.

The telephone caught her again. Was the house really burnt right down? Was the silver all lost? Had Lance Seymour really tried to drag her, shrieking, into the burning building? Was there insurance? And a dozen biscuits, and two squash pies, and a couple of raspberry jams—

It was fully an hour before the shrieking instrument let her go. She hurried into the kitchen. The dining-room table was set, the potatoes were done. She set them above the range and began on the supper as Ellen and Uncle Henry came in. Ellen was gay and flushed still.

"I found Uncle Henry rooting in the ruins with the rest of the village, so I rooted him out and dragged him home," she said. "George wouldn't come, he's gone back to the inn. Where's Judge? I have something for him."

But Judge was nowhere to be found, though Uncle Henry tried the pigeon and halloed through the orchard and telephoned the inn.

"Not like him. Well," Uncle Henry said, "well, we'll just eat without him."

Had he overheard something, Eve wondered suddenly, and had he gone off to cry it out alone in his room? She ran upstairs, calling him through the halls, knocking at his door, finally entering.

It was empty and neat. On the bureau stood what she had half feared to see. An envelope addressed with pathetic neatness to her.

Dear Eve and Uncle Henry:

I am going to thumb to Hollywood. Do not worry as I have my $875. My pig is for you Uncle Henry, I am sorry I can't be here when she has little pigs. Please divide the Pig money towards my board. I love you and am grateful that's why I'm going. I still am going to be a Supreme Court judge if possible. Love, Oliver Featherstone.

Uncle Henry, after one exclamation of pity and dismay, took command when had read it.

"Ellen, call up the police station and have them send out a radio alarm. Then tell George to send somebody from the inn to hunt. Eve, go tell Adriano to take the car and follow down to the state road. What's all this about?"

She told them what she supposed, as briefly as she could. They had not known before the reason for her break with Denny. They exclaimed a little, but in the face of Judge's running away none of it seemed very important.

"Well, no use trying to find him on foot, he's had a lift before this," Uncle Henry said. "Still, I'd be happier hunting. I—I kind of felt like he belonged to me."

He drank a cup of coffee hastily and plodded down to the road.

Adriano presently returned on foot with the news that George had taken the car over and was gone down the state road. The police station had sent out a "calling all cars" alarm, and half the village was hunting as well. The two girls could do nothing but wait, wakeful and frightened, till at two in the morning they gave up and went to bed.

ETIQUETTE

By JOAN DURHAM AP Feature Service Writer

One of the cardinal virtues of the modern woman, says Ford Frick, president of the National Baseball League, is that she knows how to behave at a baseball game.

"Ladies' Day," which has grown to be an institution with many baseball leagues, has brought about this innovation, he says.

"Dressed for do's and don'ts on the subject of how a feminine fan should behave at a baseball game, Mr. Frick contributed a number of the following. 'Pap,' sports cartoonist, rounded out the list:

Don't complain when your partner thrusts a bag of peanuts at you at the very beginning of the game. Hold them in reserve. There are such things as 'extra innings' in baseball — and dinner may be a long time off.

Don't be surprised if your escort engages everybody within yelling distance in conversation. In case of an argument walk... don't run... to the nearest exit.

Every fan has his favorite spot, and your escort is likely to pick out the most uncomfortable place on the field—where there's everything from sun to soot in your eyes. What's more he'll expect you to like it.

If you must ask questions, be sure to ask the right ones. It's all right, for instance, to ask about the batting averages of some of the outstanding players. (If he says any of them had 300 or more, turn on that entranced expression that gets him — and leave it on.) But keep in mind that many a romance has been blighted by the wrong question at the wrong moment.

Join in all outbursts of noise, being careful to keep in harmony. (That means don't yell for the opposite team. But it's perfectly all right to clap, whistle or otherwise try to unnerve the opposing pitcher or ride the umpire.)

Stand up when everybody else does. But before starting to leave the ball park be sure the game is

Judge Leaves A Note

SHE watched, presently, his tall swinging figure going down the steps and wondered that she had no recollection, no uncertainty. For she knew there was long lonely pain ahead of her. Even tonight would be hard, if Ellen made George come back here with her. But in spite of it all Eve knew she had done the only thing she could do.

The telephone caught her again. Was the house really burnt right down? Was the silver all lost? Had Lance Seymour really tried to drag her, shrieking, into the burning building? Was there insurance? And a dozen biscuits, and two squash pies, and a couple of raspberry jams—

It was fully an hour before the shrieking instrument let her go. She hurried into the kitchen. The dining-room table was set, the potatoes were done. She set them above the range and began on the supper as Ellen and Uncle Henry came in. Ellen was gay and flushed still.

"I found Uncle Henry rooting in the ruins with the rest of the village, so I rooted him out and dragged him home," she said. "George wouldn't come, he's gone back to the inn. Where's Judge? I have something for him."

But Judge was nowhere to be found, though Uncle Henry tried the pigeon and halloed through the orchard and telephoned the inn.

"Not like him. Well," Uncle Henry said, "well, we'll just eat without him."

Had he overheard something, Eve wondered suddenly, and had he gone off to cry it out alone in his room? She ran upstairs, calling him through the halls, knocking at his door, finally entering.

It was empty and neat. On the bureau stood what she had half feared to see. An envelope addressed with pathetic neatness to her.

Dear Eve and Uncle Henry:

I am going to thumb to Hollywood. Do not worry as I have my $875. My pig is for you Uncle Henry, I am sorry I can't be here when she has little pigs. Please divide the Pig money towards my board. I love you and am grateful that's why I'm going. I still am going to be a Supreme Court judge if possible. Love, Oliver Featherstone.

Uncle Henry, after one exclamation of pity and dismay, took command when had read it.

"Ellen, call up the police station and have them send out a radio alarm. Then tell George to send somebody from the inn to hunt. Eve, go tell Adriano to take the car and follow down to the state road. What's all this about?"

She told them what she supposed, as briefly as she could. They had not known before the reason for her break with Denny. They exclaimed a little, but in the face of Judge's running away none of it seemed very important.

"Well, no use trying to find him on foot, he's had a lift before this," Uncle Henry said. "Still, I'd be happier hunting. I—I kind of felt like he belonged to me."

He drank a cup of coffee hastily and plodded down to the road.

Adriano presently returned on foot with the news that George had taken the car over and was gone down the state road. The police station had sent out a "calling all cars" alarm, and half the village was hunting as well. The two girls could do nothing but wait, wakeful and frightened, till at two in the morning they gave up and went to bed.

Judge reluctantly explains, tomorrow, why he ran away.
