

FOE OF CHANGE SEES PASSAGE OF COURT BILL

Opposition Leader Says Act Can be En- acted If Modified

SENATOR ASKS NAME WITHHELD

Sees Victory If Presi- dent Would Accept Two Instead of Six Additional Judges

Washington, April 19.—(AP)—A leader of the Senate opposition to the Roosevelt court bill said today the measure would pass if the President would accept two instead of a potential six additional Supreme Court justices.

The Senator, who asked not to be quoted by name, said a modification would win over enough Democrats who want to get right with their party leader and their constituents to pass the bill.

It was the first time any of the leading opponents of the hotly contested measure had agreed it could be enacted with a provision for increase in the size of the court.

Opposition leaders have insisted they had a solid bloc of 43 votes against the bill and that no measure could pass the Senate with that many fighting opponents.

Labor's non-partisan league will hold mass meetings tonight in 26 cities in support of bill, George Berry, league president, and Attorney General Cummings will give nationwide radio addresses.

Some of the principal foes were undecided whether it would be better strategy for them to vote to cut down the number of new justices or oppose any compromise and force a vote on the bill as it stands.

The measure would permit the appointment of six new justices unless members vote to retire.

To Demand Death Penalty For Murderers Of G-Man

MOVE EXCLUDE LEWIS UNIONS

First Step Would Be To Call Special AF of L Convention

Washington, April 19.—(AP)—A high labor union predicted emphatically today that the American Federation of Labor's executive council, in session here, would move immediately toward expulsion of unions in John L. Lewis Committee for Industrial Organization.

The first step toward expulsion of the C. I. O. unions, now under suspension, would be for the council to call a special convention of the A. F. of L. The labor authority, who asked that his name not be used, said the council would make that move during a three day session which started this morning.

As the council convened, Lewis, president of the United Mine workers, met with members of the C. I. O. executive board to decide upon future policy in the organization of automobile workers.

NEW WALKOUT IS THREATENED IN G.M. PLANTS

Would Be Called In Sympathy With Canadian Strikes

PREMIER FAILS TO END DISPUTE

Union Officials Claim General Motors Broke Pact in Re- gard to Oshawa

(By Associated Press)
Threats of new walkouts from General Motors plants drew the attention of automobile manufacturers and employees today.

Leaders of the Automobile Workers union were reported considering a sympathy walkout in the United States after Premier Mitchell Hepburn failed for the second time to negotiate settlement of the General Motors strike at Oshawa, Ont., where 3,700 workers are idle.

Agents of the John L. Lewis Committee for Industrial Organization were barred from the conferences.

Union officials charged that General Motors had broken two agreements in failing to settle Oshawa strikes.

Hepburn said he had been told C. I. O. organizers were to bring on strikes in two Canadian mining areas.

The Premier warned that any further invasion by the Lewis organization would bring "more drastic combative action than had been instituted to date."

Lewis met in Washington with leaders of the U. A. W. A. to outline plans for organizing the Ford Motor company workers. Ford is the only major producer who so far has not negotiated with the U. A. W. A.

Rose Slated To Be Named To Education Asso. Office

Reflector Bureau.
Raleigh, April 19.—One of the warmest contests in years for the vice presidency of the North Carolina Education Association is in prospect when the association meets in Durham Thursday and Friday of this week for its annual convention and election of officers, according to reports being heard here.

The main contest will be over the vice presidency rather than the presidency, due to the fact that the vice president is by custom always advanced to the presidency. Accordingly, Dr. W. C. Jackson, administrative dean of the Women's College of the University of North Carolina, in Greensboro, will automatically become president of the N. C. Education Association this week, succeeding Miss Oma Clare Lafferty of Charlotte the present president, since Dr. Jackson was elected vice president last year.

The two leading contenders for the vice presidency of the association in this week's meeting are Junius H. Rose, superintendent of the Greenville city schools and Ben L. Smith, superintendent of the Greensboro city schools, former superintendent of the Shelby city schools.

It is generally agreed that Rose has the backing and support of the more liberal group of superintendents and teachers in the association, while Smith has the support of the group of superintendents and educators who for years are conceded

Rebels Preparing Reopen Offensive

Despite Announcement From Insurgent Headquarters, Basques Declare Interrup- tion Means Drive Permanently Halted

(By Associated Press)
Insurgents besiegers of Bilbao drew their lines today for renewal of their offensive after warning the Basque government that 500 artillery pieces were lined up to shell the city's defenders.

Although communications from headquarters of Insurgent General Emilio Mola reported preparations to close the 20-mile gap which separates his army from the besieged, blockaded and near-starving city, Basques declared the interruption meant the drive was permanently halted.

British Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden told the House of Commons today the government was investigating reports that poison gas had been shipped from Hamburg, Germany, to Spain.

Speaking a few hours before the scheduled launching of unique International patrol of Spain by 27 member nations of the Non-Intervention committee, Eden also disclosed that Insurgent General Francisco Franco had notified London his forces would intensify their line-laying at certain Bay of Biscay points.

The British freighter Thorpehall successfully ran the Insurgent blockade arising at the port of Muel in Oviedo province under the protection of three British destroyers. Muel is the port for Gijon about 140 miles west of Bilbao.

Non-intervention officials toured the frontier post to oversee preparations for the combined land and sea patrol of Spain, which starts at midnight tonight.

Mr. Musselwhite is in a two-way contest with L. B. Fleming, the incumbent. With his entry into the campaign contests are assured for four of the five places to be filled this year. The only alderman whose term expires this year who does not have opposition so far is A. C. Tadlock from the Fourth Ward.

Jack Spain and J. Hicks Corey have announced for the post from the Second Ward, to be vacated by Vernon Parrish, who has announced that he is retiring from politics.

The alderman's post from the Third Ward, to be vacated by H. H. Duncan, is being sought by J. D. Simpson and R. E. Sellers. Mr. Duncan is opposed by the incumbent, M. K. Blount, who was appointed to the office to fill the unexpired term of the late Roy C. Flanagan.

A. E. Hobcock, present alderman from the Fifth Ward, is being opposed by R. Troy Barnes.

With the seat on only two weeks off, quiet campaigns are being waged by the various candidates. Aldermen whose terms do not expire this year are J. M. Taft, Dr. M. B. Massey and J. A. Watson. Their terms continue until next year. All three were elected without opposition last summer.

MORE DRIVERS LOSE PERMITS

Total of 168 Revoked Past Week, Many For Driving Drunk

Reflector Bureau.
Raleigh, April 18.—During the week ending April 17, the driving licenses of 168 drivers were revoked by the highway safety division of the Department of Revenue, Arthur Fuik, director of the division, announced today. During the previous week, 140 driving permits were revoked. This brings the total number of revocations now in effect to 9,963, although a total of more than 12,000 driving permits have been revoked since the law went into effect in November, 1935.

Most of the revocations, as usual, were for drunken driving. Director Fuik pointed out, although an increasing number of revocations now are for two convictions of reckless driving or for driving after the revocation of a license. For under the law, it is mandatory for the division to revoke the license of any person twice convicted of reckless driving or of any person convicted of driving after his or her license has been revoked.

Out of the 29 persons whose licenses were revoked April 14, were four who had their revocations extended for an additional year, because of convictions for driving while their original licenses were revoked. These were Eulin B. Hunter of Asheville, who was also convicted of drunken driving; Roy L. Smith of Kannapolis, also convicted again of drunken driving; and Horace T. Shaw, Pinecroft, also convicted of drunken driving, and Archie C. Strickland, Concord, likewise convicted of drunken driving.

One of the licenses revoked April 16, that of Lonnie Grady of Phoenix was for driving after his license had been revoked, while on April 17, the license of Claiborn McKee of Durham was revoked for driving while his license was under suspension.

Virtually all of the other revocations were made following convictions for drunken driving, drunken and hit-and-run driving or for other violations for which the revocation of driving permits is mandatory.

Only Three Minor Wrecks Near City

Several minor accidents occurred near Greenville over the week-end, but no one was seriously injured and only charges of driving to the left of the center of the highway resulted from the wrecks.

Patrol C. R. Williams said this morning he was preparing to swear out warrants charging three operators with violation of traffic laws.

The three, all facing charges of driving to the left of the center of the highway, are Larry Barnhill of Stokes; Mrs. Ruby Ashby, Durham, and A. C. Rolano of Greenville, Route No. 4.

LEADERS MEET TO TALK OVER NEW FINANCES

President Calls Ad- ministration Chief- tains to Parley

INCOME DECLINE CAUSING WORRY

Revised Budget Fig- ures Expected To Be Presented with Mes- sage on Relief

Washington, April 19.—(AP)—President Roosevelt called 10 administration leaders to the White House today to go over a new set of budget figures for the next fiscal year.

Among those invited to the conference, to be held late in the afternoon, were Vice President Garner, Acting Budget Director Daniel Bell, Speaker Bankhead and Secretary Morgenthau.

Facing the administration is the possibility that the fiscal year, beginning July 1, will be ended with a deficit rather than a balanced budget. President Roosevelt provisionally forecast the balanced budget when he reviewed the situation in January.

Income since then, however, has failed to come up to revenue estimates and the President was represented as hoping he would be able to keep relief and other costs down to a minimum to avoid a large deficit.

The revised budget figures are expected to be presented to congress when the President sends up his relief message in two or three days.

Chairman Jones (D. Tex.) of the Agriculture Committee informed the House Rules Committee; he would oppose any attempt to write into the farm tenancy bill authority for the government to purchase farms for resale to tenants.

Sen. Vandenberg (R. Mich.) objected into Congressional discussions of relief needs an assertion that current estimates of the jobless were perhaps 5,000,000 too high.

Basing his calculations on the Social Security Board's registration of 26,000,000 employed, Vandenberg arrived at the conclusion there are only about 3,975,000 unemployed.

He called for "an accurate, authentic current census of the unemployed."

Rev. Thos. Grant Delivers Message At Union Services

One of Largest Congregations Since Program Was Started on Hand at Sunday Night Meeting

One of the largest congregations to attend the union Sunday evening services was present last night at Jarvis Memorial Methodist church. A feature of the service was the singing of "Send Out Thy Light" by the Junior High School choir, under the joint direction of Misses Ona Schindler and Mozelle Jones.

Congregational singing was led by J. H. Rose, with the Rev. Clarence Patrick, Immanuel Baptist church, presiding and the Rev. Wm. A. Ryan, Eighth Street Christian church, reading the Lesson and leading in prayer.

"There are a great many folks who think they are religious because they suffer," declared the preacher for the evening, the Rev. Thos. M. Grant, Jarvis Memorial Methodist Church, "but his only if you suffer for the right that religion comes into the picture, and then you are religious in the sense that Jesus was."

Speaking on the subject of "Cross-bearing" and taking as his text the words of Jesus, "if any man would come after me, let him deny himself, take up his cross and follow me," the speaker declared that "cross-bearing is a distinguishing mark of discipleship. But, he continued, "there are two ideas that go with the presence of suffering that will not let it be synonymous with cross-bearing. For one thing, because suffering happens to be universal to the human family it is taken out of the sphere of cross-bearing. For another thing, when the dark, uninvited hours of suffering come into the experiences of men, it has nothing to do with cross-bearing.

"On the contrary, the human will has something to do with cross-bearing. Whenever the human will moves up majestically, gladly and wonderfully in appreciation of what is right and attempts to translate that into life—then and only then is a man bearing a cross as a disciple of Jesus. And with that must also be connected the sense of affliction, for wherever low stands—there will always be shedding of blood."

Luncheon for Miss Garrett Miss Maria Garrett, who will be married to William Faison on May eighth, was honored at an attractive appointed luncheon on Saturday at one o'clock when Miss Verda Wilson entertained at the home of Mrs. E. B. Ferguson.

A yellow color note was emphasized in the decorations. Thirty guests found places at small tables placed in the drawing room and living room. A tempting luncheon was served. Miss Garrett, as a reminder of this delightful affair, was presented bread and butter plates in her selected pattern of china, and Mrs. C. W. Bynum, a recent bride, with potted plants.

Mrs. Kittrell Entertains A lovely affair of the past week honoring the former Miss Pat Whitehurst, who was married this morning, was on Saturday when Mrs. J. B. Kittrell was a charming hostess and luncheon and bridge. Throughout the home cut flowers were artistically used.

Covers were laid for twelve. The places of the honoree and her mother, Mrs. N. H. Whitehurst, were marked with old-fashioned nose-gays. The table was covered with a cloth of Italian cut work centered with a miniature bridal scene placed beneath a shower of lily-of-the-valley, tulip and wedding bells hung from the center of the crystal chandelier. At each end of the table was a silver bubble bowl, holding white tulips, dogwood and narcissi. Green tapers in silver holders cast their brilliance over the entire scene. A tempting three-course luncheon in a green and white color scheme was served. After luncheon the guests enjoyed a spirited game of bridge. High score prize, lingerie, was given to Miss Julia Gaylord, and the consolation, a lovely handkerchief, to Mrs. James G. Pearing, Jr., of Elizabeth City. Miss Whitehurst was remembered with tea cups and saucers in her selected pattern.

A green and white motif was used in the decorations. Seven branched candelabra holding cathedral candles were placed on the altar against a background of spirea and dogwood. Tall floral baskets of snapdragons were placed on either side, and the windows banked with spirea and dogwood.

As relatives and friends assembled, Miss Eva Hodges played a short program of nuptial music, including "Venetian Love Song" by Nevin. "When Song is Sweet" by Sans Souci and "Nocturne in F Sharp" by Chopin. Miss Hodges flowers were preme, supreme roses and sweet peas. The choir entered, with Sammy White as crucifer singing as a professional "The Voice That Breathed Over Eden," to the "Urbs Beata" tune.

To the strains of the Bridal Chorus from the opera Lohengrin, the ushers, Tom Wilson of this city, and Dow Fender of Tarboro entered. They were followed by Mrs. B. F. Lewis of Farmville, sister of the bride, as dame of honor. Mrs. Lewis was becomingly gowned in coronation blue printed chiffon, with navy accessories. She carried an arm bouquet of pernet roses, tied with yellow chiffon. The bride entered with her father, by whom she was given in marriage. She was lovely in a three-piece suit of aster gold botany wool, trimmed in lynx fur, designed by Sciaparelli, with accessories of harness brown. Her flowers were a shoulderette of talsman roses and valley lilies. They were met at the altar by the bridegroom and his brother, H. M. Britt of Tarboro, as best man.

The vows were taken before the Reverend Worth Wicker, rector of the church. During the ceremony the "Serenade" by Gounod was softly played. For the benediction the choir sang "The Lord Bless Thee," by J. G. Ham. As a recessional Miss Hodges played the wedding march from "A Mid-Summer's Night Dream," by Mendelssohn.

The minutes were read and approved, after which a pleasing report was given on the recent successful bridge tournament. The president spoke of the sincere appreciation of the Senior club members for the generous contribution from the Juniors toward repairs on the club building. These pamphlets are sent to each Junior club every year, and

MURDER ON THE BLUFF

SYNOPSIS: My roommate Michael has two aunts who insist that I'm Jim Wells to Farrington Bluff for a February weekend. Gay Palmer, Mike's red-headed heart interest, goes along. The Skipper, tall and square, looks worried and ill, while Martha Farrington, the small, stout, Victorian aunt, seems unchanged. Another guest, smooth Jude Blinshop, is an old friend of mine. After a diamond dinner, a congested atmosphere settles upon the party. On the way to the game-room, Jude asks me to pigeonhole Gay; she must talk to Mike. Gay resents being dragged from Michael's company.

Chapter Three

'There's Hell to Pay!'

I WAS floundering badly and Gay's voice was somewhere along the coast of Labrador when to my infinite relief the Skipper suddenly came out of the library.

"What, no billiards?" said the Skipper.

Gay stood up. "No," she said without deigning me another look. "I have a splitting headache and I think I'll run up to bed if you don't mind."

"There's some aspirin in the drawer of the bedstand," offered the Skipper. "Probably this damned wind."

And there it was. I must have looked about as I felt, and that was no good. She was a nice kid, Gay. Confound Jude anyway! The Skipper was chuckling.

"Jim, don't tell me Mike has fallen at last!"

Gay ratched up those stairs, her back like a ramrod. I nodded gloomily. "He's fallen about two thousand feet in the last two minutes," I said, "and he doesn't know it yet."

"Him?" She went up one step and turned. "Jimmie, do me a favor?"

All things considered, I should have been tired, but I wasn't. "Sure."

"Don't let Mike stir any fool doctors around here, and for the love of Pete keep him away from Jude Blinshop!"

"Skipper!" I said. "Listen! What—"

"Please, Jim." She reached down and gave me a whack on the shoulder. "I count on you," she said and mounted the stairs.

A Chimney Crashes

EVENTUALLY I closed my mouth. In the course of a mere five minutes I had succeeded in precipitating a promising row between Michael and Gay and in checking my only reason for being at the Bluff at all—to get the Skipper to see a doctor. Concluding that there were no limits to my possibilities, I looked at my watch. It was 9:30 exactly.

No sound from the game-room. The Skipper and Gay were definitely out of the picture. That left myself and M. Farrington. With some idea of doing penance for my sins by spending an hour with that worthy, I opened the library door. But the library was empty.

That left myself. Well, I picked up a book and tried to relax, but the wind wasn't conducive to relaxation. I sat down at the desk and tried to write a plot that had been more or less on my mind for the past month. Again the wind had other notions. And the couple in the game-room showed no signs of coming to the rescue. At precisely 10 o'clock I gave it up and went to bed.

Even there my woes did not sub-the Skipper, and M. Farrington hissed from below. "Do me a favor! Do me a favor!" Finally I roused enough to convince myself that the wind and not the household was doing the hissing, and then at last I slept.

I woke to a bright light in my eyes and someone shaking my shoulder. A loud siren seemed to be sounding in the room. There was a sudden thundering crash that shook the house. In one jump I landed out of that bed and smack into Michael, standing there fully dressed and dripping wet.

"The north chimney!" he shouted above the racket. It sounded more like the whole house. "For God's sake get into your clothes, Jim!" He was white as chalk and his hands were shaking. "There's hell to pay around here. Judge and the Skipper are missing!"

"Missing!" I echoed. "Where—"

"God knows. They're not in their rooms and they're not in the house. And the bridge is down."

I regarded him stupidly.

"Dammit all!" roared Michael. "Will you get dressed?"

Obediently I reached for my pants.

Screams In The Dining Room

IT didn't take me long to get into them. As I dashed into the hall after Michael, the entire house was a blaze of light. All up and down the hall doors stood open, but no voices were audible above the wailing of the storm.

They were all in the dining room; there, I suppose, because the din was slightly muffled. M. Farrington in curlers and a hideous lavender robe. Gay, in fuzzy pajamas, looking like a genuine nightshirt, topped by a tall coat and finished off with red slippers. Behind Higgins, Cook in braids and an overcoat was trying to pacify the chambermaid, who looked hysterical and obviously desired to be administered to by William, the chauffeur. It was a perfect scene, and it reached a climax as I entered.

Annie screamed. "I can't stand it any more," she wailed. "I'm going to faint." Her second scream was a prize winner. But Cook had methods of her own. She landed a neat haymaker on Annie's chin before Michael could intervene.

"Shut up, both of you!" he ordered and there was comparative silence.

"Now look," he continued, "there have been storms like this out here before. There's nothing to worry about. Miss Barbara and Miss Blinshop must have gone out for a walk and been caught in it. We'll have to find them Higgins, you stay here and see to things. William, you can come with Mr. Wells and me. Better get a coat. Have you a flashlight?"

William had. As he vanished to get it, M. Farrington warmed into action.

"Why," she demanded, voicing the thought in all our minds, "would Barbara and Judith go out for a walk on a night like this—and at this hour? They must be in the house, Michael. Possibly—"

"They aren't," said Michael shortly. "Gay's voice, cool and crisp, joined the party. "I suppose you have reason to know?"

Michael turned to her. "I have. I was sitting here wondering about the storm and I suddenly got the idea that if the west chimney went, Jude and the Skipper wouldn't be any too safe. When I went up to suggest that livered in cumulative bundles of a hundred days at a time. So how could he know an American cruiser was to pay him an official visit. Only then did he learn that there was a war, that in effect he had become a prisoner and Guam had become a part of the rapidly expanding American empire.

Fear Japan

After the lapse of nearly forty years, a delegation from Guam told the senate insular affairs committee that time has not changed the fundamental customs of the place, that the natives are still living in a sort of paradise. But the trouble is, all the islands around them have come under Japanese control and the Guamese war: to be tucked a little tighter under the American wing.

One Guerrero, head of the delegation, said his people were doing very nicely, helped out by the money he spent there to maintain a naval station. Relief is no problem and there is no farm tenancy.

We passed a note to a senator suggesting he ask Guerrero why he should want to become an American and become involved in sit-down troubles, swing rhythm and contract bridge tournaments. But it was no use. The Senator smiled dreamily. He was giving close attention to photographs of two pretty mestizo girls and couldn't be bothered. Grinning mischievously, he suggested it would be better if a committee of the senate visited the islands before taking action on such important legislation.

Waters Set Aside For Protection Of State Hatcheries

More Than 100 Miles of Some of the Largest Game Fish Streams To Be Patrolled

Reflector Bureau, Raleigh, April 19.—North Carolina is setting aside more than 100 miles of some of the best and largest game fish streams as natural hatcheries this year in an effort to reduce the "time between bites" for residents of this state and her guests. Notice of the closing of portions of some of the best fresh water spawning areas was given today by J. D. Clark, State game and inland fisheries commissioner. These streams will be protected by a patrol over a period of several months in order to give full opportunity to the game fish to produce a larger crop for anglers next season.

This plan was followed last year with the closing of sections of various rivers, creeks, and lakes totaling more than 75 miles, and the program brought such satisfactory results and public approval that its

I had done considerable thrashing by the time everything merged into a senseless hodge-podge in which I stood on the Farrington landing and watched Gay's furious face without any body glide slowly up ahead of me, while the voices of Jude, Michael, continuation and enlargement this year was approved by the Board of Conservation and Development. Some 112 miles of streams are being closed this year, the commissioner said.

For the most part, the sections of streams set aside for natural spawning grounds are too large for satisfactory results from stocking with hatchery produced fish, and the most effective means of replenishing the gamester supply has been found to be through permitting the present game fish population to multiply naturally under protection. According to reports from many sources, fishing has been better than for many seasons in streams protected last year.

Portions of the following streams and lakes are being closed this year: Transler's Creek, Beaufort County; Waccamaw Lake and River, Columbus County and Brunswick County; Brice's Creek, Craven County; Northeast Cape Fear River, Duplin; Old River, Jones County; Swift Creek, New Hanover County; Northeast River, Onslow County; Shelter Creek, Pender County; Lumber River, Robeson-Columbus Counties; Back River, Sampson County; and South River, Sampson - Bladen Counties. The closed portions are already being marked for the information of the public.

How's Your Health?

Cold Showers
Are cold showers good for you? That depends upon what is meant by good. If you like them, enjoy taking them, then certainly they are "good" for you. At least they are little likely to cause harm, provided the shower is followed by a brisk rub - down with a warm towel.

But, if as Benjamin Franklin did, you find the cold shower a form of refined cruelty, then there is little warrant for suffering. A tepid, cooling shower will do. Or, if one is Spartan in temper, a gradual descent from warm to cold may be indulged in.

The theory behind cold showers is that they "harden you," by which is meant that they help to protect one against colds. This theory has not been proved.

Many a cold shower devotee proves just as susceptible to colds as his softer brother. And, if as is now fairly definitely established, colds are due to a filterable virus, then cold showers seem to have little bearing on the subject.

ers has not been proved convincing-ly. Anyway, it is easier and less painful for many to meet the hazard of sudden chilling by means of mufflers, rubbers and extra clothing, than by taking cold showers. For those who like 'em, our compliments for those who don't, but take them none the less, our admiration and applause.

Talks To Parents

Exercising His Arms
By BROOKE PETERS CHURCH
The family was exhausted picking up things for the baby. Whatever he took in his hands he threw down, not in temper, but apparently in a reflex action. He threw things as naturally as a kitten jumps at a moving object.

Since he was not yet 18 months old and unable to talk, there was no use arguing with him. All he did when reproved for pitching his toys out of his pen, often breaking the heavier ones, was to smile sardonically and throw something more.

His mother, who was new at the game of motherhood, was distressed at what seemed to her the child's destructive tendencies, and tried her best to cure him of a bad habit.

She was not, however, distressed at the baby's other forms of activity. The fact that he was creeping or walking every minute that he was at large seemed to her natural. She knew that the best exercise the muscles of his legs if he was to be an evenly developed human being.

The same is true of a baby's arms. They too need exercise. Reaching, throwing, holding on to things, even raising his own weight by his arms, gradually do for the baby's arms what walking, crawling and climbing do for his legs.

During these months of throwing things about, breakable toys and valuable and fragile ornaments should be kept out of his reach. He should have every possible chance to obey his instincts without destroying valuable property. But he should not be hindered from obeying nature's promptings to throw and reach.

He has a great deal to do for himself during his second year, and should be helped, not hindered, in his self education and training.

J. O. Rowell Selected State Entomologist

Raleigh, April 19.—The employment of J. O. Rowell as entomologist for the State College extension service was announced today by Dean I. O. Schaub, director.

Rowell will succeed C. H. Brannon, who resigned several months ago to accept the position of entomologist for the State Department of Agriculture.

A native of Marion, S. C., Rowell graduated from Clemson College with a B. S. degree in entomology and zoology in 1931. He received his M. S. Degree from the University of Florida in 1933, and then spent a year at Kansas State College working for his doctorate.

Then he spent 27 months working in Kansas, first with the Resettlement Administration and then as an educational advisor for a CCC camp.

Resigning from these positions, he went to Sarasota, Fla., to carry on screw worm control work for the bureau of entomology and plant quarantine of the U. S. Department of Agriculture.

Hollywood Sights And Sounds

By Robbin Coons
Hollywood — The tang of the briny deep blows over "Captains Courageous," first of the Hollywood Kipling cycle to reach the screen. And the real stars are a couple of sailing schooners, as pretty as ever you saw, and the old devil sea, camera-captured in moods from calm to storm.

The story of a spoiled brat regenerated through the devotion of a simple Portuguese fisherman is effectively told, and there's many a tear at the end unless you're one of those Hollywood sophisticates who dismiss it as "hookum."

The unique Freddie Bartholomew is the boy, and Spencer Tracy, doing his first screen dialect and singing, is the brave soft-hearted Mauiel, Lionel Barrymore is Captain Disko of the "We're Here," and Oscar O'Shea plays captain of the rival "Jennie Cushman." Melvyn Douglas is Freddie's father, and there are also Charley Grapewin, long John Carradine, Mickey Rooney, and never a girl.

The picture, beset by the jinxes of weather and illness, took 17 months to make. One life was lost at sea. The thrill high spot of the film is the near-capsizing of the "We're Here," not faked but photographed from the "Cushman" during a storm. A scene was added to the script to include this.

Tracy, in the key role, plays it so naturally and altogether acceptably that the character's influence death. His singing isn't bad, either, dominates even after his fictional "Top of the Town" is a distinct novelty for Hollywood—a million-dollar production without a star. The large cast is composed mainly of newcomers, with Hugh Herbert as the only established "draw." Doris Nolan, George Murphy, Gertrude Niesen, Peggy Ryan, Ella Logan and the Three Sailors are among those yet to prove themselves at the box-office.

BRITAIN TO CROWN NICKNAME KING

London, (AP)—George VI will be crowned without a popular nickname. But it's a sure bet that he will acquire one. Nicknames such as "Bloody Mary" and "Richard Lionheart" perpetuate the weaknesses of some monarchs, but the long list also recalls the greatness of others. English kings have gone down in history under such varied nicknames as:

- Edgar the Peaceful.
- Edmund the Magnificent.
- Ethelred the Unready.
- Alfred the Great.
- William the Conqueror.
- Richard Lionheart.
- John the Wicked.
- Bluff King Hal.
- The Virgin Queen (Elizabeth, who never married).
- The Martyr King (Charles I, executed by Cromwell's Roundheads after the Civil War).
- The Merry Monarch (Frivolous Charles II).
- Farmer George (George III, who "lost" America).

SOME PLAYERS ALREADY HERE

Coastal League Team Holding Practice Twice Daily

Several members of the Greenville Coastal Plain baseball team began practicing this morning and by tomorrow a number more are expected to be on hand to start work.

The complete roster has not been announced, but Manager Bo Farley declares that he expects to put a winning team on the field when the season opens May 6 with Greenville playing Ayden in that city.

The complete schedule is expected to be announced shortly. But it already has been decided to open on the sixth. Greenville will be paired with Ayden in holiday games.

The few players who already are on hand are practicing at the college diamond. They worked out this morning and again this afternoon. Practices will be held twice daily from now on, it is understood.

Officials of the club said there was a possibility that Ty Wagner would again be with the club this year. There is talk also that Reynolds May will be with the club again. Both have entered business here and it is not certain whether these duties will allow them to join the club, which will operate as a Class D professional league.

Baseball fans are invited to go out and watch the players during practice and get a preview of what the Greenville team will offer in the way of talent this year.

DOUBLE KILL IN 9TH AGAINST ATHLETIC BLUEGE'S THRILL

Washington (AP)—Ossie Bluege of the Washington Senators, one of the classiest fielders in American league history, regards a double play he started against the Philadelphia Athletics in 1928 as the most thrilling play of his career.

The Philadelphians and the New York Yankees were running down the stretch in a tight pennant race. The A's were meeting Washington here in a Labor day double-header.

Washington was a run ahead as the A's came to bat in the first of the ninth. Connie Mack's crew filled the bases with one out and Mack sent Eddie Collins up as a pinch-hitter.

Collins struck a sharp hit between third and short, and Bluege dove for it. How he got it, he doesn't know to this day. He flipped the ball to Bucky Harris at second. So quickly was the play made that Harris hadn't time to get to the bag and had a leap to get the ball. Bluege whirled and caught Collins at first for the final out.

"Collins tore his hair he was so mad. He still calls me a damnable Dutchman," Bluege says.

Others are the Dutton discus cup, the Gordon broad jump award, and the Canby cup for the pole vault.

SIR MALCOLM SAYS HELL RETIRE AS SPEED DRIVER

London (AP)—Fulfilling a pledge, Sir Malcolm Campbell, the British speed driver, has decided not to make any further attempts to break his own world hand speed record of 304 miles per hour.

"I made a definite promise to my family that if I reached the speed of 300 m.p.h. I would not make any further attempts on the automobile speed record," he explained. "I have reached 300 m. p. h. and I am to adhere to that promise, much to my regret."

But Sir Malcolm finds he cannot live without the thrill of speed. He has turned his attention from land to water.

For the last 18 months he has been engaged in the construction of a new type of one-man high-speed motor boat. He hopes to try it out for the first time on Scotland's Loch Lomond in June.

The 1937 indoor meet, with the yardage standard used, was won by Columbia, which favors the metric system.

FIRE FIGHTERS SAVING TREES

Trained Forces Protecting 1,000,000 Young Trees

Reflector Bureau, Raleigh, April 19.—Special equipment and a trained fire-fighting force have been provided by the Resettlement Administration to protect 1,000,000 young trees recently planted on Jones and Salters Lakes land project near Elizabethton, according to B. J. Downey, regional chief of the land conservation work.

A state-operated tower in the area has been supplemented by a 100-foot steel tower put up by the Resettlement Administration, making it possible to spot any fire on the 30,000-acre project immediately. The project forester has developed a well-equipped force of trained men for prevention and suppression of fires and 40 miles of roads and truck trails have been constructed for quick access to all parts of the areas.

"Forest fire control has been given preference over all other work," states a report by Mr. Downey. "The moment a fire is reported from the fire tower, the nearest labor crew is sent to put it out. Special crews are available on Saturdays, Sundays and holidays."

The tree planting work on Jones and Salters Lakes project has been going on continuously since December under supervision of the project forester. More than 700,000 longleaf pine seedlings have been set out on the sandy uplands and 250,000 loblolly pines and 8,000 cypress have been planted in the bottom lands. In addition, over 4,000 game food trees and shrubs have been set out at selected locations for the wild life of the area. Through this planting program, nearly 1,000 acres of land formerly idle has been brought back into production. The pine seedlings came from the Resettlement nursery at Hoffman, the cypress came from the state Conservation Development nursery at Clayton, N. C., and the game food plants from the Soil Conservation nursery at Chapel Hill.

ROSE SLATED TO BE NAMED TO EDUCATION ASSO. OFFICE

the presidency of the association long enough, even though they have no personal objections to Smith.

There is another factor in the contest for the vice presidency of the association which goes even deeper than the geographical factor, however, it is agreed in educational circles here. That is the increasing dissatisfaction that has been growing up among the classroom teachers, principals and many of the younger and more liberal superintendents, with the manner in which the educational association has been run and with its policies during the last three or four years.

They frankly feel that the association has been and still is too much concerned with the personal welfare and political ambitions of a small group of superintendents and politicians in the "inner circle" of the association and not enough with the welfare of the schools, the school children and the teachers. Many of these are still remembering the more than $4,000 which the association spent for "lobbying" during the 1935 general assembly—and which hurt the teachers more than it helped them. They want to elect a vice president this time who will endeavor to bring about a new deal in the association, instead of a raw deal.

Nor is there any doubt but that most of this group are now actively supporting Rose for the vice presidency of the association, rather than Smith. For they feel that Smith is too closely associated with Guy Phillips, whom he succeeded as superintendent in Greensboro and others of the old Phillips bloc, who are conceded to have run the association with almost dictatorial precision for several years. However, there is no discounting the fact that Smith has very powerful support and that hundreds of letters are being sent out in his behalf. So it is going to be a close fight.

N. Y. Stock Market

New York, April 19.—(AP)—Except for a handful of selected issues in heavy industry lines, stocks failed to get up advancing steam in today's market.

Dealings were exceptionally quiet and opening gains of fractions to a point or more were whittled down in most cases near the fourth hour.

Coppers, rubbers, a few steels and specialties accounted for the majority of plus signs.

Restraining trade ardor was the inclination to wait for details of the President's budget message and the outcome of new threats of a General Motors strike if settlement of the company's Canadian controversy is not effected soon.

Following a short rally abroad, futures of grains, cotton, rubber and other staples turned up substantially. Bonds marked time.

A sociological survey of 50 women in a Virginia mountain community showed that 20.8 per cent had married under the age of 15.

A Candid Talk: KILPATRICK Says Young Moderns Learn The 3 R's—And Then Some

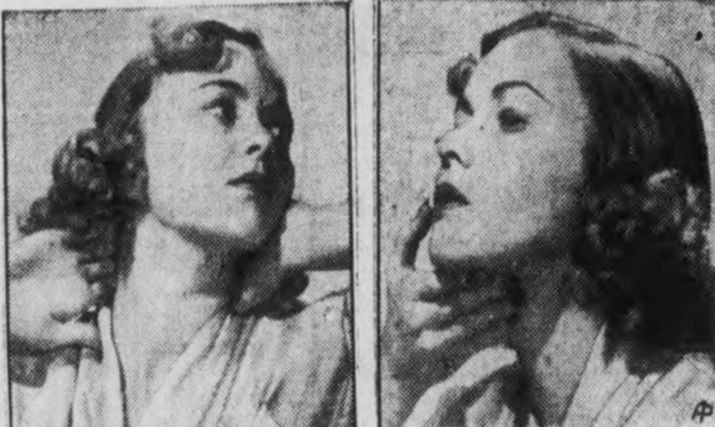

1 William Heard Kilpatrick is 66 but his eyes are on youth. Nationally famous as professor of philosophy of education in Columbia university, he teaches teachers how to teach America's young. And he decries old-fashioned methods.

2 "The charge that we don't teach the three R's is simply not true," he says. "Children get as much of that as they would anywhere. In the new school, they don't want to stay home; in the old, they stayed home whenever they could."

3 "The old method, teaching by subject, such as geography or arithmetic, tended to be memorizing. The modern method seeks to teach by projects. It goes on the basis that we learn what we truly live, inwardly and outwardly."

4 "Democracy demands intelligent self-direction—and this is the school version of it. We cannot let our civilization just grow, Topsy-like. Unless you have the children in on the game, you won't be able to get them to go very far."

EXERCISE ROUTS THREAT OF FLABBY DOUBLE CHIN

DO THIS FIRST . . . Cecilia Parker, movie actress, places both hands at the back of her neck and slowly turns her face from side to side.

THEN THIS Miss Parker then applies a facial cream and massages her neck and throat with a gentle but firm upward stroke.

Double chins are double sins. For a double chin is the result of two things: poor posture and lack of exercise.

If you're inclined to lean over typewriters or books—or a dish-pan—you'll have to make it up with exercise.

Flabby muscles are the cause of double chins. And the quickest way to cure flabby muscles, as everybody knows, is to exercise them.

Here are instructions for the two exercises illustrated above:

In the first an astringent is applied over the throat and neck and both hands are placed at the back of the neck. The head is then slowly turned from side to side, the movement serving to strengthen the neck and throat muscles.

In the second the neck and throat are massaged with facial cream. Then, beginning at the base of the neck and using a firm, gentle stroke, the flesh is slowly pushed upward.

Two minutes devoted to each of these exercises each day will work wonders over a reasonable period of time.

If you don't believe that try taking some candid camera "before and after shots" of yourself.

CALIFORNIA REASSURED ABOUT CLIMATE

Los Angeles (AP) — California's recent cold wave is not an indication that the state's climate is changing for the worse, says Lawrence D. Daingerfield, meteorologist of the Los Angeles United States weather observatory.

"Although the 1937 cold wave, in matter of duration, was the worst recorded by the local weather observatory since it was established in 1877, it was simply a phase," says the observer.

He points out that changes in climate occur in millenniums and

MAY QUEEN AND MAIDS OF HONOR

Miss Linda Mitchell (center above), May Queen at the Woman's College of the University of North Carolina, chose as her maids of honor Miss Wilfred Schlosser, of Greensboro, and Miss Elizabeth Gant, of Burlington.

Parents of all the students at the Woman's College have been invited to spend Saturday, May 1, at the college in Greensboro, attending classes with their daughters during the morning hours and witnessing the traditional May Day Festival on the front campus in the afternoon.

Miss Mitchell, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Averette N. Mitchell, of Fairmont, was "Miss North Carolina" at the Rhododendron festival in Asheville two years ago.
