ORDER DEFERS
CASE AGAINST
ALUMINUM CO.Temporary Restraining Order Signed
In PittsburghRETURNABLE ON FRIDAY, MAY 7THAction Enjoins Government from Prosecuting Anti-Trust
Suit Outside City

Pittsburgh, April 29.—(AP)—Federal Judge Robert Gibson granted a temporary restraining order today halting the government from prosecuting an anti-trust suit against the Aluminum Company of America in the Southern district of New York.

Judge Gibson granted a rule against Attorney General Homer Cummings and his assistants to show cause why the restraining order should not be continued and a preliminary injunction granted. The rule was returnable May 1.

The action enjoins the government from prosecuting the anti-trust suit outside of the Pittsburgh District court. It was granted on petition of Aluminum Company's attorneys, to retain the jurisdiction in Pittsburgh, where a previous suit was filed in 1912. The attorneys contended the earlier action "was a parallel in details to suit filed a few days ago."

The petition set forth the original suit of 1912, "was followed by a consent decree entered June 7, 1912, the terms of which the company had been observing for the past 25 years and which are still in force."

Science Educator

National Association of Research
In Science to Speak Here

Dr. H. A. Webb, president of the National Association for Research in Science Teaching, editor of Current Science, and Science departments of other periodicals, author of several books on sciences and head of the chemistry departments at George Peabody College, will speak tomorrow night in the Auditorium of the College at 8:00 o'clock on the subject of "Enrichment of High School Sciences."

The public is invited to this meeting which opens "Science Club Day." Dr. Webb who is noted as an attractive speaker, will doubtless have many things to say of interest to the public, as he is one of the modern scientists who see close relationship between the sciences and life.

Miss Loraine Hunter, a teacher of Biology at the College, and advisor of the Science Club, did some of her science work at Peabody College with Dr. Webb. Mrs. Webb is a sister of J. B. Cummings of the College faculty.

A number of the 350 science teachers who received invitations to hear Dr. Webb and take part in the open forum next day have accepted the invitations and so a large crowd is expected.

Durward Stowe, president of the Science Club, will preside over the meeting Friday night. Miss Fanny Brewer, vice-president of the Club, will preside over the Saturday morning meeting, which will be a combination of an open forum conducted by Dr. Webb and a review of the activities of the Science Club during the past year presented by Primrose Carpenter.

Argument Results
In Injury To One

Herbert Rouse, young white man of this city, suffered a broken leg and other less serious injuries early this morning as a result of an altercation on the Washington highway. A man said to be E. L. Hassell of Washington, was taken in custody by officers and this afternoon was still in jail.

Officers said the young men apparently had been drinking and began to argue after Hassell, said to have been the driver of the car in which several were riding, drove the vehicle into the side of a truck, sidestepping it.

One report had it that Hassell drove the car over Rouse, who lives on Summit street, but hospital attendants said the injured person was not critically hurt.

Will Be Conducted
For Two Weeks
Next Year

Interest in the tuberculosis clinic being conducted in the county this week is so great that health officials already are anticipating a two weeks' clinic next year.

Dr. N. Thomas Ennett, county health officer, today reported on the first three days of the clinic, showing that a total of 173 patients were examined here Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, on which days the clinic was held in the health offices here. It is being conducted in Ayden today and tomorrow. It will be in the city hall at Farmville.

Last year 218 patients were examined during the entire week and the year before only 131. The increased interest in the clinic is leading health officials to observe that the campaign against the dread disease "was getting some where."

"People are showing much more interest in tuberculosis," declared Dr. Ennett, who added that if this interest is continued a long step will have been taken in fighting the malady.

The health officer cited several instances where mothers and fathers.

THREE DIE IN PRISON BREAKFourth Is Critically
Wounded by West
Virginia Guard

Moundsville, West Va., April 29.—(AP)—The Warden's office reported three inmates were killed and a fourth critically injured in an attempted prison break today at West Virginia State Penitentiary.

O. F. McClintock, an inmate at the Warden's office, said guards shot the prisoners as they tried to escape in a truck.

Information was not available as to whether others in the prison colony of 1,800 men were involved in the attempted break.

The prison official said "there is Warden Department Stone said: still too much excitement to tell."

"Three prisoners are dead and another is dying as the result of a delivery attempt at the penitentiary wagon gate. Four convicts hopped on a prison truck as it was leaving the yard, overpowered the trusty driver and drove the truck full speed out of the first gate. The driver lost control of the truck and it wrecked against a large scale near the outer gate."

One of the guards on the wall near the gate saw the break and opened fire with a machine gun after sounding a general alarm.

Basques Request

Combatants as Insurgent Troops Continue
Advance Into Basque Territory

Hendaye, Franco-Spanish Frontier, April 29.—(AP)—General Emilio

Mola's insurgent troops occupied devastated Guernica at 11:15 a. m.

today while the government of the Basque republic drove feverishly to evacuate 300,000 non-combatants

from Bilbao and pleaded with world powers to find haven for them.

Meantime Basque defenders of Bilbao rallied in the Durango sector in a last ditch battle to hold back the Northern insurgent army.

In their capital emergency measures were mapped to evacuate 300-

000 non-combatants.

Their president appealed to world powers for a haven for his helpless refugees of war. For the men of the Basque country, he added, "we ask nothing."

British liberals and laborites moved to aid the evacuation, but actual help of the British navy was not forthcoming immediately.

The Basques had lost Durango in vicious street fighting, but today they reorganized their lines less than 15 miles East of Bilbao after an orderly retreat from Durango, then they launched a counter offensive.

Heavy fighting was reported from the front lines at noon.

The defensive troops captured two flags, took 17 Moorish prisoners and brought back three Italian soldiers who deserted to the government lines.

Leave Plant in In-

St. Louis, April 29.—(AP)—Two hundred employees of the United Electrical and Radio Workers union evacuated a plant of the Emerson Electric Manufacturing company today, ending a 53-day stay-in-strike.

William Senterm, an organizer with the C. I. O., said the decision to give up possession of the plant was made "in the interest of public peace."

A hearing on the company's injunction said to oust the strikers was scheduled for this morning. The company also sought to prohibit picketing by 1,800 other employees who are on strike, but did not join in the sit-down demonstration.

Accused Murderer
Tells Own Story

New Castle, Ky., April 29.—(AP)—Brigadier General Henry Denhardt took the stand a few minutes after 1 p. m. (Central Standard Time) today to tell his story of the shooting of his fiancée, Mrs. Verna Taylor, for which he is on trial on a murder indictment.

This action followed the speech of Circuit Judge Charles Marshall who refused to dismiss the murder charge.

The soldier-politician who came to court in a blue coat and vest and pepper and salt trousers was expected to tell the jury later in the day his story of the shooting of his fiancée the night of November 6.

Labor Outlook For State
Appears Slightly Cloudy

Raleigh, April 29.—The labor out-and South Carolina is regarded as being somewhat cloudy, if not actu-

Roy R. Lawrence, president of the

the American Federation of Labor in North Carolina, had resigned his Industrial Organization, usually referred to as the C. I. O., which is backing the American Federation of Labor and seeking to outdistance it in the unionization of workers in big industries and along industrial rather than craft lines.

The announcement that Lawrence had switched from the A. F.

any surprise in most circles here,

State Liquor Commission

ter Conditions

Raleigh, April 29.—(AP)—Cutler Moore, 41, Lumberton insurance man who has taken an active interest in political affairs in North Carolina for 20 years, took over direction of the State Alcoholic Beverage Control system today.

"We plan to see that the act is enforced," said Moore. "We want a control system for North Carolina that will give us better conditions."

"We are empowered to issue rules and regulations and to enforce them. It is our purpose to try to get the best ideas from other states control systems and weave them into an official control set up for North Carolina."

The new ABC board held its first formal session this afternoon. It met with a committee from 18 counties now operating liquor stores to discuss whether the new seven per cent sales tax on alcoholic beverages should be added in whole or in part to the sale price of the liquor or be included as now in the retail price.

Moore said it was the opinion of the board that "alcoholic sales control should be given a fair trial within terms of the new law, but the law must be enforced."

TO DIE JUNE 4Death Date Set For Former North Carolina Convict

Dallas, April 29.—(AP)—Judge Grover Adams today sentenced Augustus Dwight Beard, 27, slayer of a former Dallas city detective to die in the electric chair June 4. The detective was slain during a holdup attempt at a garage here last December 23.

Beard accepted sentence without any indication of motion. He was shackled and placed in a car bound for state prison at Huntsville.

Beard told reporters he still had hopes the governor would commute this sentence to life imprisonment.

Once before Beard had been tried for murder and given the death penalty by a North Carolina jury. His death sentence in that state was commuted to life imprisonment.

He escaped from prison and remained a fugitive until his arrest a week after the Dallas detective was mortally wounded.

in Appropriations

Washington, April 29.—(AP)—The House, in a race with time, adopted today a compromise conference report on the Pittman-McReynolds cash and carry neutrality bill.

The report went to the Senate where leaders stood ready to jam it through before nightfall.

Arrangements have been completed to rush the bill to President Roosevelt by airplane so that he might sign it before the present neutrality law expires Saturday. The report was approved by a voice vote.

The Administration Senate Leader, Robinson of Arkansas, gave his support to a proposed flat 10 per cent reduction in Federal appropriations for the next fiscal year.

He said he also favored a $1,000,000 appropriation for relief, provided an allotment of that size was found practicable.

Robinson disclosed his stand on the two economy issues to reporters who heard yesterday President Roosevelt favored a 15 per cent discretionary cut in appropriations. The President has also recommended a $1,500,000 appropriation for relief.

Robinson endorsed a bill by Senator Byrnes (D. S. C.) which would make the flat 10 per cent cut apply to all allotments except fixed charges.

Among other capital developments, Chairman Assistant (D. Ark.) of the Senate Judiciary Committee, asserted there were 50 votes in the Senate for the Roosevelt cut bill and that it would pass "this year or next."

How's Your Health?

By Dr. Lugo Goldstein

Ask Your Doctor

A cartoonist recently drew a touching scene in an outpatient clinic of a large city hospital.

A white coated physician sat at a desk, with an emaciated man opposite him. Said the man:

"Please, doctor, don't ask me so many questions. Give me some medicine and let me go home."

Looking at that cartoon, one's sympathies are somewhat with the patient. He appears sick enough to be at home, and in bed. But from the doctor's viewpoint, how can he give him "some medicine" fitting to the case, unless he first asks the patient questions?

Questioning the sick one is an important action in arriving at a diagnosis. Indeed, most diagnoses in everyday practice must be made on the history which the patient gives of events and experiences preceding the illness and by the description of the symptoms recited by the patient.

But this matter of questioning has its other side, too. If the physician must question the patient to understand his case, so too the patient may and should question the doctor in order to understand his diagnosis and the treatment he orders.

Of course the latter can be overdone. The physician is not likely to undertake the instruction of the patient in general medicine, or in the rationale of drug therapy. But barring these, there remains much which the patient is entitled to know, and which the physician will be glad to tell him, or even to explain in detail.

Most conscientious physicians, when the case warrants it, give their instructions to the patient in oral and written form. And yet, even so, the patient may fail to understand some detail. Under such circumstances don't hesitate—ask the doctor to repeat, to explain, to amplify. If the treatment seems unreasonable, tell him.

Here is a case in point:

An intelligent business executive

Talks To Parents

By Dr. Lugo Goldstein

First Teeth

By the time a child is five he should be acquainted with the dentist and be accustomed to the dentist's chair.

To wait until the first toothache comes on before taking him to the dentist is to court trouble. Of course in this case his first experience in the dentist's chair will hurt and the child will be unwilling to go again.

If he is taken to the dentist early when his teeth are just reaching the place where he can gnash them he may escape tooth trouble entirely, and he will not be likely to develop a lasting aversion to dentists.

Every six months, as regularly as he changes from winter to summer and from summer to winter clothing, he should repeat these visits. No amount of brushing can keep the teeth clean and free from decay.

Only a thorough cleaning by the dentist twice a year guarantees that they are in perfect shape.

If the first teeth are carefully guarded and kept in place until they are pushed out by the second, the later expense and discomfort of straightening the teeth and widening the bite which so many children have to go through, may well be avoided.

Some parents may believe they cannot afford to incur dentist bills unless the condition of the child's teeth demands prompt attention. But, in the long run, it will prove wise economy to follow the trend of preventive medicine and avoid later complications which almost certainly will prove far costlier.

There are always better ways of economizing than in the direction of health. If the family income is actually at the zero mark—or if the family is on relief—there are dental clinics in many cities to which the children may be taken.

State Is Pictured As Mecca For Tourists

Chapel Hill, April 29.—"North Carolinians should forget a squabble of 75 years ago and open their doors to an influx of visitors from New England and the North," Judge Robert W. Winston, author of a recently published autobiography which has been widely reviewed and discussed, told members of the Chapel Hill Kiwanis Club here last night.

"There are 10,000 visitors from Maine, Vermont, and other states to the north of us who would flock to this section with points of interest as Pinehurst, Winston-Salem, Chapel Hill, Durham and Raleigh. The playground that the Pinehurst section affords northern visitors attracts these people and we should apply ourselves to inducing them to visit Chapel Hill with its historic setting and natural beauty, Winston-Salem with its quaint Moravian background, and Durham with its Duke University.

MURDER ON THE BLUFF

SYNOPSIS: It's a wild, stormy night at Farrington Bluff, home of Michael's aunt, when beautiful Jude Blinnip is shot to death on the bluff. Mike, dislocates his shoulder hunting for the missing Skipper, his tall and twenty younger aunt. She turns up with an alibi. Aunt Martha, stout and prudish, has a few genteel tantrums. Gay Palmer, Mike's red-headed sweetheart, keeps fairly calm. Next morning we search the grounds, but find no intruder. Aunt Martha gets me to lead our group investigation, so I send everyone to his room and try to puzzle things out with pencil and paper.

Chapter 12
Slow, Creeping Steps
AT LAST I put down the pencil. Wearily I read over that paper. Who? What? Why? It occurred to me that it was much easier to solve imaginary problems than real ones, and this was all too real. I helped myself to another drink.

On a fresh piece of paper I wrote MOTIVE in large capitals and considered M. Farrington. Obviously not Jude was M. Farrington's choice of the year for Michael. If the old lady had any conceivable reason for wishing Jude out of the way, why send for us to swell the number of state witnesses? The Skipper? She had certainly asked me to keep Mike away from Jude for some reason. That she would go to the length of murder to gain her obscure end, I was not prepared to believe. Michael? He had never lost his head over Jude, but that was hardly a suspicious circumstance.

Again that tête-à-tête in the game room loomed before me. I discounted it altogether. Jude and Mike had been friends all their lives. There were a million things they might have talked about. Gay? She had certainly been in a rage, but that was nothing unusual. The furniture might suffer from Gay's disposition, but the idea of murder was repulsive.

The servants? I ticked them off on my fingers—Higgins (ridiculous), William (pointless), Cook (more pointless), Annie (absurd).

Such was my state of mind that I gravely considered any possible motive of my own before I fully realized what I was doing. I left a blank after the word MOTIVE and wrote WEAPON also in large letters.

Again I was at a standstill. I wrote, "Revolver in the possession of Higgins. All the regular household aware of it." Sitting back, I reviewed my handiwork. Then I rang for Higgins.

"Have you kept careful watch of the servants?"

"I have, sir. They are all together in the kitchen."

"Good. Rouse the rest of the house and tell them I'd like to see them right away."

It occurred to me as I listened to his slow shuffle up the stairs that I was probably making a mistake in questioning them in one another's hearing. And yet I was beginning to feel that the best way to protect that unhappy party was to keep its members all together. I would have more luck with Michael anyway if the Skipper were present. He would never lie to her. But if he were shielding her? Suddenly I decided to recall Higgins and to approach the whole thing from a different angle. Too late. The door opened and Gay walked in.

Prowling in the Hall
"GOOD Lord, Jim, don't do that again!"

"Do what?"

"Leave us all caged up like that and go prowling around in the hall. It's amusing to read about, but right now it's not so darned funny."

I stared at her. "You heard someone in the hall?"

"Certainly. Do you think I'm deaf? I heard you come up and I heard you go down. You ought to give a Halloween party some time. The guests would be carried out in caskets."

"They're always carried out when he gets started," said Michael from the door. "What's the big idea? Some fancy third-degreeing, or what?"

I tried not to look as if I had just seen a king cobra.

"Oh," I said, "you heard something, too?"

"Sherlock!" from Michael.

The Skipper and M. Farrington coming in together saved us from another argument. They both looked tired and worried. I didn't wait for comments.

"Were any of you outside of your rooms after you went upstairs?" I demanded.

M. Farrington answered promptly. "Yes, I've been in Barbara's room all along. I was nervous."

"Did you go through the hall?"

"Why, no. Did you want—?"

The Skipper interrupted. "What's the matter, Jim?"

"Nothing." I snapped and once more rang for Higgins. The silence was charged with many things. I am afraid I was a little disappointed when he finally did appear.

"Higgins, were you in the upper hall at any time after I instructed you to watch the servants?"

"Why, yes, sir. Just now when you requested me—"

"I know. But were you there at any other time—or could any of the servants have been there?"

"No, sir. I'm positive."

I digested that slowly. "Aunt Martha—Skipper, did either of you hear anything unusual while you were upstairs?"

Their negatives were prompt. Someone then must have come up those stairs and gone down the hall toward the east end of the house, since Mike had heard it and the aunts had not. Gay's room was opposite the head of the stairs. I whirled on her.

"You heard this person come up and go down?"

She shrugged impatiently. "Really, Jim, you're too obvious. You could be heard from here to the mainland—slow, creeping steps as when the maniac is about to grab the heroine by the hair. You should have shrieked occasionally for local color."

It is one thing to have your fictitious hero suspected by every person present. It is quite another to be suspected yourself by your own roommate and his fiancée.

"Look here," I said, "you can believe me or not, just as you like, but I haven't been up those stairs since lunch time."

She didn't believe me. I could see it in her face and I could see it in Michael's.

"Higgins here will tell you—" I began hotly, but Gay interrupted.

"Oh, don't perjure Higgins. It would have worked better if you'd only had sense enough to—"

From somewhere in the rear of the house a full-throated scream rang horribly through the hall.

A Low, Hysterical Gigggle
INTO the startled silence that followed that frightful sound, came a low, hysterical giggle. The hair on my neck was beginning to prickle. I could see Higgins' bulging eyes. It was M. Farrington, collapsed in a chair, her head in her hands, rocking spasmodically back and forth. Michael moved mechanically.

"Stop it! Stop it! With his good arm he seized her shoulder and shook it roughly."

"Quiet!" the Skipper said. The effect was instantaneous. At off hours when I have had one drink too many I can still see that scene. Michael half bent over his aunt's chair, Gay stiffly erect, and myself gripping the edge of the desk, while all eyes were riveted on the Skipper's haggard face. Half turned away from us, she stood staring toward the hall door. Waiting. Waiting for what?

I didn't walk across that room. I bolted for the door. If the devil himself had been in that hall, I would rather have encountered him than endure that waiting another minute.

The devil, fortunately or otherwise, was not in the hall. Nor was anyone else. The scream had come from the kitchen and in that direction I galloped as fast as my legs would carry me. The door of the servants' dining room crashed open to my hand.

In the half light from the hall I could see that the room was empty, but I could also see the swinging door leading into the kitchen moving, as if someone had just gone through it. Beyond that door I could hear the sound of heavy footsteps coming, seemingly, from a point halfway between the floor and the ceiling. One moment only I hesitated to see Higgins following me in a labored do-trot. Then I went through that door.

Directly against the nearest wall ran the staircase to the servants' quarters and halfway up it stood William in his shirt-sleeves, one half of his face covered with lather and a razor in his hand. He was breathing heavily and his staring eyes were fixed on something on the floor, hidden from my sight by the kitchen table. Our eyes met for the fraction of a second.

"Gawd!" said William hoarsely.

Almost I had ceased to feel. Certainly I walked around that table with as few qualms as I might have stepped to it for a cigarette. Lying in a grotesque heap on the floor was the man-moth figure of Cook. Her arms were sprawled horribly and blood was flowing from a huge gash on her forehead. As I knelt beside her, William came heavily down the stairs and Higgins came panting through the dining room. I felt for her heart.

WAKE EXPECTS TO CALL VOTE

Commissioners Preparing to Call Liquor Referendum

Reflector Bureau.
Raleigh, April 29.—The board of county commissioners here in Wake county is expected to call a liquor control election as a result of the overwhelming victory of the control forces in the Durham county local option election of Tuesday. The Wake county commissioners will meet Monday, May 3, and it is already agreed that they will discuss the matter of calling a liquor stores election at that time, while some think they may even set a date for the election. It is not believed the election date will be set before the middle of June, however.

Advocates of liquor control and liquor stores in Raleigh and Wake county are more optimistic today than at any time so far and now believe that there is an excellent chance that Wake county and Raleigh will vote for state-county liquor stores. It has been known for some time that the Wake county commissioner were deliberately postponing any action with regard to calling an election in order to see how the Durham county election turned out, because they believed this would give a pretty good indication of how sentiment stands with regard to liquor stores in this section. If the Durham county elec-was a victory of more than two to one for the liquor control forces, with only one precinct out of 30 in the county going against control. Most observers here believe that sentiment is strongly in favor of control in Wake county as well. A good many who so far have maintained that Wake county would vote against control, even though Raleigh would undoubtedly vote for control, are now of the belief that the entire county will go for control.

There is no doubt that Raleigh would give a heavy majority for control and liquor stores, since most observers agree that the capital city can not possibly get much "wetter" than it is at present, has been for years. There are at least four well-known bootleg liquor dealers here with large stocks and varieties of U. S. Tax paid liquor who deliver telephone orders any place in the city, any time of day or night, but at prices 75 to 100 per cent higher than those charged in the county liquor stores in neighboring cities, according to those in a position to know. In addition to these larger liquor dealers it is estimated that there are at least 200 smaller bootleggers, at least 50 "joints" in which liquor may be purchased either by the pint or the drink, some of these within a stone's throw of the Capitol and the office of Governor Clyde R. Hoey, known throughout the state as a vigorous and conscientious personal "dry."

It is expected, of course, that the United Dry Forces, under the leadership of Cale K. Burgess, the ministers and the bone-dry element among the church people, will make a determined and bitter campaign against legal liquor stores, since this element is either ignorant of actual conditions, refuses to believe those who know they exist or else frankly prefers bootleg "joints" and bootleggers to state liquor stores, under county and state control and regulation. On other hand, some of the city's leading ministers and laymen are not expected to oppose the liquor stores plan, because they frankly believe that any sort of control plan is better than the present wide open bootlegging "plan" now in effect here. So most people agree that Raleigh will vote heavily for liquor stores and liquor control.

But out in the country and in the smaller towns and settlements in Wake county, the outlook is different. For rural Wake county and the smaller towns are regarded as being overwhelmingly "dry"—or at least, until very recently. The lack of police protection in the rural sections and small towns, the strong sentiment in the many rural churches against liquor and the fear that legal liquor stores will make it easier for the younger people to get liquor, have been big factors in keeping sentiment "dry" in the county for years. There are indications, however, that this sentiment is changing somewhat and that many of the people living in rural sections now believe county liquor stores preferable to bootleggers and roadside "liquor joints" which are about as numerous in rural as in urban sections. The further fact that property taxes are almost certain to be increased unless the county votes for liquor stores, is also regarded as an important factor.

The Morning After Taking Carter's Little Liver Pills

Washington Daybook
By Preston Grover
Washington—John L. Lewis has found another hard nut to crack in Harlan county, Kentucky.
The story is being told in the patchwork testimony of a senate investigation into violation of the rights of labor. The committee is sympathetic to the position of labor so not much of the employer's side of the story is told. Any that does appear bolsters the picture of savage distrust between the bosses and the hosed in those fabulously tough camps in the big black mountains that divide Virginia and southeastern Kentucky.
The town of Lynch, one of several on a tributary jutting out from Poor Fork, was described by witnesses as almost wholly owned by the United States Coal and Coke Company. The only notable exception is a strip of public highway down the center of town. That's important to remember, because the company, witnesses said, has issued an order that no union organizer can operate on company property. That includes the side streets and the homes of mine workmen.
"Deputies."
Union organizers testified that "deputies" ordered them off the side streets, and even ordered them out of the homes the miners had rented from the company.
These "deputies" had a strange status which witnesses seemed unable to define. They wore badges and carried arms but refused to say whether they were policemen company employees, or just what.
Union organizers called meetings of miners but, the testimony ran these were so picketed by deputies that few dared attend.
Several testified that men who joined he unions promptly lost their jobs because of some slight infraction of company rules while such penalties were withheld from non-union men.
A company superintendent testified that a "secret election" brought a vote of 267 to 5 against organization of a union. But each miner had to sign his ballot. Spectators laughed at such secrecy.
No Change.
The committee brings out little testimony of living conditions. That is partly out of its scope since it is investigating infractions of civil liberties. But such testimony would form a clearer picture of the situation. Questioning more company officials might also help. One official said "lots" of the workers' houses had running water. He conceded it was 30 out of 225.
Have the Wagner labor decisions made any difference? Perhaps it is too early to say, but John Y. Brown, former Kentucky congressman, now mine union attorney, said he was told by a company executive that union organizers still must keep off company property. The Wagner act protects the right to organize, but not to trespass.
When the U. S. army, in 1903, called for bids for its first airplane, the amounts asked ranged from $850 to $10,000,000.

Union organizers called meetings of miners but, the testimony ran these were so picketed by deputies that few dared attend.
Several testified that men who joined he unions promptly lost their jobs because of some slight infraction of company rules while such penalties were withheld from non-union men.
A company superintendent testified that a "secret election" brought a vote of 267 to 5 against organization of a union. But each miner had to sign his ballot. Spectators laughed at such secrecy.
No Change.
The committee brings out little testimony of living conditions. That is partly out of its scope since it is investigating infractions of civil liberties. But such testimony would form a clearer picture of the situation. Questioning more company officials might also help. One official said "lots" of the workers' houses had running water. He conceded it was 30 out of 225.
Have the Wagner labor decisions made any difference? Perhaps it is too early to say, but John Y. Brown, former Kentucky congressman, now mine union attorney, said he was told by a company executive that union organizers still must keep off company property. The Wagner act protects the right to organize, but not to trespass.
When the U. S. army, in 1903, called for bids for its first airplane, the amounts asked ranged from $850 to $10,000,000.

Three states—New York, Illinois and California—account for 37 per cent of the total hotel business in the United States.
WILD DUCKS INCREASING.
SURVEY SHOWS
Washington (AP)—The wild duck depression has been checked, says the biological survey, thanks to stringent hunting regulations of the last two years and cooperation of sportsmen.
The survey's annual mid-winter inventory shows more wild ducks and geese wintered in the United States than in recent years.
Observers, by land, water, and air saw nearly 9,500,000 ducks and geese and the survey estimates this was not more than one-fourth of the continent's water fowl. Increases in mallards and pintails were greatest.
LABOR OUTLOOK FOR STATE APPEARS SLIGHTLY CLOUDY
tion of the textile workers does not mean that they are unionizing to strike, but only to improve the financial, social and general economic status of the workers and if Lawrence adheres to this line of thought, there should not be any danger of any strikes in North or South Carolina any time soon, most observers here believe. For indications are that most of the employers are going to give the workers what they are asking for, if they have not already done it, in order to prevent strife and trouble. There are also indications that most of the workers are pretty well satisfied right now and do not want a strike any more than the employers want one.

So if Lawrence, Christopher, Nance and Hillman make organization their chief objective, rather than a strike, the outlook for a continuation of industrial peace in the textile sections of North and South Carolina should remain bright, according to observers here. But if the organization idea is only a smoke screen for labor agitators and for the spreading of radical teachings which center around the ability of the workers to "crack down" with the strike as a weapon if and when they do not get what they want, then it is agreed that there is plenty of trouble ahead in North Carolina for both the textile workers and the manufacturers. A general textile strike in the state or a series of strikes would undoubtedly prove disastrous for both the workers and manufacturers, in that they would be likely to destroy both the workers and the employers, most observers here agree.

ANNOUNCEMENT!
I hereby announce my candidacy for the office of Mayor in the coming election to be held on May 3. It will be recalled that I have only served about one year and four months, after being appointed to fill the unexpired term of the late R. C. Flanagan. With the cooperation of the Board of Aldermen, I have endeavored to practice business economy in local government and secure for Greenville projects involving large expenditure of funds without cost to the taxpayers. A number of these projects are about to be completed and others will soon begin. I therefore ask your vote, support and confidence on my past record of achievement.

COCKTAILS CALL FOR Calvert

"CORRECT! A PERFECTLY BLENDED WHISKEY makes a perfectly blended drink!"
No wonder cocktails made with Calvert are smooth as satin! For Calvert is blended perfectly—to blend perfectly! That's why you can count on Calvert... for cocktails silky and satisfying... for highballs marvelously mellow... for sheer perfection in all mixed drinks. It's good judgment to call for Calvert!
CLEAR HEADS CALL FOR Calvert WHISKIES

Here's how an OLD FASHIONED is made the new way: To one small lump of sugar, add two dashes of bitters and one ounce of soda or plain water. Muddle thoroughly to dissolve sugar... Now deposit one large cube of ice and add a jigger of Calvert's "Reserve" or Calvert's "Special." Decorate with cut of pineapple and slice of orange. Complete the picture with a luscious maraschino cherry.

Greenies Finding Hard Time Getting In Exhibitions

The Greenville Coastal Plain league team is having a hard time getting to play exhibition games. Yesterday the Greenies were scheduled to play the Teachers and today a game was set with the bearded members of the House of David team. Both games were called off on account of rain.

No other games have been scheduled as yet, but Bo Farley is hoping to turn his players against some opposition before the regular season opens on May 6.

Greenville will open with Ayden in that city.

Although slow in coming at first, approximately 20 prospective players are here now and are trying out for places on the local team. Manager Farley will face the task of weeding out the roster before the season opens.

It's our family's whiskey, neighbor—and neighbor, it's your price!

It's some Welcome you're handing us and Our Family's Whiskey!

It appears to me like our Family's Whiskey comes pretty close to being about as good a known whiskey as any there is.

But you got to remember it isn't just William and Tom and me that's responsible for this extra grand taste our Family's Whiskey has got. That wouldn't be handing the proper credit to Grandpa Wilken and Pa Wilken. If it wasn't for the lot of us Wilkens being whiskey making people since I don't know when, you never could be enjoying all this tastiness we've learned how to put into our personal Family's Recipe!

ers brought their children to the clinic just as a precautionary measure. He reiterated his statement prior to the clinic that early discovery means early recovery and declared that he believed a greater number of people were beginning to realize this.

In announcing that a two weeks' clinic would be asked for next year. Dr. Emmet declared that the clinic was forced to take more patients than usually are handled on each of the three days he was here. Twenty-five patients are considered an average day's work, but on Monday 35 were examined, 73 on Tuesday and 65 on Wednesday.

The clinic is being conducted in Pitt county by Dr. J. S. Denholm. The State Tuberculosis association and the State Sanitarium are co-operating with the Pitt County Health department in providing the clinic.

On the other hand opponents expressed confidence they had the whip-hand in the committee and in the Senate itself.

Elsewhere Senate Civil Liberties Committee investigators heard Daniel Boone Smith, Commonwealth Attorney for Harlan County, Ky., acknowledge he had accepted retainers from coal companies after taking his county office in January 1934.

N. Y. Stock Market

New York, April 29.—(AP)—An early fast recovery rush piled up gains of fractions to three or more points in today's stock market.

The rally lost vigor later however and many advances were cut down or canceled near the fourth hour as further unsettlement in markets brought in offerings.

U. S. government securities did better and corporate bonds improved in many instances. Transfers approximated 2,000,000 shares.

For Mayor

H.H. Duncan

A Friend of the Masses Not of the Privileged Few

Running ON His Record—Not FROM It

The following are some of the things for which he stands and if elected will try to put into effect:

- 1—Safety through a better traffic control system.
- 2—Lower electric light rates for our city.
- 3—A progressive city government with strict economy in operation.
- 4—More adequate playgrounds in Greenville with a public recreation program.
- 5—A cleaner and more beautiful city in which to live.

Mr. Duncan was a commissioned officer in the World War and has been active in Legion affairs since the organization of the local Legion Post.

The experience gained through nine years of service to the City of Greenville, three years as a teacher and Coach of Athletics in the High School and six years as a member of the Board of Aldermen during five of which years he served as Mayor Pro Tem admirably qualifies him to serve the people of Greenville in the high office of Mayor.
