COURT RULING POSTPONED ON SECURITY ACT

Decision Delayed On Measure at Least Until May 17

TEST REFUSED ON KERR-SMITH ACT

Tribunal Declines To Pass on Constitutionality of Repealed Tobacco Bill

Washington, May 3.—(AP)—The Supreme Court delayed today at least until May 17 a final decision on constitutionality of the Federal Social Security Act and declined to pass on unusual litigation to test the constitutionality of the Kerr-Smith Tobacco Production Control Act repealed February 19, 1936, after the similar Agricultural Adjustment Act was invalidated.

A final decision on the Control Act was sought by C. H. Smith, Fayette county, Kentucky, tobacco grower, who won in the Western Kentucky District court a suit to recover from the government $607 of taxes paid on tobacco sales during the crop year 1934-35.

He told the court that collections under the act aggregated $4,260,895 to February 1, 1936, and that all claims for refunds are barred unless suit is filed within two years after the claim is rejected by the Commissioner of Internal Revenue.

In reply the Government said that the "circumstances do not justify resort to this extraordinary procedure." Solicitor General Stanley Reed explained that legislation was pending in Congress to authorize the refund of collection under the act and "if such legislation is adopted it will render unnecessary any further consideration of the question involved in this case."

The court's action on Social Security made it possible that the tribunal will decide at the same time separate cases involving the Unemployment Insurance and Old Age Pension Provisions of the Security law.

Arguments on the unemployment insurance section already have been heard. The justices will listen to debate on the Old Age Pension Provision tomorrow and Wednesday.

Capus M. Waynick Begins To Learn About New Office

New Director Of Purchase And Contract Division Observes That He Has "A Lot To Learn"

Raleigh, May 3.—"The one thing I am sure of in taking over this new job is that I have a lot to learn and am going to have to do a lot of studying at night as well as during the day to get a grasp on the things I am going to need to know," Capus M. Waynick said today as he started "digging in" as the new director of the division of purchase and contract.

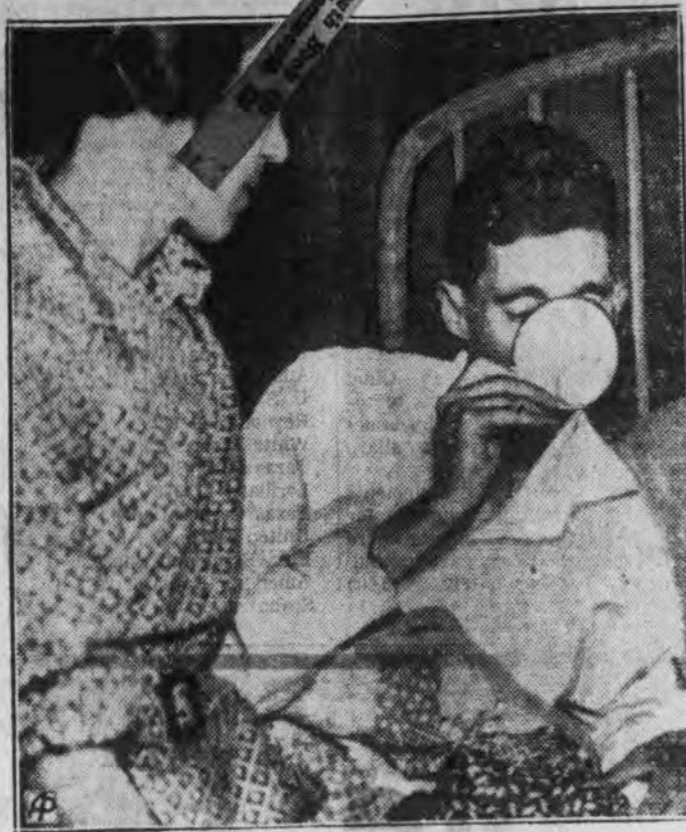

"For while I have supervised all highway purchases for more than two years and so become pretty well acquainted with values and market trends in highway supplies and materials, I now must find out about values, market trends, production costs, the supply and demand for hundreds of other commodities, from castor oil to coffins. I am going to try to learn as much about these things as I tried to learn about the highways of the state when I was with the highway department."

One of the biggest things on Waynick's docket or desk top now, is the purchasing of from $60,000 worth to $750,000 worth of new school buses for the State School Commission. The awarding of contracts for these buses is now awaiting an opinion by the Attorney General as to whether the school commission may over-spend its bus appropriation by $150,000 and buy $750,000 worth of new buses right away. This question is expected to be decided today or tomorrow.

The main job of the director of the purchase and contract division is to buy the various supplies and commodities needed by the state at the lowest prices possible in keeping with the quality needed. This job is regarded as becoming increasingly difficult right now due to steadily advancing prices in almost every field and to increased demands for many commodities.

The reputation Waynick made as highway chairman for getting more road work and roads per dollar than any one else had ever gotten before and for driving hard and close bargains, is expected to make him just as valuable in the purchasing division.

FASTER SIPS WIN AT GOD'S 'CALL'

Breaking his 51-day fast, Jackson Whitlow drinks a half-teacup of elderberry wine at his mountain cabin at Stopping Oak, Tenn. The 45-year-old mountaineer said God spoke to him at dawn, after "the devil tried all night to get me," and told him to "use wine for the devil's sake." Mrs. Whitlow is supporting her husband while he drinks.

Three Co-Defendants Suddenly Enter Pleas of Guilty

Newark, N. J., May 3.—(AP)—The Government attributed to Ellis Parker in his Wendell kidnapping conspiracy trial today the statement that "the capture of the Lindbergh kidnapper" by him "might give me Edgar Hoover's job and make Gov. Einar Hoffman vice president of the United States."

United States Attorney John Quinn told the jury the statement was made by Parker, Chief of Burlington county detectives, to one of the three Brooklyn men accused of conspiring with him to kidnap and torture Paul Wendel into making a false confession to the Lindbergh kidnapping.

Quinn charged the Wendel conspiracy was "a deliberate attempt by the Parkers to commercialize the death of the little Lindbergh baby."

The three co-defendants of Parker and his son, Ellis, Jr., today suddenly changed their pleas to guilty, thus leaving the two Parkers to be tried alone. The three are Murray Bleefeld, Martin Schlossman and Harry Weiss.

State Highway Employees Begin To Breathe Easier

Raleigh, May 3.—Employees of the various divisions of the State Highway and Public Works Commission are breathing more easily here today as a result of the resolution adopted by the new commission in its first meeting Saturday, announcing that no changes would be made in any of the divisions and that all personnel would remain as it has been until after July 1.

There had been considerable uneasiness among some division heads and employees that there might be many additional changes made in the personnel of the commission following the change made by Governor Clyde R. Hoey in the chairmanship and in the members of the commission. But the action of the new commission as contained in the announcement made by Chairman

LOYAL VESSEL DISPATCHED TO BAY OF BISCAY

Government's Biggest Battleship Goes Into Action

APPARENTLY FOR OFFENSIVE DRIVE

Giant Warship Carrying 12-Inch Guns, Also Would Be Able to Strike at Army

St. Jean de Luz, France, May 3.—(AP)—Diplomatic quarters heard today that the Spanish government had sent its biggest battleship, the Jaime Primo, to the Bay of Biscay off Bilbao apparently in a move to shell insurgent lines around the Basque capital.

British and French men-of-war patrolled the Bay today to protect merchant vessels bringing the first refugees out of Bilbao.

Diplomats asserted that the Jaime Primo, carrying 12-inch guns, probably would be able to strike a crushing blow at insurgent vessels operating in the Bay, particularly since the sinking by government planes of the insurgent warship, the Espana.

In addition, these sources pointed out, the Jaime Primo would be in a position to turn its big guns on the insurgent land forces at Bilbao and afford protection for ships evacuated non-combatants from the besieged capital.

The recent apparent inactivity of the government fleet was explained as due to the fact that the Jaime Primo's big guns had only recently been returned from Madrid.

When the siege of Madrid started last July the heavy guns were dismounted and secretly taken from the cruiser to the capital to shell insurgent lines. In the meantime operations of the ship, with smaller calibre guns, had been confined secretly to the Mediterranean sea.

City Clerk's Office, ABC Stores Closed

Although the City Clerk's office and the ABC stores were the only places in the city to close on account of the election, other activity was curtailed to a certain extent today.

Crowds were assembled at the court house and city hall, the two voting places, throughout most of the day.

It's A Tree Capital, Too

Washington (AP)—The nation's capital city has 121,825 trees on its streets. It's the largest tree city in the world. Average spacing is 52 feet. If planted in one row they would extend 1,300 miles. Spraying them once each year takes two to three months and requires 20 tons of arsenate of lead.

Mrs. Wallis Simpson Free To Wed Duke Of Windsor

GRANTED DIVORCE TODAY

JUDGE ALLOWS FINAL DECREE

London, May 3.—(AP)—The precise machinery of the British divorce court clicked for Wallis Warfield Simpson's final divorce decree today and Edward of Windsor, the man who deserted the throne for "the woman I love," lost not a minute in closing the gap between Saint Wolfgang, Austria, and the French Tours.

They are free to marry now whenever they choose, perhaps at a British consular office in France or at the French town hall, but probably not until after the pageantry of state that will put Edward's crown on the head of his brother, King George VI, nine days hence.

These swift developments this morning and this noon brought ever closer the union of the lonely duke and the Baltimore born woman whose love changed the empire's crown and thrilled the whole world.

London 10:30 a. m., May 3.—(AP)—Presiding Judge Sir Boyd Merriman in the divorce court nodded his head over 73 final divorce cases, one of them "Simpson v. Simpson, E. A." and said "I pronounce the decree absolute."

The action took 25 second and only 10 persons witnessed it from the galleries.

St. Wolfgang, Austria, May 3.—(AP)—Noon—Edwards of Windsor, dressing for a mountain hike, answered the telephone, then announced through his adjutant: "The Duke is taking the 4 o'clock train at Salzburg, destination Tours."

Experiment Station To Exhibit Progress

Raleigh, May 3.—Superior strains of small grain developed at the Piedmont branch experiment station near Statesville, Iredell County, will be exhibited at a field day there May 18. It was announced here today.

Special attention will be directed to the crossing of two or more varieties to get the best features of each such as winter hardiness from one strain and disease resistance from another, said Dr. G. K. Nelson, of the N. C. Agricultural Experiment Station at State College.

He also pointed out that certain lines of oats developed at the Piedmont station are resistant to crown rust, stem smut and smut. Other improved strains of small grain will be displayed.

The field day over the station farm will start at 2 p. m. After the trip, luncheon in connection with small grain production will be discussed.

J. W. Henderson, assistant director of the Piedmont station, will preside over the field day exercises. Dr. Middleton will discuss small grain production and the central experiment station at State College. Dr. Luther Shaw, State College extension plant pathologist, will outline methods of controlling cereal diseases.

The field day is open to the public, and all farmers interested in small grain production are invited to attend, Dr. Middleton stated.

DUKE HASTENS TO SEE WALLY

Leaves Austrian Exile at Betrothed's Request to Hurry

St. Wolfgang, Austria, May 3.—(AP)—Edward of Windsor bade this Austrian city good-bye today and hastened toward his newly freed betrothed in France.

Wallis Simpson told him by telephone to "hurry up."

Just before noon the telephone rang in the remodeled pension where the former king of a quarter of the world had spent the last of his lonely exile that began last December.

Edward was putting on his mountain climbing togs. He went to the telephone, learned Mrs. Simpson had been finally divorced from Ernest Simpson in London.

Immediately he called the Chateau de Cande in France and in a few minutes was speaking to his fiancée.

Then just at noon the Duke announced he was leaving at once for Tours. There was no disguising his elation.

The telephone talk, however, was long and serious. Members of the Duke's household said Mrs. Simpson urged him to hurry. He fitted action to her words.

Edward's packing for the most part was completed, but the last details were rushed.

Bags were piled into the Duke's car in time for him to catch the 4 o'clock express for Salzburg. There a special car was moved into the station shortly before noon. A small truck took some of the luggage from Saint Wolfgang.

Six Persons Killed In Highway Accidents Elsewhere

Local officers, members of the State Highway patrol, sheriff's office and City police, reported today there were no serious accidents or major crimes in this section over the week-end.

The only known traffic accident was one between here and Farmville in which a motorist struck a mule with his automobile. The driver, whose name was not known, was not injured and the mule was said to have survived the accident with no serious injury.

This situation in this section was in direct contrast with other sections of the state, six persons having been killed and a number of others injured in highway wrecks during the week-end.

Inside Dope Leaking Out On Teachers' Convention

Raleigh, May 3.—The "inside story" of what happened at the state convention of the North Carolina Education Association in Durham some ten days ago and of the bitter fight for the vice presidency of the association between the various factions backing Superintendent Ben L. Smith of Greensboro, James H. Rose of Greenville and W. P. Greer of Gastonia, in which Smith was elected vice president by a small margin over Rose, is at last beginning to leak out.

It reveals that the more radical element among the class room teachers interested chiefly in higher salaries and in any candidate who would promise to work for higher salaries, double crossed themselves and cast the votes which elected the candidate which was re-

Entertain at Breakfast
An outstanding and lovely affair of the past week was on Saturday morning when Mrs. S. M. Crisp and Mrs. R. S. Neal were charming hostesses at a "May morning" breakfast complimenting Mrs. Joseph S. Moye, a recent bride.

Sharing honors with Mrs. Moye were Miss Maria Garrett, bride-elect; Mrs. Tyrus Wagner and Mrs. James S. Jenkins, recent brides, and Mrs. Charles Brown, of Baltimore.

A traditional May basket filled with mixed flowers hung on the door. As guests arrived they were welcomed by Mrs. Crisp and Mrs. Neal and presented to the honor guests.

The lower floor of the home was decorated in quantities of vari-colored flowers, reminding one of a beautiful garden.

In the dining room places marked with corsages were laid for the honor guests. The table was strewn with flowers in the pastel shades and centered with a miniature May pole, with dancing dolls holding yellow and green streamers.

A tempting two-course breakfast was served. Other guests were served at attractively appointed tables placed throughout the rooms.

A box of lovely cut flowers were presented Mrs. A. E. Shackelford for high cut.

Luncheon For Miss Garrett
Miss Maria Garrett, bride-elect of Saturday, was paid a pretty compliment on Saturday when Miss Marjorie Savage and Miss Mary Shaw Robeson entertained at an attractively appointed luncheon at the home of Mrs. E. B. Ferguson.

Bowls and baskets of cut flowers made an artistic background for the tables placed for the guests. A white and green motif was carried out in the luncheon. For the dessert course of the tempting luncheon, the cakes represented May baskets.

Miss Savage and Miss Robeson presented Miss Garrett gifts in her silver pattern, and Mrs. C. W. Bynum, a recent bride, with a crystal cream and sugar set.

About thirty guests enjoyed this delightful affair.

Called to Rocky Mount
Mrs. W. B. Wilson left last night to be with her sister, Mrs. Hayward Strickland of Nashville, who underwent an operation today in Park View hospital.

Entertain at Dinner
Mr. and Mrs. E. B. Linck of Mt. Airy, New York, who are spending some time in Greenville visiting friends and relatives, entertained at a most enjoyable five-course dinner in the Proctor Hotel dining room Saturday evening.

The table was capered with a basket of lovely narcissus and lilies, while ferns and spring flowers were used profusely to decorate that part of the dining room reserved for the party.

The guests for the occasion included Mr. and Mrs. R. V. Keel, Mr. and Mrs. Wayland Sermons, Miss Mary Ann Keel, Mr. and Mrs. Bryan Gibbs, Mrs. Lizzie Crandall, Miss Lillian Jones and Miss Mertie Holliday of Greenville; Mrs. Blanche Johnston and Miss June Johnston, of California; Mrs. Paul Williams and Miss Peggy Williams of Burlington, N. The club voted to assist an unemployed couple during the coming month.

Mrs. J. H. B. Moore thanked the members for their cooperation during the recent Fine Arts Festival week.

Miss Carolyn Hamric presented a number of her pupils in a delightful dance program. Miss Hamric delighted her audience with a difficult tap dance number.

The club was glad to have Mrs. J. L. Fleming, Mrs. Sam Northrop, Mrs. Jesse Moye II, and Miss Frances Harvey as visitors for the afternoon. These and the club members were served refreshments by Mrs. William Taft, Mrs. Joe Taft, Miss Lucille Minton and Miss Evelyn Rogers.

Glen Gray Dance Tonight
Glen Gray and members of his Casa Loma orchestra arrived in the city this morning for their engagement here tonight at Gorman's warehouse.

The famed orchestra leader and members of his party, traveling in a special pulman, were greeted by a group shortly after they arrived at the station.

The warehouse has been decorated and final arrangements made for the dance, which is scheduled from 10 until 2. All other arrangements have been completed and sponsors declare everything is in readiness for what is expected to be one of the largest attended dances ever held here. Sponsors declare there has been a great demand for advance tickets.

The appearance here will be the only one in this state. Coming here from Atlanta, where they played for college finals, the popular musicians will leave for Pennsylvania.

J. B. Oakley And Son Score High Ranking

The current edition of The Oslico, publication of the Ohio State Life Insurance company of Columbus, Ohio, shows that the Greenville agency ranked second in persistency standing of all agencies throughout the United States for the first three months of the year.

The ranking was made as to leading agencies and individual producers, having a minimum amount of business to renew. Cincinnati was the only agency which ranked above the one here.

MURDER ON THE BLUFF

SYNOPSIS: It's a wild, stormy night at Farrington Bluff, home of Michael's aunt, when attractive Judge Blinshop is shot to death on the bluff. Mike dislocates a shoulder hunting for the missing Skipper, his tall and tweedy younger aunt who turns up with an aghast Gay Palmer, Mike's red-headed sweetheart, worries about him. Next day, stout and prudish Aunt Martha professes that she led our group investigation of the murder, for we are marooned on this island. Part of my job is to find who bashed Cook's head with a flower pot and bound up Annie the maid.

Chapter 15

I Quiz The Aunts

SUDDENLY I rejected my original plan of allowing William to search the first floor while I searched the second. I was just embarking on the most trying experience of that week—the experience of suspecting every person in the house. If there was an intruder inside, I reasoned, our search would be reduced to a simple game of hide-and-seek with the odds decidedly in favor of the hider.

And if William could not be counted on—for a moment I considered organizing the entire household into a searching party, but only for a moment. M. Farrington, Cook, Annie and Michael were in no condition to be relied upon. Mike should have been in bed, and the other three showed signs of becoming problem cases on the least provocation. That left William, Higgins, the Skipper, Gay and myself. Five of us. Two of them women and one an old man.

If we were to go together, we were possibly turning the murderer loose to roam the house at will with the invalids unprotected. If we divided into parties of two and three, it was just possible that the murderer was being sent off into the empty house alone with another unsuspecting victim. The risk was unthinkable. I am not defending my action. I am merely explaining how it seemed to me at the moment logical.

I stuffed the rope and Michael's handkerchief into my pocket. "William, I've changed my mind. I think I'll have a little talk with the rest before we go on with this."

"Hell, sir, you can't do that! We can't go hitting around talking while some bloody devil—"

"My trip on myself wasn't very good, and it was slipping with every uncertain minute. I can do whatever I see fit," I said curdly. "Come on!"

"All right, but I ain't in favor of it!" "So what?" I growled. But I did glance into every room as we went down the hall—the game room, the living room, the dining room and even the conservatory. They were all empty. If they hadn't been, perhaps I might have realized my mistake, but I was appallingly sure that the person I thought was at that moment conversing glibly in the library.

They all turned at the opening of the door—all except Michael who had been saying something. His doubled face still rested on the desk and his face was very red. The atmosphere of the room as reflected on their faces was tense.

"You were saying, Mike?" I said. For half a second he held the pose. Then, "You're damned right I was saying that we'd better let bad enough alone."

"Michael," said the Skipper, "sit down and shut up. Now!" I doubt if her words would have had any effect, but she accompanied them with a forceful shove. Michael got up, I motioned to William to park himself somewhere.

"Have you found anything, James?" quavered M. Farrington.

"Yes," I said to William's evident astonishment. "I've found all I was looking for. I'm going to ask questions, and if you aren't particularly enjoying this, I'd advise you to answer them as carefully as possible. Gay, get a pencil and paper and write down every word of it."

There was a pause. After a moment Gay walked to the desk and picked up a pencil.

Aunt Martha Holds Out
AUNT MARTHA, I will begin with you. Your inviting us here at this time of year was unusual. This party was your idea?"

"It was."
"Will you tell us why?" I was being cautious and I knew it without looking at Michael's black face.

"Certainly, Barbara seemed unwell and depressed. As I wrote you, I thought she would be better for a little company. And I hoped that—that she might bring herself to confide in you or Michael more readily than myself."

M. Farrington's lips were a thin, straight line. In her eyes at that moment gleamed the light which usually suggested a laying low of the nearest available victim. But I went on.

BACK IN HARNESS

Joe Cronin
-THE RED SOX MANAGER HAS REJUVENATED THE BOSTON TEAM BY RETURNING TO HIS OLD SPOT AT SHORT-
"I had no reason for thinking so?"
"I had not." The very voice of the storm seemed to mock both of us.
"Had you any particular purpose in inviting Judith here?"
She stiffened, but she had the grace to blush.
"I thought she might make pleasant company for you and Michael."
In spite of the tension, a general smile greeted that.
"Naturally," I said, the thought of the still figure upstairs wiping the smile from my lips with a vengeance.
"Now, about last night. At what time did you go upstairs?"
"Directly after you left us. I didn't notice the exact hour. I went straight to bed, if that is what interests you."
"Did you sleep immediately?"
"M. Farrington drew herself up. The next thing I was aware of," she stated deliberately, "was Michael standing beside me with the information that Judith and Barbara were not in the house."
I felt as if cold water had unexpectedly been splashed in my face. And then the realization of my own colossal stupidity struck me. Never repeat what I am going to tell you to anyone! And there I stood before the Skipper expecting to hear it voluntarily repeated. My face burned furiously.
"Did anything unusual happen while we were out in the grounds either last night or this morning?"
"Nothing."
"You heard no footsteps in the hall upstairs this afternoon?"
"I did not."
The Skipper's Stable Trip
I THANKED her and met the Skipper's inscrutable eyes fixed on my face. I took a long breath.
"Skipper," I said, "you asked me to do this. What had been troubling you?"
She reached for a cigarette and lighted it with a steady hand. "I'm 52, Jimmie. When you reach that age it's not so easy to be consistently cheerful. That's all there is to it."
"You didn't go upstairs with Aunt Martha last night?" Stupid question. I had seen her go upstairs. She laughed softly.
"My dear boy, after you left us I smoked a cigarette, bored myself stiff, and went to bed. I think you were the last person I saw en route. Martha was asleep. So I didn't wake her. I lay awake till the thought of that dog got me. Then I dressed and went out to her. That's all there is, Jim—except that I heard nothing in the hall."
I cleared my throat. "Why didn't you tell Aunt Martha where you were going?"
"I would have worried her."
"You went directly to the stable?"
"I did and I came directly back. I didn't hear anything but wind."
I braced myself and let the next question fly. "What did you mean last night when you told me to keep Jude away from Michael?"
The Skipper flicked ash from her cigarette coolly. "I meant that if Mike wants to marry Gay, I see no reason why he shouldn't have a clear field."
Gay's pencil snapped.
Should I or should I not ask her point-blank what she and Jude had been talking about when M. Farrington heard them? I decided not to. To all intents and purposes that interview had already been denied. I should be giving away my knowledge and gaining nothing. I turned to Michael.
"What did Jude talk to you about in the game room?"
His shoulders were hunched.
"That," he said, "is none of your damned business."
I know now that in that one moment I lost the opportunity of saving us all from what followed. My anger prevented me from seeing the effect that question and its answer had on anyone in that room. Mike's attitude through that entire day had been getting increasingly in my hair. At the demand of the entire party I had accepted a responsibility as distasteful to me as I was inadequate for it. And it was becoming increasingly evident that my inadequacy might prove disastrous.
I tried to keep my temper.
"What did Jude tell you, Mike?"
Michael looked at me—a long look and a strange one. His face was set, and I knew before he opened his mouth that he was lying. Well, they had all lied.
"She told me that she thought the chimneys were in bad shape and this storm might make them dangerous. She didn't want to alarm anyone else."
It was a feeble attempt, but I knew that a second question would be just so much wasted breath. That much was evident from the set of his chin. Behind me, Gay snorted indignantly.
"All right," I said wearily. "How long did it take her to tell you that?"
He was eyeing me cautiously—trying to anticipate my thoughts.
"About five minutes."

Greenies Lose Exhibition Game to All-Stars, 10-5: Only 2 of Last Year's Players on 1937 Team

The Burlington All-Stars ran away with the Greenies in an exhibition game with the Coastal Coastal Planners here yesterday. The final score turned out to be 10-5.

The first man up for the Burlington club was safe on an error at first. Two hits and another error filled the bases. Barbee of the All-Stars then cleaned the bases with a long triple into center field. He tallied a few moments later on a base hit by Webster.

The visitors went scoreless for the next four innings, but opened up again in the sixth and seventh for two runs in each. Greenville tallied in the fourth on a base hit by Winters. And scored two runs each in the eighth and ninth. Winters homered in the eighth to score Muto ahead of him. Hits by Farley and Muto in the ninth sent in the final two tallies for the Greenies.

Greenville erred six times, while the all-stars had two miscues chalked up against them. Burlington was credited with nine safeties, while the Greenies made six.

Greenville used four hurlers in yesterday's game. Delaney starting the game was pulled in the fourth after showing signs of weakening. Williams, Caliquira and Brown finished the route.

Only two regulars of last year's team were seen on the field yesterday. They were Bo Farley, the skipper and Walter Latham, who was backstop here last year. Both Farley and Latham entered the game in the eighth inning of yesterday's game.

WILSON LEADS IN CONFERENCE

Greenville Is Fourth With Three Wins and Three Losses

Chapel Hill, May 3.—(AP)—If Wilson's undefeated baseball team defeats Greenville Tuesday afternoon, the worst it can hope for is a tie in the Eastern Class A race. It was shown today in a checkup by E. R. Rankin, Secretary of the North Carolina High School Athletic Association.

Secretary Rankin announced that the Class B final game will be played here on Thursday, May 13, and the Class A final here on Friday, May 14.

With seven straight victories to its credit, Wilson still has three games to play on its Eastern Conference schedule. The Tobaccoists must win two of those games to clinch the championship.

Provided Greensboro wins its Saturday contest with Winston-Salem, the Gate City outfit will meet Gastonia for the Western Class A crown sometime this week.

A victory for Winston-Salem would necessitate a play-off between Greensboro and the Camel City side for the first division title in the west. Gastonia has already copied first honors in the second Western district.

In the Eastern Class B competition the following have won District championships: Roanoke Rapids first, Snow Hill, second; Archer Lodge, third, and Hamlet, fourth. The semi-final Tuesday pits Snow Hill against Hamlet and Archer Lodge against Roanoke Rapids.

Western Class B district winners are South High School of Winston-Salem in the first district and Paw Creek in the third district. The second district title is still unsettled.

The Eastern Class A standings:

Durham	4	2	.667
Raleigh	5	4	.556
Greenville	3	3	.500

HE ADDED A BATTING PUNCH TO THE SOX LINE-UP AS WELL AS PUTTING NEW LIFE INTO THE INFIELD

Not only has Joe Cronin rejuvenated the Boston Red Sox by returning to his old post at shortstop, but he has also added needed batting power.

Last year Cronin ran into lots of bad luck. He fractured his thumb early in the season. After that he spent too much time boiling out in steam baths to keep his weight down. And he constantly fretted about his inability to earn the high salary Tom Yawkey was paying him. Not that there was any need for worry. Yawkey is extremely fond of the smiling Irishman for whose services he paid Clark Griffith $250,000. Yawkey often has said he would make the same deal again—even after Cronin failed to show the form he displayed at Washington.

There was not a harder worked man in camp this spring than Cronin. The result is that Joe is down to his best playing weight, 175 pounds, and is looking forward to playing 154 games.

There may be a more rabid baseball fan in this broad land than Richard Himber, the orchestra leader, but if there is he hasn't crossed our path. Himber lavishes his attention on the New York Yankees.

Before the season got under way, the subject of Red Ruffing's contract caused Himber many sleepless nights. Ruffing was offered $15,000 by the Yankees, but held out for $16,000. So anxious was Himber to see Ruffing in the Yankee fold that he offered to make up the difference to be put in escrow and paid to Ruffing at the end of the season if he hit 300.

Ruffing cut his demand to $15,500. Again Himber made his offer, and stuck to the original $16,000. This time, however, Himber asked that Ruffing match his record of last season in games won and lost as well as in batting.

Until he became a Yankee fan Himber was no flying enthusiast. Now he uses that mode of travel to follow his favorites around the American league.

Why Laxatives Fail In Stubborn Constipation

Twelve to 24 hours is too long to wait when relief from clogged bowels and constipation is needed, for this enormous quantity of bacteria accumulate, causing GAS, indigestion and many restlessness, sleepless nights. If you want REAL QUICK RELIEF, take a liquid compound such as Adierika. Adierika contains SEVEN cathartic and carminative ingredients that act on the stomach and BOTH bowels. Most "overnight" laxatives contain one ingredient that acts on the lower bowel only.

Adierika's DOUBLE ACTION gives your system a thorough cleansing, bringing out old poisonous waste matter that may have caused GAS pains, sour stomach, headaches and sleepless nights for months.

Adierika relieves stomach GAS at once and usually remove bowel congestion in less than two hours. No waiting for overnight results. This famous treatment has been recommended by many doctors and druggists for 26 years. Take Adierika one-half hour before breakfast or one hour before bedtime and in a short while you will feel marvelously refreshed.

A GOOD PLAN FOR OUR FARMERS

Elsewhere in this issue there appears an article dealing with the New England farmers and how they beat the depression by diversified farming. What is true in the case of the New England farmer could be equally true or even better in the case of Eastern North Carolina farmers for nowhere is there better soil for farming than right here in our section.

If our agricultural sections are to get ahead financially our farmers must quit gambling on the one cash crop plan and settle down to producing supplies for their own needs first, and diversifying their farming so as to have something to sell the year around. It is to be hoped that not only our farmers but also our business men who are interested directly or indirectly in farming will give careful study to "The Horse and Buggy Farmer" appearing in this issue, for in it we believe they may find a plan for the solving of some of the problems now surrounding our system of farming in this section.

SEX EDUCATION

Sex education should not be confused with sex instruction. This was urged by Dr. Susan Isaacs during a recent talk she made before an individual may possess, as many adults do, an appreciable knowledge on sexual matters, and yet from the viewpoint of his or her emotional feeling attitude to the subject, may be "badly educated."

Sex education, of course, includes knowledge of the essential facts of reproduction, but in addition it is also concerned with the individual's, and notably the child's feelings, wishes and relations to people.

Dr. Isaacs correctly maintains that sex education has for its objectives the fostering of right attitudes, of wisdom and of happiness. The aims of life are therefore involved in sex education. Moreover, it goes on all through an individual's life, whether conscious or not.

Obviously, the sex education of the young is not to be attained entirely by specific instruction. The child is quite likely to learn much by observing the common everyday relations of his elders.

A happy, harmonious home gives the child the right background against which to set the specific factual knowledge of sex physiology. Around this knowledge will prevail a feeling tone of goodness, and of gratification. In an undefined way he will sense that sexpertains to the "life giving, loving and creating," and not to hating or destroying.

When the child begins to ask questions about birth, or sexual differences, his questions should be answered as simply as possible. Elaborate descriptions of sexual anatomy or physiology are more likely to confuse and bewilder the child than they are to enlighten him.

The questions of small children are best answered by the parent, those of older children by other people. The child who fails to ask questions may not be lacking in curiosity, but he may be laboring under an anxiety.

IT'S AN ACQUIRED TASTE

One significant experience in the child's development is the manner in which it acquires what is termed a sense of modesty. All too often this comes by way of being ashamed, rather than by being encouraged to cultivate and to respect personal privacy.

THE HORSE AND BUGGY FARMER

(Continued From One) and hogs, both commercially and for home use; he grew most of the grains; he produced vegetables and fruit for home use. When the development of the fertile West threw an abundance of meats and grain upon the market, the Yankee's small, thin-soled fields could not compete. But he did not lobby in Congress for a solution of his difficulties. Instead, he modified his system of farming.

Giving up the commercial production of beef, pork, horses and grain, he went into dairying with a vengeance. He took up commercial poultry-raising; he produced fruits and vegetables, especially potatoes, for the market. Note that he still diversified, but in new channels. Today, as a result, the farms of New England furnish employment and homes for more than 800,000 people.

The average Yankee farmer has approximately 100 acres, mostly in woodland and pasture; only from five to ten acres being tilled annually. The small size of the average New England farm—just half the average for the United States as a whole—carries the advantage of owner-labor, personal oversight, and personal interest. Over 80 per cent of New England farms are owner-operated; only 40 per cent are so classified in the West. North Central grain states. Quite probably the Yankee owner was born on this selfsame farm or within ten miles of it. He expects to spend his life there, and plans for gradual and steady improvement. He raises much of his own food, and his cash income in most cases comes from several crops; even in bad years at least one crop is reasonably certain to show favorable returns and keep his home intact.

Unlike the western farmer, the New Englander did not expand his holdings in boom times in the speculative hope of doubling his income. He improved the farm he already owned, and saved the rest of his money. If he had not had a sound investment in his farm and some money in the bank, he would be in the same financial condition today as the western farmer who overexpanded on land bought at $200 to $400 an acre when livestock and grain were selling at an all-time high.

Can the principles of Yankee farming which have proved successful for upwards of 300 years be applied with equal success elsewhere? His thrifty attitude toward money, his resistance to speculation, are unquestionably sound. His diversification of crops, which among other advantages permits the spreading of labor over the year, has been found practicable where it has been tried. Reliance upon a single crop courts disaster from two directions. Unfavorable weather may so reduce the yield of a crop as to make the year's work a cause of bankruptcy. On the other hand, a year extremely favorable to a particular crop may cause a surplus which forces the price below the cost of production.

The crux of America's agrarian problem might be worded this way: if you put a man on a piece of ground and tell him to get a living or die, he will live. But if the same man is told to run a farm as a successful business he is immediately confronted by complexities of man-

NORTH CAROLINIANS IN NATION'S CAPITAL

By PAUL BARKLEY

NORTH CAROLINA IN WASH

Washington, May 1.—(AP)—The North Carolina Congressional delegation, which recently got together for the first time in many moons to have a group photograph made, got together solidly again this week. The purpose of the second gathering was to get a veterans' hospital facility for Eastern North Carolina. The two senators and 11 representatives made the pilgrimage to appear with an American Legion delegation before Brigadier General Frank T. Hines, veterans administrator.

They came away with hope, but no positive assurance, that if and when another veterans' hospital is authorized it will go to Eastern North Carolina.

Senator Robert R. Reynolds was the lone "star" in a movie shown at Reynolds' party to Senate pages the other night.

The films were part of the 50,000 feet the Senator shot back in 1924 when he made his first trip around the world.

agement not directly concerned with tillage of the soil; he meets such problems as marketing, such unpredictable factors as price, and he must face the competition of other men engaged in his business; he must not only have farming ability, he must know something of the principles of business and must expose himself to the gambles involved.

Yet southern and western farmers cling to the business idea, protesting that diversification would interfere with the raising of their particular cash crop. The answer to their objection is also a partial answer to the question of surplus. While a Yankee farmer is busy growing his own food, he is not contributing to a surplus of wheat or cotton or hogs. And what the Yankee farmer grows provides him with a sound and generous menu—vegetables, fruit and berries; dairy products, poultry, and often fresh green beef. These are eaten fresh in season and preserved for winter use. Adoption of a program that would furnish the 32,000,000 farm population with a home-grown abundance of such staple foods could be accomplished without subsidy, and would relieve more want than has any single New Deal measure.

It is known that letters and postal cards were sent out to teachers in all sections of the state in behalf of Smith, pointing out that he had the approval of State Superintendent Erwin and that he was greatly interested in the welfare of the classroom teachers. Before becoming superintendent of the city schools in Greensboro, succeeding Guy Phillips, Smith was superintendent of the Shelby schools, in Cleveland county, next to Rutherford, where Erwin was county superintendent for many years before he became State Superintendent.

Some think this was a factor in Erwin's support of Smith for vice president. It is also maintained that Smith was much indebted to Phillips in getting the Greensboro job. Because of these facts, there were indications at first that the class-

Many of the scenes included shots of the Senator. "Why, Senator, you don't look a day older than you do in those pictures," said one of Reynolds' guests.

Representative Robert Ramspeck of Georgia is the only Southerner on the House Labor Subcommittee which is scheduled to begin hearings around May 10 on the Ellenbogen textile bill. Other members are Representatives Kent E. Keller of Illinois, chairman; Reuben T. Wood of Missouri; James H. Gildea of Pennsylvania, all Democrats; George J. Schneider, Wisconsin, Progressive; and Clyde H. Smith, Maine Republican.

Chairman Connery (D. Mass.), of the Whole Committee, has expressed belief the textile bill—from which he says President Roosevelt has given the "go ahead" signal—would eliminate wage differentials between Southern and Northern mills.

This, Connery claims, would be to the advantage of both sections.

room teachers were not going to support Smith very heavily, that they would vote either for Rose, running on an open anti-administration platform, as far as the present regime of the education association is concerned, or for Grier, regarded as having the support of the Gastonia and Charlotte classroom teachers associations.

Before the convention, Rose was being generally picked as the winner because he had the support of the teachers in almost every county east of Durham, who pointed out that the east had had only one vice president of the association in ten years, while Guilford county had had four in that period.

But after the teachers got to Durham, something happened. It is understood that in the first place, those working for Smith assured the classroom teachers that if elected, he would oppose the present Warren-Erwin-Phillips combine in the education association, work for higher salaries. At any rate, many of the classroom teachers who voted for him are now convinced that he is definitely pledged to get rid of Warren as executive secretary and also to get Phillips off the executive committee. It is also understood that as a result of this, the Charlotte, Greensboro and Durham classroom teachers switched from Grier and Rose to Smith.

In addition, both a letter and rumor were circulated among the classroom teachers to the effect that Rose had once served in the general assembly and had made the statement that the salaries of the classroom teachers were high enough already. This was entirely false, as Rose has never served in the general assembly, is noted as one of the most liberal superintendents in the state, having the only city school system which provides sick leave for its teachers with full pay.

But when the votes were counted—the result was never officially made public—Smith is understood to have received 328 votes, Rose 268 and Grier 75.

Among those who know what happened, sentiment is already seething, many feeling that Rose was "sold out" by false propaganda and political trading that the classroom teachers were tricked into double-crossing themselves. There are also indications that the "old guard" is also peeved.

Some changes are believed likely in the personnel of some of the other prison offices, however. It is also believed that Charles Ross will be retained as counsel for the commission and head of the legal division, that Sam Smith will remain as chief of the accounting division. Some even think that W. Vance Baise now has a good chance to remain as chief highway engineer.

JILTED LOVER'S 'SMOKE CURE' FATAL IN JAPAN

Tokyo (AP)—One death and several hospital cases have resulted from a revival by despondent lovers in isolated districts of North Japan, of the ancient "smoke cure" to release an unfaithful mistress from spells, "put upon her by a fox." The medieval cure for erring mistresses consists of holding the victim in the smoke from a fire of green cedar leaves until the demon is exorcised. The dead victim was the 23-year-old daughter of a farmer, who, according to her lover, had been acting queerly for a month, during which she refused his courtship. Convinced that she had been bewitched by the fox (who in country districts is still believed to be endowed with supernatural powers), the suitor and several sympathetic relatives held the squirming maiden over the fire. The first "cure" did not drive out the demon. During a fourth treatment the girl died of suffocation. Several similar cases of suffocation have been treated recently in hospitals.

VEHICLE LAWS STRENGTHENED

Full Description Given of Drivers Who Lose Licenses

Reflector Bureau.
Raleigh, May 3.—Detailed descriptions of all drivers whose licenses have been revoked for drunken driving or otherwise, are being given each day to highway patrolmen and all other peace officers, it was learned today from Director Arthur Fuik of the highway safety division of the Department of Revenue.

At first, the division merely announced the names, addresses, dates of revocation and automobile license numbers of those whose licenses were revoked. But recently the daily reports of revocations have also been carrying a detailed description of the drivers, so that patrolmen and police officers can identify them more easily. These descriptions are taken from the duplicates of their drivers' licenses, in the files of the highway safety division.

This past week the highway safety division revoked the licenses of 146 drivers, of which 18 were revoked today. And in addition to getting the name and address of each driver whose license has been revoked for one year, the patrolmen, police chiefs and sheriffs over the state have also been given a fairly complete description of each of these drivers.

For instance, on today's list is the name of W. H. Carrow, of Grimesland, R. F. D., whose license was revoked May 30 for driving after his license was suspended. In addition to giving his license number as 423329, under his names appears the following letters and figures: 59-w-m-160-5-9-br-blk.

This indicates to the patrolman or police officer that Mr. Carrow is 59 years old, white, male, weighs 160 pounds, is 5 feet 9 inches tall, has brown eyes and black hair.

On today's list is also the name of Weddell T. Alcock of Hoboken—wherever that may be—whose license was revoked for drunken driving. Under his name is the notation: 30-w-m-176-5-6-br-br. Which means that Alcock is 30 years old, white, male, weighs 175 pounds, is 5 feet 6 inches tall, has brown eyes, brown hair.

"By adding these descriptions of drivers to the lists of revocations, we are making it more and more difficult for those whose licenses have been revoked to drive and get away with it," Fuik said.

rows will help bring the crops along. A little readily available nitrogen will help the cabbage particularly just before they begin heading. Do not put bean or pea seed in contact with fertilizer. Put out fertilizer for these crops at least a week or ten days prior to planting and thoroughly mix it with the soil. It should be placed at least two to three inches below the seed. The roots of peas and beans are very tender and are subject to severe burning which will destroy the plant if they come in direct contact with the fertilizer.

"Along with its advantages the warm weather also brings its disadvantages. Insects begin their work in earnest. Those pretty little white butterflies you have seen flying around your cabbage plants are not on a mission of good-will. They are the mamma and papa of the little green worm that plays havoc with your cabbage. The male is almost white, the female has black spots on her wings which are symbolic of her soul. She lays the eggs on the other leaves of the cabbage and in three to ten days the worms are busy. You should get busy when you first see the butterfly. In the early morning when the plants are moist, dust with 75 per cent Rotenone. This will also control the little green plant lice which suck the leaves causing them to curl.

"Spray your tomatoes, cucumbers, and melons with Bordeaux. This can be bought ready prepared. Get that which contains some form of arsenic as it will also control the chewing insects as well as some of the leaf spots.

"For the Bean Beetle dust with a prepared dust containing 75 per cent Rotenone." Be sure to get this on the underside of the leaves."

County Agent Bennett Issues Statement on Plantings

R. R. Bennett, Pitt county farm agent, today issued the following statement on the planting and care of gardens:

"With the coming of May the bars are let down so to speak as far as the gardener is concerned. "The heavy rains which have fallen in most sections have probably taken away some of the fertilizer we put out before our earlier plantings were made and a light application carefully worked in along the

N. Y. Stock Market

New York, May 3.—(AP)—While buyers nibbled at selected stocks in today's market, the appetite was far from voracious.

Favored steels, oils, rails and specialties were bid up fractions to two points in unusually slower dealings.

With corporate statements and dividends highly satisfactory, sellers were timid throughout.

Bonds were quiet and slightly improved. Commodities were uneven. The French franc pushed up briskly and sterling gave ground.

Trends were conflicting at the close. Transfers were around 650,000 shares.

SOCIAL SECURITY: The World's Biggest Job of Bookkeeping

THE MEN:

Arthur J. Altmeyer
Acting Chairman

Frank Bane
Executive Director

By ALEXANDER E. GEORGE
(AP Feature Service Writer)

Baltimore—While the social security act runs the gauntlet of court attacks on its constitutionality, the social security organization is conducting here the world's biggest bookkeeping job. And there isn't a bookkeeper in the place.

In an old warehouse facing Baltimore's historic waterfront, 463 "mechanical brains" manned and checked by 2,400 operators and clerks are compiling the largest volume of data ever collected on American wage earners.

This information covers more than 26,000,000 persons under one old age pension provision of the social security law alone.

Mass Production System.

There are, besides, an estimated 18,520,000 workers covered by its unemployment compensation section and 1,600,000 receiving federal aid to the aged, the blind and dependent children.

Tabulation of information on potential pensioners is handled in nine major operations in a "straight line" mass production system like that used by big industries.

A master card for each of the 26,000,000 is punched full of holes. By feeling these perforations, machines sort the cards alphabetically and by age, sex, and color of the persons the represent. Fifty-five machines sort 600,000 cards daily.

Machines Almost Think

Other machines can produce duplicate cards or translate punch-hole information into print. Still another set up ledger sheets for keeping "box scores" on individual earnings to be posted every three months.

On the social security records are thousands of John Smiths. But the account of any registered John Smith can be found almost instantly by these "thinking machines."

If John loses his old age pension card and wants to know his account number, it can be learned in a jiffy by referring to the rotary alphabetical index. The Smiths, and others, are indexed alphabetically and by first names and age groupings.

Battalions of error catchers back up the machines. These clerks check and double check the records so that when John Smith is 65 the government will know how much is due him in monthly old age payments and where to send his check.

Headed by Ex-School Teacher

Top man in the organization which handles this mass of figures is an erstwhile Wisconsin school teacher, Arthur J. Altmeyer, acting chairman of the social security board since the resignation of New Hampshire's John Winant.

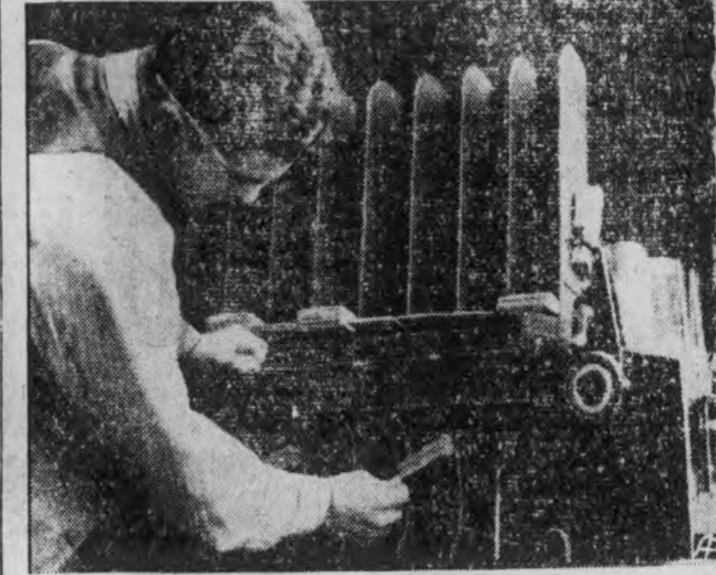

Lean, studious, steeped in statistics, he represents the non-political type of Washington official. He had 13 years' experience with the Wisconsin industrial commission, served as NRA compliance chief and later as assistant secretary of labor.

Under Altmeyer, jovial Frank Bane of Virginia, as executive director, is general manager of the setup. Forty-six, he is a former school superintendent and has wide acquaintance among educators, welfare experts and business men.

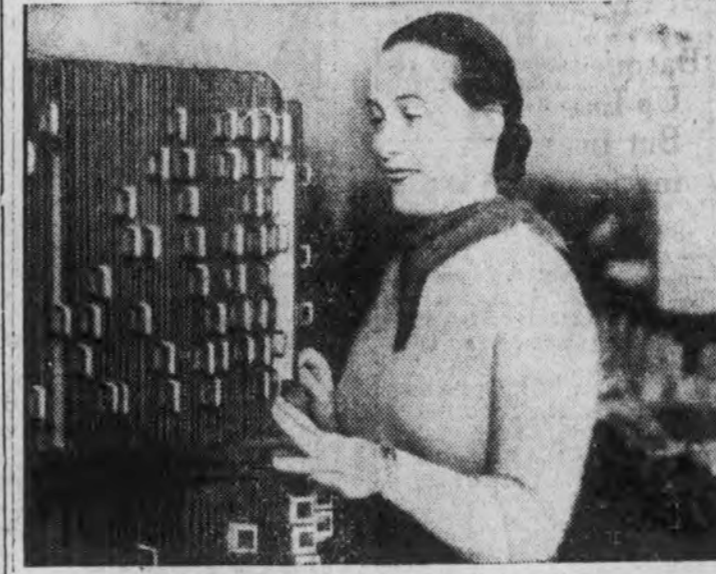

Altmeyer's colleague on the two-man board is Vincent M. Miles of Arkansas, lawyer, politician and American Legionnaire.

General counsel is Thomas H. Eliot, Harvard-trained grandson of famed Harvard President Eliot and one of the New Deal's brightest legal luminaries.

King And Queen of England Inspecting New Style Shoes

This photograph of the King and Queen of England gives a very rare, normal glimpse of their Royal Highness. It is an interesting story as to the reason why we have been able to reproduce it.

Twelve months ago, one of England's leading shoe manufacturers packed his bags and boarded one of the Atlantic's fastest liners. The women of England had been clamoring for shoes made over American lasts and styled as only Americans know how to style shoes. This manufacturer well knew that the great "American invasion" of women's shoes into England must, in some manner, be met by his great fac-teries, otherwise the high grade women's shoe business would all be done by American shoe manufacturers. So this very able Briton decided to do something about it.

Before he left England he had been advised of the leading women's shoe manufacturers in the United States. Arriving here, he traveled from city to city inspecting these leading shoe factories, attempting to find what, in his judgment, was the best women's shoe manufacturer in the United States.

When he returned home and stepped from the gangplank in England, he had in his pocket an agreement, which licensed him to use the "limit" lasts and styles of the nationally-famous Red Cross Shoes. Losing no time, he put these American-styled shoes into production in his mammoth factory in Kendal, England. And today English women have the opportunity of wearing these famous shoes made under the supervision of the leading women's shoe manufacturer in all England.

On a recent visit to this very factory, the accompanying picture was taken of King George and Queen Elizabeth inspecting shoes.

OPponents of COURT BILL MAY CONSIDER COMPROMISE

he was willing to vote any time. Some of the other opposition leaders have expressed the state attitude in view of the committee's 10 to 8 lineup against the bill.

While the committee continued private discussions of the bill, opponents organized further protests against it.

Senator Copeland (D. New York) said he and Senators Byrd (D. Va.) Gerry (D. R. I.) and McCarran (D. Nev.) would address a Philadelphia mass meeting May 10.

car, got out, and hat in hand, greeted the group of school children, shook hands with each, then chatted with them a few minutes, as if he had all the time in the world, with no hint that his luncheon had been waiting for him at least an hour.

A great fellow, this Governor Hoey.

San Francisco (AP)—To improve the national health, Chile has decreed that all salt for human consumption shall contain 4 per cent sodium acid phosphate. Chilean diet has been notably lacking in mineral salts, a scientific survey disclosed.

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE—

Without Calomel—And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning

The liver should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily. If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas builds up your stomach. You get constipated. Your whole system is poisoned and you feel sour, sunk and the world looks pink.

Laxatives are only makeshifts. A mere bowel movement doesn't get at the cause. It takes these good, old Carter's Little Liver Pills to get those two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up". Harmless, gentle, yet amazing in making bile flow freely. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills by name. Stubbornly refuse anything else, Doc.
