GUFFEY TAKES UP BATTLE FOR COURT REFORM

Charges Tribunal Has Been Partisan, Prejudiced, Biased

CITES NEED FOR R' ORGANIZATION

Declares Workmen and Farmers Have Been Deprived of Fundamental Rights

Washington, July 7.—(AP)—Senator Guffey (D. Pa.) carried on the administration's battle for its judiciary reorganization program today by charging the Supreme Court "has been partisan, prejudiced and biased in denying workmen and farmers their fundamental legal rights."

His bluntly worded speech opened the second day's debate on the compromise court bill, calling for the appointment of one new justice annually to supplement those serving beyond the age of 75.

Guffey said reorganization of the Supreme Court was necessary to curtail economic wrongs and injustices that have been wrangling and festering for generations.

"History shows conclusively," he asserted, "that throughout most of its existence the Supreme Court has been enmeshed in partisan party politics, that throughout most of its history it has been openly biased as the last bulwark of reaction x x x."

Sandhill Project Nearly Ready For Official Opening

Reflector Bureau Raleigh, July 7.—Many recreational facilities, such as bath houses, bathing beaches, boat houses, picnic grounds and tennis courts, have already been completed by the Resettlement Administration on the Sandhill project and on the Jones, Salter and Singletary lakes project and will be opened to the public in the near future, it was learned from the regional offices of the Resettlement Administration here today.

The schedule of charges to be made for the various facilities has already been approved and sent to the project managers.

No charge will be made for the use of public picnic grounds, or picnic facilities, but small nominal charges will be made for the use of boat, house and bathing beaches, tennis courts, for the use of boat, on the lakes, while the cabins which have been provided will be rented by the day, week or month at established charges.

While good progress has been made in developing these two projects and in providing recreational facilities, the actual dates on which they will be opened will depend upon how soon they can be finished. The opening dates will be announced by the project managers.

At the Sandhill project, ten cabins have already been completed and furnished and electric lights, running water and sewage facilities provided; a public house or recreational pavilion has been completed and furnished, also a large fire picnic ground, all overlooking the new lake. Frank W. Bateman is project manager, with headquarters at Hoffman.

At the Jones, Salter and Singletary lakes project in Bladen county, the bathhouse, bathing beach and tennis courts have already been completed and the bath house will be completed by August 1, according to Project Manager Lewis Dorsett of Elizabethtown.

"He was a burly man," the witness said. "He needed a shave. He was about 40 years old, five feet, six or seven inches and weighed perhaps 145 or 150 pounds."

BEAUFORT LINE GETS CHARTER

New Company to Operate Railroad to Morehead City

Raleigh, July 7.—(AP)—The Beaufort and Morehead Railroad company today got a charter for specific object of acquiring and operating 317 miles of line between Beaufort and Morehead City which formerly was operated by the Norfolk and Southern.

The organization of the new company was taken here to end a fight of several years standing by the citizens of Beaufort to prevent abandonment of the little section.

The sector was left isolated from other Norfolk and Southern lines when the state ended its lease of the Atlantic and North Carolina railroad from Morehead to Goldsboro in the Norfolk and Southern.

H. P. Crowell, president of the state-owned Atlantic and North Carolina railroad, subscribed two shares of stock in the new corporation. Other stock holders and shares subscribed for are Stanley Woodland of Morehead City, 17; and at Beaufort R. W. Sarr, 12; C. R. Wheatley, 12; J. F. Duncan, 12; W. V. B. Potter, 12; and George J. Brooks, 27.

Blue Ridge Parkway Now Open For Several Miles

Reflector Bureau—Laurel Mountain regarded as too deep to try to fill.

More people would visit those sections of the parkway which are passable and would hike along other portions of it if they knew how to get to them. At present, about the only people who are visiting this particular section of the parkway are those who know of the National Forest Service roads, one leading up to Big Laurel Gap from Old Port on Route 70, a few miles east of Old Port, or who know how to reach the gap from Route 101 where the forest service road leaves Route 104 just above Busick, leading to and through the Mount Mitchell State Game Refuge and fish hatchery. This route is better known than the other, since the game refuge is being visited by thousands of people each summer, although only a small percentage of these go on to the top of the gap where the forest service road intersects the parkway.

Center Of Search For Flier Shifted To South Pacific

Still No News From Amelia Earhart and Navigator After Five Days of Hunting in Area East of Howland Islands

Honolulu, July 7.—(AP)—Navy ships and planes, coordinating efforts in the vast hunt for Amelia Earhart, aimed today at a new region in the South Pacific wastes where growing belief and some facts indicated the missing aviatrix may be marooned.

The Coast Guard at S. N. Francisco said it had been checking with the Cutter Itasca throughout the day, but had no news of the missing aviatrix and her navigator.

Water McLenamy and Carl Pierson, Los Angeles amateur radio operators who have eight receiving sets operating, said they had heard nothing on the Earhart wave lengths throughout the night and doubted other amateurs had picked up anything because all operators have asked to notify them of any reception.

Five discouraging days of scanning the immense area of north-north-east of bleak Howland Island, which the aviatrix missed last Friday, turned the search to the corresponding area which centered in south-south-east of Howland, where

Refuse U.S. Award For War-Time Fire Losses

German-American Mixed-Claim Commission Unanimous

Washington, July 7.—(AP)—The German-American Mixed Claims Commission, by unanimous agreement, dismissed today a motion of the United States for an award of $22,000,000 to claimants who suffered losses in war-time fires and explosions, including the disasters at Black Tom and Kingsland, N. J.

The motion was made by Robert Bonyne, the American agent. It was opposed by Dr. Richard Paulig, third secretary of the German embassy and agent of the German government.

The American motion was based upon an agreement entered into last summer at Munich by agents of both governments, including Bonyne, but not Dr. Paulig.

After listening to arguments, the German and American commissioners and Supreme Court Justice Roberts, the umpire, retired for a half hour before deciding to dismiss the American proposal. The commission then recessed until 10 a. m. Thursday when previous testimony will be considered.

Especially in Washington government technicians made ready to issue their first estimate of the size of the 1937 cotton crop, chief source of cash for 13,000,000 farmers, laborers and their families on 2,000,000 farms.

At 11 a. m. (EST) Thursday the Federal Crop Reporting board will make public its estimate on cotton acreage in cultivation on July 1.

Private trade agencies have already forecast a large expansion in cotton acreage this season compared to recent years. They have estimated production at from 14,000,000 to 14,500,000 bales.

The board recently turned over $20,000 to the county. A like sum already had been placed in the general fund coffers. Approximately $10,000 was left for operating expenses and the value stock on hand was estimated at $45,000.

UNION LAWYER HURLS CHARGE OF TERRORISM

Republic Steel Plants Again Humming With Activity

END PREDICTED FOR JOHN LEWIS

Mill Superintendent Declares Union Will Never Be Able To Get Men Out Again

Cleveland, July 7.—(AP)—Republic Steel Corporation plants hummed with activity here today under the protection of bristling national guard bayonets as Lee Pressman, general counsel for CIO steel strikers, charged a "state of brutal terrorism" prevailed on the Ohio strike front.

"New steel by Friday," predicted Republic plant officials.

Smoke streamed from towering stacks of three Republic units after the last of a series of successful back-to-work thrusts in defiance of John Lewis' CIO.

Republic claimed 3,987 out of 5,000 normally employed steel workers responded yesterday at the reopening of the Corrigan-McKenney plants. Upon that and both divisions and the Trusson works, Republic Steel and Tube, Inc., is scheduled to reopen tomorrow.

Pickets were limited to 12 at each plant gate. Nearly 1,000 troops were here to preserve order.

"This is the beginning of the end of John L. Lewis," said H. G. Ellwood, CIO spokesman.

Ranger Undaunted Upon Confronting Bear On Cliff Top

Game Protector Holds His Ground When Faced With Bruin While Patrolling Mount Mitchell

Reflector Bureau Raleigh, July 7.—Big Hawk bears are animals to be given a wide berth as far as the average person is concerned, but to the State Game Protector, who patrol the 37,900 acres of the Mount Mitchell Game Refuge day and night, summer and winter, meetings with big black bears are just part of the day's work.

But about two weeks ago Ranger "Chet" McKinney had a meeting with a big bear near the top of Mount Mitchell which would have given any one else but McKinney a bad case of jitters. But McKinney although he is only about five feet tall, and who knows every crag, creek and crevice in the Mount Mitchell section from patrolling it for years, does not know what the word fear means, and came back into the refuge headquarters as cool and unconcerned as ever, according to C. N. Mease, chief protector of the refuge.

McKinney had been out on a patrol that took him almost to the top of Mount Mitchell and up the steepest side where it was necessary to climb up rock cliffs that are almost perpendicular, according to Mease. As he finally reached the top of a steep cliff and pulled himself up over it, McKinney looked around and found himself face to face with a big, black bear which had just finished climbing up the other side of the rock.

"What did you do when you saw the bear there in front of you, Chet?" Mease asked him, when he finally told of his experience.

"Well, I studied a minute and then said 'Bar, where the hell are you goin'.' Then the bar looked at me a second and turned and ran down the rock as fast as he could and went off into the brush and timber. He was more scared than I was."

McKinney measured the bear's foot tracks and said the tracks were 11 inches long and seven inches wide, indicating that the bear must have weighed from 600 to 700 pounds, which is unusually large for bears, even on Mount Mitchell.

"He was one of the prettiest bears I ever saw," McKinney said.

Negro Being Held For Shooting Another

Henry Wilson, young Greenville Negro, is suffering from wounds inflicted by a pistol ball and Elijah May, 14-year-old Negro boy, is being held for the shooting.

The shooting occurred yesterday afternoon outside the ball park. Wilson at first was said to have claimed that he did not shoot him, but Chief George A. Clark declared this morning that he believed May shot Wilson in the leg after the two had been scuffling. May probably will be turned over to juvenile authorities.

On the very day he was elected president of the important American Iron and Steel Institute, nearly half of his plants were shut down (Continued on Page Three)

The wedding of Miss Mildred Elizabeth Porter, of Chocod, N. C., and Richard Henry Worthington, of Ayden, was solemnized at noon Sunday in Jarvis Memorial Methodist church, with the Rev. T. McMillan officiating with the ring ceremony.

Prior to the ceremony, Miss Elizabeth Edwards, of Chocod, rendered a program of nuptial music, including "I Love You Truly," and "Sweetest Story Ever Told." "Liebestraum" by Liszt was played during the ceremony. Wagner's Bridal Chorus from Lohengrin was used as the processional and Mendelssohn's Wedding March as the recessional. The bride and groom entered the church together.

The bride was becomingly attired in a dress of tucked shell pink chiffon. She wore a picture hat of pink straw, with harmonizing accessories. Her shoulder corsage was of sweetheart roses and valley lilies.

Immediately after the ceremony the couple left on a wedding trip to northern points of interest and upon their return will be at home in Ayden.

Mrs. Worthington is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. G. S. Porter of Chocod. She attended East Carolina Teachers' College and for the past several years has held a position in the office of the Pitt County Farm Agent, Greenville.

Cox-Byrd. Mount Olive, N. C., July 5.—The wedding of Miss Callie Isabell Byrd, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Talmadge Byrd, to Frederick Love Cox, of Grifton, was solemnized Wednesday evening, June 30th, at 8 o'clock, in the Mount Olive Methodist church.

The church was beautifully decorated for the occasion. As a background for the altar decorations, long leaf pines, flanked with floor standards of graduated height, bearing lighted tapers, formed a semi-circle. Ferns were used in the foreground and the arrangement was centered with a floor basket of white gladioli, white daisies and feverfew. The chancel rail was outlined with ivy, at either end of which were floor baskets of gladioli, and daisies, and pedestal cannelabra. The choir rail was decorated with ivy, and a lovely arrangement of valley lilies, flanked with lighted tapers was used on the piano.

Preceding the ceremony a program of nuptial music, including Schubert's "Serenade," "Ah, Sweet Mystery of Life" and "To a Sweet Rose," was rendered by Mrs. E. J. Pope, Miss Mary Adams Oliver sang "Indian Love Call," and "Until." Mrs. Pope played the bridal chorus from "Lohengrin" by Wagner, as the processional; Mendelssohn's "Wedding March" as the recessional, and "Evening Star" during the ceremony.

The ushers were G. E. Alphin, Jr., uncle of the bride; David Byrd and Norman Simmons, of Mount Olive; J. A. Batson of Atlantic, and Carroll Chauncey, of Grifton. They entered and took their places with-in the chancel.

They were followed by the bridesmaids, who were Miss Catherine Meier, of Wilmington; Miss Clara Bell Byrd, of Mount Olive; Miss Lucy Belle Coley, of St. Paul, and Mrs. J. A. Batson, of Atlantic.

The bridesmaids wore identical dresses of white organza, cut along old fashioned lines, with cape and skirt finished with fluted ruffles of the same material. They carried colonial bouquets of painted daisies, in pastel shades, tied with matching tulle, and each wore a colonial nosegay, matching her bouquet, in her hair.

Miss Elizabeth Butler, of Glen Alpine, was maid of honor. Her dress was fashioned like those of the bridesmaids, and she wore a nosegay of white flowers in her hair, and carried a bouquet of white daisies and feverfew.

The flower girls were Eva Grady, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ben Grady, of Mount Olive, and Maxine Haynes, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Granger Haynes, of Goldsboro. They wore white organza dresses, Princess Elizabeth style, and carried miniature colonial bouquets of white daisies.

Fred Pickett, son of Mr. and Mrs. Norman Pickett, of Magnolia, carried the ring in the center of a white satin bow on a tiny shirred satin pillow.

The bride entered with her brother, William Estus Byrd, by whom she was given in marriage. Her gown, which was worn by her aunt, Mrs. J. A. Batson, at her wedding, was of Duchess satin, fashioned on empire lines, with full sleeves at the shoulder, tapering to a closely fitted point at the wrist. A row of tiny satin buttons starting at the top of the gown in the back reached far into long sweep train. At the throat with tiny cords of white rolled satin, matching the coronet worn on her head. From the coronet the triple illusion veil fell into a long train. She carried a colonial bouquet of white roses, showered with valley lilies, and white satin ribbons.

The bride was met at the altar by the bridegroom, who was attended by Henry Rumley, of Grifton, as best man.

The vows were spoken after the bride's pastor, Rev. W. C. Benson, who was assisted by Rev. W. L. Loy. The bride's mother was gown in a handsome model of pink lace over taffeta, and her flowers were pink roses.

Mrs. L. O. Cox, of Grifton, mother of the bridegroom, wore a lovely dress of printed chiffon, with which she wore tulleman roses.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Talmadge Byrd, of Mount Olive. She is a graduate of the Glen Alpine high school, and has attended East Carolina Teachers' College, Greenville; Bergen Dramatic school, in New Jersey, and a number of dancing schools in New York City. She has been a teacher of dancing in a number of Eastern North Carolina towns, among them Mount Olive. Besides her teaching, she is an artist in interpretative and other types of dancing.

Mr. Cox, son of Mr. and Mrs. L. O. Cox, of Grifton, attended E. C. T. C., Greenville, and N. C. State, and is now associated with his father in extensive farming, mercantile and automobile business in Grifton.

Immediately following the ceremony the bride's grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. G. E. Alphin, entertained at an informal reception at their home on Southernland street. The house was very attractively decorated for the occasion with a variety of cut flowers.

Guests were greeted by Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Batson and introduced to the receiving line by Mrs. E. T. Watson, Mrs. George A. Hieck, of Wood Ridge, N. J., and Mrs. Richard Meier, of Wilmington, directed guests into the dining room.

In the dining room, cut flowers were used with charming effect in decoration. The table, covered with a handsome lace cloth, was centered with a three-tiered wedding cake, topped with a miniature bride and groom. The cake was placed on large reflector, which was outlined with fern, and small swans, filled with dainty white flowers.

What was accomplished in the last one?

The last war was fought by Americans supposedly for "the preservation of Democracy." Americans gave wealth and man-power in that struggle. Her participation was a vital factor in the allied victory. But when the time came for peace-making, her influence for a just and merciful peace was negligible. Britain and France with all their historic hates and passions wrote the murderous Versailles treaty; which is greatly responsible for present conditions in Europe.

The whole fiasco might be repeated. America's power might be great in the winning of a war, but at the council table, the same passions will rule. And "Wars to End Wars" will be concluded by peace treaties that perpetuate them.

FLAME TRAIL

BY MARIE DE SERVAUD

SYNOPSIS: When Kay Crandon's Lazy Nine ranch house and barn burn, Josh Hastings, owner of the Flying Six, tries to buy her ranch and court Kay. But she hates him and is determined to keep her ranch and rebuild. Ted Gaynor, a puncher she impulsively hires, sits the outfit to cut its own timber and rebuild without pay. Hastings sends his coxswain Scrap Johnson to tie up the only available timber land. But Ted wins the race for an option, then whips Scrap for molesting Kay and leaves him unconscious on the mesa.

Chapter 19

Turning The Tables

IT WAS a good half hour after Kay and Ted had left him on the mesa before Scrap Johnson came back to consciousness. He stirred painfully, tried to sit up, then fell back as he felt himself constrained by the ropes that bound him.

Swearing to himself, he strained against his bonds, and gave a snarl of satisfaction as he felt them give slightly. Alternately resting and working to loosen the knots in the rope, he finally cleared himself and staggered to his feet.

His jaws ached and his face was ugly with rage as he slowly started back to the Flying Six on foot. He had not gone far when he saw a cloud of dust in the distance, and emerging from it the figure of a horseman coming toward him at a full gallop.

As he recognized Josh Hastings, Scrap Johnson's jaw set and his hand made an instinctive grab for his gun. A savage oath burst out as he encountered the empty holster.

He had no illusions as to the reception he would get from his boss. Failure was the one thing for which Josh Hastings had no patience or sympathy, and his fiery temper when he was thwarted was something to reckon with.

grabbed his shoulder. "Give me this whole thing straight!" "You've got the whole thing straight enough!" Scrap wrenched himself away. "I'm resigning from your outfit anyway, here and now."

"Resigning like hell!" Josh Hastings roared. "You're fired, and the quicker you vamoose from this range, the better!"

"This don't seem to be my popular day!" Scrap Johnson swaggered insolently. "Your sweet-heart's boy friend threatened to kill me the next time he saw me. Maybe you can figure why?" he taunted.

A look of cunning flashed into his face at an idea that suddenly struck him, and he reeled over close to Josh Hastings' mount, where his eye had caught sight of a gun in the saddle pocket.

Before Josh Hastings could recover from his renewed conviction that he was dealing with a drunken man, Scrap had grabbed the gun and covered him with a lightning draw.

"Hist 'em!" There was nothing drunk about Scrap's tone now, and Josh Hastings dropped his reins and reluctantly obeyed.

"Seein' as how I'm through with this range anyway, I'll make my exit in style," Scrap sneered. "Suppose you unfasten that belt of yours and toss it over here?"

"You'll pay for this good and plenty," Josh Hastings raged as he obeyed.

"I'm not sticking around to make any payments," Scrap stooped to pick up the belt with its holster and gun attached, with his left hand. He never took his eye from Josh Hastings or shifted his aim.

That Hike Back

HOOKING the belt over his arm, Scrap reached over and grabbed the bridle of his victim's mount.

"Get down!" he ordered, his gun unerringly trained on his former boss. "Now, vamoose yourself," he ended ferociously, when this last

BLUE RIDGE PARKWAY NOW OPEN FOR SEVERAL MILES

(Continued from page one) mountain scenery and difficult mountain driving, there is no finer drive in the state right now than that from Marion to the Mount Mitchell Game Refuge. To get from Marion to the refuge it is necessary to turn off Route 70 four miles west of Marion onto Route 104, and then follow this route up Buck Creek past Lake Tohoma, the CCC camp and on to Buck Creek Gap. There are plenty of hairpin curves, S-curves, switch-backs and everywhere to cause thrills to chase themselves up and down the spines of those who are inclined to squirm at mountain driving. But the scenery and the view from the gap, once it has been reached, is worth all the effort and gasoline required to get up the side of the mountain. At the gap, the parkway cuts off to the left and climb, still higher turns off to the left to go to the left side of the mountain to the place where the tunnel is now being bored through the solid rock walls where it was found to be cheaper to bore tunnels than to blast a cut through it. But to get to Big Laurel Gap and the portion of the parkway on which it is now possible to drive over for several miles—if it is not raining—it is necessary to go down the other side of the gap for several miles to Busick, and to the point where the forest service road Mount Mitchell Game Refuge, an area of some 37,000 acres leased by the State Department of Conservation and Development from the National Forest Service as a haven for wild game. The point where the roads intersect is marked by a large arrow and sign pointing to the game refuge. This road has recently been widened by the National Park Service and is kept in excellent condition. It will soon be surfaced with crushed stone. It is about three miles from Route 104 to the game refuge, with its many pens of bears, wild cats, racoons, pheasants, foxes and other wild animals which live in that immediate section. A large trout hatchery and a number of rearing pools are also located there. But to get to the parkway up in Big Laurel Gap, it is necessary to take the road that goes on up the mountain beyond the fish hatchery to the top of the mountain, where it crosses the parkway and goes on down to Old Fort. By turning to the right onto the new parkway sector, one of the finest views of Mount Mitchell and the Mount Mitchell range to be found anywhere can be had, also a splendid view of the Toe River valley and of the game refuge.

THIMBLE THEATRE (Starring Popeye)

Now Showing—"Faint Heart and A Lady Fair"

By E. C. SEGAR

Scrap fired a shot that sent Josh Hastings' hat spinning.

"What's the meaning of this?" Josh Hastings pulled his plunging mount to a sliding halt as he came abreast of the plodding puncher. "Where's your cayuse? And where's that option I sent you to get?"

Resentment flared into Scrap Johnson's eyes, and his reckless mood it was well for Josh Hastings that his holster was empty. "You were too damn slow," Scrap Johnson snarled. "They beat you to it."

A dark flush came over Josh Hastings' florid face. He swore. "You mean you let Kay Crandon get there ahead of you?"

"Sure I didn't," Scrap answered sullenly. "I stopped her all right. But when I got to Old Man Warren, I found one of her punchers, a guy named Gaynor, had got there ahead of me, and bought up the ridge you wanted and an option on the rest."

Taunts For Hastings

HASTINGS exploded into a string of oaths. "The foxy little filly!" he raged, then broke off short and looked keenly at Scrap. "What do you mean about stopping her? Where is she?"

A reckless disregard of consequences suddenly possessed Scrap. He was slated to be fired anyway, so he might as well get all the revenge he could.

"Wouldn't you like to know?" he jeered. "I've beaten you to it with those red lips, anyway! And believe me they ain't waiting around for you! That same Gaynor guy came up and caught me off guard, damn him, but I'll get you yet!" He gave a wild, incoherent laugh at Hastings' expression. "Some rival you've got here! Oh, boy!"

"Shut up, you drunken fool!" Hastings reached over and command had been obeyed. "You can have that hike back instead of me!"

As Josh Hastings hesitated, Scrap shifted his aim the fraction of an inch, and sent a shot that nipped the brim of his victim's 10-gallon hat, and sent it spinning to the ground.

Without waiting for a further reminder, Josh Hastings turned and headed for the Flying Six, spluttering with inarticulate rage. After watching him for a second, Scrap Johnson swung into the saddle, and headed at a gallop for the distant blue ridges of the Bitter Root mountains.

By the time Josh Hastings reached home, his rage was no longer inarticulate, but it was none the less intense.

In the two hours during which he had indulged in the unaccustomed exercise of trudging painfully across the hard sun-baked surface of the range, he had had plenty of time to face the bitter truth that he had not only been made a fool of by his former coxswain, but by Kay Crandon as well. Just when he had seemingly had everything in his own hands, the tables had been turned, and he was now apparently farther than ever from accomplishing his ends.

The appearance of Ted Gaynor on the scene particularly enraged him, and the taunting hints that Scrap Johnson had thrown out about his being Kay's "boy friend," made him see red.

The thought of any rival was intolerable, but the idea that the man whom he believed he had put down once and for all in the past should come back to challenge him was an added outrage.

Josh Hastings finds his two mounts at his mercy, tomorrow, and gets revenge.

INDUSTRIAL LEADERS HOLD LABOR TROUBLE SPOTLIGHT

(Continued from page 1) by a swift surprise strike of the Lewis-sponsored steel workers' organizing committee. Several of so-called independent companies had capitulated and signed agreements, but Girdler, known in another sphere as a hard rider to bounds, was adamant. So was the fighting Lewis. In another field a strong man rose to a commanding position in the early months of the year. He was William S. Knudsen, 56-year-old former bicycle mechanic who became president of General Motors Corp.

The one-time Danish emigrant boy steered the big automotive concern to its record peak for a month's production in March, after a strike had sterilized output for more than a month. Reticent, deliberate, Knudsen handled the negotiations with the strikers then started in to make cars again.

No record of the outstanding figures of the first half of the year would be complete without mention of Robert R. Young, 40-year-old member of a small stock brokerage firm, who with two other little-known men, Frank C. Kolbe and Allan P. Kirby, took over from George A. Ball the control of the huge Van Sweringen rail interests. Young, slender and with graying hair, an art collector and connoisseur—smilingly told a senate railroad committee he hoped to liquidate finally the network of holding companies the Van Sweringen brothers had built up, making "something out of it" as he went along.

Washington Daybook

Washington—One of the sources of disaffection between congress and the White House was not solved at the Jefferson island conference and, in fact, gives no immediate prospect of solution.

It is the difficulty members of congress—more particularly the small fry—have in getting an occasional conference with the President.

The President is a busy man. He said recently in a press conference that his work often lasted from before breakfast until well after midnight. So he cannot grant every request to see him.

Double Trouble Every executive has the problem. Youngish Robert M. Hutchins solved one phase of it quickly after he took over the presidency of the University of Chicago. He let it be known that an immediate conference and tea with all members of the faculty was obviously a vast waste of time. So he cancelled this old custom.

Tom Girdler, chairman of the board of Republic Steel corporation, solved it another way. He told a senate committee that he was willing to see any of his men any time about their troubles. Since he has only about 50,000 employees, that attention presented such a funny aspect that even somewhat bored senators laughed. The employees obviously never presume to have a right to see him.

Congressional trouble seems to be a combination of the two. The congressmen presume to have a right to see the President, but his time will not permit it as often as they like. This sort of thing happens. A house member calls for an appointment. "What do you want to talk about?" asks Marvin McIntyre, a Presidential secretary who is a grand fellow on a party but no diplomat in his office. There is something about McIntyre and the impishness of that question that rouses the congressional ire.

Dangerous Remedy

Once in the President's office, sometimes after an irritating wait in an anteroom the congressman is welcomed with a "How are you, hon?" How the corn on Podunk prairie? The President tells a good story and four of the five-minute allowance for the conference is gone. Then he becomes serious, asks "What was it you wanted to see me about?" Before the congressman can get to the predicate of his first sentence the inescapable McIntyre comes in to indicate time is up.

Man About Manhattan

New York—Personal notes of a New Yorker's life: Edmund Lowe, who is in New York at the moment, likes to tell about the time he and another actor had emerged from a long fast (he had just got a job) and were looking about for a room. . . . Finally one real estate dealer led him enthusiastically to a dungeon-like cellar below the basement into which no sunlight ever crept. . . . The walls were mouldy and the atmosphere was damply pessimistic. . . . "How do you like it?" asked the dealer. "Great, what?" "Yes," murmured Lowe's companion, "for growing mushrooms."

NEED ANY HELP, NEIGHBOR?

Temple bells more than 200 years old no larger than drops of water. . . . The Lord's prayer engraved on a grain of rice. . . . The working model of a piano so microscopic that it is played with an ivory toothpick.

These are but a few of the 25,000 objects which from a casual hobby, has become one of the world's most amazing exhibits. . . . And they are rapidly making Charneau wealthy.

Bert Acosta, the aviator, has been lured into headlining a Spanish revue at El Toreador. . . . The flier is back with a fund of reminiscences of his activities in Spain. . . . Incidentally, if you get by El Toreador, make it late and get a gander at the murals. . . . They'll haunt you.

Most of the firewood used by New Yorkers who are fortunate enough to own fireplaces is furnished by a woman. . . . She is Miss Clark, and she is half owner of Clark and Williams, caterers to fireplace devotees. . . . Her stock includes apple (which is rare and very expensive), oak, gum, birch, yew, balsam, maple, hickory (which crackles something terrible), fir, cypress, pine (both yellow and white), beech (which is excellent for curling hams) and walnut.

Horace Heidt has solved the problem of exercising his Great Dane in the city. . . . He has leased the roof of a block-long apartment, and his over-sized pal has an acre to romp around in, something like 31 stories above the sidewalk.

Hollywood Sights And Sounds

By Robbin Coons

Hollywood—If there's any better way to find out about an upcoming star than this I don't know it: Simply arrange a reunion for him with a lady who knew him when—and sit in on the meeting. Mrs. Florence Evans, a charming white-haired visitor from Cincinnati, mentioned that a former voice pupil of hers named Miller Everton was in Hollywood. That had me stumped for a moment, but you learn to translate fairly rapidly out here, and I gave her John King, the tall and handsome lad of "The Road Back."

There were affectionate greetings and embraces, and a good time was had by all. "You were a lazy thing, Miller," said Mrs. E. fondly. "How I used to scold you! You couldn't read a note and you didn't seem to care. But you were sweet, Miller, really you were!"

Miller, or John King, owned up to the charge, blushed at the tribute. He does not look delicate now—he's trying to raise his 187 pounds to 190, the better to cover his stail-wart 6 feet 3 frame. "Remember, I thought you were so bad I forbade you to try for that Atwater-Kent audition—and you tried anyway. Bless you!"

Then to me: "I didn't even go to the audition. So I was surprised when Miller telephoned and said to come right over. I went, and was amazed to receive congratulations. Congratulations? What for? I asked. Miller had won!" Miller Everton came to Hollywood with Ben Bernie's orchestra. He heard a "No." He had a tough time impressing Bernie in the first place. After meeting the old maestro in Cincinnati, the boy followed him to New York. "Remember me, Mr. Bernie?" he asked. Bernie said: "No." But Miller kept on trying and when Bernie came again to Cincinnati he did remember—and took him on. In Hollywood he has played in two serials, in "Three Smart Girls," and in "The Road Back." Mrs. Evans said she hoped he'd sing in his next picture. Was he still studying? "Not lately," he said. "Too busy. My voice has changed, gone deeper. I'm going to start work on it again."

She Flies Through The Air And Hopes To Reach Tokyo

"I RUN about 20 feet, hold my breath and jump," says Audrey Stewart (above) comely California tumbler, Olympic-ambitious.

(By AP Feature Service)

San Francisco (AP)—Audrey Stewart, 19-year-old coed, has spent an appreciable part of her life flying through the air without visible means of support.

Now she has teamed up with Rumar Stone, noted as the "iron man" of western track, to see whether her talents can be put to use in the 1940 Olympic games.

When she started to school at 6, Audrey was so pale and weak that doctors ordered systematic exercise. Her mother picked dancing. Audrey picked acrobatic dancing. It was four years before the frail child could turn a flip, but now she can do any aerial contortion within reason.

Her fellow students at San Francisco State College have just put her into service as a yell leader. She appears in shorts and a jersey and climaxes each cheer with a complete flip in the air.

Stone, who does about everything in track and field and barely missed making the 1936 U. S. Decathlon team, has more serious ambitions for her. He's starting her off on the high jump, confident that when 1940 rolls around she'll win a trip to Tokyo.

"And I found out I was making a face," she added.

How's Your Health?

Edited for the New York Academy of Medicine By Dr. Igo Goldstein

HURT IN AN AUTO CRASH

Last year nearly 10,000,000 persons in the United States were injured in some form of accident. Sixty per cent of these injuries were caused by motor vehicles.

Naturally, in the vast majority of instances first aid must be administered by those nearest. Most of the Good Samaritans will not be physicians, and few will be trained in first aid.

The injured person needs immediate help, but he is generally better off when left alone, than when he is handled badly. Unless one knows precisely what to do, and why, one should not handle the injured person beyond rendering the absolute minimum of first aid required.

Stop copious bleeding by compressing the wound. Use a clean kerchief, gauze or other suitable material. When compression is effective, it is preferable to the tourniquet. If you must use a tourniquet, loosen it every half hour to allow blood to return to the part beyond the tourniquet. Gangrene (death of the affected tissue), paralysis due to nerve pressure, and lowered resistance to infection may result if the tourniquet stays on too long.

Take for granted that the injured person has a fractured bone until you can definitely rule out this complication. Do not move the patient or handle him unnecessarily. Do not pick him up hastily, nor dump him into the first automobile to "rush" him for medical aid. Bring the aid to him, if you can, or else take time and make certain that he will not suffer further injury during transportation.

If one of the long bones of the arm or leg is broken, do not move the patient until a splint has been applied to the fracture. An emergency splint can be made of practically any rigid object applicable to the injured bone. The purpose of splinting is to keep the broken parts of the bone fixed, and to prevent the ends from injuring further the surrounding soft parts.

If it is necessary to change the position of the patient with a fractured long bone before a splint is applied, apply continuous traction, that is, pull on the affected limb, holding on to it with your hand while he is being moved.

Administer to the injured person whatever aid he needs and you can competently apply, but when in doubt cover him, let him rest where he is and secure expert help.

Peshead Walker's Snow Hill Billies continued its hot pace at the head of the Coastal Plain Loop by defeating Greenville's Greenies yesterday afternoon. It was the third consecutive win for "Pea-head" Walker's boys and their eighth in the last nine contests.

The Billies were unable to tally more than one run in any inning yesterday, but they had five one-run innings and were in front at all stages except for a brief spell when the scoreboard showed a 3-3 count.

Greenville tallied all of its runs in the fifth after Rudisill had been issued a free ticket and Thoele hit into a double play. Farley walked, Norwood doubled and Johnson was purposely passed. But Ventura walked the wrong man. Pismaturo lashed a double down third base line to empty the loaded bases.

The Billies broke the deadlock in the very next verse—the third—on Horse Mewborn's single, his stolen base and Robby Robinson single—to go ahead for keeps. The final tally of the game in the seventh resulted in Jim Tatum's single, a walk to Walter Latham, Moser's error, and Soufas' bingle. The hit, made against Relief Pitcher Karl Williams, tallied Tatum but wasn't quite good enough to score Walter Latham, who was thrown out of the plate by Outfielder Rudisill. Williams came to the mound after Moser starting flier, threw out second in an effort to pick Tatum off that base in the seventh.

A walk to Horse Mewborn, an infield out and Bostoff's single counted a run for the Billies in the first. Walter Rab's single and three free passes gave the Billies another in the second. Two more walks and Wall's single filled the bases in the fourth and Ventura scored as Robinson hit into a double play.

Iby Wright pitched the last four innings for the Billies and turned in a fine relief job.

The Greenies threatened to score several times but were held to the three tallies they made in the fifth.

The Greenies engage the Billies in their own park in Snow Hill this afternoon in an attempt to even up things.

THURSDAY GAMES Gulf vs. Chain Stores

W. L. Allen's Gulf team handed the Sinclair team its second defeat of the season in one of the best games played at the West Greenville diamond. A four run spurge in the sixth inning proved the margin of victory for the Gulf team. Sinclair tallied one run in the seventh, when Edwards hit for the circuit, but the rally was short lived when the next three men went out in order.

For the Gulf team the pitching of Allen and the play of Dunn at short were outstanding, while the work of Bill Bairo in left field featured for Sinclair.

The fact that McCarthy named five of his Yankees, while Terry selected six from his own Giants, only added fuel to the fire of arguments. And yet, why shouldn't the managers pick a goodly number of their own charges? The Yankees and Giants do represent the pennant winners in their respective leagues. Many believe, as a matter of fact, that Joe McCarthy could send his Yankee squad to battle a picked team from the National league and the Yankees would give a good account of themselves. The National league champions hardly gave the Yankees a good account of themselves in the 1936 World Series.

The teams as selected by McCarthy and Terry are good enough to make a real contest of the game and it is for a grand cause—that should be enough.

Aces Finish Strong To Defeat Goldsboro, 9-5

Goldsboro, July 7.—Ayden's Aces bunched five hits in the last two innings to score six runs and defeat Goldsboro, 9-5, yesterday.

The defeat drowned the Bugs into a tie with Williamston for second place, three games back of the league-leading Snow Hill Billies.

The Aces' victorious finish in yesterday's contest here was at the expense of Pete Kunis, who relieved young Bunn Hearn at the start of the seventh inning. Including a homer by Monk Joyner in the sixth, Hearn had yielded four hits and three runs in six innings and retired with a 5-3 advantage.

Fury's single started Ayden's eighth and opened a rally which produced four tallies. Faust Johnson hit a bouncer which was played too late to second to get Fury. McCormick walked to fill the bases, and came in when Mackie singled to center and Adamek erred the hit. Schuerholtz's single put Mackie on third, and he scored on Corrado's outfield fly.

PLAN CLASSES IN LIFESAVING

Courses to Begin At Municipal Pool Next Week

H. A. McDougal, manager of the Municipal pool is making plans for junior and senior life-saving classes to begin next week. Enrollment is open for junior life-saving to any boy or girl between the ages of 12 and 17, senior life-savers must be at least 17 years of age. All swimmers who wish to secure this instruction without any extra charge than the usual swim fee are asked to give their names to the management within the next few days. The number enrolling for these classes will determine whether there will be two or more groups.

The classes will meet every other afternoon from 6 until 7 o'clock. This plan has been made so that swimmers may have a day between classes for practice and so that swimmers who must miss a period of instruction may make that up and continue with the group.

The tests for this course have been carefully developed through years of experience until the surest and safest methods for water rescue have been evolved. To the successful members of the class are awarded American Red Cross life-saving pins and insignias. Passing this test will enable both Boy and Girl Scouts to win a merit badge.

The Life-Saving Service was inaugurated in 1914. During the first twelve years the membership in the life-saving service was over 100,000 and members have been added each year with the grand total in round numbers now of more than half a million. In spite of the tremendous increase in the number of drownings has been cut in half during the last twenty years. This life-saving instruction offered at the beginning of the swimming season will be both pleasure and profit to those enrolling.

Here Is Way To Remember U. S. Court Changes

Washington, July 6.—(AP)—Here's an easy way to keep in mind the various changes in the number of judges on the supreme court the next time you get in an argument.

The formula is supplied by Representative Golden of California:

- 1789: Congress decided at first to fix the number of justices at six.
- 1801: Congress planned on a change to five. But the six remained very much alive.
- 1807: Six high judges, supreme as heaven—And Jefferson added number seven.

Hope Begin Work On New Building By October First

Working Plans for State Streets Now Being Drawn by Architects Selected Weeks Ago

Reflector Bureau

Raleigh, July 6.—The working plans for the new half-million dollar state office building are now being drawn by the architects, selected some weeks ago by the office building commission of which Judge Walter D. Siler of Siler City is chairman. It was learned here today from R. M. Rothgeb, state engineer with the budget bureau.

A call for bids on the building cannot be issued until all the working plans have been completed and approved by the building commission. As a result, it is expected that the contract for the new building cannot be let for some weeks yet and that actual construction cannot be started for about 90 days, or about October 1. Rothgeb said. This will allow time for the moving or tearing down of the four residences now on the site the new office building will occupy.

"As I understand it, the building commission has not yet decided what it will do with the house now on the building site but it is likely that several of the houses will be sold and moved to some other site, as most of them seem to be well built and in good condition," Rothgeb said. One of the houses is of brick and will undoubtedly have to be torn down.

No decision has been reached yet with regard to materials to be used for the exterior of the building, but the prevailing belief is that the commission will decide to use Indiana limestone for the exterior of the building which will harmonize with the other state buildings around the Capitol square housing the State Supreme Court, the Department of Revenue and the Department of Agriculture, all of which have exteriors of Indiana limestone.

It's A Circus The Way Farmer Makes A Living

BENSON: Forced To Make Money

By CHARLES NORMAN (AP Feature Service Writer) RAS, ILLA, N. H.—John T. Benson bought some land here about for a refuge in his old age, but the call of the wild was in his blood. His father had been an animal trainer. A final training was the only trade he knew and soon he was making trips abroad to bring back jungle beasts to train for zoos and circuses. First thing he knew the farmers of this region, and their wives and their relatives, and the hired hands were trapping over to his farm to get a peek at the wild creatures, and he had to begin charging admission to control the crowds. He just had to.

BETSY: "Only Elephant in the World Who Can Do This"

Now "jungle trains" of the Boston & Maine railroad roar into N. Hama on summer Sundays bearing hundreds of eager children and their parents to Benson's "Wild Animal Farm," and automobiles with license plates from all the New England states clog the roads, bringing an estimated 25,000 "cash customers" to see the animals go through their paces.

Paying Business. It's a paying business, Mr. Benson was forced into, and that brings up the question, because it stands to reason that many people will be wanting lunches, and ice cream, and popcorn, and pop. They get it. And it costs extra to get into "Noah's Ark" and the "Jungle Circus," and for pony and elephant rides for the youngsters. A good line was had by all.

Of course, the "big moments" at the farm come when lions and tigers and elephants are brought into the ring and made to toe the mark, but there's so much going on that thousands of people just mill about, taking in the sights. Some of the sights are slightly sadistic.

To begin, when you enter the animal farm, you pass a number of concrete frames, big ones they're, containing the bones of departed animals. "The Last of Old John,"

STATEMENT ON PITT SCHOOLS

Plan Better Facilities for Hollywood-Cox District

The Board of Education today issued a statement in which it pointed out that it was considering plans for providing better facilities for the Hollywood-Cox district.

The statement follows in full:

"The Board has, for some time, been considering plans for offering better instruction to the pupils of the Hollywood-Cox Districts. The Board feels that there is a group of elementary pupils in this area which is not getting as good a school facility as are other parts of the county. After making numerous investigations during the recent school term and after having talked with many of the patrons of the Hollywood-Cox area, the Board of Education decided Thursday to divide Hollywood and Cox into three parts: one part to Winterville District, another part to Grimesville, and another to Chicod. The division of the District will be made by a representative of the State School Commission who will survey the bus routes and, on a basis of economy of operation of trucks, and on a basis of room available in the adjacent schools, will decide the allocation of the territory under discussion. The Board of Education further decided that since it is now required by law that, under the present setup in Pitt County, each district is required to pay for its own building, all property in the Hollywood-Cox school districts will be made subject to a thirty cent tax levy to be apportioned to the three districts receiving pupils on a basis of the average enrollment for a school year.

"For the last several years the majority of the children in the Hollywood-Cox area has gone to Chicod but this school has grown so rapidly the teaching load is so heavy, and since every available classroom is now filled to capacity, the Board decided it could not, with justice to Chicod, continue the present arrangement. It further pointed out in Thursday's meeting that part of Chicod District in the Claymont Neck section is now sending pupils across Swift Creek to Epworth School in Craven County. The Board plans to turn this area back to Chicod and thereby recompense the school for part of the loss of pupils that would be suffered by the redistricting of Hollywood-Cox Districts.

"The Board of Education will meet again first Monday in August for further consideration of school matters."

To which B. J. Dalmich, steel director of the CIO affiliated SWOC, replied: "The attempt to reopen Republic and bosses are in the plants it will insist that the military be withdrawn."

Through earlier appointment by President Harding, Guffey contended, the court was soundly and solidly packed x x x to such an extent that legislation to protect the farmer and working man was condemned almost before it was passed.

"A majority of the aged justices who compose the court are intent upon thwarting the major purposes of the Roosevelt administration," he continued. "As a result the people, the President, and congress were powerless to act."
