MAY WORK OUT AGREEMENT ON COURT REFORM

Administration Plans to Offer New Compromise

ABANDON PLAN TO FORCE VOTE

Discussions to Continue on Controversy When Senate Again Takes Up Bill

Washington, July 20.—(AP)—An administration spokesman said today a new compromise court bill possibly would be offered to win the support of opponents of the measure now before the senate.

The official, who would not be quoted by name, said there was very decided belief all around that the bitter contest over court reorganization in the senate would "work out" surprisingly satisfactory to all concerned.

He expressed these opinions after Vice-President Garner had spent more than an hour at the White House with President Roosevelt.

Meanwhile on Capitol Hill, senate court bill opponents abandoned their plan for an immediate showdown.

After an hour's conference with a score of leaders of the opposition, Senator Wheeler (D-Mont.) announced it had been decided when the bill comes up in the senate again "we are going to continue to discuss the measure."

The developments at the White House and at the Capitol came almost simultaneously when administration and opposition leaders began to get back to work after their journey to the funeral of the late majority leader, Senator Robinson, in Arkansas.

Strength in the leadership contest was almost equally split between Senator Harrison (D-Miss.) and Senator Barkley (D-Ky.). A caucus of party members in the senate is scheduled for tomorrow morning. The question of leadership may be settled at that time.

White House officials described the meeting between President Roosevelt and Vice-President Garner as a "very happy one."

At the Capitol, Senator Barkley said leaders on both sides had agreed to postpone resumption of the fight in the senate until Thursday.

In accordance with an agreement announced by Barkley, the senate adjourned without transacting any business today.

However, Vice-President Garner, back in the presidential office's seat after several weeks' vacation, ruled Senator Copeland (D-NY) would be entitled to the floor at 2 p. m. Thursday. Copeland was speaking against the court bill when the senate recessed prior to the death of Senator Robinson.

Huge Area Hunted For Missing Flier

Honolulu, July 20.—(AP)—Navy planes and ships travelled 180,000 miles in the search for Amelia Earhart, Rear Admiral Murnin disclosed today in a statement expressing belief the aviatrix and her navigator had perished.

It is believed the search as conducted in the area decided upon, Admiral Murnin said, was "effective and established beyond reasonable doubt that neither the plane nor its personnel are above the water in any area searched."

The navy completed its search late Sunday.

George Putnam and Mrs. Amy Earhart, husband and mother of Miss Earhart, expressed hope "a miracle may happen and the noted flier and her navigator may be found safe."

New Principal At Pactolus School

Hyatt Forrest, who will serve as principal of the Pactolus school, is well qualified for the position, it was stated at the offices of the County Board of Education today.

Forrest, who was assistant principal at the Fountain school last session, was graduated from East Carolina Teachers College after having established a good record while at the institution. He was unusually good in his studies and was an assistant in the science department. He also took an interest in athletics and was manager of the baseball team. He attended Mars Hill before enrolling at E.C.T.C.

Paul Johnson was originally selected as principal of the Pactolus school, but withdrew to accept a position with the Ayden bank.

BUDGET FIXED FOR SECURITY

All Relief Purposes to Cost County $44,883 For Year

The tentative Social Security budget, as prepared by the Pitt county welfare board, calls for the expenditure during the fiscal year 1937-38 of a total of $44,883 for all relief purposes.

After removing administrative costs from the regular relief budget for the new fiscal year it was estimated that $10,502 would be needed for the usual relief work in the county. This figure compares with $21,692 for last year, when the administrative costs were included.

The Social Security budget calls for $12,061 for administrative purposes, with it being estimated that the state and federal governments will pay $4,000 of this amount.

The direct cost to the county will be $14,520 for old age assistance, this representing one-fourth of the amount to be spent. The federal government is expected to pay one-half of the total cost and the state one fourth.

It is estimated that $7,800 will be the county's part for aid to dependent children, with the state and federal governments putting up an equal amount.

It is estimated that the tax rate requirement to meet the Social Security program in the county will be 10 cents on the $100 valuation for and the rate for regular relief work three and one-half per cent, making a total of 13 and one-half per cent. This rate compares with seven cents last year.

The county's tax rate was 25 cents last fiscal year, but it has not been determined yet whether this will meet the additional requirements for the new year.

Woman Found Shot Identified By Nun

New York, July 20.—(AP)—An attractive young woman was shot and killed early today and left by the roadside of the old Harlem speedway, where the town's gay blades raced their trotters in the early '90's.

Hours later she was identified as Irma Louise Pradier, 35, French domestic, by a Catholic nun who had known her through religious work. Police were unable to learn immediately, however, where she lived or worked or to discover any motive for the slaying.

INVENTOR DIES OF PARALYSIS

Man Who Invented Wireless Telegraphy Succumbs

Rome, Italy, July 20.—(AP)—The Marquis Guglielmo Marconi, who invented wireless telegraphy when he was only 21 years old, died suddenly at 3:45 a. m. today (9:45 p. m. Monday EST) at the ancient palace in downtown Rome where he lived and worked.

The 63-year-old conqueror of the ether died quietly of heart paralysis. His widow, the Countess Cristina Bezzani-Scalia, was at his bedside. She had been exiled back from a seaside resort when he began to feel ill yesterday afternoon.

Their daughter, Elena, whose godmother is Queen Elena of Italy, remained at the resort and will not return to Rome until time for the state funeral. Today is her eighth birthday.

Premier Mussolini, whose ardent supporter Marconi had been, was notified of the death immediately. He sent a telegram of condolences and later went to Marconi's home and paid his respects beside the body.

Pope Pius, XI, with whom the inventor had had a long audience Saturday about the new radio station he was building for the Vatican was notified by telephone at his summer residence at Castel Gondolfo. He sent a special blessing to the inventor.

Plan To Consider Salary Schedules

Raleigh, July 20.—(AP)—Lloyd Griffin, secretary, said today the school commission Thursday would consider teachers' salary schedule, allocation of teachers to sub-standard high schools and petitions for three new high schools.

The legislature provided for a salary increase for 10 per cent for teachers and the commission must decide whether adjustment will be made.

There are about 50 sub standard high schools in the state, Griffin said, and they were allocated 114 teachers last year.

FORD ORDERED TO FACE TRIAL

Eight Persons And Company Charged With Assault

Detroit, July 20.—(AP)—Common Pleas Judge Ralph Liddy today ordered eight persons and the Ford Motor company, as a corporation, held for trial in the Wayne County Circuit court, on an assault warrant based on the riot at the Ford plant gates, May 26.

The formal charge was assault with intent to do great bodily harm, less than the crime of murder, in connection with the beating of DOWA members attempting to distribute union literature near a Ford plant in Dearborn.

The judge acted after hearing evidence that William Merrivether on whose injuries the warrant was based, suffered a broken vertebrae. He said he found "probable cause" had been established against all of the defendants.

Conviction of the charge might result in a maximum penalty of five years imprisonment and $1,000 fine.

The judge announced his findings as a National Labor Relations Board hearing on charges against the Ford Motor company continued with Stanley Ziek, former foreman in a Ford plant, testifying he was ordered to discharge workmen because of their affiliation with the UAWA.

Several Defendants In City Police Court

The following cases were tried in Monday's session of City Police court:

Edgecombe Liquor Raids Work Of Two ABC Boards

Reflector Bureau By J. C. BASKERVILLE

Raleigh, July 20.—The "crack down" on bootleggers in the vicinity of Tarboro, Edgecombe county, where 56 warrants were served Sunday and almost as many persons charged with bootlegging or violation of the state liquor laws, is generally believed to have been the result of the work of "under cover" men employed by the state and county control boards and of the determination of the state liquor control board to prove that bootlegging can be stamped out in the counties having control.

It has been known here for several weeks that the state liquor control board had several "under cover" investigators working in several of the counties having liquor control, including Edgecombe, also that it has regarded conditions in Edgecombe as being far from satisfactory. It has also been known that the state board has more or less "laid down the law" to several county boards, especially in demanding that more effort be made to suppress bootlegging in their counties. But Chairman Cutlar Moore and the other members of the board have consistently declined to give out any specific information.

It was more or less admitted today, however, that the large number of arrests in Edgecombe county came as no surprise and that both the county and state boards have been quietly gathering evidence there for many weeks preparatory to the serving of warrants.

"We know that bootlegging can virtually be stamped out in both the counties having liquor control and in the so-called dry counties if the people and the law enforcement officers want to do it. Chairman Cutlar Moore said today, "But in those counties in which the law enforcement officers are not able to get the bootleggers or do not want to get them, the state and county liquor boards are going to get them. Whether we can get convictions, of course, is another matter, depending upon local sentiment. But we can at least get the evidence in court—and we are going to do that, although it will be up to the juries and the judges to convict."

In one county, for instance, a certain group of bootleggers is known to be operating, in spite of the fact that the county has liquor stores and liquor control. This particular group of bootleggers is known to be operating, in spite of the fact that the county has liquor stores and liquor control. Two American Women in Peiping Are Kicked, Shoved

ONE HELD FAST WITH BAYONETS

Incident Called to Attention of Japanese Officials After Depositions Made

Pieping, July 20.—(AP)—Two American women were kicked and shoved, they told the U. S. embassy today, by Japanese sentries on guard before the Japanese embassy.

The women were Mrs. Helen R. Jones of Detroit, Mich., and Miss Carol Lathrop of Washington, D. C. The American embassy said it was calling attention to the attack to Japanese officials after depositions were made by the two women.

Mrs. Jones related: "We were walking toward the hotel through the embassy quarter, deciding that was safest due to martial law. We were walking in the center of the street talking of personal affairs and not on the sidewalk. Suddenly we were terrified by a Japanese war cry from the sentries who rose up behind sand bags barricades. At least three sentries besides the first two visible charged us, giving Carol a terrific shove.

"Carol burst into tears, then the sentry kicked her in the side. Meanwhile another sentry held me fast with the flat of his bayonet. "In the midst of the confusion I saw a machine gun mounted on a barricade staring me in the face. They made a loud clamor shoving us around, although, of course, we could not understand Japanese."

"Finally they let us go, shoving us off roughly and giving me a final and very forceful kick from behind x x x."

Four Cases Tried In Weekly Session

Four cases were tried in County court this morning after which adjournment was taken until next week, there being no other cases ready for trial at this session.

Jim Pettus, Negro, arrester by ABC officers on First street Saturday afternoon was acquitted of a charge of possessing liquor for sale.

LeRoy Purvis, Bethel Negro, was convicted of trespassing and resisting an officer and was given a 12-months road sentence. He was charged with peeping into the window of a white resident late at night.

Ollie Lane, Negro, was convicted on a liquor charge, but prayer for judgment was continued.

Young Florida Negroes Taken From Jail, Shot

Pair Accused of Stabbing Tallahassee Policeman

Tallahassee, Fla., July 20.—(AP)—Two young Negroes accused of stabbing a Tallahassee policeman were taken from the county jail—located two blocks from the state capitol—early today and riddled with shots by a small mob of masked men.

Five placards, one of them saying "warning, this is what will happen to all Negroes that harm white people" were found at the scene of the lynching three miles from the capitol and in sight of the heavily traveled Tallahassee to Jacksonville highway.

Persons living near the scene said they heard shots about 4 a. m.

Awakened by cries for help from the cell block of the jail, County Jail Robert Maize said he found Harry Fairbanks, city police desk sergeant, locked inside the cell block. Fairbanks told him, Maize said, a band of men entered police headquarters and forced him at gunpoint to go to county jail and deliver the Negroes to them.

Fairbanks was off duty when the Negroes' bodies were found and could not be located.

The jail building is used by the city and by Leon county. City police have keys to the building and place prisoners there without arousing the jailer at night.

Authorities yesterday charged the two Negroes, listed as Richard Hawkins and Ernest Ponder, each about 18 with stabbing Patrolman V. S. Kelly, Sunday.

Police said both confessed and each accused the other of the actual stabbing. The patrolman is in serious condition.

Fail To Consider British Proposal

London, July 20.—(AP)—A nine power committee of the "hands-off-Spain" group of 27 European nations adjourned speedily today without facing what British Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden said would be its "stand or fall" test.

The only discussion was on the provision of British compromise plan for non-intervention in Spain and assigning of observers in Spanish ports.

British observers said the sub-committee agree in principle to the plan, which would substitute the observers for the international control fleet from which Italy and Germany have withdrawn. They said a technical sub-committee would devise an operating plan.

The prime issue was expected to be the proposal to grant limited belligerent rights to both sides in the civil war.

John Mitchell Selected President of Organization

UNITED EFFORTS EXPRESSED AIM

Various Professional and Business Groups To Be Represented By Directors

John Mitchell, cashier of the State Bank & Trust company, was chosen president of Greenville's reorganized Chamber of Commerce at an enthusiastic meeting last night of representatives of the city's various business and professional groups as Respass' barbecue place.

It was the expressed opinion of the new president and other speakers if the citizens continued to manifest as much interest in the organization as was displayed last night there is no doubt that the city will have one of the most active and wide-awake chambers in the country.

The meeting, called for the purpose of boosting Greenville and its tobacco market, was attended by more than 200 persons representing the various activities of the city. The speeches were short and to the point, with the necessity for organizing the keynote of the session.

W. H. Dail, Farm Bureau organizer, farmer and mule dealer, perhaps made the most inspiring talk. He mixed wit and "horse sense" to tell those present what they must do to make Greenville an ever greater city. Several who said they have heard him make talks for long time declared last night to be his masterpiece.

At the conclusion of the talk, B. B. Sugg, who acted as toastmaster, named a committee of five to nominate a board of directors representing all trades in the city. Thirty-five directors were nominated and elected, one each from the various business and professional groups in the city.

The group also named the following officers, who were unanimously elected: John Mitchell, president; J. H. Kirtland, vice president; J. J. White, second vice president and J. H. Waldrop, treasurer.

The officers and directors were offered by the committee composed of W. H. Dail, G. V. Smith, R. M. Garrett, H. H. Duncan and John Clark.

After the officers were elected the meeting was turned over to President Mitchell, who made a plea for continued support on the part of the citizens and then adjourned the meeting, subject to his call.

Toastmaster Sugg quipped unobtrusively at his job and kept the meeting moving along swiftly and not a single dull moment was experienced. He started off by declaring that he had been attending meetings all his life, but he regarded this as the most important he had ever taken part in. He said other towns were coming in better for business and unless the local people got busy they stood to suffer a heavy loss in trade. "If we sleep at the job, the money will be spent elsewhere," he continued.

He then introduced Mayor M. K. Blount as the "most progressive mayor he ever heard of."

Mayor Blount stressed the importance of working hand-in-hand and cited illustrations where organized efforts could do much for the betterment of the city. He urged that any possible petty grievances be put aside and that "we go down the line together to make this a better city and a better tobacco market. After the motion was made to establish a new Chamber of Commerce Mayor Blount again made a few remarks in which he urged the support of such an organization.

J. S. Picken, president of the Greenville Tobacco Board of Trade, declared that the most thrilling part about a trip around the world as he has just completed was getting back home. He said he had taken every opportunity to do so. He called attention to the fact that tobacco offered on the local market the first two weeks of this season is composed largely of praisings and therefore the average is (Continued on page two)

Drivers Who Lost Permits Apply When Revocation Ends

Raleigh, July 20.—Automobile drivers who have had their driving licenses revoked lose no time in applying for new licenses when the period of revocation has expired, Ronald H. Hocutt, assistant director of the Department of Revenue, said today. The division sends out a notice to every driver whose license has been revoked when the period of revocation has expired and the driver is again eligible to obtain a new license, Hocutt said. But most of the drivers write in to the division for new application blanks before these notices are sent out.

Through today, 41,772 licenses have been revoked, principally for drunken driving and allied causes. 2,119 licenses have been suspended while 1,632 drivers whose revocations have expired have made application for new licenses, Hocutt said.

"The driving licenses of persons whose permits have been revoked are not automatically reinstated upon the expiration of the revocation, however, as some seem to think," Hocutt said. "When a (Continued on page six)

Christian Science Church
"Life" was the subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all Christian Science Churches and Societies on Sunday, July 18.

The Golden Text was from Luke 20:37-38—"Now that the dead are raised, even Moses showed that the Lord is not a God of the dead, but of the living; for all live unto him."

Among the citations which comprised the Lesson-Sermon was the following from the Bible: "The king shall joy in thy strength, O Lord; and in thy salvation how greatly shall he rejoice: Thou has given him his heart's desire, and hast not with-holden the request of his lips. He asked life of thee, and thou gavest it him, even length of days for ever and ever." (Psalm 21: 1, 2, 4).

The Lesson-Sermon also included the following passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science & Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy: "Life is without beginning and without end. Eternity, not time, expresses the thought of Life, and time is no part of eternity. One ceases in proportion as the other is recognized. Time is finite; eternity is forever infinite." (Page 468).

47,500 RADIO 'HAMS' HELP IN BIG DISASTERS

FIVE METER DAY
Atop a hill overlooking San Francisco, Robert Reimus gets set to communicate with other radio amateurs on an experimental 5-meter wave length in an attempt for greater distance.

By SAM JACKSON
(Associated Press Service Writer)

SAN FRANCISCO—Is a flier down; at sea? Is a ship on fire? Have floods cut off a city from nonnal communication with the outside world?

In emergencies like these some 47,500 amateur radio operators or "hams," as they like to call themselves, swing into action over the nation to backstop rescue work.

"They know that the big commercial and government radios probably will pick up all distress messages," says Robert Reimus, who operates W6IXZ here.

"But there is always the chance that at some little amateur station conditions will be just right for reception of a life-or-death appeal that otherwise would be lost."

When Amelia Earhart was forced down in the Pacific, many a set was tuned to her frequency of 3.105 kilocycles and many a hopeful but dumb message reported to the coast guard.

Today, says the American Radio Relay league, "practically no exploring trip starts to remote parts of the world without arrangements to communicate through amateur radio."

The government encourages and public, but accept no money for licenses amateurs, less for their transmissions.

NEW CHAMBER OF COMMERCE ORGANIZED FOR GREENVILLE

not as high as it would be otherwise. He urged farmers and others not to become dissatisfied for when the season is over Greenville's market will be found among the leaders in price.

He called attention to one threat on American-grown tobacco, saying that foreign governments were encouraging the growth of tobacco in their own countries. He added that the tariff situation was one needing closer attention and said that it might be well for this country to appoint a commission to stimulate the export trade.

Ralph M. Garrett, president of the Person-Garrett Tobacco company, spoke only briefly, saying that a good word in the business section of the city was of invaluable service to the tobacco market.

J. E. Winslow, local business man, farmer and president of the North Carolina Farm Bureau Federation, speaking in behalf of the farmers, said all the growers wanted was a fair division. He called attention to the fact that Pitt county always took the lead in anything for the betterment of the farmers. He cited Cripple Creek, Colo., as proof that Greenville could not exist without its rural citizens.

Dr. L. R. Meadows, president of the East Carolina Teachers College, described as the city's greatest asset, was called on to speak in behalf of that institution. He said that Greenville made one of its wisest steps when it carried a bond election for $50,000 to establish the college here. He cited figures to show the growth of the institution and said that today the college brings an average of $1,000 daily, 365 days to the year, to business houses in Greenville. He listed three assets to which he gave credit for this being an outstanding city: 1—The people, which he described as the finest he had ever known; 2—The tobacco market; 3—The school system, public and college. He closed by saying that the city and college must pull hand-in-hand, adding that the college could not survive without the help of the city and that the college, in turn, was a great asset to the city.

Next was introduced "the number one booster of Greenville," W. H. Dail. He recalled the rapid growth made by the Greenville tobacco market until the present time when it is "by far the best market in the country." He said the town was at the crossroads and would either go ahead into a prospering city or remain at its present size. He cited what Greenville had done without organized efforts and asked "what will it do with its citizens behind it?"

It was at this point of the program that a re-organized Chamber of Commerce was first mentioned. Chairman Sugg declared that "the great state of Pitt" was in need of organized effort and asked for suggestions. He added we "want to do something, and not on a 16-cents basis."

J. H. Waldrop, cashier of the Guaranty Bank and Trust company, related that a Chamber of Commerce had been under discussion for some time, and added that "it was time that we started our boosting collectively. He then made a motion that the meeting proceed with the organization of a Chamber of Commerce."

J. B. Kittrell, one of the leaders in the movement, declaring that the city was in urgent need of such an organization, seconded the motion.

Mr. Mitchell then was asked to state his opinion and he began by saying that when he came here six years ago the first thing he noticed was the lack of organized effort on the part of Greenville. He added that if the spirit in evidence at the meeting was maintained "I know of nothing that could not be accomplished within the bounds of possibility."

Mr. Dail then made the motion that the chair name a committee of five to nominate the board of directors and officers. The motion was seconded by John Clark, who said that the only way to accomplish anything was to go about it in a determined manner.

When the nominating committee retired, J. C. Lamer was asked to make a few remarks. He said that the young people were the ones to get behind the movement. He said he was still a young man, but remembered when 75 per cent of those present came to Greenville. He said most of the old heads always had been opposed to progressiveness. He added that they opposed telephones, electric lights and concrete roads, but all of these advantages were accomplished through the efforts of the young folks.

K. W. Cobb, referred to throughout the state as "the backbone of the Greenville Tobacco market," stated he believed this to be the best meeting he ever had attended. He recalled efforts being made by the tobaccoists to boost the city and market. He said that the word "Greenville" always took up one-fourth of tobacco market advertisements. He declared he saw no reason why Greenville should not lead both in poundage and price this fall.

Dr. W. I. Wooten spoke as a representative of the hospital and pledged his support to the Chamber of Commerce.

J. H. Rose, speaking in behalf of the city schools, said the system always was ready to do anything to boost the town. He recalled that the band had been sent to other places on special occasions and said the schools would be glad to cooperate in sending the musicians to gatherings elsewhere in an attempt to win recognition for Greenville.

Ralph Deal and C. P. Earhart arose to make a few remarks, and J. H. Blount moved the adoption of the tentative constitution.

Just before the meeting was closed Mr. Kittrell, Mr. Keel and Mrs. R. L. Powell were given a vote of thanks for their efforts in making arrangements.

The following were named to the Board of Directors to represent the various business and professional groups:

FLAME TRAIL

BY MARIE DE NERVAUD

SYNOPSIS: Fire destroys Kay Crandon's Lazy Nine ranch house and barn. Josh Hastings, owner of the Flying Six, tries to buy her ranch and court Kay. She hates him and is determined to keep her ranch and rebuild Ted Gaylor, a puncher she impulsively hired, fights Scrap Johnson, a cowhand who molested Kay. They shoot it out, wounding each other. Hastings finds them unconscious and murders Scrap with Ted's gun. Ted crawls to a shack where a girl named Marion sees him through a feverish haze. The gun is found and Sheriff Farley searches for Ted. Kay decides to look around herself at the scene of the shooting.

Chapter 30

Calling The Fire Patrol

THE miles slipped past, and Kay finally came to the wooded slope of the eastern divide. Remembering that this was the region Tom Runyon was patrolling, she speculated idly on the chances of meeting him.

In one way, she hoped she wouldn't. Yet, on the other hand, she might be able to give him her idea of the mysterious circumstances surrounding the death of Scrap Johnson, and so make his attitude less antagonistic to Ted. The probabilities were that Tom Runyon hadn't heard anything about it, and it might be well to set the trend of his first impressions.

As she gave Flicker free rein to make the steep climb, she realized that Tom Runyon might be a valuable ally. With his knowledge of woodcraft, he might be able to pick up signs that Zeke Farley had passed by. Kay didn't want him to go with her now, but she was safe enough on that score, because he couldn't leave his patrol duty until relieved. Rapidly calculating his free times, as he had outlined them to her, Kay found that he wouldn't be off duty until tomorrow.

She decided it would be a good plan to get in touch with him now. Cupping her hands about her mouth, she sang out a ringing halloo. There was a mere chance that he might be within earshot, although it was unlikely if that failed, however, Kay had another means of summoning him. She listened intently, but the echoes of her call died away without any answering shout. After two or three more tries, she waited until she reached the top of the ridge.

Dismounting, she made her way to a nearby outcropping of rock and hastily gathered some twigs and dried bits of brush. She pulled out her waterproof match box that she always carried in her saddle pocket, and lighted the little heap.

A thin column of smoke rose lazily in the clear air, and Kay sat back with an amused smile to see how long it would take the famous fire patrol to discover it. She fed the small blaze from time to time, carefully keeping it on the rock.

Relaxed after her long ride, Kay felt the peace of the solitary place gradually steal over her. She planned what she would say to Tom Runyon.

Half an hour or more passed, before the sound of a horse crashing through the brush of the cliff below her, came to Kay's ears. Sitting up straight, she waited with laughing eyes.

Enlisting Tom's Help

AFTER a few minutes more, she heard him dismount at the base of a shoulder of rock just beneath her. The next second, she was confronted with the barrel of a gun, and Tom Runyon's grim face behind it.

Kay chuckled wickedly at the change in his face as he caught sight of her. The hand holding the gun dropped to his side and amazement mingled comically with chagrin and pleasure in his expression.

"You!" he exclaimed. "Hell's bells, I thought I'd run the firebug to earth at last! He gave a pleased guffaw as he slipped his gun back in its holster and strode over to Kay with outstretched hand.

"Say! This is some surprise! That was a smart way to get hold of me, all right! Believe me, I didn't waste any time getting up here, when I saw that smoke!" He gazed with appreciation at Kay's bright color and the mischievous smile with which she greeted him.

"I thought I'd give you a shock! Are you going to run me in? I'll promise not to do it again!"

"You do it as often as you like!" Tom Runyon boomed, as he scattered the fire and stamped it out. "How's everything going at the ranch? That fighting puncher-carpet of yours back yet?"

Kay drew a quick breath of relief. He hadn't heard, then! "You haven't seen anything of Zeke Farley around, have you?" she asked, to make assurance doubly sure.

"Haven't seen a soul since I lit out from the Lazy Nine last week. I don't mind telling you," he bent to Kay with the ebullient gallantry that always gave her that sense of uneasiness with him, "that I've been counting the hours until I could get relieved and get back there. I never dared hope for this break!" He smiled fatuously, and drew closer. "What would Zeke Farley be doing around here?"

In a few words Kay told him of the finding of Scrap Johnson's body, and the gun she had given Ted Gaylor.

"Of course, the ordinary, everyday mind jumps right away to the conclusion that Ted is the murderer," she ended. "But I knew you had more intelligence than that, so I wanted to see you and get you working on it from another angle." Kay gave him a sidelong look, to see if she was putting the flattery on too thick, but Tom Runyon's pleased smirk was untroubled by doubt.

"Well now, I'll be glad to do anything I can," he offered heartily. "I can't say I was much impressed with this Gaylor guy that time I saw him up here with you, but if you say he's all right, that's O.K. with me."

"I know he's not a murderer. Kay declared positively, "and naturally I don't want a member of my outfit mixed up in a thing like this. I'm going up now to look over the ground at the central divide, and I thought maybe you'd go up there tomorrow, when you are relieved, and see what you make of it. Zeke Farley is all right, but he's kind of clumsy, and he's got a one-track mind. I thought you might run across some signs that he'd missed."

"Sure I'll do it. I'll come right back to the Lazy Nine and tell you what I find. I wish I could go up there with you now," he ended regretfully.

"I know you couldn't do that today, but if you'll go up tomorrow, I'll be ever so grateful. I don't really expect to find anything myself." She turned and walked back toward Flicker, with Tom Runyon beside her. "But I thought I'd like to see the place."

"You're taking a lot of trouble for this bird!" Tom Runyon shot her a keen look. "I wonder if you'd take that much pains if I was accused of murder?"

"I would if you were a member of my outfit." Kay swung into the saddle and added, with a demurely provocative smile, "And I might, anyway, even if you weren't!"

Waving him a gay farewell, she plunged down the trail that led to the valley separating the two divides, crossed the stream and mounted again to vet dizzier heights.

A Stake Marks The Spot A HALF mile or so from the summit, Kay came on one of the granite monuments that mark the meridional boundary between the two states. She drew in for a moment and studied its undressed surface broken by the smooth spaces left for cutting the words "Montana" and "Idaho."

An empty feeling tempted her to stop and eat her lunch here. But she decided to wait until she reached her objective, and pushed on. Finally she headed Flicker through the pass in the profile of the central divide.

Reining Flicker in, Kay gazed at the still pool of water that lay before her. Its surface was stirred by a gentle breeze which seemed the only movement of the apparently insignificant head waters, and yet it held the sources of two rushing rivers in its mysterious depths.

Kay had been to this spot a number of times, as it had always held a strange fascination for her. It seemed incredible, looking at its serenity in the early afternoon sunlight, that it could have been so lately the scene of violence.

Dismounting, Kay took out her lunch. She studied the general lay of the land as she munched her sandwich.

The grass was trampled by footsteps and hoof prints, which were fairly recent. The sheriff and his posse must have come back this way from Clear Water Basin, she decided. They had evidently followed down the south ridge, after crossing the divide.

A short distance from where she was sitting, by the water's edge, a spot was staked out. Kay realized with a shudder that it must have been there the body was found.

Kay tried to reconstruct in her mind what had happened. Suppose Ted had been wounded? What would he have been likely to do? That strange remark of Josh Hastings about Ted's having dragged himself to the water flashed into her mind. Probably that was what he would have done. But after that, what? His instinct would probably have been to stay as near the water as possible, like any wounded animal.

Kay finished her lunch, and experimentally followed the water course a short way northwest. She soon gave this up after coming to a precipitous drop of granite down which the water trickled in a miniature waterfall.

FORD'S FIGHTS

Historic Battles Highlight The Career Of America's Ruggedest Individualist

1911—Ford, in a court battle, broke George E. Selden's claim to a patent on the basic principles of automobile construction.

1915—Ford spent $400,000 to send a "peace ship" to Europe in a futile attempt to halt the World war.

1921—Ford spurned Wall Street financial aid, and came through the post-war depression by shipping cars to his distributors and demanding cash.

1934—Ford refused to sign Hugh Johnson's NRA code and successfully held out until NRA was knocked out by the Supreme Court.

WILL PRESIDE

C. C. McKoin

Raleigh, July 20—C. C. McKoin, superintendent of the Mills Home farm, Thomasville, will preside over Farm and Home Week to be held at State College August 2-6.

Eight years with the Mills home, McKoin is recognized as one of the State's leading farm superintendents.

dents, said Dean I. O. Schaub, director of the State College extension service.

During Farm and Home Week last summer, McKoin was elected to serve as president of the week this summer. He has started an active campaign to have every county in the State represented by both farmers and farm women at the convention.

The dean pointed out that in cooperation with the extension dairy specialists, McKoin has built up a fine herd of 40 purebred Holsteins that average over 10,000 lb. of milk each, per year.

In cooperation with E. C. Blair, extension agronomist, Mr. McKoin has established a system of crop rotation on the farm that keeps the soil built up and at the same time enables him to grow the crops needed for the farm and for the Mills Home.

The swine and poultry work being done on the Mills Home farm are other outstanding examples of what can be done by carrying out good practices, the dean continued.

McKoin has also held offices in the Davidson County soil conservation association, the Davidson Farmers' Mutual Exchange, the Davidson County Pomona Grange, the Davidson County Board of Agriculture, and the N. C. Holstein-Breeder's Association.

Fewer Fatalities On N. C. Highways Reported In June

Considerable Decrease in Number of Persons Killed in Automobile Wrecks During Month

Raleigh, July 20—A considerable decrease in the number of persons killed in automobile accidents, in June, as well as a drop in the number of accidents as compared with June, 1936, is shown in the automobile accident figures for June of this year announced today by Captain

Charles D. Farmer of the state highway patrol.

During this past June, 67 persons were killed and 550 injured in 501 accident while in June, 1936, a total of 72 persons were killed and 627 injured in 566 accidents. In May of this year, 87 persons were killed and 570 injured in 496 accidents.

The total number of persons killed in automobile accidents so far this year, during the first six months of 1937, is still in excess of the number killed during the first six months of 1936, however, with 462 killed so far this year as compared with 439 during the first six months of 1936.

As usual, a large number of those killed and injured in June were pedestrians, with 22 of those killed and 53 of the injured being pedestrians. Collision accidents between automobiles resulted in the deaths of 17 and the injury of 310 persons while collisions with fixed objects such as trees, telephone poles, bridges and other immovable objects resulted in the deaths of five and the injury of 30 persons. Collisions with bicycles caused the deaths of four and injuries to 18. Nineteen were killed and 125 injured in non-collision accidents.

Various forms of reckless driving, with speeding leading the list, were responsible for 57 fatal accidents and 261 non-fatal accidents, the June figures show. Speeding was given as the cause of 22 fatal and 58 non-fatal crashes, reckless driving as the cause of 14 fatal and 79 non-fatal; driving on wrong side of road as the cause of six fatal and 11 non-fatal; passing on hills and curves as the cause of 11 fatal and 46 non-fatal accidents.

Washington—The state department was neither disturbed nor alarmed at the faltering of the Oriental dove of peace. It was downright jittery.

A Japanese-Chinese war is just about the last thing this country wants. In the first place, as one critic said, it is a bad time for a war to start.

A Japanese-Chinese war might spread quickly to Russia, then involve Germany on the other side of Eurasia. No one needs to guess what would happen after that.

Another thing, the American neutrality act would go into effect. Under it, the state department is like a man with his neck under the guillotine. It can't negotiate. It can't bide its time. It can't do anything except to call American ships off the sea and crawl into its hole.

And by the very act of withdrawing it would contribute to the success of one side.

In Japan's Favor

In the instance of a Japanese-Chinese war, the neutrality act would serve the Japanese mightily. For they could come to America and pick up certain much needed supplies under the "cash-and-carry" section of the bill, while the Chinese, without a first class fighting ship on the whole water-front, couldn't come for a pennyweight.

Looking at it from a cold commercial standpoint, a war in the East would interfere with the buying power of one of America's best customers—Japan. The neutrality act would prohibit that nation buying arms and munitions. So that business would be out. But at present Japan buys more than $100,000,000 of raw cotton from this country annually. Under the neutrality act the President is directed to impose an embargo on other commodities besides munitions. It is to do so would promote the cause of peace. So the secretary of war and the President would be under pressure from "strict neutrality" adherents to cut off Japan's supply of cotton and steel. And there would be tremendous pressure against such action from cotton growing states and the steel industry, including labor.

Double Caution

Having to face a real war in the Pacific while strapped in that sort of strait-jacket was not a sunny prospect for the state department.

Moreover, Secretary Hull sincerely wants the world to be at peace. With him it is not mere policy. It is religion.

The state department insists it was quite by accident that representatives of China and Japan showed up at the state department an hour apart, to run smack into the solemn caution that it would be "a great blow to the cause of peace and world progress" for them to go to war.

The caution was obviously intended more for Japan than China. No one, except possibly Japan, has accused China of starting all this Oriental monkey-business.

Man About Manhattan

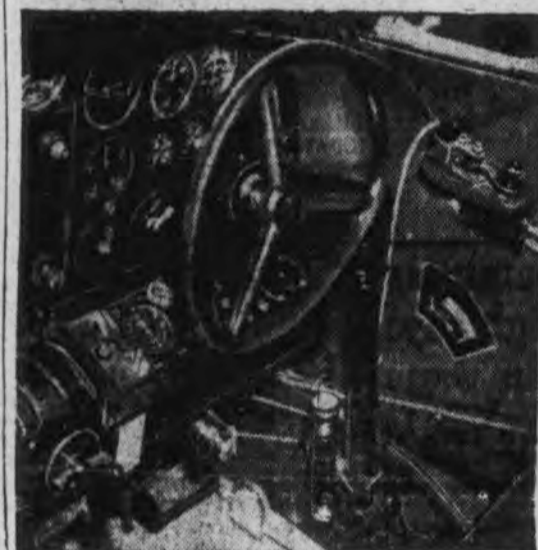

By George Tucker

New York—I've got salt and pepper in my shoes. Maybe you savvy what salt and pepper means. It means walking into one of these smorgasbord saloons, with its skavvit and pickled mushrooms, and remembering suddenly how refreshing those "Dr. Peppers" used to taste in that little drug store next to the RKO Orpheum in Omaha. It means having baked Long Island duck, and wishing it were one of those wild mallards shot in the rice fields in Calcasieu Parish, in Louisiana. It means seeing pompano before you, and having your mouth water for a slice of cold melon as it is served in the coffee room of the Texas hotel, in Ft. Worth. It means walking in to dinner at a hotel on Park avenue, with its salads and pheasant and champagne cocktails, and remembering the hot biscuits and the ham gravy and eggs they serve for breakfast at the White House in Biloxi. It means pushing "broiled" chicken around on your plate, and hanker-

CONTEMPTUOUS!

Precise Navigation Conquers Ocean That Trapped Amelia

IN THE EARHART PLANE

Look at this instrument-pocked control board in Amelia Earhart's plane — and you'll see what a job it was for only two persons — Miss Earhart and Navigator Fred Noonan — to keep tab on everything. (Note radio sending key at right.)

IN AN AIRLINER

There are just as many instruments in the ocean-flying Pan-American clippers but there are a half-dozen men to do the tasks Navigator Noonan handled alone. This is the chart room the Pan-American navigator uses for his work.

If Amelia Earhart and her navigator missed their mark in the Pacific, why are trans-oceanic planes of the commercial airlines able to complete their flights safely? Devon Francis, AP aviation editor, talked to pilots, navigators and airline officials about it, and then he wrote this story.

By DEVON E. FRANCIS (AP Aviation Editor)

PORT WASHINGTON, N. Y. — Undramatically, methodically, winged yachts streak along the air lanes between Europe and America, between America and Asia.

In the water wilderness of the Pacific the world's most famous aviator, Amelia Earhart, is lost.

The big transport airplanes fly unerringly to their goals; Miss Earhart, accomplished air woman that she is, misses her tiny target, Howland island.

The answer may be precise navigation.

Complicated Job The same formula developed in the 14th century by mariners who braved the ocean beyond the sight of land is used today by crews of the big flying boats to chart their ing after honest fried chicken as it is served in Mrs. Saunders' boarding house in Charlottesville, Va.

Salt and pepper means all those long remembered savory things, and the nostalgia they bring when you try, but never, quite succeed, to duplicate them in the cafes and restaurants of New York.

It means walking into your favorite breakfast place, and knowing the coffee can never equal the coffee you get in New Orleans. And ordering a midnight omelette in Mulberry street, and sighing over the memory of a simple club breakfast at the Sevilla-Biltmore in Havana. It means dinner at a chop house in the Forties, and wondering why the steak doesn't seem half so delicious as a sirloin you remember in Jerry's Joynit, in Los Angeles.

Salt and pepper means dreaming of pop-overs, with golden butter, and honey, and melon, in Georgia. It means the remembering taste of roasted ribs, with its Mexican sauces, and hot tamales, in San Antonio. The reason seemingly for the plight of Miss Earhart and Navigator Noonan is a slight miscalculation as to position in relation to Howland island, coupled with poor visibility.

Doing Six Men's Work

Noonan had not only to navigate but to act as flight engineer, mechanic, radio operator and probably steward, as well, meanwhile fighting off inevitable fatigue. Both on the Pacific transports and the transatlantic survey planes those duties are broken down and assigned to half a dozen men.

All hands get ample rest. Precise navigation is the product. In flying from Lae, New Guinea, to minute Howland island, Noonan had a multiplicity of duties. sturdy airplane and patient motors could not erase the mistake of plotting a wrong position on the map.

All of the other state officials have been invited to visit Roanoke island Thursday to take part in the exercises which have been arranged and dedicated especially to North Carolina and her sons and daughters, in connection with the 350th anniversary of the founding of the first colony on the island in 1587. One of the largest crowds which has yet visited the island on any one day is expected to be there to greet Governor Hoey.

This will be Governor Hoey's first visit to Roanoke island since his inauguration. He will speak promptly at 7 o'clock from the stage of the big water-side amphitheater, where Paul Green's epic outdoor drama, "The Lost Colony," is being staged. Governor Hoey will be introduced by R. Bruce Etheridge, a native of Roanoke island and at present Director of the Department of Conservation and Development, to which post he was recently reappointed by Governor Hoey after having served in this same capacity for four years under former Governor J. C. B. Ehringhaus.

Governor Hoey has been intensely interested in the "birthday party" being held in Roanoke island this summer commemorating the founding of the first English colony on the island 350 years ago and the birth of Virginia Dare, the first white baby born on this continent, and is looking forward to his visit there this week with a great deal of anticipation, he indicated today. Special music by the famed Westminster Choir School Singers, who assist in the presentation of the "The Lost Colony" drama and by the great electric organ, will be a part of the program arranged for the "North Carolina Day" celebration.

The Greenville Greenies went down in one of the most overwhelming defeats of the season here yesterday as the Kinston Eagles walloped them to the tune of 15-0.

The Kinstonians collected a total of 19 hits for 30 bases and tallied in nearly every inning while Bill Sekeres was scattering six Greenie hits and holding the locals completely in check.

So well did Sekeres master the Greenies that only one runner got as far as second base.

Kinston started off slowly—they made one in the first and another in the third. They got rough in the fourth to count five times and then added four more runs in the fifth. For good measure, they counted four runs in later innings.

Patton's double, an error, and Wright's homer accounted for three runs in the fourth. Doubled by Stringfellow and Wyrostek added another, and Wyrostek scored on Schultz's single.

Williams, Greenville's starting hurler, was replaced by Durwood Stowe at the start of the fifth.

Sid Stringfellow, with 4 hits for five tries, headed the Eagles attack. Wyrostek, Schultz and Stoner made three hits apiece. Thus, the four top men in the Eagles batting order accounted for 13 hits. Every member of the team got at least one hit, and Pitcher Sekeres made two. Wyrostek and Stringfellow contributed two doubles each.

Swamp Norwood, with two for four, as the only Greenie getting more than one hit.

The locals journey to Kinston this afternoon to engage the Eagles in Grainger Park. They return here tomorrow for another contest with the Eagles.

Bill Opposed By Treasurer

Johnson Urges Congressmen Vote Against Lea Bill

Raleigh, July 19.—North Carolina's two senators and eleven members of the house of representatives in congress are being urged by State Treasurer Charles M. Johnson to vote against the Lea Bill, now in the house, known as House Resolution 9968, which he believes would prove detrimental to county and municipal financing operations in the state.

"In my opinion, it will take us twice as long to complete refinancing operations now in progress in the state if this resolution should pass," Mr. Johnson said in his letter to the state's representatives in congress.

"As you know, it has been necessary for the local units in this state, through me as director of local government, to do a great deal of refinancing and readjusting. We have been very successful along these lines and are rapidly working out our situation. We have been so successful that an interruption at this time would be unfortunate. I am opposed to the pending resolution because as far as we are concerned in this state, it is unnecessary. Our situation is being worked out satisfactorily and economically. The requirements of the resolution are wasteful and would effectively strangle all reasonable committee rehabilitation efforts, would increase the expense and cause delay of refunding activities.

"The process of refunding and the rehabilitation of municipal credit is progressing efficiently, economically and satisfactorily both to the investors and the municipalities. It would be deeply regrettable if unwise legislation should disturb and retard this program—and this would happen, in my opinion, if this resolution should pass."

Mr. Johnson also pointed out that the resolution virtually prevents the employment of national bond attorneys, and that refinancing operations are virtually impossible without the assistance of these attorneys.

Aces Nose Out Bears By Score Of 3 To 2

New Bern. — Girard Corrado's sixth-inning homer broke a 2-all tie and gave Ayden a 3-2 decision over New Bern yesterday afternoon.

Earl Webb held the crippled New Bern club to four hits. Tex Thornton's homer in the second inning, after Knowles had gained life on an error, accounted for the Bears' tally.

Monk Joyner's single, an error, and Faust Johnson's single produced a run for Ayden in the second. The other tally by the visitors came in the third—Schuerholz walked, advanced on Jirak's sacrifice, and scored on Fary's single to center. Knowles made a fine throw home after fielding Jirak's hit, and the play on Schuerholz was close.

Bill Averette opposed Webb and offered good pitching. He also did a swell fielding job—Bill handled six assists.

To add to Manager Doc Smith's woes, outfielder Glenn Mullinax did not report at the park for the afternoon's game. Smith was sore about it and said he intended to suspend and fine Mullinax "for breaking training."

Smith stepped in yesterday despite an injured hand, and worked behind the bat. Thornton, the No. 2 catcher, filled Mullinax's outfield job. Porter Sheppard, regular catcher, is out with an injury. Two regulars—Outfielder Ed Black and Shortstop Pee Wee McAbee—have been out of action for some time because of fractures.

The fielding star of yesterday's game was Shortstop Fary of Ayden. He handled five putouts and four assists in great fashion. His feature play came in the first inning—he grabbed a liner off Smith's bat and converted it into a double play. Stith also starred on defense.

SPORT SLANTS

By PAP

Lou Fette came up to the Boston Bees with a fine pitching record compiled with St. Paul of the American association. Fette pitched 23 complete games and won 25, led the A.A. in victory percentages, complete games, innings pitched (291), and in several other departments. Yet he did not impress. Beekeeper Bill McKechnie, the Boston manager, could not overlook the fact that Fette had celebrated his 30th birthday and had been knocking around the minor leagues for 10 years.

Too many ball players who have put in long service in the minors have acquired minor league habits which hurt their chances of making the grade in the big show.

Fette proved different. The right-handed veteran-rookie has been the Bees' big winner, boasting ten victories against three losses at the season's halfway mark. He had beaten every team on the National circuit with the exception of the New York Giants. He had faced the Giants only in relief roles.

The Boston ace had four shutouts to his credit. He was forced to travel 13 innings to win two of 'em. On one other occasion, when he shut out Brooklyn, he went 12 innings before driving in the winning run with his own bat.

Fette thrives on work. He has never been anything of a bench-warmer or spot-picker. He takes his turn and faces whatever opposition comes along. With St. Paul last year he took part in 38 contests. The year before he broke into the box scores 43 times.

Curiously enough, he was rated a better basketball player than baseball player in the three years he attended Missouri Valley college. He started his professional baseball career by winning 20 games for Pueblo in 1928, as a Kansas City farmhand. He was with the Kansas City Blues until mid-season of 1933 when he was traded to St. Paul.

GREENSBORO PRAISES "CAPTAINS COURAGEOUS"

The Greensboro Record of June 28th makes the following comments regarding "Captains Courageous," which is to be presented at the Pitt Theatre next Sunday and Monday:

"It is a masterpiece of simple eloquence, beauty and authority—replete with pathos, humor and adventure—a picture of epic and irresistible sweep that easily rates 'tops' in motion picture offerings in a year pre-eminent for notable and spectacular films.

"The photoplay producers in this instance have done a fine piece of work in pre-empting the original source of material. . . . 'Captains Courageous' is the type of picture well designed and calculated to furnish entertainment and thrill, along with smiles and tears, for the whole family. And, what is more, it preaches a great and excellent sermon, impressively, yet with such subtlety, that the audience does not resent the moralizing. This picture, in a word, is superb!"

WANT ADS PAY

Approximately $2,320,000 will be returned in the next few weeks, to employees of the Railway Express Agency, following the recent amendment of the railroad retirement act and receipt of a release of the funds by court order. Approximately the same amount, equivalent to amounts accrued in the accounts of the agency for excise taxes under the act, will be turned over to the railroads as additional payments for express privileges.

Express employees were included in the application of the 1935 law, which provided federal taxes of 7 per cent, on compensation of employees up to $300, half to be paid by the carriers and half by the employees. The taxes became effective March 1, last year, and under the law the carriers were required to make payroll deductions for the employees' share of the tax. In connection with litigation concerning the 1935 law, tax collections from employees were held in trust, and these funds have just been released by court order following the enactment of the amended law which was the result of conferences between representatives of the carriers and labor.
