JAPS ATTEMPT MAJOR DRIVE

Chinese Regain Lost Ground in Hand-to-Hand Fighting With Invaders

WAR AT A GLANCE Japanese advanced two miles in major attack on Chinese positions north of Shanghai.

Chinese repulsed invaders in hand to hand fighting at Yanghong one point along the line of attack.

Chinese rushed reinforcements to bolster their lines.

On north China front Japanese announced fall of Maohang, 30 miles south of Tientsin, after 24 hours battle.

Japan planned to send three special envoys to win support for the Japanese cause in France, United States and Great Britain.

Shanghai, Sept. 11. — (AP) — A smashing drive inland from the Yangtze river today brought the Japanese and Chinese hand to hand locked in one of the most important battles of the undeclared Sino-Japanese war.

For 24 hours the Japanese steadily hammered the Chinese back until they had taken one-third of Yanghong, but were later forced to give up the section under terrific Chinese attacks.

An aerial and artillery bombardment protected the Japanese movement slowly forward. When the attackers reached the city, however, they were forced to retire after hand to hand fighting in which the Chinese seemed to have superiority.

When the push was halted the Chinese summoned heavy reinforcements in an effort to regain their lost positions.

Casualties were heaviest than at any time since Shanghai hostilities broke out.

Powell Says Employers Liable For Double Tax

Reflector Bureau Raleigh, Sept. 11.—Several employers in North Carolina who have paid to the collector of internal revenue the full one per cent of contributions on their payrolls for 1936 are to avoid payment of the nine-tenths of one per cent due to the State Unemployment Compensation Commission, on the ground that they had already paid the federal government the full amount.

By the act of congress and regulations adopted by the Treasury Department based upon it, the employers are required to pay the full amount of the excise tax to the federal government unless they can show that they paid nine-tenths of

WAGE WAR ON PIRATE SUBS

Great Britain, France to Patrol the Italian Coast Unless Italy Cooperates

Geneva, Sept. 11.—(AP) —The threat of an Anglo-French warship patrol off Italy's western coast emerged ominously today from the anti-piracy conference at Nyon.

Informed persons at the Nyon parley where nine European powers, Italy and Germany self-excluded, were trying to uproot the potential sprouts of a second world war, said Premier Mussolini would be invited to patrol the Tyrrhenian Sea against "pirate" submarines but if Italy declines to take part in the impending anti-piracy protocol, British and French war craft will be sent to the Tyrrhenian.

This grim force of naval police would be empowered to sink any piracy-bent submarine that pokes its periscope above the water. Italy's entire western coast fronts on the Tyrrhenian Sea.

It was explained, however, that France and Britain, sponsors of the Nyon gathering, still hoped strongly Duce would join the international police force.

The Italian-German counter proposal that the problem of submarine piracy be laid before the old Spanish non-intervention committee in London had been rebuffed by France and Britain. Curtly they announced such a scheme was impractical.

Italy and Germany still stood by their counter suggestion entered when they refused the invitation to Nyon, holding forth promise of collaboration through the London group. The crux of the touchy situation will be reached after the protocol plan is completed and Italy and possibly Germany invited to take part. Meanwhile a new stumbling block to the Nyon talk was the double-edged criticism by Soviet Russia.

The North Carolina Highway Patrol radio station at Williamston will go on the air for regular service in about a week, it was announced by patrol division headquarters here today.

Lieutenant Jones said this morning that he hoped the radio equipped cars for the eastern division would be ready for delivery Monday or Tuesday of next week. There will be about thirty of these cars put into use in this area.

President Says People Have Cause To Be Alarmed

Hyde Park, Sept. 11. — (AP) — President Roosevelt said today the Far Eastern and Mediterranean situation had made the people jittery all over the world and rightly so.

Talking at a press conference at the summer White House the President agreed with a reporter's observation that the Sino-Japanese conflict and the submarine "piracy" in the Mediterranean had created a widespread psychological feeling of nervousness.

The reporter used the word "jittery" and the President accepted it adding people were justified in feeling this way about present conditions. He said this reaction all over the world was not only in financial circles but in every home and in every democratic government.

Meantime at Washington Haywood Patterson, one of nine Negroes involved in the celebrated Scottsboro case, appealed to the supreme court in an effort to escape a 75 year prison sentence imposed by the Alabama courts for an alleged attack on a white woman.

Cooper Again Attacks Centralized Government

Reflector Bureau. Raleigh, Sept. 11.—"I believe in county rights and in city rights. I object to there being welded under the dome of the State house a political machine that can arbitrarily control the local destinies of the masses," climaxes Wilmington's vigorous mayor, Thomas E. Cooper, in a characteristic attack on centralization of government in "North Carolina Municipal News," official organ of the N. C. League of Municipalities.

of "Home Rule" in the 1940 gubernatorial race. "During the last decade the trend toward centralization of government has steadily increased until today it presents the grave possibility of the extermination of all local authority," begins the effervescent Mr. Cooper.

Other pointed barbs aimed at what he recently called the "Raleigh Gang" are: "A city government knows its problems far better than any bureaucrat can hope to know them... Lanier Speaks To Kiwanians

Local Club Takes Part in Observance of "Constitution Week"

"Constitution Week" was observed at the Kiwanis club last night with J. Con Lanier as guest speaker.

Mr. Lanier traced the history of the growth of constitutional government from the granting of the Magna Charta to the adoption of the Constitution of the United States, showing the advantages of such government over preceding forms. He emphasized the fact that, with the exceptions of England, France and the United States, representative government had practically disappeared today. An eloquent plea was made for the preservation of representative government which, the speaker said, could best be accomplished by keeping our national and state governments within the framework of the Constitution and the jealous guarding of local government as truly representative of the local constituency. He deplored the tendency, so marked today, to allow local, county and district affairs to be administered by centralized groups in, for example, State capitals. The speaker was roundly applauded at the conclusion of his address.

Miss Helen Phelps was the soloist of the evening and delighted the members with several numbers.

J. L. Cannon was received into the membership of the club. C. P. Pierce was a guest of the club.

Your Waist Must Be Slim For This Fall's New Frocks

FASTENERS ARE TRIMMINGS

Black slide fasteners down and front and across the pockets make the smart trimmings of this fall street frock of gray wool. Two little balls of simulated black Persian lamb finish the high neckline. Accessories are a gray tweed hat and black velvet gloves stitched in white.

By ADELAIDE KERR

NEW YORK (AP)—The new fall frocks, which will make their debut after Labor Day, have slender fitted waists.

Many are designed with a new cuirass bodice, so-named because it hugs the figure like the armor worn by knights centuries ago. Others have fitted corselet girdles with an upper seam near the bust and a lower one not far from the hipbones. All are fitted so trimly they make a slim waist essential to 1937-38 chic.

Profiles generally are straight and so slim they are called "reed" or "pencil" silhouettes. A few gored skirts are shown. Most of them are quite short—generally 13 to 15 inches from the ground.

Busts are molded, often marked by draped or shirred effects, and hips kept slender. Necklines are fairly high or designed in vee cuts, while shoulders are accented less than last season.

In keeping with the predicted popularity of black, designers have created scores of black frocks, using the new dull-surfaced, pebbled crepes or silk jersey, with molded shirred bodices. Hunter's green, blue-grass green, smoke blue and wine are other fashionable shades.

Trimmings are outstanding notes in the new dresses, which many American women will make their first fall wardrobe purchases. Gold metal leaves and masks or stained glass window motifs of sequins add glitter to some black frocks, while others are enriched by thick accents such as jet buttons, applique clusters of velvet grapes or touches of paillette embroidery. Quilting and embroidery are smart.

Slide fasteners of leather hooks and belts of contrasting color accent slim wool street frocks.

The French monarchy began to give way to the first French republic in 1791.

THE FITTED DIAPHRAM

A slim fitted diaphragm achieved by inverted tucks is the distinguishing feature of this slate blue crepe afternoon frock. Gold metal leaves stud its vee neckline and narrow belt. A veiled toque of brown, beige and slate blue velvet, brown suede gloves and gold link bracelets are worn with it.

Hollywood Sights And Sounds

By Robbie Coon

Hollywood, Sept. 10.—(AP)—The Twentieth Century studio people were annoyed and worried when Paramount's "Easy Living" beat them to the theatres—and they had cause to be.

But "Thin Ice" will do plenty for itself despite the similarity in story twist. It has, first of all, Sonja Henie, as cute and ingenious as in her first picture. It has Miss Henie's skating and some of the finest group work on ice ever seen on the screen. It also has Tyrone Power, who aside from being the real Henie heart interest proves again that he can act.

"Easy Living" was about a girl who found herself living in style because people thought she was the friend of a wealthy Wall Streeter. "Thin Ice" is about a resort skating instructor who finds herself overwhelmed with attention because people think she is the friend of the prince. Both heroines are innocent of the situation. Where the girl in the first picture married the Wall Streeter's son, Sonja in "Thin Ice" gets the prince.

"Thin Ice" was made before its present parent as "My Lips Betray," starring Lillian Harvey, but it has been tailored anew to suit the Scandinavian ice queen. It is above the average entertainment, with Arthur Treacher and Raymond Walburn for comedy, and Joan Davis clicking for laughs in two songs and dances. Sidney Lanfield directed.

"Something To Sing About" is a satirical little thing having to do with a band leader who becomes a movie star. It's slightly biographical of its star, James Cagney.

Neither pretentious nor elaborate it is Grand National's biggest picture and credit for making it seem bigger belongs to the versatile Victor Schertzinger, who wrote the story, the songs, and directed.

Cagney dances, ably for one so long out of practice, and continues his casual, effective style of acting. Evelyn Daw, who sings much better than she acts in this, her first picture, still apparently has what it takes. William Frawley and Mona Barrie are good. It's a laugh every time Bennett O. Regan (Gene Lockhart) is addressed. He "B.O." to the boys.

"Big City" probably won't suffer at the box office for my low opinion of it. It's sentimental melodrama, with Luise Rainer and Spencer Tracy wasted, I think in the lead roles. Directed by Frank Borzage, its love scenes have that old touch, and in some places the picture shows signs of transcending its hokey materials but seldom does. For popular sock-appeal the climax has 15 big sports names to side with hero Tracy in the big city taxi war, and it's a riotously satisfying ending.

The story has Tracy's wife, Rainer, being deported as an aftermath of the taxi fighting. Stretching credibility is the fact that although the wife is an expectant mother, the husband tells no one until after she's on the boat. If he had, of course, the reporters would have had a "cause" and the dirty work couldn't have been done and there'd be no picture. This would have been unfortunate, come to think of it, because Rainer here is more beautifully photographed than ever before and Tracy is good no matter what. And there's a scene wherein Guinn Williams, to prove to cops that he's buying milk for himself, drinks a whole quart before your eyes!

POWELL SAYS EMPLOYERS LIABLE FOR DOUBLE TAX

(Continued from page one) must also pay the state commission its nine-tenths of one per cent. If there is to be a refund, it will have to come through an act of congress or regulations of the Treasury Department, and this refund, if it is made later, will be to the employer, and not the state commission to settle the amount the employer may be due to pay us," said Mr. Powell.

Several employers have appealed to the state commission for release from the payment to the state on the ground that they had paid the full one per cent to the collector of internal revenue, but when they consulted lawyers who looked into it, they advised employers to pay the contributions, Mr. Powell disclosed. In the few cases that have been reviewed by the commission, it has held them liable for the nine-tenths of one per cent.

SHORT SHOTS

By HENRY AVERILL

Raleigh, Sept. 11.—The supreme court takes the week off next week as far as argument of appeals before it is concerned. The justices, however, will be far from idle as they consider their decisions in those causes they have heard during the first two weeks of the fall term.

Next appeals to be argued will be those from the third and eighteenth judicial districts, slated to be called beginning Tuesday, September 22—which is likewise the date set for handing down first decisions of this term.

All hands and the cook of Raleigh's ship of state have adjourned to Winston-Salem for the Young Democrats' mob scene. It's a pretty fair bet there will be more bald heads than beardless faces at the juveniles' gathering.

Senator Robert R. Reynolds was altogether the militant and adamant adherent of the New Deal in his address to the Y.D.'s Friday evening.

"Our Bob" declared himself irrevocably and irretrievably on the side of President Roosevelt, but hedged just a bit with this perhaps significant statement:

"There must be, of course, a spirit of compromise. It is through compromise that we were given our great democratic form of government."

Hardest man to find in any of Raleigh's offices is George Ross Pou, state auditor. This correspondent has visited the auditor's office on an average of three times a week for the past month and has never yet found Mr. Pou in.

Always the statistician, Frank Parker federal expert who keeps track on North Carolina's crops, counted the dishes—or part of them—offered at the free spread down at Willard's Field day.

"I counted no less than 23 different kinds of food," says Mr. Parker. "Before I remembered I wasn't on duty and quit taking inventory."

"In 1929 I was very active helping Tyre Taylor organize Young Democratic clubs throughout North Carolina," said a state official who insists upon remaining anonymous for reasons which will be obvious when the rest of his statement is considered:

"Now I'm not a bit proud of it," he finished.

R. Grady Johnson, new head of the prison division, still hasn't anywhere to hang his hat or put his feet and call it his office. His desk is still nicely crated and jammed

Few observers expect the federal Rural Electrification Authority to allot any more money or approve any more North Carolina projects until the Johnston county row is threshed out in supreme court.

It's a noticeable fact, proved by the records, that the REA has not entered into any contract with any private power company to supply current for any of the projects it has approved in the state.

"North Carolina Municipal News" organ of the N. C. League of Municipalities, is just off the press for its second issue. It's a sheet which would be of real interest to ordinary citizens as well as to muni heads.

Man About Manhattan

By George Tucker
New York—An intended report on the contract bridge situation in New York must be postponed. Your correspondent has been finessed by too many silly incidents in the last 24 hours to permit a serious treatise on such a weighty matter.
To begin with, I was hurriedly shaving the other night, pausing between razor-strokes only long enough to arrest an occasional hemorrhage, when a page rang and slipped an important looking telegram beneath the door.
"George," it said, "Am en route to Chicago. Will see you Wednesday or Thursday, Maude."
All of which was very nice except for one thing—I don't know anybody named Maude. Personally, the only Maudes I ever have heard of are Maude Adams, who doesn't know me, and a lady donkey that used to kick things around in the comic strips.
Later, still brooding over the incident, I attended a theatre and was quietly smoking in the lobby when Erin O'Brien-Moore and a party of friends came in. . . . "Hello, George," she called. . . . This made me feel very good, being recognized by a pretty like that.

A moment later she turned and seemed dumbfounded at finding me there. . . . "Why, George, darling," she cried, "how are you!" . . . Maybe she didn't see me the first time, or was that another wire from Maude?

A note from Senor Sam Blake reveals a mild earthquake which took place recently in the office of Jack Warner, motion picture producer.

When Errol Flynn returned from Spain, after being allegedly struck by a bullet, he avoided Warner until he had made a careful visit to the make-up department. The artist quickly devised a horrible looking scar across Flynn's face. Then, assuming a shell-shocked attitude, the actor hurried into the producer's office. Warner took one glance at his star and was horrified. "You ought to be whipped," he groaned, berating him furiously for ruining his face and a lot of contracts.

"Oh," said Flynn airily, "my doctor has told me what to do." With that he whipped out a hanky and disposed of the scar with one swipe. His boss almost fainted with relief. But they say, he probably will never be the same again.

SYNOPSIS: When flashy Prescott Fanning abducts Janet from Baltimore on his yacht, she gets word to Neill, a young federal agent who loves her. Dashing to Absalom's Harbor, he boards the yacht and finds, in a locked cabin, Fanning shot dead and Janet in a faint, a gun beside her. Neill hides her nearby in a disguised liner, then joins Mark Bonniger, keen local investigator to keep tabs on developments.

Returning from a trip to the liner, Neill is seized, bound and blindfolded by a tough who wants Fanning's "stuff." Queer little Eyster, who hated Fanning helps Neill escape. Next day Kettering, a Baltimore lawyer, has a word with Neill.

Chapter 24

"Any news in the case?" Kettering asked.

"Nothing's broken," said Neill.

Kettering lowered his voice. "Is the federal government interested in this case?"

He asked the question with a malicious smile that made Neill uneasy. He regretted that Kettering had been told who he was. "Why, no," he said easily. "Why?"

"Oh, just your being here."

"That was an accident."

"Remarkable coincidence. Don't work too hard on the case."

"I don't get you," said Neill.

"Don't you agree that it would be better if this ugly mystery was never solved?"

"I don't get you," said Neill.

Kettering smiled. "Well, they say a word to the wise is sufficient." He went into the store, leaving Neill in a state of inward confusion. Kettering's words had the sound of a threat. What was Kettering's interest in the matter? How much did he know? Were the Ketterings connected with the events of the night before?

He was still looking for the answers when Bonniger came up.

They rowed out to the Nadji, taking Walter, the steward, with them to answer any questions about the yacht that might arise. Walter was a blond, characterless young man, still badly shaken by his experiences of the past 24 hours. He smoked one cigarette after another. On the yacht they found Constable Morsythe. Walter was left with him while Bonniger and Neill went below.

The cabin showed the effect of the crowds that had swarmed through them the previous day. Practically everything movable had been carried away for souvenirs. The lock on the door of the after cabin which had been partly wrenched off when the door was forced, was now missing.

"How do they expect me to reconstruct what happened?" grumbled Bonniger.

They stood in the doorway without speaking, searching the little cabin foot by foot. It was a luxurious room with a pair of twin beds, seat lockers under the portholes on each side and a capacious, chintz-covered easy chair. At the foot of the beds an ugly brown stain had dried on the rug.

Neill's eyes flew to the door of the clothes cupboard to the left of the beds. The sight of it stirred up painful feelings in him. He would have liked to believe that the real killer of Prescott Fanning had locked himself in that closet, but the story was too far-fetched.

Building Up Theories

Bonniger said: "All agree that Fanning was found lying on his back with his feet to the door and his head near the foot of the bed on the left as you look in. That's where the blood stain is. He must have been moved the instant he fell because there's no blood anywhere else in the room."

Neill was not inclined to help Bonniger out in his reasoning.

"I know he was moved," Bonniger went on, "because a man shot in the back naturally falls on his face, especially if he's leaning forward. The bullet entered the base of Fanning's skull, came out of his forehead and then struck the drawer under the port seat locked. It was almost spent and has left only a slight dent in the wood. Its course indicates that Fanning was bending far over when he was shot. If the easy chair was where they say it was, he was bending over that chair. . . . Do you agree?"

"Absolutely," said Neill grimly. "You'd beat a professional!"

Bonniger shook his head like a puzzled dog. "Every theory I try to build up runs into a contradiction. The most natural explanation is that Fanning broke in the door with the intention of attacking the girl. But if he had such an aim, why had he given her a key to lock herself in with?"

"Perhaps he had no such intention in the beginning," suggested Neill. "Perhaps he didn't expect to be repulsed, and when he was repulsed he went crazy."

"That's a possibility. But having broken in violently, how could he be so foolish as to let the girl get behind him?"

Neill shrugged his shoulders. He went to the door of the clothes closet and tried it. It was locked. "We ought to have a look in here. I'll ask Walter where the key is."

He spoke to the steward from the companionway. "Where is the key to the clothes closet in the after cabin?"

"Isn't it in the door?" returned Walter.

"If it was, I wouldn't be asking you for it."

"It has always been in the door."

"Was it in the door when you discovered the body?"

"I couldn't tell you that, sir. I didn't notice such things."

"Are there any duplicate keys?"

"There's a bunch of keys in the pantry. I'll fetch them."

Neill returned to Bonniger with the keys. After trying several, he was able to unlock the door and throw it open. The closet was empty.

"Have you your magnifying glass?" he asked.

It was handed over. "What's in your mind?"

"Nothing as yet. But it seems funny that anybody should make away with the key."

Before using the glass, Neill pounced on a little bright object lying on the floor of the closet.

"Look at this!" he cried.

It was a tiny spoon-shaped piece of nickel that had been broken off another piece. Bonniger turned it over on his hand. "Do you know what it is?"

"Sure. It's for cleaning out the bowl of a pipe. It's part of a little combination gadget that is sold to smokers." Neill had dropped to his knees and was searching the floor of the closet through the glass. . . .

"Look!" he said, handing over the glass. "Crumbs of bread and shreds of tobacco."

Bonniger looked. "What do you make of that?" he asked.

Neill crumbled some of the bread and some of the tobacco between thumb and finger. "The bread is dry, but not completely dry," he said. "The tobacco is fairly fresh. It cannot have been lying there more than two days. Within the past 48 hours some man has been concealed in this closet. While he was shut up here he ate some bread and he filled his pipe."

"He couldn't smoke his pipe if he was hiding."

"He couldn't light it, but a confirmed smoker gets a certain amount of satisfaction out of a dry smoke." Neill was picking up shreds of tobacco, examining them under the glass and tasting them. "He smoked a mixture containing Latakia, perique, burley and perhaps other tobaccos. It would be an expensive mixture."

"Well, I'm damned!" said Bonniger. "This puts a new complexion on the case!"

"Are you telling me?" cried Neill. He was so happy he could hardly play his part. Janet had not lied to him. It was not she who had shot Fanning.

"They're Both Guilty!"

Bonniger argued quite differently. "Now we know where the man came from," he said. "She brought him on board with her!"

"What!" cried Neill.

"Sure! It's as plain as a pike-staff! No wonder she came aboard willingly. It was a job between the two to get Fanning."

"What for?"

"For his money and valuables. We don't know what has been taken. . . . The girl invited Fanning into her cabin, and while she was keeping him occupied, her confederate sneaked up behind and shot him. It all fits together. It doesn't matter which of the two shot him. They're both guilty!"

Neill rubbed his lip. This was ridiculous, but it was dangerous too. According to his premises, Bonniger's reasoning was perfectly correct. Janet was innocent, but every hour that passed strengthened the case against her. It would be fatal to come out into the open until he could produce the real killer.

Neill said dryly: "If you are right, how about the door?"

"Oh, when they went out they would lock the door and then break it in to make it appear as if Fanning had asked for what he got. After they had broken in the door they would put the key on the inside."

It was an ingenious explanation though perfectly false. Neill thought by God, as long as I live I will never convict a man on circumstantial evidence! He said: "Well, anyhow, our job is to catch the man."

"And the girl," added Bonniger.

A new anxiety seized Neill. If Bonniger gave the press this new slant on the case, popular opinion would run high against the missing girl. So far, public opinion had been indulgent towards her because it was believed that she had been lured aboard the yacht. But if people thought that she had plotted with another man to bring about Fanning's death, every hand would be raised against her.

The thought suddenly leaped into Neill's mind: Eyster! That's who it was! It is exactly the crazy sort of thing he would do! These were the "arrangements" he talked about. He was always watching and following Fanning. He sneaked aboard the yacht! It was Eyster who shot Fanning and that's why he's sucking up to me now!

Suspecting Eyster, Neill goes to his room, Monday, to question him.

State-Davidson Play September 18

PACK DRILLS FOR 1ST TILT

To Play Next Saturday in Greensboro

Raleigh, Sept. 10.—An intrasquad game—the first regulation scrimmage since drills began Wednesday a week ago—is being played this afternoon at N. C. State College.

Coach Doc Newton says the players are in good physical shape for the intra-squad battle. He is counting on the game to give him a line on a possible starting team for the Davidson game, Saturday night, September 18, in Greensboro.

Newton has not announced starting teams for the scrimmage, but will probably use the clubs that worked together in a dummy scrimmage Thursday.

The teams:

Whites—Jess Tatum and Carroll Conrad, ends; Bill Matheny and J. B. Thompson, tackles; Cecile Brownie and Dan Piloseno, guards; Louie Mark, center; Kenneth Sands, Pete Kuzma, Ren Hoek and Tony Di Yesso, backs.

Reds—Connie Mac Berry and Dick Thompson, ends; George Fry and E. V. Helms, tackles; Bunnie Hines and Warren Wooden, guards; Bill Retter or Jim Espey, center; Arthur Rooney, Eddie Berlinski, George Murphy and Fred Gardner, backs.

There are only four sophomores on the two teams unless Retter gets the call over Espey at center on the Red Club. The other sophomores are Sands, DiYesso, Rooney and Gardner.

UNC TO SHOW GOOD BACKS

Tar Heels Have Two Good Backfields for First Game

Chapel Hill, Sept. 11.—Although that line continues to be a big problem, what with the whole left side to be filled with replacements, the Tar Heels should be able to present two fairly well balanced backfields when they open with South Carolina here September 25.

A wider experience in backfield fundamentals and numerous tests under varsity fire undoubtedly favors the No. 1 quartet of Crowell, Little, Tom Burnette, George Watson and Art Ditt as starters against the Gamecocks. Little will be at quarter, Burnette and Watson at halfbacks, and Ditt at fullback.

The No. 2 backfield consists of George Stirnweiss, quarter; George Radman and Randy Cooner, halfbacks, and Jack Kraynick. Stirnweiss and Radman are sophomores. Kraynick is a Junior and Cooner a senior. Excepting Watson in the No. 1 backfield, the others are Seniors. Watson is a Junior.

Little and Burnette give added flavor, for both are first-rate triple threats. Burnette excels in kicking and Little in passing.

Both are good broken field runners. Burnette stands out too as a place-kicker. Last fall he booted 16 goals after touchdown in 18 attempts.

On Watson sturdy shoulders falls the nine-too-pleasant task of blocking. Yet he does it admirably. Watson is strong defensively and is a tower of defensive strength at the right halfback post. He is also a fair ball carrier. Ditt is the bettering ram of the Tar Heel backfield. When Big Art pushes his 200-pound frame into the line, he usually picks up yardage. Ditt led the Tar Heel ground gainers last season with a five-yard average per try.

Stirnweiss is the key man of the No. 2 backfield. His lightning-like, hip-swinging tactics remind Tar Heel supporters of Johnny Branch, star quarterback on Carolina's 1929, 1930 and 1931 teams. Radman is an exceptional blocker and a fair passer. Cooner is a superb passer and a fine broken field runner. Kraynick, like Ditt, does most of the line plunging.

TAR HEELS WILL NEED NO INTRODUCTION NOW

Chapel Hill, Sept. 11.—Although Coaches Ray Wolf of Carolina and D. C. (Pe-head) Walker of Wake Forest will be meeting for the first time when the Tar Heels and Demon Deacons clash at Wake Forest October 16, there'll be no need of an introduction to Coach Walker's chief aide, who is none other than Ellis Fysal, star guard on Carolina teams in 1929, 1930 and 1931. After leaving Carolina, Coach Fysal went to Elon where he assisted Coach Walker in tutoring the Christians.

EIGHT UNC LETTER MEN MA START FIRST GAME

FIRST-SECOND MEETINGS FOR WOLF AND NEWTON

Chapel Hill, Sept. 11.—When Carolina and N. C. State football teams meet in Raleigh on October 2, there will be first and second meetings between Coach Ray Wolf of the Tar Heels and Coach Doc Newton of the Techs. They matched strategies first last season at Davidson. This year they will be opposing each other for the first time in a State-Carolina engagement.

Courage!

The magic quality in sports that rarely fails to win the hearts of sports enthusiasts.

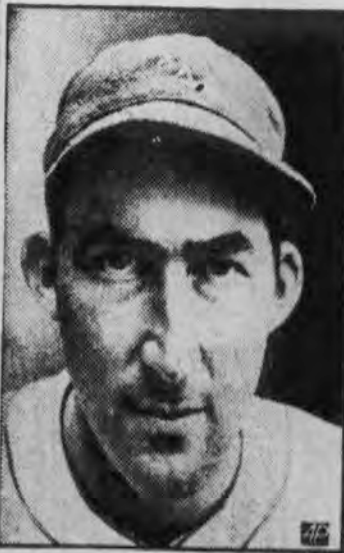

Tommy Farr won the hearts of 36,000 fight fans who watched his game stands against Champion Joe Louis as well as the countless thousands who read about the fight in the newspapers or heard it over the air.

Instead of proving a lamb led to slaughter at the dynamite-laden fists of the Brown Bomber, Farr stepped into the ring and battled Joe Louis without the slightest trace of fear. As he continued to stand up under the bruising blows of the champion round after round the crowd lined up behind him, the underdog, and cheered his efforts to resist the man who has been labeled the hardest puncher of all time. Cut and bleeding from cuts under both eyes and around his mouth, Farr continued to bore in. He had promised to give the fans a "good go" and that is exactly what he did. His reward was the plaudits of the crowd, and a promise that lucrative matches awaited him. His reward for courage.

Shortly before Farr and Louis swung into action a flock of champions were introduced in the ring. And who do you suppose received the greatest hand from the assembled fans? Jimmy Braddock! And why? All because of the courageous manner in which he battled it out with the Brown Bomber when he lost his title in Chicago. Braddock in defeat is far more popular than he was as champion.

Don Budge's courage served him well when Baron Von Cramm won the first two sets in the recent Davis Cup inter-zone finals. The Davis cup was practically riding on that match. Budge never weakened. He came back to take the next three sets and paved the way to victory in the challenge round.

War Admiral's game demonstration in the Belmont Stakes was a grand display of courage. The game little thoroughbred stumbled at the start and sheared off his right fore quarter. Leaving a trail of blood around the track, he raced to a four-length victory and a new track record for the mile and a half.

BULL PEN catching held no charms for Harry Danning, 26, of the Giants. So when he got his chance as a regular, he made good in a big way. His excellent handling of pitchers has been one of the big reasons for the New York team's fight for league membership.

German archaeologists of 60 years ago were responsible for restoring the scene of the ancient Olympics to some of its former glory.

Denmark's Olympic cycling team is handicapped by the fact that some of the outstanding Danish wheelmen have turned professional.

Movie of the Month: Coons Picks "Dead End"

ROBBIN COONS, Hollywood correspondent for the AP Feature Service and The Daily Reflector, as an expert on film-dom's affairs. From his studies of the August previews, he herewith presents the "Movie of the Month"—with reasons:

By ROBBIN COONS

(AP Feature Service Writer)

Hollywood.—Rare enough in any movie season is the film that abandons the boy-meets-girl formula for some social research. This year there have been three outstanding "significant" motion pictures: "They Won't Forget," "The Life of Emile Zola" and "Dead End."

"Dead End" is this department's "movie of the month." This is slightly embarrassing, since "Dead End" comes from Samuel Goldwyn, the producer who gave us "Stella Dallas," my last month's best. But that can't be helped. See "Dead End"—as you will if you are interested in pictures and their growth—and exonerate me.

Has A Flaw Or Two

This is not to say that "Dead End," a screen play by Lillian Hellman based on Sidney Kingsley's stage success, is a flawless picture.

As everyone knows by now, it treats of the case of the slum hoodlum and demonstrates, through slam-bang melodrama, what he is likely to become unless society takes steps.

The "message" is given punch by the great setting devised by art director Richard Day after Norman Bel Geddes' original stage set, by sundry sub-plots dramatic and melodramatic, and by William Wyler's direction.

Wyler, rapidly becoming an authority on translating stage hits for the screen—with "These Three," "Dodsworth" and now "Dead End" on his list—uses the camera to blend the component parts of his story into smoothly flowing screen narrative. He does this so effectively that the single setting, usually a handicap, becomes an asset.

One quarrel with the film is that the character played by Joel McCrea (in the stage play a crippled product of environment) is here stalwart and romantic. This concession to boy-meets-girl demands may help the box-office, but not the picture's power. Another annoyance, although admittedly minor, was the McCrea-Sylvia Sidney assumption of the duties of Greek chorus, chanting in dialogue the horrors and injustices about them.

But I can skip that, and hail a decidedly worthwhile production. The actual stars are the gang boys—Billy Halop, Huntz Hall, Bobby Jordan, Leo B. Gorcey, Gabriel Dell and Bernard Punsley. Bogart overacts, but effectively as the killer, and Allen Jenkins, as his aide is far above his usual comedy characterization. Wendy Barrie is good as the wealthy man's mistress in love with McCrea, and Claire Trevor, usually a romantic leading lady, steps down into her best performance in her one-role sequence as the prostitute.

Gregg Toland's photography is, as usual, first-rate.

Washington Daybook

By Preston Grover

Washington—Congress has adjourned, but not politics. Take Colorado for instance. Senator Adams, a Democrat, is up next year for re-election. In private life the senate is a banker at Pueblo, usually conservative. While he did not speak publicly against the President's court bill, he was commonly numbered among the opponents.

He has fought blanket appropriation bills, but because he is a major figure on the appropriations committee he has had to shoulder much of the work of drafting them and putting the mthrough congress.

Adams' political opponents in Colorado hoped Senator Edwin C. Johnson, a former governor, would break with him and help bring about his defeat. No break occurred. In one of his first statements to the press in Colorado upon his return from Washington, Johnson told the terling Advocate that "I am interested in the renomination and

1. "DEAD END" takes place on New York's East river front, where swank apartments rise beside dirty tenements. Joel McCrea, as Dave, and Sylvia Sydney, as Drina (couple at left), watch the apartment doorman at his perpetual battle of trying to make the neighborhood toughs keep their distance.

2. A BIG SHOT gangster, Baby Face Martin (Humphrey Bogart), comes back to parade his glory before his mother and childhood sweetheart. Face-lifting has made him unrecognizable by most of his former friends. While hanging around he starts teaching some of the kids fine-points of gangsterism.

3. MOST ADEPT PUPIL is Drina's brother, Tommy. But he gets caught by a policeman. His cronies console him with the reflection that he can learn new pointers in crime at reform school. In the meantime, Dave has recognized Baby Face, tipped off the cops and won the reward for his capture. As Drina's brother is led off, Dave and Drina are planning to use the reward to hire a lawyer for the boy.

re-election of the four Democratic congressmen of Colorado."

Adams has foes in Colorado. He was not always on good terms with Senator Costigan, a pronounced liberal, whose retirement because of failing health made possible Johnson's rise to the senate last election.

On another front, in Oklahoma, friends of Senator Josh Lee are pushing him as a Democratic vice-presidential candidate in 1940. Lee, for several years an elocution instructor, crated himself into the house and then into the senate. Recently he has been speaking in several parts of the country in support of the administration. He looks almost boyish, although during the World war he was overseas for 10 months. His family has been Democratic a long time. His father's name was Thomas Jefferson Lee and his middle name is Bryan.

And down in Texas, Roy Miller, who is sore of ex-officio Jim Farley in that state, is promoting Vice President Garner for President in 1940. Garner would be 70 then. The argument is that he would carry the south solid and that his type of conservatism would go well in the east and middle west.

The idea surprises some of Garner's close friends who believe he wants to retire from political life. South Carolina, in turn, finds Governor Olin D. Johnston contemplating a race against Senator Ellison D. (Cotton Ed) Smith in the primaries in August, 1938. Johnston calls himself "a 100 per cent follower" of President Roosevelt. Smith has been bitterly critical of much New Deal legislation and could see no need for a farm bill this year although the session ended in such a clamor for one that congress virtually pledged it at its next session. Governor Johnston tells those who ask about it that it is too early to announce.

Smith has been in the senate 28 years, is a chairman of the important agriculture committee, a post to which he was elected during the Hoover administration, when Republicans had a majority on the committee.

He and President Roosevelt do not see eye-to-eye on many subjects. Senator Byrnes of South Carolina, re-elected last year, also drifted slightly out of his once close contact with the President. But he is not "at outs" by a long stretch.

STEWARDESS CLAIMS AIR MILEAGE RECORD

San Francisco (AP)—The average airline stewardess quits after two years of service to be married, but Miss Ciara Johnson has flown on and on to roll up an aerial mileage of 1,075,000. She claims to have more miles to her credit than any other woman now active in aviation.

Ancient Bison is Found Intact

Fairbanks, Alaska—(AP)— Unlike fossil remains, which ordinarily consist of bones, a baby bison of the pleistocene age has been discovered near here by workers under the University of Alaska.

Much of the flesh structure of the ancient animal is intact. It was preserved in the frozen muck of a creek bed.

COOPER AGAIN ATTACKS CENTRALIZED GOVERNMENT

(Continued from page one) Year by year the capitol reaches out and plucks the juiciest fruits from the municipal and county revenue collector, but never for a moment does it relieve the struggling local government of its burden of responsibility. The smaller subdivisions are rapidly being reduced to the status of conquered provinces. It is a dictatorship, not of a single individual, but of a group, and in the final analysis this mass dictatorship is the more vicious of the two.

N. Y. Stock Market

New York, Sept. 11.—(AP) Whirlwind buying put rallying power behind the stock market today and recently slumping leaders bounced up one to three or more points at best. It was the fastest Saturday session since last March.

A slow period of selling put the brakes on full recovery, however. Transfers approximated 1,200,000 shares.

JAPAN SWEEP BY TYPHOON

It struck Shikoku Island early yesterday and swept on to Kobe, Osaka, and other points on the mainland of Japan. Shipping was disrupted.

Kagawa prefect of Shikoku was the hardest hit. In that area a thousand homes were inundated and 200 fishing boats were overturned.

Camera Record of Jap-Chinese War

A JAPANESE JUGGERNAUT OF WAR employed in the fierce fighting that raged in Shanghai is shown as it rolled through the streets with the smoke of battle overhead. Both sides have put to use the deadly caterpillar tanks armed with rapid fire guns to mow down all opponents who stand in their path. Highly developed since the World War, the vehicles can travel at high speed over most any kind of land.

EVEN IN WAR, A HUMAN TOUCH is seen as this Chinese boy plays his harmonica, unmoved by the stern-faced Japanese warrior beside him. Even as he plays there is death and destruction in the streets before him, but his youthful spirit is undampened.

POWDER RIVER! LET'S GO, or some such expression in Chinese is being shouted by these German-trained soldiers of Chiang Kai-Shek as they rush from a bomb-proof dugout in Shanghai to resist an attack by Japanese bluejackets in the conflict-ravaged city.

A BIG STICK in the form of a "potato masher" hand grenade is carried by this Chinese warrior, hurling it into Japanese lines.

DOGS OF WAR, eager to get into the thick of things are these highly trained German wolf-hounds used by the Japanese army in its excursion into North China. Dogs like these rendered invaluable aid in France during the World War.

THEY FOUND NO PEACE in their North China homes as bitter conflict raged with Japanese forces, so these refugees fled, using any kind of conveyance. The passenger wheelbarrow has been in use in China for hundreds of years. The woman passenger, it appears, had the foresight to bring along her bed. In the rear marches a villager carrying household utensils snatched up in the hasty departure.

CHINA'S WALL in modern times is not of stone, but barbed wire, as constructed by the Japanese. These Nipponese soldiers, stripped to the waist under a blazing North China sun, fence a cornfield. But it's wire for war and not to keep cattle from going astray in the fields.
