BUDGET STUDY PUT ASIDE FOR PEACE PARLEY

President Turns Briefly from Work on Finances

Hyde Park, N. Y., Oct. 30.—(AP)—President Roosevelt turned briefly today from work on the budget for a conference on peace.

He arranged to see a delegation from the People's Mandate for Peace Organization. Dr. Mary Woolley, former president of Mount Holyoke College, is head of the group which is touring the Americas to argue against war.

A balanced budget probably would send the owners of $2,000,000,000 in tax-free government securities searching for new fields of investment, fiscal authorities said meantime at Washington.

They said a substantial sum, perhaps $400,000,000 to $600,000,000, may be included in the 1938 budget for paying off existing debts.

This, plus operation of financial provision of the Social Security and railroad retirement acts, would liquidate about $2,000,000,000 of federal obligations now in the hands of the public.

Other capital developments: The Social Security Board said of $252,439,399.45 of public assistance grants to states from Feb. 1, 1936, to October 26, 1937, the aged received $218,780,088.74; the blind $7,538,416.89; and dependent children $26,120,833.82.

Chairman Copeland (D-N. Y.) of the Senate commerce committee, took preliminary steps toward an investigation of what he called "communistic influences" at work on American ships.

SYRIA FLOODS TAKE BIG TOLL

More Than 1,000 Persons Drowned Near Damascus

Damascus, Syria, Oct. 30.—(AP)—More than 1,000 persons were drowned in floods northwest of Damascus, authorities announced today.

Ten thousand persons were made homeless and several villages were destroyed.

Greatest losses were suffered in the region from Damascus to 35 miles northeast toward Aleppo, Palmyra and Baghdad.

Five hundred persons were listed missing in Mneir, on the Aleppo road. In another place 100 houses were destroyed and 70 bodies had been recovered there.

Relief workers picked up 100 bodies near Kalamon. A truck carrying 20 persons was engulfed and all were drowned.

French troops and police rushed medic supplies into the devastated region.

Double-Bladed Paddles on 'Main Canal'

Rain swollen rivers in West Virginia, western Pennsylvania and Maryland over-ran their banks after a series of cloudbursts, to do unestimated damage to the surrounding countryside. Here is a high water scene on the main street of Hancock, Md., one of the several communities affected by the rising Potomac River. Canoes and boats had to be used to help evacuation.

SEEKS SAFETY OF SANCTUARY

Reported Decision by Chinese Said to Have Been Result of Urgent Pleadings of Foreign Consuls General Trying to End Dangerous Situation

Shanghai, Oct. 30.—(AP)—British police reported tonight China's famous "Lost Battalion" in devastated Chapei was laying down its arms and soon would come into the International Settlement for sanctuary.

The reported decision of the battalion to abandon its stand against the surrounding Japanese was said to be the result of urgings of foreign consul generals who tried to end a situation considered dangerous to the international areas.

It was feared the settlement would be gravely endangered if the battalion continued to defy its enemies.

The battalion had held out in a warehouse-fortress near the settlement boundary since the general Chinese retreat from Chapei Wednesday.

Earlier tonight the Japanese, who surrounded the fortress on three sides had begun a steady methodical artillery bombardment of the beleaguered stronghold.

With four 75-millimeter guns mounted 100 yards away, Japanese artillery slowly fired shells in an attempt to batter a hole in the rear of the warehouse through which a hand to hand charge would be possible.

The Japanese shells were being fired directly toward the international settlement. But the closeness of the guns to their targets made it impossible that stray shots would hit the nearby foreign areas.

About 40 Americans and many other foreigners already had evacuated the Hungjao area.

BECOMES RICH; RESIGNS POST

Oil Struck on Land leased by Husband of Matron

With five hundred barrels of oil pouring out daily from an oil well just discovered on land in Arkansas leased by her husband, Mrs. W. G. McKean has resigned from her position as dormitory matron at the college, and is now at her home in Stamps, Arkansas.

According to a letter from Mrs. McKean to the College authorities the oil well is about one hundred feet deep and is furnishing oil of rather high quality.

"It is possible," Mrs. McKean said, "that other wells will be 'brought in' on the place."

Mr. and Mrs. McKean have a half interest in the lease of the 1000-acre Arkansas tract, on which oil was struck about October 10th.

It is understood that an offer of $400 an acre for the lease has been refused.

Mrs. McKean was called away early in October in connection with the discovery, and later sent in her resignation.

Halloween Party On Main Street Declared Huge Success

The Halloween party staged here last night was considered so successful that sponsors announced this morning a similar affair would be staged each year.

It was decided to hold the party on Friday night since Halloween fell on Sunday night and such a party would have interfered with business on Saturday night.

Buried Up To Neck In Sand For Hours

Nineteen-Year-Old Lowell, Mass., Lad Freed by Rescuers After Working Throughout Night

Chelmsford, Mass., Oct. 30.—(AP)—Rescuers early today freed Manuel Camacho, 19, of Lowell, from a sand bank in which he had been buried up to his neck for 12 hours.

Almost unconscious at the end he was taken to a hospital for treatment of crushed legs.

More than 100 policemen, foremen and volunteers from three communities worked through the night under flood lights to free the lad.

For most of the 12 hours he remained conscious, guiding his rescuers asking only for cigarettes. Frequent drinks of whiskey stimulated his resistance. Late last night the Rev. Walter Quinlaw, pastor of St. Mary's church, administered last rites of the Catholic church.

MOONEY FAILS BEFORE COURT

Preparedness Day Parade Bomber Again Loses Appeal

San Francisco, Oct. 30.—The California Supreme court today denied Thomas Mooney's plea for freedom on a writ of habeas corpus.

The decision was five to one against the convicted 1916 preparedness parade bomber, with Justice William Langdon dissenting.

In announcing the opinion, Chief Justice William Waste stated the court "has concluded that Mooney failed to establish, by substantial, credible evidence that his conviction was the result of perjury on the part of prosecution witnesses."

The chief justice said Mooney also failed to show "that the prosecuting officers caused or suffered (Continued on page eleven)

Plot Uncovered Overthrow French Protectorate

Casablanca, French Morocco, Oct. 30.—(AP)—French colonial troops and Moroccan courts joined forces today in an attempt to quell native nationalist uprisings for which officials blamed agents of a "foreign totalitarian power."

Firm military and judicial measures were taken to nip what officials declared was a plot to overthrow the French protectorate and set up an independent Arab kingdom.

Heavy troop patrols were established on the Algerian frontier to prevent Arab nationalist agitators from fleeing Morocco. The frontier was practically closed to all except foreigners.

Killer Eliminated From Wanted List

Frank Bird, Convicted Slayer and Bank Robber, Taken in Custody by Sheriff in Cleveland

Cleveland, Ohio, Oct. 30.—(AP)—Federal agents scratched Frank Bird, convicted slayer and bank robber from their list of "wanted" men today and turned to hunt his younger brother, Charles, only member of the Bird brothers gang, who escaped from the Cuyahoga county jail over a month ago, still at large.

Frank Bird and his wife, Sylvia, also a fugitive, were trapped in a bulletless capture late last night as they drove up to the home of Mrs. Bird's mother, Mrs. Anna Seiber, in suburban Mayfield Heights and walked into the house.

Sheriff Martin O'Donnel said he had been informed by his men the capture had been made by deputies and federal men arrived after the capture.

SET UP BIGGER TOWER HOUSES

Better Facilities For Detecting Fires Provided

Reflector Bureau.

Raleigh, Oct. 30.—Bigger and better tower houses are being provided for the forest wardens who man the forest fire observation towers over the state. Forester W. C. McCormick, in charge of forest fire control for the forestry division of the Department of Conservation and Development, said today.

At the present time there are 76 forest fire observation towers in the state but only 53 tower houses for the tower keepers and their families—and many of these are only one or two room cabins or shacks. Present plans, however, call for the building of a keeper's house at every forest fire observation tower and for the enlargement of many of the smaller houses. McCormick said.

During the past summer seven five-room tower houses have been built, four four-room houses and two more five-room houses will be built this fall, McCormick said. All of those houses are being built with Federal funds provided by the Civilian Conservation Corps and with CCC labor. Quite a number of small houses have also been enlarged, while wells, garages and tool houses have been provided where none existed before.

The forestry division has already asked the CCC to build 11 more three and five-room tower houses with garages, tool houses, wells, garden space and out-buildings for cows and chickens. McCormick said. It is also asking the CCC to enlarge 15 present two-room tower houses to four and five rooms, and to provide garages and tool houses for the fire-fighting trucks and tools.

"Our objective and that of the CCC is to have a tower house at every forest fire observation tower that needs to be manned the year around, large enough for a forest warden and his family with enough land in each plot for the warden to keep a cow, chickens and have a garden," McCormick said. "We have learned that in many of the fire areas it is decidedly worth while to keep the rangers on duty at the towers the year around instead of just during the fire seasons."

Standard Oil Co. Credits Employees

Approximately $4,000,000 is to be apportioned shortly among employees of the Standard Oil Co., of New Jersey and its affiliates, with each employee receiving a minimum of $50, according to an announcement made today by C. M. Byers, manager of the North Carolina division. This allotment will be made through contributions by the company to the account of each employee participating in the annuity and thrift plan, with approximately 32,000 benefitting. An additional 4,000 employees not participating in the plan, but with one or more years of service, also will be credited with $50 each in a supplemental thrift account established for them.

After the contribution of $50 to each employee, there will be approximately $2,750,000 remaining in the special appropriation which will be prorated to employees in the thrift plan on the basis of credits they have accumulated in the past year. This will amount to approximately 22 percent of their own and the company's regular contributions between November 1, 1936, and November 1 of this year.

This is the second time that the company has declared an apportionment to employees, the first being made a year ago with a minimum allotment of one week's salary. This amounted to an average minimum allotment of $27, as compared with the flat minimum of $50 this year. The total 1936 contribution was $2,500,000.

Under the operation of the employees' thrift plan no promise is made of any contributions by the employing companies beyond a

Hollywood Sights

Hollywood.—Hollywood isn't the place for an actor who's practically grown up in the movies. He may have done the best of jobs in every picture he's had, and he may be a good boy, but around the lots he's stamped. He's "just a kid."

That's why it looks as if Frank Albertson will be heading for New York, to be gone a couple of years at least.

Frank is 28. He's been in pictures nearly ten years. He learned about acting the hard way—by acting. He wasn't very good at first, didn't have to be. That was during an era of "youth pictures," but he learned, and the boy is good now.

Frank's isn't a hard-luck story. He can get jobs any day in the week, and he can get contracts. But in Hollywood he figures he'd always be just someone who's been around a long time, playing "brother roles."

He's Still Frankie

"A lot of people still call me Frankie," he explains. "Not that I care—but that's what I mean. I'd sign a contract, and maybe I'd get good parts and maybe I wouldn't. After a year or two I'd have collected salary but what would I have besides? If I didn't get good parts parts, I'd beef about the studio, the way all of us do. If I leave now, I know I can make a living, at least, and I'll have a chance of doing more—at least trying to amount to something on the stage."

Frank's from Fergus Falls, Minn., but he's been around Hollywood since he was in short pants. He worked around the studio before he ever faced a camera, and you can gather that the "romance" in picture-making has worn pretty thin for him by now.

Last season he clicked on Broad-guarantee of dollar for dollar of the first 3 per cent of the workers' salary assigned to the fund and 50 cents more for each dollar above the 3 per cent minimum required for membership. The worker can authorize his company to withhold not less than 3 per cent nor more than -3 per cent out of his pay envelope to go into the fund. When the plan was inaugurated on January 1, 1936, the management said that it hoped when earning justified it, an extra sum would be authorized to help build up employee credits more rapidly than if they were left entirely to the regular employee and company contributions. In the first two years of the plan, conditions have justified special additions amounting to nearly $7,000,000.

way in his first stage play, "Brother Rat." (There's irony in that—even on the stage the "brother" angle followed him.) The comedy was bought for pictures, and Frank was considered for his original role, but the studio wasn't sure he was "the type." Wayne Morris is getting the part, which is all right with Frank, too.

"I haven't the name, and I know it," he says.

He thinks on the stage he'll have a better chance of making that "name." And here's a prediction: he'll do it—and it won't be "Frankie" either.

Add Hollywood wonders: Katherine Snell, pretty show girl with a deep bass voice. It—the voice—won her a speaking part in "Nothing Sacred."

For comedy, that was — and Kate's willing. He voice changed about three years ago, after an illness, just when she was starting in films. She thought she was sunk, or at least relegated to non-speaking parts. She was sensitive about it, which made it worse. But now she's beginning to like the idea.

"After all," she says, "I didn't get to speak a line until after my voice changed, and it's probably a blessing in disguise."

Don't know about Kate, but it was that for Frances Langford, whose voice changed after illness—not to bass, but to its present blues-swing tones.

Chief of Police George Clark who was an interested spectator, declared that everything went off in an orderly manner. The chief himself even engaged in the festivities. With a toy in the shape of a cack-like a lot of other things, streets along with the others, but like streets a lot of other things, the toy hen kept a lot of noise, but failed to produce any eggs.

Already enthused sponsors are considering a larger and better party next year, when two blocks of the main street probably will be reserved for the festivities.

Agriculture Class

The agricultural teacher of the Ayden Colored high school is seeking to get his work established this being the first year that agriculture has been taught in the school.

The boys are interested in the work and the parents are giving their support readily. The people of Ayden in general are anxious to see the work go on and the agricultural teacher and the boys of his department wish to thank the merchants and all the people of Ayden for their contributions which made it possible to offer prizes for the best products that was put on at the community fair which was given on October 15.

The fair was a success and every one was inspired who saw the products on exhibit.

In outlining his program to the parents of the community, Prof. Roland has been successful in starting four boys out of their long time supervised practice program. Willie L. Jones has corn-hog project, Bennie Gray has a corn-hog project. Both of the boys live at Winterville. Walter Lailh has a corn-hog project and Kermi Dixon a tobacco project. These boys are interested in the work and have the support of their parents.

The boys of the department got their first experience in vaccinating hogs October 20th. They were able to see the treatment given and give the double treatment themselves. Negro County Agent Dupree made the demonstration possible.

Plans are being made for the Evening School of Ayden and vicinity, which will open in the near future. All farmers are urged to arrange their work so that they may be able to attend the meetings.

Prof. Roland urges all parents to attend the Parent-Teacher Association meetings.

TROOPS QUELL MOROCCO RIOT

(Continued from page one) Soldiers mounted strong guard around the strife centers, especially in an area where the native quarter was described as "rampant with nationalism." French military planes helped patrol the troubled zone.

Troops and police combined made nearly 1,000 arrests yesterday and were busy last evening in breaking up demonstrations, which in many cases developed into bitter street fights.

Here native judges sentenced 30 persons to prison for participation in riots Wednesday at Port Lyautey in which four persons were killed and nine wounded.

A GOOD PARTY

There is no question about the children who attended the Hallowe'en party downtown last night enjoying themselves and likewise those grown-ups who stood on the sidelines apparently enjoyed the affair. The success of last night's party is evidence that the children are glad of the opportunity of having a place to play and suggests that it would be a good plan for our city to arrange such parties not only on Hallowe'en but at various intervals during the year.

Despite the fact that a large majority of the children attended the downtown party and stayed out of mischief, however, there were still some reports today of property damage in various parts of the city. Everyone wants the children to enjoy themselves but parents should impress upon their children the importance of proper observance of these holiday occasions without encroachment upon the rights of others. The fact that Hallowe'en is really not until tomorrow night it is possible that some of the children will continue their celebrations even tonight and tomorrow night despite the fact that the city provided a party for them last night. If this is the case it would be well for those who do celebrate tonight and tomorrow night to do so in an orderly manner for the city authorities are determined not to put up with any serious misbehavior.

Raleigh, Oct. 30.—A full two-weeks after the State Fair no figures on the financial result are obtainable from the Department of Agriculture, where it is said that an audit is still in progress. No statement will be given out until the department is prepared to give exact figures, it was stated.

Some folks are wondering just how powerful effect Josiah William Bailey had on the State Grange convention in Winston-Salem.

Prior to the Senator's appearance and address all the "dope" was that the Grange would adopt ringing resolutions calling for compulsory crop control.

Then came Mr. Bailey with a speech attacking control. There followed a beautiful "straddle" by the Grange, with compulsory control prominently absent from the things advocated.

"There are more human interest stories within 100 miles of Dare county than in any similar-sized area in the United States—no, the whole world," said D. B. Fearing, executive director of the Roanoke Island Memorial Association of Manteo.

One thing that can be said about Dare county folks is that they are thoroughly and sincerely convinced that they live in the greatest place on earth. It's something which enable them the more easily to convince others.

Recent activities and incidents indicate an early blast from the United Dry Forces with reference to the liquor question.

Publication of the first report on volume of liquor sales in ABC counties, candidacy of two "wets" for the United States Senate, and denunciation of liquor and its legal sale by at least two church conferences make an offensive by the Drys appear quite imminent.

"Sandy Graham is missing a golden opportunity if he doesn't run for the Senate," said an unusually well-informed student of political affairs in North Carolina who doesn't want his name used. "Sandy could win rather easily against the two candidates now in the field," he continued.

September activities of the State Employment Service showed that 3,417 more placements were made than applications received. Placements reached a total of 9,793, with private industry accounting for 6,783 of this number.

Washington Daybook

By Preston Grover

Washington—It should not be surprising if Secretary Ickes feels that he is about to be deprived of some of his laurels of wiping out city slums.

He is in somewhat the same position as England and France were when they fought Germany to a near deadlock for three years and then saw the United States come in to "win the war."

For four years Ickes and his housing administration have hacked away at slum areas, eliminating some and, he believes, plowing the ground for faster and better work later on. Now, when the time and money arrive for effective work, a new administrator, Nathan Straus of New York, is appointed to direct a separate administration to which will be transferred all the experienced personnel of the Ickes organization.

A Bit of History

In 1933, NRA was set up, calling for public works and slum clearing, among other things. (Mr. Ickes might be reminded, now he is losing the housing job, that in 1933 he adroitly snatched PWA, including housing, from General Hugh Johnson, who wanted to handle it along with NRA.)

Housing efforts under PWA fall roughly into four campaigns.

Ickes first tried to get communities to accept loans and grants for low-cost housing in the same manner as they accepted them for sewers and schools. But real estate boards kicked. Besides, the cities lacked legal authority for such operations. Months of delay ensued.

The administration next tried to get private operators to take over the work by forming "limited dividend" corporations to borrow the necessary money from PWA. The response was overwhelming. Six hundred offers came in. Ickes suspected most were unsound, while others appeared to be bald attempts to unload real estate. Time-consuming investigation reduced the number to seven, including one in New York headed by Mr. Straus. Dividends were limited to 6 per cent, rent to $12 a room. This was not a broad-scale success.

Try, Try Again

Then, after two false starts, Ickes directed the housing administration itself to build and operate projects. In 52 projects in 35 cities were undertaken. Altogether, 24,000 dwellings were started. Ickes proudly reports that a survey of the projects in several cities disclosed an average cost of $3,344 per 3½-room dwelling. By way of comparison, it might be mentioned that in Greenbelt, Washington, the resettlement administration computes the average cost per dwelling at $5,423, and that is after approximately half of the cost has been charged off to relief and other items.

Fourth, still insisting that the job should be done by local communities, Ickes set out to get state and federal legislation to permit it. He sent model bills to 48 state legislatures to legalize local "authorities" which could build and operate housing projects. Thirty states have enacted legislation the terms acceptable.

Then last session, congress enacted the Wagner bill, providing for grants and loans to housing authorities. The authority was authorized to put $26,000,000 into the job to date, had spent only $10,000,000 in four years.

100-ROOM FARMHOUSE GREW FROM LOVE NEST

FRANK GIBLER, former Texas rancher, is standing in front of his 100-room mansion, more than 400 years ago the love-nest of Cortez' Aztec mistress, La Malinche.

By The AP Feature Service
 Mexico City—A former Texas rancher, Frank Gibler, lives in perhaps the largest farmhouse in the Americas, a Mexican hacienda built four centuries ago by Hernan Cortes, the conquering Spaniard for his Aztec Indian mistress, La Malinche.
 The old square, two-story Santa Monica building has 100 rooms, 24 of which Gibler, his Mexican wife and nine of their ten children live. Some rooms have been added since the Conquistador's day, but none since 1756, when it was bought by the mayor of Mexico City from the Franciscan friars into whose hands it had passed.
 Malinche's tiled bath remains on the first floor. The tiles were imported from Spain. They still are held fast, after more than 400 years, by a mortar of sifted sand, chickens' blood and egg whites.

How's Your Health?
 Edited for the New York Academy of Medicine
 —By Iago Goldston, M.D.—

DO YOU HATE MILK?
 Far too few adults drink enough milk. Some fail to because they consider milk to be babies or invalids' food. Others have an aversion for milk, believing that it gives them indigestion, constipation, diarrhea or headache.
 The first group should overcome their prejudice. Milk is as valuable a food for adults as for infants. It is the very best source of calcium, and the American diet is notoriously deficient in calcium. It is a good source of vitamin A and milk proteins are also valuable.

Milk drinking people are famous for their good physiques. Historically the herdsmen were always superior in strength and aggressiveness to the agriculturists. They won fame as the conquerors. The ancient Greeks, the Russian Cossacks, believed that the drinking of "cultured" milk aided longevity. He founded his conviction on the hardness of certain Saxon groups who subsisted largely on milk and milk foods. Experience had not validated Metchnikoff's theories on auto-intoxication. No, the cultured milk, but milk proper, appears to be the valuable element.

Those who simply hate milk should fathom the reason for their dislike of this valuable food. Some few will be justified, in that they are allergic to milk. Such individuals may indeed suffer every time they consume milk, no matter in what form or way they take it.
 A larger number of individuals, however, suffer from a psychic (not organic) aversion for milk. These people often relish ice cream or milk shakes, or scrups and stews made with milk. Of course, there is no exceptional virtue in taking milk as milk, rather than as a milk shake or ice cream. It is only slightly more convenient to take it straight—and especially is this likely to be the case when one is obliged to watch one's calories.
 Those who find milk constipating should try boiled milk. Or they may dilute their milk with carbonated water. This combination makes a more palatable drink.
 Finally, those who cannot or will not drink milk in any form can have the best parts of this food in the forms of mild cheese, cream and butter.

PREFER STATE OPERATE PARK

Lost Colony Sponsors Want Island As State Park

Reflector Bureau.
 Raleigh, Oct. 30.—Sponsors of the "Lost Colony" pageant at Manteo want Roanoke Island, with its restoration of the original Raleigh colony, as a state park and are opposed to turning the site over to the National Park Service.
 This was made abundantly clear Friday afternoon when a large group of sponsors conferred here with Governor Clyde R. Hoey, Director R. Bruce Etheridge of the Department of Conservation and Development, Dr. C. C. Crittenden of the North Carolina Historical Commission, and a number of officials of the University of North Carolina.

Headed by D. B. Fearing, executive director of the Roanoke Island Memorial Association of Manteo, these sponsors pointed to the success of this past summer's celebration and urged that the state take over the site as a North Carolina park in order that the "Lost Colony" show can be put on every summer.

It was stressed that the state would not be required to expend a penny on the park, as sufficient revenue would be received from the pageant and from other sources to make the plan self-supporting.
 Mr. Fearing declared that the state has never received better or more dignified advertising, not only in the United States but throughout the world, than it received by virtue of the Lost Colony celebration. The success can be repeated annually and the event turned into one which will surpass even the famed Passion Play of Oberammergau, he predicted.

In the Roanoke Group were Mr. Fearing, C. S. Meekins, treasurer of the association; A. B. Andrews, president of the old Roanoke Island Memorial Association; W. D. Pruden, of Edenton; Ben Dixon McNeill, and Frank Steck.

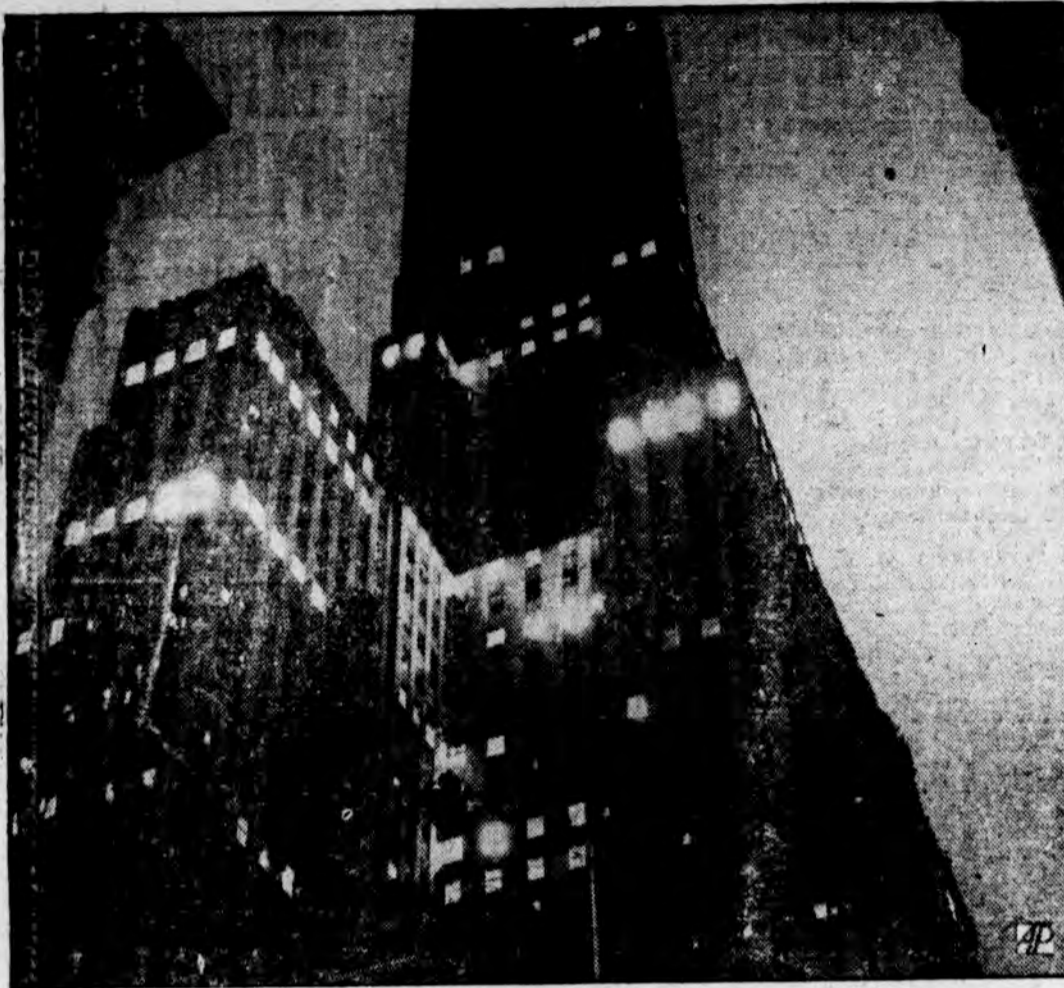

R. C. Deal Speaker At Assembly Hour

Speaking at assembly at the College Friday, R. C. Deal outlined the life of Alfred Dreyfus, which he called "the greatest tragedy of modern times."
 Dreyfus, a French army officer, convicted of treason in France in 1894 and sentenced to life imprisonment on Devils Island, was released after serving for twenty years, because new evidence brought to light showed his innocence.
 Having been put back in his old regiment and assigned to the task of finding a spy then endangering France, Dreyfus discovered that Mata Hari, the beautiful Javanese dancer, was a German spy in France and had been sending important information back to Germany during the World war.
 She was proved guilty and sentenced to death. When the priest came to talk to her before she was executed, she horrified him by doing a beautiful, exotic Javanese dance.

Camera Coverage Of The World

SHADES OF THE LATE DEPRESSION stalked the offices of Wall Street as brokers burned the midnight oil to keep abreast of a whirlwind of activity unequalled since 1933. Confusion reigned on the stock market floor as millions of shares traded hands. Here is a view of the Bank of Manhattan building in New York's financial sector where clerks labored far into the night.

Old favorite toys will face tough competition in shiny new gadgets of all descriptions. Alec Wainwright is the traffic officer. Charlie Cross is at the wheel and Ellie Marchenbeck looks out from the trailer. In these toys streamlining comes to its logical conclusion.

The Characters

NINA impulsively married David, trying to escape her intense love for her stepfather.

RICHARD, the charming, well-tailored stepfather, has a passion regard for Nina.

HONEY, Nina's gay, plump, youthful mother, is wild about Richard, her newly acquired husband.

DAVID, a bright young auto salesman, adores Nina and strives to make her happy on his small salary.

.. tiny box of a place? . . .

"Why, Honey dear, I told you David's only beginning . . . he's just 24. He only makes $50 and occasionally $60 a week!"

Honey knew all that.

"But surely you knew I'd continue your allowance. We agreed that two hundred a month was enough when you were living at home with all your expenses . . . but I told you, that when you got married I'd increase it, if necessary. Your daddy would have wanted me to, Nina . . . Nina, darling, how do you think your mother feels, seeing her only child living in a pitiful little place like this . . . doing her own housework? . . . And when it needn't be, at all!"

Nina tried to laugh her out of her concern.

"Well, darling, my mother can feel perfectly happy, because her daughter is. And this isn't a pitiful little place—it's adorable. I'm having a marvelous time."

But Honey's worried frown would not go away.

"I see. So your good-looking David is one of those selfish, upright young men who will make his wife suffer and go without rather than accept a little financial help from her! I've heard of people like that . . ."

"Now . . . Honey! Don't be naughty. I think it's the finest attitude a man can take, and I'm proud of him for it. I'll go on with my allowance, if I may, get my clothes with some of it, and save the rest."

Honey looked as though she were going to cry.

"Don't call me 'naughty,' darling . . . All I want in the world is for my baby to be happy, you know that. But it does seem like such a silly, old-fashioned stand for a young man to take. . . . Why, Richard is the most perfect husband a woman could ever hope to have, and yet he's perfectly simple and broadminded about letting me go on sharing the expenses . . ."

Nina had wondered about that.

Admiration For David

And now, the Days were having another party given for them, by Carl and Hester Simple, this time—a house party at Harmony. The Semples, the Days, the Chalonsers, Cordella Thorpe and a man named Tony Leeds. Oh, and Button, of course, staying in rather sulky solitude in one of the row of kennels that had been empty since Hester's reign.

It was Saturday afternoon, and with the exception of Honey and Hester, they had all been hunting . . . even David.

David's hunting had been hysterical, something to write a book about. His previous experience with horse flesh had been confined to a few rides in the Park ("on flush Sundays") from a West Side riding academy. But today, clad in a pair of Carl's breeches, a turtle-neck sweater and tweed coat, he had bounced and flapped his way over the countryside, until he was actually in at the death . . . without a flaw to mar his record.

Nina thought she would never forget the picture he made: face set and eagled, copper hair standing up in the wind—the lost hat at the first fence—clucking to his mount, and urging it forward with terms that applied more to automobile row, than the hunting field.

"Step on the gas there, baby!"

"Whoa—use your brakes, kid . . . Whoop-la! Over we go! How's the old chassis holding out?"

But he got results, just the same. Lilith—who had rescued him from the kicking horses in the autumn—and young Tommy—whatever his name was, and the Mister . . . and, of course, the whole harmony party, watched him, fearful and marvelling.

Of the lot, it was Richard, Nina noticed, whose intense dislike of the younger man would not permit of admiration. Richard riding a fat gallop—biting his nose with a difficult jump . . . well, he was something to watch. And, somehow, beside David's ridiculous exhibition of determination and courage . . . it had paid a little. David was the man of the hour. He was praised as a kid about it.

Standing now, as usual, with his back to the roaring fire, Carl Semple was going over the day's run, for the benefit of two ladies who had not been present . . . Though Honey, as usual, was sitting by Richard, holding his hand, watching him . . . quite oblivious of anyone else, or what they were saying.

"We had a field of 65, and hounds were cast about two miles north of the kennels, where they found immediately. After a 45 minute run, crossing Little Creek river and the Sutton coverts, fox went to earth. But the hounds found again, and ran a good hour down Wistaria road and on to the Miles covert, where they checked in a bit of plough . . ."

Nina saw Lilith and young Tommy coming through the square hall toward the library; and she noticed that Hester saw them too . . . and hastily straightened the tea things pulled the bell cord for Clayton, glanced about the room, and smoothed her hair with her white, white hand. It seemed to Nina that she even set her face in a gracious expression of welcome . . . for these people whom she had known for years! These two, who were in and out of the house every day!

What was it about Hester? What made her so queer, and punctilious . . . so remote? It gave Nina the creeps.

Nina overheard a startling comment on Richard, Monday.

ca is right on the ship lanes between France and her north African possessions and in unfriendly hands might seriously menace French colonial trade.

The same reasoning could explain the excitement in France, Britain's friend, when French newspapers reported Germany, Italy's friend, had occupied Alboran Island, close to Britain's empire lifeline, for a submarine base.

EUROPE WATCHES SPAIN'S ISLANDS

(By the AP Feature Service)

If actions speak louder than words, Britain and France are even more interested in keeping foreign hands off Spain's islands than off Spain itself.

The slow machinery of diplomacy seems to be fast enough for them in their effort to get Italian soldiers off the Spanish mainland. But when Italian-backed Insurgents threatened to occupy tiny Minorca Island, Britain and France answered with warships.

Majorca, Minorca's big brother, fell to the Insurgents in the first month of the Spanish civil war. Minorca, second in size of the Balearic islands, has remained in Loyalist hands—partly because 10 British and French fighting ships have been patrolling Minorca's coastline.

Why?

The answer might be that Minor-

ca is right on the ship lanes between France and her north African possessions and in unfriendly hands might seriously menace French colonial trade.

The same reasoning could explain the excitement in France, Britain's friend, when French newspapers reported Germany, Italy's friend, had occupied Alboran Island, close to Britain's empire lifeline, for a submarine base.

Greenville High School's "Flying Phantoms" defeated the "Red Devils" of Farmville to the tune of 7 to 0 yesterday at Farmville. This victory gave Coach Herman Dally's boys a record of four wins, one tie and one loss so far this season.

The game was played before a large Homecoming Day crowd, which had turned out with hopes of seeing the Greens defeated. Preceding the game the Farmville students held a large pep meeting and parade.

Greenville's score came early in the first quarter. After a march down the field from the forty yard line to the five yard line, William Harris plunged the line for the touchdown. Baxter Clark followed him on an off-tackle play for the extra point. For the remainder of the game the two teams battled on about even terms, with neither one being able to make much progress against the other.

Outstanding on the Farmville team was Brock, a guard, and Teel, center. For Greenville, Jack Moye and Wayland Tucker, guards, and Baxter Clark, halfback, looked best. Neither team looked very impressive, Greenville especially being far below their usual brand of ball.

NEGRO ELEVEN EASY VICTORS

Industrial High Defeats Green County Team, 26-0

Following a varied attack of run, pass, single and double reverses to ward and lateral passes, Industrial High (Negro) added another victory to the

The local team made a touchdown in every period of the game. The visitors made several threats to score in the first and last periods. On a long end run early in the first period, the ball was carried across the goal, but being tackled hard by G. Maye, he dropped the ball, and the play was covered by Smith for the local for a touchdown.

Local was completed seven out of nine passes, while the visitors completed four out of nine. The locals made fourteen first downs, while the visitors made five.

A touchdown for the local was made by a 15-yard pass to G. Maye. Foreman kicked the extra point. The second score was a result of a double reverse with Maye, Foreman and Edwards carrying the ball. The third score came early in the second period when Foreman's kick for the extra point was blocked by Edwards, the ball being held on the one-yard line for three downs. Foreman kicked the extra point. The final score came in the last five minutes of the game by a twenty-yard pass from Foreman to G. Maye, who carried the ball the remaining 10-yards for a touchdown. Foreman's kick for an extra point failed.

skipping the first. Then we'd know what it's all about.

Certainly I didn't know the first time I sang before an audience. I was no operatic prima donna upon that stage, but a movie actress greeting theatre-goers "in person". It seems to me so silly to mumble inanities about "I hope-you-like-my-picture," that I determined to give the paying guests more than a mumble for their money. So I told the "Professor" to sound his A. And I sang a song.

Actually that little number was the tidal turning that carried me from the screen to grand opera. A generous audience gave the girl an encouraging hand. I began to pay attention to my voice, and plunged into a strenuous course of musical study which still continues.

Anyway that "personal appearance" caused me to step from before the movie cameras to behind operatic footlights. I believe the accomplishment is unique in theatrical history, although now, going into reverse and turning from opera to screen, I join Grace Moore, Lily Pons, Gladys Swarthout and the others who seem to agree that the future brilliance and beauty of opera will be reflected to the mightiest multitudes through the movie medium.

Thus far screen song has been confined mostly to operettas. But now the time is at hand when full-fledged grand opera will be presented pictorially.

And why not? Opera, both in Colgate started work for the current football season in high hopes. "Our personnel isn't going to be much different from that of last fall," Coach Andy Kerr explained at the initial work out. "If our veterans improve as they should, this can be a very good football team. If they don't improve, we may not do much better than we did in 1936, when we lost three games.

Apparently the veterans did not improve. The erstwhile Red Raiders of the Chenango already have lost three major contests—to Cornell, Tulane and Duke.

Those close to football at Hamilton insist that the main fault with the team is "senior trouble." Too many veterans, figuring their places on the team were secure, were inclined to show less than the right amount of spirit.

That is possible. Most coaches agree that the ideal football player is a junior in college. He knows football has has the spirit. A sophomore generally is short of experience. A senior is likely to look for an easy way to carry out assignments.

The situation at Colgate is unique. When the season got under way, only two players were lost from the eleven that started against Syracuse in 1936—Relyea, song and story, has been popular for centuries. Romance, drama, tragedy and comedy have always held the popular imagination. Operatic legend lends itself exquisitely to the medium of motion pictures.

I hope to be a part of this. I want to bring song and color to the screen. For certainly both are a part of life's beauty worthy to be mirrored in the movies. As we were saying, George, there must be a first time for everything. But so sure am I of the public affection for, and appreciation of, the immortal melodies that I'll be proud to be among the first to face the film-goers as a movie "Manon", "Mimi" or "Marguerite". That's my song. And if it sounds like "me-me-me" remember that's a singer's way of tuning up. Even in type.

the tackle and Marshall, left halfback. Since that time most of the others have been replaced by less experienced players. Captain Marcel (Red) Chesbro, tackle, is one exception.

Chesbro is ranked with the greatest Colgate tackles of all time. A regular for three seasons, he never has quit fighting. Last year he was rated right up behind W. J. W. of Minnesota in the national poll. He has exceptional speed, and can run as fast as any of the back. A fine tackler, he runs interference well.

CREST OF THE GREEN WAVE is Dartmouth's football captain, 200-pound Merrill N. Davis, Jr., hard charging 23-year-old end. He's a senior among many sophomores on a squad which showed in early games it possessed power to balance limited experience. Davis is president of the senior class, heavyweight boxing champ, and fire squad leader.

GREGG CHERRY URGED TO RUN

Supporters Believe He Could Win U. S. Senate Seat

Reflector Bureau.

By HENRY AVERILL

Raleigh, Oct. 30.—Admitting their favorite has given them scant aid and comfort and that he has held out no assurance that he will enter the race, boosters of State Chairman and House Speaker R. Gregg Cherry, of Gaston, for the United States Senate, can give all and sundry at least half a dozen logical enough reasons why he could beat both incumbent Bob Reynolds and would-be Senator Frank Hancock.

First off, it is pointed out that Reynolds and Hancock "overlap" in their economic views and political records. The groups which might normally be expected to support the one have just as much reason to support the other.

For example, ardent anti-prohibitionists would unquestionably back Reynolds against an avowed dry, but they would have the same inclination toward Hancock.

Again, violent New Dealers would rally to Reynolds against an Old Guardsman, but the Hancock record is just as persuasive in the same direction.

On the other hand the Cherry candidacy would give several groups an opportunity to concentrate in his support. The dries, for instance, would quite logically back him against either Reynolds or Hancock, or both. The so-called "Economic Tories" are thought to regard the Iron Major as a stalwart of the old school. They would undoubtedly prefer him to either Bob or Frank.

The veterans, particularly American Legion members, would have a strong inclination toward Cherry as a "buddy" and, in addition, the regular veteran type, hard-bodied and a he-man if ever there was one.

Meanwhile Speaker Cherry is giving a fine imitation of Uncle Remus Tar Baby and "ain't say nothing."

Only Two Defendants In City Police Court

ARTIST EXPLAINS PAINTING WITH PUZZLING POEM

Pittsburgh (AP)—The world will know what happened to Narcissus—if it can figure out the poem artist Salvador Dali has written to explain his painting "Metamorphosis of Narcissus" in the 1937 Carnegie International Art exhibit.

But it won't be easy, because this is the way the poem goes:

"Narcissus loses his being in the cosmic vertigo
"In the deepest depths of which is singing
"The cold and dyonisiac siren of his own image."

Dali, a No. 1 surrealist, has painted a plaster-like figure of Narcissus and a big hand holding an egg.

The guide book to the exhibit says the way to appreciate the painting is to stare at the figure of Narcissus until it isn't a figure any more but only a hand holding an egg.

There you have it: that's just what happened to Narcissus. He stared at himself until he turned into a hand holding an egg.

Then the egg hatched. From there on you are on your own.

STATE IN NEED OF HOSPITALS

Additional Facilities Needed for Feeble-Minded

Raleigh, Oct. 30.—(AP)—Need for additional facilities to care for the feeble-minded and insane may result in consideration by the next General Assembly of recommendations for a second training school and another state hospital.

Dr. Wallace Nygard, institution and corrections director of the Charities and Public Welfare Board made that prediction today in an institution report.

He said the governor's commission for the study of the care of the insane and mental defective had estimated there were 1,700 feeble-minded white children and 700 feeble-minded Negro children who "need long-time state institutional care and treatment."

"The governor's commission report," Nygard said, "points out that all but seven states in the Union have provided more state hospital provisions per population than North Carolina."

The commission's recommendation of additional facilities may be considered, he added, "to alleviate these conditions."

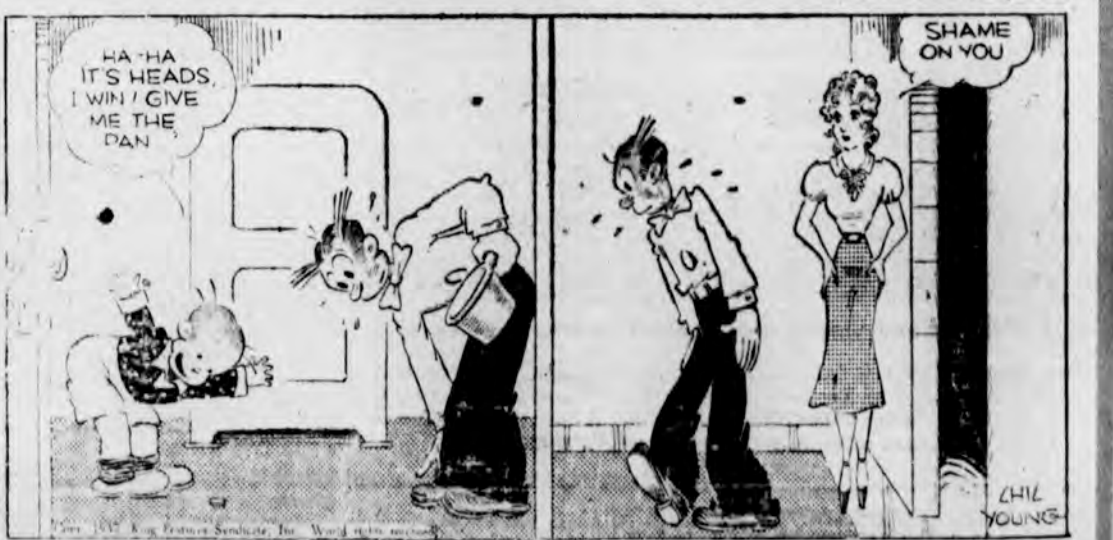

"It is thought that there is a possibility of serving both whites and Negroes at each of these recommended institutions by having two distinctly separate divisions under the same management," he said. Nygard's report said 44 county jails were confining 115 insane persons on September 30. Of that number 16 were under 25 years of age.

to be introduced at his trial any testimony which they knew, or had any reason to believe, was false, or that they were guilty of suppressing or preventing the introduction of any evidence which, had it been given, would have been favorable to the defense at his trial.

Mooney, serving a life sentence in prison, has steadfastly asserted his innocence, contending that he was convicted on perjured testimony.

IT'S 'TOPS' IN WARFARE, for this newest thing in fighting craft is reported capable of doing battle far above the clouds at an altitude of 30,000 feet. It is shown being wheeled from its factory at Buffalo, N. Y., before delivery to Wright Field, Dayton, Ohio. With pusher propellers mounted behind the wings, the ship's gunners are left a clear field of vision. Its name is the Airacuda.
