CHINESE GOVERNMENT IS MOVED FROM NANKING

SENATE AGREES TO ACT NOW ON LYNCHING BILL

Administration Program Sidetracked For Measure

IMMEDIATE SIGNS FILIBUSTER SEEN

Senate Leaders Refuse to Permit Consideration of Govt. Reorganization

Washington, Nov. 16.—(AP)—The Senate sidetracked the administration program today as it prepared to take up the controversial anti-lynching bill.

Senator Byrnes (D-S. C.) announced on the floor a motion would be made for consideration of the lynching measure. He said leaders had decided not to permit him to move for immediate consideration of the government reorganization bill, the only one of President Roosevelt's measures ready for consideration.

There were immediate signs of a filibuster to block action on the anti-lynching measure. There was a sharp explosion on the part of the southern Senators who have been opposing it.

The House, meanwhile, was in a tangle over adjourning for the day. Byrnes' disclosure in the Senate followed conferences of Democratic Leader Barkley with other administration leaders.

Other developments in Washington included: Chairman Smith (D-S. C.) announced the Senate Agriculture Committee would press ahead with its own farm program, patterned along lines of the "ever normal granary," without waiting for House action on new farm legislation.

Smith said the committee had voted to start separate action with the Pope-McGill bill as a basis. This measure follows administration farm plans.

Smith said separate programs would be worked out for cotton, corn, wheat, rice and tobacco, and "possibly some other commodities."

The President cancelled all of his engagements today, because of a painfully infected tooth, while Vice-President Garner was having one pulled. The Vice-President went back to work immediately after a trip to the dentist. Mr. Roosevelt's trouble was more serious and had developed last night.

Wilmington, Nov. 16.—(AP)—Election of officers this morning marked the closing session of the Pastors' conference, a preliminary to the opening this afternoon of the 107th annual Baptist State convention, in the First Baptist church here.

Rev. C. N. Royall of High Point was named president, succeeding a former Waynesville minister who left the state to take a pastorate in Tennessee. Rev. Eugene Olive of North Wilkesboro was elected vice-president, and Rev. J. F. Carter was named secretary.

The pastors discussed at length and made half a dozen changes before adopting the report on "Pastoral Relations" prepared by a committee. The report urged a "fraternal concern" for pastors without employment.

SHIPWRECKED SAILORS RESCUED IN ATLANTIC

Some of the 15 seamen, snatched from impending death in the raging waters off Cape Hatteras that took the lives of seven comrades, are shown in a lifeboat of the coast guard cutter Mendota after being rescued. Some are still wearing life preservers which they hastily donned when the Greek steamer Trienny Chandris went down during a storm. As most of the rescued sailors spoke only Greek, very little information could be obtained from them about the tragedy. The ship was bound for Rotterdam, Holland, with a cargo of scrap iron, loaded at Morehead City.

Two Marine Officers Die Near Fredericksburg, Va.

Fredericksburg, Va., Nov. 16.—(AP)—Two Marine officers stationed at Quantico were killed instantly in the crash of a plane near here today.

The two killed were Staff Sergeant Herman L. Williams, 30, of Greenville, S. C., who was piloting the plane, and Sergeant Celo S. Bowers, 23, of Corning, Ark. Both were married.

Cause of the crash was not learned immediately. The two men were engaged in a routine flight, Major L. G. Merritt, operations officer, said.

The plane fell in a thickly wooded section about six miles from the base at Brown Field near Quantico. The plane did not burn. The bodies were taken to the hospital at Quantico.

Major Merritt said witnesses described the plane as flying "quite high" when it nosed down and dived into the woods. The actual crash was not observed.

An investigation was ordered by the Marine authorities.

Hughes Girl Dies In New Bern Home

New Bern, Nov. 16.—(AP)—Mary Gertrude Hughes, 17-months-old daughter of the late George Isaac Hughes, and his second wife, Libby Hughes, died at the Hughes home here today after a brief illness with pneumonia. Funeral services will be held from the home Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock.

Mary was born here June 3, 1936, the second of two children born to Hughes and his second wife, after the former had passed his 94th birthday. The first was a son, Franklin Roosevelt Hughes, now about three years old.

Paternity at this ripe old age drew national publicity to Hughes. Ninety-nine out of every 100 passengers on the Austrian railways in the last year traveled third class.

Southeastern Governors To Talk With Roosevelt

Raleigh, Nov. 16.—Conference of Governors of nine southeastern states with President Franklin D. Roosevelt at Warm Springs, Georgia, the day after Thanksgiving will be more of an informal "courtesy" conference than a gathering from which important decisions may be expected to spring.

That, at least, is the opinion of Governor Clyde R. Hoey, who will attend along with eight others from the southeastern section.

Governor Hoey said he did not know what subjects would be discussed. He ventured the opinion that topics would be more or less chosen by the President.

"Of course if there are things on which he wants our views, we will discuss them with him, but it will be up to him to direct the course of

STRIKERS QUIT FISHER PLANT

Leave Pontiac, Mich., Works After 12 Hours

Pontiac, Mich., Nov. 16.—(AP)—Sitdown strikers who had occupied the Fisher Body Corporation plant here for nearly 12 hours left at 8:25 A. M., today and the management took possession of the factory.

Door Mitchell president of the UAWA local here, said union officials ordered the men to evacuate the plant because the strike was "unauthorized." He said a conference had been authorized arranged for 1 P. M. between union and company officials on grievances which caused the sit-down at 8:30 o'clock last night.

The main grievance, he said, was the laying off of 500 employees.

There was no demonstration as about 2,000 men marched from the plants. Many of them were day shift workers who had replaced night shift employees at 7 A. M.

Mitchell said the night shift would report for work at 3 P. M. today.

Union officials indicated they would demand the company reassign the employees who had been laid off and that the work available be divided among the entire force. The plant normally employs 7,500.

Japanese Attack Russia For Part In Conference

Issues Sharp Counter-Blast to Brussels Parley

Brussels, Nov. 16.—(AP)—Japanese officials here today issued a sharp counter blast to the Brussels conference declaration criticizing Japan for her action in China.

A statement from the Japanese Embassy attacked Russia as a non-signatory of the nine-power treaty, but a participant in the conference and referred to the part played in framing the declaration by nations which "repudiate payment of their war debts to the United States" and "vote things to which they do not adhere."

Conference delegates, in recess until next Monday, sought counsel of their governments on how far they could go in trying to halt the hostilities.

The conference was threatened by disaffection of four of the 19 participating governments, mainly Italy, and it was expected that Italy would bolt the conversations Monday when the question for positive help for China and pressure on Japan will come up.

The initiative for the next, and perhaps most critical state of the conference appeared to lie with Norman Davis, the United States' chief delegate who remained in Brussels, while most of the other delegates went home to think out a "common attitude."

The negotiations had reached the point where it seemed the Washington government must issue instructions on how far the United States was ready to go, with indications that the others of the "big three" leadership, Britain and France, would hesitate to take any action unless assured of complete American co-operation.

Liquor Distillery Destroyed In Pitt

Officers J. M. Ward and J. L. Taylor, employed by the Pitt County ABC Board, yesterday destroyed another illicit liquor distillery, running their list to more than a dozen for the past several weeks.

The still, a steam plant, was found in Chicago township. It was not in operation when located by officers and no one was at the plant.

The still was of 100-gallon capacity and about 1,400 gallons of mash were found on the site.

LEAF FARMERS PAID TOP SUM

More money already has been paid out in the Greenville tobacco market this year than during any other season in the history of the local mart.

The close of sales yesterday a total of $16,243,902 had been paid farmers selling their tobacco on the Greenville market. The largest sum ever paid out here in any one year was $16,077,682.78 in 1934. That year was the only season in which as much as $16,000,000 was paid out during the entire auction period.

Offerings of 61,175,508 sold during the 58 days the market has been in operation this year has exceeded five times, however. Sales this year through yesterday have averaged $26.55 per hundred pounds.

Yesterday saw offering bring good prices. The 1,028,282 pounds sold brought farmers $247,532.66 for an official average of $24.07 per hundred weight.

No date has been set for the closing of the Greenville market, but most of the tobacco is expected to be sold by Thanksgiving with the market finally closing before Christmas.

Does Good Job

J. Nat Harrison, above, general chairman of the Red Cross Roll Call, conducted throughout the county yesterday, has reasons for appearing pleased. The membership campaign was declared to have been the most successful since World War days.

END ROLL CALL WITH SUCCESS

The annual Red Cross Roll Call conducted throughout the county yesterday is assured of showing the best returns since the World War days.

J. Nat Harrison, general chairman, reported at noon today that the membership campaign in Greenville brought in 1,013 new members and the campaign in the county 978. While the canvassing has not been completed, scattering reports will, no doubt, show a total membership in the county in excess of 2,000.

Chairman Harrison announced at the start of the plans that the Roll Call would be completed in one day. He declared last night this plan would be carried out.

He added, however, that it had been impossible to see everyone and if any person had not been given the privilege of joining he could do so by telephoning 1100 or 898.

A. B. Ellington, local chapter treasurer, was noted as saying that the Roll Call yesterday was the most successful one conducted since the World War.

Appeal Lists 163 Errors In Superior Court Trial

Raleigh, Nov. 16.—Counsel for Edgar L. Smoak, Wilmington railroad worker under sentence of death for poisoning his young daughter, have filed a brief in the Supreme Court setting out 169 errors alleged to have been committed by Judge J. H. Clement, who presided at the trial in New Hanover county last January.

These allegations of error (exceptions as they are termed at law) are boiled down to six "Questions Presented," according to the brief, but when the entire document is examined the chief reliance of Smoak's lawyers is set forth in the opening paragraph of their argument:

"No lawyer can read the evidence adduced at the alleged trial against the defendant without reaching the

Convicted In 1933 Of Abducting John O'Connell, Jr.

Syracuse, N. Y., Nov. 16.—(AP)—Three of eight men convicted of the 1933 kidnaping of John O'Connell, Jr., of Albany, escaped from the Onondaga county penitentiary early today after tying up the jail's guard staff of six in a carefully timed bold delivery plot.

The three were Percy Geary, 34 and John Oley, 36 of Albany, sentenced to 77 years, and Harold Crowley, 35, of New York City, sentenced to 28 years.

The plot was led by Geary, H. H. Paddock, superintendent of the penitentiary, said, "with apparent outside help of some sort."

The three kidnaped Edward Hayes, a guard, and made their escape in Hayes' car which they drove five miles from the penitentiary at Jamesville South of the city to down town Syracuse, where they left it to speed off in another automobile.

An eight-states alarm was immediately broadcast and New York state police headquarters ordered all road patrols out to hunt for the trio.

Officials quickly disclosed they were searching for a "trustee" who, they said, escaped from the penitentiary two days ago and whose cell was in the same block with the kidnaped trio.

Prison officials pieced together the stories of the five guards and one prison matron and announced Geary was the leader of the plot.

They said Geary sawed two bars from his cell door to make his way into an inside cell block corridor where he sawed another bar off the corridor door to gain access to the guard's walk.

Geary hid behind a door to wait for John Corbett, a guard who was making his rounds through the building, and poked a gun in Corbett's ribs, forced Corbett to go to the main office and spout to the others that OLEY was hanging himself in his jail cell.

The ruse brought four other guards on the run. Geary promptly marched the group at gun point and herded them to the cells occupied by Oley and Crowley.

PRESENT SEAT IS THREATENED

Various Civil Departments to be Set Up in Three or Four Separate Places for More Safety; Panic-Stricken Population Evacuates Two Other Big Cities

Nanking, Nov. 16.—(AP)—The government decided tonight to move to Hankow on the Yangtze, nearly 300 miles to the west, because of the threat to the capital by Japanese armies advancing from Shanghai.

The Ministry of Communications took the lead today by evacuating staff and record to a Hankow-bound steamer and League of Nations technical experts were to leave tomorrow.

For greater security and freedom from Japanese attacks three or four cities in all will be used to harbor various civil departments. Hankow, as the major haven, probably will house the ministries of foreign affairs and Finance.

Shanghai, Nov. 16.—(AP)—Thousands of panic-stricken Chinese fled from three of China's great cities tonight to escape advancing Japanese armies and widespread bombing by Japanese warplanes.

A great exodus was underway from Nanking, the nation's capital and object of a tremendous Japanese drive into the interior from Shanghai. Similarly civilians were fleeing from Tsinanfu, Shantung province capital north of the Shanghai war area, and from Soochow, southeast of Shanghai, where Japanese lines between Shanghai and Nanking.

Japanese planes dumped bombs over a widespread area of the Shanghai peninsula to smooth the way to Nanking for troops and naval vessels.

Japan's North China forces were approaching the Yellow river North of Tsinanfu. To stem the advance Chinese were said to have blown up the Tientsin-Pukow railway bridge spanning the river opposite the provincial capital.

Three American missionaries, including Rev. H. H. McMillan of Laurinburg, N. C., remained in Soochow to aid frightened Chinese.

JEFFERSON FOE OF HIGH COURT

Hate of Former President Described By Wallace

Charlottesville, Va., Nov. 16.—(AP)—Agriculture Secretary Henry Wallace described Thomas Jefferson in a speech today, as a greater hater of the Supreme Court "than any President before or since."

Speaking at the University of Virginia, founded by Jefferson, Wallace said "one of the first moves of the Jeffersonian party when coming into power was to unmake the Federal courts which had been packed by Adams with aristocratic Federalists' just before Jefferson came into power."

"As a result of the unmaking efforts," Wallace continued, "Jefferson was accused in the most violent terms of wanting to destroy the Federal judiciary and subject all things to his will."

Secretary Wallace spoke in connection with the 75th anniversary of the establishment of the land grant college system and the United States Department of Agriculture. Dr. Julian A. Burrus, president of Virginia Tech, introduced the Secretary of Agriculture.

As an educator, Secretary Wallace said, Jefferson believed "educated farmers were the stuff out of which democracy could be built. To that faith Jefferson gave most of his life."

"As a believer in democracy, he displayed his faith in the capacities of the common men to govern themselves in the light of the facts around them," Wallace said.

"He hated the Supreme Court with a grater hate than any President before or since and there have been many good haters."

ETIQUETTE

By JOAN DURHAM
(AP Feature Service Writer)
Our automobile manners are as out of date as the model T.

It took a woman industrial designer to tell us so.

Miss Helen Dryden, who has planned the interior of one of the most attractive cars in the new auto shows, has injected some common sense into the seating arrangement.

It's silly, she says, for the woman to smudge into the right-hand corner of the rear seat in an automobile—as the old regime of motorists would have us do.

When that rule is followed the man either has to walk to the other side of the car to get in and run the risk of being mowed down by traffic or he has to climb over the woman to get to his seat at her left. That means crumpling her evening gown or trampling on her new slippers.

There's still another point. The man should help the woman in getting out. Therefore he should be able to get out first—which he can do nicely if he sits nearest the curb.

If the man is driving the car himself he should help the woman into her seat and then walk around the car and get into the driver's seat.

When a group enters a taxi or a chauffeur-driver car this is the correct order of seating:
1. The woman guest goes first and sits on the left of the rear seat.
2. The hostess is next—and sits in the middle.
3. The man guest is third—and sits on the right of the rear seat.
4. The host is last—and sits on the right-hand fold-down seat.

How about getting into a rumble seat?
That's easy.
The woman steps onto the lower footrest, with her left foot, steps to the second foot rest with her right foot and then into the rumble seat, trying not to dig her French heels into the leather. She moves to the left side of the seat so the man can get in as she did and will be able to get out first, to help her.

It's like mounting a horse," Miss Dryden says. "And you get out in reverse order—just as you would dismount from a horse in reverse order."

Duke Alumni

Duke University alumni of Pitt county will have as their guest speaker tomorrow evening Dr. W. K. Greene, dean of undergraduate instruction at Duke. The occasion is the annual fall banquet of the Pitt county chapter of Duke alumni and friends. The dinner and address will take place in the parish house of the Episcopal Church at six-thirty.

Dr. Greene, well known as a dynamic speaker, will bring a short address concerning plans for celebrating the hundredth anniversary of the founding of the university.

In December Duke day will be celebrated in Durham on the university campus. At this time alumni from all sections of North Carolina and nearby states will launch the centennial celebration.

"The Blue Devils in Action," a short motion picture, will also be a feature of the program.

"Reading—the magic highway to adventure."

The caption for National Book Week, might well be the expression of past eras or the anticipation of future ones.

Books, like people, possess personalities. In order that one may more fully appreciate the contribution that good books make to individual happiness, comfort and inspiration, the following quotations of book lovers of various ages are presented:

The true university of these days is a collection of books.—Carlyle.

Book love, my friends, is your pass to the greatest, the purest, and the most perfect pleasures that God has prepared for his creatures. It lasts when all other pleasures fade. It will support you when all other recreations are gone. It will last you till death. It will make your hours pleasant to you as long as you live.—Anthony Trollope.

That is a good book, it seems to me, which is opened with expectation and closed with profit.—Louisa M. Alcott.

Books are ships which pass accumulated wisdom.—C. W. Curtis.

God be thanked for books. They are the voices of the distant dead, and make us heirs of the spiritual life of past ages.—William E. Channing.

Without books, God is silent, justice dormant, natural science at a standstill, philosophy lame, letters dumb, and all things involved in cimmerian darkness.—Bartholomew.

Books are the food of youth, the delight of old age; the ornament of prosperity; a delight at home, and no hindrance abroad; companions by night, in traveling in the country.—Cicero.

Books are the ship which pass through the vast seas of time.—Bacon.

Books are a finer world within the world.—Alexander Smith.

There is no past so long as books shall live.—Bulwer-Lytton.

Poetry is the record of the best and happiest moments of the happiest and best minds.—Percy Blissett Shelly.

He who loves a book will never want a faithful friend, a wholesome counsellor, a cheerful companion, or an effectual comforter.—Horace Traubel.

Considering the comments of high school students about the books they have read with enjoyment, it is obvious that reading is to them "a magic highway of adventure."

Here are some quotations by students:

"A Lantern in Her Hand" has been a guiding light for me to many of the books of Bess Streeter Aldridge.—Dorothy Moye.

A good book has a good plat that keeps you interested to the last page.—Alice L. Blow.

I like a book written in conversational tone. It is much more interesting because it makes you take part or feel that you are taking part

Two's Company

The Characters

Nina, Junior League and ex-debutante, impulsively married David, hoping to escape her love for her stepfather.

Richard, the charming, well-tailored stepfather, is on a 5-month cruise with his wife, after taking leave from his job as a banker.

Richard's Return

Chapter 38

NINA followed him across the room.

"But David! You can't just dismiss this thing like that! Don't you suppose I must want to stay here pretty desperately, before I'm bringing up the loathsome subject of my money again? ... Won't you even discuss it?"

He said in a voice that was a whisper beside hers: "I'll discuss it all night, if you like, Nina ... but it won't change my ideas ... I'm disappointed about moving, for myself, but I'm ... I'm—well, I've told you darling, I'm sick about it for you. Only we knew we were taking a gamble when we came here. I can't see anything for it, but to be good sports."

"That's—all you can think of, is it?"

"Yes, darling. I'll take a couple of days off and help look for another bargain—if we can find one. At 7:30, Nina was saying: "I'm not complaining, David ... but I've made enormous concessions to marriage ... I've wanted to ... why can't you make a little one now, for my happiness?"

"My darling, I simply can't think of another new way to say it. I think the man should support his wife. I don't think he should accept money from her, unless it's a question of their not having enough to eat, or wear ... I feel very strongly about it. There I'm sorry."

At 9, they were eating a pick-up supper, being very polite and considerate of one another.

"Salt, Nina?"

"Oh, thanks ... Let me fix you another sandwich ... do!"

"At 10, they were at it again.

"I don't mean to complain, David ..."

And he couldn't resist: "But you are, my dear."

"Very well, then," coldly, "I'm sorry to complain, but just cast your eye over this messy apartment. See what I have to do every day ... and the pressing, and such washing as I can, and all the cooking ... Don't you think that I deserve at least to have a decent place to work over? Do you think it's quite fair to stick to your ideas and make me pack and move, and wear myself out, even more, in this heat, to go to some nasty tenement of a place?"

David answered her, in the same polite voice she had used to him.

"You make it sound pretty dismal, I admit. But think of these little points: the biggest is that you knew what you were getting in for, before you married me—I was very careful about that. The next point is that it's perfectly possible I may find another bargain like this apartment ... we still have another month to go here ... and by then the weather's bound to be cooler." He made a big effort to grin. "How's them for arguments?"

David's Shot Hits

NINA might have made a big effort, too, and said: "Lousy, my darling, lousy," and it would have helped a lot. But she was keeping back the tears, only by a willpower she didn't dream she possessed—and the light touch, at this point, was out of the question.

She said: "I just—ask—you, David. Consider the extra money a loan ... or be generous, if you know how, and accept it, because you know it will make me happy."

"I'll never forgive you, Nina, if you reduce me to a point where I remind you that I've tried to be a good husband ... and I'll admit, I'm near it ... You're such a darn good sport, really, dear, that I can't understand your trying to get me to do this, by painting your life such a miserable one. It's ... well, it's not like you to try and—shame me ..."

"David! That's unfair! You couldn't help the hot weather or the dishes, or any of that. I've never said so. Only here's something you can help ... Dear David, think back, our only other disagreement has been about money, too. Remember? My helping out the budget? ... I gave in then, you know ..."

"Oh, sure. Sure ... but you'd broken the agreement first!"

"Let's be careful not to let money interfere with our happiness, together!"

"You mean: 'You do what I say about money, and we'll be happy together,' don't you?"

"David—you're—nasty!"

"I'm fed—up!"

A pause.

"David," said Nina, unreasonably, "all you do is say 'no,' and then tell me that I'm unfair and a poor sport and that you're fed up ... Be constructive. Give me some sensible reason, other than that you just—don't—want—to."

At this, after four hours of arguing, David's face became slightly flushed. His hair, even, wasn't copper any more, but a bright, angry flame.

He rose and said: "I've told you, Nina, that I had reached a limit. I absolutely can't think up a single other way of telling you that I don't approve of the idea ... Or no, wait a minute ..."

He looked at her steadily, before going on. "Here's a new one: 'I—quite—definitely—refuse to be another itchy-nard Chalonier, living off his wife. There! You asked for it.'"

The little blue and white room was very still.

"I think you'd better take Button for a walk, David ... a long one ... Right away. Please go."

David said, coldly: "I was just on my way," and he called the beagle, and went for his hat.

Nina sat without moving, but when he jerked open the front door, she gave a little cry.

A man was standing outside, with his hand raised to the bell ... a very brown man, in a gray double-breasted suit.

"Richard!" cried Nina ... and it was.

But David kept right on going.

An Angel From Heaven

RICHARD ... Am I dreaming?"

Richard was looking over his shoulder at David's departing back with an amused glint in his eye.

He turned to Nina, with a smile. "You are not dreaming, my darling. I am back, that's all."

He came in and closed the door.

Nina was in such a state of excitement over her quarrel with David that she was beyond reasoning out how she felt.

She was aware of the fact that she was surprised, and that Richard looked marvelously well and handsome and calm; and she knew she was trembling, but that was all.

In a minute, she found herself being kissed. Heard a voice saying: "Oh, my God, how I've waited for this!" ... And then found herself sitting on the day-bed, her hand in Richard's hand.

"Honey ...?" she asked.

"She's here, precious. I'll explain. She made one of those lightning-like decisions of hers, and we hopped over on the same boat with Carl and Cordelia and the rest of the crowd. Honey only decided the night before they sailed ..."

Thought she'd surprise you ... We were to spend the night at quarantine—land in the morning. Honey was just going to send you a wire, when we received word that we were docking after all ..."

We called from the pier, but your phone's out of order, did you know that?"

Honey was pretty well worried over it, I can tell you, along home, in a cab, with Cordelia, and came over, myself, to let you know ..."

He bent and kissed the hand he was holding. "That's the story, sweet."

Nina said: "Oh ..."

She was beginning to feel that an angel had appeared out of heaven to save her.

She was quite incapable of reasoning anything out ... that she had completely got over him, during his absence, but that he was appearing at the best ... or the worst ... psychological moment to make her think that she hadn't. She didn't realize that she was practically hysterical ..."

All she knew was that here was a man who—really—loved her ... A part of her happy past, a life away from heat and dish-washing, and cramped quarters ... and bickerings about money ... a life to which she belonged ..."

She whispered: "Oh Richard ..."

After a moment she said: "You'd better go now, darling ..."

"I thought ... I mean, when I came in, I noticed ..."

"Yes. We can't talk tonight, Richard. Call me soon, won't you? Won't you?"

Right away in the morning, before I come to see Honey ..."

"Of course, precious. We'll meet somewhere afterwards, Nina ... you're unhappy."

She didn't answer, only clung to him.

"Nina, it's been hell, not seeing you. All your little ideas about my getting over loving you ... they were so absurd, darling. I've been half-mad with wanting you ..."

"I know ... I know ..."

What did she know? Nothing. She only felt his arms ... that he loved her ... That he cared that she was unhappy ..."

"I'll make you happy, Nina ... you look so sad, and white ... I'm back again, lovely ..."

"Yes ... you're back ..."

And when he had gone, she stood looking at the closed door.

"Tomorrow ... Tomorrow," she thought. "Anything you want, darling. I'll go away with you ... anything ..."

IN AMERICA hundreds of persons, like this man, will eat Thanksgiving dinner only by the grace of charity. This isn't life at its best, but things could be worse. A glance around the world suggests some reasons why America still can be thankful—

Line shops. On Thanksgiving day, less than a week previously, she had been taken by her father to a doctor's office suffering from convulsions. The first time she was given treatment at a hospital and recovered. The second time she was dead when a physician reached the Smoak home. It was discovered that on November 19 Smoak had bought strychnine at a Wilmington drug store on the pretext that he was going to treat some hogs, according to the clerk who sold the poison. At the trial it was shown that Smoak had insurance on the lives of both his wives, as well as $900 on the life of Annie Thelma. It was further shown that after he had taken out insurance on the life of the mother of Mrs. Harker, parol-mour of the defendant after his second wife's death, and that thereafter the mother had suffered a violent attack of convulsions after being given "medicine" by the defendant. Defendant's brief complains that he was tried for crimes other than that for which he was indicted. Objection was made to the competency of evidence about the other deaths, of evidence tending to prove immoral relations with Mrs. Harker, and of hypothetical questions asked medical experts. Summing up the assignments of error the brief says: "The state upon this particular trial was allowed to introduce everything that it could find detrimental to the defendant, while he was not allowed to prove even his good character."

JAPANESE ADOPT 'BAR' AND 'JAZZ' AS NEW WORDS

Tokyo (AP)—With the approach of the Olympic games in Tokyo in 1940, learning English has become a popular craze among the Japanese.

This has resulted in the adoption into the vernacular language of more and more expressive phrases from the United States and England. Some business men in the larger cities are converting Japanese signs into English to catch the eye of American and British visitors.

A tendency to insert English words into conversation or written Japanese began 30 years ago when it was considered fashionable to speak English. Today it is regarded as not merely fashionable but indispensable. The study of English is compulsory in all schools and universities.

Among the commoner English words appropriated by the Japanese are: radio, taxi, camera, bar, jazz broadcast, mass production, factory.

etc. They have become so well-established that they are now regarded as newly-coined Japanese words.

DO GOLFERS APPRECIATE CAMEL'S COSTLIER TOBACCOS?

It means a lot that famous golfers like Gene Sarazen, Helen Hicks, Lawson Little, and Ralph Guldahl, agree in their preference for Camels. They have found that costlier tobaccos do place Camels in a class apart. Listen to Ralph Guldahl, National Open Champion: "I've stuck to Camels for 10 years," he says. "I smoke lots of Camels and I've never known them to jangle my nerves. That partly explains why so many golfers are loyal Camel smokers."

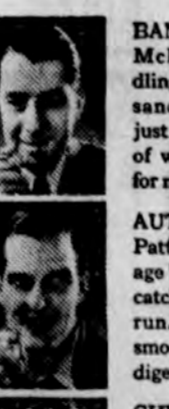

And not only golfers, but people in all walks of life—millions of Americans—prefer Camels day after day after day, making them the LARGEST-SELLING cigarette in America...or the world.

SALESGIRL Elsie Schumacher: "When the rush gets me 'worn out'—it's me for a Camel, and I get a quick 'lift.' Practically all of us girls in the store prefer Camels."

WATCHMAKER I. C. Gorkun says: "Camels? Say, every Camel I smoke seems to be milder and tastier than the last one. Camels don't leave me feeling 'smoked out.'"

SPORTS WRITER Stuart Cameron: "It's mighty impressive how champions agree on Camels. I'm glad as any athlete that Camels don't get on my nerves."

BANK TELLER John McMahon: "I'm handling money by the thousands. Jangled nerves just don't fit in that kind of work. So it's Camels for me."

AUTO MECHANIC Al Patterson: "In the garage business you have to catch your meals on the run. Camels seem to smooth the way for good digestion."

The case, which broke last December and was tried in January, 1937, attracted nationwide attention, as the prisoner was suspected of poisoning on a scale wholesale enough to put him in the "Blue-beard" class.

SHORT SHOTS

By HENRY AVERILL

Raleigh, Nov. 6—All last week there was little talk about the state's capital except the chances North Carolina had, or didn't have, to eat Duke. Now that the Tar Heels have done it, little can be heard except how they did it.

Last week it was hard to locate prophets of a North Carolina victory. This week everybody seems to have had a hunch that the Heels would win—at least that's what they say.

Thad Eure, secretary of state, is perhaps the loudest in singing the praises of a "wonder team" from Chapel Hill.

Desks and chairs in the governor's office have returned to normalcy today, after a spell during which they were decorated (burgeoned) in perhaps a better word) with clocks, books, calendars, papers and other forms of impedimenta from the anteroom.

There was quite a bit of painting going on and "Bob" Thompson, Governor's secretary, has planned a wholesale shifting of scenery in the outer sanctum.

The general secretary isn't back from Rome, Georgia, yet and a details of the renovation work haven't yet been revealed. Bob went south in answer to a subpoena commanding him to appear before a Federal Grand Jury and tell what he knows about the Jack White scandal which involved numerous capital officials who thought it would be fine if Mr. White would just print their pictures in a greater "North Carolina handbook."

The Prison committee of the State Highway department is due to meet Friday of this week and work out some plans for expansion of facilities at the woman's prison.

A plan is adopted immediately, there appears no reason why work on the improvement cannot be begun by the first of December.

It has been suggested, however, that it might be a good idea to postpone start of any work on the project until about the first of March next year when the weather will be much more favorable to construction projects.

The committee, however, is understood to be ready to "go to it" as soon as possible.

Director of the Penal Division R. Grady Johnson went to the Caledonia Prison farm Monday for a visit of inspection. He did not have any particular purpose other than a routine checkup, in mind.

Governor Clyde R. Hoey will make another speech (though that's so customary as to be practically devoid of news value) before the North Carolina Society in Washington Thursday, he said Monday.

Under postmark of November 14 "Robert Grady Johnson, Director of Prisons, State Highway Department, Raleigh, North Carolina" received a communication entitled "Identification Order No. 1461" giving full description of William Payne, with aliases; Bill Payne, Wells, T. F. Lowe, T. F. Low; Ralph Howard; Bill Simpson; Harry Mills, W. C. Hardie.

Maybe it was the first the state prison heads have received about all. The again, it seems Bill did something or other not so long ago as to bring him into the limelight.

Future Motors May Use Dust, Not Gas

Elbing, Germany (AP)—Dust and powdered grasshoppers soon may serve the Fatherland as motor fuel.

German scientists and engineers wrestling with the problem of using dust, waste, residues and even ground insects in motors have just received word that experiments of Dr. H. Wahl, of the Schichau shipyards, with dust combustion engines are nearing success.

One of the main obstacles of dust as fuel—the heavy wear and tear on the motor by grinding ashes—has been successfully overcome, declares Dr. Wahl. He says the Schichau company has developed a metal alloy which is harder than any known steel and therefore suitable for a motor designed to run on dust.

New Metal Effective

Previous attempts with dust combustion motors failed, explains Dr. Wahl, because usually after 150 hours trial run the cylinders and pistons were worn to pieces by the grinding effects of the extremely hard residue of burnt dust. The new metal alloy, however, withstands the hardest grinding, he says, citing that only 1-700 of a millimeter was ground off the cylinder walls of the motor made of a new metal during a test run of 150 hours.

Motor Small

The experiments are part of the nation's four-year plan to achieve economic self-sufficiency. Dr. Wahl says his "dust-ester" is not much bigger than an ordinary motorcycle engine, but declines to divulge further details except to say that it runs on almost every kind of properly powdered dust, such as that of brown coal, hard coal, saw dust, remnants of grain, beech nuts, copra, cocoa powder, rice, hay and even ground grasshoppers.

Visitors from the United States spent an estimated $8,000,000 in trips to Bermuda during the last year.

These Men Will Play Leading Roles In The Special Session Of Congress

By The AP Feature Service

Washington—When President Roosevelt called congress for the special session, he marked off the legislation he wanted:

1 A streamlined federal administration.

2 Bigger pay envelopes for low-wage workers.

3 More dollars and crop control for farmers.

4 A blueprint for the nation's natural resources.

Certain it is that big guns of the house and senate will boom for and against these measures. In numerous addresses, both from his bedside and the platform, the President has given the key to administration desires on each group of hoped-for legislation.

These desires have found both supporters and antagonists. Among those certain to be heard from as the session gets down to the business in hand are the men pictured here.

In addition, almost as likely to be in the limelight are Senators William E. Borah and Carter Glass in the question of United States neutrality comes up. Senator Borah undoubtedly will have much to say. While Senator Glass' recent long and serious illness may cause him to sit by the side of the time, any matters concerning state's rights and decentralization of government, for which he long has battled, are sure to elicit some oratorical shots from the caustic Virginian.

In The House . . . A Trio Of New Dealers

John Joseph O'Connor

If the administration had such a thing as a single voice to speak for it in the House of Representatives this Harvard trained son of Tammany Hall would be that voice.

He heads the rules committee, that all-powerful star chamber for legislation.

O'Connor is a close knit, heavily built Irish American, born in Massachusetts, but brought up in New York City. He is the man who made a rebellious blank relief check of four billion, eight hundred million dollars three years ago. He also threatened to kick Father Coughlin down Pennsylvania avenue, but apologized.

Sam Rayburn

Genial Sam is the Houdini who swings administration bills through the House in full public view. That means the Texan knows the laws of gravity and strategy at close quarters.

The conservative Rayburn is 55, takes long walks through Washington streets, pals with Vice President Garner and Banker Jesse Jones from Houston. He is a veteran for the New Dealer, having shovelled through the house the utility holding company bill, rural electrification, and stock exchange regulation.

Marvin Jones

This drawing Texan talks in the plain Lincoln pattern. He is medium-sized, .51, and hails from a Texas district that raises three basic crops, wheat, cattle and cotton.

He has mastered practical agriculture on his own farm and the statistical variety as well, probably accounting for his chairmanship of the House Agriculture committee.

Agricultural economics, in fact, come easier for him than drawing room literature. Jones backed the old AAA, and when the administration offers its new farm bill, Marvin Jones' "X" will be on every page of it, or the American public will know the reason why.

In The Senate . . . Help And Headaches For F. D. R.

Arthur H. Vandenberg

"I'm not an isolationist—but I most certainly am an insulator!" booms the Republican party's outstanding voice in the senate, constantly thundering against the administration's foreign policy.

"When congress orders neutrality, it's the President's sworn duty to enforce it," argues the Republican presidential possibility. He refers to the recently enacted law that directs the President to use embargo and keep Americans out of dangerous war spots.

Vandenberg descends from New York Dutch stock like the President. He ran a $25-a-week repartee in Michigan into a senate seat.

Burton K. Wheeler

Lofty—Browed, palm-pounding "Burt" Wheeler was the chosen leader of the little senate band that frazzled the President's court reform plan.

If the court scheme appears on the horizon, Wheeler's the man to watch. If it doesn't, his sharp-shooting will depend on whether he thinks state's rights are at stake.

Wheeler has his own plan to help under-dog workers. The present wage and hour bill, he thinks oversteps federal authority. Wheeler is 55, possessor of pioneer Massachusetts blood, but a political record that earned him the adjective "radical" from big business after the World war.

Harry Flood Byrd

This Virginia brother of Commander Byrd of Antarctica, is a political preacher whose text is "Cut government expenses." He rode the economy theme to power as governor of Virginia, and continues to pound it out in the senate.

Byrd wants to streamline federal administrative organization, but he also wants to save many dollars every step of the way. The Roosevelt scheme stresses efficiency scouts the idea that you can trim big money off government services.

That means Byrd will tangle with the administration on governmental reorganization every step of the way, even though he is a Democrat.

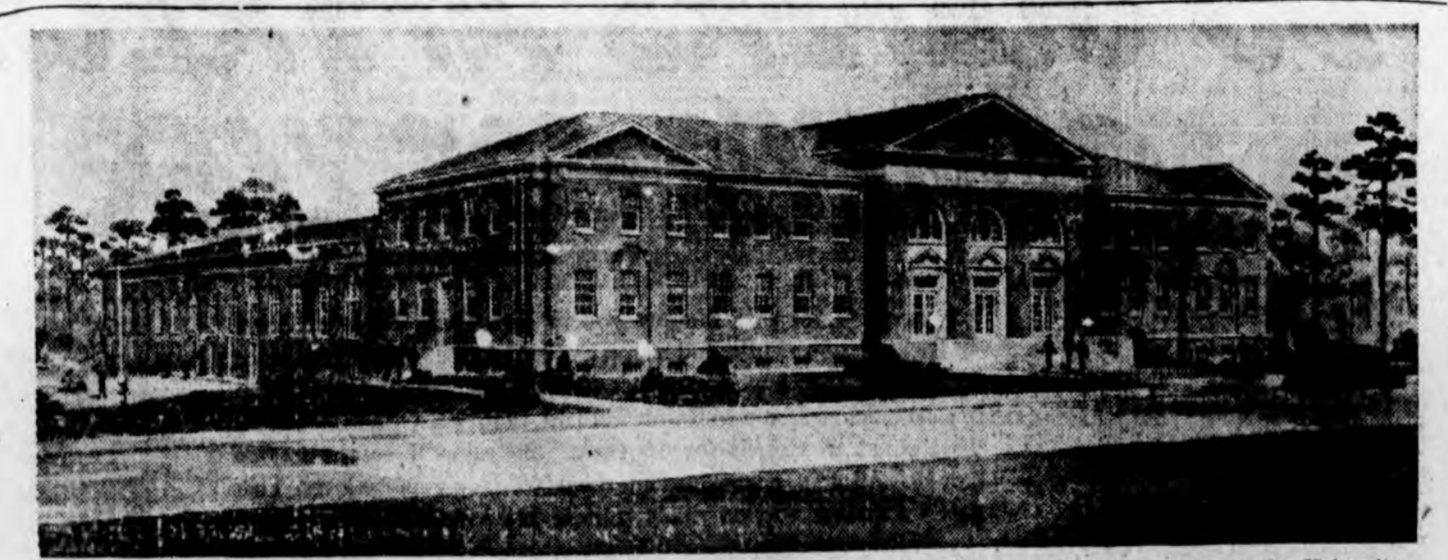

Alben W. Barkley

Of all the New Deal heavy men, the public eye will fall oftener on this sturdy son of Kentucky—the senate Majority Leader. He's the man who stepped into the late Joe T. Robinson's shoes last summer by the margin of one vote, after formidable opposition from the Democratic party's right wing.

Barkley is 60, keen on running debate, and possessor of an authentic log cabin background. He's a conservative, loyal New Dealer, whose standing as an orator twice took him to the mikes to keynote national Democratic conventions.

NEW PHYSICAL EDUCATION BUILDING AT UNIVERSITY

Pictured above is the architect's drawing of the new Physical Education Building, which is now under construction at the University of North Carolina. Together with the indoor swimming pool, it is located on the Raleigh road, just south of the old campus. The building will provide ample facilities for a mass athletic program in indoor sports for a student body of 3,500. The swimming pool will be housed in a building adjoining the main part and will be available to all people connected with the University. The present schedule calls for occupancy of the building early next spring. It will cost $650,000. The funds were provided through a PWA grant, a bond issue and private contributions.

Directly below the speaker on the next rostrum the Clerk can be seen as he started to read the President's message to the assembled Congressmen.

To Allow Hunting On Two Preserves In North Carolina

Mount Mitchell and Daniel Boone Game Refuges To Be Thrown Open to Hunters This Month

Raleigh, Nov. 15—Two huge game preserves, closed to the gun for eight and ten years, will be thrown open to hunters by North Carolina this month.

Grouse hunting will be permitted in the two preserves from November 29 to December 4, inclusive, it has been announced by John D. Chalk, Commissioner of the Game and Inland Fish division of the Department of Conservation and Development.

The preserves which will be opened are the Mount Mitchell game refuge of 30,000 acres and the Daniel Boone Game Refuge of 44,000 acres. Both of these are co-operative game management projects in which the state of North Carolina and the National Forest Service jointly maintain the areas as game preserves and permit hunting and fishing only a few days a year.

Ruffed grouse have become so numerous in the Mount Mitchell and Daniel Boone preserves during the last few years that North Carolina game officials and the U. S. Forest Service decided that six days of hunting would really improve conditions and in no way seriously reduce the supply.

This will be the first time in ten years that shotguns have been permitted in the Mount Mitchell refuge and the first time in eight years that any hunting has been allowed within the Daniel Boone refuge.

Use of bird dogs will be prohibited in the grouse hunt, although there are no limitations on the types of shotguns which may be used. The bag limit has been set at two grouse a day.

Those who participate in the hunt must buy a special permit costing $1.00 a day for each day of the hunt, in addition to the regular state hunting licenses.

UNC PLAYERS ENJOYING REST

Tar Heels Start Work Wednesday For Virginia Game

Chapel Hill, Nov. 16.—North Carolina's Big Five champions enjoyed today the second of two well-earned rests following their 14 to 6 victory over Duke Saturday. The Tar Heels will on Wednesday afternoon begin concentrating their attention on Virginia, only remaining foe on the 1937 schedule.

The Tar Heels and Cavaliers, who are to clash here in their annual Thanksgiving Day attraction, will renew a rivalry dating back to 1892, which is the most continuous in Dixie. The Turkey Day feature marks the 42nd encounter between the two institutions. Virginia holds the top side of the ledger in the number of victories—21 against 17 defeats and 3 ties. But North Carolina has monopolized the spotlight in 9 of the past 10 games.

Sport folks of Tar Heels will get their first glimpse of the football model coached by Frank Murray, who at Marquette turned out some of the nation's greatest teams. Murray came to Virginia last September after coaching Marquette through another brilliant season, in which only one game was lost, and seeing his own Ray Burd make All-America.

Coach Murray's teams are among the most colorful in the country to watch. They rely primarily on deceptive forward and lateral passes and well-timed, tricky running plays.

The Cavaliers have run into stormy seas throughout the 1937 campaign. Only against Navy and Princeton were they badly beaten. At that they held the powerful Middles 19-13 for three quarters before being overpowered in the final period. Virginia played Maryland's highly touted Old Liners to a standstill for 58 minutes before losing by the scant margin of three points on a magnificent 32-yard field goal booted by John Mandorff. Two weeks previously Maryland had upset a strong Syracuse eleven. Virginia beat Hampden-Sydney 13 to 7 and William and Mary 7 to 0.

Carolina will be top-heavy favorite to win Thanksgiving Day. But history shows that upset victories aren't exactly novelties when these two institutions meet.

In 1932 Virginia kicked the dope bucket sky high by besting Carolina 14 to 6. The Cavaliers are expected to exert every effort and resource to win this time, for they realize that a victory over the Tar Heels would change a mediocre season into a highly successful one.

RANGER RECRUIT

LITTLE STILL LEADS UNC FOOTBALL SCORERS

Chapel Hill, N. C., Nov. 15.—Crowell Little, triple-threat quarterback, is still leading scorer on North Carolina's Big Five football champions this season. He made the first of two touchdowns in the impressive 14 to 6 victory over Duke Saturday. Little raised his total to 36 points. George Watson, junior halfback, ran plays to Little with 30 points. Watson scored the second touchdown Saturday.

TOM BURNETTE BOOSTS PLACKICKING AVERAGE

Chapel Hill, N. C., Nov. 15.—By plackicking both points after touchdown in the Duke game Saturday, Tom Burnette, Tar Heel senior halfback, raised his season's total to 11 successful kicks in 15 attempts. Last season Burnette converted on 16 of 18 tries. He has also scored two touchdowns to give him a total of 23 points for the eight games. Burnette, who weighs 185, hails from Tarboro.

It Happened On The Gridiron

MINNESOTA tried a forward-lateral pass play against Nebraska in 1932. The Minnesota end caught the forward, but was tackled by a Cornhusker so that his arms were pinned to his sides. The ball bounced along the ground, but was scooped up by Jack Manders, who made the touchdown which licked Nebraska, 7-6.—By Dana Xenophon Bible, Texas.

IN 1932, U. C. L. A. trailed Oregon, 6-7, with 30 seconds to play. UCLA quarterback Mike Frankovich intercepted an Oregon pass on the UCLA 7-yard line. He had presence of mind to call time out for a huddle. When the play started, Mike faded behind his own goal, passed to Ranson Livesay on the 35. Livesay ran 65 yards for the winning touchdown as the gun sounded.—By William Henry Spaulding, U. C. L. A.

IT HAPPENED in a Georgetown-Detroit game. The ball-carrier was nailed by two tacklers from opposite sides, but didn't fall. Before the whistle was blown, a halfback rushed by the standing ball-toter, snatched the ball from his hands and sprinted 50 yards to a touchdown through secondaries who had relaxed their vigilance, thinking the play had ended.—By Lou Little, Columbia.

BEFORE Central university merged with Centre college, rivalry between the grid teams of the two institutions was so intense that in 1890, authorities of both schools decided the game should be played on a neutral field. So strong was the feeling that before the game started, two brothers who played on opposite teams had a flat fight on the field.

THE LARGEST score ever made by a Duke team was the 96-0 victory over Furman in 1891. (Duke was then Trinity college.) Touchdowns counted four points, and kicks afterward, two. Every man on the Duke team made a touchdown, the center being called back and allowed to run with the ball on one occasion.

IN THE 1920 Colgate-Navy game, Colgate led, 7-0. The Red Raiders seemed about to go over for another touchdown from the 3-yard line. "Whitney" Lloyd, Navy end, picked up a Colgate fullback and ran 98 yards for a touchdown. Navy won, 13-7.—Lieut. Harry J. Hardwick, Navy.

COLLEGE MEET THIS SATURDAY

UNC Seeks Its Eighth Cross-Country Team Title

Chapel Hill, N. C., Nov. 16.—North Carolina's undefeated cross-country team will be gunning for its eighth Southern Conference championship here Saturday when it serves as official host at the Conference meet.

Entries in the Conference event are Davidson, Duke, Maryland, N. C. State, Washington and Lee, William and Mary and Carolina.

The Tar Heels first entered the Conference meet at Athens, Ga., in 1926. Paced by their brilliant distance ace, Galen Elliott, who ran 25:46.6 over the five mile course, they turned in a low total of 35 against Auburn's 64.

North Carolina followed its successful debut in 1926 with consecutive titles the three following years. The 1927 Tar Heels turned in 17 points—lowest score ever made by a winning team. At the same time Elliott set up a new Conference record of 26:26. Carolina's winning score in 1928 was 30 and in 1929 was 56.

V. M. L.'s Flying Cadets finally broke the Tar Heel dominance in 1930 with a winning team tally of 40 points. Carolina dethroned the Virginians from the driver's seat in 1931 with another good low tally of 25.

Led by Jerry Bray and Bob Bird, Duke stepped out in the Conference spotlight with 23 points each time. These winning scores are the second lowest in Conference history. Carolina grabbed the title again in 1934 with a winning count of 31 points. Ed M-Rae, bounding blonde, won individual honors for Carolina that season.

The Blue Devils came back in 1935 with Bill Morse, greatest of their long distance runners, coping first honors. Duke's victorious count was 26.

Although Carolina won its seventh Conference team crown last season, Morse finally shattered Elliott's record with a scintillating 25:34 performance. Carolina garnered 32 points compared to Washington and Lee's 58.

Saturday the Tar Heels will be favored to win their eighth title. Carolina's best runners are Captain Andy Jones, Bill Hendrix, Jim Hall and Fred Hardy.

The New York Rangers have been particularly successful in developing hockey players in their farm system. Only three playing members of the current squad are not products of Ranger farms; Art Coulter, secured from the Chicago Black Hawks; Davy Kerr, purchased from the Montreal Maroons; and Butch Keeling, bought from the Toronto Maple Leafs.

Cecil Dillon and Ot Heller were developed at a former farm in Springfield. All the others have come through the present "Three R" chain—amateur Rover, minor-league Ramblers and major league Rangers.

The three were together in Vancouver three years ago and led the Pacific coast as a scoring unit. Two years ago, when Patrick was in the process of completing organization of his "Three R" chain, he brought Kirk east to play for Philadelphia, leaving Smith and Hextall in Vancouver. Bobby promptly led the Canadian-American circuit in individual scoring. Last year Patrick re-united the line by bringing Smith and Hextall to the rangers. Despite the fact that Kirk was on the sleds almost half the season with an injured foot, the line wound up the reorganized International-American league campaign as the outstanding combination in the loop.

Patrick expects big things of Kirk this season. The youngster is a colorful performer with a lot of personality. He is a Scot born in Belfast, Ireland. He moved to Canada as a boy, and learned his hockey in and around Winnipeg.

Within the last two years Patrick has brought up from the Ramblers no less than eight players—and, except for a goalie, could ice
