TAX REVISION ADVOCATED AS BUSINESS AID

Roosevelt Reveals Stand At Press Conference

FAVORS PRIVATE HOUSING PLAN

To Ask Curtailment of Annual Federal Contribution to State Road Programs

Washington, Nov. 26. (AP)—President Roosevelt coupled today renewed advocacy of tax revision as soon as Congress is ready with three other moves designed to aid business.

Listed at a press conference in reply to questions they were:

A message to Congress Monday on means of stimulating private financing of a big housing program. A message to Congress Tuesday recommending curtailment of annual federal contributions to state road building. This policy recently was suggested by Secretary Morgenthau to help balance the Treasury's budget.

A letter to department heads urging faster spending of a quarter of a billion dollars available for buying supplies in the remaining months of the year.

How soon tax revision might be "ready" was not immediately apparent, however. Chairman Vinson (D-Ky.) of a House Tax Sub-committee, said today he would have no objection to bringing legislation easing business tax burdens before the special session if it could be completed in time.

But, he said, he could not fix a probable date on which a measure might be ready, adding "We are just working as hard and fast as we can."

"While the White House discussed business aids, congressional leaders talked of dollar stabilization and foreign marketing as adjuncts to pending "ever-normal granary" measures to aid agriculture.

The Senate Agriculture Committee suggested a single Federal agency to adjust and regulate the currency, adding the dollar was buying too little now.

Chairman Jones (D-Tex.) of the House Farm Committee, announcing approval by his group of a crop control bill, said its most important feature was a step to widen markets and broaden distribution of agricultural products.

FORD PLANT OPERATES DESPITE STRIKE

Police held by jeering pickets as many carloads of men entered the assembly plant of the Ford Motor Company at St. Louis despite a strike called by the United Automobile Workers of America. Plant Manager N. M. Johnson said 584 men were at work.

STRIKE FAILS TO HALT WORK

Production Continues At St. Louis Ford Plant

St. Louis, Nov. 26.—(AP)—Striking UAWA workers, massing a heavy picket line with the aid of other CIO unions, failed today in a second attempt to halt production at Ford Motor Company's St. Louis assembly plant.

The picket line, formed in the early morning darkness, was broken with little disorder by automobiles loaded with workers and escorted into the plant by police cars. At dawn the first motorcade of 30 automobiles approached the main gate, where a police detail watched milling pickets closely. A few stones were thrown.

An hour and a half later a count made by an Associated Press staff member and four other news men showed 474 workers had entered the plant in 137 cars. The count showed 353 of the men drove into the grounds in the first hour.

The gate remained heavily policed although the large picket line dwindled as sympathetic men dropped out to go to their jobs in other industries.

Delmond Garst, UAWA regional director, told strike leaders and union officials at a pep meeting later.

Waynick Resigns From State Job

Faleigh, Nov. 26.—(AP)—Governor Hoy announced this afternoon Capus Waynick had resigned as state director of purchase and contract return to the editorship of the High Point Enterprise.

"It is with sincere regret that I accept Mr. Waynick's resignation effective December 15," said the governor. "He has done a magnificent work and I have the highest admiration for his splendid service to the state. I regret and I know the people of the state regret that he saw fit to leave the public service."

Hoy said Waynick's successor would be named in a few days. As director of purchase and contract, Waynick has received a salary of $6,600 yearly. He was a chairman of the State Highway and Public Works Commission and director of the State Reemployment Service before he was named to his present position.

Liquor Stores In State Show Increase In Sales

Raleigh, Nov. 26.—North Carolina liquor sales will be much heavier this month than last, when the second set of complete sales figures showed that every ABC county in the state, with the exception of one, increased its receipts over September.

If the proportion between beverage tax receipts this month and for the corresponding part of October is a true criterion of liquor sales, the November total will almost double the $818,677 worth of liquor sold in October.

Through November 19 receipts from beverage taxes were $125,611.14 as against $65,380.93 for the same period of October.

Of course there is no certainty that this ration will be maintained through the rest of the month, in fact the probabilities are against it but it does seem certain that November liquor sales will be far in excess of October's.

TOBACCO

When the Greenville tobacco market closed for the Thanksgiving holidays a total of 62,526,348 pounds of the weed had been sold here for an official average of $26.41 per hundred pounds.

Farmers have been paid $16,513,219.32 for their offerings on the Greenville market. The money already paid out by the local mart exceeds that for any entire year in its history.

The market will resume sales Monday after having been closed since Wednesday.

ANSWER FILED IN $50,000 SUIT

Denies Late Dr. Davis Responsible For Fatal Wreck

An answer has been filed in the offices of the Pitt County Clerk of Court to the $50,000 damage suit brought by C. Heber Forbes, administrator of the estate of Charles Heber Forbes, deceased, against W. A. Allen, Jr., administrator of the estate of Dr. F. Marion Davis, deceased.

The answer was filed by Albion Dunn, counsel for the defendant. Both Mr. Davis and Charles Heber Forbes were killed in an automobile accident near Morehead City on Sunday, November 15, 1936. The complaint contended that the automobile, owned by Dr. Davis, was being driven at an excessive rate of speed under the direction of Dr. Davis and the tires on the automobile were worn to such an extent they were unsafe.

After admitting preliminary sections in the complaint, the answer alleges that the accident was due to no act or fault upon the part of the defendant's interstate, but was occasioned when a tire on said car unexpectedly and without warning blew out; that the bursting of said tire, in the exercise of ordinary care, could not have been reasonably foreseen by defendant's interstate, and was an accident, "pure and simple and in no wise due to any negligence" upon the part of the driver.

It further contends that if the tire was in a weakened condition, such condition was well known to plaintiff's interstate, who had on many previous occasions ridden in said car with defendant's interstate.

In affirmative defense, the answer contends that plaintiff's interstate at the time of the accident were engaged in a joint enterprise, wherein the expense of the trip was being borne equally.

The answer alleges that at the time of the accident the plaintiff's interstate was seated in the front seat, "where the driver could be and was under his direct supervision and control; that defendant's interstate himself, at the time, was sitting in the back seat of said car, engaged in a conversation with one of the young ladies who was accompanying the interstates upon said trip, and was unaware of the speed of said car and had no knowledge that said car was proceeding at any such speed as is alleged in the complaint; and if said car was traveling at any such speed as is alleged, it was due to the act and conduct of plaintiff's interstate who was fully aware thereof and fully acquiesced therein, the plaintiff's interstate being at the time in a position to control the operation of said car, the driver thereof being under his direct control; and if the car was proceeding at any such speed as is alleged, it was due to plaintiff's interstate's own negligence in permitting the driver to operate said car at any such rate of speed."

On command of the bandits the conductor brought the train to a halt. Then Sipple Webb, 65-year-old Negro, tripped Lorenz, who shot Webb as he fell sidewise.

Rescue Seamen From Steamer In Distress

Miami, Fla., Nov. 26.—(AP)—Tripacol radio was advised today the 17 seamen remaining aboard the British freighter Nollington Court, in distress off Haiti had been rescued, but the vessel was a total loss.

A message from the tug Killereg relayed by the Steamer City of Manchester, said: "Tug Killereg took the remaining 17 crew from Nollington Court; is a total loss. All lives saved."

Alleged Bootlegger Arrested By Sheriff

Sheriff S. A. Whitehurst yesterday arrested James Williams, Negro, of "Skinner's Ravine", on charges of possession of liquor for the purpose of sale.

The sheriff said about a pint of bootleg whiskey and a quart and a half of ABC liquor were found on the Negro's premises.

RENEW EFFORT TO END STRIKE OF BUS DRIVERS

Police Protection Provided Busses in Several Cities

TIE-UP IS FELT IN SIXTEEN STATES

Officers Convoy Buses In and Out of Terminals Following Outbreaks

Cleveland, Nov. 26.—(AP)—Greyhound busses moved in and out of terminals under police protection in several cities today as a Federal labor conciliator resumed peace efforts between striking union drivers and officials of eight Greyhound lines operating extensively in 16 states.

John Conner, Labor Department Conciliator who flew here from Washington, said he would meet separately again today with company representatives and officials of the Brotherhood of Railway Train men. The Brotherhood called the strike yesterday after a break-down of negotiations over their demands for a closed shop and a mileage wage rate increase.

Conner said he talked to both sides yesterday. "They are pretty well deadlocked. I don't know that I'll even attempt a joint meeting," he said. Meanwhile company and union officials issued conflicting claims of the strike effect on bus operations.

Police conveyed busses in and out of Cleveland, Boston and other cities following outbreaks of violence.

Score Prison For Regulation Laxity

Albany, N. Y., Nov. 26.—(AP)—The New York State Correction Commission reported today "a laxity in regulation and control" at the Onondaga county penitentiary at Jamesville, N. Y., where three convicted O'Connell kidnappers escaped November 16.

"Members of the guard force interrogated were unanimous in stating that at no time had they received any instructions as to the searching or frisking of cells for contraband and that at no time had they made such examinations," the commission said.

The report was made after an investigation was conducted following the escape of John Oley, Percy Geary and Harold Crowley, facing long Federal prison terms for the 1933 kidnapping of John O'Connell, Jr., of Albany.

Places Available For Sales-Ladies

Sales ladies and clerks with experience are apparently scarce in Greenville.

The Greenville office of the State Employment Service has been unable to fill calls for experienced clerks to work in local stores and to act as cashiers in certain establishments.

With many positions of this type to be filled the local office is expecting an increasing number of calls for this type of worker because of the approaching Christmas season.

"Anyone with experience who could qualify in this line of work might do well to register at our office before the Christmas rush," said W. G. Cherry, Jr., manager. "There has been a number of openings already and we are expecting more in the near future," Mr. Cherry stated.

M. Garrett $10; E. J. Garrett $5; C. H. Webb $5; Ward & Lassiter $5; McGowan Warehouse $5; Forbes & Morton $5; Harris & Rogers $5; Smith & Sugg $10.

Mrs. Wohl Still Toying With Senate Race

Reflector Bureau Raleigh, Nov. 26.—Mrs. Helen Robertson Wohl hasn't been heard from publicly in recent days, but she is still toying with the idea of getting into the race for North Carolina's junior seat in the United States Senate.

The only woman ever to run for a statewide office in North Carolina is energetically seeking group support of her proposed candidacy. She denies to nobody that she has senatorial ambitions. She will freely admit to all and sundry that she thinks a woman should be chosen to fill an important office.

Mrs. Wohl is clear thinker enough to realize that her chances of election to the Senate cannot be truthfully termed "glowing," but she does believe she has issues on which to make a strong appeal to a large part of the electorate.

Negro Granted Reprieve Hour Before Death Date

Attorney Claims To Have Discovered "New Facts"

Raleigh, Nov. 26.—(AP)—Governor Hoy this morning granted a 30-day reprieve to Tommie Walls, just one hour before the Mecklenburg county Negro was due to die in the gas chamber at State's prison for first degree burglary.

Clemency was granted on petition of A. A. Tarlton of Charlotte, Walls's attorney, who said he had "new facts" to present. Parole Commissioner Edwin Gill announced.

Warden Hugh Wilson at Central prison notified Walls immediately as the Negro was spending what he thought would be his last hours. Chaplain E. C. Cooper of the prison was with him.

Gill said the postponement, which set Walls' death date for January 14 under state law, was made with the trial judge and solicitor having full knowledge and offering no objections.

Gill said he held long conversations with Tarlton late last night and gathered the lawyer wished to present what he would contend was (Continued on Page Six)

THREE BLAZES IN THREE DAYS

Thursday's fire practically destroyed a house on West Fourth street occupied by N. T. Hood, antique dealer, with a loss estimated by Chief Gardner at $3,000. A roomer, the only person home at the time, was said by the fire chief to have declared that he was asleep upstairs and when he awoke the room was filled with smoke and he did not have time to save anything. The house was almost a total loss. The fire broke out about 7:30 p. m.

The first of the three fires, Wednesday night about 11:30, burned the entire interior of a car owned by Larry James, who lives at the corner of Tenth and Charles streets. Chief Gardner said the blaze evidently started from a short circuit as someone reported hearing the horri sounding continuously a short while before the car was reported any serious accidents.

Churches In Pitt To Set Aside Date As Health Sunday

At the request of Rev. R. C. Grady secretary of the Pitt County Ministerial Union, all churches in Pitt county will observe one Sunday between now and Christmas as Health Sunday, at which time the pastors will bring to the attention of the congregation tuberculosis as a great social problem.

The National Tuberculosis Association has designated Sunday, Nov. 28, as Health Sunday. The following letter has been addressed to members of the Pitt County Ministerial Union by its secretary, Rev. R. C. Grady:

"As ministerial representative of the Pitt County Tuberculosis Association, I am asking your cooperation in giving your influence and support to the Tuberculosis Christmas Seal sale which begins throughout our county on Thursday, December 2.

"The association desiring Sunday, November 28, to be publicized as Health Sunday, the enclosed material I sent you with the earnest hope that you will use same for a presentation of this pressing cause at that time.

"On account of our large Negro population, the mortality from tuberculosis in Pitt county is very high. Even though much stress has been made in the control of tuberculosis, it is still the leading cause of death between the ages of 15 and 45. One encouraging aspect in our fight to control tuberculosis is the fact that the County Commissioners have wisely provided 11 individual cottages for the segregation of advanced cases of tuberculosis.

"Surely the members of our newly-formed Pitt County Ministerial Union will give their fullest cooperation toward the prevention and removal of such a scourge as is tuberculosis."

LAKE CROSSED BY JAP FORCES

Commander-in-Chief of Nipponese Shanghai Armies Declares Campaign To Bring About Speedy Collapse of Chiang Kai-Shek's Regime

Shanghai, Nov. 26.—(AP)

—Spearhead units of Japan's Shanghai armies tore into the heart of Chinese defenses today in a drive their commander-in-chief declared would force speedy collapse of General Chiang Kai-Shek's regime.

Field officers sent back word to Japanese headquarters their troops had crossed Lake Tai, the great natural barrier between Shanghai and Nanking for a push against the virtually evacuated capital.

General Matsui, commander of Japanese forces, proclaimed in an interview with the Japanese-Shanghai United News his armies might be forced to invade the interior far up the Yangtze from Nanking unless Chiang's government ends its resistance.

"Nanking must abandon its policy of depending upon European and American aid and European and American people must understand that their support of the Chinese policy never will contribute to security and peace in the Orient," he asserted.

The general added a prediction, however, the Chinese regime would fall soon, bringing about "various troubles" which would be settled under Japan's guidance. Chiang, he said, must be brought to terms.

In Nanking Chiang appeared undaunted by the Japanese march on the Shanghai peninsula. "China will resist to the last man," he said.

Home Occupied By N. T. Hood Completely Destroyed

A fire a day for the past three marred this month's record here just as it was beginning to look as if November would go by without a single alarm.

A Negro dwelling house on Short street, owned by L. W. Tucker and occupied by Gloria Speight, was damaged by fire this morning. Chief George Gardner, who estimated the loss at $100, said the blaze evidently started from a defective flue.

Thursday's fire practically destroyed a house on West Fourth street occupied by N. T. Hood, antique dealer, with a loss estimated by Chief Gardner at $3,000. All officers report quiet Thanksgiving

Police headquarters, Sheriff's office and Highway Patrolmen reported this morning that Thanksgiving Day was unusually quiet in this section.

All three offices reported "every thing went off quietly" with only the usual few arrests during the day. None of the peace officers was reported any serious accidents.

Wohl is all for peace and she has the thought in the back of her head that a militant stand (if pacifists can take militant stands) for peace could strike a sympathetic chord in the hearts of many citizens.

She has repeatedly professed her desire for a law prohibiting declaration of war without the consent of the people. Such a bill now pending in Congress, and Mrs. Wohl believes that it should be pushed through to enactment.

She is still angling for united dry support, too; though the odd feature here is that Mrs. Wohl is inwardly much more in sympathy with Bob Reynolds than with a large number of dries to whom the term can be applied only politically—not personally. She like's Bob's New Deal stand and if a miracle were to happen she would be a New Deal senator herself.

WHITE-FLEMING NUPTIALS. A Beautiful Marriage And Brilliant Reception.

On Wednesday afternoon, 24th inst., at four o'clock a few friends witnessed a beautiful marriage at the splendid country home of Mr. Leonidas Fleming, 5 miles from Greenville, the contracting parties being his charming daughter, Miss Nannye, and Mr. James B. White, one of Greenville's most popular young merchants.

As the young couple entered the parlor, Mrs. Dr. E. A. Moyer played the wedding march and while Rev. A. W. Setzer made them man and wife the beautiful strains of "Oh, Promise Me" added solemnity to the impressive ceremony.

Immediately after the ceremony and congratulations of those present, the bride and groom and guests left for Greenville arriving there about five o'clock.

At night a reception was held at the palatial residence of Captain C. A. White, father of the groom. This reception was an occasion of brilliancy and elegance seldom equalled. The guests were received in the front hall by Mr. S. T. White and Miss Annie Sheppard, and were ushered into the east parlor where Mr. J. L. Fleming and Miss Lula White presented them to the groom and bride.

The guests then passed over to the west parlor where were displayed the bridal presents. Here the popularity of the couple was evidenced by the very large number of beautiful and serviceable presents they received.

The dining room was presided over by Mesdames W. H. White and R. W. King, and here the guests feasted to their hearts content.

The number of callers was large and the congratulations showered upon the happy couple were hearty and sincere. The entire occasion was one of ease, grace and elegance and will be long remembered as one of Greenville's most brilliant social gatherings.

Forget-me-not—true love, constancy.

Very bulky and bottom heavy, the flowers should be even taller.

Glass containers are most suitable for flowers of fine texture. Heavier blossoms go best in pottery or metal. In-betweeners—garden variety roses for instance—are very attractive in china containers.

Here's a partial list of the most popular flowers and their symbolism:

Rosebuds: white—two young to love; red—inclined to love.

Roses: bridal—happy love; deep red—admiration.

Violets: blue—faithfulness; white—modesty.

Gardenias—refinement.

Orchids—you are a belle.

Lilies of the valley—perfect purity.

Of adequate rest and fresh air we need not say much, except that excessive fatigue lowers vitality and resistance to infection.

Attention to proper clothing, so as to avoid chilling the body, is an important item in the prevention of colds. Exposure of the feet, head and neck regions to chilling temperatures causes a corresponding sudden change in blood circulation lower the vitality of the mucous membranes of the respiratory system. The barriers against infection are thus weakened, and colds may follow.

One of the earliest scientific observations on this score was made by Louis Pasteur. He found that chickens are ordinarily resistant to the anthrax germs, but chickens that have been immersed in cold water become susceptible to them.

Common experience has many times shown that a cold is likely to follow exposure to cold drafts, and after one's feet have been cold and wet for some time.

COLDS PREVENTION—II

Good nutrition, adequate rest, fresh air, proper clothing and the avoidance of chilling the body, notably the feet, head and neck, help substantially in preventing colds and minimizing the damage they do when contracted.

By "good nutrition" we have particularly in mind adequate vitamin intake. The claim that certain vitamins are specifically cold preventatives is not upheld by experience. But it is true that individuals suffering from vitamin deficiencies are likely to be more susceptible to cold infections.

Particular attention should be paid to the intake of vitamins A, C and D and, for good measure, vitamin B. These vitamins are contained in whole grain cereals, in the green leaf vegetables, in the citrus fruits, in tomato juice, in eggs, milk, cheese and butter fats, and in fatty fish foods.

To make certain of an adequate vitamin D intake, it is a wise precaution to add to the diet cod liver oil or one of the cod liver oil equivalents.

One does not and should not take vitamins for vitamins' sake. The so-called vitamin concentrates are to be used only on the doctor's prescription.

To insure an adequate vitamin intake, one needs only build his daily diet around the stable foods—whole grain cereals, eggs, milk, butter, cheese, fruits, green vegetables, plus meats and fish.

Don't wear your corsage with the flower up—if you want it to last.

There is a good reason for that, explains David Burpee, horticulturist. If the flower is down the sap still in the stem can run into the blossom, thus prolonging its life.

But if you're not Scotch enough to worry over the longevity of your corsage, wear it the way it looks best.

Mr. Burpee isn't a stickler for flower arrangement in table centerpieces, either.

Any rule can go by the board if you don't violate the principle of general design, he thinks. That means selecting containers that fit the general arrangement and suit the flowers to be placed in them.

Containers should be subordinated to the blooms. Put back reason the old rule about having flowers approximately one and a half times higher than their containers is a good one. But if the container is

The Characters
 Nina, ex-debutante, impulsively married David, hoping to end her love for her stepfather. Now she is falling in love with David and disgusted with Richard.
 Richard, the suave, handsome stepfather, proposed secret love to Nina.
 Honey, Nina's gay, childish mother, is wild about Richard.
 David, a bright young auto salesman with a small salary, adores Nina but begins to suspect something.
 Gracie, an old girl friend of David, still pursues him.

Chapter 46
Alarm Over Honey
 TO HER amazement, when Nina had pulled herself together enough to enter David's room, she discovered that Gracie had not told him.
 "Who was that, sweetheart?" he asked, casually.
 And, under Gracie's steady stare, she answered: "It was Richard, dear. Honey's out at a bridge party, and he dropped round to take me to lunch."
 "Oh—nice of him," said David. Gracie remarked: "Posies, too. A whole coffin load. Some attentive step-papa, I'd say. Free meals—flowers. Where are they, Nina? Why don't you bring them in to David?"

"I'd keep my eye on that stepfather of yours," said Gracie playfully.

"I will."
 "Nice of him," said David again; and she went to get them.
 They weren't posies. They were autumn flowers—in profusion golden, bronzy things, that would have looked lovely against the blue walls, if they hadn't come from Richard.
 David knowing nothing of flowers, held the box to his nose.
 "Sorry—can't smell 'em. My cold, I guess."
 "Never mind, David." Gracie cut a slice of tomato with slow precision. "They don't smell—so good anyway."
 Her lunch hour would have to be over. Gracie would have to go eventually. Thinking of this was all that kept Nina going, as she sat with her tray on her lap, and tried to force bits of food down her dry, dry throat.
 And Gracie did have to go, after a while, of course—but not without a parting shot. Oh—no!
 "David, my boy," she told him playfully, "you're a mighty attractive kid—but if I were you I'd keep my eye on that stepfather-in-law of yours. He looks like a combination of the dark Arrow Collar man, and Ronald Colman—and no matter how many times Nina may have been cast in the part, she's no Ice Maiden at heart!"
 Another gay, teasing laugh. "Dun say a didn' warn y'a pal. Dun say a didn' warn y'a pal."

Nina's Thinking Chair
 WHEN Gracie had gone, and Nina came back into the bedroom from clearing up after lunch, David said: "Hey—what's this about ole Richard? Does he make a practice of barging in unexpectedly like this?"
 And Nina said, evenly: "Well no, he hasn't so far," and truthfully: "I certainly hope he doesn't make a habit of it!"
 "After all... why should he?"
 Nina tried to interpret his look. "Gosh, darling, I'm sure I wouldn't know!"
 And that seemed to be that, about Richard.
 David became involved with a detective story, and the apartment was very still.
 The apartment was very still, but Nina's thoughts were whirling round, like the wheels of a busy machine.
 Quite deliberately, this time, she went to one of the straight-backed walnut chairs. She seemed to be able to think better there; she always had.

 "Nina," she told herself, "you were a fool to imagine you could just slip back into a normal happy life with David, as though nothing had happened... to think that you could be disloyal and wicked, and never have anyone suspect. Nina—you thanked the Lord too soon, that day in the kitchen, the past is creeping up on you!" And she didn't mean it flippantly at all.
 She began to have a panicky feeling of fright, so she tried very hard to tie herself down to being almost mathematical about her problem.
 Those two peculiar telephone calls that David had overheard, and caught her up on—and now Richard's visit, at an hour when her husband would ordinarily be away... Those three things had set her thinking, Nina was pretty certain. But were they enough in themselves to make it advisable to confess everything? Or would they happen?
 What would hurt David least? That was all Nina thought of.
 With everything in her, she wanted to tell him all about it, so that there would be nothing to hide between them, so that he would realize how truly she repented, and how deeply she did love him now. But Nina had always thought of the old adage: "Confession is good for the soul," as being a pretty run thing to follow. For a little good to your own soul, you were apt to wound someone else quite terribly—and often unnecessarily too.

 But in her case wasn't it, perhaps, necessary? If she wasn't to tell him until a succession of suspicious events had made him distrust her, wouldn't it then be too late for him ever to believe in his wife again? Wouldn't he think Nina was breaking down, merely because she was cornered—and not because she wanted to be open with him?
 And yet, viewing it from another angle, if nothing else happened—and after all, what could, with her new fierce desire to play fair?—wouldn't she be causing him an unhappiness that he might easily have been spared?
 Simplified, it came down to a question of how much he suspected, already; and Nina couldn't be sure.
 He was a little—well, queer, to-day, but then he was sick. Nina decided to watch and wait for a while. It would be agony... but it did seem the best thing.

'A Mild Cardiac'
 DAVID was better the next day, and went back to work.
 Shortly after he had left, the telephone rang and it was Dr. Fellows.
 "Well, Nina, my dear, how are you?" he began leisurely.
 But Nina was too alarmed to wade through the old doctor's kindly preliminaries.
 "Oh, what is it, Dr. Fellows?"
 "Honey, I know."
 "Yes, you and I have always been sort of conspirators together, about looking after her... so I knew you would want me to call you in now. I've put her to bed, Nina, I want you to help me keep her quiet."
 "Oh—Dr. Fellows—of course I will, but what is it?"
 "Her heart, child."
 Nina gave a little cry of alarm. He talked then, kindly. He said: "A mild cardiac... Your mother has always had a nervous heart..." He said: "...strain, and nervous excitement..." and grave things about checking it in time.

Nina's fears about David loom larger.

David's Skeptical Look
 SHE was so full of thoughts about Honey, when she returned home, that her own problems were forgotten; but when David came in, and she spoke to him about her mother... they all came back again.
 "... and I'll have to be over there a lot, David. She loathes staying in bed, and Dr. Fellows says she simply must. If I'm at the house every day... right there where I can talk to her when she gets restless."
 It was then her own problem came back.
 David had glanced at her, with a peculiar skeptical look in his eye, and then walked over to the mantel.
 Nina realized what was the matter at once... if it was anything... if she wasn't just imagining things.
 It could look as though she were manufacturing an excuse to be near Richard. David could think that it was ridiculous for Nina to have to hover constantly over her mother to keep her in bed.
 She said quickly: "You don't know Honey as well as I do, darling. She's awfully bad about admitting she's sick. Why, I've seen her get up and start fussing round her room, when the nurse was out, and she was near to pneumonia, one time, really! She's an infant, and you've simply got to watch her."
 Had she said enough? Too much?
 This weighing her words and David's... this interpreting his every look, was intolerable. It would be too much for her soon.
 He said: "Well—watch her then, of course, Nina." And after a minute: "I'm frightfully sorry. Is there anything I could do?"
 "Run in and see her sometime. Kid her about her important-sounding ailment... she's not to worry."
 So David did run in, the very next afternoon, most unexpectedly; and as luck would have it, Honey had just gone to sleep. Nina was coming down the stairs with her hat on, to go on an errand for her mother... and Richard had just come in. He was standing at the foot of the steps, with his hat still in his hands.
 It looked for all the world, when Bridget held open the front door for David, as though Nina and Richard were just on their way out together.

 As a matter of fact, that thought had very probably been in Challenger's mind, when he saw his stepdaughter dressed for the street... but it certainly wasn't in Nina's. She had avoided him, studiously, all the morning, and had begged for a cup of tea at Honey's bedside—rather than have lunch with him, alone.
 Nina said, to David: "Oh, hello, darling! What a shame Honey just went sound asleep, 10 minutes ago... You were sweet to come, but I hate to wake her."
 David was looking from one to the other.
 "Afternoon, David," said Richard.
 "Hello," and to Nina, "Too bad, I'll run along, then." He turned toward the door.
 He didn't ask her if she were going out—though he must have seen that she was, and if he hadn't thought she was going with Richard he would certainly have suggested walking a few blocks with her, since he had the time.
 Since he didn't suggest it, Nina had to. "I was just going to do an errand for Honey. Walk a ways with me, darling?"
 David glanced at Richard, who put his hat down on the table. It was a significant gesture. He said: "I'm out of it, then..."
 "Sure," David agreed, and held open the front door.
 Nina went through it with the barest nod for Richard... and afterwards she wondered if she had seemed too cool. Suspiciously cool. Would David think...?

The Apartment Situation
 THAT'S what the days were full of now: fears and wonderings. It seemed to Nina that, at the height of her infatuation for Richard, she had never appeared so guilty as now... when all she wanted was to be rid of him, to make a fresh start.
 There was something very funny about it. Wasn't there a play about a man who wasn't caught for the crime he did commit, but was hung for one that he didn't?
 She really prayed, sometimes, that David would come out and accuse her, or make a real row, so that she would have to tell everything. That was what she longed for—but, even now, she wasn't sure enough that confession would be the right thing.
 She was afraid that some of her fears were merely figment of her overwrought imagination. David didn't do anything that you could put your finger on. He just didn't seem as—close.
 He seemed to want to have people at home, more than he used to—Cordelia, Jack... Even Francine, the model, and Bill... and of course, Gracie. It didn't seem to be enough seeing her all day at the salesrooms.
 And about the apartment, he had given up the idea of hunting for a new one. He came home about the third day of Honey's illness and showed Nina a floor plan of an apartment on 53rd street.
 "A fellow in the office—Melton—may want to sublet for a year, on the first of the month... May be going out west, and his lease has another year to run. It's a knockout apartment, as you can see, and he'd be willing to let it for $50, if he could use the servant's room, to store some of his things."
 Nina grew enthusiastic. The floor plan was awfully attractive.
 "Sounds like a simply marvelous chance, doesn't it, sweetheart?"
 "Yeah," he agreed. "But Melton's not absolutely sure yet... what do you say we let it ride for a few days, till he makes up his mind? We still have nearly three weeks of our month's notice."
 Heavens! Only 10 days since she had journeyed up to Tarrytown with Richard... and hated herself and found herself, and fallen in love with David? It seemed more like 10 years!
 So David had apparently dropped the idea of hunting further. For several nights running, Nina asked him: "What about the apartment, darling? Has Melton made up his mind yet?"
 But Melton didn't seem to be able to... and David didn't seem to care.
 He said: "Plenty of time, yet..." and, at first, Nina thought it was just masculine carelessness about household arrangements.
 She thought he didn't realize what a big job it was to move... and then, gradually, another disquieting thought crept in. Was he putting it off, deliberately? Was it possible that maybe, he didn't want to go on with her? Oh Lord, what should she do?
 Everything seemed to be coming at once. Honey's illness; the decision about moving; worrying and wondering about David... Nina was nearly frantic. And Gracie, too... what about her? Was Gracie trying to turn David against her—Nina? Was he falling in love with the girl...?

Chapter 47
Fears And Wonderings
 "I HAVE told your mother that she has merely strained a heart muscle, and must rest it for a while," Dr. Fellows explained to Nina. "She must not be alarmed about her condition, you see, because she should lie as quiet as a mouse for weeks... but if she worried and fretted over herself, it would not do her the good it should."
 "I see. I'll stay with her all I can, Doctor, and try to keep her calm and cheerful..."
 "After a week or so there will have to be more tests made, but for the present she must stay in bed."
 Nina said: "Is it—dangerous?"
 And he answered thoughtfully: "It—could be. Our job is to keep it from reaching an advanced state. Though I'm bound to say, it has progressed rather rapidly, as there were no alarming symptoms—other than fatigue—in the spring, when I recommended that she take the cure."
 "Dr. Fellows, you'll tell me—honestly—how she is getting along, won't you?"
 "Yes, my dear."
 "I have a right to know."
 "Of course, Nina..."
 Nina was over at the 74th street home within the hour.
 "And what," she inquired, "is the matter with you, my love? Pretending not to know. A hang? Were you out last night, Honey?"
 "No, it's just one of old Dr. Fellows' little ideas, baby. He says I've strained a muscle round my heart... or something silly like that. Wants me to stay in bed a week... but I have no intention of obeying him, of course!"
 Honey looked rebellious and babyish, in her great ornate bed, but there were faint blue shadows under her blue eyes... reflections, they looked like; and once or twice Nina saw her wince a little, as from a sharp pain.
 Nina saw that it was going to be a job keeping her out of the bed, and she said: "Well, you'd better be good and do what he says, darling..."

The Apartment Situation
 THAT'S what the days were full of now: fears and wonderings. It seemed to Nina that, at the height of her infatuation for Richard, she had never appeared so guilty as now... when all she wanted was to be rid of him, to make a fresh start.
 There was something very funny about it. Wasn't there a play about a man who wasn't caught for the crime he did commit, but was hung for one that he didn't?
 She really prayed, sometimes, that David would come out and accuse her, or make a real row, so that she would have to tell everything. That was what she longed for—but, even now, she wasn't sure enough that confession would be the right thing.
 She was afraid that some of her fears were merely figment of her overwrought imagination. David didn't do anything that you could put your finger on. He just didn't seem as—close.
 He seemed to want to have people at home, more than he used to—Cordelia, Jack... Even Francine, the model, and Bill... and of course, Gracie. It didn't seem to be enough seeing her all day at the salesrooms.
 And about the apartment, he had given up the idea of hunting for a new one. He came home about the third day of Honey's illness and showed Nina a floor plan of an apartment on 53rd street.
 "A fellow in the office—Melton—may want to sublet for a year, on the first of the month... May be going out west, and his lease has another year to run. It's a knockout apartment, as you can see, and he'd be willing to let it for $50, if he could use the servant's room, to store some of his things."
 Nina grew enthusiastic. The floor plan was awfully attractive.
 "Sounds like a simply marvelous chance, doesn't it, sweetheart?"
 "Yeah," he agreed. "But Melton's not absolutely sure yet... what do you say we let it ride for a few days, till he makes up his mind? We still have nearly three weeks of our month's notice."
 Heavens! Only 10 days since she had journeyed up to Tarrytown with Richard... and hated herself and found herself, and fallen in love with David? It seemed more like 10 years!
 So David had apparently dropped the idea of hunting further. For several nights running, Nina asked him: "What about the apartment, darling? Has Melton made up his mind yet?"
 But Melton didn't seem to be able to... and David didn't seem to care.
 He said: "Plenty of time, yet..." and, at first, Nina thought it was just masculine carelessness about household arrangements.
 She thought he didn't realize what a big job it was to move... and then, gradually, another disquieting thought crept in. Was he putting it off, deliberately? Was it possible that maybe, he didn't want to go on with her? Oh Lord, what should she do?
 Everything seemed to be coming at once. Honey's illness; the decision about moving; worrying and wondering about David... Nina was nearly frantic. And Gracie, too... what about her? Was Gracie trying to turn David against her—Nina? Was he falling in love with the girl...?

COWS IN STATE STAND AT TOP
 Ahead of Average for All Cotton-Growing Areas
 Raleigh, Nov. 22—North Carolina dairy cows stand ahead of the average for all the cotton-growing States, according to Prof. R. H. Ruffner, of State College.
 In this State, the average annual production per cow is 3,400 pounds of milk, while the average for all the cotton states is 3,100 pounds.
 The cotton States average drops to 2,500 pounds when the high producing States of California and Arizona are excluded, he added.
 But North Carolina's state average of 3,400 pounds is far too low, Professor Ruffner declared. The average for cows in the State Dairy Herd Improvement Association is 6,800 pounds.
 And many individual cows have made official records of 10,000 to 15,000 pounds of milk a year, he continued.
 Feeding a better balanced ration, with an abundance of good pasturage, would do much to increase the milk production of North Carolina cows.
 When cows are on good pasture, their daily ration should also include about one pound of grain mixture for every four pounds of milk they give.
 Cottonseed meal, which is plentiful in the South, supplies proteins needed to produce milk, maintain body tissue, to produce energy, and to keep the vital organs functioning properly.
 In winter, when pasturage is less abundant, the concentrated rations should be supplemented with a good roughage such as silage and legume hay. Cottonseed hulls may be mixed with the concentrates to make them lighter and more bulky.

Thanksgiving Day has passed and a month from today the same will be true of Christmas. This means that there are just 24 more shopping days before Christmas and that is not much time in which to do your Christmas planning and shopping. The early shopper not only avoids the fatigue that accompanies the last minute rush but likewise gets the choice of the merchandise while stocks are complete. Avoid the disappointment of last minute shopping this season by getting at your Christmas shopping now.

The annual sale of Christmas Tuberculosis seals is under way at this time and it is to be hoped that our people will buy and use these little seals generously during the coming Christmas season. The proceeds from the sales of these little seals is used for the purpose of trying to stamp out tuberculosis and the larger part of the money derived from the sales here is used locally. Not only will the purchase of the seals help greatly in the fight against tuberculosis but the use of the seals on your Christmas packages, letters, etc., will make them more attractive. Buy and use Christmas seals to the limit is a good motto for our people at this time.

Labor Department Pens Editorial On Collier's Article

Declares Living Conditions in Cotton Mill Villages of States Regarded Fairly Satisfactory

Raleigh, Nov. 24—This month's issue of North Carolina Labor and Industry publication of the state department of labor, has a two column editorial comment on a recent article in Collier's national weekly, of November 13 in which Walter Davenport commented on mill conditions in South Carolina under the title "All Work and no Pay."

Mr. Davenport dealt with conditions he found in the Greenville-Spartanburg district of South Carolina, and was particularly caustic in his condemnation of company stores and the practice of paying workers in script redeemable only at these stores.

Of this the Department of Labor editorial said: "We are not going to argue with Mr. Davenport about the company store evil which he says he has found in a sister state. It is an evil we have always fought and will continue to fight—we are not saying that Mr. Davenport has painted a picture which is literally true. For the sake of emphasis he may have exaggerated slightly, but we doubt if a careful check-up will disprove any material statement in his article. He will not be fair to South Carolina, however, if he lets it go as it stands, creating as it does the impression that all of the numerous mill towns in South Carolina are like the ones he selected for his study.

"If Mr. Davenport comes to North Carolina and searches around he will find some textile establishments that maintain company stores—but all of our cotton mill women are not Mrs. Lingers with their lips loaded with snuff.

SHORT SHOTS By HENRY AVERILL

Raleigh, Nov. 25—Twelve counties in Northeastern North Carolina now have 4,513 rural electric customers, according to figures compiled by the state Rural Electrification Authority. In these dozen counties there are 7,808 farms occupied by the owners, and so a bit of mathematical computation shows that there are 58 per cent as many users of electric power as there are owner-occupied farms.

The dozen counties, with the number of electric customers, are Currituck 212, Dare 350, Camden 193, Gates 247, Pasquotank 1,575, Perquimans 303, Chowan 478, Hertford 283, Bertie 237, Northampton 260, and Halifax 374.

Incidentally the REA officials have figured out that each of the 212 Currituck customers has purchased an average of $280.00 worth of electric appliances.

Some unkind soul has suggested that Senator Robert R. Reynolds who is now in a Baltimore hospital getting treatment for an infected ear, suffered the injury to this important organ by keeping it too close to the ground in an effort to hear the "voice of the people."

The advertising committee of the Department of Conservation and Development held a meeting Wednesday, but so far as can be learned little but routine business was transacted.

Raleigh's Commissioner of Public Safety, who has charge of the police stood in line in the Traffic Linup at City Hall recently and, without a murmur, paid a $1 fine his wife accumulated for parking in a loading zone.

Explosion of firecrackers, loud banging of torpedoes and the flare of Roman candles around the Wake County court house Wednesday night early didn't mean that anybody was celebrating Thanksgiving Eve. It was a concerted and concerted attack by Building Superintendent Edridge Smith and his henchmen on the thousands of starlings which have made eaves and cornices of the courthouse their nightly roosting grounds.

Once pigeons roosted there. They were bad enough, but the starlings which drove them away are even worse. Mr. Smith will tell you.

Major L. P. McLendon has recently been mentioned as a possible opponent of Bob Reynolds and Frank Hancock in the Senate race. A day or so ago a court authorized payment of a $75,000 fee in the celebrated Reynolds case to the firm of which the Major is a member. It will come in handy if the good major should decide to get in the race.

Most comment on Gregg Cherry as a possible contender for the senatorship has been favorable; but so far there's an angle political commentators seem to have overlooked.

While Cherry, as speaker of the House, was consulting the galleries and at times even the hard-to-amuse newspaper men, with his wackiness, he was at the same time making enemies right and left. It is human nature to want to get even with one who has humiliated you and there are at least a score of House members in whose mind memories of Gregg's biting shafts of sarcasm rankle. They'd like nothing better than to plunge the knife politically and figuratively peaking in Mr. Cherry's broad back.

Discontinuance Of Raleigh Air Stop Said To Be Stall

Reflector Bureau Raleigh, Nov. 21—Reasons assigned by Eastern Air Transport when it discontinued Raleigh as a stop on its through plane service between the North and Florida were nothing but a "stall" in the opinion of an airport expert with more than twenty years experience.

This expert, who asked that his name be withheld, said that it would make no difference how big the Raleigh field were made nor in what condition it might be put, the company would have some other reason or excuse for flying its ships over this state capital without dropping down onto its landing field.

The company said the through planes would not stop here because the field isn't long enough for them to land and takeoff safely. This disinclination of the company to make a stopping point of Raleigh is simply a matter of dollars and cents, the expert said, as landing and taking off here cost something like $80 to $100 for each stop he added.

Planes now in use on the north south air mail lines are of a type which must be flown at an altitude of about 8,000 feet, he said, a height which cannot be attained all at once by a plane taking off from a field. In fact it must fly something like 50 miles before it can attain the required height, the expert pointed out. More gasoline is used in making the climb, almost an hour's flying time is used. In addition, a ground force must be maintained when the plane is to stop at an airport.

All of which adds up to extra expense. As a result the companies are trying their utmost to eliminate all intermediate stops where no large amount of business is to be picked up. It saves them money. And so Raleigh can fix its field, but it won't get planes to stop here.

Washington Daybook

By Preston Grover

Washington—Keen disappointment was felt by some of labor's supporters in Congress that the President did not say in his message to the special session that while steps must be taken to offset the recession, the gains made for labor in the past five years should not be sacrificed.

The Wagner labor relations act already has been under fire by industrial groups and segments of labor. The American Federation of Labor at its recent Denver convention proposed amending the act to gain increased recognition of old-line craft unions. The A. F. of L. has contended that the performance of the Labor Board has always leaned toward the CIO headed by John L. Lewis.

Framers of the bill have argued such revision would invite tinkering which might weaken it.

Soft Words For Business

Industrial groups have demanded for employers the same right of appeal to the board as is now enjoyed only by labor. Labor's answer is that industrial groups already have, or practice, all the privileges granted labor in the Wagner act and that revision would give employers equal rights of appeal to the board would nullify its value to labor.

Already amendments proposing revisions have been introduced in Congress.

The President's message was so conciliatory toward business that it appeared to some to indicate a decisive swing to the right. Not in his five years has he used such soft words as were contained in the message to persuade business to come forward now and pull the country back from the brink of another depression.

It was those words which excited some of his labor-minded followers in congress to fear he would sacrifice overmuch of labor's gains to get the wheels of business rolling faster.

When's War War?

The new session will hear a thorough-going debate over the way the State Department has played its hand in the Chinese-Japanese conflict. Senator Nye blew in from the steppes of North Dakota hoping some one would introduce a resolution declaring that a state of war existed between Japan and China. So far, the President has refused to do this, with the result that the neutrality act has never been put into effect.

Senator Nye believes the President has been rightfully remiss in this respect but he was not prepared to put in the resolution himself until he had consulted some of his neutrality-minded pals.

In the 99 days since Congress adjourned last August, Nye has delivered 57 speeches of indignation over the President's failure to invoke the neutrality act embargo on the war in China. That is about one speech every 40 hours—a fair gait.

Just what might happen if congress should pass a resolution recognizing a state of war in the orient presents exciting possibilities. The constitution gives the President the tenor role in the opera of international affairs. For congress to take the initiative would be as novel as having a spearman in a Wagnerian opera throw down his gear, shove the leather-jerked Siegfried aside and began to sing his role. Would such a resolution bring the arms embargo into operation despite the President?

Passage of such a resolution might put the President to the necessity of appealing to the Supreme Court for protection of his own constitutional rights. That, too, would be interesting.

DUKE TO FACE PANTHER TEAM

Largest Crowd in History Southern Football Expected

Durham, Nov. 26—Those screaming Panthers of Pittsburgh, rated one of the greatest of all-time grid machines, will throw their high-powered and heavily-manned attack against the Blue Devils of Duke in Duke stadium tomorrow afternoon at two o'clock.

The Panthers arrived at Chapel Hill this morning and drilled briefly on Duke stadium field here this afternoon to complete preparations. The Blue Devils also took their final session in the stadium this afternoon. Both teams were reported to be in top physical condition.

The boys from Pittsburgh rule top-heavy favorites over the Blue Devils. Both the No. 1 and No. 2 Pitt elevens outweigh the Wademen and it is possible that Coach Jock Sutherland of the Panthers will start that second crew as the Wallace Wade-coached Blue Devils.

There are a scattered few who have picked the Blue Devils to win, evidently playing a hunch more than looking to the ability of the Blue Devils who have not shown as any time this season a defense that could be figured to stop the Panthers' great offensive attack.

This first meeting of Sutherland and Wade, the nation's two greatest veteran coaches from the standpoint of wins and losses, looms as the greatest day in the history of southern football.

The game may attract a crowd of 45,000 which would set an all-time southern record, the previous high having been the Duke-Carolina game of 1935 which drew 42,880 and the Georgia Tech game of several years ago and the Tulane L. S. U. game of last year, each of which drew 42,000. The Duke Carolina game of 1935 was first listed as having drawn 46,880 due to an error in transmitting the figure to the press box.

Duke officials have made every preparation to handle the crowd, increasing their own stadium force which will also be augmented by an increased number of Durham police and state highway patrolmen. Officials urge all who can to be in the stadium early. The gates will open at 11:30 o'clock and at the same time lunch stands in the stadium will be opened.

In the event Coach Sutherland elects to start his second club against the Wademen, the Pitt line up would be: Shaw and Hoffman, ends; Merkovsky and Delich, tackles; Tesze and Raskowski, guards; Adams, center; Chickerno Cassiano, Urban and Stupulis, backs.

Feature of the game will be the attempt of Duke's great running back, Elmore Hackney, to outshine that All-America Pitt star, Marshall Goldberg. Hackney may not get the blocking that Goldberg will get but he may get the Panthers back a few times with his dazzling running. Eric Tipton, Duke half-back, and Harold Stebbins, Goldberg's running mate, will also play prominent parts in the afternoon's proceedings.

Like the fans, a record breaking number of newspapermen will cover the game. Grantland Rice, the Dean of them, all will be in the press box, he will be accompanied at the game by Clarence Buddington Keiland, famous novelist and short story writer. Other outstanding sports authorities who will come include Eddie Brietz former North Carolina newspaper man now the noted columnist for the Associated Press in New York, Harry Grayson sports editor of NEA Service, Cleveland, Ohio, T. T. Scott, vice president of Fiction House, Inc., publishers of the "Football Annual." Practically every sports editor in Virginia, North Carolina and South Carolina will cover the game for their papers.

PHYSICS HEAD AT U. N. C. RECEIVES RESEARCH GRANT

Chapel Hill, Nov. 26—Dr. Arthur E. Ruark, head of the Physics department at the University of North Carolina, has received a grant of $250 from the American Philosophical Society to carry on his research of positrons and electrons. Dr. Ruark will carry out his studies with a Wilson Cloud chamber, built in the physics shop from plans prepared by Creighton Jones, graduate assistant in physics, in collaboration with Dr. Ruark. The Wilson Cloud chamber is probably the most powerful apparatus available to science for the study of individual atoms and electrons.

UNC PROFESSORS ATEND EDUCATION CONVENTION

Chapel Hill, Nov. 26—Six University of North Carolina faculty members are representing the institution at the fifteenth annual convention of the Northeastern District Teacher's Association, in Greenville, this week-end.

Professors A. K. King, G. R. Phillips, C. E. Preston, R. J. Mascha, Hugo Glavin and O. K. Cornwell are delegates to the convention.

Joan Edwards played practically every theater in the land, and who is credited with "discovering" Eddie Cantor, George Jessel, Georgie Price and a score of others.

EMIL MEDICUS WILL GIVE CONCERT AT UNIVERSITY

Chapel Hill, Nov. 26—Emil Medicus, of Asheville, nationally known musician, editor and teacher, will appear at the University of North Carolina Sunday afternoon on the Graham Memorial series of bi-weekly Sunday concerts.

Widely known as a flute player, Dr. Medicus is also a teacher, and editor of the magazine, "The Flutist." He will play in Graham Memorial at 5 o'clock.

A graduate of the Royal Academy of Music in London, England, he studied with the great Dutch flutist, Franssen.

nothing doing. On her own, the youngster, just out of Hunter college, went to Brooklyn, got a job on a small radio station. Six months later she was playing at the piano for a Manhattan station, singing in a night club on the side.

Uncle Gus wired he had a featured spot for her in his Hollywood air show. Instead of accepting, Joan barged into Rudy Valle's office, sang two numbers, emerged with a contract. She was with Valle for two months before he discovered her "good connections."

Joan's intimates have nick-named her "Luscious." Her greatest extravagance is perfume. She likes vivid colors, tailored suits, Mexican tamales.

"The trouble with 'good connections,'" she says, "is that they get you into a spot before you are ready for it."

TO PLAY HERE

Joe Haymes
Joe Haymes nationally popular arranger composer and director, will bring his famous all-star orchestra here for the dance next Wednesday night.
The dance, a combined script and invitation affair will follow ceremonies in the afternoon dedicating the new Armory. Governor Hoey will deliver the address at the ceremonies, which include a parade. The famous orchestra is being brought here through arrangements with Consolidated Radio Artists, Inc.
Heralded as "America's Swing Stylist," Joe Haymes has surrounded himself with a company of fifteen musicians and entertainers. Featured with the orchestra are Barbara Burns, Ronnie Chase and Clyde Rogers vocal soloists who have been heard with the orchestra on many of their NBC and CBS network broadcasts.
The popularity of Joe Haymes and his music is due in a great degree to the many phonograph recordings made by the bands. They have made numerous records for Victor, Brunswick and the Columbia recording companies and many are listed as best sellers.
Notable among the many engagements played by Joe Haymes the past few seasons are the Hotel McAlphin, New York City; Detroit Athletic Club and the Club Meadowbrook at Cedar Grove, N. J. They also played numerous college engagements in the East and Southwest and are particularly popular on the campuses of Harvard, Yale, Georgia Tech, Washington & Lee, Rutgers, Princeton and Cornell.
