Farm Bill, Passed By House, Up To Senate

COTTON QUOTA IS INCREASED

House Passage Crop Control May Break Up Jam

Washington, Dec. 11.— (AP) — Senators from the Southwest and far West succeeded today in increasing the cotton marketing quota for next year under the Senate farm bill.

Senator Hayden (D.-Ariz.) won approval of an amendment, which he said raised the 1938 marketing quota from the 10,090,000 bales previously provided in the bill, to 10,483,000 bales.

The Arizonian said most of the increase would go to states where 1937 production per acre was larger than elsewhere.

The bill had ordered the Secretary of Agriculture to divide the cotton marketing quota among states on the basis of these relations of the states' production to national production during the past five years.

Adoption of Hayden's amendment made North Carolina's quota 505,000 bales.

House passage of crop control legislation gave administration forces their first effective lever for breaking up the legislative jam which has blocked President Roosevelt's special session program.

Senator Barkley, Democratic leader, predicted the Senate would approve early next week a farm bill differing from the House measure in only two respects: The degree of compulsion and the methods of aiding farmers financially when prices are depressed.

The House, meanwhile, will begin consideration Monday of the wage-hour bill, which has aroused even greater controversy than the farm program.

Requisitions Sent In For WPA Materials

Conrad Z. Bailey, supervisor of Area No. 2, in cooperation with the present approval of purchase of materials, has announced that in Area No. 2, embracing the counties of Beaufort, Edgecombe, Hyde, Martin, Nash, Pitt, Tyrrell and Washington, has requisitioned materials to the amount of $14,000 to be purchased by April 1 1938.

The Works Progress Administration is also urging the sponsors to anticipate their needs for purchase of materials in advance, so as to increase the work on the program.

SNOW PROVES TOO MUCH FOR THE RESCUE PLOW TROOPS POUND NANKING GATES

Sitting on top of the huge blade of his snow plow, this Buffalo, N. Y., plowman presents a pretty discouraging picture. And who wouldn't be? For hours he battled one of the worst December storms in years in an effort to reach stranded motorists on the Buffalo-Niagara Falls boulevard, only to discover on reaching his machine that the 43-mile-an-hour gale was closing the road as fast as he could plow through it.

Occupy Wuhu And Score Gains On Other Fronts

Shanghai, Dec. 11.—(AP) —While Japanese troops still pounded Nanking's gates and walls tonight, another Japanese column captured the important river port, Wuhu, 60 miles up the Yangtze from the capital.

Japanese army commanders said occupation of Wuhu would make impossible a Chinese retreat from Nanking along the Scuth banks of the Yangtze.

They said it also would put Japan's forces in an advantageous position for a march on Hankow when ever a campaign were ordered against the city farther up the Yangtze where the Chinese have their seat of government.

Capture of Wuhu came while Japanese infantry charging behind lines of tanks were storming Nanking in a general attack. It followed reports that the Japanese had captured Chinkiang, 40 miles East of Nanking and Taiping, midway between the capital and Wuhu.

With fighting reported on the North banks of the Yangtze, fear was felt for the safety of two American missionaries, B. F. Stamps of Huntington, West Va., and Richmond, Va., and Mary Demerest of Emerson, N. J. They were at Yangohow and had not been heard from for two weeks.

Japanese commanders admitted their front ranks were meeting stiff machine gun and rifle fire from Chinese on the walls of Nanking.

The simultaneous attacks from three directions were pointed toward the center of Nanking. Japanese troops late yesterday had broken Nanking's inner wall and fought through the Southeastern gate. They had launched tank assaults on the Southern gate leading the heart of the city and the gate in the eastern wall.

Auto Seat Burned In Blaze Friday Night

Firemen were called to extinguish an automobile fire at 7:15 o'clock last night, in which the damage was confined to the front seat.

The car, owned by Jimmie Harris, was parked in front of his home and Chief George Gardner of the fire department said Harris told him that he was smoking when he got out of the car to go in the house for supper. It was believed that sparks fell on the seat and started the blaze.

Garden Club.

The Garden Club was delightfully entertained at the Home Economics house of the high school yesterday afternoon with Misses Schnopp and Rogers as hostesses, assisted by six Home Economics student teachers from the college, Misses Doris Mewborn, Ruby Lee Lynch, Janie May Robinson, Annie Lee Jeffords, Iren Kennedy and McKenzie Ross.

A very interesting four-part program was presented by these college students.

Miss Mewborn talked about Christmas decorations, both outdoor and indoor, from a three-fold point of view. They are, in the first place, the traditional expression of the Christmas spirit.

Proper cutting of the greens does no harm to the forests, but really encourages the growth of trees and shrubs. The scrubby trees may be cut and used for wreaths, and the forest be improved. She said that the holly should be cut with the greatest care because it is in danger of becoming extinct. Most of the holly trees left are male trees, because the female trees have been so ruthlessly cut for their berries.

Third, interest in Christmas decorations is very widespread and is increasing from year to year.

Miss Mewborn mentioned desirable types of trees for Christmas. The balsam, fir, and spruce are most favored, but the cedar and pine are much used in the south.

Miss Mewborn showed several small trees that had been treated with calcimine or silver paint, and explained how this was done. She showed suitable decorations for console table, mantle and fireplace.

As a climax she said that evergreens, candlelight, firelight and friends constitute the essence of Christmas.

Miss Jeffords had a table full of attractive samples of Christmas confections and showed the kind of Christmas candles that could be easily made and that would be a gift with a truly personal note.

She urged the members of the club to exercise their ingenuity and see what results they could get by using the basic recipe for each of the three types of candy, the cream of fondant type, the divinity type, and the caramel or taffy type.

Attractive ways of wrapping Christmas gifts was the subject of which Miss Kennedy talked. She also called attention to some of the new gifts and gave a demonstration of lovely spatter work on Christmas cards.

Miss Ross rolled in a table upon which was a cookie house with the candy fence made of peppermint sticks and a parade of animals dipped in chocolate. This was to show the children's part in Christmas decorations and Christmas cooking.

The hostesses served attractive refreshments in the Christmas manner, with Santa Claus and Christmas tree cookies and candy candles served with the tea and sweets.

College Play Enjoyed.

The Sophomore class of the college gave a rollicking presentation to a full house last night of the farce "The Arrival of Kitty," the first sophomore play to be attempted on the campus.

The play concerns itself with the farcical mix-ups resulting from the efforts of William Winkler, well played by Joe Braxton, to earn $10,000 by marrying his niece, Jane, to a man named in her father's will, whom neither has ever seen, and a second $10,000 by finding a bridegroom for his old-maid sister who is also named Jane.

When Winkler's sweetheart, an actress named Kitty, is impersonated by the young man who wishes to marry the niece, and Kitty herself arrives on the scene, matters become even more complicated.

However, after many laughable mistakes, all confusion is cleared up, Winkler earns his money and all are ready to live happily ever after.

Miss Alice Alligood of Fayetteville, though she was making her first appearance in a full-length play, did well in one of the leads, the part of Jane.

Robert Pittman of Ayden, who has appeared in "Gains and Gains, Jr.," and other productions earlier, and was a member of the cast of the freshman play last year, played opposite Miss Alligood. Pittman convulsed his audience a number of times in his impersonation of the actress, Kitty.

Geraldine Harris, a Greenville girl, who took part in dramatic productions in high school, played opposite Joe Braxton as Winkler, and gave a very convincing interpretation of Kitty's part.

The two character parts were played by Greenville students. Ethel Gaston was amusing as the very old-maidish and coquettish Aunt Jane, and Harvey Deal created gales of laughter by his interpretation of the ridiculous figure of Benjamin Moore.

Ting, a bellboy, and Sam, the colored porter, Leo Burks and John David Bridgers, both of Greenville, added their share to the merriment.

Miss Millie Gray Dupree of Angier, took the part of Aunt Jane's maid.

The play was ably directed by Clifton Britton, president of the class, who has had considerable experience in handling such productions. In addition to directing both the Senior Normal and Senior plays of last year, Britton has worked with dramatic groups in his home county.

The farce demanded, and had evidently had given, great attention to tempo, for it moved with enough speed that it did not give the audience a chance to grow restless, but kept them well amused.

The British royal state coach used at the coronation and other ceremonies was completed in 1761.

Another Surrenders As Police Approach Wrecked Car

Augusta, Ga., Dec. 11.—(AP)—One of two men who held up a filling station at Wrens, Ga., early today killed himself when police cornered them after an automobile wreck.

The second man crawled from under the car, hands overhead, and surrendered.

Police Captain George Folds said the man arrested gave his name as Hubert Davis of Roxboro, N. C., admitted the hold-up and said his companion was C. O. Whitt of near Roxboro.

C. H. Reeves, manager of the filling station, said the two men drove into his place, held him up, locked him in a rest room and took $13 from the cash drawer.

He kicked his way out and notified Chief Charles Brown of Wrens, who in turn notified the Augusta police.

Lieut. Jesse Powell said when the automobile did not stop he fired, puncturing the gasoline tank and a tire.

Police said the driver drew a gun and shot himself through the head after the automobile ran into a barricade and was wrecked. His companion then surrendered.

Folds was checking up to determine whether the two were part of either of the Bill Payne gang in North Carolina or of a gang which recently escaped from Sanford, N. C.

Seeing Through My Windshield

(By ETHEL NICE, H. D. A.)

The following 4-H clubs have met this week: Winterville, Grifton, Falkland, Grimesland, Farmville, Chocoma, Pierce, Fountain, and Bethel. The subject was "Table Setting" and "Table Etiquette." A brief review of the demonstration in memorandum form was given to each member for scrap book material. Your president, Mildred Edwards, says "Read it, read it to your parents, read it to your brothers and sisters—in fact—you cannot get too much of it." In the girl's separate division we made a further study of "Room Arrangement." In January the joint subject will be "Clean up the Home Grounds." The girl's will start their study of "Color Harmony for the 4-H Bedroom."

The 4-H Executive committee of Council met Saturday afternoon to plan the Christmas meeting. Each member will receive a letter concerning this meeting in a few days.

The Bethel Home Demonstration Club met Wednesday afternoon with Mrs. H. L. Rives. There was Christmas music and a Christmas story.

The Stokes Home Demonstration Club held their annual social meeting Thursday afternoon at the school building. We were invited into the auditorium to attend a bird show for a part of the time.

The Littlefield Home Demonstration Club met Friday afternoon with Mrs. C. L. Worthington. Christmas stories, music and games were enjoyed.

The rose and blue table cloths are here. We are expecting the green ones in a few days. There will be seven cents due on each loan.

Presbyterian Church To Present Pageant

On Sunday evening at 7:30, the Presbyterian Church will present its Christmas pageant.

"The Light Shinneth in Darkness" was written by Annie Graham King and is the pageant which is being used in most of the Southern Presbyterian churches this year in order to raise the "Joy Gift" for ministerial relief.

The following will take part:

First Reader, W. S. Brown; Second Reader, Mrs. E. T. Robeson; Abraham, W. C. Dresbach; Jacob, H. B. Keck; Moses, R. C. Deal; Isaiah, R. C. Grady; Traveler, Dean Tabor; Mary, Miss Frances Harvey; Joseph, E. W. Harvey, Jr.; Shepherds: J. N. Harrison, Louis Dupree, C. K. Beatty and Martin Beach; Wise Men: Howard Moyer, Leon Brock and Edward Conway; Angel, Mrs. Dink James; Candle-Lighters: Phoebe Nisbet, Mary Council Horne, Ethel Gaston, Vivian Hatem, Maude West and Edith Forrest.

There will be two choirs—the adult choir and the junior choir, which will be assisted by some of the College class. Mrs. Arthur B. Corey is in charge of properties, and Mrs. John Clark of decoration. Misses Elizabeth Deal, Christine Johnston and Eva Keeter are assisting in the presentation. Mr. Muilberger and Miss Jean Corey will accompany the choirs.

HIGHWAY FUND IS THREATENED

Roads Face Loss Of $9,000,000 Under FDR's Plan

Reflector Bureau.
Raleigh, Dec. 11.—North Carolina's highway funds will be short more than $9,000,000 in anticipated revenue for use next year, if President Roosevelt's plan to cut federal highway expenditures is adopted and if the state's financial losses should decide that diversion is authorized by the General Assembly is necessary.

According to L. W. Frazier, assistant engineer of the Highway Commission, North Carolina's anticipated allocation for 1938 from federal funds has been set at $4,300,000. Under the Roosevelt plan, he said, North Carolina wouldn't receive anything at all from the federal government for next year.

Diversion to the extent of 3 per cent on all gasoline sales in the state was authorized by the General Assembly of 1937, though the legislators did throw a protecting clause around highway funds to the effect that there shall be no diversion at all so long as there is any money available from general fund sources.

It has been estimated that this 3 per cent, subject to diversion, will amount to more than $4,000,000 for the biennium.

Adding these two sums together makes it appear that the Highway Commission may not have anything more than $9,000,000 which it has had reason to believe would be available.

Diversion of highway funds to other purposes first showed in North Official dispatches from General Francisco Franco's headquarters said the Insurgents won one of the greatest air fights of the civil war in the Zaragoza sector when they brought down 20 Government airplanes. The Insurgents said they lost but one ship.

The Government said six Insurgent planes were shot down in a large-scale encounter.

Three Insurgent battle cruisers shelled the port of Alicante on the southeastern coast for half an hour. Government sources reported casualties as two killed and forty injured. Shore batteries blazed away at the Insurgent warships.

The Insurgent dispatches on the Zaragoza air battle said Franco's planes concentrating from various airdromes in the Aragon sector, pounced on a fleet of 25 Government ships flying up the Ebro valley toward Zaragoza. The battle lasted 12 minutes, the Insurgents reported.

SHORT SHOTS

By HENRY AVERILL

Raleigh, Dec. 11—It's 621 miles and $2.17 is gasoline taxes from Manteo to Murphy, if you use the state's best highway and a car which averages 20 miles to the gallon.

The figures are easy to reach, a road map showing the mileage and a bit of simple arithmetic giving the total. If you make 20 miles to the gallon it will take you 31 gallons to drive the 621 miles. On each of those 31 gallons there is a state of 6 cents and a federal tax of one cent, or a total of $2.17.

Speculation over Capus Waynick's successor as director of purchase and contract will be ended either Monday or Tuesday with Governor Clyde R. Hoey's announcement of an appointment.

Director R. Bruce Etheridge, Department of Conservation and Development, and Assistant Director of the Budget, R. G. Deyton were testing grips in the Governor's an-teroom. The guardian of the state's finances seemed to be getting a bit the better of things.

"You might as well give up, Bruce," quoth Bob Thompson, the governor's secretary and an interested spectator. "He got that death grip squeezing nickels."

Governor Hoey has written a letter to "Handy Andy" Bershak, North Carolina's sensational end, congratulating him on the fact that he "made" Collier's All-American football team.

North Carolina's total of drivers' license revocations soared to 14,327
this week.

Raleigh's Christmas decorations on Fayetteville Street, the main drag, are quite pretty and when lighted up at night the effect is really brilliant; but there is still some reason to wonder why the "Merry Christmas" sign across the thoroughfare up by the Capitol wasn't faced the other way. The theory of those who put it up is that it greets folks as they turn into Fayetteville street, but many think it would look much better if it read right as the Capitol is approached.

State employees are giving mock thanks for the generosity of the budget bureau in announcing that Christmas holidays would begin
"after 5 P. M. Thursday, December 23," instead of saying that holidays would begin at "9 A. M. Friday, December 24".

College Class Hears Talk on Bird Values

The Ornithology Unit of the Zoology Society of Washington, D.
C., was represented at the college assembly Friday, Dec. 10, with a lecture on the value of birds. Interest was added by a demonstration with live birds of what can be accomplished by kindness in training them.

The speaker, a government man, talked of the prevalence and value of birds, mentioning incidentally that there are 38 kinds referred to in the Bible, that 12 kinds besides the parrot can be taught to speak that a bird's feather is the strongest thing in the world in proportion to size, and other interesting facts.

He showed a number of rare and beautiful birds, among them the African touracos, whose bright colored feathers fade when they get wet and only after twenty-four hours return to the original hues.
The Australian military cockatoo, one of which he had, can not now be imported from its home because of a law passed in Australia last November. That government is trying to prevent the extinction of the bird.

The most colorful bird exhibited was the macaw, the largest and most brilliantly colored member of the parrot family.

He also showed a few native birds trained to do certain things but discouraged the attempt to keep such birds in captivity, as they die quickly unless free.

After showing off his pets, which seemed absolutely free from fear, he came back to their value to the farmer, saying that they are of especial importance in the South because they help keep down the insects which the colder winters of the North do much to destroy.

The audience was highly entertained also by the antics of a family of monkeys which the ornitholo-gist had with him.

DIXIE HIGHLIGHTS

VICKSBURG MISSISSIPPI IN 1863 FROM AN OLD PRINT

NEWS PRINTED ON WALL PAPER

SO SCARCE DID NEWS PRINT BECOME IN VICKSBURG, DURING ITS HISTORIC SIEGE, ITS LOCAL PAPER WAS PRINTED ON WALL PAPER SCRAPS!

A COPY OF THE CITIZEN PRINTED ON BLUE AND CREAM PAPER, IS IN THE MISSISSIPPI ROOM OF THE CONFEDERATE MUSEUM IN RICHMOND,

WEATHER FORECAST BY INS-ET

THE COMMON CRICKET IS AN ACCURATE WEATHER PROPHET

Fried alley cat as a table delicacy and corn at $10.00 a bushel, among other items in the WALL-PAPER EDITION of the Daily Citizen of Vicksburg, offers ample evidence of the terrible hardships experienced within the beleaguered city during the "War between the States". Though staunchly Confederate in sentiment its last wall-paper edition, under date of July 2nd, 1863, had the unique distinction of being printed and distributed by members of Grant's invading army who entered the town two days later. Not an available inch was wasted though the paper contains little war news of importance. Items such as "Vicksburg is not defeated—help will surely come" and "Ulysses must get into the city before he dines in it" are typical of the optimism that was felt even while in the shadow of defeat.

In some parts of the South, farmers pay close attention to the antics of the CRICKET. The cricket is peculiarly susceptible to weather changes. His chirping is loudest and happiest in warm autumn weather, but declines with a falling temperature. In this way, farmers can quite accurately predict the advent of a frost.

DARE TO DREAM

BY ALICE MARIE DODGE

How's Your Health?

Edited for the New York Academy of Medicine

By Iago Goldston, M.D.

THE CHARACTERS
NELDA, a beautiful, dark-eyed, dark-haired girl, is forced to sacrifice her personal ambitions, and run a ranch.

RECK, blond, dashing and wealthy, is charming to Nelda.
BILL, a tanned young man with blue eyes, disapproves of Nelda.

MRS. RECKLESS, Reck's cold and arrogant mother, subtly warns Nelda that Reck is not for her.

LEILA, Nelda's selfish sister-in-law, wants the ranch divided.

Chapter Five

FACING STARK REALITY

"I'll have to think it over, Leila," said Nelda.

Leila smiled. "There's nothing to think over so far as I can see."

Nelda picked up the dishes at her place and carried them into the kitchen. There she met Uncle Ham.

"Leila been devilin' you about dividin'?" he whispered, his faded gray eyes bright beneath his bushy brows.

Nelda nodded.

Uncle Ham motioned toward the dining room with his cane.

"She's been crabbin' about the place ever since we came. It'll be much nicer here with her gone."

"But—" Nelda hurried past him. What was the use of telling him or anybody else that she detested living on a ranch, let alone running one?

Bill's blue eyes were like chips of ice.

Later, Nelda sought out Laura Sweeney in the kitchen.

She wanted to be firm and dignified, but her words tumbled out in a confused rush.

"Mrs. Sweeney, we can't afford to keep you any longer! This is a week's notice!"

"I don't know where to go," Mrs. Sweeney gave a dismal sigh and drained the contents of the coffee pot into her cup.

"Surely you can get another job" Nelda suggested.

"Jobs ain't hanging on trees these days," Mrs. Sweeney sighed again, and Nelda was touched. "If you'll let me stay until the first of the month maybe—" Mrs. Sweeney paused and looked piteously at Nelda.

"Well—" There was a gentleness in the girl's tone, and Mrs. Sweeney took advantage of it.

"Thanks!" she exclaimed and hurried into the dining room to gather up the dishes, leaving her coffee untouched.

Nelda let it go at that. She would try to find a job for the woman through the "Help Wanted" columns or through friends in the city.

Walk With Cinders

The household tasks finished, she put a little sweater on Cinders and started for a walk.

Candy ran after them, but was halted by her mother.

"Candis!" Leila called sharply. "Get in out of the cold! This is no place for—strolling."

"I gotta go back," the child whispered to Nelda. "She always calls me Candis when she's mad."

Nelda went on. Dew glistened, jewel-like on the grass and trees. The hale scent of damp earth met her nostrils. The ranch was dappled with soft lights and shadows made by the widening glow of the morning. A thin spiral of smoke rose where Stan was burning brush in the orchard. The denuded limbs of the trees gleamed whitely.

Nelda veered away from the place where Stan was working. She didn't want to talk to her brother now.

Bright tears brimmed in her eyes. She was thinking of her college-mates trooping gayly into warm classrooms while she was facing the stark realities of life. She toyed with a plan to work her way through college, but abandoned it when she recalled her mother's helplessness. There was not enough money to employ anyone to take care of her mother.

Cinders trotted ahead of her, stopping occasionally to poke his nose into a gopher hole.

At the end of the orchard Nelda paused beside the board fence that breasted the highway. Leaning against a post, she became lost in thought.

The snarling of dogs startled her out of her reflections. Casting a swift look around, she saw Cinders and fox terrier fighting across the road. She scrambled over the fence, calling her dog's name.

A whistle cut the air. She saw a tall, masculine form silhouetted against the morning sunshine in a barren field on the side of the highway.

"Wiggly!" the man called sharply, but to no avail. The two dogs were going at each other like mortal enemies.

When the man came closer Nelda recognized him. He was Bill Langdon. By the time he reached them Cinders had his sharp little teeth sunk into Wiggly's ear and was hanging on stubbornly.

"Let go, Cinders! Let go!" Nelda pleaded, trying in vain to get hold of the bulldog. He managed to twist and squirm out of her way each time she came near him.

Encounter

Bill stepped right into the midst of the fray and in a few minutes had the animals separated. He grabbed his own dog and held him in his arms. The valiant little fox terrier wanted to renew hostilities, and Bill had difficulty in quieting him.

"What's the matter, Leila? Don't you want any sissy dogs in sweaters in your neighborhood?" he asked, a twinkle of amusement in his blue eyes.

"Sissy!" Nelda exclaimed angrily. "How about the beating he gave your dog?"

"But he had him fouled. Why—you've been crying!"

"I have not!" the tears came again in spite of her efforts to hold them back. She hated herself for this show of emotion before a stranger.

"Is there anything I can do?" Bill asked solicitously.

"Not a thing. You see I had to leave college to help here on the ranch, and I felt sort of—well, all caved in."

"Your name is Barrie, isn't it?" She nodded.

"I'm Bill Langdon. That's my

FIRST AID FOR MINOR BURNS

If you should suffer a minor burn (first or second degree), first aid treatment will be adequate if it provides protection against infection and affords you relief from pain.

One of the simplest treatments for minor burns, and preferable because the necessary ingredient is usually available in any kitchen, is to apply a paste-like mixture of baking soda and water. This should be thickly spread over the burned area, and may be kept in place with a bandage.

Just as effective is the application of a compress of a saturated solution of baking soda. A saturated solution is made by adding more of the baking soda to a given quantity of water than it will dissolve.

A saturated solution of magnesium sulphate may also be used to advantage in place of baking soda.

A very gratifying dressing for burns (gratifying because it is antiseptic, astringent and tends to deaden pain) is the picric acid compress. This acid, however, should not be applied to any burn involving a large skin area because the picric acid may be absorbed into the body and cause constitutional disturbances.

Oily dressings for burns are soothing, but are non-antiseptic. Consequently they do not effectively house down the road." He pointed to a small gray cottage about a quarter of a mile away.

"I'm not used to this sort of life," Nelda went on. "I planned to be a commercial artist and make loads and loads of money."

"Money." There was a bitter edge of irony in his voice. "I suppose you wanted to taste champagne, wear furs and orchids?"

"Of course. And some one to lift the cover off the soup tureen."

"I think you've got a bad case of egotism," was his surprising reply, a queer hard light in his blue eyes making them look like chips of ice. "You're acting as if you're the only person who ever had to take it." He wheeled and strode toward his home with something sturdy and grim in the whole set of his figure. The fox terrier ran ahead of him.

Nelda's eyes opened wide as she stared after him.

"Why—why," she sputtered, "the nerve of him!"

(Copyright 1937, Alice Marie Dodge)

Nelda finds herself on her own, Monday.

DOWN ONE IN HEARTS was Eli Culbertson, bridge expert, who sailed for England announcing, "I will marry any splendid English woman who closely resembles Mrs. Culbertson." His erstwhile partner and wife, having wired him bon voyage, was meanwhile en route to Reno with a divorce in the offing.

guard the sufferer against infection.

To overcome the deficiency in oily dressings, thymol, in proportion of one part to a thousand of the oily solution (carroll oil) or carbolic acid (phenol) in proportion of 4 cc. of phenol to 500 cc. of the oil, should be added.

It should be borne in mind that the heat which causes the burn also sterilizes the area affected. But because of the dead tissue and the exuding of serum, the burned area offers a rich culture field for any germs that may lodge in or upon the injured tissues.

For this reason it is important to keep the burn clean. Dressings and bandages applied to the wounds should be clean and preferably sterilized. The burns should in every way be dealt with antiseptically.

After emergency treatment has been administered, it is wise to have a doctor inspect the burn in order to determine what follow-up treatment is the wisest to use.

They Didn't Know Their Onions
Pilleigh, England—(AP)—Daffodil soup served at the village school in Pilleigh, near South Moulton, Devonshire, caused illness among nine students.

Two senior scholars prepared the soup, but they used daffodil bulbs instead of onions. All nine students recovered.

Voting is Popular

Washington (AP)—When it comes to "model citizens," Greenbelt, Maryland, government housing development, takes the cake.

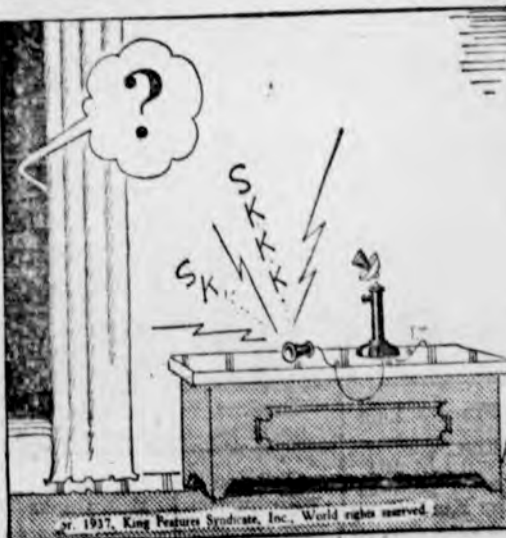

In an election for Greenbelt's first town council, 276 residents out of 29 eligible cast ballots, far surpassing election records set in other communities. The lone woman candidate was defeated in a last-minute rush of male voters.

"ENGAGING GOSSIP"

SANTA WHITE FOX

by SIGRID ARNE

'PLEASE, SIR, WHERE'S THE ACORN?'

The story so far: The Queen of Fairies has introduced a pert sail-or doll to Santa. The sailor says he can rescue Helga, the doll, that was stolen from the toyshop by the white fox.

Chapter 12

The Sailor Starts Out

Santa was dreadfully curious when he woke the next morning and found his toyshop already at work. The sailor doll told him they were making the fastest ice boat in the whole North, called "The Spray."

Then the Queen of Fairies said: "The fox is wearing a string of bells. If you need me, steal the bells from him, and ring them. I'll come."

Just before the sailor started to search for Helga in his iceboat Mrs. Santa gave him a fine gift. It was a warm suit of the softest white leather with a little jacket that fitted him high about his neck.

Then the sailor climbed into his boat, locked up to see which way the wind was blowing, set his sails and slid off down the hill and out of sight.

He had scarcely been gone an hour when he saw ahead of him dozens of squirrels running excitedly in and out of a big oak tree. So he reefed his sails and came to a stop in their midst.

"Please sir where's the acorn," said a little lady squirrel all dressed up in a long green coat.

Lock Him Up

"Acorns?" said the sailor. "What do you mean?"

"Now stop pretending," said the lady squirrel. "Give it to me."

"But I don't have one," said the sailor.

"Everybody, lock him up," shouted the lady squirrel. In a minute half a dozen squirrels were sitting on top of the sailor tying up his arms and legs.

"Wait a minute," he shouted. "I really don't know what you're talking about."

Then a very old gentleman squirrel, who had been watching took his pipe out of his mouth and said, "Maybe the boy is right. Let him talk."

So the six squirrels stepped aside and the sailor, lying on the ground all tied up, said, "What acorn do you mean?"

"The acorn that will make our son shrink," said the old squirrel. "The Woods Fairy said she was sending it to us today."

A Magic Acorn

"Well, I say her only this morning over at Santa's toyshop," said the sailor. "But she didn't mention it. And why should your son want to shrink?"

"That's simple," snapped the lady squirrel. "Because he's too big."

"Gracious, where is he?" asked the sailor. "How did he get too big?"

"He ate so many berries that the Woods Fairy put a magic acorn in his path that made him swell up ten times his size when he ate it. But the more he swells the more of her berries he eats. You see it wasn't very good punishment. So now the Woods Fairy is sending us an acorn that will make him shrink again."

"But what can I do about it?" said the sailor.

"You'll have to get that scorn before you can go on," said the determined lady squirrel. So the sailor promised he would.

Washington Daybook

By Preston Grover

Washington—The proposal of Governor George D. Aiken of Vermont to shrink southern influence in Republican councils turns another light on efforts in both major parties to trim the south's political prestige and power.

The idea of dwarfing southern influence in the Republican set up it not new. Steps toward it have been taken repeatedly, and as things stand now, northern states get a "bonus" of extra delegates because of the size of the Republican vote cast. Southern states casting few Republican votes, get no bonuses.

The Aiken proposal, however, strikes at another point, the national committee. He would give committee members a vote in exact proportion to the proportion of Republican vote cast in each state. In southern states the amount of Republican vote cast is very small compared with the Democratic vote, so southern members of the national committee would have little to say.

Strength In Congress

The Democratic party dimmed the southern voice in its 1936 convention by abrogating the 100-year old two-thirds rule. Of course the 1940 convention will decide whether to nominate its candidates by a bare majority or by two-thirds. But now that the precedent is broken, the prospect seems not especially bright for the south to have the two-thirds rule restored.

Several motives for reducing southern influence in party organizations are evident. One thing seems certain. If the southern voice in party organization is weakened, the influence of southern members of congress likely will be proportionately weakened. That is where they will feel the real pressure.

Time and again the southern delegates have held a balance of power in Republican conventions. Since they are often under control of the party management because of the patronage influence, the southern delegates are peculiarly useful to a party management in suppressing just such "house cleaning" drives as Aiken's.

The south's vote in national committee is relatively even greater, for each state at present gets one vote. Aiken would change that.

The south already has been hit elsewhere. The congressional reapportionment of 1930 stripped

Ski Suits Are Businesslike, But Accessories Are Giddy

This Wool Snow-Sloth Ski Suit of Black and White is Accentuated by Flame-Colored Knitted Wool Gloves

By ADELAIDE KERR

(AP Feature Service Writer)
NEW YORK — The ski suits for this winter's sports are designed with no nonsense.

They are streamlined, cut for action and pruned of the "gingerbread" that used to clutter snow suits before young America took its winter sports seriously. By way of balancing matters, however, mittens, scarfs and other accessories are as gay and giddy as a peasant roundelay.

Navy Blue Wool Favored

More than half the ski suits are made of navy blue wool. Veteran skiers, more interested in reaching the end of a run right side up than in being snow-slope fashion plates, prefer classic gabardine, because it is sturdy, warm, lightweight and it tailors trimly. Many young bloods like the heavier snow cloth (whose weave somewhat resembles a blotter) because it is newer and if often made up in some striking combination of colors.

Trousers are slimmer and cut in three lengths — ankle, plus-four and midway. Plus-fours are less popular, though, because they are less becoming. The slim jackets are equipped with some smooth tricks in slide-fastener closing—not gaily colored as trims, but concealed under bands and laps which make them wind-proof and snow-proof.

Mittens Step Out

Heavy knitted wool mittens and socks in the gayest peasant patterns of many a year go with some of them. Others step out with caps and gloves knitted of bright wool in one color and finished with lacings and tassels in two other brilliant shades. They are the champagne for those strictly snow-business suits.

Wool sweaters or shirts in some bright hue to match the accessories are worn under most of the suits. A pliable, elasticized girdle, long woolen underwear and heavy socks to wear over them complete the list. Something novel and practical is an entire suit of chamols underwear which is lightweight and said to be very warm.

The well dressed onlooker has not been forgotten in winter sport clothes. Plaid blanket-cloth coats bordered with fringe and light-colored blanket-coth swagger coats trimmed with striped bands have been designed for her to wear over her tailored flannels and tweeds.

southern states of several representatives in congress. Again southern prestige and "independence" is being attacked by northern and western efforts to impose an anti-lynching bill.

A Frequent Protest

Further, the wage-hour bill threatens to deprive the south of its hole-card in bidding for industrial development. The south has cheap labor. Because of that, it is successfully inducing such industries as spinning to move down there from the east.

The wage-hour bill is designed ultimately to compel all parts of the country—including the south—to reach a certain wage level for the unskilled well above prevailing southern wages. New England, trying to protect its own spinning industry, is all for that.

Southern statesmen often have protested that the north wants the southern states to exist as colonies rather than as states so they will supply the north with cheap raw materials and accept northern manufacturers in return.

Likely enough, some here think that is the frame of mind in which they will view the Aiken proposal.

PADDLE WHEELER OF '66 HEADS FOR SCRAP HEAP

Cornwall, Ont. (AP)—The "Britannic," 72-year-old St. Lawrence river paddle wheeler—last of its type in this area—has completed its final run.

The boat, constructed of iron plates, has been sold by its owners for scrap. For 25 years the craft was employed on the Kingston, Ont.-Montreal run, for freight and passenger service.

The Britannic was built in Glasgow, Scotland, in 1866.

N. Y. Stock Market

New York, Dec. 11.—(AP)—Spurred by a call for bids on a new float of huge Transatlantic passenger planes, airplane stocks held most of the buying attention in today's market. Boeing, Douglas, Consolidated, United and Glenn Martin stepped up as much as two points or so on the belief several millions dollars would be spent in building the ocean liners. While a few steels, rails and specialties displayed mild recovery tendencies, many leaders were unable to get into forward stride and there was a wide assortment of fractional losers at the close. Dealings were quiet throughout. Transfers approximated 400,000 shares.

TRAINS WRECK WITH BIG TOLL

(Continued from page one) motive ploughed up a snow covered embankment in Great Britain's worst railway disaster in 22 years. The death toll mounted to 35 when five more bodies were taken from the debris and one of the injured died in a hospital. The latest victims accounted for, one of them a woman, were added to the rows of dead in a wooden mortuary shed near the track. Of the 91 injured persons, 24 still were under hospital treatment, five of the received dead were women and one was a child.

OFFICERS TAKE ILLICIT PLANTS

Pitt and Beaufort Officers Destroy Two Liquor Stills

Pitt county ABC officers, working with the special officers of Beaufort county, located and destroyed two stills across the Beaufort line yesterday afternoon. Neither plant was in operation at the time.

Chairman Charles O'H. Horne of the Pitt ABC board, explained that the Pitt officers were working with the Beaufort officers for two specific reasons. He declared it was believed that much of the illicit liquor being sold in this county was coming from Beaufort county and by breaking up stills in the neighboring county, the flow of the contraband across the line would be checked. He also explained that the officers worked together along the line as it was impossible to tell which county they were in while tracking down stills and by having officers of both counties in the searching party would eliminate any question of authority.

One of the stills captured yesterday was a copper outfit of 200 gallon capacity. In addition to the plant, 1,400 gallons of beer was destroyed. The other still was a steam plant. About it was found 5,600 gallons of beer.

J. M. Ward and J. L. Taylor are the two Pitt ABC officers, while Linwood Smithwick and Ben Willis are employed by the Beaufort Board.

more annually in freight revenue. But today it announced that closing arguments on the application would be started January 17, instead of February 7.

Recurrent predictions from railroad executives that their industry may be in a precarious condition by next spring, focused attention on the possibility the government soon might reopen its pocketbook to the carriers.

President Roosevelt and Chairman Jesse Jones already have discussed the granting of Reconstruction Finance Corporation loans to tide over one or two of the lines during the winter.

Rail officials said, however, that the requested increase in rates if granted, might come too late for some lines.

The rail situation overshadowed for the present other government attempts to help business. Progress was reported however, on tax modification, housing legislation and anti-truist problems.

Chairman Doughton (D.-NC.) of the House Ways and Means committee, said he was confident his committee would bring out an equitable tax bill.

IN WINTER SPORTS, HE'S TOP FLIGHT and Tomm Murstad, 22-year-old Norwegian skier, demonstrates it by soaring high over a snow-covered roof. Head of a ski school in Oslo, he is in America to compete in winter sports shows.

SHE CAUGHT AN ELEPHANT when she went Christmas shopping at a sale of articles made by blind persons in New York. But apparently the toy's resemblance to the G.O.P. emblem didn't lessen its appeal to Mrs. F. D. Roosevelt. "This is the first time I ever saw an elephant with green eyes," said the First Lady.

'OH COME ALL YE FAITHFUL . . .' and other songs of Christmas are echoing these days through the lofty beams of New York's St. James' Church as its famous boys' choir puts final touches to rendition of hymns for the Yuletide. Approximately 100 voices are blended in this group. Their church is also renowned for its great organ and beautiful stained glass windows.
