Bridge Luncheon
On Thursday morning at eleven o'clock, Mrs. J. B. Kittrell and Mrs. J. C. Lanier entertained a large group of ladies at a bridge luncheon at the home of Mrs. W. D. Tucker was awarded high score prize, a box of cut flowers.

At 12:45, twenty luncheon guests joined the party and a delicious barbecue luncheon with coffee and cherry tarts was served. The center table was beautifully appointed with a large coconut cake decorated with cherries, flanked on either side with three branch candelabra containing red, white, and blue candies. White potted hyacinths tied with red, white and blue ribbons completed the decorations carrying out the George Washington birthday color scheme.

Each guest's place was marked with a numbered Valentine place card. From a box containing Valentines similarly marked, the guests drew for two prizes. First prize, the coconut cake, was drawn by Mrs. L. E. Beacock, and second prize, a pot of white hyacinths, was drawn by Mrs. W. H. Dail.

Guest prizes consisting of Valentine boxes of candy, were presented to the visiting mothers: Mrs. Samuels, mother of Mrs. E. J. Garrett; Mrs. Winnie T. Barnes, mother of Mrs. Julian White, and Mrs. Transou, mother of Mrs. Joe Moye.

SALUTE TO SPRING—Brother and sister can step out this spring in coats exactly alike except for the buttoned closing. They are box-cut and double breasted, made of navy blue worsted. The trim Scotch caps match them.

Garden Club Meeting. There will be an open meeting of the Garden Club at the Woman's Club building on Thursday night at 8 o'clock. At this time slides of historic Virginia, particularly of its famous gardens and homes will be shown. The public is cordially invited.

Executive Board Meets. On Thursday, February 10, Mrs. E. W. Harvey and Mrs. Charles Horns were hostesses to the meeting of the Albemarle Presbyterian Executive Board.

The morning session was held at the home of Mrs. Harvey. After adjournment Mrs. Harvey served tomatillo juice cocktail, and members were invited to the home of Mrs. Horns, where a two-course luncheon was served, followed by a brief afternoon session.

Members of the board present were: Mrs. Ford S. Worthing and Mrs. W. D. McInnis, Washington; Mrs. A. C. Wiggins, Kingston; Mrs. T. C. Young and Mrs. W. N. Clark, Rocky Mount; Mrs. W. W. Eagles, Mooresfield; Mrs. T. C. Gardner, Mrs. Howard Hussey, Mrs. H. B. Whitlatch, Tarboro; Mrs. R. E. McCure, New Bern; Mrs. H. M. Wilson, Farmville; Mrs. Leslie Barnes, Wilson; Mrs. R. A. Bynum, Pinetops. Mrs. Harvey Clayton of Greenville, was a guest.

Kiwanis Ladies Night
With W. J. Bundy in the role of toastmaster—and doing a very good job at it—the Greenville Kiwanis club last night observed its annual "Ladies Night" with most members and their wives or "lad friends" present despite one bad weather.

J. Frank Harrington welcomed "the girls," as he termed them, assuring them that "Ladies Night" always was a red letter day on the Kiwanis calendar. Toastmaster Bundy, in a spirit of joviality, explained that several women had contended for the right to reply to the welcome, but evidently unable to agree among themselves, the technicality was omitted.

The toastmaster then announced that "the most beautiful girl in Greenville" would entertain Kiwanians and their guests with a dance. Miss Alice Ruth Bundy, daughter of the versatile toastmaster, proceeded with her dance, accompanied by Miss Mary Shaw Roberson, and received a round of applause, part of which probably was intended for her father, who explained "I taught her that."

Miss Ramona Staples head of the Ramona School of Dancing, was next on the program and justified the grand introduction given her by the toastmaster.

A recently organized quartet composed of J. D. Simpson, James Smith, Edward Conway and Ralph Hutchinson sang several numbers which proved especially entertaining. They were accompanied by M. L. Starkey.

Harry Solomon of Wilmington, Lieutenant Governor of the seventh district, was introduced by President D. C. Conley and made a brief talk, directed to the women, explaining a few of the objectives of Kiwanis.

Favors and prizes were distributed, after which prizes was enjoyed, additional prizes being distributed to several winners.

To Hold Study Class. The Missionary Society of Jarvis Memorial Methodist Church is planning a study class to meet from 10 to 11:30 a. m., February 15-18.

At 10 o'clock Tuesday, a devotional half hour with special music will precede the study. The text to be used is Dawber, "Rebuilding Rural America." A general view of the whole book will be given on Monday, with assignments for special study and reports.

On Tuesday, Dr. Ennett will speak to the class, telling of what governments are doing for the health of rural people. Mrs. K. B. Pace will conduct a discussion of this bringing the facts from the text and relating the whole to the work of rural churches. Mrs. J. H. Rose will speak on religious education for rural people.

On Thursday, Mr. R. R. Bennett and Miss Ethel Nice will tell of government efforts to improve the economic and cultural life of farm folk. Mrs. Roy Harris will direct a discussion of these reports and add any other facts which are found in the text. Mrs. B. L. Tyson will speak on rural recreation, emphasizing the responsibility of the church for providing leisure time activities.

On Friday, Mrs. Judson Blount will preside and Mrs. E. L. Hillman will give a summary of the week's study with observations based on actual work with churches in rural Eastern North Carolina.

All 11 o'clock Friday, Mrs. Zoe Anne Davis will close the study with a special devotional service. Mrs. Helene Higgs Kirkpatrick will sing "My Task."

The public is cordially invited to these sessions which will be held in the Molly Brown room of the church.

Small Fire
About 6 o'clock Friday evening there came near being a serious fire in the millinery store of Mrs. J. S. Tunstall & Co. on Five Points. A lamp fell on a large box of hats and exploded, starting a quick blaze.

Mrs. Tunstall was alone in the store at the time and was very much excited by the fire. Parties on the street saw the flames through the window and a crowd quickly gathered. The fire was soon put out but not until the stock had been damaged about $75. No damage was done to the building except a broken window.

Anniversary Tea. Thursday night Mr. and Mrs. H. A. White gave an anniversary tea at their home on Fourth street, it being the first anniversary of their marriage. The bridesmaids gathered with them on the occasion. We wish them many happy returns of the day.

Garden Notes
MAKE THE GARDEN RICH—Most garden crops require large amounts of plant food for best growth. Stable manure is the best general purpose fertilizer. It furnishes plant nutrients in a reasonably balanced form, and it helps to keep the soil in good condition by furnishing organic matter. On soils of average fertility, manure should be applied broadcast at the rate of 10 two-horse wagon loads per acre, to which is added 50 pounds of 16 per cent superphosphate to each ton of manure. For best results, it should be applied in fall and winter. If applied near planting time, manure should be in a well-rotted condition and should be thoroughly mixed with the soil.

FERTILIZERS—A good grade of complete fertilizer such as 5-7-5 mixture is satisfactory for most vegetable crops. In addition to the complete fertilizer, side application of readily available nitrogen fertilizers are usually advisable especially for leafy vegetables such as cabbage, collards, lettuce, kale and spinach. Avoid using too much readily available nitrogen at any one application if applied broadcast. Two light applications will give better results than one heavy application.

Vegetables such as beets, cabbage, cauliflower, celery, lettuce, English peas and spinach will do better if the soil has been limed. Wood ashes added to making the soil better for these crops. Snap beans, sweet corn, tomatoes, cabbage, melons and peppers need a little more superphosphate than in a 5-7-5 mixture. All

Phantoms Defeat Raleigh 27 to 23

Greenies Come From Behind in Last Half After Trailing Raleigh Team 14 to 7 at Mid-Way Mark

By BAXTER CLARK

Rallying in the second half when they trailed by a score of 14-7, the local Phantom eagles came back to score many successive goals and defeat the Raleigh high school quint by a score of 27-23. The game was played in the Broughton gymnasium in Raleigh last night.

Sam Mordecai and Aubrey Pittman scored the first two field goals of the evening to give Raleigh a 4-0 lead over the Greenies. Quick goals by John Lautares and Tom Parrish tied the score. Mordecai again sank a field goal and from this point the Wake county boys drew away from the locals. Pittman and Mordecai did all the first half scoring for Raleigh, making 7 and 6 points respectively. The Phantoms made two charity shots good and at intermission the score stood 13-6, with Raleigh sporting the lead.

Captain Dubose Simpson, who had not seen any action all night entered the game in the second half and led his teammates to victory. In the third period Raleigh was unable to make a field goal but made two free shots. The local boys, in the meantime, made four field goals and 1 foul shot to tie the score when the last period began—at 15-all. Simpson scored 7 of these 9 points to tie the score.

John Lautares broke the tie by sinking a beautiful pot shot. Coach Durward Stowe's boys then racked up a 23-17 advantage with Howard Hodges, Richard Gaylord and John Lautares scoring before Raleigh got going again. The Caps then broke loose with "Red" Alford setting the pace and made the score read 33-22. Then Greenville took charge of the situation and a field goal by Hodges and a foul shot by Simpson put the game on ice in the final minutes of play. Both teams matched free throws at this stage and the final score was 27-23 in favor of the Phantoms.

Dubose Simpson made 9 points to lead the Greenville boys' scoring. His fine play when needed was the main factor in producing the win. His constant field goals in the second half tied the score and helped beat Raleigh. Howard Hodges, local guard, followed Simpson with 7 points. His field goal put the game on ice in the final moments of play. He also played a good defensive game. John "Midget" Lautares scored 6 points to take other scoring honors. His defensive play was the finest displayed by either of the two teams. Tom Parrish, George Sakas and Richard Gaylord played superior ball for the Greenies also. Sam Mordecai featured for the Raleigh boys. He scored 8 points and played a good defensive game. Aubrey Pittman took other scoring honors by making 8 points. "Red" Alford tallied 4 points for Raleigh.

The 4-H Club of Jones school met at 3 o'clock February 10. After the business part of the meeting, it was turned over to the program committee, which gave a very interesting program observing Negro History Week.

The following pupils appeared on the program: Life of Fenton Johnson, Virginia Williams; Life of Benjamin Brawley, J. Moore; Gettysburg Address, Lincoln, Polly Savage; Life of Paul Laurence Dunbar, Lue Bertha Brown; Dramatization of "Speak Up Ike," Virginia Williams and Leonard Manning.

Medames Wilson and Garrett, teachers of the school, urged the boys and girls to continue the great work of the 4-H Club.

At the last meeting of the 4-H Club Mr. Dupree was present. He gave the members of the club some very interesting remarks and also a number of club songs.

DOCTOR'S AMBULANCE IS HIS SOAP BOX

Oklahoma City (AP)—Dr. Fowler Border, mayor of Mangum, has his ambulance ready to perform a major operation on state politics. The ambulance is a regulation one. In it Dr. Border will campaign for governor.

"Inside there will be an invalid couch that can be converted into a bed," the doctor explains. "I can take a nap of from five to 100 minutes and wake up feeling as good as ever."

The ambulance bears this sign: "The Border Patrol for Good Government."

"That," says the doctor, "just about sizes up my platform."

EMPIRE FOR A LADY

SYNOPSIS: Tropical Sumatran island is seething with a Dyak revolt against the hated Malays. James Clyde, master of the gun-boat Linkang, and traitor to the Malays, is blamed by Rajah Mantusen and imprisoned. But it is Christine Forrester, a beautiful young English girl, who is behind the war, completing a plan of her dead father. Clyde miraculously escapes, and a Malay attack is imminent. He sends me (Paul Thorne, his nephew) aboard the Avon to protect Christine. "I can imagine a woman loving a man like that," she says.

Chapter 23 Darkness To Dawn

CHRISTINE was lying full length in a long chair, her chin tucked down upon her shoulder. Even the afterglow of moonlight was gone, now; but the bay of Balingong was not in darkness. The dusty light of the low-hung stars was over everything, so that I could see well enough that she was asleep; and I was glad. Heaven knows she must have needed rest by now.

It occurred to me then with a very real disappointment that among the many things which would be left unfinished in my life was the better understanding of Christine Forrester. Whatever way you looked at her she remained a phenomenon. I had once thought that I understood her people and her traditions. When I had gathered that she was of British colonial background, out of India and Burma, and latterly Singapore, I was able to visualize pretty definitely the probable surroundings of her early life. But instead of explaining her to me, these things now made her harder for me to understand.

I knew the look of the British bungalows inhabited by English administrators, as I had seen them at Bombay, Calcutta, and Rangoon. The broad low roofs of these bungalows, with wide shady porches on all sides, were a grudging compromise between what was British and what was a practical concession to the heat. White picket fences enclosed them, and the space within each fence was like the ghost of an English garden, no less because it was called a compound here.

Within the houses the furniture was likely to be rattan, and there were mats on the floor instead of carpet. But the orderly arrangement, a little stiff, somehow managed to be very British too. The nursemaids with their children were perhaps Indo-Chinese amahs, and in the rooms punkahs flapped, operated by a half-naked brown boy in a turban who sat outside and pulled a rope; but the master dressed for dinner in the most uncomfortable clothes ever devised in any climate, and drank tea which must first be shipped to England to be properly labeled, and then brought back.

These backgrounds, or rather these British characteristics, partly explained even Anthony Forrester. It was very like a Britisher to proceed calmly and stubbornly about what he conceived to be his business, entirely ignoring the most extraordinary environments, whatever danger he might be in. And this girl, by her own account, had been close enough to her father's plans to carry them out, now that he was dead. I could picture Christine as a solemn-eyed child, listening to strange jungle tales brought by Anthony Forrester whenever he came back to Singapore or Calcutta or London to find his children growing up. It partly explained in her a certain competence, like that of a man, which I resented.

Sometime To Dream About

BUT there was something very pitiful and appealing about Christine now as she lay asleep. There wasn't any pride left in the set of her head, nor any impatience in the dark blur of her mouth. She was just a girl with open hands resting helpless in her lap, her knees drawn up under the smoke-grey silk of the Chinese robe she wore. She wasn't any longer Anthony Forrester's daughter, troublesome and stubborn in a place where she didn't belong; she wasn't a scornful young woman who knew 40 names for an elephant. She was something a man might dream about, thinking of peace and gentleness.

"I wish you wouldn't stand there and stare at me," she said. I will swear that she had not moved nor opened her eyes. "It's like breathing down a person's neck."

I moved away; and after that there was nothing to do for a long time but wait. At daybreak Christine disappeared below, and the Avon's Malays began to sluice down the deck. A new, clean odor came over Balingong bay from the jungle, in spite of the warmth of the dawn. It was as if the world had been washed out with salt water.

Presently the Avon's Chinese cook came aft and set up a table with a cloth tied on it. On this he set various napkin-covered dishes, to all appearances as much like an English buffet breakfast as those far lost seas had ever seen. When this was done the Chinese boomed a very mild little gong of his own at the head of the companionway, and removed himself.

Then, perhaps 20 minutes later, Clyde came aboard. He was closely shaved, and very clean in fresh whites. His coat was loose over his wounded side, with one empty sleeve; I was relieved to see that he had probably not torn off the bandages I had trusted him with. He winced and turned greenish around the mouth as he got himself over the rail, but impatiently refused my assistance.

"Well, we've got a reprieve—maybe," he said at once. "Lundok came aboard last night after you pulled away."

Fleeting, I wondered how Lundok got out to the Linkang. Probably he had had a canoe hidden somewhere, or perhaps had stolen one from the Dyaks. It did not matter. What mattered was what he had come for.

My uncle said grimly, "Mantusen wants to dickie."

"I should think he would." He studied me absently, and there was more uncertainty in his face than I had seen yet. "Doubtless it is all plain and clear to you," he said vaguely, as if he were thinking of something else. "I'm certainly glad I have the benefit of your superior intelligence."

"What's the matter with you? You talk as if you were losing your grip."

That would have got an explosion, once. But he only shrugged his good shoulder. "Maybe I am, Paul. People don't do what I know they are going to do, any more."

Breakfast On The Avon

CHRISTINE appeared now brought on deck by Clyde's arrival. Sleep had freshened the clear brown of her eyes, and had brushed away the dark lines from under them. A shadow crossed her face, twisting her mouth a little as she saw the empty sieve tucked into the pocket of Clyde's coat. I wondered if Christine would ever be able to look at Clyde, or to think of him, except as the man she had almost allowed to die.

She said, "Please don't tell me you've had breakfast with me."

I was fretting instead of my foot was mud-flounder in a rice paster; but the cook had done well with his materials, for it went down like a creamed fillet of sole. And there were some amazingly lifelike scones, with homesick-tasting blackberry jam. I thought that Christine, who gave a thoroughly human and hungry attention to her breakfast, was disappointed that Clyde didn't seem to know the difference.

He told her now about Lundok having brought him proposals from Mantusen, and explained to her what he supposed it meant. Clyde's first thought, of course, was that Mantusen wished to delay us until he could make ready his attack; but Clyde did not understand this either, for there was no reason why Mantusen's attack should not be as ready as it was ever going to be. Nor could he conceive that Mantusen thought us such complete fools as to be worth dickering with.

"What is it Mantusen wants?" I insisted.

"Out," said my uncle drily, and Christine was amused at me. Clyde added, "The same as me."

Christine said, "Do we have to go through all that sermon again about what a dangerous place this is?"

Clyde's head was rested sideways on his hand, and he looked at her gravely, without any animation. "It wouldn't be any use," he said with a very uncharacteristic humbleness. "There isn't any reason why you should pay attention to me."

There was no bitterness there, but only a fundamental recognition of what had been Christine's own attitude all along. He knew by now that he would never convince this girl.

"And I suppose," Christine said, "there is equally no use of my trying to convince you that you may as well weigh anchor any time you want to—as far as we are concerned."

"No," said Clyde dully. "I just don't feel you are safe here."

Paper-Hanger Loose Teeth, But Finds A Talent For Making Faces

Jesse C. Personius His Natural Face

(By The AP Feature Service) Jesse C. Personius of Elmira, N. Y., went to a party looking his natural self (above). Then, by way of contributing to the entertainment, he started to make faces. Before he knew it, Jesse was looking the way he does now.

"You've got something there," his friends cried. That was all Jesse needed. He's a painter and paper-hanger. But business hasn't been any too brisk. So he began to make faces in earnest. Now, he asserts, he can produce 12 to 15 faces on request, all funny.

It was a natural step. The Elmira had been an amateur entertainer since he was 16. But it wasn't until he lost all his teeth that he really could do things with his face.

"Now I just remove my false teeth and I'm ready to perform," he confides. "Some day I hope to be able to make some money."

Local Goodrich Tire Agent Attends Meet

E. C. Martin, wholesale salesman for the B. F. Goodrich Company, has returned to Greenville after attending the annual sales and advertising conferences of the B. F. Goodrich Company sales staff in the Charlotte, district held in that city.

Officials of the Goodrich company from its principal offices in Akron, Ohio, and R. E. Noble, district manager were in charge of the conferences.

One feature of the meeting was the showing of a new five reel movie portraying what is believed the most thorough and accurate record of tire manufacture and performance ever filmed. High speed cameras show actual action of tire treads on the road surface, in one part of the movie, which will be released throughout the country.

"The conferences," Mr. Martin declared "were held to outline the advertising and merchandising program of our company for this district during the coming year. We are hopeful of the prospects for future business, and anticipate that there will be an increase in tires sold directly to consumers during 1938."

"Our company continues to expend large amounts of money on research and development effort on its products. One of the most recent examples of this activity is the new 'Hi-Flex' cotton tire cord, designed primarily to reduce heat generated at high speeds in truck and bus tires, but with advantages for passenger car tire construction as well."

Import restrictions on the entry of South African fruits to the United States were lifted when it was found refrigeration killed fruit flies and their embryos.

DIXIE HIGHLIGHTS

HISTORY FROM THE GRAVE!
SECRETS OF CUSTOM AND RELIGION REVEALED BY SKELETONS AT ANCIENT INDIAN BURIAL GROUND IN ST. AUGUSTINE, FLORIDA

Archaeologists and scientists from the Smithsonian Institution, Washington, D. C., have been able to construct important historical information with remarkable accuracy from the ancient Indian Burial Ground at St. Augustine. From excavations made on the "Fountain of Youth" property, over a hundred burials have been exposed, including all ages and sexes. Strange as it may seem, the position of these skeletons actually reveals Florida history! Individuals buried with hands folded on the breast indicate Christian influence. Others, buried in a flexed position, indicate a burial by non-Christian Indians. Relics, such as beads, snarls of Spanish water jugs, and hand-wrought nails establish the fact that this was a general burial place at the time of early European occupation just as surely as though it had been recorded in history. A building similar to those Le Moyne drew of Florida Indian structures, back in 1564, now houses this outstanding scientific attraction which is annually visited by thousands of tourists.

All one has to do to work up a good lather in Florida is to pluck a few fruits of the SOAPBERRY, a native Florida tree, and put the pulp in water. The pulp of the fruit is said to contain 30% saponin and has often been successfully used as a soap substitute. The seeds are exceptionally hard and have been utilized as buttons and beads.

NURSES MEET IN GOLDSBORO

Miss Mary Lee Smith of College Head of District

At the February meeting of the Carolina State Nurses Association of the eighth district, which was held in Goldsboro Tuesday afternoon, an interesting program was presented.

The Mayor of Goldsboro, J. H. Hill, extended a cordial welcome to the seventy-five nurses present from various parts of the district, which is composed of the twenty-three northeastern counties.

Dr. D. E. Best, president of the Wayne County Medical Association presented a paper on "Nursing of the Diabetic," a subject of great interest to the nurses. The laws in regard to nursing in North Carolina were explained by a lawyer, Mr. Fred M. Parker. Mrs. Vaughn, of the Goldsboro hospital, made a talk on the "Nurses Register" which was followed by discussion and questions from the floor. Dr. McPeters of the Wayne County health department spoke briefly.

The program was in charge of the Goldsboro group of nurses with Miss Marie Farley, Public Health nurse in Goldsboro, as chairman. The meeting, which was held in the Blue Lantern Cafeteria was opened by an invocation by Rev. A. J. Smith. Miss Elizabeth Smith, accompanied by Mrs. Early, sang a solo. After the professional portion of the program, Mrs. Harrell gave a humorous reading. Refreshments were served by the hostesses.

This is the first meeting at which the newly elected president, Miss Mary Lee Smith, of East Carolina Teachers College, has presided. The meetings are held monthly in one of eight central towns within the district. There are: Wilson, Rocky Mount, Washington, Tarboro, Goldsboro, Kinston, Roanoke Rapids and Greenville. The March meeting will be held in Greenville. The counties include: Beaufort, Bertie, Camden, Chowan, Currituck, Dare, Edgecombe, Gates, Green, Halifax, Hertford, Hyde, Lenoir, Martin, Nash, Northampton, Pasquotank, Perquimans, Pitt, Tyrrell, Wayne, and Washington.

FLOOD INUNDATES ILLINOIS FARMERS' FIELDS

GIVES DATA ON SECURITY ACT

Another Group Of Questions And Answers Offered

Another group of questions and answers designed to enlighten the public on the Social Security program follows:

Question: My husband has just died and the undertaker has given me a form to fill out and told me to file a claim for a payment under the old-age insurance provisions of the Social Security Act. Should I do this?

Answer: The Social Security Board is making lump-sum payments to eligible workers, or to the estate or relatives of deceased eligible workers, under the old-age insurance provisions of the Social Security Act. Many undertakers are seeking to help the relatives of deceased workers by calling their attention to the fact that a lump-sum payment may be due them under the law. Whether a payment is due to you can not be determined on the basis of the information you have given. Call at, or write to your Social Security Board Field Office for information and assistance.

Question: I read in the paper the other day that if a woman gets married and changes her name, she should have her name changed on her Social Security record and should also report it to her employer. I don't want my employer to know I am married because he won't employ married women in his firm. Will I lose my old-age insurance if I don't report my new name?

Answer: No. As long as your employer reports your wages under the name which was given on your Social Security account number, your wage record can be kept accurately. If, however, you should leave that employment and give your new name to your new employer, you should apply at your nearest Social Security Board Field Office for the card prepared for this purpose. "Employee's Request for Change in Records." A corrected Social Security account number card will be sent to you, showing your new name, but giving the same number.

Question: Will I be able to draw old-age insurance benefits when I become 65 years of age, if I continue to work?

Answer: Under the terms of the Social Security Act you will not be paid monthly benefits as long as you continue to work in an employment that is not specifically excepted from the Social Security Act. When you retire from active employment, however, you will receive a monthly annuity, based on the wages you received between January 1, 1937, and the time you reached 65 years of age, provided you worked at least one day in each of five different calendar years and received at least $2,000 in covered wages. Monthly benefits will not be paid until January, 1942.

Should you not be eligible to receive a monthly benefit for any reason, a lump-sum benefit may be paid to you when you reach age 65 even though you do continue to work.
