TAX REVISION BILL PRAISED BY DEMOCRATS

Contend It Should Bring About Business Stimulation

TAX ON PROFITS HELD TO BE FAIR

President Signs $250,000,000 Emergency Relief Appropriations Measure

Washington, March 2.—(AP)—The House Ways and Means committee Democrats said today the administration's new tax revision bill, by providing a well-balanced tax system, should bring about "a very substantial stimulation to business."

Backing up proposals to modify the undistributed profits tax, the Democrats said some of the complaints made against it were justified, but that hardships in many cases "seemed to have been exaggerated."

"On the basis of the facts," they said in a formal report to the House, "your committee believes that the principle of the undistributed profits tax is sound and should be retained."

Other developments: President Roosevelt signed the $250,000,000 emergency relief appropriation bill to provide supplemental funds for the WPA up to next June 30.

A Senate Civil Liberties Committee official said that the 207 leading contributors to the National Association of Manufacturers bought 60 per cent of the tear gas sold to industry "for labor warfare" in 1933-37.

An apparent Republican bid for the support of dissatisfied Democrats aroused some interest in Congress, but members of both parties said it was unlikely to result in a bi-partisan coalition movement.

Fletcher Advises Against Support Of Labor Journal

Repeats Warning Any Organized Support By Industrial Firms Violation of Labor Act

Reflector Bureau Raleigh, March 2.—Commissioner of Labor A. L. Fletcher laughed heartily when the North Carolina Labor Journal cartoon depicting him as "eking 'industry' out of North Carolina and into Virginia" was called to his attention; but after joking about the personal side of the affair he turned serious and repeated a warning given some time ago that any organized support of such a publication by industrial firms is a clear violation of the Wagner Act's prohibition of "unfair labor practices."

"So far as I'm concerned, the best thing to do about a paper like this is to ignore it; but if any other section of the country, for that matter, should actively engage in distribution of such a publication, it would be a clear violation of the Wagner Act and the National Labor Relations Board would undoubtedly take drastic action if such activity were called to its attention," he said.

Major Fletcher pointed out that so far as he is aware the so-called "labor" paper hasn't a single solitary bona fide subscriber. Its promoter frankly said in discussing establishment of the sheet that he expected to sell it to employers for distribution among their employees. Major Fletcher declared.

When it was called to the attention of the Wagner Act, he said he would switch to a plan of selling advertisements to the industrialists, and would probably do his own distributing.

First issue of the "Journal" appeared about the end of January with the distribution declared at something better than 4,000. The issue which made its appearance this week carried a claim of something more than 45,000 copies.

Capt. Brock originally was commissioned in Washington, N. C., in 1931, but was transferred here in 1932. In June, 1935 he was promoted to first lieutenant and was named second in command of the local unit of the National Guard. He was promoted to this rank and office when Capt. Waldrop took over the command of the Greenville unit.

Another recent promotion in the local unit was that of J. E. Waldrop from sergeant to second lieutenant, moving him up from the non-commissioned class to the commissioned.

Capt. Brock said other promotions in the battery were likely within the near future.

THREE DAYS OF RACE REMAIN

Contestants Have But Three More Days To Work

With just three days remaining in which to decide the winners of the open prizes in the list, The Daily Reflector "Cash Offer" campaign is rushing through the home stretch with unprecedented speed. Candidates throughout the territory are forcing their way to the top with such determination and enthusiasm that Greenville and all the campaign territory is thoroughly aroused to the importance of the momentous question about to be decided.

The goal all members are striving for, of course is one of the very biggest prizes in the gigantic list and the battle is getting fiercer with each passing hour. These big cash prizes are to be awarded as a reward for the efforts the candidates have put into the work of getting subscriptions during the past few weeks.

The final vote schedule is providing a tremendous help to members in boosting their scores, and as a result subscriptions will pour into the campaign office in a steady stream from now until the end. Friends of the members are becoming so enthusiastic over the possibilities of their favorites that they are plunging into the battle with all the spirit and zest of the members themselves.

It's a remarkable race. And ends next Saturday night March 5th. Every hour counts—every subscription is vital to the success of a candidate. From all indications and from reports that have found their way to the campaign department the race will be close and there is no telling who will win.

"Second Payments"

Subscriptions of small denominations were given at the beginning of the contest to candidates who did not fully appreciate the great advantage gained at that time. No advantage will be lost if these persons are approached for "second payments" as this second payment or additional payment, turned in now will yield additional votes.

Get "second-payment" subscriptions. Candidates, and win a big prize instead of a little one.

Many Foreign Buyers Stocking Up From 1937 Crop

GROWERS URGED TO CUT ACREAGE

Surplus of 1,733,000,000 Pounds Declared To Be Largest In History of Crop

Washington, March 2.—(AP)—Exports from the 1938 flue-cured tobacco crop are likely to be substantially smaller than foreign sales from the 1937 crop, Federal farm officials said today.

They estimated this season's exports would reach 400,000,000 pounds, an amount said to be considerably above the level of foreign consumption. The AAA said many foreign buyers were stocking up, and consequently probably would buy less tobacco next year.

The AAA appealed to growers of flue-cured tobacco to reduce their plantings this spring.

"The supply now appears," the AAA said, "to be somewhat large even in relation to the higher consumption level of the last few years. Continued production above consumption will mean prices less favorable than those that have been received for the last four crops."

The 1937 supply, including surpluses from previous years, was estimated at 1,733,000,000 pounds, the largest on record, and sufficient, officials said, to meet world consumption needs for more than two years.

Should flue-cured growers approve marketing quotas at a referendum March 12, sale of tobacco from the 1938 crop would be limited to 705,000,000 pounds, except what might be sold by growers willing to pay a gross value of 50 per cent of the present value on their over-quota marketing.

CALL MEETING ON REFERENDA

Mass Meeting To Be Held at ECTC Next Wednesday

The tobacco and cotton referenda to be held on March 12 and the 1938 Agricultural Adjustment Act will be discussed at a mass meeting by officials from State College, in the Campus building at East Carolina Teachers College Wednesday night, March 9, at 7:30 o'clock.

Other important agricultural leaders who are expected to appear on the program will be announced later.

The township meetings and this mass meeting have been arranged in order that all farmers may have an opportunity to hear the 1938 Farm program explained.

Similar meetings are being held in each of the agricultural counties in efforts to acquaint the farmers with details of the program, which is dependent on a favorable vote by the growers themselves.

The mass meeting here will follow township meetings being held in the county this and next week. All farmers are urged to attend the meetings, and also see to it that their tenants are present at the sessions.

Injects Dramatic Note In Trial of Former Leaders

Moscow, March 2.—(AP)—A defendant who desperately protested his innocence of treason charges against him today injected a dramatic note into the opening of the trial of 21 fallen Soviet leaders. He was N. N. Krestinsky, former assistant commissar of foreign affairs.

The state produced alleged confessions of his 20 co-defendants to spying for foreign powers in plots to dismember the Soviet union and to terroristic murders of prominent Soviet citizens.

The indictment also quoted at length from an alleged confession by Krestinsky, which said he had entered into a treasonable plot with General von Seeck, German military leader, at the behest of the exiled Leon Trotsky.

But Krestinsky repudiated this confession and sharp attempts by the prosecution to shake his repudiation failed. His stout defense under grilling so agitated him he had to halt while he took a tablet for his nerves.

"I did not commit the crimes of which I am accused," he shouted. "I have been a member of the (Communist) party and still consider myself one."

The trial opened in the military collegium of the supreme court of the Soviet union. Joseph Davies, retiring U. S. ambassador, watched from a front bench.

Japan, Germany, Britain and Poland were the powers for which the accused were said to have spied on the Soviet Union.

The oldest mention of Robin Hood appeared about 1377, in the second edition of Piers Plowman.

TWA AIRPLANE STILL MISSING

Report That Liner Found Damaged Proves Erroneous

San Francisco, March 2.—(AP)—TWA officials said today a report that their missing airliner had been found badly damaged near Fresno, had proved incorrect.

The officials said the report evidently originated in Fresno, where a truck driver was said to have telephoned another airline that he had seen a damaged plane.

A statement from United Airlines said:

"Our office in Fresno said no such rumor originated in that office and they did not know where it started."

"We have no report on the missing plane."

At Okaland, Herb Kraft, pilot of the first TWA plane through from Southern California today, said he had not seen any trace of the missing plane.

San Francisco, March 2.—(AP)—Officials of Transcontinental and Western Air said today they were informed their missing sky liner had been found, badly wrecked, near Fresno.

The report said the plane had been landed in a field and the official believed the injuries, if any, were minor.

Nine persons were believed aboard the plane.

FORBIDS CITY TO SELL BONDS

North Carolina Supreme Court Hands Down Decisions

Raleigh, March 2.—(AP)—The State Supreme court decided 34 cases today, holding in one opinion that proposed issuance of $230,000 of street and sanitary sewerage bonds by Charlotte exceeded the constitutional debt limitation of the city during the fiscal year, 1937-1938.

Associate Justice Barnhill wrote the decision of the suit of N. H. Gill on behalf of himself and other Charlotte tax payers, against the city of Charlotte and held that the plaintiff was "entitled to a permanent injunction" as he reversed the lower court decision of Judge Wilson Warlick.

In the case of the State vs. J. C. Credle of Washington county, the court upheld a conviction of having liquor in his possession on which the tax had not been paid. The appeal was based on a 1937 law on search warrants, the defendant contending the search warrant on which his premises were searched was illegal.

DEATH CLAIMS NOTED LAWYER

Brother of Greenville Pastor Dies Today In Wilmington

Wilmington, March 2.—(AP)—Clayton Grant, prominent Wilmington attorney and former legislator and state senator, died here this morning at 3:20 o'clock of a cancer of the throat. He had been ill some time, but became critically ill a few weeks ago after returning here from New York where he had undergone treatment for his throat ailment.

Thrice a representative from New Hanover county in the General Assembly, and once a senator from this district, Grant had taken an active part in politics. His last term of office was in the 1933 legislature. In 1934 he entered the race for the Democratic nomination for congressman from this district, but was defeated by Bayard Clark of Fayetteville.

Widely known as a trial lawyer, one of Grant's cases was that of Edgar Leroy Smoak, gassed last month at Raleigh for the poison murder of his daughter, Annie Theima.

Decision Adds Fuel To Roaring Rearmament Furnace

COMES ON HEELS OF BERLIN BOAST

Proposed Expenditure of $557,510,000 Will Give Nation Best Force in World

London, March 2.—(AP)—Tossing more fuel into the roaring rearmament furnace, Britain will spend more than half a billion dollars on her air force in the next year, beginning April 1.

Air estimates announced today totaled $557,510,000—allowing purchase of planes, construction, maintenance, borrowed money, interest, etc.

Technically the figure was put at $367,500,000 as against $282,500,000 last year. This total is the estimate for specific and apparent expenses on the air force.

The larger figure, however, showed the real measure of British spending to make the British air force the world's best.

The figures, released by coincident on the heels of German Field Marshal Goering's boastful assertion yesterday that the German air force would be "awful in action" if war should come, included expenditures for the fleet air arm—planes attached to the naval fleet.

The indication of Britain's feverish rearmament came from Viscount Swaynton, Secretary of State for Air, in a memorandum accompanying estimates that the number of persons employed in the aircraft industry had increased from 30,000 in 1935 to a present 90,000.

Parliamentary approval of the estimates was regarded largely as a technicality.

Hollywood — If the candid camera can be believed, and it nearly always can, movie maidens are going in for call-glamor.

Perhaps fashion's upping the skirtline has something to do with it, although there never was a time when ladies of the cinema didn't have to pay a lot of attention to their underpinnings, seeing as how everyone else did.

PLEASED OVER HANCOCK RACE

Backers See Trend Toward Foe Of Robt. Reynolds

Reflector Bureau.

By HENRY AVERILL

Raleigh, March 1.—Mayoe it was just because the sun was shining brightly and there has been a sort of springy feeling of optimism in the air, but whatever caused it, there has been a noticeably perkier on the part of Frank Hancock's supporters to whom your correspondent has talked in the last two or three days.

In fact it may now be said that there is enough Hancock sentiment to make itself noticeable in the fog of apathy and indifference which has covered the senatorial scenery so far.

Quietly, but with persistence, the Fifth District Congressman has been getting about the state, perking up those he numbers among his backers and making partisans out of many who previously had no interest in the race one way or another. If he has succeeded in converting any Reynolds' henchmen it has not been apparent to the naked eye.

Here and there among the really influential folks of the state he has ardent admirers.

One of his backers (a chap who has been a member of the State Senate in years gone by, who has held a high state administrative office and who is now connected with one of the state's largest financial concerns), today offered the theory that the State Administration and Big Business are unfriendly to Hancock and are really backing Reynolds on the quiet.

"The hoids of Big Business know the can't handle Frank Hancock," he said. "They tried it when Frank was in the State Legislature. They've tried it on him in Congress, and it just doesn't work. On the other hand they are not in the least afraid of Bob Reynolds. They don't think he has ambition enough to hurt anybody and they believe that if it ever came down to a real pinch they could get his vote for most anything they want."

UNFINISHED BUSINESS

One medical authority calls convalescence the unfinished business of sickness—an apt label.

The initial phase of sickness is exciting—almost like a game. What's the diagnosis? What has the patient? The diagnosis having been made the second phase follows.

Treatment calls for new and interesting procedures. Besides, the sick patient, so evidently ill, draws upon everyone's sympathy.

But then there comes a time when the doctor smilingly affirms that the patient is O.K. out of danger—in a word, recovered. And at this point the unfinished, and usually badly done, business—convalescence—begins.

The patient is no longer sick, in the original sense of the term. He runs no temperature, his pulse is normal, or near to normal, the symptoms which were so alarming a few days ago have disappeared. He is again himself! But is he? Ask one who has really known illness, and he will assure you that the convalescence period is as trying, or even more so, than the period of acute illness.

Charles Lamb, the essayist, was a keen psychologist. In his essay, "The Convalescent," he most completely describes the unfinished business of sickness. He is aware not only of the physical debility present at the time the patient is declared "recovered," but also of the psychological change which the patient has undergone during his illness, and which persists long after the morbid process has subsided.

Sickness, says Lamb, enlarges the dimension of a man's self to himself. He is unspookably selfish or, in the language of modern psychology, turns all his libido inward. He may also be irritable, restless, critical, demanding.

Convalescent patients, children especially, require as much care and even more understanding than the acutely sick.

On the physical side, the longer the illness has run, the more gradual should be the resumption of physical activities. Do not allow the patient to become over-tired.

On the psychological side, it is wiser to yield at first to the demands of the patient, at least until such time as it is evident that the demands are no longer vital to his recovery but have become a habit pattern for procuring selfish pleasures.

Warns Employers To Make Reports Or Face Results

Raleigh, March 2.—Charles G. Powell, Chairman of the Unemployment Compensation Commission today warned all employers who have not made their proper quarterly wage reports for the first three quarters of last year that he is going to make no more appeals to them for compliance, but will send the sheriff or one of his deputies to deliver the information last they are behind.

Citing the fact that his department has been sending out mail notices of delinquency and that these warnings have been ignored in many cases, he said:

"I feel that many employers fail to look at the mail from the Unemployment Compensation Commission. Otherwise, I think they would do what the law requires the mto do. I know of no other way to get the information to them except to have it delivered by the sheriff, or his deputies. That is the last resort, and this is the final appeal.

He pointed out that failure of employers to file these reports has caused delay in getting checks out to eligible unemployed workers because there has been no way to determine what benefits they are entitled to in the absence of employer returns.

A check of his office revealed that approximately 100 known eligible employers have not filed the required reports for the first quarter of 1937, while 288 have failed to file for the second quarter and 543 for the third quarter, Mr. Powell said. A check also showed that nearly 1,000 employers have not filed for the fourth quarter, which were due at the end of January.

"We are having trouble enough getting compensation checks out and delivered to the unemployed workers without this additional delay caused by failure to file reports which have been due at least four months" he said.

GIRLS DEFEAT KINSTON TEAM

Lady Phantoms Obtain Revenge For Previous Defeat

By BAXTER CLARK
In their last game of the season, the Lady Phantoms of Greenville high obtained revenge last night over the Kinston sextet by defeating them in the high school by the large score of 29-7. Previously the Kinston girls had defeated the locals.

Starting early the Greenies made 6 points, with Betty Tyson doing all the scoring, before the visitors scored.

Frances Clark added 3 points and Jay Flanagan, 2. At the half the local girls held a 16-5 advantage.

Kinston was held to only one field goal in the last half due to the brilliant guarding of Dorothy Merritt, Jane Harrison and Nancy Gerts, local guards, who have shown superior defensive work all the season. Marjorie Sugg and Frances Clark led second half scoring with four points each.

High scorer for Kinston was Jean Collins who scored five of the seven points made by the visitors.

Captain Frances Clark led the Greenies with 12 points. She was followed by Betty Tyson who made eight points. Jay Flanagan and Marjorie Sugg took other scorers' honors by making four points each.

An old-timer might say:

"Thar's a bar over yander in that holler fernist (alongside) Black Mountain. Fotch me a tren and I'll go catch him. I'll larn that critter I ain't afraid of him."

CAGE TOURNNEY READY TO OPEN

Southern Conference Play Gets Started Tomorrow P. M.

Raleigh, March 2—The Southern Conference's seventeenth annual basketball tournament opens here tomorrow with the greatest first round program ever offered on opening day.

Clemson and Richmond will meet at 3 o'clock in the opening game and they will be followed on the court at 4:30 by North Carolina and Washington and Lee.

The Carolina-Washington and Lee game is the greatest crowd-puller ever offered on an afternoon program and tournament officials are confident that the game will draw the largest afternoon crowd in the history of the 17-year old tournament.

For the past three years Carolina and Washington and Lee have met in the finals in hair-raising battles. Carolina won in 1935 and 1936, but Washington and Lee won last year. This winter the drawings for first round games cast them together on opening day, and Carolina, seeded No. 1, will be favored to take the game and move to the semifinals to meet the winner of the Clemson-Richmond game.

Carolina and Washington and Lee have met twice this winter and each time Carolina won by three point margins—34-31 and 42-39.

The Citadel and Maryland will open the evening's program at 8 o'clock and they will be followed on the court at 9:30 by North Carolina State and Duke. The State-Duke battle is another unusually good first round game and packs as much drawing power as the Carolina-Washington and Lee game. A capacity crowd will view the night's program as Dr. R. R. Sermon, State coach and general chairman of the tournament, said today that sale of tickets had been the best since the tourney has been held in Raleigh.

State and Duke, Big Five rivals, broke even in their two regular games this winter. Duke took the first, 40-28, on State's court and State took the second, 49-45, on Duke's court. The winner tomorrow night will meet the victor of the Citadel-Maryland game in the semifinals Friday evening.

Dr. Sermon said today that the out-of-state-entries would arrive in Raleigh this afternoon and tonight, with one possible exception of Clemson. The Tigers have indicated that they might spend tonight in Sanford.

Carolina is still the tournament favorite with State ranking high. Although Duke and Richmond are not seeded, these clubs have strong backbones. Duke's stock jumped when the Blue Devils defeated Carolina last week.

Raleigh is ready to receive the teams. The Junior Chamber of Commerce spent most of today decorating the streets and has made arrangements to greet the players upon their arrival. The attractive young Raleigh girls who have been named as sponsors for the teams, also will be on hand to greet the players.

All the games will be played in Raleigh's Memorial Auditorium which has a seating capacity this winter of 4,700.

Twenty-eight foreign merchant ships have a greater tonnage than the Manhattan and Washington the largest liners flying the United States flag.

Man About Manhattan

By George Tucker

New York—Every cop between Pell street and Lenox avenue is wondering how George M. Cohan keeps it up. The Yankee Doodle Kid pounds a five-mile beat around the Central Park reservoir daily, and like the legend to postmen emblazoned across the facade of the Post Office, neither rain, nor hail, nor sleet, nor nuthin' is permitted to interfere with Uncle George's daily dozer.

It was hoped for a while that the extra duties imposed on Cohan by his role as President in "I'd Rather Be Right" during which he tap dances and bids his secretary "take a law," would slow him down. Far from it, the daily hikes have been increased to seven and even eight miles, and now nobody knows where the thing will end.

And yet of all the thousands aware of these goings-on, there is perhaps only one man in New York who views with appropriate alarm. This is the actor Taylor Holmes, who impersonates Secy Morgenthau in the same political burlesque, and Uncle Tay is anything but an exercise-fend.

"Hell, George," he broke out the other day when Cohan urged him to join him for a hike, "I don't believe in exercise."

"But why not?" inquired Cohan smoothly in the manner of a convert who wishes to win everybody over to his side.

"Well, I'll tell you. I see eye to eye with the late Sir Joseph Chamberlain on that subject."

"He thought walking downstairs for breakfast and up stairs to bed dances and bids his secretary 'take a law,'" would slow him down. Far from it, the daily hikes have been increased to seven and even eight miles, and now nobody knows where the thing will end.

This gave Uncle George pause. "Gee," he murmured wistfully. "We got elevators where I live, and so I couldn't be an English gentleman if I wanted to, Taylor, you've ruined my day."

Incidentally, another famous walker in New York is George S. Kaufman, the playwright, but whereas Mr. Cohan walks for exercise, Mr. Kaufman walks only to think. Practically all of his walking is confined to hotel rooms, where most of his plays are written.

"I'm the pacer type," he informed a judge during a trial recently. "My colleague sits at the table and does all the writing—and I just pace up and down."

At the moment it might not be amiss to add that Kaufman and Moss Hart are aboard ship, somewhere between here and Panama, plotting next season's show. Kaufman is the playwright who conferred with Edna Ferber about another play they hope to write in the near future.

"You know," said Miss Ferber, "I've always thought a figure like Coolidge would fit marvelously into a play."

"Wonderful," cried Kaufman, "and what a cinch to write—no dialog!"

Hill Folk 'Larn' Speech Of Folk 'Down Thar'

Gatlinburg, Tenn. (AP)—Mountain folk "way up hyar" are beginning to talk just like "the folk 'down thar'."

That is what Joseph S. Hall, youthful linguist of Columbia university, has found in classifying the speech of more than 100 persons in the heart of the Great Smoky Mountains.

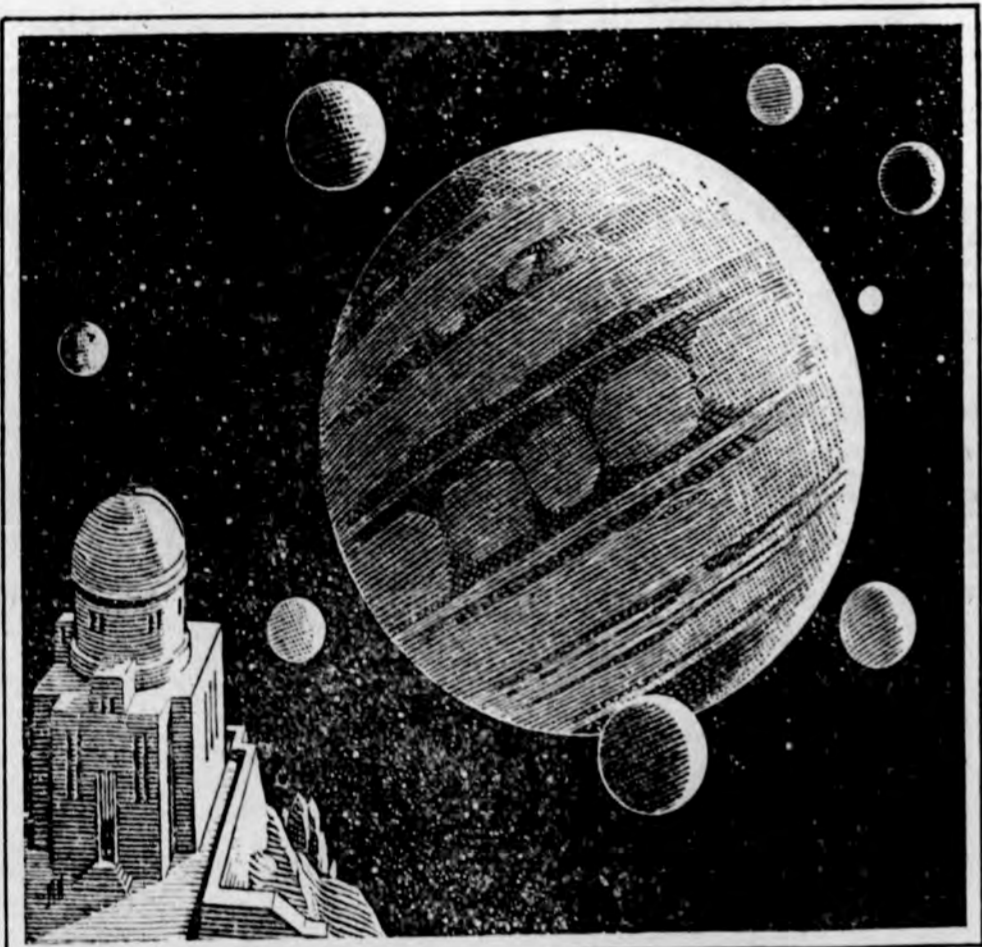

The quaint hill-billy language which was a heritage from Scotland and England is being discarded by the young mountaineers of sturdy Anglo-Saxon stock.

Old Folks Still Say 'Afeard'

Unlike their parents and grandparents they now say "first" instead of "fust" and "worst" instead of "wust," Hall found. And he heard but one boy—who had never been to school—say "larn" for "learn."

"Younger persons," he comment-

To the Editor:

When I attempted to call the attention of the small farmers of Eastern Carolina to the importance of a study of the provisions of the Farm Bill of 1938, I had no intention or desire to misrepresent anything or to mislead anybody.

Since some of the figures that I used were inaccurate a difference of 200 pounds (about one acre) and a misquote as to an 18-acre tototo base on 20 acre tillable land, constitute grounds for criticism and censure, because I did not get the "official" figures before presuming to give my statement to the public.

Since the article of last Thursday's Forum has already accomplished the purpose for which it was written (that of awakening the interest of the farmers that they may study this bill and learn what they are voting for, or against it, might be wiser to let the matter rest here. But our county agent so vigorously as-sails my attempt to help the farmers, I feel that I should emphasize the fact that although my figures were not absolutely correct, that there were discrepancies and inequalities in our township allotment just as I stated, one allotment of 740 pounds, another on land no more productive of 1,000 pounds, OFFI-CIAL FIGURES. I make no retraction whatever.

Further and finally: the people of Pitt county know me too well to attribute to me any wish or desire to deceive or to mislead; I leave the matter with them.

The British system presents an unusual opportunity for bright young aristocrats to return to political power after defeat. So it was no surprise when cheering crowds on London streets, soon after the resignation of idealistic Anthony Eden as foreign minister, called him a future prime minister. In all England there are few brighter aristocrats—and fewer better dressed—than Capt. Eden. He has everything—an excellent war record (including medals), an Oxford education, a blue-blood family and a wealthy wife.

As protege, first, of Austen Chamberlain, then of Stanley Baldwin, Eden became sort of an English Norman Davis, trotting all over Europe, conferring with bigwigs.
Here he is trying to keep up with the news while traveling.

Bright young idealists are not always popular with oldsters. Eden angled in 1935 with Sir Samuel Hoare (right), then foreign minister, after catching him and Laval of France in an act of practical diplomacy—a scheme to partition Ethiopia. Result: Hoare went down and Eden went up to the foreign ministry.

Even while his handsome brow furrowed over such matters as what Italy was doing in Africa (the engineered sanctions but couldn't stop Italy), and over what Italy and Germany were doing in Spain, he still took time to be an English gentleman.

Now he's out of a job as a result of his clash with Premier Neville Chamberlain over British policy toward Mussolini and Hitler. And Mrs. Eden (shown with one of her two sons), who once claimed she was a "diplomatic widow," probably will see more of her husband at home—but perhaps only temporarily.

SHORT SHOTS

By HENRY AVERILL

Raleigh, March 2—The North Carolina Supreme Court usually sits in a serious, if not sombre, atmosphere, but even this august tribunal enjoys its moments of levity —and none of the justices is quicker to do a bit of joshing than its oldest member, Justice Heriot Clarkson.

Tuesday Charles W. Tillett of Charlotte was earnestly and elo-quently arguing a case involving the flooding of lands below the Lake Lure hydro-electric dam when the flood gates were opened during a time of high water.

Referring to the man who had charge of the raising and lowering
Mr. Tillett said:
"He wasn't even an engineer, he was just a dam operator."

"What do you mean by a dam operator?" inquired Justice Clarkson smiling broadly and with marked accent on the "dam."

"I see you know what I mean without telling you," parried Mr.
Tillett.

Incidentally, the case mentioned in the preceding paragraph (Prady
and Clement vs. Duke Power Company) is quite an important one,
although in itself it involves no
$400. No less than 54 other suits are waiting for it to be decided. All these suits were brought as a result of high waters which they claim damaged their farms and for which they say the power company was responsible by reason of the Lake
Lure dam. The power company claims its dam did not cause the overflow which it contends was primarily due to high waters on Cove Creek which flows into the river below Lake Lure. In support of this theory it points to the fact that no farmer between Lake Lure
and the mouth of Cove Creek has brought suit, all being waged by landowners who live below that point.

Squirrels and pigeons in the Capitol grounds are getting more benefit from current sunny days than feathered folk when the weather is good.

THIMBLE THEATRE (Starring Popeye)

Washington Daybook

By Preston Grover

Washington—A year ago died a man who would have made for himself a Roman holiday of this naval building program. The name is William Mitchell, one-time chief of the army air corps. Not a public peep is heard out of the army these days, however, as the navy bids for a billion dollar building program—and probably will get it.

But the arguments against building naval monsters which were advanced by General Mitchell are whispered about among army men —particularly in the air corps.

The argument that a fast squadron of air bombers, on the loose, would drive the whole United States navy into the comparative safety of San Francisco bay still is advanced by the air-fighters. But officers who value their official necks do not suck them out. Mitchell and not value his official neck, stuck it out.

Incidently, the case mentioned
in the preceding paragraph (Prady
and Clement vs. Duke Power Company) is quite an important one,
although in itself it involves no
$400. No less than 54 other suits
are waiting for it to be decided. All
these suits were brought as a result
of high waters which they claim
damaged their farms and for which they say the power company was responsible by reason of the Lake
Lure dam. The power company
claims its dam did not cause the
overflow which it contends was
primarily due to high waters on Cove Creek which flows into the river below Lake Lure. In support
of this theory it points to the fact
that no farmer between Lake Lure
and the mouth of Cove Creek has brought suit, all being waged by landowners who live below that point.

Another Phase
That only begins the argument of course. A squadron of $250,000 bombers could fly a thousand miles, bomb the enemy and return almost before a battleship could steam up and clear the harbor.
But, say the admirals testifying before the House naval committee, one air bomb won't sink a battleship any more than one shell will sink

it. They take a lot of punishment.
Their six-inch deck armor, it is argued, will keep present air bombs out of the belly of the ship. If they bust on deck they don't hurt much —truly they don't.

Some members of Congress are talking of inviting army men to testify as to their views on whether the navy should be built up so much faster than the army and air corps.
But they haven't found a William Mitchell yet.

EMPIRE FOR A LADY

SYNOPSIS: Our unexpressed love for a young English girl has kept my uncle, James Clyde, and myself (Paul Thorne) in tropical Balingong through a Dyak revolt and Malay defeat. Christine Forrester, visioning a great empire here, has made Clyde rajah. Famine strikes and war with the Malays threatens. Christine refuses to leave and the emotional strain tightens. Then we have our first visitor, a Dutch trader on the proud.

insisted, going back to his new refrain. "If we don't get a claim on these other islands—"
"But Balingong is ready now. Christine kept at him. "We can show a deed from the Sultan of Saremba. We can even show a framework of government. That's all we can expect to show. You know as well as I do that unless we get support we cannot go on much longer. This is the time support must be found. We have to make our appeal to Singapore before the Dutch ambassador makes his appeal to London."

"London has nothing to do with my ship," Clyde said. "I'm not even in the so-called English sphere of influence. I'm an American ship in the Dutch sphere. London has nothing to say."

"That's all right for you," Christine argued. "My vessel is cleared from a British port under the British flag. I could be tried at Singapore for making war on a friendly state—or something."
"You are under the protection of the Rajah of Balingong," Clyde thundered. "Damnation! We'll change your nationality."

I could not make out then whether or not Clyde believed many of his own wild dreams. I think now that he did not believe them, not even pretend to himself that he did. I think now that his plan for empire was the recourse of a harassed man beset by innumerable difficulties. He could not have gone on as he did if he had let his mind rest upon the darkness, the malignancy, the tedium of the years ahead.

One more month passed, and it was a month of torrential rains. Some of the many unrelated things we had to do every day were becoming easier, because they were now dropping into repetitive routines. Sick Dyaks were handled in one way, and tribal quarrels another way, and so on down the laundry list. But the famine continued to tighten, and with it our trouble with the Malays.

Like Killer-Whales

WE were beginning to think that for the Malays to come with force of arms, openly at war, could hardly be so bad for us as that they should simply continue to live among us, pursuing their customary way of living.

Of all the races in the islands the Malays were the most cleanly the most advanced in culture, the most strict in those morals which they respected. But they were as predatory as killer-whales, and never could be anything else, even their religion was one of violence.

We could only go on holding them in check as well as we could, while Rentongen held ominously aloof, no longer appealing to the rajah. And from Saremba we heard no single word, either of confirmation or objection!

It could not go on forever. In mid-October the final break came between Clyde and Rentongen.

I suppose we had known from the first that the raj of Balingong was not going to be large enough to hold both the white rajah and Mantusen's Shah Bandar. The break between the two was as inevitable as the eternal lashing torrent of the rain. Yet when it came it was as sharp and quick as the stroke of a kris.

A party of Dyaks, very pathetic in their emaciation, one morning came to Clyde from far up in the headwaters of the Siderong. They had a complaint against the Malays, of course. No one ever came to us who did not. In addition to whatever other troubles they had there were always some bitter complaints against the Malays. But this complaint was a new one, even though I had seen it coming, and dreaded it for a long time.

A party of Malay traders had maneuvered a village into their debt, by no more intricate device than simply forcing them to take goods which they did not want. The Dyaks, of course, were unable to pay; none of them could pay anything any more.

To satisfy the debt, therefore, the Malays had taken from the village seven young women and one small child, who were now possessed as slaves; and, unless there was intercession, these would be bought and sold as slaves for the rest of their lives.

When Clyde heard this story his head bant wearily, and he rubbed his eyes with his fingers. The Malays had gone too far with him at last, and he could neither ignore this thing nor turn back. I remember the long long pause filled with the rush and the rattle of the wind, while I waited for Clyde to tell me what I was to do.

Will he decide to precipitate war? Continued tomorrow.

Chapter 38 The Final Break

HE stayed at Balingong four days. When van der Donggen left he presented a gift to each of us. To the rajah and rane he gave each an ivory figurine, very beautifully carved; Christine's was of the Chinese goddess Kuan-Yin. Although the presentation was made with great grace, I thought his fat fingers lingered a little bit, caressingly, on the ivory as he passed them over. It was as if he hardly liked to leave these lovely things here in Balingong, to be looted by a bunch of Dyaks after we all were destroyed.

He had not neglected to provide a gift for me, too—some black looking stuff in a bottle, intended for pouring in snake bites. That man could show a strong grasp upon essentials.

Besides bringing us the relief of a breath of air from outside, van der Donggen accomplished two things. He innocently inspired the Rajah Clyde with a tremendous new burst of ambition; and he frightened Christine.

During van der Donggen's stay Clyde kept the man up most of the night, drinking Dutch brandy and smoking long Dutch cigars, both of which van der Donggen supplied. He was getting something from van der Donggen that he had never got from him before. News of the island trade, of shipments and rates of exchange, had always been of vital interest to Clyde, but what he was getting now was a viewpoint.

It was automatically a part of van der Donggen's mind to think ahead, in terms of not only his own life, but those of his sons and his grandsons. He had almost nothing to say about future plans; yet the outlook of years ahead unconsciously colored almost every word he spoke. When van der Donggen was gone, Clyde got out his maps.

He was looking beyond Balingong now; he no longer considered that its development would be enough for his ultimate purposes. If he could develop Balingong he could develop Sumatung. Once we got started, he declared, every year would see our borders extending. In the end he would retire the fat Sultan of Saremba upon a pension, and keep him as a show-piece. Once fully developed, Sumatung would produce more rubber than Java, more hemp than Luzon.

All this he planned while we sat without income in that stinking river, surrounded by increasingly hostile Malays, and our own sick grumbling seamen; with nothing to show except the paper which gave us a kind of rented authority to run this hurrah nest if we could!

"That's wonderful," I said. "What you really need now is some large flags. Something that will look tasty when we tow you around on a barge."

"Yes—I suppose we will need one. That'll come later."

I stared at him; it seemed to me he was out of his head. "I have the flag already designed," I said. "It displays two apes, one pursuant and one fœcant, on a field of boiled rice. In the upper corner, a postage stamp, with simple directions for mailing."

He granted, "You talk like a fool."

Spheres of Influence

CHRISTINE was bewildered as I was by Clyde's attitude. She kept worrying about van der Donggen. "That man is astounded and alarmed," she declared. "He didn't believe you when you told him that you have no connection with any power, except the Sultan of Saremba. He thinks you're working for the British East India Company. He may even think that you're employed in some indirect way by the British Foreign office."

"Let him," said Clyde.

"But he'll make representations to his government. You know how sensitive the Dutch are about their sphere of influence. Those people are looking 100 years ahead. They have a hold on things that they can't possibly use, and even beyond that they are trying to keep other countries from getting a foothold where they cannot. They see plainly what we can't make England see—that the nations must get now what they're going to use later—or when they can use it they won't be able to get it."

"That's just the point," Clyde

N. Y. Stock Market

New York, March 2—(AP)—Stocks slipped into a slow decline today as buying interest ebbed throughout the market. Losses of fractions to more than a point predominated near the fourth hour. Speculation marked time while traders looked to Washington and industrial centers for significant news.

Corporate bonds drew a little better support than stocks.

Richmond Livestock

(Courtesy J. N. & J. L. Williams) Hogs—Receipts moderate; market steady and unchanged at $9 top paid for good and choice 160 to 220 lb. run of corn fed, hard finished trucked in gilts and barrows; 140-160 lbs. to $8.75 and 220-250 to $8.65; sows to $6.75. Soft and oily hogs are sold subject to discount. Cars by rail quotable 25 cents per cwt. over comparable trucked ins.

New York Cotton

New York, March 2—(AP)—Cotton futures opened unchanged to three points lower. Easier cables were partly offset by trade and commission house buying.

May recovered to 9.10 shortly after the first half-hour, when the list was net unchanged to one point lower.

Richmond Livestock

Octopus is a Sissy, Deep-Sea Diver Finds

Miami, Fla.—(AP)—The octopus is a sissy, says Robert M. Zimmerman, a deep-sea diver.

Zimmerman spiked the age-old story of battles to the death between men who go down into the sea and the many-tentacled creature of the deep.

"Octopuses are neither large nor dangerous," he reports. "They live in holes and feed on small fish and bivalves, and will flee from men."

LOANS ON CROP ARE AVAILABLE

Applications Being Received at County Agent's Office

On March 4 applications for emergency crop and feed loans in Pitt county for 1938 will be received at the county agent's office by Miss Madeline Jenkins.

The loans will be made, as in the past, only to farmers who cannot obtain credit from any other source. The money loaned will be limited to the farmer's immediate and actual cash needs for growing his 1938 crops or for the purchase of feed for livestock, and the amount which may be loaned to any one farmer in 1938 may not exceed $400.

Farmers who can obtain the funds from an individual, production credit association, bank, or other concern are not eligible for crop and feed loans from the Emergency Crop and Feed Loan Section of the Farm Credit Administration. The loans will not be made to standard rehabilitation clients whose current needs are provided for by the Farm Security Administration, formerly known as the Resettlement Administration.

As in the past, farmers who obtain emergency crop and feed loans will give as security a first lien on the crop financed, or a first lien on the livestock to be fed if the money borrowed is to be used to produce or purchase feed for livestock.

Where loans are made to tenants, the landlords, or others having an interest in the crops financed or the livestock to be fed, are required to waive their claims in favor of a lien to the Governor of the Farm Credit
