SKIES CLEAR IN OTHER STATES; RAINS IN N. C.

Many Sections Hope For Early End To Ruinous Floods

EASTERN RIVERS OVERRUN BANKS

Heavy Downpours In Drainage Areas Of Roanoke and Neuse Experienced

(By The Associated Press)

Clearing skies today in many sections gave hope of an early end to ruinous floods and rain storms which took 12 lives and caused property and crop damage totalling millions of dollars in a dozen states.

New England was hardest hit by week-long downpours which sent rivers out of their banks along the Atlantic Seaboard. The damage was conservatively put at more than three million dollars.

The tobacco crop loss in Connecticut was reported at $1,000,000 and similar heavy tolls were exacted on crops in Massachusetts and Rhode Island.

In North Carolina, continued heavy rains in the drainage areas of the Roanoke and Cape Fear rivers sent the streams into heavy floods, but no extensive damage was expected.

Weatherman Lee A. Denson said the Roanoke at Weldon had reached 39.9 feet, nine feet above flood stage, and might go to 41 feet.

At Fayetteville the Cape Fear was rising fast toward an expected depth of 40 feet, five above the flood stage.

Farmers were warned to move livestock from lowlands along both streams and some crops were reported inundated.

The Neuse was slightly out of its banks at Neuse station and Smithfield, Denson said, with little further rise anticipated unless more heavy rains fall. It was raining steadily in this section this morning.

Automobile Fails Get Around Curve

An automobile said to have been driven by Ernest Johnson failed to make a curve just beyond Greenville cemetery yesterday and ran into a telephone pole, badly wrecking the car and injuring a passenger. James Edmundson suffered a severe blow on the head, but was not confined to the hospital. Johnson was convicted in Municipal court this morning and ordered to pay the costs.

Green and Gold

(By The Associated Press)

South Georgia, Northern Florida and Eastern Alabama are thinking in terms of green and gold today.

When the sing-song jargon of the tobacco auctioneer brings forth Thursday morning, July 28, it will mark the opening of the 21st tobacco season in Georgia. And it will signify the end of the dull summer period and the beginning of what promises to be a rich harvest time.

Some 70,000,000 pounds of Georgia bright leaf tobacco is expected to find its way into the hands of buyers. Approximately 28,000 growers are eagerly awaiting news of the first sales on the tobacco markets of 15 South Georgia and two Florida cities.

Natives Can Not Afford New Standards Of Living

Den Pasar, Bali, July 25.—(AP)—"Paradise no longer pays" is the verdict of young and old Bali natives. They complain they cannot afford the new standards of living now invading this famous island of the Netherlands East Indies which legend and tourist pamphlets call "Paradise Isle."

The lure of "Western store-clothes" has gripped Bali, whose natives heretofore dressed only in a multi-colored strip of cloth worn loosely about the hips.

Long-tailed shirts—worn outside the trousers—plus four and fedora hats are the coveted articles now of the wardrobe of a young Balinese man-about-town, while in all the larger villages dancing girls and their mothers are beginning to wear hip-length cotton jackets.

When the large round-world tour-boats, carrying thousands of American tourists, visit the island each year, special Balinese dances

CHINESE HOLD FIRM AGAINST JAP INVADERS

Air, Land and Naval Forces Combined for Big Drive

YANGTZE RIVER PORT OBJECTIVE

Chinese Communications Contend Naval and Land Forces are Thwarted in Effort

Shanghai, July 26.—(AP)

Japan's air, land and naval forces combined their power today in an intensified drive on Kiukiang, key Yangtze river port, but Chinese defenders of the battered city were reported holding firm.

Foreign sources said the invaders were using all possible power to gain the river gateway to Hankow, 135 miles up river.

Land forces fought on toward Kiukiang from Kutang, seven miles away, but met stubborn opposition.

It was believed the Japanese had not yet attacked Kiukiang itself and were disinclined to endanger foreign property there.

One Japanese force was reported to have reached the foot of Kuliang mountain, where 50 Americans and 100 other foreigners were taking refuge.

Chinese communications said vigorous fire had thwarted repeated Japanese attempt to take Kiukiang by direct naval and land action and had forced the invaders to depend on aerial attacks.

Many Legislators In 1939 Assembly To Be "Freshmen"

Walter "Pete" Murphy, Who First Went to Legislature in 1897, Will Be Dean of House

Reflector Bureau. By HENRY AVERILL

Raleigh, July 25.—Walter "Pete" Murphy, who made his first trip to Raleigh as a state Representative in 1897 when there were plenty of Negroes sitting in the chamber with him, will be dean of the 1939 House, with no competition to his 14 previous terms.

The House itself will be more than fifty per cent "freshmen" a surfeit of nominees certain of election reveals.

With six counties still to nominate their candidates by convention rather than by primary, the House lineup for 1939 will likely show an absolute minimum of 50 (exactly half the membership) without previous legislative experience, against 52 who have served in former Houses and two who have sat in the State Senate though not in the House.

In other words, there will be 50 per cent freshmen plus whatever proportion of the six unsettled nominations turn out to be unexperienced.

WHITE WOMAN IS ASSAULTED

Capt. Dorsey Aids In Probe of Robersonville Case

Capt. Bowen Dorsey of the Greenville police department was called to Robersonville yesterday by aid in an investigation of a brutal attack on an aged white woman.

Capt. Dorsey said Mrs. Lida Jenkins, who lives alone six miles south of Robersonville in Martin county, was attacked and robbed by a Negro man Saturday night and left unconscious.

The attack did not become known until Sunday morning when a Negro woman went to the house and found all the doors locked. A nearby white neighbor was called and the door to the house was broken down and the woman found lying unconscious on the floor. Five deep wounds were on her head, three running up and down and two across.

Sheriff Charlie Roebuck was said by Capt. Dorsey to be hunting a suspect in the case.

The intruder entered the house by breaking a window and came out the same way. Capt. Dorsey between 10 and 12 dollars were taken by the Negro, who dropped a pint bottle half filled with liquor either going in or out of the window.

SWOLLEN RIVERS MENACE SOUTHWEST TEXAS

NEW VIOLENCE IN PALESTINE

Thirty-Nine Arabs are Killed by Bomb in Market Place

Haifa, Palestine, July 25.—(AP)—A bomb blasted the crowded Arab market place here today for the second time in a month, killing 39 Arabs and wounding between 50 and 60.

The incident was the most costly in the turbulent strife between Jews and Arabs which has been sweeping the Holy Land anew since July 5.

It occurred at the same spot where 23 were killed and more than 60 injured July 6 in an explosion and a street battle.

New racial clashes immediately followed today's blast which spread panic among the populace. In swift reprisals and counter reprisals one Jew was shot to death and another Jew and Arab were wounded.

Purified reinforcements were called hurriedly to aid marines and troops in quelling the disturbance.

O'DANIEL WINS FOR GOVERNOR

Assures Public He'll Be 'Regular Fellow' As Governor

Dallas, Texas, July 24.—(AP)—W. Lee O'Daniel, novice politician, who made a shambles of Texas political precedent, assured his public today he would be "a regular fellow" as Governor and scoffed at the possibility of a dictatorship.

Mired indirectly in the O'Daniel landslide were two potent members of Congress, Maury Maverick and Morgan Sanders, who was slated for eventual chairmanship of the powerful House Ways and Means Committee.

The mild radio-flour salesman had mounted a sound truck with a hill billy band and struck out after "those professional politicians" long after seasoned foes had started stamping the state.

Paul Kilday, 28-year-old attorney, defeated Maverick, New Deal mainstay, by 589 votes. Junkie came reports that Maverick would demand an investigation and recount.

RESUME PROBE OF ELECTIONS

Deane - Burgin Lawyers Emulate Pot and Kettle

By HENRY AVERILL

Raleigh, July 25.—A weary state board of elections today resumed its investigations in charges of fraud and intimidation in the 8th District Congressional primary after attorneys for W. O. Burgin, apparent victor, and C. B. Deane, face of the returns loser, spent most of Saturday emulating the storied pot and kettle in the matter of calling each other black.

Late in the steamy afternoon, a very tired, bedraggled board recessed after hearing former Governor J. C. B. Ethinghaus, principal Burgin advocate, challenge its jurisdiction to pass on the charges forcefully presented and eloquently argued by Major L. P. McLendon, chief of Deane counsel.

BULLET FALLS HIT GOVERNOR

Attempt Made on Life Of Governor Of Puerto Rico

San Juan, Puerto Rico, July 25.—(AP)—Major General Blanton Winship, Governor of Puerto Rico, escaped an assassin's bullet at Ponce today while he was reviewing a parade.

First telephone reports to the Governor's palace here said neither Governor Winship nor any member of his party was injured.

Police immediately returned the fire among large crowds watch celebration of the fortieth anniversary of the landing of the American troops in the Spanish-American war.

Police said the first shot was believed to have been fired by a member of the Nationalist party, the group demanding independence for the United States insular possession.

LEAF FARMERS MAY TRANSFER THEIR QUOTAS

May Even Make Deal With Grower in Another State

RULES GIVEN OUT BY AAA OFFICIAL

Lump Sum Transfers from One State to Another Prohibited, However, By Law

Washington, July 25.—

(AP)—William Collins, chief of the AAA tobacco section, said today lump sum transfer of flue-cured leaf from one state to another under the farm act would be prohibited.

Despite this apparent determination to leave the state quotas intact, Collins said individual farmers would be permitted to transfer quotas without regard to state lines.

This system, therefore, will be directed only to individual cases and will apply in the same way as transfers of poundage allotments between producers within a state.

For example, AAA officials explained, if a farmer in Georgia produces more than his quota of tobacco and can not sell the overage without penalty he may purchase from an under-producing farmer in Georgia or another state the unused portion of a quota.

The two farmers may work out the transaction between themselves and file details with the county agent or field assistant of the AAA. Or they may ask a warehouseman to close the transaction for them. In the latter case the transfer rate would be five cents a pound.

The penalty for selling more tobacco than allowed under the quota is half the sale price, or three cents a pound, whichever is higher. These transfer details apply only to states which produce flue-cured tobacco, the Carolinas, Virginia, Georgia, Florida and Alabama.

Food Distributed To State's Needy

Raleigh, July 25.—More than one million pounds of food was distributed in North Carolina by the Surplus Community Corporation in June, A. E. Langston, State director, said today.

The 1,000,977 pounds of foodstuffs doled out from the eight warehouses in the state was in eight commodities and pounds listed as follows: fresh apples, 20,022; dried lima beans, 152,246; dried pea beans, 72,634; fresh cabbage 472,901; dried skim milk, 62,322; fresh oranges, 182,132; dried prunes, 27,358; milled rice 101,358.

How's Your Health?

Edited for the New York Academy of Medicine
By Iago Goldstein, M.D.

Don't Neglect Dyspepsia

Oversimplification is dangerous. This is particularly true when the layman tries to diagnose and treat what he believes to be a simple disturbance.

Dyspepsia (indigestion) is a case in point. Many say: "My stomach is upset. I ate something that disagreed. I have an acid stomach. I guess I'll take something for my indigestion."

When a patient who is over 40 complains of chronic indigestion, what disease conditions are likely to be the underlying cause of this symptom?

Dr. A. B. Rivers recently investigated this matter. He studied a large group of patients attending the Mayo clinic and found that nearly half of those between the ages of 30 and 60 included among their complaints that of indigestion. Upon further investigation he found in men over 40 these principal causes of indigestion:

People over 23 per cent; functional disturbances, including "neural" disturbances, including "cancer of the gastro-intestinal tract, pancreas, etc. 17 per cent; cancer of the stomach, 12.2 per cent; gall bladder disease, 9 per cent; disease of the heart and blood vessels, 5 per cent.

In women over 40, some of the causes of their indigestion were:

Gall bladder disease, 24.5 per cent; functional disturbances, 19.8 per cent; peptic ulcer, 13.3 per cent; cancer of the gastro-intestinal tract, etc. 5.8 per cent; disease of the heart and blood vessels, 4.8 per cent; cancer of the stomach, 4.2 per cent.

These findings are impressive. It is startling to think of the fate of dyspeptic men and women, over 40, who fail to appreciate the gravity of their symptoms and treat themselves with ineffective remedies.

Indigestion, remember is a symptom and not a disease. And it is possible to relieve symptoms without correcting the underlying cause. But symptoms are warning signals and it is folly to mask the danger signals and proceed as if the trouble ahead were clear.

"Sir William Osler once said, 'Credulity remains a permanent fact unaltered by civilization or education.'

We cannot subscribe to the belief that men and women cannot or will not learn to have their dyspepsia promptly diagnosed and adequately treated.

LOVE ON THE RANGE

BY NELSON C. WYSE

The Story So Far

Someone is trying to smash the Rafter T by every means possible. Going by the name of Streeter, "Blur" Ankrom takes a job there to help lovely Lee Trone. Betty Struthers sets on the ranch under false pretenses. She makes a play for Ankrom which puts him in bad with Lee Ratchford, the sheriff, and Ankrom that Claydell, a neighboring rancher, wants the Trone land because a railroad is going through.

Chapter 21

The Net Tightens

ANKROM'S glance beat against Ratchford speculatively. A blur of motion off to one side caught his attention. It was Betty walking hurriedly toward the house. He turned his glance back on the sheriff and caught the tag end of a scowl being ironed from the beefy cheeks. "What are you figuring to do about it?"

"Do? There ain't nothin' that I can do—yet. I've got to wait till Claydell comes out into the open. He's a slick one; he'll be right careful not to tip his hand."

"Must have tipped it already. You got onto him."

"I got onto him, yeah. But from another angle. Claydell ain't tipped nothin' an' likely won't Trone's due to have his hair lifted."

Ankrom's brows raised slightly. "If you think that, why don't you do something? Ain't that what you're packing that star for?"

"Listen," Ratchford said. "A sheriff can't act until a crime's been committed. When Claydell grabs this ranch I'll have him, an' believe me, I'll see that he gets the limit. I'm bettin' he's the damn pack-biter that's spreadin' these vorns about me bein' out to even up with Trone!"

"What have you done about that dream killing? Found the fellow that fired the shot yet?"

The sheriff's heavy lips curled grimly. "I won't have to go very far to put my hands on him."

"That's interesting," Ankrom said. "I never did cotton to the sort of hombraes that start their smokin' when a fellow's not lookin' when you're ready to go after him. Let me know, I'd like to lend a hand."

"By the way, have you heard any more about that gun man, Bandera you was telling me about?" Ankrom asked.

Ratchford nodded with what seemed to Ankrom an odd reluctance. "Yeah, he's not only arrived, Streeter, but he's bedded down snug as an old houn' dog with Claydell."

Ankrom's muscles stiffened. If this were true it would account in part for Ratchford's thinking Claydell the power behind the things that were happening here. In fact if this were true it might well be that the sheriff was right in thinking Claydell the man who was out to smash the Rafter T. And if Claydell was the man, it was high time something was done to put a halt to his activities; it was time steps were taken to bring him into the open. Plainly here was something to think about!

"What did you say gave you the idea Claydell is figuring on a railroad coming through here?"

Ratchford grinned. "I didn't say. But I don't mind tellin' you I got a couple of his men—higher-ups. He's not only figuring on a road comin' through here, but aims to build a town not half a mile outside this valley. His idea is that a railroad will make it boom. He plans to have a bank, two or three good-sized saloons, ten or twelve stores, corals and shipping pens chutes and squeeze. With a town like that taking his orders he'll be good as a king in this section. He's got vision an' a hell of a lot of nerve. He'll smash Trone flatter'n a pancake—he's got to have this ranch."

Feeling Of Resentment

"YOU tell it good."

"I'm tellin' you the truth!"

"What's he want the valley for?"

"I never said he did. I said he was after the ranch, an' I mean extra."

"Yeah, he'll be wantin' this valley though, as much if not more than any other part."

Ratchford's heavy features wrinkled in a scowl; there was perplexity in his glance. "Why?"

It was Ankrom's turn to smile.

"Because if Claydell's aimin' to build a town when—and if—the railroad builds through this ranch, he'll be smart enough to see that this valley here will control one hell of a big section of this ranch."

"How do you figure that?"

"Ankrom's teeth flashed wider. "Water!" he said it coldly.

"The sheriff put a hand to his forehead and sent a roving glance out over the valley from rim to distant rim. There was a strange light in his smoky eyes when he turned them back on Ankrom. "You're right," he admitted softly. "I hadn't thought of that."

and strode out into the sunlight that filled the yard. He saw Lee wave and knew the gesture was for Ratchford and saw her coming toward him. They passed in the center of the yard. Ankrom would have attempted to make some explanation of the scene she had witnessed in the bunkhouse, but she passed him with lifted head and eyes that were filled with scorn.

A feeling of resentment welled up within him; not at Lee, but at the tricks of fate. At Ratchford, too, for he was remembering now that Ratchford and Lee had once been friendly. As he strode to the veranda, a passionate hatred of Tom Ratchford tightened its grip on Ankrom. He wished that it were Ratchford instead of Claydell who was out to smash the Rafter T: a wicked desire was surging through him to cross guns with the burly sheriff. Npthing, he felt, would give him so much pleasure as sight of that heavy figure pitching forward in the dust!

He ceased at the veranda steps, looking up at Trone expectantly. "You wanted me?"

"I did," Trone's voice was curt. "What have you done about finding them rustlers?"

"Nothing I can do, now. They've got your beef and they've vanished. I told you how they were working. There's nothing more that I can do unless they strike again."

"Well, you can't be hangin' around wasting your time. When I hire a man I expect him to get results."

Ankrom stared at Trone in silence. Trone's eyes finally shifted; twin spots of color appeared in his cheeks. "When a man hires me he gets results. Any time you don't like my style you know what you can do. An' if you got any notions about handin' me my time, why I'll tell you right now I'll be well pleased to get off this range."

Trone stepped back a pace before the suppressed fury that he read in Ankrom's look. "Why—why, no, I wasn't figurin' on handin' you your time," he stammered. "This rustling has got me rattled. I reckon maybe I spoke a bit hasty-like. Streeter. Forget it, will you?"

Galloping Hoofs

BEFORE Ankrom could answer the sudden pound of galloping hoofs rang out. He turned and his eyes flashed upward quickly, toward the valley rim. They caught a horseman driving a staggering bronc. Like a madman the rowling rider drove his pony down the treacherous ditch to the valley floor, and out across that floor on a reeling line for the buildings clustered at its center.

"What now?" Trone's husky voice crowled wearily. "Don't the fool know better than to ride a horse like that in this heat?"

Ankrom's glance stayed with the horse and rider; the horse's hoofs struck out more boundingly with every nearing yard, and forty yards away it dropped. The rider lit on sprinting legs and kept on coming. He reached the veranda panting. Hot wrath blazed from his eyes.

Trone grabbed the puncher by the shoulders; shook him. "What in blazes," he hissed, "has happened now?"

The man gulped panting, striving to catch his breath. He looked appealingly to Ankrom.

"Take your time," Ankrom told him.

Trone glared, but held his temper.

Ankrom studied the rider. The man was known upon the pay roll as Ring-Legs. He was a bald-headed fellow with big buck teeth and squinty eyes. Just now those eyes were wide and filled with anger. Ankrom had assigned him to the southwest line camp with orders to keep his glance upon the cattle ranging there. Plainly something had gone amiss or the man would not be here; equally plain was the fact that this was no ordinary trouble, or the man would not have come in the manner in which he had.

"I wasn't sure I'd make it!" said the man, still breathing fast.

"What's happened?" Trone demanded.

"Plenty! There was surveyors all up an' down our tank this morning. They was peerin' through them little telescopes they carries an' wavin' their hands an' all. I asked 'em what was the big idea, but all they'd say was that they was county surveyors follerin' orders."

While the man paused for breath Ankrom glanced at Trone. The rancher's face looked gray and drawn. Ankrom looked back at Ring-Legs.

Ring-Legs said: "Them fellas cleared out a little fore noon. 'Bout two o'clock a bunch of gents drove up in a couple wagons an' began unloadin' wire an' posts. I says, 'This has gone about far enough! What the hell do you polecats think you're doin'?"

"Go on," said Ankrom coldly. "Let's have both barrels an' get it over."

"They said there's been a mistake in boundary lines. That tank don't belong to us. Boone Heflie has give 'em orders to string a fence!"

Cowboys Hunt For a Darn Bad Horse: The King Of The Broncs Is Getting Old

Five Minutes to Midnight heads the All-America bucking team

Midnight gets second place.

By ROBERT E. GEIGER
(AP Feature Service Writer)
Cheyenne, Wyo.—The cow waddies are hunting for a crown prince that eventually will succeed Five Minutes to Midnight, king of broncs.

A bucking king has to be born to the purple—mean, sulky and hot-tempered, or just plain bucker-for-the-love-of-it. You can't train one—that's why the hunt is on.

Five Minutes is 16 years old, and a horse can't live forever. He's the best—or the worst, according to the viewpoint—bucking horse that ever lived, says Vern Elliott, former rodeo rider, now half owner of a rodeo circuit. Five Minutes is ace of the cowboy.

Steamboat Gets A Vote
Elliott's opinion is backed by that of a former world's champion cowboy, But John Charles Thompson of Cheyenne, editor of the Wyoming State Tribune, doesn't agree. Cheyenne Frontier Days Show "doddy" of 'em all" since it was inaugurated 40 years ago. His choice is Steamboat, long dead.

Before this year's Frontier Days festival (July 26-30), all three experts picked an "All America" of bad buckers. They agreed on Midnight, predecessor of Five Minutes, and Steamboat. By two votes, Thompson holding out for Steamboat, they awarded top, all-time honors to Five Minutes. By the same two votes, Midnight, who died in 1936, got second place.

From there on, no horse rated more than one vote. Five minutes still is good for many rodeo seasons unless something unforeseen occurs but Elliott would like to find a young successor to him.

Not Mean—Just Rough
"I think the top hands will agree that when Five Minutes don't want to be ridden, nobody in the world can ride him," says Elliott. "He's had 50 cowpokes astride his back since 1923 and only about nine of them stuck."

"Old Five is still going strong. He gives the grandstand its money's worth. And all the riders like him because he's honest. He doesn't play mean tricks. Bucking is a science with him."

Hollywood

Sights And Sounds

By Robbin Coons

(Billy Burke, Hollywood's first lady of comedy, today stands in for Robbin Coons, our movie columnist, who is on vacation.)

By BILLIE BURKE

Hollywood—If it's all the same to you, Robbin Coons, I've been wanting for a long time to do a "dear diary" on the trials of living up—or down, as the case may be—to a stage and screen character. You have no idea how difficult it is to lead a sane, normal life when every stranger you meet, who's seen any of your pictures, expects you to give him a bland smile and say how gold that morning you took the ghoulish out of the bowl and washed them with soap and water.

When I go into a department store to buy a pair of gloves I'm like as not to bring forth a battery of the store's most solicitous salespeople. They give me the same protection they would a ten-year-old child venturing forth with her first five-dollar bill and have the most mournful look on their faces when I don't start trying gloves on the clerk—just to be in character. I think they expect me to punch the time-clock on my way out.

Gracie Allen may not know it, but I was a very sympathetic audience for her the other day. She placed a straightforward, specific order for a pair of stockings, and the salesgirl broke into a peal of laughter. By the time Gracie received her package, the whole counter of clerks was almost in hysterics.

Then there was the time Boris Karloff's gardener turned around to find the actor giving him a very intent, studied look. The man fled the place, without stopping for clothes or baggage. Poor Karloff really was interested in analyzing the gardener's face. He wanted to copy it in his make-up for his next picture.

Basil Rathbone tells me he had one of the most unhappily embarrassed moments of his life when an excited woman accosted him at the preview of "David Copperfield" screaming "I hate you, I hate you." "I cringe sometimes," says Basil, "when I think that I'm one of the most despised of screen characters." I know just how Basil feels.

I don't suppose Mischa Auer has gone to a party in three years without being expected to do the "monkey act" and leap from the chandeliers to the divan.

Strangers who know Glenda Farrell only by her wise-cracking character parts invariably open their conversation with the fastest slang they can muster. It's very embarrassing to Glenda, who doesn't know if she should speak their "slang right back at them" and put them at ease, or if they're trying to put her at ease by speaking her language—or at least her screen language, for there probably never was a lovelier, softer and better-mannered voice than Glenda's in private life.

I never cease being amused at the shocked expressions on the faces of new acquaintances when they discover that I eat my breakfast, wind my clock, get to the set on time, have my shower on schedule, and lead the same kind of life as any other human. I'm a zany on the screen and stage and they think I should be that way in real life.

But then—life is just full of little vagaries, and I don't seem to mind too much of being a little "vague-ary" myself—Pardon me!

Washington—American importers of German goods have discovered a way to duck Treasury regulations intended to counteract German subsidies.

Old Lyme, Conn.—Today I had a long talk with Edwin P. Norwood, friend of Hugh S. Fullerton, old circus man and theatrical agent who used to pave the way for those fabulous tours taken by Maud Adams.

I had known Old Lyme to be an important art center, but it was not until I got to talking with Norwood that I realized how singular this Association is.

It has 38 members and 29 of them own homes in the community. And included in this number are names that are famous all over the art world.

SUNDAY GAME IS RAINED OUT

King Loses Hurlers' Duel to Archer in First Tilt Saturday; Bruins Wallop Local Pitchers in Nightcap, 12-1.

New Bern, July 25.—Excellent pitching and convincing hitting gave Doc Smith's Bruins a double-barreled victory over Greenville Saturday.

Durden Archer pitched a three-hitter in the opener to better Doc King in a 3-1 pitchers' duel. Doug Hautz allowed six hits in the night cap, in which the Bears hopped on four pitchers for a 12-1 victory.

Worless Knowles clouted a homer in the sixth inning of the curtain-raiser, with nobody on, but it took the nightcap to get the Bears started along the homer line. Alf Anderson drove one over the left field fence in the opening inning, and Burge poled one over right in the second. Anderson came back in the third to send another Wallop over left, this time with two on. Roth joined the swing session by sending a terrific homer over right center in the fourth. Roth's blow traveled very far, as did Anderson's in the first.

Greenie's singleton in the first game came in the third inning, as a result of King's single, two walks, and an infield out. The visitors got their second-game run in the fourth, on singles by Daniels, Christopher and Caligiuri.

OLDEST CHAMPION

New York (AP)—J. M. Barnes, at 53, holds the Long Island open golf championship. That probably makes him the oldest title holder in the country. Jim hasn't done much in the major championships of recent years but he is one of the few who have won the National Open, the PGA and the British Open championships.

In 1876 there were only 200 telephones in Europe and 376 in the United States.

TWO-TON TONY SERIOUSLY ILL

Two-ton Tony Galento, heavyweight boxer and keeper of an Orange, N. J., tavern, is in Orange hospital fighting a sudden attack of broncho-pneumonia. Here three youngsters, anxious concerning their hero, ask "How's Tony?" as Mrs. Galento and Joe Jacobs, manager of the 227-pound fighter, emerge from the infirmary where Tony battles for life.

TO MEET 'MASKED MARVEL' HERE

Dick Gammons (above) of Toronto Canada, will meet the 'Masked Marvel' in the weekly wrestling show at the Armory tomorrow (Tuesday) night, in the feature grappling match. Gammons joins the wrestling circuit with good recommendations as a mat artist. Fans who witnessed last week's matinee know that the Marvel is a tough customer, but those who know Gammons say the Canadian is about as tough as they come. In addition to a semi-final match between Eric Dugan and Chin Lee Chinese champion, there will be another battle royal between Chinese boxers sponsored by local business firms.

OPENS SCHOOL FOR COACHES

High, Prep and College Mentors Gather at Duke

Durham, July 25.—With high, prep and college mentors from all parts of the south and east in attendance, Duke University's eighth annual summer school for coaches started here this morning.

The institute, one of the south's biggest, will continue through Saturday.

First session today—at nine o'clock—was football under Duke's nationally-famous Wallace Wade. There was an hour and a half session on the grid game followed by a like period on basketball under Duke Coach Eddie Cameron. Training was held from 12-12:30.

This afternoon Coach Carl Voyles was to give first session on track from 2:30 until four with the football demonstration period taking up then and continuing until 5:30.

There is great interest in Coach Wade's sessions on football this year due to the fact that he is paying special attention to one of the most important departments of football—the kicking game.

With a good all-round kicking game, the Duke mentor says, a team can come through with a fairly successful season regardless of its shortcomings in the various other departments of play.

While the kicking game will be stressed, other departments of the game will be covered. All phases of line play, blocking, tackling and the other fundamentals will be discussed and demonstrated.

Coach Eddie Cameron's basketball course also received much attention. The Duke mentor, who consistently produces fine basketball teams at the institution, bounded into the limelight last winter when his "Never a Dull Moment Boys" crowned their way into the Southern conference championship. Coach Cameron will tell the story of that famous outfit during the sessions on basketball.

The football demonstrations in the afternoon will bring out the important points of Coach Wade's morning lectures.

Tatum Gets Release From Tarboro Club

Tarboro, July 25.—Big Jim Tatum has received his release from the Tarboro club of the Coastal Plain League.

Tatum requested his release in order that he might take a rest before joining Carl Snavely at Vanderbilt to conduct a football coaches' school. Snavely is head-coach at Cornell, and Tatum is an assistant on his staff.

The doctor who has been suffering from low blood pressure, Ed Black, recently released by New Bern, joined the local club today.

Dean has been bothered all season by the middle finger of his pitching hand, following an operation on it early this Spring.

GALENTO GIVEN A GOOD CHANCE

Improves Following Blood Transfusions Yesterday

Orange, N. J., July 25.—(AP)—Tony Galento made a series of comebacks yesterday and reiterated his intention to "kill that bum" (broncho-pneumonia), after once sinking so low that his four physicians had held little hope for his recovery.

The doctors prescribed first a "fight talk" and then a blood transfusion for the rotund, 227-pound heavyweight.

Tony had a bad night Saturday. Early Sunday morning his temperature rose to 105.6, the highest since his sudden illness Friday. Shaking their heads, the doctors said he was "very low." The beer-drinking mauler of the prize-fighting ring, who used to boast he could lick any man in the world, barely could lift his arm.

Independent Tony brought his temperature down to 103.8 at noon. But the doctors still expressed concern, although they said his heart action was strong.

"The fight talk" was prescribed by Dr. Norman Plummer, New York heart specialist, who said: "He's not fighting the case. He doesn't realize how serious it is."

Tony's fight manager, Joe Jacobs, the only visitor he was allowed to have today, was sent in for the pep talk.

Joe said he gave the fighter a regular between-the-rounds talk-in-to. He said the old sparkle came back into the fighter's eyes as he half-raised himself under his oxygen tent and vowed: "I'll kill that bum."

Boostered by two blood transfusions, Galento rested comfortably last night. He continued to show slight improvement. He received the first transfusion in mid-afternoon, and the second at 7:30 p. m. A half pint of blood was given Galento each time.

John Henry Lewis, light-heavyweight champion, visited Galento last night. Galento and Lewis were scheduled to meet at Philadelphia on Tuesday night in a 15-round bout, but Tony's illness forced calling off the bout.

Lewis reached under the oxygen tent in which Tony is enclosed, shook his hand and said: "Sorry, Tony, old boy. I hope you get on your feet real soon."

"I will, I will," Tony replied.

Tony's wife, Mary, who brought him some home-made chicken soup Sunday, disclosed that the fighter had pneumonia five years ago. They were married three years ago and Mrs. Galento said she had not known of his previous illness herself until told by his regular physician, Dr. Joseph High.

Last time he "beat the bum" in three days.

New York, July 25.—(AP)—Stocks churned furiously for a time in today's market and while selected issues managed to hold gains running to two points or so, profit selling pulled many leaders down from their best in late dealings and canceled numerous gains.
In the forenoon the ticker fell as much as three minutes behind. There were a few subsequent speed-ups, but several especially low intervals interfered as prices backed away.
Transfers were around 2,100,000 shares.

Oops --- It Wasn't Clark Gable But Robbin Coons of Hollywood

(By The AP Feature Service)
New York—Robbin Coons came to town the other day, dropped in at the Roxy to see a movie, and was barely inside the door before a girl rushed up to him and said, "Please, Mr. Gable, may I have your autograph?"
It's a true story. Mr. Coons says it happens frequently in Hollywood—when he isn't being mistaken for Robert Montgomery or John Hall. But he hardly expected New York to look at him twice.
Mr. Coons is six feet tall, deeply tanned, has dark hair and eyes, and a flashing smile. He speaks in a low voice, with a faint southern accent, a hangover from his native town of Baton Rouge, Louisiana. Ten years in Hollywood hasn't killed the drawl.
Mr. Coons has seen three or four movies a week for ten years and he still likes the movies. He likes movie stars, too, but he wouldn't think of getting in front of the camera himself. Hollywood, he says, is full of better looking men. Besides, he says, he can't act and he'd rather write a movie column.
His favorite star? He wouldn't tell. Currently, he admires Danielle Darrieux. He's always been true to Shirley Temple. He predicted she would be a box-office attraction long before she got important.
Mr. Coons has seen plenty of stars rise and fall in his ten years of Hollywood. He started his newspaper career back with the college daily at Louisiana State University.
Worked for the State Times at Baton Rouge for three months, joined The Associated Press staff in that city, and soon got going in a big way. He covered the worst flood in the history of the deep Mississippi valley—that was in '27—and gained national recognition by his coverage of the political conventions that nominated Al Smith and Herbert Hoover.
He went to Hollywood after working in the New York office of the AP for five months.
What does he do for diversion when he isn't seeing movies? Goes to parties given by the stars—when he has to. He prefers a quiet evening at home with friends. Reads a lot. Deep stuff. Likes serious movies, too.
This is the way he sees it: "I'd rather see an unpretentious good picture than a super-colossal, expensive picture badly made."
This movie enthusiasm doesn't run in the Coons family. Mrs. Coons goes on a movie strike now and then. She gets tired of previews.
Young William Robbin Coons, Jr.—but Bill, not Robbin—hasn't been to a movie yet. He's only four. But when he's seven, the family will celebrate. Not before. Even a Mickey Mouse cartoon is pretty scary for small youngsters, says father. And what father says, goes.

1937—R. P. Bender of Jones county, whose four previous terms were served consecutively, beginning in 1929. Two years ago he was unexpectedly defeated at the polls, but this year he staged a comeback.
Back of this trio of veterans there are groups with three, two and one terms, with seven, nine and thirty-three members, respectively. Then there are the two with prior Senate experience, the 60 freshmen and the six yet to be selected.
