Bemoans Barrier Between Labor and Mill Management

HEARD BY CIVIL LIBERTIES GROUP

Republic Steel Corporation's version of recent strike given by Tom Girdler

Washington, Aug. 11.—(AP)—Tom Girdler, telling Republic Steel Corporation's version of last summer's steel strike, bemoaned today what he described as the legalization of barriers between labor and management.

"Back in 1919," the corporation chairman told the Senate Civil Liberties Committee, "you were commended if you had close relations with your men, if you let them tell you what they thought and told them what you thought."

"Now it is an unfair labor practice if you tell them what you think."

Girdler carried to the stand with him a long prepared statement in which he demanded a Senate investigation of "violence and intimidation" by the CIO, but Chairman LeFollette (Prog.-Wis.) decided against hearing it immediately.

He said the steel executives were like on "arrogance" of CIO leaders, and suggested investigators look into the manner in which the Steel Workers Organizing Committee used a $1,500,000 fund at their disposal during the strike.

The committee's investigation has been "one-sided," he complained.

Other developments: The PWA advanced its authorized 1938 construction program to $1,396,294,374 with presidential approval of 97 additional non-federal projects.

Allocations today, all grants included: Wake county, N. C., schools, $112,500.

Douglas Corrigan said he planned to return immediately to New York or to assemble his 900 Atlantic-spanning airplane and then to prepare for a regular job.

Feted at breakfast by members of the Civil Aeronautics Authority, Corrigan told a group of government officials he intended soon to accept a co-pilot's job with an airline company.

Up To Candidates Keep Republicans Out Of Primaries

State Board of Elections Points Out Law Providing Anyone With Right Challenge Vote

Reflector Bureau.

Raleigh, Aug. 11.—It's up to the Democratic primary candidates to keep Republican voters out by protest at the polls, rather than by squawking loudly about it after the fact, the State Board of Election ruled, in effect, in passing on the many election rows which broke out after this summer's primary voting.

In the contest of Rivers D. Johnson against Abner Barker in the Sixth Judicial it was vigorously contended that hundreds of Sampson county Independents, Republicans and Socialists were permitted to vote.

On this county the board said in its findings:

"The primary law provides 'anyone may at any time any election propose to vote challenge his right to vote in the primary of any party upon he ground that he does not affiliate with such party, or does not in good faith intend to support the candidate of such party, and it shall be the duty of the registrar and judges if election, upon such challenge, to determine whether or not the elector has a right to vote in said primary."

"The right of the electors to participate in the primary was not challenged at the time that the elector

Quiet On Front

Yuki, Korea, Aug. 11.—(AP) Morning reports from the Soviet Russian - Japanese battle zone on the Siberian-Manchoukuo border said the quiet of last night continued today.

The situation was regarded as greatly eased following announcement that Russia and Japan had declared an armistice on the frontier, effective at noon today.

Terms of the agreement were reached at a conference between Maxim Litvinoff, ex foreign minister of Soviet Russia and Mamoru Shigemitsu, Japanese Ambassador.

Sawyer Leads

Charles Sawyer, Democratic National Committeeman, had good reason to smile when this picture was made—for he was leading Governor Martin L. Davey in their fight for Ohio's Democratic nomination for the governorship. Sawyer was supported in the primary by Labor's Non-Partisan League.

BILL ENACTED FOR TERMINAL

Provides for Creation of Tar River Port Commission

(Special To The Reflector)

Raleigh, Aug. 11.—The Senate today, unanimously passed a bill by Senator E. G. Flanagan authorizing creation of the Tar River Port Commission and empowering Pitt county and the city of Greenville to loan $17,500 each.

Unanimous consent to introduction of the bill was obtained by Senator Flanagan after he had explained that the Federal government has already appropriated funds for a twelve-foot channel on the Tar from Washington to Greenville, but that work could not start until Pitt county and Greenville have acted to construct appropriate docks and terminals.

The bill was sent to the House where its passage tomorrow seems certain.

IF YOU DON'T LIKE YOUR TOWN'S NAME—WRITE THE BOARD

Washington.—(AP)—Anybody who doesn't like the name of a river, creek or hill—or for that matter any geographical formation in his vicinity, might get the name changed if he wrote to the United States Board of Geographical Names.

That's the board which held that President Roosevelt was "entitled to use the name Krum Elbow for his Hudson river estate."

The board's staff has been busy since 1890, when government surveyors and mapmakers convinced Congress that too many places and geographical formations in the U. S. had too many different names. Now when the board speaks, a geographical name is final.

The research staff of the board leans heavily on local usage for names, but in case of dispute the argument is carried back through musty historical records until the evidence for a certain name is conclusive.

And don't think it's easy work. Last year alone the board had to settle disputes over the names of 125 geographical formations in Chesapeake bay alone.

Power Companies Herald Session End This Week

Reflector Bureau

Raleigh, Aug. 11.—Adoption by the House yesterday of the Bryant amendment to the Revenue Bond Bill greased the measure's way through the Senate today and made adjournment of the extra session at the end of this week all but a mathematical certainty.

As soon as the House agreed to let the "convenience and necessity" clause apply to all power projects to be financed by the current Revenue Bond act, all prospects of a real knock down and dragout right on the perennial power issue collapsed like a pricked balloon, as Senate leaders declared it made up house passage a matter only of formality.

On the question of Who Won the War there are varying opinions. The tangible effects of the Bryant amendment are to leave all municipal power projects heretofore authorized under any general or special act in exactly their present status. Also municipalities will in the future be free to choose their own way without securing approval of the Utility Commission except in any projects specifically sought under the current Revenue Bond bill.

In other words, if the Power companies thought this was a good opportunity to spike the long-pending High Point project, they failed. If they sought to get in a clause that would force all future municipal power projects to get certificates of convenience and necessity, they were foiled.

On the other hand, the municipalities not only lost an absolutely free hand under the current bill, but they are now faced with a precedent which may be invoked in future legislation. The entering wedge has been driven and future acts allowing municipal power projects may be coupled with a clause requiring approval of the Utility Commission.

EXTRA SESSION WILL ADJOURN AT 1 A.M. SAT.

Apparently Certain of No Delay on PWA Bond Bills

ENDING HR. SET BY RESOLUTION

Sen. Flanagan Secures Suspension Of Rules in Order Enact Local Port Bill

Raleigh, Aug. 11.—(AP)—The General Assembly, apparently certain the PWA bond bill which it was called into special session to enact, would be passed by the Senate without delay, adopted a joint resolution today to adjourn sine die at 1 o'clock Saturday.

Representative Bryant of Durham offered the resolution.

It would allow the Senate one hour after midnight Friday night in which to pass on final, third reading roll call, the PWA bond bills which Governor Hoy gave the legislature.

The House approved the bills for a $4,620,000 state bond issue and to permit municipalities, counties and sanitary districts to issue revenue bonds to get PWA grants and loans yesterday and the Senate passed them on first reading today. They must pass three readings on three separate days in the Senate before becoming law as they pledge the credit of the state and local units.

There was no discussion of the bond measure as the senators passed them on first reading by placing them on the calendar without objections.

The sessions of both divisions were largely perfunctory and lasted a bare 30 minutes each.

Representatives adjourned to meet at 10 o'clock tomorrow night to pass on second reading some bond bills for local units already passed by the Senate. Senators called their meeting for noon tomorrow.

The Senate suspended its rules to receive and pass a bill by Senator Flanagan of Pitt to create the Tar River Port Commission. The commission would be empowered to erect docks and terminals on the Tar river in Pitt county. Flanagan said his county had fought for 20 years to get Federal funds to deep the river and now would get them if docks and terminals were provided. The measure was sent to the House.

Automobiles Collide At Pitt and Third Sts.

Drivers of two automobiles involved in a collision at the intersection of Third and Pitt streets last night about 9 o'clock, were cited to appear in city recorder's court tomorrow morning to face charges of careless and reckless driving.

Samuel Alexander was understood to have been going East on Third street and Willie Corey, Negro, north on Pitt street, when the cars collided.

A girl riding with Alexander was slightly injured and a Negro woman with Corey also received minor cuts and bruises.

Big German Plane Crosses Atlantic

Berlin, Aug. 11.—(AP) The huge German land plane, Brandenburg, neared the North American coast today on a non-stop flight from Berlin to New York.

Nearly 16 hours after her sudden take-off with a crew of four she reported her position at 11:19 a. m. 5:19 a. m. EST) at 53.05 degrees north and 44.45 degrees west.

This position is about 500 miles from Newfoundland.

The four-motored monoplane left here at 7:53 p. m. last night.

The air line distance between Berlin and New York is calculated to be 3,942 miles.

The 11:19 a. m. report said the plane was flying at an altitude of about 8,500 feet and was experiencing fine weather.

An air minister spokesman said he expected the plane would land between 5 and 6 p. m. (11 and 12 EST) if she reached New York non-stop.

When asked to name her specific destination, however, he replied: "All we have done is to state the Brandenburg is going to North America."

"Once the plane is over land again the pilot may decide, for the sake of absolute security, to make a preliminary landing in Canada or New England. We have left that open."

The take-off occurred a day ahead of schedule and as late as today officials of the line denied knowledge of her departure. The German press was unaware of the flight until noon today.

JONAS SCORES TREND IN GOVT.

Republican Says Will of People is Being Ignored

Mocksville, Aug. 11.—(AP)—Charles Jonas, Republican senatorial nominee, charged today that "we are developing an all-inclusive pernicious form of government, irresponsible, irresponsible and indifferent to the will of the people."

In an address prepared for delivery at the annual picnic of the Mocksville Masonic lodge, Jonas said "we levy taxes not for revenue, but for punitive purposes."

"Whereas, sovereignty once resided in the people in the states, it now rests in an entrenched bureaucracy at Washington," he said.

"The road we are traveling leads inevitably to the overthrow of our American system of representative government x x x under our written constitution," and the establishment of a totalitarian form of government with regiment and control, rather than represent the people."

LEAF INDUSTRY PROVIDES JOBS

Unusual Placement Activity in Tobacco Centers

Raleigh, Aug. 11.—(AP)—The State Employment service reported today that offices in tobacco centers had been having "unusual placement activity" and that elsewhere there were general "evidences of improving business."

The service said last week it referred 500 persons to leaf tobacco houses at Winston-Salem for possible employment. The term "referred" it was explained, means that employers have asked to be supplied with a certain number of persons from which to select a select number for employment.

Other places with long lists of referred persons included Rocky Mount, with 460 hand stemmers for tobacco; Goldsboro, 800 to 900 tobacco workers; Greenville, 1,000 tobacco workers; and Durham 200 cooper shop laborers and 25 to 30 machine tobacco stemmers.

Rocky Mount annually placed 121 persons in private industry last week; most of them in tobacco and Kingston had 66 placements, 59 being tobacco stemmers. At Wilson 142 stemmers were among the 180 placed in private work.

OLD-TIME PANHANDLERS ON WAY OUT

MUD CRABS CARRY DISEASE TO OYSTERS

Beaufort, N. C.—(AP)—By putting common mud crabs and sick oysters under a microscope, Dr. Herbert F. Frytherch has solved the mystery of an oyster disease that has cost southeastern oystermen an estimated $1,000,000 since 1930.

Dr. Frytherch, director of the U. S. Fisheries Biological station, found the crabs were carrying a microscopic parasite from sick to healthy oysters and causing havoc. He recommends that the oyster beds all be dredged free of crabs before they are planted with seed or adult

CHINESE SLAIN IN JAP RAID ON U. S. MISSIONS

Campuses of American Schools Bombed from Air

DEAD ESTIMATED IN EXCESS OF 500

Invaders, Meanwhile, Continue Drive On Hankow, Provisional Capital of China

Hankow, China, Aug. 11.—(AP)—Japanese air raiders killed an undetermined number of Chinese today on the campuses of the American Church (Episcopal) Missions, Boone University, and St. Hild's girl's school at Wuchang.

Twenty-seven planes heavily bombed Hanyang and Wushang, across the Yangtze river from Hankow, provisional Chinese capital, in the afternoon raid.

Preliminary estimates placed the total casualties in the two cities at more than 500, but it was believed the toll would be much higher as rescue squads dug desperately in the wrecks of buildings.

Shanghai reported Japanese and Chinese fought sharply southwest of Kiukiang as the invaders tried to renew their push toward Hankow.

One Japanese force thrust westward from Kiukiang. Japanese advance base 135 miles down the Yangtze river from Hankow, after claiming occupation of Shaohoehn and a close approach to a point 10 miles south of Kiukiang.

Five hundred shells from Japanese artillery reportedly destroyed Chinese defenses in the region and wiped out two companies of Chinese troops.

Chinese reports, however, said the invaders success was short-lived because other Chinese units counter attacks killed 300 Japanese and forced surviving invaders to withdraw.

Many of the new fixtures have arrived and are being set up. Also, a large neon sign has been installed. Belk-Tyler will occupy the building being vacated by Quinn-Miller Furniture Company.

Work Progressing On Greenville's Stadium

Work on the stadium is progressing steadily and pouring of concrete has been started, with indications that erection of the steel framework will begin within a week or 10 days.

Approximately 80 men were working on the project today. Most of the work heretofore has been on the grounds, which are being leveled and drained.

A Family Affair

Raleigh, N. C.—(AP)—Good health runs in the Ouseley family of Hartnett county. This year, 16-year-old Clifford Ouseley won the award as the healthiest 4-H club boy in the state. Only last year Clifford's brother, H. C., had won the same honor.

State Elections Board Defers Recommendations

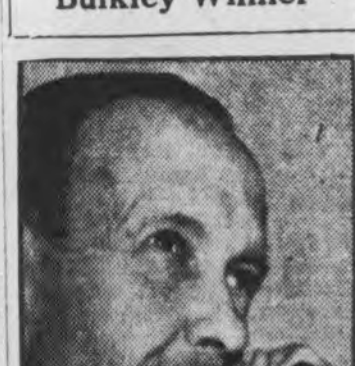

Raleigh, Aug. 11.—As usual, Chairman W. A. Lucas and other members of the State Board of Elections are not breaking into the public prints with loud assertions of what they are or are not going to do, but it seems reasonably certain that they have no idea of presenting any specific recommendation regarding the state's election laws—their reform or modification—at this time.

On the other hand it is just as certain that along about December the board is going to report to the Governor and the 1939 General Assembly just what it thinks should be done about those laws.

Considering what the board has just gone through and what it has learned about operation of the absentee ballot law, it might seem sure that it will recommend complete repeal of the provisions permitting voters to get their ballots counted without going in person to the polls, but such an assumption would be premature and perhaps incorrect.

Repeats Hope for Increasing Purchasing Power

INTRODUCED BY GOV. E. D. RIVERS

Straight-out Endorsement Given Camp in Race for Senate In Yesterday's Talk

Athens, Ga., Aug. 11.—(AP)—President Roosevelt reasserted today his desire to raise purchasing power in the South.

Speaking at the University of Georgia stadium, he received an honorary Doctor of Laws degree from Chancellor Stanford of the university system of Georgia.

The chief executive was introduced by Governor Rivers, who, with Lawrence Camp, conferred with Mr. Roosevelt at Warm Springs yesterday. Mr. Roosevelt, in a brief talk at the Warm Springs Foundation, at that time, gave Camp a straight-out endorsement in his race for the Democratic senatorial nomination.

Camp, Federal district attorney, is among the opponents of Senator Walter George, who is seeking re-nomination.

Mr. Roosevelt did not mention Camp nor George in his talk today. He gave a broad re-outline of the administration's asserted desire to lift the purchasing power and thereby "create wealth" in the South. He asked for constant "progressive action" in government.

The President spoke in the open air under a broiling sun. He was surrounded by university officials.

In the stadium stands, an audience attired in light summer clothes, applauded enthusiastically.

Devoting much of his address to a discussion of educational and economic conditions in the south, he did not refer directly to the wage-hour measure, enacted after a long fight by the last Congress.

Discussing the duties of the Federal government toward state and local educational objectives, he called today for "constant progressive action" on both educational and economic fronts.

Program Designed Increase Capacity Insane Hospitals

Construction Projects Will Add New Accommodations for Insane Patients in North Carolina

Reflector Bureau.

Raleigh, Aug. 11.—Capacity of the state's three hospitals for the insane will be increased several hundred—perhaps as much as 750—by construction authorized by the Special Session Bond Act of 1938 which is going through the General Assembly on specially greased skids.

At the Raleigh State Hospital (Dix Hill) Superintendent J. W. Ashby said the program will provide accommodations for a minimum of 235 more patients, with the possibility that the increase will be even more.

Under the plans there will be a new building for women ("disturbed women") Dr. Ashby classed them. This will take care of one hundred additional patients. An additional to the criminal insane division will add 60 and the erection of a building for attendants will make room in the wards for 75 more patients, to be quartered in space now necessarily occupied by attendants.

Sydney, N. S. W.—(AP)—Fred Briggs, former member of the Royal Australian Air Force, is making plans to "get away from it all" and start a co-operative community called the International Goodwill Settlement on Nukahiva, an island in the Marquesas Group.

Hundreds of inquiries have been received from all over Australia but only 80 were accepted. Each was able to pass a rigid medical test and is ready to contribute $400 to a community chest.

The island is 47 miles square and is said to be rich in vegetables and animal life. Its former native inhabitants are non-existent.

"Although Nukahiva would support us without our needing to do a stroke of work," he said, "we don't propose to be idle. We shall build houses, raise stock and perhaps do a little trading in island produce. And there is always fish to be found," Briggs says.

Hollywood
Sights And Sounds
By Robbin Coon

Hollywood—One of the cruelest of movie practices—ahoy, you government investigators—is the big welcome and publicity given every pretty newcomer to the lot.

The girl steps off the train or plane, contract in one hand, new bunch of roses in the other. The flash bulbs flare as she gets the Big Greeting, and then she's whisked off triumphantly in a luxurious studio car, presumably to plunge into the Glamour Pond for a big splash. She feels like a queen and she is one—for a day.

Maybe it even lasts a week. Bubbling with excitement, she goes to the still gallery and they take enough pictures to fill a catalogue. The lensers take her to the beach and snap her in "play poses"—if the legs are passable—and pretty soon she sees her picture in the papers—if the legs are knock-outs. And then she goes to training school. Or she just waits. Or both.

Two months ago I talked to Dorothy Comingore. She's just been signed after a scramble in which three studios participated. She was the girl Chaplin applauded at the Carmel little theater. From all the excitement I figured she'd go into a picture the next week at the latest.

Saw her again the other day, visiting the "Angels With Dirty Faces" set and watching Cagney and O'Brien work. She looked wistful when I asked her what was up. "I don't know when I'll get a part," she said. "I wish I did."

Cagney overheard. "Don't worry," he comforted. "They have to 'discover' you about a dozen times before it takes."

It's the waiting that's torture. I've a hunch Dorothy—they're calling her Linda Winters now—is going to click. But for one of her there are dozens of others who get the same build-up only to find themselves ushered out—at the end of the first contract period—via the back door. No flash bulbs then, and no roses, and the studio cars are all busy—carting in new prospects from the trains and planes.

A refined form of this common cruelty is that reserved for the girls they are "saving for something big." Director William Keighley told me about a girl he'd spotted as a possibility and tested, using extreme care so that her dramatic difficulties could be overshadowed by her photographic beauty,

Olivia de Havilland of the films steps out in an early fall frock of fine beige wool. Notice the big bag and corset belt of brown alligator she uses as accents.

POWER COMPANIES HERALD SESSION END THIS WEEK.

House Wednesday was interesting in setting out the varying views of legislators, as well as presenting a contrast in styles.

Victor Bryant presented the amendment in quite a matter of fact fashion. He explained that a deadlock between House and Senate appeared, certain unless some compromise could be effected. He said the amendment would leave absolutely untouched the general powers of the municipalities.

It added to the bill this provision: "Provided, further, that no municipality shall construct any system, plants, works, instrumentalities and properties used or useful in connection with the generation, production, transmission or distribution of gas (natural, artificial or mixed) or electric energy for lighting, heating, and power, for public and private uses, without first having contained a certificate of convenience and necessity from the Public Utilities Commissioner, except that this requirement for a certificate of convenience and necessity shall not apply to any such undertaking defined in this proviso which has been authorized, or the bonds for which have been authorized, by any general, special or local law heretofore enacted."

There were further provisions striking out clauses of other sections which could be construed as making the certificate requirement apply to any projects except those to be authorized under this specific bill.

Representative Rupert Pickens, of High Point, termed it a "decided compromise" and said it involved some "surrender of principle," but accepted it as a "practical matter" and in order to get some sort of bill enacted.

Johnston's F. H. Brooks delivered a red-faced philippic against the "power octopus" and predicted dire results at the polls for those Democrats who "dared bend the knee." The amendment carried, however, 51-40.

The test was so good they signed in her with the signing of the bill.

Some time later Keighley thought of the girl for a small role in one of his pictures.

"Oh, you can't have her for that," he was told. "We're saving her for something big."

"Something big," in this case, turned out to be the gate. There's nothing bigger than a studio gate—to the girl with a one-way ticket to the great outside.

Arlene Whelan was a girl they saved for something big. And they gave her such a build-up that everybody expected more than she could give. Arlene's going to be a star—she's got that personality—but I wonder if she's luckier than Lynn Bari, another Zanuck comer.

Lynn is just stepping into leading roles after three years of "bits" and training. She's learned the hard way—the way Arlene will have to learn.

or electors offered to vote. If such challenge had been interposed, it would have been the duty of the registrar and judges of election to ascertain the fact whether such elector was affiliated with the Democratic party, or whether he in good faith intended to support the candidates nominated in the primary of such party, and to have sustained the challenge as to all such who were not affiliated with the party and who did not in good faith intend to support the nominees of the party.

This means that challenges to would-be G.O.P. participants in the primary must be made before, not after, they have voted. Of course, if the registrars and judges had refused to sustain a proper challenge, the case would have been different and a different ruling by the state board would have followed.

Famous British Banker's Wife Recruits Air Raid Volunteers

MRS. MONTAGU NORMAN
She Hadn't Thought of Raids

By WILLIAM McGAFFIN
(AP Feature Service Writer)
London—Briak, business-like Mrs. Montagu Norman sits at a desk in Westminster recruiting women for the Air Raids Precautions services.

It seems a "strange job for the wife of the governor of the Bank of England. But she doesn't think so. She used to be a member of the London County Council until her marriage to the "mystery man" of British finance five and a half years ago.

He was then a 61-year-old bachelor, she a 33-year-old divorcee with two sons.

I dropped into her office to get her slant on her work.

She gives you a friendly handshake as you come in. As you settle down in a chair, you observe that she has ash blonde hair, a youthful, oval-shaped face, and a charming personality beneath her efficient business-woman manner.

"You have a dangerous job, don't you think, Mrs. Norman?" I ask.

"All of us in this type of work are in danger, of course."

"But doesn't your husband object?" I ask.

"On the contrary. All of us must help."

Mrs. Norman is vice-chairman in charge of the London area of the Women's Voluntary Services for A.R.P.—a government organization newly created to enroll a half million women volunteers for the various Air Raid Precautions services.

The organization has been criticized in the House of Commons for being in the hands of "society ladies and young debutantes."

But Mrs. Norman says "they're all workers" whatever their social or financial position.

"Merit" is the only thing that counts," she explains.

"What would you do, Mrs. Norman, if enemy bombers raided London today?"

"I don't know. I hadn't thought of that."

"I should think your first concern would be for your family."

"Yes, I suppose it would be."

"Then don't you think your women volunteers will feel the same clash between duty and family?"

"Yes, I suppose so." In some instances, however, she explains that ARP duty and family responsibility are being coordinated. Housewives, especially those in the poorer sections, are to be trained what to do in a raid.

"Their husbands will be working, probably, and they'll be alone with the children. If we can show them how to put out bombs and how to seal up their windows so the glass won't fly we will help prevent them from getting so panicky, we feel."

"But do you think it's practical to use women for ARP work? Can they keep their heads in an emergency?"

"It's not only practical but essential. We're in an emergency. We must have the support of the women."

The list of ARP jobs for women ranges from telephoneists and stenographers to ambulance drivers, evacuation leaders, casualty workers and undertakers.

At Raleigh, there are specific provisions for the new buildings already mentioned, but at both Goldsboro and Morganton such additions as are made to the present capacity will come about through additional space made available in replacing or fireproofing existing structures.

Welfare officials are agreed that even with the additions in sight the capacity of state hospitals will still be too meagre.

DIDN'T GET PROMOTION SO HE CONSTRUCTED HIS OWN RAILROAD

Mandeville, La.—(AP)—A veteran employee of the Gulf, Mobile and Northern railroad, despairing of ever becoming a railroad magnate, decided to build his own line. It took Sidney J. Thibodeaux two years to finish what he calls the shortest standard gauge railroad in the world. It is only 500 feet long but it is complete with 60-pound rails and standard ties, switches, lamps, semaphores and telegraphic service.

Thibodeaux station agent here for the G. M. and N. with 48 years' railroad experience, is 65 years old. He built his own railroad, called the Myrtleville Northern, as a hobby for $1,200.

Rolling stock of the Mandeville Northern consists of a handcar powered by a gasoline engine and a small flatcar. Schedules on weekdays are accommodated to traffic Thibodeaux's half dozen grandchildren and their little friends. A regular schedule is followed on Saturdays and Sundays.

hotel and see if the Pol Roger is so good as it then was. It is but this morning that I arrived in Cannes, and I have not yet discovered."
 "No True Blonde"
 "WHAT'S the verdict on the girl?" asked Hugo.
 The little man hesitated, looked this way and that, and spoke finally in a lowered voice. "She was shot," he said, "by a bullet at close range. From the size of the wound, it would be a small automatic. Further than that—" He spread out his hands. "Nothing, except that like so many modern women, no true blonde. The hair was dyed."

Chapter Four A Rotten Business

IT was extraordinary how quickly the flawless organization of the place asserted itself at the voice of authority. In a flash, it seemed, there was a cordon of waiters holding back the jostling crowd. Two hefty fellows picked up the limp body in the spangled dress while others made a passage for us through the crowd. The manager himself led the way, pausing occasionally to reassure some distinguished patron. "It is nothing," I heard him say to one excited old gentleman. "The poor girl had a sudden heart-attack and fell from the gangway. We hope it is not serious, but we cannot tell until the doctor has made his examination. In the meantime, may I beg Monsieur to use his distinguished influence to calm the other guests?"

Half a dozen times during our exit did he pause to spread oil on the still painfully troubled waters, and each time there was an unmistakable lessening of the ferment. Only when we halted in the empty corridor outside did he relax his benevolent calm. He stood aside to let the sinister little cortège pass him, waving us down a smaller corridor. "To my private office, gentlemen," he said sharply. "You will have the goodness to wait in the stn room while Monsieur le Docteur makes his examination."

I held back a moment and looked round me. The door through which we had passed was guarded by two impassive liveried funkeys. Outside the baccarat room stood a couple of croupiers, saturnine and expressionless. Across the entrance three vast commissionaires were posed like statues. It was abundantly clear that from now on no one could enter or leave the building without permission.

The next minute he had motioned us on, into a small, dignified, discreetly lighted room, and Hugo and I were left alone.

I sat down abruptly on the nearest chair. I had seen a number of men come to violent and painful ends in a variety of places, but I had never before seen a woman die. I was suddenly conscious of a sick feeling in the pit of my stomach, and my knees were giving beneath me. "Well," I said to Hugo, "what do you make of it?"

"Only a Child"
 HE dropped into a chair opposite me, reached for a decanter and glasses on a near-by table, and poured out a couple of drinks. "Get outside of that," he said. "You're looking green, my son. It's a rotten business, but we're not responsible."

"But that's just it," I said. "I feel that, in a way, I am that girl's only child. She was damnable, but she was frightened and she came to us for help. And what did we do?"
 "Nothing," he retorted, sharply but not unkindly. "And what could we have done? Nothing again! Get a grip on yourself, Archie. You look too much like the murderer yourself for my liking, and the police'll be here any minute."

"Then you believe she was murdered?" I caught him up.
 "Of course," said he, "initially. But they'll bring it in an accident or, failing that, suicide. If they've got the ghost of an excuse, they don't want the publicity just when this place is stealing half the thunder from Monte Carlo."

"Well," I said obstinately, "if they try that game, I'll give them a run for their money. I'm not going to have that poor little soul murdered in cold blood under my nose without making sure that the fellow responsible swinks for it."
 "Loses his head, old lad," he corrected me, with the ghost of a grin. "We're in France, remember. And for the love of Mike, Archie, keep your mouth shut as far as you can and your temper under control. We're foreigners over here."

He broke off sharply, for the inner door had opened, and the little doctor came out. "Hello, Ricketts," said he amiably. "who'd ha' thought of seeing you here?"
 The doctor stopped short, spun round like a top, gave a startled exclamation, and, dashing at Hugo, kissed him fervently on both cheeks. "C'est toi!" he cried ecstatically. "Mon Hugo! How is it that I did not know thee before?"
 "Well," said Hugo, disengaging himself from the clinch, "I had to take a couple of looks myself before I was sure, Archie—he turned to me—"this is a very distinguished person—no less than Monsieur le Docteur Riquet, champagne-scrourer extraordinary. Ricketts, this is my friend Archibald Lumsden."

"The little doctor halted in the act of another assault upon Hugo's cheeks and gave me an uncommonly shrewd and searching look. Satisfied apparently, he advanced and solemnly offered me his hand. "Any friend to my dear Hugo is a friend to me," he assured me. "I am only sad that I meet you on so tragic an occasion. We must reconquer ourselves later at my and following him came a uniformed gendarme.

 The fat man paused, surveyed us all, and bowed to Hugo. At the same moment the manager appeared from the inner office, included the whole party in a dignified salutation and beckoned them to follow him. The last to pass through the closing door was the little doctor Riquet, who sent us a comical, wry sort of grimace as he disappeared.
 "That was Thiers," said Hugo under his breath to me, "the local chief of police."
 After about ten minutes the chief of police came out, followed by the gendarme, to whom he gave a whispered direction. He waited till the man had left the room and then turned to us "Gentlemen," he said, "you, Monsieur Stern, and you, monsieur, will now have the goodness to tell me what you know of this unfortunate affair."
 "Just a minute, Thiers," said Hugo. The other's manner when addressing him had been affable, and it was obvious that he recognized in him a well-known and valued local resident. "You might tell us one thing first, and then all the information we have is at your disposal. Was the girl murdered?"
 The other shrugged, sighed, and spread out his hands. "It would appear so," he admitted. "Well, here's what we know." And with an admirable pithiness, Hugo told the story of our first encounter with the girl, and our subsequent show. When he had done, the fat man raised his eyebrows.
 "You say that neither you nor your friend had seen her before," he pondered. "but that Monsieur Geiss admitted himself to be acquainted with her?"

Appendicitis Pains
 Summer is an appropriate time for issuing a warning about appendicitis. This is the season in which "stomach-upset" is common. What with picnics, hurried meals in odd places, and dietary excesses of every kind, few escape without some indigestion, colic, or diarrhea.
 A goodly number of such upsets turn out to be just what they are assumed to be. An appreciable number, however, will sooner or later be diagnosed as appendicitis. It is the "later" cases that concern us most, for there are few surgical emergencies in which prompt operation is more vital to saving life and hastening recovery.
 The appendicitis case operated upon with 24 hours after the onset of symptoms is most likely to have a speedy and smooth recovery. The longer operation is delayed, the greater the risk that the patient may die—not of the operation but of complications arising from the appendicitis, chiefly peritonitis.

has certain common but few variable symptoms. Hence it is not easy to diagnose. Among the common symptoms are a sharp, sickening or gnawing pain felt in the region of the right groin, or in the direction of the navel. The patient may also experience fever, constipation, nausea, or vomiting.
 The symptoms are unlike those of a common "colic" or of an ordinary gastric upset in that they tend to persist longer.
 Under the circumstances, it is folly to "dose the symptoms" with cathartics. Put the patient to bed, feed him not at all (except for water or only a light liquid diet).
 Bear in mind that children (even infants) may have appendicitis. Young children are frequently unable to describe their symptoms, or even definitely to point to where it hurts most.
 Appendicitis annually causes the death of thousands of persons.
 The toll exacted by this disease can be reduced by prompt diagnosis and operation.

Washington Daybook

Washington—If the United States were a money-grabbing nation (which of course it is not) it could make a big cleaning out of a prolonged Russo-Japanese war.

Nothing could stop us. We could send goods across the Atlantic to Russia, including railroad cars to carry fighting stuff to the Oriental war zone. We could ship to Japan across the Pacific Japan would not dare send its fleet to the Atlantic and Russia's fleet could not seriously interfere with U. S.-Japanese trade in the Pacific.

The principal trouble would be that neither side has enough money to pay for the goods for a prolonged war. Of course this country could lend money to both belligerents—and try to collect it afterwards. But that's something else.

Authoritative observers here don't look for that sort of outcome. Neither side wants a major, long-flict—just now.

One source with access to inside channels said the Anglo-French agreement, tending to keep Hitler out of Czechoslovakia in view of France's pledge of aid to that little Central European republic, had relieved Russia of a major worry about its European end, leaving it free to tend to its Asiatic end.

Freedom of this care, so this view goes, Russia took the aggressive in Manchoukuo (formerly Manchuria), occupying the important Changkufeng hill, the ownership of which had been in dispute several years. It is an important little spot, strategically. Inland it overlooks the rail connection from interior Manchoukuo to a port newly built by Japan. On the sea side, the hill also overlooks Possiet bay, which Russia has been building up to supplement Vladivotok.

Fight For Ports
 Whoever controls that hill will have an important strategic point in the Russo-Japanese war which some fear already has started and which many feel is inevitable.

Russia's fight for ports is historic. It has sacrificed hundreds of thousands of men and million of dollars in a desperate effort to gain access to a year-round seaport which cannot be blocked readily by an enemy. On the Atlantic side it may pass through narrow straits out of the Baltic and North Sea to reach the open ocean. Free access to the Mediterranean is blocked by Turkish control of the Dardanelles.

On the Pacific, Vladivostok is ice-bound three months of the year. So is the newly built port on Possiet bay, but two ports are better than one, even if ice-bound.

Long before Japan became a first line power, Russia sought control in Manchuria so as to have an all-weather port southward from Vladivostok. Even after Japan defeated China in 1895 Russia bluffed her out of Manchuria. Japan surrendered territory gained there during the war, agreeing to accept a cash indemnity from China instead. Russia then lent money to China to pay the indemnity. In return for the loan, Russia received many of the Manchurian concessions denied Japan, including use of Port Arthur as a naval base.

It's Different Now
 Japan, fresh and vibrant from rapid growth, struck back in 1904 to destroy Russian dominance in Manchuria. That war started without a formal declaration. Japan broke off diplomatic relations February 3, 1904, and bombarded the Russian fleet February 8 and 9, not declaring war formally until February 10.

Now, 34 years later, Russia finds Japan controlling Manchuria but desperately extended in China. The shoe is on the other foot, and Russia takes the opportunity to improve her position along the old Manchurian border.

Because of the numerous accidents to bicyclists the British Transport Advisory Council recommends that cycle tracks be provided on both sides of the main roads in that country.

SHORT SHOTS

By HENRY AVERILL

Raleigh, Aug. 11.—Millions of words have been written about the question of "timing" in the sports field—how important it is to the batter in baseball, and to the tennis and golf expert. Timing has also received its due share of attention in political campaigns—big Jim Farley having called special attention to it in the first of his current articles on Roosevelt and the New Deal.

On Tuesday, right here in the North Carolina House the vital effect of timing got a visible demonstration.

After the House had finished its major business for the session, both Representatives Gray of Gates and Hobbs of New Hanover jumped to their feet with cries of "Mr. Speaker." Major Gregg Cherry, presiding, first saw the Gates "lame duck" and gave him the floor. Gray wanted to put in five "little local bills"—possibly spite or back scratching measures. He was howled down by the House when he asked suspension of the rules.

Then Cherry got around to recognizing Hobbs. The Wilmingtonian wanted to introduce two bills directly connected with the subject matter of the extra session—a bill to authorize a vote on bonds for port terminals in Wilmington and a bill to change the time of holding such an election.

Under ordinary circumstances there's not the slightest doubt that the bills would have been received without objection. But just having killed off the Gray efforts, the House had tasted blood and down went Hobbs and his really meritorious measures in a perfect storm of "Nees."

If Cherry had seen Hobbs first the result would have been different. On such trifles of timing do important matters often depend.

Your correspondent can't refrain from pointing to the Election Board's certification of C. B. Deane as nominee from the Eighth Congressional ward with just a bit of pride. This bureau has repeatedly predicted it.

Bertie's C. W. Sprull had some "advice for the House—particularly for members who will be back in 1939" to offer at Wednesday's session.

Bill his usual flowery fashion he informed them that Libby Ward and Victor Bryant will be glad to give any of them legal advice "absolutely free" and that if they want to borrow any money Bill Fenner will be "glad to let them have it."

It's scarcely necessary to point out that Ward, Bryant and Fenner are the three avowed candidates for the 1939 Speakership.

Laws enacted by this extra session will not be printed in book form until after the regular session of 1939, under terms of a resolution introduced by Clarence Stone of Rockingham and unanimously passed by the House.

When the Rockingham representative prefaced his remarks on the subject with the observation that it will save the state several thousand dollars, Speaker Cherry cracked: "Let the Watchdog of Treasury proceed."

After appointing a visiting youth from Pennsylvania as an honorary page of the House, the Speaker told the youngster: "Now when you get back up there in Pennsylvania you tell them to keep it Democratic."

Another Cherryism. Up rose Dave Dellinger, of Gaston county, the same as the Speaker, to ask appointment of an honorary page. "The other gentleman from Gaston," said Dave referring to himself. Back from the chair came—"Did you say the ugly gentleman from Gaston?"

Tom Brown, present sergeant-at-arms, is doing much campaigning to succeed himself in 1939. He wanted a seat in the next House, but his county couldn't see it that way.

Man About Manhattan

New York—Want to hear about papaya? That's the new tropical drink in New York. Made from the papaya fruit and milk. They whip them together in a malted milk container and it costs 3 cents. I must ask Sloppy Joe what he thinks about it, and Dirty Frank Joe specializes in pine apple drinks. Frank sells coconut milk. Their stands dot Broadway like the spotted typhus. And now papaya with its tropical wiles edges into the scene.

The papaya is an ancient fruit but it never made headway in this country until recently. I understand it's doing very well in Florida now. But it's a funny fruit. It has to ripen on the tree or it never attains a maximum of sweetness. Take it green, as you do bananas or tomatoes, and it doesn't become luscious. That's held it back.

The papaya looks like a big gourd or maybe it's a melon. They crush it in your presence on Broadway now, and add the milk, and let'er churn. Mighty refreshing but as to taste I still don't know a thing. It doesn't taste like anything I know. Have to go back and try it again before I make up my mind.

Now consider the long bow. You haven't had any gray goose quilts whizzing past your curls have you? You're liable to if you fool around New York. It's the Robin Hood in-

ROOSEVELT VISITS HIS 'OTHER HOME'

Surrounded by a crowd at the railway station, President Roosevelt is shown alighting from his special train at Warm Springs, Ga., for a visit at the little village he calls "my other home." He rested there for a day before his speeches at Athens and Barnesville, Ga., August 11. Shortly after his arrival, he had luncheon with Governor Rivers of Georgia and Lawrence Camp, New Deal enthusiast, seeking the Democratic nomination for the United States Senate seat of Senator Walter F. George. In a luncheon speech the President expressed the hope Camp "will be the next Senator from this state."

Every empty lot has become Sherwood forest. And, to do the thing up brown, the kids even cudgel one another about the head with stout broomsticks. No casualties yet but keep your fingers crossed. All the stores are offering bows and arrows. Archery leagues have been formed and shooting matches for silver cups are held regularly. Not just for kids, but for adults. Any day now I expect to come home looking like a porcupine.

Paradoxical as it may seem, there is a restaurant in Second avenue known as The Palm, yet there isn't a single palm in it. There are no banks on Bank street, and brooms aren't sold on Broome street. But you can get fifths on Fifth avenue—pints, quarts, fifths or anything you want.

Irving Hoffman, the eminent grammarian, says Broadway is a place where people are in the habit of dropping their vowels—particularly their 'L's.

There are some 600 edible fruits known to man, but only about 50 can be purchased in New York. Most of them are too perishable to reach this market.

Like Manhattan, which was purchased from the Indians for a few strings of beads, world famous Waikiki beach originally sold for one and a half cents an acre. The place used to be a gigantic muddy duck puddle.

It may amaze you to know that nearly 2500 people in New York are actively employed in making motion pictures. At least 75 per cent of the musical shorts are produced on Long Island, and a majority of the Spanish and Yiddish

Don King Hurls Win As Greenies Win Sixth Straight

ALLEN HOMERS AS MATES SWAT

Big Ben Mooney Victim as Locals Hit All He Offered

Tarboro, Aug. 11.—Greenville's Southpaw Don King hurled an 8-2 victory over the Tarboro Sepsents here yesterday. It was the Greenies sixth straight victory.

Except for one inning—the fifth—King was never in trouble. Four successive singles tallied Tarboro's two runs.

Ben Mooney, Tarboro starter, yielded 11 hits and seven runs before he retired in favor of Robinson.

The Greenies got off to a three-run start in the first frame. Jenkins, Simpson, and Heavener hit safely. Mooney's error and Wilson's fly brought in the runs.

"Gracie" Allen hit a two-run homer in the fifth.

The Snakes' runs in the fifth came on hits by Soup Campbell, Solly Myers, Hank Lehman and Benny Bullock.

Every Greenie hit safely at least once and five of them came thru with a pair of hits.

King fanned four, walked none and allowed only seven hits.

The Greenies are playing Ayden here this afternoon and will return to Ayden Friday for the second game of that series.

Tom Hanna, veteran umpire of the Coastal Plain League, was unable to report for duty yesterday and two ball players—one from each club were selected to umpire Kazben, Freddie Calliguri of the Greenies and Walter Sieminski of the Serpents were the two players to did the base umpiring.

SERPS TO PLAY FRIDAY NIGHT

Tarboro and Kinston to Meet at Rocky Mount Park

(Tarboro Southerner)

The Tarboro-Kinston night ball game Friday has been transferred from Bryan Park, Tarboro, to Briles Park, Rocky Mount, due to an emergency.

It developed that the portable lighting company of Brooklyn, who were to supply the lights, found that they could not come into Tarboro until after August 12, although correspondence and telegrams were to the mutual effect that they would appear here on August 12th as advertised.

When apprised of the situation John Youngblood, president of the Tarboro club, called Josh Horne, of the Rocky Mount club and explained his predicament, asking if Tarboro and Kinston might play in Rocky Mount on August 12th, so as not to disappoint thousands of fans who had planned to attend. And it was explained that considerable advertising had been done on the game, and it was hoped that the loss of this money could be averted.

Mr. Horne has agreed for the game to be played in the Rocky Mount park, by permission of the Piedmont league and Bill Evans, vice-president and general manager of the Boston Red Sox, and Mr. Youngblood has returned permission, in turn, from J. J. Eure, president of the Coastal Plain league, and also permission from Hubert Landauer, of the Kinston baseball club.

The Tarboro-Kinston game has, therefore, been shifted from a night game in Tarboro to a night game in the Rocky Mount park, to start at 8 p. m.

League prices will prevail.

Phil Morris continues in the No. 1 spot in Coastal Plain batting averages.

The averages were released yesterday by J. Gaskill McDaniel of New Bern, league statistician.

Aces Like Martins' New Ball Flingers

Ayden, Aug. 11.—Williamston's Aces, "fresh out of pitchers," started First-Baseman Eddie Ignasiak in the box yesterday afternoon—and the Aces made enough runs in the first inning to give Bill Herring far more working margin than he needed.

Starting with a half-dozen runs in the opening inning; the Aces went on to a 13-2 victory. Herring struck out nine and yielded nine hits.

Third-Baseman Bowen turned pitcher for the Martins in the second, but he was shelled during a four-run party in the third. Manager Charlie Wry decided something had to be done, so he pitched the rest of the way and yielded only three hits.

German homered for Ayden in the seventh. Bowen of the Martins turned the trick in the eighth. Two bases and a walk gave the Aces a 13-2 lead and started the local's big first inning. A walk to Casaway forced in a run; Rodgers single sent in two. Purcell walked. One run came in on Biershenk's infield out. Painter went out, but Herring hit a two-run single. That inning should have convinced Ignasiak that he'd better stick to first-basing.

Score by Innings: R. H. E. Williamston 000 001 010-2 9 2 Ayden 604 101 10x-13 15 0 Ignasiak, Bowen, Wry and Witcox; Herring and Purcell.

Flora Humbles Eagle Outfit, Allows 5 Hits

Goldboro, Aug. 11.—Lefty Flora was the big star for Goldboro in a 5-1 victory over Kinston yesterday.

Flora held the Eagles to five hits and struck out ten. He also fanned at bat—something very unusual for Flora—hitting safely on two of three trips.

Lefty Muhlenbein was Flora's mound foe. The defeat was the second for the Kinston southpaw in five starts against the Bugs this year, and it was his second loss to Flora this season.

The Bugs collected 14 hits off Muhlenbein. Top batters were Glenn Millnar, with three for five; Johnny Pawlock, three for five. Pawlock hit a three-run homer in the opening frame.

Flora was in trouble only twice. A walk and a couple of hits gave Kinston a run in the sixth. In the next inning he walked three batters—but Johnny Wyrostek popped out, ending the inning.

Billies Beat Bears In Over-Time Ball Game

New Bern, Aug. 11.—It's quite appropriate that a fellow named Taylor sewed up victory for Snow Hill in an overtime battle with the New Bern Bears yesterday.

Outfielder Taylor's home run over the right-field fence, following a single by Stewart, gave the Billies the margin of victory in a 6-4 win over the Bears in a 10-inning struggle.

The Bears had caught up in the ninth when Harper singled, with two out, and Burgess followed with a homer.

N. Y. Stock Market

New York, Aug. 11.—(AP)—Light selling turned the stock market current downward today with leaders off fractions to two points and a few volatile issues in arrears as much as five points.

A rallying attempt at the start soon bogged down and volume picked up a bit as offerings appeared. Feeble support came in now and then and extreme losses were reduced. Quotations slipped once more near the final hour to around the bottom level of the session.

LEAF GRADING IS IMPORTANT

"Pin-Hooker" Often Makes as Much as Producer

Raleigh, Aug. 11.—A "pin-hooker" who spends a few minutes re-sorting a basket of tobacco may make more off the leaf than the farmer who has worked for months growing, harvesting and curing it.

Buyers won't bid very much for baskets of ill-sorted, mixed weed, said E. Y. Floyd, of State College, but after a "pin-hooker" has re-graded it, it sometimes sells for more than twice the original price paid the growers.

Farmers are entitled to the full price that their leaf is worth, Floyd continued, and they should take more pains to grade the tobacco properly and pack it attractively on the baskets.

Leaves of similar body, quality, color, and size should be tied into bundles or hands and sold in separate lots. In this way, they will bring the highest price the buyers will bid for that grade and type of weed.

Adequate light is needed in the sorting rooms so that the tobacco may be graded accurately. The leaf should have enough moisture to permit handling without damage, and be sorted into different lots covering the full range of quality, length, and color of the crop.

Tobacco of low grade can be sold to best advantage when sorted and handled correctly, Floyd said, in urging growers not to neglect their poorer grades. However, he added, if a farmer has more leaf than he can sell tax-free, it is better to sell the higher grades first and pay tax on the lower grades.

Worms unexpectedly have come to the aid of farmers plagued by a spread of cactus on millions of acres of grazing lands.

Successive years of drought stimulated the spread of cactus, and at the same time retarded the growth of buffalo grass, valuable for cattle and sheep feed.

Presence of a cactus-devouring worm first was discovered on the farm of S. K. Barbee, near Calhan, Colo., east of here. Since then it has been found in other parts of the Great Plains region and apparently the infestation is spreading.

"Wherever these worms have attacked cactus the leaves of the plant turned brown and dried up," said Barbee. "This is the greatest thing that ever happened to eastern Colorado and the plains region. If we can kill the cactus by turning worms on it, we can bring back the grass."

"Apparently the worm doesn't harm the grass and when the cactus dies the grass improves."

Barbee sent the worm to government entomologists for a study to determine if it might be harmful to any plants besides cactus.
