TWO BALLOTS FOR TYDINGS!

Senator Millard E. Tydings, conservative Democrat seeking re-nomination in the face of opposition from President Roosevelt, and Mrs. Tydings are shown casting their ballot at Aberdeen in Maryland's Democratic primary. Rep. David J. Lewis, who has the President's blessings, seeks Tyding's seat.

Roosevelt - Supported Candidate Against Maryland Senator Running Behind; Republicans Win Clear-Cut Majorities Over Democrats in Maine

(By The Associated Press)
Democrats lost their fight today to unseat four Republican officials in Maine and the Roosevelt administration apparently was being beaten in its attempt to defeat Senator Millard Tydings of Maryland.

In the year's first election Maine voters gave clear-cut majorities to Governor Lewis Barrows and Representatives James Oliver, Clyde Smith and Ralph Brewster. They had done the same thing in 1936 when the state was one of the two which President Roosevelt lost. Although New Dealers had held some hope of winning at least one of the Maine offices, they were disheartened chiefly principally by the growing lead of Senator Tydings in the Maryland Democratic primary.

The 48-year-old Senator, who Mr. Roosevelt had denounced as a "betrayor" of the New Deal, was running ahead of Representative David Lewis in most of the state. Returns from 726 of 1,288 precincts gave Tydings 109,308 and Lewis 78,146.

A third candidate, Arthur Hungerford, trailed with 7,138. The popular vote in Maryland does not actually determine the party choices. These will be made later in a convention in which county precincts and each Baltimore election district has from three to seven votes. The unit votes go to the candidate who wins a majority in the county.

Georgians watched the Maryland race for any bearing it might have on its own primary tomorrow, in which Senator Walter George also is seeking renomination over the President's opposition.

George is running against Lawrence Camp, Mr. Roosevelt's choice, and former Governor Eugene Talma.

The Democratic party's political generalissimo, Postmaster General Garley, had given his stamp of approval to former Governor Louis Brann, Borrow's Democratic opponent, and to Harold Dubord, who had attempted to unseat Rep. Smith.

Returns from 611 of Maine's 629 precincts gave Barrows 153,064; and Brann 132,931.

Jones Runs Third In Maryland Race
Baltimore, Sept. 13.—(AP)—Returns from 866 of 1,268 precincts in Maryland's Democratic primary for attorney general gave John B. Gunther the lead in balloting, but his nomination was not assured because of Maryland's second choice voting system.

Gunther received 51,094 votes to 39,724 for William Walsh; 32,744 for Willis R. Jones; and 22,834 for Omar Crothers.

Under the Maryland system the lowest candidate will be dropped and his votes given to the candidate marked as second choice. This process will be continued until one candidate has a majority.

Willis R. Jones, running third in Maryland's Democratic primary for attorney general, is a native of Pitt county, son of the late Solomon N. and Gertrude (Richards) Jones of Bethel. The candidate is a brother of Dr. Paul E. Jones of Farmville, chairman of the Pitt County Democratic Executive Committee. He also has a sister and other relatives in this section.

Officers Destroy Liquor Distillery
J. M. Ward and J. L. Taylor, law enforcement officers of the Pitt County ABC board, located and destroyed a 100-gallon steam liquor plant in Belvoir township, near the old Parker place, around noon today.

One of the officers said that 1,200 gallons of beer and five gallons of liquor were found near the illicit distillery. The plant was in operation when located by the officers, and a Negro, operating the still, made a successful dash for freedom.

Fourteen sticks of dynamite were used to destroy the still. This was the first still to be located in the Belvoir section in about a month.

BRITAIN CALLS CABINET MEET OF MINISTERS

Second Emergency Meet of Week Set for Tomorrow

SUMMON ISSUED TO TALK CRISIS
Prime Minister Chamberlain Reviews Situation with Opposition Members

London, Sept. 13.—(AP)—The British cabinet was summoned today to meet at 11 a. m., tomorrow in its second emergency session of the week to consider the European crisis, deepened by Adolf Hitler's defiant Nurnberg speech and new disorders in Czechoslovakia.

The summons was issued by Prime Minister Chamberlain after he and his key ministers had pondered the text of the speech in which the Fuehrer denounced the right of "self-determination" for the Sudeten-Germans.

The Prime Minister also consulted the ranking leaders of the opposition in the House of Commons, a step customary in times of crisis.

The first emergency cabinet meeting of the week was that of yesterday, a few hours before Hitler spoke.

Amid the growing anxiety, Clement Attlee, Labor party leader, spent a half hour with Chamberlain discussing decisions of momentous importance which might be called for.

He was followed by Sir Archibald Sinclair, Liberal, who passed through the door at No. 10 Downing Street for a 40-minute conference.

Uppermost in the minds of the conferences, and the clustered groups around Downing street, was fear that new incidents in Czechoslovakia might be organized as a prelude to "the rescue" of the Sudeten-Germans by Hitler.

The British observer in Czechoslovakia, Major R. Sutton-Pratt, was ordered to the scene of riots in which three persons were killed to give London a report.

Heavy Offerings On Middle Belt Markets
Strong Prices Also Reported for Opening Day

Durham, Sept. 13.—(AP)—Heavy offerings and strong prices greeted growers today at the opening of North Carolina's middle belt tobacco markets.

Reports from all around the belt indicated farmers were highly pleased at initial offerings, although estimates of proceeds of first sales were not available at some of the nine auction centers.

Here at one of the largest markets of the belt estimates said the bright leaf was bringing an average of $23 per hundred pounds. Selling was at a pace calculated to see at least 1,000,000 pounds go on the block before the close of the day.

Fred M. Allen, sales supervisor at Henderson, estimated there were 1,000,000 pounds on sale there. He said the first row at one warehouse brought $27.10 a hundred the day's average would be around $25. Although mild complaints by some growers were reported, no tag turning was observed during the early hours.

Observers at Sanford reported that producers there appeared satisfied at opening receipts. Upwards of 500,000 pounds were on warehouse floors with first primings and tips predominating. Early sales brought an estimated average of $25 a hundred.

Although opening prices were not estimated at Aberdeen, growers were reported happy. Around 325,000 pounds were reported offered, compared with 182,000 on the opening day last year.

First primings predominated in the approximately 1,500,000 pounds offered at Oxford, amid expressions of optimism and satisfaction. Prices were said to range from three to six cents a pound higher than last year's opening. Predictions set the average at $25 a hundred.

Better grades were slightly off, but common offerings higher than last year at Warrenton, where about 300,000 pounds were on sale. Estimates said the day's sales would average $22 a hundred or better.

Reports at Fuquay Springs indicated about 750,000 pounds offered at about $23 average, from Louisville reported about 300,000 pounds at about $25 average. Carriage is also in the belt.

LIMIT IS SET AT SIX HOURS

Memorandum Containing Ultimatum Declares That If Rule Is Not Lifted Within Six Hours Party Could Not Be Responsible For Developments

Prague, Sept. 13.—(AP)—The Sudeten-German party presented an ultimatum to the Czechoslovak government at 7:30 p. m. tonight (1:30 p. m. EST), demanding that the martial law extraordinary police measures imposed on Sudeten communities be revoked within six hours.

The party, in a memorandum to the government, stated if martial law continued it could not "be responsible for developments."

Prague, Sept. 13.—(AP)—Czechoslovakia imposed martial law in eight Sudeten-German districts, all Sudeten strongholds, and sent tanks into a series of Sudeten towns today after a series of disorders in which three persons were killed.

A responsible government source said the government would extend martial law to all other Sudeten areas and throughout the entire republic if necessary to preserve order.

Tanks from a nearby garrison rumbled through the streets of Eger, one of the eight towns, less than 10 miles from the German border, where frenzied celebrations took place following Adolf Hitler's Nurnberg speech. Sudetens in Eger and other towns in the border areas acclaimed yesterday as "the Sudeten's day of joy."

Shops were closed and work abandoned in the Sudeten areas. Celebrations reached their climax in the raising of a large swastika, display of which is illegal, on the Eger city hall flagpole.

Until the tanks came, joyful Germans cheered, paraded and sang folk songs in inns. "The day of deliverance is at hand" was heard on all sides.

In Prague authorities expressed growing concern over the turbulence in the border areas. Premier Hodza, Premier Bouda and President Benes kept close touch with the situation.

Several members of the Sudeten-German party's negotiations committee rushed to Eger to investigate the situation. Hence it appeared there would be no renewal in Prague of the Sudeten negotiations with the government.

While the government's action was described as martial law, officials made it clear troops would not step in unless police and civil authorities were unable to maintain order. It also was made clear that persons arrested would be tried in civil, rather than military courts.

The death penalty for disturbers of the peace was ordered.

REQUEST FOR BIDS
Meeting at noon today to canvass results of yesterday's bond election, the Greenville Board of Aldermen authorized receipt of sealed bids for sites upon which to locate the proposed new city hall and fire station.

The bids will be opened at a meeting of the board Friday at 8 p. m. The municipal building will be 84 by 100 feet and the fire station 83 by 111 feet.

Other municipal projects, a new city hall, central fire station, fire alarm system and street department storage, garage and yard.

All five proposals were carried from majorities ranging from better than two-to-one to three-to-one. Improvements and additions to the water and light system will cost a maximum of $374,544.15, of which $295,000 will be paid by bonds to be retired by the commission itself, and the remaining $168,544.15 to be financed from an outright PWA grant.

Also under a previous arrangement, the Water and Light Commission, which is now turning over $50,000 to the city annually, will increase this sum by $5,000. This additional sum is expected to take care of any possible increase in required receipts operation by the improvement program.

The largest project to be undertaken by the city is a new municipal building. The voters yesterday approved the sale of bonds not to exceed $80,000 for the building. Added to this sum will be a PWA grant of $46,117.02 to provide $126,117.02. The new city hall will be erected on a site to be decided later. It has been pointed out that if a new site is purchased 45 per cent of the cost will be paid for by the PWA, while the city will get all the money from the sale of the old building and site.

Two projects for the fire department were approved. A central fire station to cost $44,937.63 will be erected on the city providing $29,600 and the PWA $15,337.63. A new fire alarm system to cost $11,252.81 also was authorized with the city paying $6,000 and the PWA $5,252.81.

The street department storage, garage and yard will cost an estimated $34,182.54, of which $22,000 will be provided by the city and $12,182.54 from a PWA grant.

City officials pointed out that all the figures were tentative and set at the maximum. In one case, for instance, a much larger amount for excavation work was included in the street department project than will be needed.

The figures also include contingencies and the cost of new sites. The voters gave a larger majority to the new fire alarm system than to any of the other four projects, 445 having favored the proposal and 138 against it, for a majority of 307. The water and light project received the second largest majority, 444 persons having voted for it, compared to 143 against, for a majority (Continued on page six)

Record Sales

Farmers selling their tobacco on the local mart yesterday were paid a total of $333,076.81. Yesterday's record sale brought the season's offerings to 12,804,368 pounds. Farmers have been paid $2,673,659.70, or an average of $20.88, so far this year.

Christian Science Church.
"Substance" was the subject of the lesson-sermon in all Christian Science churches and societies on Sunday, Sept. 11.

The golden text was from Matthew 5:6. "Blessed are they which do hunger and thirst after righteousness; for they shall be filled."

Among the citations which comprised the lesson-sermon was the following from the Bible: "Now faith is the substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen. Through faith we understand that the worlds were framed by the word of God, so that things which are seen were not made of things which do appear. (Heb. 11: 1-3).

The lesson-sermon also included the following passage from the Christian Science textbook "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy. "As God is the substance and man is the divine image and likeness, man should wish for, and in reality has, only the substance of good, the substance of Spirit, not matter. The belief that man has any other substance, or mind, is not spiritual and breaks the First Commandment, Thou shalt have one God, one Mind.

Horton Looms As Strong Gubernatorial Candidate

Reflector Bureau Raleigh, Sept. 13—Those who indulge in the pleasant political pastime of predicting 1940's lineup of gubernatorial candidates are nowadays assigning Lieutenant Governor Wilkins P. Horton a prominent place in their list.

The experienced politician and law maker has kept his intentions quite well to himself, but it has been observed that he has recently put himself pretty well in circulation as a maker of speeches on various and sundry occasions where folks are gathered together in goodly numbers—something which is almost always put down as symptomatic of inward urgings to run for some higher office.

In the case of the State's No. 2 man this ambition would quite naturally have the Governor's chair as its objective.

The Chatham county man, his friends believe, would make quite a strong race as a sort of "middle of the road" candidate. His nomination as Lieutenant Governor has been attributed largely to the fact that Hoye forces swung behind him in 1936's second primary, after he had trailed Paul Grady of Kenly in the first joustings.

This, however, has not identified him completely with the ultra-conservative wing of the Democratic party and he could count on some support from the more liberal branches—a group which must be considered in any calculation of future results.

Ralph McDonald, though some folks may have forgotten it, polled so near fifty per cent of the party vote as to leave the difference almost negligible, and it is still doubtful if any large percentage of this vote can be captured by a hard and fast standpat.

On the other hand, the Lieutenant Governor is undoubtedly acceptable to the conservative and business element in the party. It is reported, on what seems to be reliable authority, that he has the assurance of financial support from influential and well-heeled sources. This is a factor which cannot be overlooked, as nothing is more important in any statewide campaign than the financial ability to make voters acquainted with a candidate's merits.

As a member of the Senate, Horton had a good if not outstanding record, while as its presiding officer in the 1937 session, the long, somewhat saturnine Chathamite did as fine a job on his side of the Capitol as wisecracking Gregg Cherry did over the House. In addition, the Lieutenant Governor made no enemies, so far as could be observed—something which cannot be said about Gaston's hardboiled Major.

Reports reaching Raleigh indicate that Horton has been quietly laying his lines for a gubernatorial announcement after the 1939 General Assembly session, always provided, of course, that the situation remains as favorable as it now appears.

The Lieutenant Governor was in the far Western sector around Labor Day, speaking at Canton at a Labor Day rally in the afternoon, and that same night getting as far away as Franklin for another address. Reactions to his address and personality are reported to have been very good.

Against the Horton ambitions stand the fact that North Carolina's Lieutenant Governors have had remarkably poor success in moving direct up the ladder—as witness the fate of O. Max Gardner, Richard R. Fountain and Sandy Graham in recent years. Max made it later, but when he tried the direct path he was tripped up by old Cam Morrison.

Then, too, for many years the "middle of the roaders" have been out of luck in governor's races. Administration candidates have almost uniformly been the fared half-ed bills. Of course, Horton may be the Administration's man, but that remains to be seen.

SAYS WEST SHOWS HAVE LOST THEIR APPEAL

Cheyenne, Wyo. (AP)—The Buffalo Bill era is being pushed off the entertainment stage by an imaginative, scientific era that has caught the interest of the coming generation, says Colonel Tim E. McCoy, Wild West show impresario.

Colonel McCoy's own venture into the Wild West show business failed, this spring.

"I probably will not try it again," he said. "Youngsters now look forward rather than backward and Indians and cowboys and the history of the winning of the West doesn't appeal to them" as much as the scientific accomplishments of the present and those with which imagination endows the future.

THE CLOUDED MOON

By MAX SALTmarsh

The Characters
 Hugo Stern, handsome author, living on the French Riviera.
 Archie Lumsden, myself, Hugo's friend.
 Bead Geiss, man behind a murder plot, who is trying to get rid of me.

Yesterday Venner is murdered, and a trench and wallet planted in my room. I hide the evidence under a tile in the hall.

Chapter 32 Many Curious Facts

"MR. Venner and I spoke of London," I told the examining magistrate. "He was a very homesick man."

The judge of instruction pursed his lips, looking at me sharply from under lowered brows, startlingly like a cat about to pounce. "And no incident occurred during this interesting conversation?" he inquired. "Nothing that struck you as out of the ordinary? You entered this room, you sat and conversed, you took your leave?"

A warning bell rang in my brain. Something—I could not tell what—whispered that a lot depended on my answer to that question, that some carefully laid trap was about to be sprung if I didn't watch my step. They were all eyeing me, silent, wary, expectant, and I hesitated, racking my brains; and then, as I looked from one to the other, I caught the eye of the stout, cheerful-looking fellow on the commissaire's right, Fleuriot, the man from Marseille, and saw him give a slight, reassuring nod—a nod that said: "Carry on, I'm on your side."

I did a minute's quick thinking. There was something he wanted to say, but obviously he could have no knowledge of what I had discussed with Venner. And then suddenly, I guessed.

"There was one incident," I said speaking slowly and picking my words. "Mr. Venner had a heart-attack just before I left—I think speaking of London had been a little agitating, and I understand his heart was weak. He asked me to get him some drops from the table beside his bed and just after I had brought them, he thought he heard a sound on the balcony outside his bedroom window and told me to go and have a look."

"You actually went out on the balcony?" said M. Fleuriot encouragingly.

"Yes," I answered "I had a good look at the balcony, but there was no one there."

"That proves nothing except that he is clever," the judge remarked, and then to me: "Now we come to the rest of the evening. You say you spent it with Monsieur Stern? You have other witnesses?"

"Naturally," I retorted. "Miss Ada Stern and Mr. Dunning, an American friend."

"And after dinner you came back to the hotel? At what time?"

"At five minutes to ten," I said. "But the hotel gales were already shut." I had already decided that as far as my use of the key went, there must be no attempt at concealment.

The judge raised his eyebrows. "The gate was locked: then how did you get in, pray?"

"Oh," said I airily "I had a key I got it from the late chasseur two days ago—the housekeeper will tell you all about that—and it got lost, but I turned up again. Here it is," I threw it on the table.

He glanced at it indifferently. "Then," he said gently "you have no witness as to what time you came in?"

"Do you want one?" I asked drily.

"I want more from you than that, Mr. Lumsden," he retorted. "I want an explanation for many curious facts. First the fact that your fingerprints and yours alone have been found inside and outside the shutters of this window—second the fact that your fingerprints are the only ones on the medicine-bottle the water-carafe and the glass; third the fact that apart from the man Amédée who is an honest fellow and has a good record, you were the last person to see Monsieur Venner alive."

'Vowing Vengeance'

HE STOOD up suddenly, his eyes, sharp and keen as gimlets, boring into mine.

"Shall I tell you the truth?" he said softly "You came here an unexpected guest because you were in need of money because you knew some guilty secret of Monsieur Venner's past life, some secret that he would pay well to have you silence."

You disclosed your secret to him in the morning and from until night to make his decision. He sent for you and there took place an interview so stormy that he was afflicted with a heart-attack and you departed, vowing vengeance. Then, in the silent hours of the night, you returned to your wretched victim and brutally murdered him, taking what money you could find. You are not aware I suppose, that his wallet is missing."

Now that the storm had broken, I was conscious only of a queer relief at strain relaxed, and an immense thankfulness that I had mentioned the medicine I had given the old man and the excursion to the balcony, for if I had not, those damnable fingerprints would have been doubly incriminating. "Just a minute," I said quietly. "Am I to understand, Monsieur le juge, that you accuse me of murdering Mr. Venner?"

He shook his head. "I make no accusation—no, yet," said he. "I reconstruct the crime, as I am at liberty to do."

"It seems to me," I said "that in your precious reconstruction you've omitted two important points: first, that the door to these rooms was locked from the inside, and second, that the bedroom next door was also locked and the key in its place in the office, as Amédée can tell you."

"The key?" he said drily. "What more easy than for you to possess yourself of the other key, a key of an unoccupied room that would never be missed?"

I shrugged. "All right," I said wearily, "let's leave the question of the key. Where's the weapon that committed the crime, and the wallet that was stolen? You can see for yourself it isn't on me, and I gather, from the look of my room, that you're satisfied yourself it isn't there either."

He smiled gently at me. "Your room," he said slowly, "young friend," he retorted. "Have you not told us yourself that you took a bath this morning and that no one saw you leave the house? What more easy than for you to carry the evidences of your crime out with you and conceal them, in the garden—on the beach—where you like? No, no! You cannot escape as easily as that!"

He glanced round him, at the silent, watchful ring of police, at the commissaire, plump and uneasy, at the man from Marseille, studiously aloof, and took a quick step forward. "Take him over there!" he said sharply. "Let him see what he has done!" And before I realized what was happening, a couple of brawny fellows had seized me by the arms and propelled me to the bed.

The Dog Lulu

THE judge had followed round the table in our wake, and now he suddenly tipped back the bed-clothes. "Miserable one, behold thy victim!" he said quietly, and for a long instant I stood staring down at the dreadful thing which lay revealed.

A wave of nausea swept over me, followed by a surge of blind ungovernable rage. I could have taken the heads of the men who held me and crashed them together; but before the last rags of sanity slipped from me, salvation came. A voice spoke from my rear—a calm, unhurried voice, but with the unmistakable ring of authority.

"That's enough," it said and next minute the man from Marseille had pushed my captors aside and quietly pulled the covers back in place. "You may go now, young man, but understand, you must not leave the hotel."

"I understand," I told him gratefully.

I dressed, and made my way rather dismally down the stairs wondering how I was going to get through the interminable hours that lay before me, and still more how I could get in touch with Hugo. But as my foot touched the bottom step I heard his voice calling my name.

"Archie!" he shouted. "What the devil have you been up to, and what's all this going on here?"

I caught him by the shoulder and swung him round in the direction of Amédée's pantry. I shut the door, and told him my story. As I finished he heaved a sigh. "Well," said he, "that finishes it. You pack your trap, my lad and come straight home with me."

"You forget," I suggested mildly "that as a suspected murderer, I'm not allowed to leave this hotel."

"Well at least I'm going right away to the Vice-Consul to get the name of a good criminal lawyer."

"You'll do nothing of the sort," I retorted. "It'll be time enough for that when they accuse me. Let's take it that I lie low for awhile and you carry on without me. After all I can always let you know if I'm in any sort of a jam."

"And how will you do that?" he demanded sourly.

I thought for a minute. "There's Amédée," I said "I could trust him to take a message without tipping off the police."

I broke off short, for the object of my commendation had poked his head cautiously round the door. "Monsieur," he said in a rusty whisper, "a word if you please—about the dog, Lulu!"

"He's not dead?" I asked startled for the poor brute had for the moment slipped from my memory.

"No, no," said he, "but the Mees has just called me to give me orders to have him destroyed immediately without delay."

"The deuce she has!" said I, and whistled softly. "Now I wonder why."

Hugo looked at me meaningly. "You say the dog was present at the murder?" he queried drily. "He was in effect knocked on the head by the murderer? Isn't it conceivable that he might if he recovers, recognize the man who did it?"

"I believe you're right," I swung round on Amédée. "Listen friend," I said "Tell the Miss that you are carrying out her orders. The dog will be destroyed tonight and buried in the garden if necessary; you can dig a grave to add a touch of local color—but instead get him carried up to the top of the lane some time after dark—say about nine thirty." I turned to Hugo. "Will that suit you?"

"Admirably," said he.

SEEKS SAFETY FOR CYCLISTS

Announce Plans To Organize Bicycle Safety League

Plans to organize a bicycle safety league in Greenville are announced by Mrs. N. C. Brooks, manager of the local office of the Carolina Motor Club.

An effort will be made to enroll every bicycle rider in the city, without cost or obligation other than a pledge to cooperate in reducing bicycle accidents by observing safety rules, Mrs. Brooks said. The club will seek the co-operation of parents, auto drivers and school and public officials.

In an appeal to parents Mrs. Brooks says: "The Carolinas have thousands of bicycle riders, mostly boys and girls of school age. Many ride carefully, keep their bikes mechanically safe and obey traffic rules and signals; many more do not. Unaware of their own danger they weave dangerously from one portion of the roadway to another, disregard signs and signals, carry other children on the handbars, ride three or four abreast. These are dangerous practices. They make the streets and highways fertile fields for accidents."

"On the average one person is killed or injured each day in bicycle accidents on Carolina streets and highways. When a motor vehicle and a bike collide, if anyone gets hurt it is the bike rider. Bike riders should bear their share of the responsibility for safety on the streets and highways. Do your part by making certain that your boy or girl knows the rules of safe bicycle riding and observes them."

Applications blanks will be distributed to all city schools within a few days. A drive will be made to enroll messenger boys, delivery boys and adult bicycle riders. Attractive membership cards will be furnished bike riders and early in the fall a bicycle safety parade will be held.

Rules of the bicycle safety league are:

1. Never carry a passenger; it is dangerous.
2. Never hold on to a moving vehicle.
3. Ride without wobbling. Avoid sharp turns, fast riding over slippery or rough roads and walk across leavy traffic thoroughfares and grade crossings.
4. Learn to ride in a park or other safe place. While learning to ride stay off streets and away from vehicular traffic.
5. Have bicycle equipped with proper brakes, lights, bell or horn. Keep it adjusted to fit you and have brakes checked frequently.
6. Keep to the right, close to the curb. Riding single file.
7. Obey all traffic rules and regulations. Use hand signals when you are going to stop or turn.
8. When riding at night carry a light in front and either a light or reflector in the rear. Light colored clothing aids motorists' visibility.
9. Do not try to carry objects in one hand or to ride in the street "no-handed."
10. Choose your route carefully. Avoid crowded highways. When riding your bike think safety.

1. Never park bike in passageway or on a playground or street where someone might fall over it and be injured.
12. Work for right attitude—business and courtesy to other users of the street and highway.

In 1931 the Carolina Motor Club formed the first bicycle safety league in the South at Greensboro, and later clubs were organized in other North and South Carolina cities. The bicycle league will augment the program the club is carrying out in the schools, through organizations of school safety patrols and making available safety lessons and driver training and other activities in high schools. Since 1922 the Carolina Motor Club has conducted a perpetual accident prevention campaign and has always taken a stand on legislation affecting car owners.

FATE OF ROAD TO BE DECIDED

Negotiations for Operation of A. & N. C. Move Fast

Raleigh, Sept. 13.—It has become evident that whatever is to be done about the proposed Southern Railway operation of the Mullet Road from Goldsboro to Morehead City and Beaufort will be decided in more than ordinary quick time.

Last week Governor Clyde Hoey urged directors of the Atlantic and North Carolina to consider seriously and sympathetically a plan whereby the Southern might take operation of the road off their hands.

Tomorrow inspection of the situation will be begun at Goldsboro by what the Governor called "five prominent officials" of the Southern Railway.

These officials will doubtless report to the Southern's high command the result of their inspection and on their report will hinge the railroad's decision whether or not to go into a three-year operating agreement with the A. and N. C.

So far the only really discordant note in the affair has come out of New Bern—a community which it was expected would be pacified by prospects of ouster of H. P. Crowell as managing head of the Mullet and by a general increase in wages to Mullet employees, an increase which would amount to approximately 20 per cent under the scale paid by the Southern as compared with the Mullet present wage rate.

Reports from the Craven capital, however, indicate a fear that shops there would be closed if the Southern operates the A. and N. C., which is probably true. What many people feel the New Bernians overlook is the fact that all operations of all sorts, shop and otherwise, are likely to stop in the not too distant future if the Southern doesn't take over.

SHORT SHOTS

By HENRY AVERILL

Reflector Bureau. Raleigh, Sept. 13—Swearing in of Forest A. Shuford as Commissioner of Labor to succeed Major A. L. Fletcher was one of Monday's big events at the Capitol.

It's been quite a while since as many department heads got together at one time and place. Among those who heard Chief Justice Walter P. Stacy administer the oath to Mr. Shuford were Superintendent of Public Instruction Clyde A. Erwin, Secretary of State Thad Eure, Attorney General Harry McMullan, Commissioner of Agriculture W. Kerr Scott, State Auditor George Ross, and Insurance Commissioner Dan Boney.

Some score of underlings from the Labor Commissioner's office were present, the prize "off the record" remark going to one of them whose congratulatory remarks to his new boss were "For goodness sake keep me on the pay roll."

Among the lay spectators of the swearing-in was Shuford's brother-in-law, Wade Renfrow, reputed political boss of High Point.

The Governor's appointment of Shuford to the Labor post, incidentally, was a continuation of the Hoey policy of moving up subordinates to fill vacancies.

Previous examples were elevation of Attorney General A. A. P. Seawell to the Supreme Court bench and appointment of Harry McMullan, the Seawell assistant, to the Seawell post.

The last sight-seeing excursion of "Tweetsie," famous narrow-gauge railway which climbs the mountain from Boone to Johnson City, Tennessee, will be run Sunday, according to reports from Boone.

On overall days, Tweetsie hauls freight and passengers through isolated gorges in the Blue Ridge. This coming Sunday Tweetsie will have an ancient observation car attached to the passenger coaches, and will carry late vacationists over the highest commercial railway line in Eastern America.

The train is the last narrow-gauge railway operating commercially east of the Mississippi. For many years it has puffed around the rim of Grandfather mountain, bringing the outside world to mountain sections which otherwise are completely isolated.

For C. B. Deane it would be quite unfortunate if the Supreme Court should decide the Eighth District election contest on the technical grounds that amended returns from Davidson and Richmond were not valid. It would give the nomination to W. O. Burgin without a determination of the real merits of the controversy.

On the other hand such a course of action by the court would probably do much to increase chances of drastic action on the absentee ballot law in the 1939 General Assembly.

If the court fully interprets what the law is, there is quite likely to be a legislative tendency to argue that settles the matter and now that the law is clear let's go on with it.

If, on the other hand, nobody knows what the existing law is, there is more likely to be an overwhelming demand for changes which will make the statutes so clear that he who runs may read.

By Preston Grover

Note: As Preston's Grover's guest columnist today, Secretary Ickes tells of the benefits of government spending in time of depression.

By HAROLD L. ICKES (Secretary of the Interior and Public Works Administrator) Washington—The 1938 PWA program is rolling along at unprecedented speed. The PWA is allotting an average of about $25,000,000 daily for enduring, worthwhile public improvements, which means extensive stimulation for business and industry.

Although the 1938 program is only two months old, we have been impressed with the widespread popularity of what PWA has to offer the country as evidenced by the concerted rush to obtain PWA projects. I authorized taking applications for new projects late in May and the first were received about June 1. The 1938 Act was signed by President Roosevelt on June 21 and applications then began to flow at constantly accelerated speed.

Industry in general has realized that this type of program actually does "prime the pump," although that term has been subjected to a notorious amount of abuse and free interpretation. The "priming" that comes to American industry from the PWA program, however, comes in measurable amounts of specific orders for materials and supplies—orders that careful compliance by a disinterested agency has shown have kept the wheels of many of our corporations moving during lean days.

As the course followed by PWA is reviewed, two important facts stand out. One is that, almost paradoxically, while the nation was in the throes of a great depression, it made its greatest progress in improving its public plant and in-

PEACE INSTEAD OF WAR occupies the mind of War Secretary Harry Woodring (standing) as he spends time with his family and father-in-law, Former U. S. Senator Marcus Coolidge (seated) on peaceful Squaw Island near Hyannis Port, Mass. The Woodring children include Marcus Coolidge, 4; Connor Coolidge, 1½; and Melissa, 3. creasing its real wealth in the form of new schools, new municipal buildings, new bridges, streets, libraries, hospitals, subways, tunnels, harbor and terminal facilities and the like.

As a method of battling the depression and diverting its destructive forces, we launched what probably has been the greatest single program of public improvement in our history. The result is that because of a depression our educational facilities have been amplified many times, the national system of highways has been extended an improved, disease-ridden slums have been torn out and 6-10 housing put in their place, and in general our physical municipal plants have been refurbished and rebuilt. All this certainly meant the conversion of an ill wind into one for most general good.

The second fact of importance is that we have learned to gauge and direct the multiple economic forces which come into play in a public works program, so that in the future we can guide a public works program in the direction in which it will do the most good.

Lessons Learned The bureau of labor statistics of the U. S. Department of Labor undertook with the co-operation of the PWA to measure these quantities in exact proportion. As a result, that agency was able to determine that for every hour of employment created at the site of PWA construction, two and a half times as much work was generated in regular industrial employment—furnishing, creating, transporting and distributing supplies and materials it determined how much employment was created, directly and indirectly, in the construction of a public building, or a reclamation project, or a water or sewerage project. It found out what types of project would "take up the slack" in the lumber industry and lumber areas, in the machinery business, the stone, clay and glass industry, or the chemical business.

Never again will we have to strike out at as did more, blindly but hopefully. Thus we have learned as we have built.

Scott Believes Majority Of Farmers Favor Control

Reflector Bureau Raleigh, Sept. 13—A clear majority of North Carolina farmers are in favor of crop—particularly tobacco—control, in the opinion of W. Kerr Scott, state Commissioner of Agriculture.

In order to keep this majority intact, however, administration of control laws should be fully explained to the farmers, he told this bureau, in order that growers shall have complete confidence in the honesty and integrity of the machinery.

"I don't mean that the present administration of control laws isn't honest or just," he said. "I mean that the entire system should be explained to growers so that they can know just what's going on and how it's being done."

"Most complaints about control, so far as I can learn, come from dissatisfaction of individuals with individual allotments—not from any objection to the principle of control," he continued. "A fellow sees his neighbor get a bigger allotment than he does, doesn't know how or why that is so and begins to grumble about it."

All the ins and out of control administration are frankly not understood by the Commissioner. He said as much without making any bones about the matter.

"You see, that doesn't come under our administration," he pointed out, "and so there's a whole lot about the control regulations that I don't know at all."

In discussing the proposition, the Commissioner predicted that in the referendum scheduled to be held in December control will again win in the farmers' balloting, but probably not by so overwhelming a margin as last spring when more than 90 per cent voted in favor of tobacco and cotton acreage and marketing control.

N. Y. Stock Market

New York, Sept. 13.—(AP)—A burst of selling in late dealings swept stocks sharply lower today as news from Czechoslovakia in the German minority dispute kept the market extremely nervous.

Offerings, so heavy the ticker for a time was swamped, knocked the props from under the leading shares, making a complete reversal from an early upturn. Many shares fell one to five or more under the previous close.

Offerings lightened in the share list toward the close. Transfers approximated 1,500,000 shares.
