BENES RESIGNS; CZECH COMMISSION RUNS INTO SNAG

REFUSES HEED QUESTIONS BY SEC ATTORNEY

Utility Magnate Declines Answer Inquiries at Hearing

DIES COMMITTEE HEARS EVIDENCE

Told That German-American Bund Arranged Target Galleries for Members

Washington, Oct. 5.—(AP)—Howard Hopson, the utility magnate, refused flatly today to answer questions asked him at a Securities Commission hearing, and the proceedings developed into a stormy series of arguments.

Hopson was for many years a prominent figure in the Associated Gas and Electric System. The hearing was concerned with what, if any, relationship there was between his old group and the Utilities Employees Securities Company.

The latter company has denied it was an Associated subsidiary. S. E. C. counsel Lewis Dabney questioned Hopson personally on this connection, over repeated objections by Lynne Warren, Hopson's attorney, and with little success so far as direct objections to the line of questioning.

Other developments: A House committee investigator testified that a German-American bund at its 1937 national convention in New York arranged secretly to establish shooting ranges for all its storm troops.

The investigator, John Metcalfe, told the Dies committee investigating un-American activities, that target ranges had been established by local units in Philadelphia, Buffalo, Reading Pa., and Detroit. He added that the troopers drilled and engaged in target practice at night during the summer.

Metcalfe is a former storm trooper. High stakes are bound up in the political game the administration is playing in New York and Pennsylvania. The two states have 83 electoral votes which may determine the 1940 presidential election.

HAY FEVER TREATMENT IS STREAMLINED

Washington, (AP)—They're streamlining hay fever treatments now. Dr. Elhan Allen Brown of the New England Medical Academy is conducting the work in Lacey clinic, Boston.

Described as the rush or hasty treatment, Dr. Brown has succeeded in telescoping 10 months treatments toward immunization in a 10-day period or less.

Dr. Brown said it was a simple combination of two known methods of relief, medical injections and conditioned air.

A patient is given two and sometimes three injections a day in an air-conditioned hospital. "This enables the patient to leave the hospital during the ragweed season and yet keeps him comparatively free of symptoms," Dr. Brown explains.

REPARATIONS BIG QUESTION

Impression Gained by Correspondent That Hitler Will Prove Insistent in Demands For Claims Not Stipulated

By LOUIS LOCHNER Copyright 1938 by The AP Berlin, Oct. 5.—(AP)—A foreign office spokesman said today that the international commission supervising cession of the Sudetenland to Germany was confronted by new difficulties in delimitation of the fifth zone of occupation and "the question of reparations for injustices inflicted by the Czechs on the Sudetens since 1918."

As the commission resumed its discussions today, the spokesman indicated progress might be difficult from this point on "hitherto it was easy, as the four zones (to be occupied by the German army before October 8) were already fixed at Munich and only certain technical details remained," he said.

"The fifth zone will prove more difficult. Also there is the question of reparations for the injustices inflicted by the Czechs upon the Sudetens since 1918."

Previously an inspired source close to the foreign office indicated such reparations would be demanded of Czechoslovakia just as soon as the Sudetenland was completely in German hands.

To the Munich accord was attached a map showing the first four zones ceded by Czechoslovakia for speedy occupation by the German army. Occupation of the fourth is to begin tomorrow and be finished Friday. Then, the accord said:

"The remaining territory of preponderantly German character will be ascertained by the aforesaid international commission forthwith and be occupied by German troops by the 10th of October."

From Nazis in a position to know this correspondent gains the impression that Adolf Hitler will prove just as insistent and intransigent in his demands for handing over all that he claims as belonging to the fifth zone—not yet defined—as he was for the principle of annexation and the unconditional surrender of the first four zones.

In New Orleans, there are several famous old restaurants where diners enter, sit down and are served an elaborate meal without having to go to the trouble of ordering or speaking a word.

DATE SET HEAR BURGIN MOTION

To be Argued in Wake Superior Court Friday Afternoon

Raleigh, Oct. 5.—(AP)—Attorney General Harry McMillan said today that the hearing before Judge W. C. Harris in Wake Superior court on the motion of W. O. Burgin of Lexington for a mandamus requiring his certification by the State Elections Board as Democratic congressional nominee for the eighth district had been set for two o'clock Friday afternoon.

Burgin went to court in his fight for the nomination after the state board had declared it would certify C. B. Deane of Rockingham as the nominee.

At Lexington, meanwhile, two members of the recently appointed Davidson County Elections Board met to consider instructions by the State Board for formally declaring the vote in that county in the runoff primary for the eighth district congressional seat.

C. L. Harris, who was named to the board after the State Board had announced removal of the two Democratic members of the former board, declined to accept.

The meeting was attended by M. L. Craver, a Democrat, and S. A. Delapp, a Republican, who was not removed by the State Board.

Chairman W. A. Lucas of the State Board, said that P. V. Canady of Lexington, had been named as Democratic member of the board in lieu of Harris, who declined to serve.

The selection was made by the State Board, which is meeting from day to day, Lucas said.

Chamberlain Seeks Release Of Czechoslovak Hostages

AGAIN DEFERS FARM ACT SUIT

Judge Harris Orders Continuance Until October 25th

Raleigh, Oct. 5.—(AP)—Judge W. C. Harris in Wake Superior court ordered a continuance today until October 25 of a hearing in a suit to contest the constitutionality of the Federal farm act in so far as it applied to penalties on tobacco sales in excess of 500 lbs.

The case was continued last week October 11 and the new change was made, Judge Harris said, due to difficulty of serving papers on all parties in the action and because W. A. Lucas of Wilson, counsel for the warehousemen, is busy with his duties as chairman of the State Election Board.

About 300 new farmer-plaintiffs have joined in the action, making some 1,000, and the suit is against around 250 warehousemen.

Judge Harris issued an order last week directing the warehousemen to impound all tobacco tax penalties and withhold them from transmission to the Federal Secretary of Agriculture pending further action in the case.

DECREE POWER FOR DALADIER

French Premier Given Almost Undefined Authority

Paris, Oct. 5.—(AP)—The Senate today voted to grant Premier Daladier's cabinet powers to govern France by decree until November 15, powers already approved by the Chamber of Deputies.

The Senate vote was 286 to 4. The chamber had voted the decree provisional by 331 to 78, with 204 abstentions, after a stormy all-night session in which the Premier met much more opposition than in the previous debate in approval of the four-power pact of Munich.

The chamber approved that accord for dismemberment of Czechoslovakia to save Europe's peace by 335 to 75.

Daladier did not pin the life of his cabinet on the Senate vote, since his demand for decree powers was assured of easy acceptance.

When the decree is published in the official journal, probably tomorrow, the Daladier government will have broad, almost undefined powers to rule the nation until November 15.

Such powers were sought to grapple with the economic and financial ills confronting France. Daladier came into office last April 10 with similar powers, but they expired on July 31.

Prime Minister Facing Vote of Confidence in Commons

London, Oct. 5.—Prime Minister Chamberlain today told the House of Commons Britain was seeking the release of "certain Czech officials in frontier districts" and Czech residents in Germany who had been imprisoned in Germany as "hostages."

Opening the Thursday of Commons debate on his four-power accord of Munich for the cession of Czechoslovakia Sudetenland to the Reich, Chamberlain said the government had received reports such officials and residents were held during the occupation of ceded territory.

He said the government was unable to estimate the number involved, but had instructed the British representative on the international commission supervising the cession "to press for the release of any such hostages as soon as possible."

The government demand for a vote of confidence for the bargain by which Chamberlain averted a European war was placed before Commons by Sir John Simon, Chancellor of the Exchequer, who introduced this motion:

"That this house approve the policy of his Majesty's government by which war was averted in the recent crisis and support their efforts to secure a lasting peace."

The House did not is not expected to vote it until tomorrow.

MODERN GIRL SHUNS MEAL-TICKET MARRIAGES

Chicago (AP)—The idea of marrying for a meal ticket is out so far as the modern girl is concerned, says Dr. Laird T. Hites, professor of psychology at the Central Y. M. C. A. college.

"Modern newlyweds consider marriage a partnership," Dr. Hites says. "The clinging type of girl is gone. Women recognize themselves as equals in every respect with men."

Dr. Hites asked students of his mixed class how many children they would like to have. The average desired three.

GAIN IS SHOWN IN FATALITIES

Ten Killed on Highways in Eastern N. C. Last Month

Ten persons were killed on highways of Eastern North Carolina during September, compared with nine during the previous month, the monthly report of Troop A of the State Highway Patrol, issued today, revealed.

The ten fatalities were the result of 73 accidents, in which an additional 45 persons were injured. During August the patrolmen investigated 47 wrecks, in which 33 persons, in addition to those killed, were injured. A sharp increase was noted for September and a big increase was shown in the number of persons injured, although the number of fatalities increased only one.

Patrolmen located in Troop A made 450 arrests during the month, of which 56 were on charges of driving while drunk. In August the officers made 435 arrests, 39 for driving drunk. Defendants were given sentences totaling 21 years and three months. Of the 450 persons arrested, 439 were convicted, only 11 having been acquitted.

Fines resulting from convictions of highway laws amounted to $5-353.60 and costs $3,715.06. In addition the patrolmen recovered stolen property valued at $5,750 and collected $2,336.89 in revenue, for a grand total of $17,155.55.

Of 1,821 applicants examined for driver's license, 1,590 were granted the permits.

In traveling 104,371 miles during the 11,427 hours spent on duty, the patrol force executed the following duties: vehicles inspected, 1,620; lights corrected, 2,133; warnings issued, 17; courtesies extended, 356; cars received, five; vehicles stored, 21; vehicles weighed, four, all of which were found overloaded; complaints investigated, 290; citations made, 267.

Two ABC Officers Show Good Record

Sixty-three violators of the liquor laws were arrested by J. M. Ward and J. L. Taylor, special Pitt county ABC enforcement officers, with the aid of county and city forces, during the months of August and September, it was reported today.

The ABC enforcement officers expressed the opinion that a large number of illicit stills located in the county had been "weeded out" within the past few months. Only one still was located and destroyed during September, the smallest number for any similar period since the officers were employed 19 months ago.

HOLLAND TO SHUN FOREIGN LAWYERS

The Hague (AP)—All foreign lawyers are forbidden to practice in Holland after January 1, 1942, according to a Dutch Royal Decree.

No foreign lawyers are to be henceforth admitted as members of any Dutch bar, even though they have obtained a law degree at a Dutch University.

NATION NEEDS BRITISH LOAN

President of Rapidly-Shrinking Republic Steps Down After Holding Nation Together as Long as Possible

Prague, Oct. 5.—(AP)—The resignation of President Benes of Czechoslovakia was officially announced today.

The resignation of the chief of state, who has held his little republic together as long as possible under pressure of tremendous events was not unexpected, although it had been denied several times recently that he intended to step down.

Benes became president of Czechoslovakia in December 1935, succeeding the founder of the republic, the late Thomas Masaryk.

Meanwhile a revamped Czech government started work on economic readjustments to put the republic, shrinking daily as foreign armies march in, on a stable basis.

The most pressing need was for the $50,000,000 loan promised by Prime Minister Chamberlain of Great Britain. This, the dismembered country hopes to get soon, for the loss of industrial areas struck a violent blow at its economic structure.

Financial experts surveyed what probably would be left after the fulfillment of German, Polish and Hungarian claims to minority districts and after plebiscites determine disposition of other regions.

County To Absorb Cut In Valuations

J. H. Coward, county auditor, declared today that the county would have to make some provision taxes to be paid by utilities as a result of a decision of the State Board of Assessment yesterday to mark down tax valuations of public service corporations.

The action is expected to reduce the taxes to be paid by the Carolina Telephone and Telegraph company and the railroads.

Mr. Coward said the budget had to be prepared in August and that no provision was made for a reduction in taxes to be paid by the utilities.

The amount of decrease in taxes to be paid Pitt county was not available. It was not believed it would be any great amount, however.

Claims Vary Over Power Of Defense

Fort Bragg, Oct. 5.—(AP)—The army's most extensive air raid defense maneuvers produced clashing claims today from air corps attackers and coast artillery defenders of the first base.

On crystal clear nights the nation's most powerful military searchlights have failed at times to converge their beams on bombers flying two or three miles high.

"Blue," defenders have scored in the game of hide and seek when war planes of the invading "black" force from Langley field, Va., were unable to escape from the line of fire of anti-aircraft weapons or even spot guns in the ring around Fort Bragg.

Conceived with finding answers to some 200 tactical questions, the army high command is awarding competitive scoring.

End Of The Century Club Meets.
The End of the Century Book Club opened its program for the year with an interesting meeting at the home of Mrs. J. L. Hassell. The president, Mrs. James S. Ficklen, greeted the members in a short talk. She then turned the meeting over to Mrs. J. L. Fleming, who introduced Dr. A. D. Frank of the faculty of East Carolina Teachers College. Dr. Frank spoke interestingly and instructively on a few of the more important happenings of the summer and early fall. He stressed three points, namely: that the United States had weathered a year of severe business depression without any sign of panic; the growth of the power of organized labor in the United States, disension within its ranks and its trend toward radicalism; and the international crisis just settled in Europe, in which Hitler and Germany demanded and secured a part of Czechoslovakia. He tried to interpret some of the causes and effects of these events for his listeners who bombarded him with questions at the conclusion of his discussion. This talk is the first of a series of discussions of current events to be given to the club.

Following the program, a short business session was held. Mrs. Frank read a list of the books to be secured for the year. It was announced that the club would present the portrait of Mrs. R. L. Carr to the library on October 18 at 2:45 p. m. Members of the book clubs, and the Woman's Club will be our guests at this time.

Thirteen members and two guests, Miss Betsy Greene and Mrs. Gaston, enjoyed a delicious salad course served by the hostess, assisted by Mrs. J. L. Little and Mrs. J. R. Little.—Reported.

The Round Table Meets.
On Tuesday afternoon it was quite apparent that Mrs. Milton White's meeting of the Round Table was a very popular one with the members. It was something not to be missed and so at the appointed hour of one o'clock every member was on hand with a delightful addition of four guests, Mrs. J. F. Smith, Mrs. J. H. Blount, Mrs. E. L. Baker and Mrs. W. G. Cherry.

Upon arrival a most delectable luncheon was served. Following this, Mrs. Munford, the vice-president, presided over a brief business session leading up to the study for the afternoon, given by Mrs. E. L. Henderson. The subject for this study was "Our Changing Customs and Morals," and was given most ably and entertainingly with sustained interest throughout. She defined morality as "self conscious life lived," custom as "mob thought," also as "the unwritten law of life." Then she traced interestingly the source of many of our everyday customs and celebrations, showing that environment and nature of country are moulding factors. We ourselves are the result of customs of countless ancestors. Morals reflect customs and customs reflect morals. Only the future can tell the influence of the moving pictures.

All of our annual holidays are celebrated in ways growing out of ancient customs, such as Halloween when the spirits of the dead were supposed to haunt the world.

There are more interesting and numerous customs connected with marriage than with anything else, and everything we have in our present day weddings has come from meaningful customs of many nations.

Following this most excellent presentation, the meeting was closed with a resume of the week's world news by Mrs. W. A. Brown.

There are about 20,000 administrative officers in the American public school system.

Inter Se Club.
"As the arena of the nation's past, Philadelphia is without peer among American cities," stated Mrs. Wyatt Brown Tuesday in her paper "Philadelphia To 1900," the first link in a chain of programs studying "Our American Heritage," which the Inter Se Club has selected as its year's work. This first meeting was held in the home of Mrs. David Evans on Dickinson avenue.

Philadelphia (the city of Brotherly Love), was founded by the Quaker and Englishman, William Penn, in 1682, "who bought Pennsylvania and made a treaty with the Indians 'not ratified by an oath, and never broken.'" Philadelphia originally contained two square miles but today covers one hundred and twenty-nine square miles, with a population of 1,950,961 in the 1930 census. It is the home of historic Independence Square which "has kept the ideal of the founder for a 'green country home'." The Square "consists of Independence Hall, Congress Hall, and the Supreme Court building or old city Hall. These are the nation's nerve centers and with the Square constitute a permanent memorial to the fathers of our country. Independence Hall was begun in 1712. Here on July 4, 1776, was made the Declaration of Independence; here the old Liberty Bell which first proclaimed the nation's freedom, hangs upon its original beams."

Philadelphia is the home of the oldest Navy Yard in the U. S., the Quartermaster's Depot where the modern Betsy Ross still makes "Old Glory"; the U. S. Mint, the oldest in America; the Frankford Arsenal; the U. S. Naval Asylum and the old Shot Tower.

Philadelphia boasts of many institutions of higher learning. There are "Girard College founded by Stephen Girard for orphan boys, and opened in 1848. Drexel Institute founded in 1891. Haverford College for men, founded in 1834 by Quakers. Bryn Mawr College for women, which was founded in 1885. The University of Pennsylvania originated as a charity school in 1740 and became a university, the first in the U. S., in 1779." In and around Philadelphia are many lovely parks: Fairmont, Valley Forge, and Wissahickon, which contains old Valley Green Inn, the last of the old hostleries. In and around the city are "historic scenes where the Revolutionary leaders and soldiers fought and sacrificed for the principles of institution and state. Here are still visible mansions, sites, and relics that remind us that not brick and mortar but sentiment and character, build a nation."

Big Reductions Made In Buick Auto Prices

Flint, Mich., Oct. 5.—Substantial price reductions on Buick cars for 1939, ranging from $51 to $102 on the standard sedan and coupe models, were announced today by Harlow H. Curtice, president of this division of General Motors. As a result, the Buick price structure for next year has been brought to approximately the 1938 levels.

The reductions have been made on all of the fast moving and most popular models, Mr. Curtice said, namely, the Buick Series 40 Special 5-passenger two and four door sedans and coupes, the Series 60 Century 5-passenger two and four door sedans and coupes, the Series 80 Roadmaster 6-passenger four door sedans and the Series 90 Limited 6-passenger four door sedan.

In the lower price range Series 40 and Series 60 cars the reductions are $51 on standard sedans and coupe models and in the higher range Series 80 and 90 cars the reductions are $102 on the six passenger standard sedans.

"Buick's very satisfactory volume with the expected increase in output during 1939 enables us to pass on the benefits of manufacturing economies to the public in the price of the new cars," the executive said. "The price reductions not only represent a substantial saving to the 1939 car buyer, but the cars themselves represent a decided step-up in value."

The executive pointed out that the new low price include such accessories as safety direction signal, extra front center bumper guard, extra electrical equipment, such as lights in all trunk compartments, automatic cigar lighter, and other accessories which either were not on the cars last year or were optional at added cost. In addition, he said, very substantial reductions have been made in major accessories including the new Buick sonomatic radio, air control car heaters and defrosters which likewise are improved over last year.

Small hot rice croquettes served with hot tomato sauce make a very satisfying main course for luncheon or supper. The combination is also tasty for Sunday morning "brunch."

Green Phantoms Engage Tarboro Here On Friday

Team Busy this Week Following Opening Victory

By "SMUT" BURKS
After opening the current football season with a 9-6 victory over the Plymouth high school team last Monday the Green Phantoms of G. H. S. are working hard in their daily practices in preparation for their second contest Friday, Oct. 7. The high school griders will meet Tarboro at the third street stadium Friday at 3:15.

Tarboro has practically the same eleven that they had last year. The team was hardly weakened at all by graduation. The opponents will outweigh the Phantoms, especially in the backfield. Their fullback is Tarboro's triple-threat man and is reputed to be a fast and hard charging ball carrier. He is also a better than average punter.

As a whole the G. H. S. team is in good shape after Monday's game. Ford McGowan, first string quarterback on the Phantom squad suffered a broken nose late in the game and will be out until next week at the least. McGowan was the only casualty of Monday's game, so the local team will be practically at top strength for Friday's contest.

The Phantom line showed up very good in the game with Plymouth, although the ends and tackles will need much work on their defensive play.

Tucker and Vincent were the line stars in Monday's game and are expected to be in the thick of the fight Friday. Williams and Gibson also offered fine playing in the game with Plymouth.

According to Coach Farley, the backfield offered a good running attack Monday, but was shy on blocking. There were also frequent fumbles by the backs which probably cost the Phantoms another touchdown or two. Coaches Farley and Fulkerson are busy ironing these weaknesses and the high school griders will probably offer a much better all-around game on Friday.

Tarboro already has two decisive victories to their credit and is supposed to have a strong team. The Phantoms also have a clean slate so far and will be fighting for another victory to make it two in a row. With both teams fighting ferociously to keep their records clean, Friday's game promises to be a thriller.

The light, speedy Phantom team will be up against a heavier, hard-charging Tarboro organization. Friday's game will probably be deception against sheer power and ought to provide the spectators with plenty of action, thrills and surprises.

Monday's curtain raiser was witnessed by a decidedly much better crowd than attended last year's gridiron contests. However, the student body is expected to be better represented at Friday's game than were at Monday's contest.

The town people are also cordially invited to attend the game.

Interest in the city in high school football has seemed to be on the downward trend during the last few years, but this year everyone is trying to build interest back up to a higher level and reinstiate high school football as a crowd-attraction and self-supporting major sport. So come out to the Third street stadium Friday at 3:15 and cheer the Green phantoms on to victory over a highly rated Tarboro power house.

MENTORS HAVE GLOOMY SPIRIT

Three Regulars On Hospital List; Play Here Saturday

By JAMES L. WHITFIELD
Optimism among the gridiron mentors of East Carolina Teachers College for a scheduled contest with Campbell College, to be played here Saturday afternoon at 2:00 o'clock, is at an unusually low ebb. Last Saturday, the Belmont Abbey aggregation handed the Pirates a 19-0 defeat. Seeing that their proteges were weak in blocking tackle plays, Coaches Alexander and Gilbert this week proceeded to help the Pirates overcome their weaknesses. By doing this, three players have been placed on the hospital list. The injured players will have to be replaced. Replacing mainstays with green material is everything but enjoyable to a coach.

Rock Venters, who tips the scales on the shady side of the 200-pound mark, pulled a ligament in his shoulder. This will likely keep him out of the game Saturday. Venters, a guard, will have to be replaced by an inexperienced man. This is certain to weaken this position.

Another handicap, unless overcome by Saturday, will be in the tackle division. Milton Wagner, a mainstay, has an infection under the arm. The ailment has been diagnosed as a boil. Wagner's team mates say he's just "boiling over." This is customary for a grid player, however, especially if he stands a chance of being omitted from the lineup.

Half-back Earl Smith may have to remain out of the game for the rest of the season. He sustained a leg injury during a recent practice and not only will be unable to go the route Saturday, but for an indefinite period. The loss of Smith is creating another vacancy. He will be hard to replace.

So, bench-warming will be about the only part some of the regular Pirates will be able to play Saturday. However, the game hasn't started yet. There's still time to whip some of the so-called inexperienced hopefuls into shape. If severe practice means anything, there's no way to determine just what those Pirates will be able to do with Campbell College, despite their handicaps.

Man About Manhattan

By George Tucker

New York—It was one of those ineffectual little dramas that pop up and fade on Broadway in a breath—pathetic in script, meager in staging, peopled by actors who deserved better luck. . . . I just got in five minutes before curtain time and workmen were still tinkering with gadgets on the stage. . . . You could see hurried and harassed stagehands rushing about, not getting very much done, but making a good loud confusion.

Suddenly one of the ushers yelled, "Pull the curtain down, Joe, there's a customer in the house." A sad-eyed man shuffled in and sat down, and present a few more came in. In a tone loaded with sarcasm the sad-eyed man leaned over and whispered to a fellow directly in the row ahead:

"I hear they're going to sprinkle pecanuts in the lobby—to lure the customers in."

"I resent that," cried the other fellow, whirling angrily around. "My cousin wrote this play." Just then the lights dimmed and the curtain rose. The sad farce of an unfunny drama that was supposed to be laugh-provoking dragged out to a forlorn conclusion.

On the way out I heard the candy butcher confiding to a friend:

"This is the second night this thing has run. If it stays open tomorrow I make five bucks."

Ernest Hemingway wrote his play "The Fifth Column," under circumstances so trying that one wonders how he escaped a lasting case of the jitters.

The man who gets a big kick out of hating the Italians wrote this drama in besieged Madrid, and he says: "Each day we were shelled by the guns beyond Leganes and behind the folds of Barabitas hill, and while I was writing the play the hotel Florida, where we lived and worked, was struck by more than 38 high explosive shells. . . . perhaps those 38-some shells helped write it. When you went to the front, at its closest it was 1500 yards from the hotel, the play was always slipped inside the inner fold of a rolled up mattress. When you came back and found the room and the play intact you were always pleased. It was finished and copied and sent out of the country just before the taking of Teruel."

Note: Mr. Hemingway's play about the Spanish-Civil war hasn't been produced on Broadway but it has been published in book form by Scribners. Copies of the play have been kicking around in offices of leading producers since last winter.

Joe Glaston reports that he has been victimized by a reformer, and the reformer is, no less, Vincent Lopez, his boss. Mr. Lopez, riding high on a wave of successful state swing music, recently played an engagement at Saratoga and, between chores, cleaned up something like $18,000 at the races. However, he was loath to pass his tips on to his colleagues, for fear they would lose their hard-earned coin.

MURDER BY MOTOR CAR

Murder by motor car is on the decline, according to the National Safety Council. Traffic accident fatalities for the past nine months have registered a steady decline. This decline has taken place in the face of a slight increase in mileage figures.

All of which seems to indicate that the speed crazed mass of 40,000,000 drivers known as the motoring public, is slowly awakening to a new found responsibility—safe driving. Possibly the average driver is discovering that the modern high speed automobile can be a vehicle of horrible death as well as of comfort and convenience. If so, a great stride is being made toward the day when once again, the family car can be trundled out for a week-end holiday with reasonable assurance that all will return intact.

Sooner or later the motoring public will have to get the fact through its head that the present slaughter on highways is criminally needless. As was recently pointed out by the New York Times, "it will have to learn that murder by motor car—although it may not lead to the chair—is still murder and that it is the part of good morals, good sportsmanship and good citizenship to drive and walk safely."

TOY RAILROAD SHUTTLES FREIGHT UNDER CHICAGO

Chicago (AP)—One of the nation's unique railroads uses 150 miniature electric locomotives and more than 3,000 small freight cars along 65 miles of catacombed tracks 45 feet beneath Chicago's busy loop business district.

The Chicago freight tunnel system, as it is called, was built in eight years at a cost of about $30,000,000. Now the operating company is beginning to worry about transportation trucks. Year after year, 24 hours a day, the tiny electric trains in the tunnel system have been plying back and forth beneath the Chicago river, down to Lake Michigan and west to warehouses and railroad terminals, handling more than 1,000 tons of freight daily. Moving these goods on the surface would add to loop congestion.

The trains run between 15 and 30 miles an hour through all conditions, concrete tunnels seven and one-half feet high and six feet wide. Electric pumps, water and fireproof doors, electrically controlled signal block systems are part of the operating equipment.

PRICE TRIPLES ON UNDECLARED GEMS

San Francisco (AP)—The way Mrs. Marie L. Kahn figures it out is this: She has paid for her jewelry twice and now if she pays for it again it's hers.

After purchasing a diamond brooch and bracelet in France for $1,700, she was accused of bringing them into the country without declaring them. She then paid 100 per cent duty. Now the government demands another $1,700 as a penalty for alleged smuggling, and has filed a libel against the jewelry in federal court.

Washington—What Hitler needs for trade penetration is not Storm Troopers but a corps of plump fellows like Walter Foote of Texas, or some of the other U. S. trade hunters. Foote is the man who taught the ungle Scotsmen to drink soda pop.

Ye American Native For generations many people living in the jungle countries of the East Indies have soothed their feelings with scotch whisky and soda. But while Foote was consulting in the Dutch East Indies, he recalled that back in former America the natives you and I were achieving her same effect with soda pop.

No demand—was the invariable reply, "and it tastes awful." Foote didn't believe that last crack. He investigated and found the trouble was they were getting soda pop that was not made in America—usually a sallow mixture of fruit juice and pep-less fizz water. And it was served without ice.

Foote finally persuaded a few dealers to take on small consignments of American pop and to serve it with ice. American soda pop didn't sweep the Indies like a plague. But it took on so well that one company now has its own bottling plant in Java. It can be had at the better bars at 5 cents a bottle. The dealers won't handle it for a nickel a bottle.

Foote says his primest recollection is seeing two Scotsmen at a fashionable club in Batavia, sipping Yankee pep through a straw. (Each had a bottle, not two straws for one bottle.)

Ye Oldie Mint Julep And again, there is the business of mint juleps. They had to be put across in the East Indies the same way. Now you can get American Bourbon (you don't make juleps with scotch) at bars where it was never offered before.

Electric refrigerators went the same way. A proud and wealthy Dutchman at Batavia built himself a swank mansion—completely electrified, except for the ice box. Dutchmen in the Indies had used ordinary ice boxes for 100 years or more and electric never could make headway.

The break came to Foote. He was a guest at the house warming. When the show was about at its peak he suggested quietly to his host that the house was perfect—except for the ice box. Wouldn't an electric one be better?

GREENVILLE, N. C. October 4, 1938 TO THE TRADE: Recently N. D. Chemical Company, a co-partnership composed of S. F. Pollard, one of my former employees, and W. Hill Horne, of Greenville, have put on the market a headache powder under the name of H-E, said powder being put up in packages in all respects similar to H-C compounded and sold by Brown Laboratories.

The placing of such product upon the market was a clear infringement of Brown Laboratories' Trade-Mark H-C. By reason of such infringement, Brown Laboratories instituted an action in the United States District Court for the Eastern District of North Carolina to permanently restrain and enjoin N. D. Chemical Company from marketing its product under the name of H-E.

On Monday, October 3, 1938, a decree was entered in the United States District Court permanently enjoining and restraining said chemical company from using the name of H-E or from in any manner imitating and copying the packages of H-C compounded and sold by Brown Laboratories. ## The Characters

Kathleen Gregory: young, red-haired member of the Gregory clan which owns The Golden Girl mine, traveling west incognito.

Bridget Eiley: her companion.

Donald MacDonald: owner of The Stubborn Boy mine, hates the Gregorlys, Kathleen especially.

Yesterday: Outside the town of Neutrality Kathleen meets MacDonald for the first time and immediately quarrels with him.

Chapter Six

Neutrality

"SO YOU can't take it," observed Bridget, then she started to laugh.

"I don't know what you're laughing at," spat Kathleen.

"Just remembering a remark of yours. All you'd need would be propinquity. If you two had been any nearer there'd been a combustion they'd have heard in Spain."

Kathleen relaxed and laughed with her. "I might as well give up," she said ruefully. "I haven't a chance now."

"Hmm," mused Bridget. "Vapid flapper. Well, maybe you're right. However it would be too bad, you've made such an excellent beginning."

"Excellent," echoed Kathleen.

"Umhuh. If MacDonald ever has a suspicion that you came out to vamp a right-of-way from him, he'll smother it. He'll know you would never have started with a verbal club."

Kathleen made no comment. They had topped a sharp rise and Neutrality lay below. Neutrality consisted of a single street, straight at one end, at the other curving into the distance.

The straight end was evidently the business thoroughfare, one side at least. The left side was brightly lighted. Colored signs whirled before plate glass windows. A queue of people waited before the entrance of a motion picture theater.

The lights on the right side were few and far between. The shops looked drowsy, ill kept. Even the pavement was full of holes.

Bridget, who had been reading signs, burst out with a sudden. "Cleo, do you realize everything on the left side is MacDonald and on the right, Gregory? Look at the signs."

Kathleen groaned. She had been looking at signs; hotel signs. The MacDonald had a tiled front; yellow lights and the windows of the grill room were steaming with the promise of warm food.

The Gregory boasted only a blue globe above the entrance, a dim lobby beyond. A lunch counter with high stools opened onto it.

Resolutely, Kathleen pulled up before the curb. Bridget followed her into the lobby, across a flimsy-covered floor, where a shirt-sleeved proprietor leaned across the desk, resignation in his eyes.

"Two rooms with a connecting bath," ordered Kathleen.

"Sorry ma'am, but there ain't but one tub in the house and I don't know as you could get to it, tonight."

"Does The MacDonald have more than one tub?" she demanded.

"Well, if you want to be known as one of them stiffnecks, it ain't no business of mine. Folks who come to Neutrality have to be one or the other. Can't straddle fences in these parts."

He closed the register and sat back, mouth pleated into lines of displeasure.

"You mean a person has to be a MacDonald or Gregory? What do the commercial men do?"

"They stay on the side of the street they're sellin'. No Gregory would buy from a firm sellin' the MacDonalds."

"Would you mind telling me why they call this Neutrality?" begged Kathleen.

Achingly Tired

"WELL, ma'am, it was this way. MacDonald and Old Angus Gregory lived in a cabin up the hill. When they had their tub, neither would give up to the other, so they divided that cabin in two and run their road down the hill, side of each other. Then when the miners started comin' in, they took to buildin' along side of the road they was representin'. Then come the women folks. They didn't have many bonnets in those days and they got so all fired tired of havin' holes shot in 'em, while the MacDonald and Gregory miners were a-bathin', that they marked off a portion where they could shop in peace and quiet. They called it the neutral zone and that's how the town got its name."

Kathleen's eyes had been growing larger and brighter as the man talked. Why hadn't her people told her fascinating tales like these?

"What started the feud?" she asked, eagerly.

"Well now ma'am, don't know as I could say. Don't think I ever heard tell. It's fair to say 'twas some dastardly deed of a MacDonald."

Kathleen sighed wearily. Romance had died and she was cold and hungry and wanted a bath. Never in all of her years had she felt as grimy, as achingly tired.

"To be loyal, or to be clean, that is the question."

"Looks like you could do with a bath," confessed the proprietor as though ashamed of being a traitor.

Kathleen, at first indignant, laughed suddenly. "Then we'd better try the other hotel, and please explain to the Gregorlys when they indulge in some plumbing."

"I won't do a mite of good," sighed the man. "Not that they aren't the finest people in the world; my father worked for them before me, but they... well things didn't look so bad when Old Angus was livin' and before young Donald took charge and started building a new MacDonald side."

Back at the wheel of the car, Kathleen looked at Bridget. "And to think I'm part owner of that wreck," she said in disgust.

The MacDonald was clean, it was bright, it was warm and it was modern. A uniformed bellboy was at the curb by the time they had stopped. Before they could ask, he had assured them a garage man would call for their car immediately, as the storm would strike any moment.

The clerk was young and affable. The suites were all occupied. "Would a room with twin beds suffice?"

"With an adjoining bath, a haymow would suffice," Kathleen informed him fervently.

The room did not resemble a haymow. After the sketchy tourists cabins they had found along the way, it seemed luxurious. Forgetting her role, Kathleen tipped the bellhop as though he were responsible for its comfort, then, laying her purse on a dresser, uttered a shrill laugh. Like the horn of the MacDonald car, the laugh grew in intensity until it verged on hysteria.

Half an hour later, enveloped in a camel-hair robe the shade of her hair; that hair curled in tiny ringlets by the steam, her cheeks pink, she curled up on the bed to relax in sensuous pleasure.

The storm had struck. She had spent a few moments at the window watching the pyrotechnical display of weird blue lights which revealed mountains towering above them, and now was conscious of rain flaying the windows and of the radiator purring a soothing refrain.

She smiled a little at her observation of such trivial things. Never had she been as keenly aware of physical well being. Chilled and one weary, the room and the bed warmed and cradled her. Dinner had been ordered served in the room and she was hungry as she had never been hungry before.

And she had become vitally interested in the town of Neutrality. Her grandfather had become something more than a beard and a belching voice. She'd seen him only once, his last visit East when she was seven. He had lived at the mine and marveled at his son's preference of the East. He had even regretted sending young Angus East to school for he had never returned save for one visit.

She must learn more about the early days, about the finding of the gold... about the feud...

She thought then of Donald MacDonald. Did one inherit hatreds? She had hated the man before she knew his identity and he certainly bore no love for her. He had been charming to Bridget.

Kathleen's eyes were narrowed. Here was a challenge. A man who not only ignored, but openly insulted her must be reduced to his proper place. And it was this Donald MacDonald who had built this hotel was it? Well, she'd build one across the street that would make this one look like a hovel.

When Bridget came in from her bath, Kathleen was at the desk. "Wiring for a rescue crew?" she asked lightly.

"No," murmured Kathleen. "I'm drawing plans for a new Gregory House. It's going to be a honey."

A look of pride and tenderness came into the eyes of the Irish girl, but there was only flippancy in her voice. "Two baths to every room?"

"And a free-for-all shower in the foyer," supplemented Kathleen. "Do I hear the rattle of dishes?"

There was a busboy at the door, a waitress behind him. Kathleen looked up to find pale blue eyes focused on her in wide admiration; the tray in the uplifted hand slanting at a perilous angle.

Preliminary Phase of Air Maneuvers Well Under Way

Fort Bragg, N. C., Oct. 5.—With the preliminary phase of the program for the joint anti-aircraft Air Corps well under way, it is being made possible to eliminate certain minor deficiencies which have been noted in the conduct of the defense of the air base at Fort Bragg. Naturally all firing must be simulated during the exercises proper. Neither the anti-aircraft guns nor machine guns can actually fire even though the air seems filled with "enemy" planes. But during darkness, the searchlights of the defense are almost continually in operation; first one beam will search out a "hostile" plane, then a second and a third and others will cross their lights with the beam of the first until the silvery plane stands out plainly in the sky. The weather has been ideal so far with the ceiling for planes in flight being unlimited.

During this phase the attacking airplanes of the enemy (black) air force are flying at altitudes at which the defense will almost surely be able to spot the formations in flight. It will be during the active phase, October 10-15, that the Black air formations will approach their objective, the Fort Bragg air base, at altitudes and in formations of their own selection, and many such flights will probably arrive over their target almost unseen or unheralded.

A test of the aircraft warning net was conducted on October 2, during the hours 8-10 a. m., and 3-6 p. m. The purpose of the test was to instruct the observers, telephone personnel, and defense center personnel in the duties that they are to perform during the maneuver period, October 10-15. Approximately three hundred flash messages were received during the test period. An incomplete check of the records on hand at the present time shows that the average time, i. e., time from observer to delivery at defense headquarters, was slightly over three minutes. In other words, within four minutes after an airplane makes its initial appearance in the maneuver area, the defense commander will know its location.

Prior to the test each observer was mailed a simulated test message similar to those he will be required to submit himself during the maneuver period. These pre-arranged messages instructed the observer to go to his telephone and report his flash message at a definite time. All messages were so arranged as to show theoretical flights of enemy airplanes across the maneuver area.

The test was highly successful. The various enemy flights could be clearly followed on the large light-dotted board at press headquarters from the time they crossed the coast line until their arrival at Fort Bragg. Naturally, there were slight delinquencies but they were of such minor nature as to be readily remedied by October 10. Without exception all concerned, especially the observers, showed that they are ready for the opening of the maneuver.

On the evening of October 3, in bright moonlight and with observing conditions almost perfect, several formations of "enemy" planes took off from the base which is assumed to have been established on our eastern coast at Langley Field, which is about 180 miles on an airplane from Fort Bragg. Two reconnaissance flights of two planes each preceded the bombers and attack airplanes. These reconnaissance planes arrived over the air base at Fort Bragg around 7:45 p. m., dropped parachute flares to illuminate the target area, made photographs of the air base, and radioed weather conditions over the base to the bombers and attack planes then in flight. These reconnaissance flights were followed by a night of three of the B-17s of the second bombardment, which are known as the "Flying Fortresses," then by the 30th Bombardment Squadron of nine B-18s, each with a crew of three men; and finally by the 13th Attack Squadron, with the same number of airplanes, whose job it is to attack the ground installations of the defense, such as the anti-aircraft guns and machine gun batteries and the searchlights, with machine gun fire and small fragmentation bombs.

To prevent collisions in the air, the defending pursuit aviation of three squadrons of nine planes each, equipped with modern single center pursuit planes in the 27th Squadron, and with the fast two-seater pursuit ships in the 33rd and 36th Squadrons, was held on the ground. After the area was cleared by the "attacking" aviation, the pursuit squadrons, was held on the ground. After the area was cleared by the "attacking" aviation, the pursuit squadrons, was held on the ground. After the area was cleared by the "attacking" aviation, the pursuit squadrons, was held on the ground.

YORK, PENNA.

The Exhibit Opens Today FOR ONE WEEK

It is almost like going through a regular Piano factory to see the pianos, because the experts in charge take the greatest pleasure in explaining every part of it, the minutest detail from the raw material to the finished product. It is the purpose to show these sample pianos to advertise them. The majority of people have never examined the inside of a piano, and know very little of its vital parts and what is required to constitute a first-class piano, hence the factory believes that the best way to have the public know these things is to have it explained by factory experts who have acquired this knowledge by years of experience. Think of the opportunity to visit a fair or exhibit of this kind right in your midst and everyday life. You can become acquainted with these things free of cost.

Coon's Likes 'If I Were King' — Costume Stuff but Exciting

By ROBBIN COONS (AP Feature Service Writer)
HOLLYWOOD—This is tough some. A week ago this assiduous preview-goer did a slightly ecstatic rave about the virtues of a production called "If I Were King." Now it's time for another Movie-of-the-Month. That calls for an encore on the rave.

The previewing was good in September. Too. A picture like "Boys Town" doesn't come along too often. That's one that's guaranteed to move the toughest heart to thinking about chipping in for underprivileged boys. It brings you Spencer Tracy in one of his best characterizations, Mickey Rooney and the new kid, Bob Watson.

"Too Hot to Handle" has more fun and excitement, adroitly mixed with the good old "hoke", than two or three pictures usually give. Nice work by Myrna Loy and Clark Gable, the modern swashbuckler of recent Metro thrillers.

Also, there "That Certain Age" on which the only necessary comment is that it has Deanna Durbin. Other pictures, good pictures.

Still Outstanding. And yet "If I Were King" still stands out. Whether you're looking for romance and poetic beauty, or crave adventure, excitement and suspense—this picture has it.

It's "costume stuff", but don't hold that against it. The picture swings along, and it knows where it's going all the way. Director

Star-of-the-Month—Spencer Tracy in "Boys Town."
Cracker-of-the-Month—Basil Rathbone in "If I Were King."

Frank Lloyd and writer Preston Sturges together put new life into the old stage play by Justin Huntly McCarthy on which it is based. Ronald Colman plays Francois Villon, the gutter piet who saves France—and incidentally his neck—when the generals of the wily Louis XI want to give in to the besieging armies of Burgundy. Colman can swash-and-buckle with the best, and yet put into romantic scenes a tenderness that is convincing rather than ridiculous.

Newcomer Shines. Frances Dee is the lady Katherine de Vaucelles. She is a real charmer, and a worthy actress in the scenes that give her a chance to act. In the acting line, however, she is overshadowed by the newcomer Ellen Drew whose role is smaller, more compactly crammed with opportunities. For her work as the street girl Huguette, Ellen can go on your list of "discoveries of 1938."

Basil Rathbone's technique—and make-up—in the role of Louis XI will surprise fans accustomed to less subtly shadowed villainy, and Rathbone's is the film's acting tour de force.

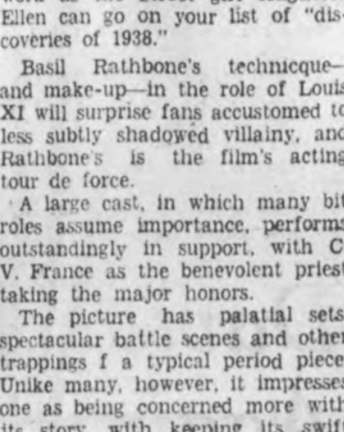

A large cast, in which many bit roles assume importance, performs outstandingly in support, with C. V. France as the benevolent priest taking the major honors.

The picture has palatial sets, spectacular battle scenes and other trappings of a typical period piece. Unlike many, however, it impresses one as being concerned more with its story, with keeping its swift pace, less with conventional "spectacle stuff."

SHORT SHOTS

By HENRY AVERILL

Raleigh, Oct. 5—The printing business is to be flourishing nowadays. Every controversy seems to be followed by a real flood of printed propaganda, issued by both sides.

Just two examples—For some time your correspondent has been observing publicity sent out by the oil companies designed to show that Mexico has forgotten how to be civilized and is engaging in robbery of the poor, unfeeling companies. Now comes a pamphlet from the Mexican government setting out its side of the matter.

The same—the railroads have for several months been bombarding everyone with repeated tracts and tracts designed to show that one train is ragging beggars chiefly because their employees are getting paid too much. They want to cut these bleated workmen 15 per cent. Latest effusion, however, is from 'tother side of the fence—a good-sized booklet sponsored by the Brotherhoods. Therein we are informed that the railroads pay the average worker only $1,135 per year. Also that the companies aren't in as bad shape as they pretend.

Oh, well, so far as this corner is concerned, leave it to Judge Stacy to decide which has the rights of it, if either.

A North Carolina concern, Lewis and Holmes of High Point, won the silver loving cup offered for the best "job" in a truck parade in Atlanta last week in connection with a Southern Motor Carriers Rate conference.

Miss Frances Johnson, secretary of the N. C. Truck Owners Association, says the N. C. truck was even shined after making the drive from High Point to the Georgia capital—just washed off.

Miss Johnson, incidentally, got her picture in the Atlanta Georgian—she was shown conferring with the big wigs of the conference. Ordinarily the most modest of souls, Miss Johnson was really quite obviously pleased at making the paper for "the first time in my life" she said.

"We're going to have a real fair this time" said Dr. J. S. Dorton, manager of the State Fair, as he watched workmen busily engaged in making improvements at the grounds.

Incidentally, he has moved his office out to the grounds from the Department of Agriculture building.

We're going to have the finest agricultural exhibits ever assembled in North Carolina, according to early applications for space, and we have contracted for an all-new entertainment program."

A Constitutional amendment prohibiting diversion of highway revenues will probably get another endorsement when N. C. Association of Truck Owners meets in Charlotte this week.

On the big shots of the organization said, however, when asked about it: "We've always been so busy keeping other folks from doing things to us, that we never have had much time for talking about or endorsing an affirmative campaign for anything."

The football season isn't a month old yet only three of the 15 Southern Conference members remain undefeated—North Carolina, Duke and Richmond University.

Which goes to show the kind of competition these teams have even from the first kickoff nowadays.
